VER. 18. To a certain man, whom Ss. Mark and Luke call, the good man of the house, or master of the house. When S. Matt. therefore says, a certain man, he seems to do it for brevity's sake, as no one ever speaks to his servants thus, go to a certain man. The evangelist, therefore, after giving our Saviour's words, go ye into a certain city, he adds as from himself, to a certain man, to inform us that there was a particular man to whom Jesus sent his disciples. S. Austin.

VER. 19. And they prepared what was necessary, a lamb, wild lettuce, and unleavened bread. V.

VER. 20. When it was evening.† S. Luke says, when the hour was come, which was at the latter evening, after sunset. The time of killing and sacrificing the lamb was, according to Exod. xii., to be between the two evenings (see Mark xiv. 15); so that we may reasonably suppose that Christ sent some of his apostles on Thursday, in the afternoon, to perform what was to be done, as to the killing and sacrificing of the lamb, and then to bring it away: and he eat it with his disciples after sunset.

VER. 22. And they being very much troubled. There were three motives for this great sorrow in the disciples: 1st, because they saw that their innocent and dear Master was so soon to be taken from them, and delivered up to a most cruel and ignominious death: 2nd, because each of them was afraid lest, through human frailty, he might fall into so great a crime; for they all were convinced, that what he said must necessarily come to pass: and lastly, that there could be found one among them so wretchedly perverse, as to deliver Jesus into the hands of his enemies. Hence, afraid of themselves, and not daring to affix a suspicion on any individual, they began every one to say, Is it I, Lord, on whom so atrocious a crime is to fall?

VER. 25. Is it I, Rabbi? It is remarkable that Judas did not ask, Is it I, Lord? but, Is it I, Rabbi? to which our Saviour replied, Thou hast said it: which answer might have been spoken in so low a tone of voice, as not perfectly to be heard by all the company. Rabanus.—Hence it was that Peter beckoned to S. John, to learn more positively the person.

The Institution of the Holy Sacrament.

VER. 26. And whilst they were at supper. Jesus Christ proceeds to the institution of the blessed Eucharist, that the truth or reality may succeed to the figure in one and the same banquet.—Whilst they were, &c., before they parted: for by S. Luke (xxii. 20) and 1 Cor. (xi. 25) the blessed sacrament was not instituted till after supper.—Jesus took bread, and blessed it. S. Luke and S. Paul say, he gave thanks. This blessing and giving thanks, was not the consecration itself, but went before it. See the Council of Trent, Sess. 13, c. 1. Wi.—This is my body. He does not say, this is the figure of my body—but, this is my body. 2 Council of Nice, Act. 6. Neither does he say in this, or with this is my body, but absolutely this is my body; which plainly implies transubstantiation. Ch.—Catholics maintain, after the express words of Scripture, and the universal tradition of the Church, that Christ in the blessed sacrament is corporally and substantially present; but not carnally; not in that gross, natural, and sensible manner. In which our separated brethren misrepresent the Catholic doctrine, as the Capharnaïtes did of old (John vi. 61, 62); who were scandalized with it. . . . If Protestants, in opposition to the primitive Fathers, deny the connexion of the sixth chapter of John with the 22 And they being very much troubled, began every one to say: Is it I, Lord?

23 But he answering, said: He that dippeth his hand with me in the dish, the same shall betray me.

24 The Son of man indeed goeth, as it is written of him: but woe to that man, by whom the Son of man shall be betrayed: It were better for that man if he had not been born.

25 And Judas, that betrayed him, answering, said: Is it I, Rabbi? he saith to him: Thou hast said it.

institution, it is from the fear of giving advantage to the doctrine of transubstantiation, says Dr. Clever, Protestant bishop of Bangor.—This is my body. By these words, and his Divine power, Christ changed that which before was bread into his own body; not in that visible and bloody manner as the Capharnaïtes imagined. John vi. Yet so, that the elements of bread and wine were truly, really, and substantially changed into the substance of Christ's body and blood. Christ, whose Divine power cannot be questioned, could not make use of plainer words than these set down by S. Matthew, S. Mark, S. Luke, and S. Paul to the Corinthians: this is my body; this is my blood: and that the bread and wine, at the words of consecration, are changed into the body and blood of Christ, has been the constant doctrine and belief of the Catholic Church, in all ages, both in the East and West, both in the Greek and Latin churches; as may be seen in our controversy, and particularly in the author of the books of the Perpetuity of the Faith. This change the Church hath thought proper to express by the word, transubstantiation: and it is as frivolous to reject this word, and to ask where it is found in the Holy Scriptures, as to demand where we read in the Scriptures, the words trinity, incarnation, consubstantial to the Father, &c.—Luther fairly owned that he wanted not an inclination to deny Christ's real presence in the sacrament, by which he should vex and contradict the Pope; but this, said he, is a truth that cannot be denied: The words of the gospel are too clear.—Zwinglius, the Sacramentarians, and Calvinists deny the real presence; and hold that the word is, (est), importeth no more than, it signifieth, or is a figure of Christ's body. I shall only produce here the words and reasoning of Luther; which may deserve the attention of the late reformers. § “Who,” saith Luther. (tom. 7, Edit. Wittemb., p. 391), “but the devil, hath granted such a licence of wresting the words of the Holy Scripture? Who ever read in the Scriptures, that my body is the same as the sign of my body? or, that is the same as it signifies? What language in the world ever spoke so? It is only then the devil, that imposeth upon us by these fanatical men. . . . Not one of the Fathers, though so numerous, ever spoke as the Sacramentarians: not one of them ever said, It is only bread and wine; or, the body and blood of Christ is not there present. Certainly in so many Fathers, and in so many writings, the negative might at least be found in one of them, had they thought the body and blood of Christ were not really present: but they are all of them unanimous.” Thus far Luther; who, in another place, in his usual manner of writing, sticks not to call the Sacramentarians, men possessed, perpossessed, and transpossessed by the devil.—My body. In S. Luke is added, which is given for you. Granted these words, which is given, may bear this sense, which shall be given, or offered on the cross; yet as it was the true body of Christ, that was to be crucified, so it was the same true body which Christ gave to his apostles, at his last supper, though in a different manner.

This is my body.

To show how these words have been interpreted by the primitive Church, we shall here subjoin some few extracts from the works of some of the most eminent writers of the first five centuries.

First Century.

S. Ignatius, bishop of Antioch, who was a disciple and contemporary with some of the apostles, and died a martyr, at Rome, in a very advanced age, An. 107, speaking of certain heretics of those times, says, “They abstain from the Eucharist and from oblations, because they do not confess the Eucharist to be the flesh of our Saviour Jesus Christ, who suffered for our sins.” See Epis. Genuin. ad Smyrναeos.—He calls the Eucharist the medicine of immortality, the antidote against death, by which we always live in Christ.—In another part he writes, “I desire the bread of God, which is the flesh of Jesus Christ, and for drink, his blood.”

Second Century.

S. Justin, the philosopher, in an apology for the Christians, which he addressed to the emperor and senate of Rome, about the year 150, says of the blessed Eucharist, “No one is allowed to partake of this food, but he that believes our doctrines to be true, and who has been baptized in the laver of regeneration for remission of sins, and lives up to what Christ has taught. For we take not these as common bread, and common drink; but in the same manner as Jesus Christ, our Saviour, being incarnate by the word of God, hath both flesh and blood for our salvation; so we are taught that this food, by which our flesh and blood are nourished, over which thanks have been given by the prayers in his own words, is the flesh and blood of the incarnate Jesus.” Apology 2, in fin.

Third Century.

S. Cyprian, bishop of Carthage, who suffered martyrdom in 258, says, “The 27 And taking the chalice he gave thanks: and gave to them, saying: Drink ye all of this.

28 For this is my blood of the new testament which shall be shed for many, for the remission of sins.

29 And I say to you: I will not drink from henceforth of this fruit of the vine, until that day, when I shall drink it new with you in the kingdom of my Father.

30 And when they had sung a hymn, they went out to Mount Olivet.

31 Then Jesus saith to them: "All you shall be scandalized in me this night. For it is written: "I will strike the shepherd, and the sheep of the flock shall be dispersed.

32 "But after I shall be risen again, I will go before you into Galilee.

33 And Peter answering, said to him: Though all bread which our Lord delivered to his disciples, was changed not in appearance, but in nature, being made flesh by the Almighty power of the Divine word."

Fourth Century.

S. Cyril, bishop of Jerusalem, who was born in the commencement of the 4th century, and died in 386, explaining the mystery of the blessed Eucharist to the newly baptized, says: "Do not look upon the bread and wine as bare and common elements, for they are the body and blood of Christ; as our Lord assures us. Although thy senses suggest this to thee, let faith make thee firm and sure. Judge not of the thing by the taste, but be certain from faith that thou hast been honoured with the gift of Christ's body and blood. When he has pronounced and said of the bread, this is my body, who will after this dare to doubt? And when he has assured and said, this is my blood, who can ever hesitate, saying it is not his blood? He changed water into wine at Cana; and shall we not think him worthy of our belief, when he has changed wine into blood? Wherefore, let us receive them with an entire belief, as Christ's body and blood; for under the figure of bread, is given to thee his body, and under the figure of wine, his blood; that when thou hast received Christ's body and blood, thou be made one body and blood with him; for so we carry him about in us, his body and blood being distributed through our bodies." S. Cyril, Catech.—S. Ambrose, one of the greatest doctors of the Latin Church, and bishop of Milan, who died in 396, proving that the change of the bread and wine into the body and blood of Christ, is really possible to God, and really takes place in the blessed Eucharist, uses these words: "Will not the words of Christ have power enough to change the species of the elements? Shall not the words of Christ, which could make out of nothing things which did not exist, be able to change that, which already exists, into what it was not? . . . Was it according to the course of nature, that our Lord Jesus Christ should be born of the Virgin Mary? It is evident that it was contrary to the course of nature for a virgin to bring forth. Now this body, which we produce, was born of the virgin. Why dost thou seek for the order of nature in the body of Christ, when our Lord Jesus Christ was born of a virgin?" S. Ambrose, lib. de Initiandis, c. 9.

Fifth Century.

S. Chrysostom, bishop of Constantinople, who died in 407, does not speak less clearly on this subject. "He," (i. e. Jesus Christ,) says the holy doctor, hom. 50, in Matt., "has given us himself to eat, and has set himself in the place of a victim sacrificed for us." And in homily 83: "How many now say they could wish to see his form, his garments, &c.; you wish to see his garments, but he gives you himself not only to be seen, but to be touched, to be eaten, to be received within you. Than what beam of the sun ought not that hand to be purer, which divides this flesh! that mouth, which is filled with this spiritual fire! that tongue, which is purpled with this adorable blood! The angels beholding it tremble, and dare not look thereon through awe and fear, on account of the rays which dart from that wherewith we are nourished, with which we are mingled, being made one body, one flesh with Christ. What shepherd ever fed his sheep with his own limbs? Nay, many mothers turn over their children to mercenary nurses; whereas he feeds us with his own blood!"

VER. 27. Drink ye all of this. This was spoken to the twelve apostles, who were the all then present; and they all drank of it, says Mark xiv. 23. But it no ways follows from these words spoken to the apostles, that all the faithful are here commanded to drink of the chalice, any more than that all the faithful are commanded to consecrate, offer, and administer this sacrament; because Christ upon this same occasion, and, as I may say, with the same breath, bid the apostles do so; in these words, (S. Luke xxii. 19,) Do this for a commemoration of me. Ch.—It is a point of discipline, which the Church for good reasons may allow, or disallow, to the laity, without any injury done to the receiver, who, according to the Catholic doctrine of the real presence, is made partaker of the same benefit under me kind only; he that eateth of this bread, shall live for ever. John vi.

VER. 28. This is my blood of the new testament which shall be shed for many, for the remission of sins. The Greek text in S. Luke shows that the words shall be shed, or is shed, cannot, in construction, be referred to the blood of Christ shed in the cross, but to the cup, at the institution of the holy sacrament. This cup (S. Luke xxii. 20) is the new testament in my blood; which cup I shall be shed, as is shed for you. S. Paul also saith, this cup is the new testament in my blood.

men shall be scandalized in thee, I will never be scandalized.

34 Jesus said to him: "Amen, I say to thee, that in this night, before the cock crow, thou wilt deny me thrice.

35 Peter saith to him: "Though I should die with thee, I will not deny thee. And in like manner said all the disciples.

36 Then Jesus came with them to a country place, which is called Gethsemani, and he said to his disciples: Sit you here, till I go yonder, and pray.

37 And taking with him Peter, and the two sons of Zebedee, he began to grow sorrowful and to be sad.

38 Then he saith to them: My soul is sorrowful, even unto death: stay you here, and watch with me.

39 And going a little further, he fell upon his face, praying, and saying: O my Father, if it is possible, let d Mark xiv. 30; John xiii. 38.—e Mark xiv. 31; Luke xxii. 53.

And if any one will needs insist upon the words, as related by S. Matthew and S. Mark, the sense is still the same; viz. that in this cup was not wine, but the blood of Christ, by which was confirmed the new testament, or alliance betwixt God and man.—For many. S. Luke and S. Paul, instead of many, say for you. Both are joined in the canon of the mass. Wi.—As the old testament was dedicated with blood in these words, This is the blood of the testament, (Heb. ix. 20,) so here is the institution of the new testament in Christ's blood, by these words, This is the blood of the new testament, which God contracts with you, to communicate to you his grace and justice, by the merits of this blood, which shall be shed for you on the cross; and which is here mystically shed for many for the remission of sins.

VER. 29. I will not drink from henceforth of this fruit of the vine. In S. Luke, (xxii. 15, 16,) Christ said to his disciples, I earnestly desired to eat this Pasch with you before I suffer (or this Paschal sacrifice); for I say to you, that, from this time I will not eat thereof, till it be fulfilled in the kingdom of God. These expressions seem to import no more, than that it was the last time he would eat and drink with them in a mortal body. And if, as some expound it, Christ, by the generation of the vine, understood the consecrated cup of his blood, he might call it wine, or the fruit of the vine; because he gave them his blood under the appearance of wine: as S. Paul calls the body of Christ bread, because given under the appearance of bread. 1 Cor. xi. 26. Wi.—Fruit of the vine. These words, by the account of S. Luke, (xxii. 18,) were not spoken of the sacramental cup, but of the wine that was drunk with the Paschal lamb. Though the sacramental cup might also be called the fruit of the vine, because it was consecrated from wine, and retains the likeness, and all the accidents, or qualities, of wine. Ch.—Drink it new, after a different manner, most wonderful and hitherto unheard of, not having a possible body, but one clothed with immortality; and henceforth no longer in need of nourishment. Thus he brings to their minds the idea of his resurrection, to strengthen them under the ignominies of his passion, and eats and drinks with them, to give them a more certain proof of this grand mystery. S. Chrys. Hom. 83.

VER. 31. Scandalized in me, &c. For as much as my being apprehended shall make you all run away and forsake me. Ch.

VER. 33. I will never be. After our Saviour had assured them of the prediction of the prophet, that the flock should be dispersed, and had confirmed it himself, still Peter denied it; and the more Christ assured him of his weakness, the more, according to S. Luke, (chap. xxii,) did Peter affirm that he would not deny him. Whence this confidence in Peter? who when our Lord had said, that one of them would betray him, feared for himself, and though conscious of nothing, still prevailed on S. John to put the question to our Saviour. Let us learn from this fall of the chief of the apostles, ever to assent with the greatest sincerity to the words of God.

VER. 34. Before the cock crow, S. Mark is more particular; before the cock crow twice, thou shalt deny me thrice. The sense seems to be, before the time that the cocks crow the second time, towards the morning. Wi.

Christ's prayer and agony in the garden. He is seized, and carried before Annas and Caiphas.

VER. 36. Gethsemani. S. John tells us it was a garden, whither Jesus was accustomed to go with his disciples, which Judas knew. S. Luke says, he went according to his custom to the mount of Olives; i. e. where he used to spend part of the nights in prayer. Wi.

VER. 37. He began to sorrowful.†† The Greek signifies to be dispirited. S. Mark, to be in a consternation with fear: to wit, when all he was to undergo was represented to him, as well as the ingratitude of sinners. Wi.

VER. 38. My soul is sorrowful. The cause of our Lord's grief was not the fear of suffering, since he took upon himself human nature, to suffer and to die for us; but the cause of his grief was the unhappy state of Judas, the scandal his disciples would take at his passion, the reprobation of the Jewish nation, and the destruction of the miserable Jerusalem. Our Lord also suffered himself to be thus dejected, to convince the world of the truth and reality of his human nature. S. Jerom.

VER. 39. Going a little further. S. Luke says, about a stone's cast, kneeling down; or as here in Matt., prostrating himself. He did both.—Father, if it is possible. Which is the same, says S. Augustin, as if he said, if thou wilt, let this cup of sufferings pass from me.—Nevertheless not as I will, but as thou wilt. He this chalice pass from me. Nevertheless, not as I will, but as thou wilt.

40 And he cometh to his disciples, and findeth them asleep, and he saith to Peter: What? could you not watch one hour with me?

41 Watch ye and pray that ye enter not into temptation. The spirit indeed is willing, but the flesh is weak.

42 Again, he went the second time, and prayed, saying: O my Father, if this chalice cannot pass away, except I drink it, thy will be done.

43 And he cometh again, and findeth them asleep: for their eyes were heavy.

44 And leaving them, he went away again: and he prayed the third time, saying the same words.

45 Then he cometh to his disciples, and saith to them: Sleep on now, and take your rest: behold, the hour is at hand, and the Son of man shall be betrayed into the hands of sinners.

46 Rise, let us go: behold he is at hand that will betray me.

47 *As he yet spoke, behold Judas, one of the twelve, came, and with him a great multitude with swords and clubs, sent from the chief priests and the ancients of the people.

48 And he that betrayed him, gave them a sign, saying: Whomsoever I shall kiss, that is he, hold him fast.

49 And forthwith coming to Jesus, he said: Hail, Rabbi. And he kissed him.

50 And Jesus said to him: Friend, whereto art thou come? Then they came up, and laid hands on Jesus, and held him.

51 And behold one of them that were with Jesus, stretching forth his hand, drew out his sword; and striking the servant of the high priest, cut off his ear.

that was God and man, had both a Divine and a human will. He was pleased to let us know what he naturally feared, as man, and in the sensitive part of his soul; yet shows his human will had nothing contrary to his Divine will, by presently adding, but not my will, but thine be done.—Here, as related by S. Luke, followed his bloody sweat. Luke xxii. 43. Wi.

VER. 41. Watch ye and pray, &c. We watch by being intent on good works, and by being solicitous that no perverse doctrine seize our hearts. Thus we must first watch, and then pray. Origen.

VER. 44. He prayed the third time, to teach us perseverance in our prayers. Of these particulars Christ might inform his disciples afterwards; or they were revealed to them. Wi.

VER. 45. Sleep on now. These were words spoken, as it were, ironically. The hour is come, that I am to be betrayed. Wi.—It seems more probable that he then permitted them to sleep for some time, compassionating their weakness, and leaving them undisturbed. Jans.—S. Austin also supposes that after our Lord said, Sleep ye now, he was silent for some time, and only then added, it is enough, the hour is come.

VER. 49. Hail, Rabbi. And he kissed him. This kind of salutation was ordinary with the Jews. S. Luke tells us, Christ called Judas friend; and added, Is it with a kiss thou betrayest the Son of man? By what we read in S. John, these men that came with Judas, seem not to have known our Saviour: for when he asked them, Whom seek you? they do not answer, thyself, but Jesus of Nazareth. They were struck with a blindness, which S. Chrysostom looks upon as done miraculously. The second miracle was, that when Christ said, I am he, they fell to the ground, as thunder-struck. The third was, let these go, by which they had no power to seize any one of his disciples. The fourth was, the healing of Malchus's ear. Wi.

VER. 51. Drew out his sword. Peter did not comprehend the meaning of what Christ had said, Luke xxii. 36, He that hath not a sword, let him buy one, which was no more than an intimation of the approaching danger. Now Peter, or some of them, asked, and said, Lord, shall we strike? But he struck without staying for an answer. Wi.

VER. 52. Shall perish by the sword. This was not to condemn the use of the sword, when employed on a just cause, or by lawful authority. Euthymius looks upon it as a prophecy that the Jews should perish by the sword of the Romans. Wi.

52 Then Jesus saith to him: Put up again thy sword into its place. ^bFor all that take the sword, shall perish by the sword.

53 Thinkest thou, that I cannot ask my Father, and he will give me presently, more than twelve legions of angels?

54 ^cHow then shall the Scriptures be fulfilled, that so it must be done?

55 In that same hour, Jesus said to the multitude: You are come out as against a robber, with swords and clubs, to apprehend me: I sat daily with you teaching in the temple, and you laid not hands on me.

56 Now all this was done, that the ^dScriptures of the prophets might be fulfilled. Then the disciples ^eall leaving him, fled away.

57 But they holding Jesus, ^fled him to Caiphas, the high priest, where the Scribes and the ancients were assembled:

58 But Peter followed him afar off, to the high priest's palace. And going in, he sat with the servants, to see the end.

59 Now the chief priests, and the whole council, sought false witness against Jesus, that they might put him to death:

60 And they found not, though many false witnesses had come in. And last of all there came in two false witnesses, 61 And they said: ^gThis man said, I am able to destroy the temple of God, and in three days to rebuild it.

62 And the high priest rising up, said to him: Answerest thou nothing to the things which these witness against thee?

63 But Jesus held his peace. And the high priest

VER. 55. In that same hour, &c. The reason why the Jewish princes did not seize our Lord in the temple, was, because they feared the multitude; on which account Jesus retired, that he might give them an opportunity, both from the circumstances of place and time, to apprehend him: thus showing us, that without his permission they could not so much as lay a finger upon him. The evangelist informs us in the following verse of the reason of this conduct: that the writings of the prophets might be fulfilled. S. Chrys. See Luke xxii. 53.

VER. 56. All leaving him, fled away. Yet Peter and another soon followed after at a distance. S. Mark says, (xiv. 51,) that a young man followed with nothing on but a linen cloth. Perhaps it was some one that upon the noise came hastily out of the neighbourhood; and when they caught hold on him, fled away naked. It is not known who he was. Wi.

VER. 57. To Caiphas. Our Saviour Christ was led in the night time, both to Annas and Caiphas: and first to Annas (John xviii. 13); perhaps because the house of Annas was in their way; or that they had a mind to gratify the old man with the sight of Jesus, now taken prisoner and bound with ropes. Wi.

VER. 58. Peter followed. To wit, to the court of Caiphas, where a great many of the chief priests were met.—And another disciple. Many think this disciple was S. John himself. Wi.

VER. 60. False witnesses. But how were these men false witnesses, who affirm what we read in the gospel? That man is a false witness, who construes what is said in a sense foreign to that of the speaker. Jesus Christ spoke of the temple of his body. Our Divine Saviour had said, Destroy this temple; and they affirm that he had said, I am able to destroy. Had the Jews attended sufficiently to our Saviour's words, they would easily have perceived of what Christ was speaking, from what he there says, and in three days I will raise it up. S. Jerom.

VER. 61. This man said, I am able to destroy the temple of God. These men that gave this evidence, are called false witnesses. They relate not the true words of Christ: which were not, I can destroy, but destroy you this temple, &c. 2. Christ spoke of the temple of his body, and they of the material temple. 3. It is not unlikely that they made other additions, as well as false constructions, omitted by the evangelists. Wi.

VER. 63. I adjure thee by the living God. They hoped this might make him own himself God; for which they were for stoning him. John x. 31.—S. Luke tells us, (xxii. 66,) that this question was put to Jesus, when it was day said to him : I adjure thee by the living God, that thou tell us if thou be the Christ, the Son of God.

64 Jesus saith to him : Thou hast said it. Nevertheless, I say to you, ^ahereafter you shall see the Son of man, sitting on the right hand of the power of God, and coming in the clouds of heaven.

65 Then the high priest rent his garments, saying : He hath blasphemed, what further need have we of witnesses ? Behold, now you have heard the blasphemy :

66 What think you ? But they answering, said : He is guilty of death.

67 ^bThen they spit in his face, and buffeted him, and others struck his face with the palms of their hands ;

68 Saying : Prophecy unto us, O Christ, who is he that struck thee ?

69 ^cBut Peter sat without in the palace : and there came to him a servant-maid, saying : Thou also wast with Jesus, the Galilean.

70 But he denied before them all, saying : I know not what thou sayest.

71 And as he went out of the gate, another maid saw him, and she saith to them that were there : This man also was with Jesus, of Nazareth.

S. Augustin thinks it was put to him first in the night, and again the next morning. We must not forget that when Christ was examined by the high priest, one of the servants standing by gave our blessed Redeemer a box on the ear, or on the face. See John xviii. 22. Wi.—The confession or denial of a person thus interrogated was decisive. C.

VER. 64. Thou hast said it. Or, as it is in S. Mark, I am. According to S. Luke, Christ in the morning, before he answered directly, said to them, If I tell you, you will not believe me, &c. Wi.

VER. 65. The same fury that made Caiphas rise from his seat, forced him also to rend his garments, saying, He hath blasphemed. It was customary with the Jews, whenever they heard any blasphemous doctrines uttered against the majesty of the Almighty, to rend their garments in abhorrence of what was uttered. S. Jerom.

VER. 66. He is guilty of death ; i. e. of blasphemy, and so deserves to be stoned to death. Wi.

VER. 67. Then they spit in his face, and buffeted him, &c. Here it was that this wicked council of the Sanhedrim broke up, in order to meet again the next morning. Our blessed Saviour in the mean time was abandoned ; that is, had abandoned himself for our sake, to be abused, vilified, beaten, and tormented by a crew of miscreants, by all the ways and means their enraged malice could devise or invent : which S. Luke passeth over in a few words, telling us, that, blaspheming, they said many other things against him. Let us, at least, compassionate our blessed Redeemer, and cry out with the angel in the Apocalypse, Thou art worthy, O Lord, to receive power and divinity, honour and glory for ever. Wi.

Peter's Denial.

VER. 69. Peter sat without in the palace : i. e. in the open court below, where the servants had lighted a fire. There came to him a certain servant-maid, the portress, says S. John, xviii. 17. But he denied, saying, I know not what thou sayest. In S. Luke, I know him not : in S. John, I am not. The sense is the same ; and Peter might use all these expressions. Wi.

VER. 71. As he went out of the gate, another maid. S. Mark says, he went out before the court. By the Greek, he seems to have gone out of the court into the porch. He went from the fire but returned thither again : for by S. John, (xviii. 25,) this second denial was at the fire. S. Luke seems to say it was a man, [†] that spoke to him : and S. John, that they were several that spoke to him : it is likely both a girl and a man. Wi.

VER. 73. And after a little while. S. Luke says, about an hour after : this seems to have been about the time that the cocks crow the second time.—They that stood by came. S. Luke says, another man. S. John says, the cousin to him whose ear Peter cut off. It is probable not he alone, but others with him.—Peter began to curse and swear. It is in vain to pretend to excuse Peter, as if he meant that he knew not Jesus, as man ; but knew him as God. ^{§§} They (says S. Jer.) who are for excusing Peter in this manner, accuse Christ of a lie, who foretold that he should deny him. Wi.

VER. 75. And Peter remembered the word of Jesus. S. Aug. understands this rather of an interior illumination of grace : but it is likely our Saviour then might be where he saw Peter, and gave him a glance of his eye.—And going forth, he wept bitterly : even daily all his life-time, say the ancient historians of his life. Wi.

72 And again he denied with an oath : I do not know the man.

73 And after a little while they that stood by came and said to Peter : Surely thou also art one of them : for even thy speech doth discover thee.

74 Then he began to curse and to swear that he knew not the man. And immediately the cock crew.

75 And Peter remembered the word of Jesus which he had said : Before the cock crow, thou wilt deny me thrice. And going forth, he wept bitterly.

The continuation of the history of the passion of Christ. His death and burial.

AND when the morning was come, all the chief priests and ancients of the people held a council against Jesus, to put him to death.

Christ before Pilate and Herod. Barabbas is preferred before him. He is scourged, and crowned with thorns.

CHAP. XXVII. VER. 1. When the morning was come. The evangelist is silent with regard to what was transacted during the night, and of the multiplied cruelties and base indignities offered to our Divine Redeemer during the whole of the night ; for, after he has informed us of Peter's denial, he immediately proceeds to tell us what happened at break of day. S. Austin.—Council. Caiphas, in the morning, called a full council of the Sanhedrim. They again put the question to Jesus, and commanded him to tell them if he were the Christ, and the Son of God ? He owned he was. Luke xxii. 70.—Upon this they led him away, and delivered him to Pontius Pilate, the governor : lit. the president. This they did, 1. because, being a festival day, they apprehended a tumult among the people. 2 To make him die a more infamous death on the cross ; otherwise they might perhaps have stoned him to death, as they afterwards did S. Stephen. 3. The power of death being taken from them, they dare not well exercise it, at least, without permission from the Roman governor. Wi.

VER. 2. In the council Jesus was free ; but now all the council rising up, as appears from S. Luke, and binding him, (ὁδηγαντες αὐτὸν,) as one certainly guilty of death, they conduct him to Pilate.

VER. 3. Then Judas, . . . repenting himself. A fruitless repentance, accompanied with a new sin of despair, says S. Leo. Wi.—Perceiving that Jesus was delivered up, and remembering what our Divine Saviour had said concerning his resurrection, he repented of his atrocious wickedness.—Although Judas conceived a horror at his crime, and confessed it, and made satisfaction to a certain degree by restoring the money, still many essential conditions were wanting to his repentance : 1. Faith in Christ, as God, as a Redeemer, as the sole justifier from sin : 2. besides this, there was also wanting hopes of pardon, as in Can,* and a love of a much injured and much offended God. Hence his grief was unavailing, like that of the damned. If Judas, says an ancient Father, had had recourse to sincere repentance, and not to the halter, there was mercy in store even for the traitor. A

VER. 5. Hanged himself,* and did not die of the quinsy, (a tumid infla-he departed: "and went and hanged himself with a halter.

6 But the chief priests having taken the pieces of silver, said: It is not lawful to put them into the Corbona, because it is the price of blood.

7 And having consulted together, they bought with them the potter's field, to be a burying-place for strangers.

8 "Wherefore that field was called Haceldama; that is, The field of blood, even to this day.

9 Then was fulfilled that which was spoken by Jeremias, the prophet, saying: "And they took the thirty pieces of silver, the price of him that was valued, whom they prized of the children of Israel.

10 And they gave them unto the potter's field, as the Lord appointed to me.

11 And Jesus stood before the governor, "and the governor asked him, saying: Art thou the king of the Jews? Jesus saith to him: Thou sayest it.

12 And when he was accused by the chief priests and ancients, he answered nothing.

13 Then Pilate saith to him: Dost not thou hear how great testimonies they allege against thee?

mation in the throat,) as some of late expound it. It is true the Greek word may sometimes signify a suffocation with grief; but it signifies also to be strangled with a rope, as Erasmus translated it. So it is in the ancient Syriac version; and the same Greek word is made use of in 2 Kings xvii., as to Achitophel's death. Wi.—To his first repentance succeeded fell despair, which the devil pursued to his eternal destruction.

VER. 6. Corbona. A place in the temple, where the people put in their gifts or offerings. Ch.

VER. 7. Burying-place. This the Pharisees did, as a show of their charity to strangers; but their intention, according to S. Jerom., was to disgrace Jesus; thus to keep alive in the minds of the people, that he was sold by one of his own disciples, and delivered up to a disgraceful death. Dion. Carth.

VER. 8. Haceldama is a Syriac word: it is not in the Greek; and some conjecture that it found its way hither from the first chapter of the Acts, ver. 19. V.

VER. 9. Then was fulfilled that which was spoken by Jeremias. Jeremy is now in all Latin copies, and the general reading of the Greek; whereas the passage is found Zac. xi. 12. Some judge it to have been in some writing of Jeremy, now lost; as S. Jerom. says, he found it in a writing of Jeremy, which was not canonical.—And they took the thirty pieces of silver; each of which was called an argenteus. The evangelist cites not the words, but only the sense of the prophet, who was ordered to cast the pieces into the house of the Lord, and to cast them to the potter:† which became true by the fact of Judas, who cast them into the temple: and with them was purchased the potter's field. The price of him that was prized. Wi.

VER. 11. Jesus stood before the governor. By comparing the four evangelists together, Pilate condescended to come out to the priests, and asked them what accusations they brought against this man? They replied first in general terms (John xviii. 30): If he were not a malefactor, we would not have delivered him up to thee. Take him you, said Pilate, and judge him according to your law. They answered, It is not permitted us to put any one to death. After this they accused him of raising tumults, and forbidding to give tribute to Cæsar (Luke xxiii. 2; a manifest falsehood; see Matt. xxii.); and that he said, he is Christ, the king. Upon this Pilate called him into the palace before him, and said, Art thou the king of the Jews? Jesus owned he was: but first asked Pilate, if he said this of himself, or by the suggestion of others; which was to insinuate, that this information of his being a king came from his malicious adversaries; and that Pilate, having been so long governor, could not but know that he had never set himself up for king, nor pretended to any kingly power. However, Pilate replied somewhat peevishly, Am I a Jew? Thy own nation, and thy chief priests, have delivered thee up to me: what hast thou done? Jesus then told Pilate, that his kingdom was not of this world. This abundantly satisfied Pilate: who needed not trouble his head about any spiritual kingdom, or such as was not of this world. Jesus speaking of truth. Pilate asked him after a slight manner, what is truth? but, perhaps, without waiting for any answer, went presently out, and told the Jews, that he found no cause nor crime in Jesus. Wi.

VER. 14. The governor wondered exceedingly at Jesus's patience and silence: and he saw very well that it was envy that excited the Jewish priests against him. Matt. xxvii. 18. But they went on charging him, that he stirred up the people, even from Galilee to Jerusalem. Pilate hearing that he was of Galilee, laid hold on this occasion, and sent him to Herod Antipas, who was tetrarch of Galilee; and being a Jew, was come up to Jerusalem at this great feast. Herod was glad to see Jesus brought to him, hoping to see him do some miracle in his presence: but finding him silent, and that he did not satisfy his curiosity, he contemned him, and ordered him to be clothed in such a garment as might make him laughed at 14 And he answered him not to any word; so that the governor wondered exceedingly.

15 Now upon the solemn day the governor was accustomed to release to the people one prisoner, whom they would.

16 And he had then a notorious prisoner, that was called Barabbas.

17 They therefore being gathered together, Pilate said: Whom will you that I release to you, Barabbas, or Jesus, who is called Christ?

18 For he knew that through envy they had delivered him up.

19 And as he was sitting on the judgment-seat, his wife sent to him, saying: Have thou nothing to do with that just man. For I have suffered many things this day in a dream on account of him.

20 "But the chief priests and ancients persuaded the people, that they should ask Barabbas, and make Jesus away.

21 And the governor answering, said to them: Which will you have of the two to be released unto you? But they said, Barabbas.

• Mark xv. 11; Luke xxiii. 18; John xviii. 40; Acts iii. 14.

for a fool, or a mock king; and in this dress, sent him back through the streets to Pilate. Wi.

VER. 15. Upon the solemn day of the Paschal feast. (which began the evening before,) it was a custom for the governor to pardon and release to the people any one criminal whose life they should petition for: and to induce them to beg for Jesus, he put in the balance with him one Barabbas, a famous malefactor, a seditionous murderer, says S. Mark; a robber, or thief, says S. John. Wi.

VER. 19. In a dream. We must remark, that these kind of dreams were not unusual among the Gentiles, being sent by God for some just and necessary reason; as on this occasion, that there might be a public testimony from the Gentiles, of the justice and innocence of Christ. S. Jerom.

VER. 20. That they should ask Barabbas. Pilate wishing on this occasion to show the Jews the enormity of their crime, again puts the question, which will you have of the two? And again, What shall I do with Jesus, who is called Christ? But they, being enraged that Pilate should declare Jesus to be the Christ, all in frantic fury exclaimed, Let him be crucified. Origen.

VER. 21. Whether . . . of the two, said Pilate to them, will you have released? S. Mark tells us, that at the instigation of the priests, the people petitioned for Barabbas. It was no small disappointment to Pilate. What then, said he, shall I do with Jesus? They all answer, Let him be crucified. In S. Luke, Crucify him, crucify him. What evil hath he done? replied Pilate; and this he repeated thrice, according to S. Luke xxiii. 22.—Here in order followed the cruel scourging of our blessed Saviour, which Pilate consented to, in hopes to move the people to compassion. This was executed with the utmost cruelty. For they assembled the whole band of soldiers, commonly about six hundred. And they made him one wound from head to foot. Then a scarlet or purple coat was thrown over his shoulders: and plattin or wreathing a crown of thorns, i. e. twisting sharp thorns, with some resemblance of a crown, they violently pressed it down on his head; and struck him at their pleasure with a reed or cane, which they had placed in his hand, instead of a sceptre; and kneeling in derision, said, Hail, king of the Jews.—When the soldiers had treated Jesus in this barbarous manner, Pilate himself presented him in this condition to the people, saying, Behold the man. He imagined their fury would now be changed into pity: but they still cried out, Crucify him! crucify him! Take him you, said Pilate, and crucify him; for I find no crime in him. The Jews then answered, We have a law: and according to our law, he must die; because he hath made himself the Son of God. At this Pilate was more afraid, lest perhaps he should be of the progeny of the gods, as the Romans fancied their heroes to be. He returned to the palace, and asked Jesus again, Whence art thou? Jesus gave him no direct answer, yet told him, he could have no power over him, unless it had been granted him from above. Pilate was still very desirous to get him set at liberty, especially when his wife sent a message to him to have nothing to do with that just man, for that she had suffered much in a dream on his account. Matt. xxvii. 19.—The Jews perceived Pilate's great inclination to set Jesus at liberty: they therefore tell him in plain terms, that if he doth dismiss this man, he is no friend to Cæsar: for every one, say they, that pretends to be a king, contradicts Cæsar. This moved Pilate more than any thing whatsoever, and prevailed with him both against justice and his own conscience, to condemn Jesus. He feared lest some private information might be presented against him to Tiberius Cæsar. He presently mounted the judgment-seat in a public place, and said to the Jews, Behold your king. They cry out, Away with him, crucify him. Shall I crucify your king? said Pilate. They reply, We have no king but Cæsar; thus renouncing their Messiah. At this Pilate yielded; and (ver. 24) washed his hands, and said, I am innocent from the blood of this just man: look you to it. Wi.

22 Pilate saith to them: What shall I do then with Jesus that is called Christ? They all say: Let him be crucified.

23 The governor said to them: Why, what evil hath he done? But they cried out the more, saying: Let him be crucified.

24 And Pilate seeing that he prevailed nothing; but that rather a tumult was made; having taken water, washed his hands before the people, saying: I am innocent of the blood of this just man: look you to it.

25 And all the people answering, said: His blood be upon us, and upon our children.

26 Then he released to them Barabbas, and having scourged Jesus, delivered him to them to be crucified.

27 Then the soldiers of the governor taking Jesus into the hall, gathered together unto him the whole band:

28 And stripping him, they put a scarlet cloak about him.

29 And plating a crown of thorns, they put it upon his head, and a reed in his right hand. And bowing the knee before him, they mocked him, saying: Hail, king of the Jews.

30 And spitting upon him, they took the reed, and struck his head.

31 And after they had mocked him, they took off the cloak from him, and put on him his own garments, and led him away to crucify him.

32 And going out, they found a man of Cyrene, named Simon: him they forced to take up his cross.

33 And they came to the place that is called Golgotha, which is the place of Calvary.

^a Mark xv. 16; Psal. xxi. 17.—^b John xix. 2.—^c Mark xv. 21; Luke xxiii. 26.

VER. 25. All the people answered, His blood be upon us, and upon our children; which continues, saith S. Jerom, to this day. Then Pilate delivered to them Jesus to be crucified. Wi.

VER. 26. And having scourged Jesus. We must know that Pilate was a subject of the Roman empire; and by the Roman law it was ordained, that whoever was condemned to the cross, should previously suffer the punishment of scourging. S. Jerom.—He wished also by this apparent severity to soften the minds of the Jews, content their inveterate animosity, and this with hopes that they would in the end consent to the liberation of Jesus. V.

VER. 28. A scarlet cloak. S. Mark and S. John call it purple. But these colours are frequently taken promiscuously by writers. V.

VER. 29. The crowning of thorns had preceded the time when Jesus was made over by Pilate to the Jews. As the Hebrew has no preterpluperfect tense, we may conjecture that those words circumdedarunt, posuerunt, are Hebraisms; for circumdedarunt, posuerunt, they had covered him with a cloak; they had placed a crown of thorns on his head, and a reed or cane in his hand. V.

Jesus carrieth his cross to Mount Calvary, where he is nailed to it. A great darkness.

VER. 31. And led him away to crucify him. It was the custom for men condemned to die by crucifixion to carry their cross, which Jesus did through the city; but going out, or being gone out of the city, and, as it is probable, fainting under the weight of it, (his strength as man being exhausted,) they forced a man of Cyrene, named Simon, perhaps a Gentile, of Cyrene, in Libya, to carry the cross after him. S. Luke says, they laid the cross upon him to carry after Jesus; whether it were that they made Simon carry the whole cross, or whether he only bore it up behind, is not expressed. S. Luke tells us, a great crowd followed, and a number of women, who wept and lamented; to whom Christ said, Weep not over me, but weep for yourselves, and for your children, on the account of the punishments and miseries that will shortly happen. Wi.

VER. 32. Cyrene was the capital of a province in Africa, near Libya. See Acts ii. 10. V.—S. John says that Christ went out carrying his own cross, while the other three evangelists state that they forced Simon of Cyrene to carry it for him. Both are true: for seeing Christ unequal to the weight, they compelled the other to take it up for him; not a part only, as some painters represent, but the whole, to Mount Calvary, as Jesus Christ had carried the whole before. S. Austin.

VER. 33. Golgotha, i. e. the place of Calvary, of heads and skulls: perhaps, says S. Jerom, from the skulls of persons executed, and buried there. Several ancient writers would have it so called, from Adam's skull, whom they guess to have been buried there. Some also say that a part of this mountain was called Moria, the place where Abraham was ready to have sacrificed his son Isaac. Wi.—Isaac, carrying the wood on his shoulders for the sacrifice, was a figure of 34 And they gave him wine to drink, mingled with gall. And when he had tasted, he would not drink.

35 And after they had crucified him, they divided his garments, casting lots; that the word might be fulfilled which was spoken by the prophet, saying: 'They divided my garments among them; and upon my vesture they cast lots.

36 And they sat down and watched him.

37 And they put over his head his cause written: THIS IS JESUS, THE KING OF THE JEWS.

38 Then were there crucified with him two thieves: one on the right hand, and the other on the left.

39 And they that passed by, blasphemed him, wagging their heads,

40 And saying: 'Vah, thou who destroyest the temple of God, and in three days buildest it up again, save thy own self: if thou be the Son of God, come down from the cross.

41 In like manner also the chief priests with the Scribes and ancients mocking, said:

42 He saved others; himself he cannot save: if he be the king of Israel, let him now come down from the cross, and we will believe him.

43 He trusted in God, let him deliver him now if he will have him: for he said: I am the Son of God.

44 And the self-same thing the thieves also, that were crucified with him, reproached him with.

45 Now from the sixth hour, there was darkness over all the earth, until the ninth hour.

46 And about the ninth hour, Jesus cried with a loud

Jesus Christ carrying his cross. The mountain was situated to the north-west of Jerusalem.

VER. 34. Wine . . mingled with gall § The Prot., from the ordinary Greek copies, translate vinegar; but other Greek copies have wine, which S. Jerom and S. Hilary follow. And in S. Mark all copies, without exception, have wine mixed with myrrh: and perhaps myrrh, from its bitterness, is here called gall. Our Saviour tasted it, but would not drink it. He refused not to taste the bitterness, but would not take what might lessen his torments. Wi.—S. Mark says, mingled with myrrh; perhaps it was mixed with both, to render it as bitter as possible. S. Austin.

VER. 35. They divided his garments. This was accounted with the ancients the greatest infamy. It was never done with any but the most vile and worthless wretches; with men who possessed nothing more than their garments. S. Chrys.

VER. 37. This is Jesus, the King of the Jews. S. Mark has only, this is the King of the Jews; as also S. Luke. S. John, Jesus, of Nazareth, King of the Jews, which might be the whole inscription. It was the custom of the Romans to put such inscriptions with the cause of their being crucified. S. Luke and S. John tell us, it was written in Hebrew, Greek, and Latin. The Jews begged of Pilate that it might be changed, and only put, He said, I am the King of the Jews; but Pilate made them this short answer, What I have written, I have written. Wi.

VER. 38. Two robbers, or thieves, and Jesus in the midst; as if he had been the greatest malefactor of the three. Wi.

VER. 39. They . . blasphemed, reviled, and insulted him with words and gestures. Wi.

VER. 42. If he be the king of Israel. Pilate having written on the inscription set upon the cross, that Christ was the king of Israel, the Jews endeavoured to persuade him to remove or alter it; but Pilate gave them for answer, according to S. John, What I have written, I have written. The Jews, therefore, wishing to show that he was not their king, said with insulting scorn, if he be the king of Israel, let him come down from the cross, (S. Chrys.) and we will believe him.

VER. 43. If he will have him: lit. if he will him. In the style of the Scriptures, to will, is to love, or be pleased with any one; and so it is applied, Psal. xxi. 9, from whence these words are taken. See also 1 Kings xviii. 22. Wi.

VER. 44. And the self-same thing the thieves also: i. e. one of them, the other being converted, as we find Luke xxiii. 39. Wi.—S. Ambrose, S. Chrysostom, S. Jerom, and Ven. Bede say, that at first both of the thieves blasphemed; but one of them seeing the wonderful things that happened, viz. that the sun was darkened, the rocks split asunder, &c., was terrified and converted, he believed in Jesus, and atoned for his former evil language, by praying to him as to his God Dion. Carth.

VER. 45. From the sixth hour. S. Mark says, it was the third hour, and voice, saying: 'Eli, Eli, lamma sabachthani? that is, My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me?

47 And some of them that stood there and heard, said: This man calleth for Elias.

48 And immediately one of them running, took a sponge, and filled it with vinegar; and put it on a reed, and gave him to drink.

49 And the others said: Stay, let us see whether Elias will come to deliver him.

50 And Jesus again crying with a loud voice, yielded up the ghost.

51 ^bAnd behold the veil of the temple was rent in two from the top even to the bottom, and the earth quaked, and the rocks were rent.

52 And the graves were opened: and many bodies of the saints that had slept, arose:

53 And coming out of the tombs after his resurrection, came into the holy city and appeared to many.

54 Now the centurion, and they that were with him, watching Jesus, having seen the earthquake and the they crucified him. S. John says, it was about the sixth hour, when Jesus was condemned. To reconcile these expressions, we may take notice, that the third greater hour lasted till the sixth hour; and so S. Mark calls it the third hour, because the third great hour (which contained three lesser hours) did not end till mid-day, when the sixth hour was beginning; so that the end of the third, and the beginning of the sixth, happened together.—A darkness, at mid-day, and at full moon. Origen thinks this darkness was only in Palestine, and the neighbouring countries: for as to the words, over the whole earth, or over the whole land, we find one kingdom or empire, by a common way of speaking, called the whole earth, or the whole world. Here, in the history of Christ's passion, we should take notice of his seven last words, or sentences, on the cross. 1. He prayed for his enemies, and those that put him to death, (Luke xxiii. 34,) Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do. 2. His mercy called the good thief, This day thou shalt be with me in paradise Luke xxiii. 43. 3. He recommended his beloved disciple to his mother, saying, Woman, behold thy son; and his mother to the same disciple, with, Behold thy mother. John xix. 26, 27. 4. Here (ver. 46) he cried out with a loud voice, Eli, Eli, lamma sabachthani, i. e. My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me? These words, out of Psal. xxi. 1, were to express his violent sufferings. The Ar'ins objected them against the Divinity of Christ; to whom the Fathers answer that he spoke these words in the person of sinners, for whose sake he suffered, as they show by the following words of the same Psalm, far from my salvation are the words of my sins; which cannot be applied to Christ, he being incapable of sinning. Besides, these words may be expounded as a prayer, by which he desires of his Father, not to be abandoned any longer, but that his sufferings may now have an end. The fifth sentence was, I thirst, to let us know the violent thirst of his exhausted body. S. John (xix. 28) says it was that the Scripture might be fulfilled, Psal. lxxviii. 22, And in my thirst they gave me vinegar to drink. The sixth sentence was, It is consummated (John xix. 30); i. e. the work of man's redemption, and all the prophecies, and decrees of heaven, concerning me, the Saviour of the world, are now accomplished. The seventh and last sentence was, Father, into thy hands I commend my spirit; and with these words, says S. Luke, (xxiii. 46,) pronounced with a loud voice, he expired. Wi.

The miracles at Christ's death. II. His burial.

VER. 47. This man calleth for Elias. S. Jerom thinks these might be some of the Roman soldiers, who understood not Syriae, but who had heard of the prophet Elias. Wi.—But if we understand it of the Jews, who could not possibly be ignorant of this word, we must suppose it was merely a stratagem of theirs, who, wishing still to show the weakness of our Redeemer, said that he called Elias to his aid. S. Jer.

VER. 50. With a loud voice. In this our Redeemer confirms what he had said to Pilate, I have power to lay down my life, and I have power to take it up again: for he cried with a loud voice, and at the very hour of the evening sacrifice, to show that it was the effect of his own will that he died. S. John Chrys. Hom. 89.

VER. 51. The veil of the temple was rent. As there were in the temple two parts of the sanctuary, so there were two veils, or partition walls. The first sanctuary, called the holy, was separated by a veil from that part of the temple called the court of the Israelites. Into this outward sanctuary, called the holy, entered every day the priests that were in office. The second interior sanctuary, called the holy of holies, was also separated from the outward sanctuary by another veil. And into this holy of holies no one was to enter except the high priest, and he but once a year. Both these veils seem to have been rent at Christ's death: and by their being broken down, was signified first, that the ceremonies of the ancient law were to be abolished by the law of Christ; and also that heaven should be open to all.—The earth quaked How far this earthquake was extended, is uncertain.—The rocks were rent, and the graves were opened: and many bodies of the saints . . .

S. Jerom takes notice, that those saints did not rise with their bodies till things that were done, were greatly afraid, saying: Indeed this was the Son of God.

55 And there were there many women afar off, who had followed Jesus from Galilee, ministering unto him:

56 Among whom was Mary Magdalene, and Mary, the mother of James and Joseph, and the mother of the sons of Zebedee.

57 ^cAnd when it was evening, there came a certain rich man of Arimathea, named Joseph, who also himself was a disciple of Jesus.

58 He went to Pilate, and begged the body of Jesus. Then Pilate commanded that the body should be delivered.

59 And Joseph taking the body wrapt it up in a clean linen cloth,

60 And laid it in his own new monument, which he had hewed out in a rock. And he rolled a great stone to the door of the monument, and went his way:

61 And there was Mary Magdalene, and the other Mary sitting over against the sepulchre.

after Christ was risen; and so it follows, that going out of the graves, after the resurrection, they came into the holy city, (i. e. into Jerusalem,) and appeared to many. Wi.—This event was a prophecy of the fatal destruction that was shortly to fall upon the temple; and also, that it should henceforth give place to things more noble and sublime. It likewise shows the greatness of Christ's power. S. Chrys. Hom. 89.

VER. 54. Indeed this was the Son of God. S. Mark says, that when they saw Jesus die in that manner, crying out with a loud voice, which could not be natural, and when they saw the other miracles, they were struck with fear. S. Luke says, (xxiii. 47,) that the centurion glorified God, &c. Wi.—It is said that this centurion, being afterwards confirmed in the faith, was honoured with the crown of martyrdom. S. Chrys. Hom. 89.

VER. 55. Ministering unto him. These women ministered to our Lord, hoping that he would bestow heavenly food to them, who offered earthly food to him: not that the Creator of all things stood in need of assistance: but he wished to show his disciples an example of poverty in himself, and charity in these women, among whom were Mary Magdalene, sister of Martha and Lazarus; Mary, the mother of James the less and Joseph, sister of the blessed Virgin Mary; and the mother of the sons of Zebedee, otherwise called Salome, who were disciples of Jesus. S. Jerom, and M.

VER. 57. When it was evening, &c. S. John tells us, (chap. xix. 31,) that the day on which Jesus died, being the day of preparation, (lit. the parasceve,) that is, the Friday or eve of the great sabbath, to wit, of the sabbath-day, which happened in the week of the Paschal solemnity, the Jews desired of Pilate that the bodies might not remain on the crosses on the sabbath-day, but that they might be taken away. Some soldiers were sent for this purpose, and broke the legs of the two others that were not quite dead; but perceiving that Jesus was dead, they broke not his legs, but one of them pierced and opened his side with a lance, or spear, and with such a wound, as would have deprived him of life, had he not been already dead. The Divine Providence permitted this, to make his death more certain and undoubted.—Joseph, a disciple in private, now encouraged by the miracles which had happened, went boldly to Pilate, and begged the body of Jesus. S. Mark says, Pilate wondered, when he heard he was dead; and having been informed of the truth by the centurion, he granted the body to Joseph. Nicodemus also, who is called a prince of the Jews, (John iii. 1,) came to bury our Saviour, bringing with him a mixture of myrrh and aloes, to embalm the body, as they did. Wi.—The town of Arimathea is placed on the maps about eighteen or twenty miles north-west of Jerusalem.

VER. 59. Wrapt it up. Behold with admiration the courage and constancy of this disciple of Christ, who, through love for his crucified Saviour, willingly exposed himself not only to the enmity of his countrymen, but even to the danger of death, and dared in presence of all to beg the body of Jesus, and to give it public interment. S. Chrys. Hom. 89.

VER. 60. And Joseph laid it in his own new monument, . . . hewed or cut out in a rock, where no one had ever been laid: and rolled a great stone against the entrance, that no one might go in, or take away the body. But Mary Magdalene, and other women that had accompanied Jesus from Galilee, followed at a distance, to mark the place, having a design to come afterwards, and again embalm the body. Wi.

VER. 61. Sitting over against. Though S. Matthew makes mention of two women only, who were there, it is nevertheless certain from the other evangelists, that there were more, though these two are here particularized, because they perhaps showed greater anxiety. Jans.

VER. 62. The next day, which followed that of the parasceve, or preparation, (that is, on the great sabbath-day,) the chief priests came to Pilate, to beg of him to set a guard at the monument. Wi.—The day of the preparation. The eve of the sabbath; so called, because on that day they prepared all things necessary: not being allowed so much as to dress their meat on the sabbath-day. Ch.

preparation, the chief priests and the Pharisees came together to Pilate, 63 Saying: Sir, we have remembered, that that seducer said, while he was yet alive: After three days I will rise again.

64 Command, therefore, the sepulchre to be guarded until the third day; lest his disciples come, and steal him away, and say to the people: He is risen from the dead: so the last error shall be worse than the first.

65 Pilate said to them: You have a guard: go, guard it as you know.

66 And they departing, made the sepulchre sure, with guards, sealing the stone.

The resurrection of Christ. His commission to his disciples.

VER. 63. Sir, we have remembered, that that seducer said: . . . After three days I will rise again. This, therefore, must have been well known among the Jews. Wi.—The chief motive which influenced the high priest on this occasion, was probably the apprehension lest this prediction of Christ's resurrection should be verified. The wonderful prodigies which took place at his death, and especially the opening of the graves, (though none arose it is believed till after Christ's resurrection, since Christ is called the first-born from the dead, Col. i. 18, and the first-fruits of them that sleep, 1 Cor. xv. 20,) might naturally appear as preludes to what he had so often foretold.

VER. 65. You have a guard; supposed to be a company of Roman soldiers, destined for the guard of the temple (V.): or, may take a guard; go, and make it secure; which they did, sealing the stone, and placing guards at the monument. Providence ordered this, to make Christ's resurrection more certain and evident. Wi.

VER. 66. They departing. See how, beyond the possibility of contradiction, these precautions prove the reality of Christ's resurrection, and how the inveterate enemies of Christ become unwilling witnesses of it; for, since the sepulchre was guarded, there was an impossibility of any deceit on the part of the disciples. Now, if the least deceit was utterly impracticable, then indeed Christ our Lord has infallibly risen; and to remove every, the least possibility of deceit, Pilate would not permit the soldiers alone to seal up the monument. S. Thos. Aquin.—The high priests made the sepulchre sure, sealing the stone at the entrance of the monument with the public seal, ἀσφαλιζαντες τὸν λίθον, proof against all fraud, either of corrupt guards or of designing followers, as Darius did, (Dan. vi. 17,) that no violence might be offered him. All this diligence, on the part of the enemies of the Christian faith, was permitted by Divine Providence, that our faith in Christ's resurrection might be more certain, his glory greater, and the minds of the people better disposed to believe. CHAP. XXVIII. VER. 1.* And in the end of the sabbath, when it began to dawn towards the first day of the week. According to the letter, in the evening of the sabbath, which began to dawn on the first of the sabbath (or of the sabbaths, in the common Greek copies). This latter translation, which is that of the Rheims Testament, is certainly more according to the letter, and more obscure than it need to be. First, by translating on the first of the sabbath, where sabbath is taken for a week, as in other places, Luke xviii. 12; Acts xx. 7; and 1 Cor. xvi. 2. It may therefore here be literally translated, on the first day of the week. Secondly, by the evening, is here meant the night: for in the Scriptures, both the Latin and Greek word, which we find in this place, not only signifies that time which we commonly call the evening, but is also put for the whole night itself, and for the time from sunset to sunrise next morning. Moreover, it appears by the other evangelists. S. Mark (xvi. 1) says, when the sabbath was past . . . very early in the morning. S. Luke says, (xxiv. 1,) very early in the morning. S. John (xx. 1) says of Mary Magdalene, that she came in the morning, when it was yet dark. From all which it is plain, that Mary Magdalene, and the other pious women, came to the sepulchre at the end of the night after the sabbath-day, or when it began to be light, and about sunrise on the first day of the week, on our Sunday.

angel of the Lord descended from heaven: and coming rolled back the stone, and sat upon it.

3 And his countenance was as lightning, and his raiment as snow.

4 And for fear of him, the guards were struck with terror, and became as dead men.

5 And the angel answering, said to the women: Fear not you: for I know that you seek Jesus who was crucified:

6 He is not here; for he is risen, as he said. Come, and see the place where the Lord was laid.

7 And going quickly, tell ye his disciples that he is risen: and behold he will go before you into Galilee: there you shall see him. Lo, I have foretold it to you.

8 And they went out quickly from the sepulchre, with fear and great joy, running to tell his disciples.

9 And behold Jesus met them, saying: All hail. But they came up and took hold of his feet and worshipped him.

—And the other Mary, &c. S. Mark says, Mary, the mother of James and Salome. S. Luke also names Joanna, who was wife to Chusa, Herod's steward. These women had rested the sabbath, and as soon as it was over, i. e. after sunset, they bought spices, and prepared them in the night, in order to embalm the body next morning. Wi.

VER. 2. Behold . . . an angel. The angel did not remove the stone to afford a passage to Christ when he arose; for Christ most certainly arose before the angel appeared; but he removed the stone to prepare the way for the women, and to show the soldiers that Christ was arisen.—For an angel of the Lord. This angel, who came to testify Christ's resurrection, removed the great stone; but Christ was risen before, who, according to all the Fathers, says Estius, rose, the sepulchre being yet shut.—S. Matthew and S. Mark name but one angel; S. Luke and S. John name two. It may be answered, that the women saw one at one time, and two at another: one upon the stone, out of the monument (which also frightened the guards); afterwards this angel disappeared, and the women coming near, and looking into the vault, saw two angels, when he that was on the right side said, Why seek you him that is living, among the dead?—Another difference to be observed, is, that S. Matthew, Mark, and John tell us, that the angel, or angels, sat; and S. Luke, that they stood: they might sit at one time, and stand at another. In the third place, we take notice that Mary Magdalene seems to have come running to S. Peter and S. John, as soon as ever she saw the stone removed, with these words, They have taken away the Lord . . . and we know not where they have laid him, John xx. 2: we do not there read that she said any thing of the angels. In all these there is no contradiction; and the difficulties rise only from this, that each evangelist does not relate all the circumstances. Wi.

VER. 6. He is risen, as he said. This is to put them in mind of what they ought to have remembered, and believed.—S. Luke is more particular; and tells us the angel said, Remember how he spoke to you, when he was yet in Galilee, that the Son of man must be delivered into the hands of sinners, and be crucified, and the third day rise again. Wi.

VER. 7. Into Galilee. It is not without reason that the angel informs the women that he will go before them into Galilee; for Galilee is interpreted a transmigration, or a passage. O happy women, who merited the glorious ministry of announcing to a sunk and distressed world the triumphant resurrection of our Redeemer.

VER. 9. Jesus met them. According to S. Mark, Christ appeared first to Mary Magdalene; and the particulars are related by S. John. She at first did not know him, but took him for the gardener: then he called her by her name, Mary, and she knew him: he said to her, Touch me not, for I have not yet ascended to my Father; i. e. according to the common exposition, I have not ascended, nor am yet going to ascend; thou mayest see me again before I ascend: this is not the last time.—We also read here, (ver. 9,) that he appeared to some of the other women, as they were returning to Jerusalem from the sepulchre, and that they laid hold on his feet and adored him; nor is it said, that he hindered them. Wi.—They were then returning to carry the news to the disciples, when they laid hold of his feet. To touch the feet, was in the Scripture a species of veneration.

VER. 10. There they shall see me. Our Saviour, on the day of his resurrection, showed himself alive five different times: 1. to Mary Magdalene; 2. to the women leaving the sepulchre; 3. to S. Peter; 4. to the two disciples going to Emmaus; 5. to the disciples assembled together, when the two returned from Emmaus. And after the day of his resurrection, before he ascended into heaven, he appeared other five times: 1. after eight days, when Thomas was present; 2. when the seven disciples were fishing on the sea of Tiberias (S. John xxi.); 3. to the eleven on Mount Thabor; 4. in Jerusalem, on the day of his ascension; and 5. on the same day on Mount Olivet, when he was taken from them. Dion. Cart.—The seventh apparition of Jesus, which was by the sea or lake of Tiberias, S. John calls the third, which may mean in any numerous assembly of his disciples; the first being on the day of his resurrection, and the second the Sunday following. This may also be referred to the number of days. He first appeared 73 different 10 Then Jesus said to them: Be not afraid. Go, tell my brethren that they go into Galilee, there they shall see me.

11 Now when they were departed, behold some of the guards came into the city, and told the chief priests all the things that had been done.

12 And they being assembled together with the ancients, having taken counsel, they gave a great sum of money to the soldiers;

13 Saying: Say you, that his disciples came by night, and stole him away when we were asleep.

14 And if the governor shall hear of this, we will persuade him, and secure you.

15 So they, taking the money, did as they were taught.

persons on the very day of his resurrection; secondly, eight days afterwards, and then a third time. S. Aug.

VER. 11. Some of the guards came into the city. It is probable they had retired a while to some place to consult what to say, and how to avoid being punished. The chief priests, after consulting upon the matter, ordered them to say, that when they were asleep, the disciples came and stole away Jesus's body. This report was spread about every where. S. Augustin laughs at them for their blindness and folly, in bringing men in for witnesses of a fact, which they themselves own was done whilst they were asleep. Wi.

VER. 12. Gave a great sum of money. These princes of the Jewish nation still persisting in their malice, refused to turn to their Creator by hearty repentance, and wished to persuade the world that Jesus was not risen, sacrificing that money to falsehood, which was given for the use of the temple. For as they offered Judas thirty pieces of silver to betray his Master, so now they offer a great sum of money to suppress a truth so useful and so necessary for man. S. Jerom.

VER. 13. It hence appears, that the chief priests themselves were fully convinced of the fact; for, otherwise, they would not have bribed the soldiers to dissemble, but would have accused the soldiers before the president of a neglect of duty. T.—How was it possible for the timid and weak disciples, who dared not show themselves in public, to come in defiance of an armed multitude to steal away the body! If these men dared not even to come forward in defence of their Master when alive, is it probable that these same men after his death would steal away his body? And could they, even allowing the possibility of conceiving the design, have removed the stone, which required a great number of hands to stir? Was not the mouth of the sepulchre also sealed? But why did they not steal away the body the first night, before the guards were stationed? For it was on Saturday the priests petitioned for a guard. Why did they not also take the clothes, which S. Peter saw lying in the sepulchre? Would not a delay in taking off the clothes, and the napkin that bound his head, have appeared dangerous? Would it not have exposed their lives, particularly as the body had been anointed, and some time would be requisite to remove the linen, which would adhere to the body? The means they take to make the miracle uncertain, render it utterly undeniable. For in protesting that the disciples stole it away, they confessed that the body was no longer in the sepulchre. The fear and doubts of the disciples, joined to the idle story of the soldiers, is an evident demonstration, that the account of the body being stolen away, is a gross calumny. S. Chrys. Hom. 90.

VER. 16. The eleven disciples went into Galilee, yet not till above eight days after. When the apostles and disciples were gone into Galilee, he showed himself to seven of them, as they were fishing on the lake of Tiberias. John xxi. 4. We read also in this chap. (ver. 16) that he appeared to them on a mountain in Galilee: what mountain it was we know not. It may be of this apparition that S. Paul says, (1 Cor. xv. 6,) Then was he seen by more than five hundred brethren at once. He also tells us he appeared to S. James. See ver. 7. But when or where this was is not mentioned. In fine, Christ, till his ascension, frequently appeared to them, and conversed with them. He taught them to understand the Holy Scriptures, and all that belonged to their ministry: he gave them power to forgive sins. He sent his apostles, as his heavenly Father had sent him. He gave in particular to S. Peter the charge over his whole flock. He promised to send down upon them the Holy Ghost; and to remain with them himself to the end of the world, i. e. with his Church. Wi.

VER. 18. All power is given to me. The Arians object that the power which Christ had, is said to be given him by another. The Catholics answer, that Christ, as man, received this power from God. Secondly, It may also be said, that the

And this word was spread abroad among the Jews even unto this day.

16 And the eleven disciples went into Galilee, unto the mountain where Jesus had appointed them.

17 And seeing him, they adored: but some doubted.

18 And Jesus coming, spoke to them, saying: All power is given to me in heaven and in earth.

19 Go ye, therefore, and teach all nations: baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost;

20 Teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you: and behold I am with you all days, even to the consummation of the world.

• Mark xvi. 15.

eternal Son, though he be equal, and be the same God with the Father, yet he proceeds and receives all from the Father. Wi.—See here the warrant and commission of the apostles and their successors, the bishops and pastors of Christ's Church. He received from his Father, all power in heaven and in earth; and in virtue of this power he sends them (even as his Father sent him, S. John xx. 21,) to teach and disciple, μαθητεύειν, not one, but all nations, and instruct them in all truths: and that he may assist them effectually in the execution of this commission, he promises to be with them, (not for three or four hundred years only,) but all days, even to the consummation of the world. How then could the Catholic Church go astray? having always with her pastors, as is here promised, Christ himself, who is the way, the truth, and the life. S. John xiv. 6. Ch.

VER. 19. Teach all nations. In S. Mark we read, going into the whole world, preach to every creature, that is capable of it; not only to the Jews, but to all nations throughout the whole world, baptizing them, &c. The Anabaptists pretend to show from this place, that none are to be baptized, unless they be first taught and instructed. This is true, as to persons who are already come to an age, in which they are capable of being instructed before their baptism. But according to the tradition and constant doctrine of the Catholic Church, received also by the pretended Reformed Churches, new-born children are to be baptized before they are capable of instruction: nor can they enter into the kingdom of heaven without baptism.—In the name of the Father, &c. We are made Christians in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost: we profess to believe, and hope for our salvation, by believing, hoping, serving, and adoring the same three Divine Persons, from whence the Fathers prove the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost to be one God, and equal in all perfections. Wi.—Had Christ only said, Lo! I am with you all days; it might, in that case, be limited to the natural lives of the apostles; but as he moreover adds, even to the consummation of the world, it must necessarily be extended to their successors in the ministry, till the end of time. E.

VER. 20. Behold I am with you all days, even to the end of the world, embraces two points necessary for the Church; viz. integrity of doctrine, and sanctity of life; for, if either of these should be wanting to the Church, it might then be justly said, that she had been left and abandoned by Christ, her Spouse. E.—Jesus Christ will make good his promise: 1. by always dwelling in the hearts of the faithful; 2. by his sacramental presence in the holy Eucharist; 3. by his providential care, and constant protection to his holy Catholic Church. These last six lines of S. Matthew's Gospel, says the bright luminary of France, Bossuet, most clearly demonstrate the infallibility and indefectibility of the one, holy, Catholic Church, which all are commanded to hear and to obey.

What must the Latin, quæ, and the Greek, ἐπιφωσκούσῃ, agree with? We must understand in the Latin, dies; i. e. die quæ lucescit: and in the Greek we must understand, ἡμέρᾳ τῇ ἐπιφωσκούσῃ.—We may also observe, that in the Greek we read not ὥστε, but ὥτι, the adverb, scilicet; so that for the Latin to correspond to the Greek, it should also be vespere, late after the sabbath. ACCORDING TO

S. MARK.

MARK, who wrote this Gospel, is called, by S. Augustin, the abridger of S. Matthew; by S. Irenæus, the disciple and interpreter of S. Peter; and according to Origen and S. Jerom, he is the same Mark whom S. Peter calls his son. Stilling, the Bollandist, (in the Life of S. John Mark, T. 7, Sep. 27, p. 387, who was son to the sister of S. Barnabas,) endeavours to prove that this was the same person as our evangelist; and this is the sentiment of S. Jerom, and some others; but the general opinion is that John, surnamed Mark, mentioned in Acts xii., was a different person. He was the disciple of S. Paul, and companion of S. Barnabas, and was with S. Paul at Antioch, when our evangelist was with S. Peter at Rome, or at Alexandria, as Eusebius, S. Jerom, Baronius, and others observe. Tirinus is of opinion that the evangelist was not one of the seventy-two disciples, because as S. Peter calls him his son, he was converted by S. Peter after the death of Christ. S. Epiphanius, however, assures us he was one of the seventy-two, and forsook Christ after hearing his discourse on the Eucharist, (John vi.,) but was converted by S. Peter after Christ's resurrection. Hær. 51, c. 5, p. 528.—The learned are generally of opinion that the original was written in Greek, and not in Latin; for, though it was written at the request of the Romans, the Greek language was commonly understood amongst them; and the style itself sufficiently shows this to have been the case. The old MS. in Latin, kept at Venice, and supposed by some to be the original, is shown by Montfaucon, and other antiquaries, to have been written in the sixth century, and contains the oldest copy extant of S. Jerom's version.—S. Peter revised the work of S. Mark, approved of it, and authorized it to be read in the religious assemblies of the faithful; hence some, as we learn from Tertullian, attributed this Gospel to S. Peter himself. S. Mark relates the same facts as S. Matthew, and often in the same words: but he adds several particular circumstances, and changes the order of the narration, in which he agrees with S. Luke and S. John. He narrates two histories not mentioned by S. Matthew; the widow's two mites, and Christ's appearing to the two disciples, on the road to Emmaus; also some miraculous cures (Mark i. 40; vii. 32; viii. 22, 26); and omits many things noticed by S. Matthew. . . But nothing proves clearly, as Dom. Ceillier and others suppose, that he made use of S. Matthew's Gospel. In his narrative he is concise, and he writes with a most pleasing simplicity and elegance. It is certain that S. Mark was sent by S. Peter into Egypt, and was by him appointed bishop of Alexandria, (which, after Rome was accounted the second city of the world,) as Eusebius, S. Epiphanius, S. Jerom, and others assure us. He remained here, governing that flourishing church with great prudence, zeal, and sanctity. He suffered martyrdom in the 14th year of the reign of Nero, in the year of Christ 68, and three years after the death of SS. Peter and Paul, at Alexandria, on the 25th of April; having been seized the previous day, which was Sunday, at the altar, as he was offering to God the prayer of the oblation, or the mass.

CHAP. I. VER. 1. The beginning of the Gospel. The Greek word,* and Latin derived from it, signifies the good news, or happy tidings about Christ's coming and doctrine. The word gospel is from the Saxon, God's spell, or good spell, i. e. God's word, or good speech. Wi.

VER. 2. In Isaias, the prophet. That in the ancient copies was read Isaias, and not Malachy, is confirmed by the Syriac version, and also by S. Irenæus, Origen, S. Jerom, &c. It is also proved from an objection of Porphyrius, who says S. Mark mistook Isaias for Malachy. In the ordinary Greek copies at present we read in the prophets, not naming either Isaias or Malachy. The words seem taken partly out of one, and partly out of the other. These words, Behold I send my angel before thy face, who shall prepare thy way before thee, are found Mal. iii. 1. And the following words, A voice of one crying in the desert: Prepare ye the way of the Lord, make straight his paths, are in Isa. xl. 3. Wi.—S. John is here styled an angel, on account of his angelic life, and extraordinary sanctity; but what is meant by, who shall prepare thy way, is, that S. John is to prepare the minds of the Jews, by his baptism and preaching, to receive their Messias. Theophylactus. See in Matt. xi. 10.

VER. 3. See Matt. iii. 3.

VER. 4 For the remission of sins. Some commentators think from this that the baptism of John remitted sins, though he says in another place, I baptize you with water, but there has stood one amongst you, who will baptize you with water and the Holy Ghost, to show that he did not baptize with the Holy Ghost, without leathern girdle about his loins: and he eat locusts and wild honey, and he preached, saying:

7 There cometh after me one mightier than I, the latchet of whose shoes I am not worthy to stoop down and loose.

8 I have baptized you with water; but he shall baptize you with the Holy Ghost.

9 And it came to pass in those days that Jesus came from Nazareth of Galilee: and was baptized by John in the Jordan.

10 And forthwith coming up out of the water, he saw the heavens opened, and the Spirit as a dove descending, and remaining on him.

11 And there came a voice from heaven: Thou art my beloved Son, in thee I am well pleased.

12 And immediately the Spirit drove him out into the desert.

which there is no remission of sin. This apparent difficulty will be easily reconciled, if we refer this expression to the word penance, and not baptism; so that by penance their sins were to be washed away, and they were baptized to show their detestation of their former life. Jans. Concord. Evang.

VER. 7. One mightier than I. The precursor does not yet openly declare our Lord to be the Son of God, but only one mightier than himself. The Jews were not prepared to receive his coming; he therefore wisely led them by degrees to the knowledge of what Divine Providence had designed them; he yet secretly assures them that he is the Son of God. I have baptized you with water, but he shall baptize you with the Holy Ghost. Now it is evident that none but God can bestow upon man the grace of the Holy Ghost. Ven. Bede.

VER. 9. See notes on our Saviour's baptism, Matt. iii.

VER. 10. Spirit. The epithet Holy is not found in most of the Greek MSS., but it is in John i. 32, and 33.

VER. 11. The Greek printed copies and some MSS. read with S. Matt. (iii. 17) in whom, &c. ita S. Chrys. Euthym. and Th. Some few, however, have et scilicet, in thee, with the Syriac and Latin text. P.—All the Fathers cite these verses for a proof of the Trinity: the testimony of the Father speaking, of the Son receiving the testimony, of the Holy Ghost descending in the shape of a dove. 1. in Matt. iii. 17.

VER. 13. The Greek does not express the forty nights, but we find it in S. Matt. iv. 2.

13 And he was in the desert forty days, and forty nights: and was tempted by satan, and he was with beasts, and the angels ministered to him.

14 ^aAnd after that John was delivered up, Jesus came into Galilee, preaching the gospel of the kingdom of God;

15 And saying: The time is accomplished, and the kingdom of God is at hand: repent, and believe the gospel.

16 ^bAnd as he walked by the sea of Galilee, he saw Simon, and Andrew, his brother, casting nets into the sea (for they were fishermen).

17 And Jesus said to them: Come after me, and I will make you to become fishers of men.

18 And immediately leaving their nets, they followed him.

19 And going on from thence a little farther, he saw James, the son of Zebedee, and John, his brother, who also were in the ship mending their nets;

20 And forthwith he called them. And they left their father, Zebedee, in the ship, with his hired men, and followed him.

21 ^cAnd they enter into Capharnaum: and forthwith on the sabbath-day, going into the synagogue, he taught them.

22 ^dAnd they were astonished at his doctrine: for he taught them as one that had authority, and not as the Scribes.

23 ^eAnd there was in their synagogue a man with an unclean spirit: and he cried out,

24 Saying: What have we to do with thee, Jesus of Nazareth? art thou come to destroy us? I know who thou art, the holy one of God.

25 And Jesus threatened him, saying: Speak no more, and go out of the man.

26 And the unclean spirit tearing him, and crying out with a loud voice, went out of him.

27 And they were all amazed, insomuch that they questioned among themselves, saying: What thing is this? what is this new doctrine? for with authority, he commandeth even the unclean spirits, and they obey him.

28 And the fame of him was spread forthwith through all the country of Galilee.

29 ^fAnd immediately going out of the synagogue, they came into the house of Simon and Andrew, with James and John.

30 And Simon's wife's mother lay sick of a fever: and forthwith they tell him of her.

31 And he came and lifted her up, taking her by the hand: and immediately the fever left her, and she ministered unto them.

32 And when it was evening, after sun-set, they brought all to him that were diseased, and that were possessed with devils.

33 And all the city was gathered together at the door.

34 And he healed many that were sick of divers diseases: ^gand he cast out many devils, and he suffered them not to speak, because they knew him.

35 And rising very early in the morning, going out he went into a desert place: and there he prayed.

36 And Simon, and they who were with him, followed after him.

37 And when they had found him, they said to him: All men seek for thee.

38 And he saith to them: Let us go into the neighbouring towns and cities, that I may preach there also: for to this purpose I am come.

39 And he preached in their synagogues, and in all Galilee, and cast out devils.

40 ^hAnd there came a leper to him, beseeching him; and kneeling down, said to him: If thou wilt, thou canst make me clean.

41 And Jesus having compassion on him, stretched forth his hand; and touching him, saith to him: I will. Be thou made clean.

42 And when he had spoken, immediately the leprosy departed from him, and he was made clean.

43 And he strictly charged him, and forthwith sent him away.

44 And he saith to him: See thou tell no man: but go, show thyself to the high priest, and offer for thy cleansing the things that Moses commanded, for a testimony to them.

45 But he being gone out, began to publish and to blaze abroad the matter: so that now he could not go openly into the city, but was without in desert places, and they flocked to him from all sides.

VER. 15. As if he were to say: To this day the Mosaic law has been in full force, but henceforth the evangelical law shall be preached; which law is not undeservingly compared to the kingdom of God. Theophy.—Repent, therefore, says our Saviour, and believe the gospel; for if you believe not, you shall not understand; repent, therefore, and believe. What advantage is it to believe with good works? the merit of good works will not bring us to faith, but faith is the beginning of good works. S. Jerom.

VER. 16. We must observe that what S. Luke mentions, relative to the vocation of the apostles, is antecedent in point of time to what is here related by S. Mark; since it is known that these disciples on some occasions returned to their fishing, until Jesus called them to be his constant attendants. Theophy.

VER. 25. Christ would not suffer the devils to be produced as witnesses of his Divinity; the author of truth could not bear the father of lies to bear testimony of him. Hence Jesus threatened him, in order to teach us never to believe or put our trust in demons, whatever they may foretell. S. Chrys.

VER. 26. Tearing him: not that the devil tore the poor man's limbs or body; for S. Luke (iv. 35) expressly tells us, that the devil hurt him not. It means no more than that he shook him with violent agitations. Wi.

VER. 30. It appears from S. Mark and S. Luke, that the cure of Peter's mother-in-law and the other sick, here mentioned, happened after the preceding narrative, and probably on the same day. But S. Matt. does not observe this order; for having related that Jesus, after the sermon on the mount, entered Capharnaum, and healed the centurion's servant, he hence takes occasion to mention this and the other miracles, which he had omitted, and which Jesus had wrought at his first coming to Capharnaum. Rutter.

VER. 34. The devils knew that it was Christ, who had been promised for so many ages before; for they saw him perform the wonders which the prophets had foretold of him; yet they were not perfectly acquainted with his Divine nature, or otherwise they never would have persecuted to death and crucified the Lord of glory. S. Aug.—But Christ would not permit them to declare that they knew him V.—See Luke iv. 41.

* V. 1. εὐαγγέλιον, Evangelium, bonum nuncium.

2 And it was heard that he was in the house, and many came together, so that there was no room, no not even at the door: and he spoke to them the word.

3 *And they came to him, bringing one sick of the palsy, who was carried by four.

4 And when they could not offer him to him for the multitude, they uncovered the roof where he was: and opening it, they let down the bed wherein the man sick of the palsy lay.

5 And when Jesus saw their faith, he saith to the sick of the palsy: Son, thy sins are forgiven thee.

6 And some of the Scribes were sitting there, and thinking in their hearts:

7 Why doth this man speak thus? He blasphemeth. *Who can forgive sins, but God only?

8 And Jesus, presently knowing in his spirit, that they so thought within themselves, saith to them: Why think you these things in your hearts?

9 Which is easier, to say to the sick of the palsy: Thy sins are forgiven thee: or to say: Arise, take up thy bed, and walk?

10 But that you may know that the Son of man hath power on earth to forgive sins, (he saith to the sick of the palsy,)

11 I say to thee, Arise, take up thy bed, and go thy way into thy house.

12 And immediately he arose: and taking up his bed, went his way in the sight of all: so that all wondered, and glorified God, saying: We never saw the like.

13 And he went forth again to the sea-side: and all the multitude came to him, and he taught them.

14 *And when he was passing by, he saw Levi, the son of Alphaeus, sitting at the receipt of custom; and he saith to him: Follow me. And rising up, he followed him.

15 And it came to pass, that as he sat at meat in his house, many publicans and sinners sat down together with Jesus and his disciples: for they were many, who also followed him.

16 And the Scribes and Pharisees, seeing that he did eat with publicans and sinners, said to his disciples: Why doth your master eat and drink with publicans and sinners?

17 *Jesus hearing this, saith to them: They that are

VER. 5. When Jesus saw their faith. From this example, we are taught that in sickness the sacraments and helps of the Church, which are the medicines of the soul, should be called for in the first instance; for Christ first healed the sick man's soul, before he removed his bodily infirmity. We also learn that many diseases originate in sin, and that we are to remove the effect by removing the cause.

VER. 10. The Son of man. Jesus Christ here proveth that himself as man, and not as God only, hath power to forgive sins; by this, that he was able to do miracles, and make the sick man suddenly rise; so the apostles and their successors, though they be not God, may in like manner have authority from God to remit sins, not as God, but as God's ministers, and acting in his name, and vested with his delegated authority.—On earth. This power which the Son of man hath to remit sins on earth, was never taken from him, but is perpetuated in his sacraments and ministers, by whom he still remitteth sins in the Church, and not in heaven only. Whereupon S. Jerom saith, that priests having the keys of the kingdom of heaven, judge in some manner before the day of judgment. Ep. 5, ad Heliad.; and S. Chrys. more at large. l. 3, de Saecrd.

VER. 12. This paralytic is not the same as that mentioned in S. John; for that distressed man had no one to assist him, whereas this person had four; the former was by the side of the Probatia, but the latter in a house at Capharnaum. Theophy.

VER. 14. To follow Christ, is to imitate him; wherefore this apostle, that he might be able to follow Christ, the model of poverty, not so much by his bodily steps, as by the inward affections of his soul, forsook all; he not only forsook his 19 And Jesus saith to them: Can the children of the marriage fast, as long as the bridegroom is with them? As long as they have the bridegroom with them, they cannot fast.

20 *But the days will come, when the bridegroom shall be taken away from them: and then they shall fast in those days.

22 And no man putteth new wine into old bottles: otherwise the wine will burst the bottles, and both the wine will be spilled, and the bottles will be lost. But new wine must be put into new bottles.

23 *And it came to pass again, as the Lord walked through the corn-fields on the sabbath, that his disciples began to go forward and to pluck the ears of corn.

24 And the Pharisees said to him: Behold, why do they on the sabbath-day that which is not lawful?

25 And he said to them: *Have you never read what David did, when he had need, and was hungry, he and they that were with him?

26 How he went into the house of God, under Abiathar, the high priest, and did eat the loaves of proposition, *which it was not lawful to eat but for the priests, and gave to them who were with him?

27 And he said to them: The sabbath was made for man, and not man for the sabbath.

28 Therefore the Son of man is Lord also of the sabbath.

VER. 20. Jesus Christ here foretelleth that fasting shall be used in his Church, no less than in the old law, or in the time of John the Baptist. See Matt. ix. 15.

VER. 25. When he had need. In necessity many things are done without sin, which in other circumstances it would be unlawful to do. B.

VER. 26. Under Abiathar. The priest from whom David had these loaves, is called Achimelech, 1 Kings xxi. The most probable answer to this difficulty is, that the priest had both these names of Achimelech and of Abiathar, as also his father had before him. For he that (1 Kings xxii.) is called Abiathar, the son of Achimelech, is called 2 Kings viii. 17, Achimelech, the son of Abiathar. See also 1 Par. xviii. 16. Wi.

VER. 28. The maker of the law may abrogate or dispense with it when and where, for just cause, it seemeth good to him: thus the Church can dispense with, change, or abrogate, for just reasons, the discipline of the Church founded upon Church authority.

CHAP. III. VER. 1. He entered again into the synagogue, viz. of Capharnaum. The man was there either, of course, on account of the sabbath, or to be cured by Jesus Christ.

3 And he saith to the man who had the withered hand : Stand up in the midst.

4 And he saith to them : Is it lawful to do good on the sabbath-day, or to do evil ? to save life, or to destroy ? But they held their peace.

5 And looking round about on them with anger, being grieved for the blindness of their hearts, he saith to the man : Stretch forth thy hand. And he stretched it forth ; and his hand was restored unto him.

6 * And the Pharisees going out immediately, made a consultation with the Herodians against him, how they might destroy him.

7 But Jesus retired with his disciples to the sea ; and a great multitude followed him from Galilee and Judea,

8 And from Jerusalem, and from Idumea, and from beyond the Jordan : and they about Tyre and Sidon, a great multitude, hearing the things which he did, came to him.

9 And he spoke to his disciples that a small ship should wait on him, because of the multitude, lest they should throng him :

10 For he healed many, so that they pressed upon him for to touch him, as many as had evils.

11 And the unclean spirits, when they saw him, fell down before him ; and they cried, saying :

12 Thou art the Son of God. And he strictly charged them that they should not make him known.

13 ^b And going up into a mountain, he called unto him whom he would himself : and they came to him.

14 And he made that twelve should be with him : and that he might send them to preach.

15 And he gave them power to heal sicknesses, and to cast out devils.

16 And to Simon he gave the name of Peter :

* Matt. xii. 14.—^b Matt. x. 1 ; Luke vi. 13, and ix. 1.

VER. 4. A difficulty here arises, how to reconcile S. Mark with S. Matthew. S. Mark puts the words into the mouth of Jesus Christ, Is it lawful? When S. Matthew says, that they interrogated him, Is it lawful? To cut the knot of this apparent difficulty, we must understand that they first put the question to our Lord, whether it was lawful to heal on the sabbath-day or not ; and that Jesus understanding their secret thoughts, that they wished to have some grounds of accusation against him, placed the sick man in the midst of them, and said what S. Mark here relates of him, Is it lawful to do good on the sabbath-day, or to do evil? S. Aug.

VER. 11, 12. The unclean spirits being obliged by the Divine power, not only to come and worship, but also to declare his majesty, exclaimed, Thou art the Son of God. How astonishing then is the blindness of the Arians, who even after his resurrection denied him to be the Son of God, whom the devils confessed as such when clothed with human nature ! Ven. Bede.

VER. 15. He gave his apostles the power of curing maladies both of soul and body, and of expelling devils, that they might prove the truth of their doctrines by the authority of miracles. V.

VER. 16. The evangelist here gives the names of the twelve. First Simon, to whom he gave the name of Peter, in Greek, Πέτρον, which signifies a rock ; thus showing, that upon him his Church should be founded, as on a rock, never to be overturned. Tiran.—Polus, in his Synopsis Criticorum on this verse, says that some Greek copies have, Πῶρον Σίμωνα, First Simon, which he believes to be the genuine reading : “ nec dubito quin hæc sit germana lectio.”

VER. 17. And he called James, &c. The words, he called, are no addition, being they only express the literal sense, they are included in what is said ver. 13, that he called to him whom he would.—Boanerges, the sons of thunder, or thunderers, is only to express their great zeal. Wi.—In conformity to their name, we find these two apostles asking of Jesus, (Luke ix. 54.) Wilt thou that we command fire to come down from heaven, to consume them? They spread the fame of the gospel through the whole world. S. John also fulfilled the import of his name, as ap-

23 And after he had called them together, he said to them in parables : How can satan cast out satan ?

25 And if a house be divided against itself, that house cannot stand.

26 And if satan be risen up against himself, he is divided, and cannot stand, but hath an end.

27 No man can enter into the house of a strong man, and rob him of his goods, unless he first bind the strong man, and then shall he plunder his house.

VER. 21. And when his friends had heard of it : * lit. his own. We cannot here understand his apostles, for they were in the house with him ; but either some of his kindred and friends, or some that were of the same country and town of Nazareth, though perhaps enemies to him.—For they said. It is not certain who said this, whether his friends or his adversaries.—He is become mad.† By the Greek, he is not himself. Christ might be called a madman by the Scribes and Pharisees, when he blamed their vices, and when he preached with such extraordinary zeal. Or, as the Greek implies, he was thought to be transported out of his wits, and, as the Prot. translation hath it, was beside himself. If they were his friends that said this of him, they did not think so, but only pretended it, that they might get him safe out of the hands of his adversaries. Wi.

VER. 24. Kingdom against kingdom. As this is true in all kingdoms and states where civil dissension obtaineth, so it is especially verified in heresies and hereties, which have always divisions among themselves, as a punishment for their abandoning the Church, the pillar and ground of truth, the only centre of peace and unity.

CHAP. IV.

The parable of the sower. Christ stills the tempest at sea.

AND ^ahe began again to teach by the sea-side: and a great multitude was gathered together unto him, so that he went up into a ship, and sat in the sea, and all the multitude was upon the land, by the sea-side:

2 And he taught them many things in parables, and said to them many things in his doctrine.

3 Hear ye: Behold a sower went out to sow.

4 And whilst he is sowing, some fell by the way-side: and the birds of the air came, and eat it up.

5 And other some fell upon stony ground, where it had not much earth: and it shot up immediately, because it had no depth of earth:

6 And when the sun was risen, it was scorched: and because it had no root, it withered away.

7 And some fell among thorns: and the thorns grew up, and choked it, and it yielded no fruit.

8 And some fell upon good ground: and brought forth fruit that grew up, and increased, and yielded, one thirty, another sixty, and another a hundred.

9 And he said: He that hath ears to hear, let him hear.

10 And when he was alone, the twelve that were with him, asked him the parable.

11 And he said to them: To you it is given to know the mystery of the kingdom of God: but to them that are without, all things are done in parables:

12 ^bThat seeing they may see, and not perceive; and hearing they may hear, and not understand: lest at any time they should be converted, and their sins should be forgiven them.

13 And he saith to them: Know you not this parable? how then shall you know all parables?

14 He that soweth, soweth the word.

15 And these are they by the way-side, where the word is sown; and as soon as they have heard, immediately satan cometh, and taketh away the word that was sown in their hearts.

16 And these likewise are they that are sown on the from which cometh the word ecstasy. See 2 Cor. v. 13, where S. Paul useth the same Greek word.

CHAP. IV. VER. 7. If we examine S. Matthew on this point, we shall discover that this discourse was made on the same day as the preceding discourse; for S. Matthew informs us, that having finished this exhortation, he the same day went and taught by the sea. Ven. Bede.

VER. 12. That seeing they may see, &c. In punishment of their wilfully shutting their eyes, (Matt. xlii. 15,) God justly withdrew those lights and graces which otherwise he would have given them, for their effectual conversion. Ch.—These speeches here and elsewhere, we are not to understand as if he spoke in parables to this end, that the hearers might not understand, lest they should be converted; but we must learn the true sense from the corresponding texts in Matt. xlii., and Acts xxviii., where our Saviour and S. Paul render it thus: with their ears they have been dull of hearing, and their eyes they have shut, lest, perhaps, they may see, and understand, and be converted, and I heal them. Whereby it is evident, that the speaking in parables was not the cause, (for many besides the apostles heard and understood,) but themselves, who would not hear and understand, and be converted: and thus they were the real cause of their own wilful and obstinate infidelity.

VER. 24. Pay attention then to what you hear this day, that you may retain it, and communicate it to others, your brethren; for as you measure to others, so shall it be meted unto you; yes, more shall be given to you, who receive the stony ground: who, when they have heard the word, immediately receive it with joy.

17 And they have no root in themselves, but are only for a time: and then when tribulation and persecution arise for the word's sake, they are presently scandalized.

18 And others there are that are sown among thorns: these are they that hear the word, 19 And the cares of the world, and the deceitfulness of riches, and the lusts after other things entering in, choke the word, and it is made fruitless.

20 And these are they who are sown upon the good ground, who hear the word, and receive it, and yield fruit, the one thirty, another sixty, and another a hundred.

21 And he said to them: Doth a candle come in to be put under a bushel, or under a bed? and not to be set on a candlestick?

22 For there is nothing hid, which shall not be made manifest: neither was it made secret, but that it may come abroad.

23 If any man have ears to hear, let him hear.

24 And he said to them: Take heed what you hear: With what measure you shall mete, it shall be measured to you again, and more shall be given to you.

25 For he that hath, to him shall be given: and he that hath not, that also which he hath, shall be taken away from him.

26 And he said: So is the kingdom of God, as if a man should cast seed into the earth, 27 And should sleep, and rise, night and day, and the seed should spring, and grow up whilst he knoweth not.

28 For the earth of itself bringeth forth fruit, first the blade, then the ear, afterwards the full corn in the ear:

29 And when the fruit is brought forth, immediately he putteth in the sickle, because the harvest is come.

30 And he said: To what shall we liken the kingdom of God? or to what parable shall we compare it?

31 ^hIt is as a grain of mustard seed, which when it is sown in the earth, is less than all the seeds that are in the earth:

32 And when it is sown, it groweth up, and becometh greater than all herbs, and shooteth out great branches, so that the birds of the air may dwell under the shadow thereof.

word of God, if you be attentive to preserve it in yourselves, and to communicate it to your brethren. V.

VER. 25. They who do not profit by the knowledge of the word of God, shall, in punishment of their neglect, lose the advantage which they may seem to have, since it will turn in the end to their greater condemnation: and moreover, by trusting to their own judgment, they interpret the word in a perverse sense, and thus also lose what they seem to have. Nic. de Lyra.—Let those who talk so much about Scripture, and interpret it according to their own private spirit or fancy, see lest this also attach to them. A.

VER. 26. So it is with him who announces the gospel of the kingdom of God, as with the sower. For whether he sleep or rise, the seed will grow up while he knoweth not; and the well-prepared soil will, by the blessing of God, be prolific: so the word of God, shed abroad in the heart of man, will increase and fructify independently of all the preacher's solicitude, till he who has received it, being arrived at the measure of the age and fulness of Christ, shall be withdrawn by God from this world, and be called to himself. V.

VER. 29. When the fruit is brought forth: lit. when the fruit hath produced*. By the fruit is here meant the seed; i. e. when the seed by degrees hath produced the blade, then the ear, and lastly the corn, which is become ripe. Wi.—This is a secondary sense of the text, when the fruit hath come to maturity, and by no means a forced interpretation.

* V. 29. Cum produxerit fructus. By the Greek, fructus is in the nominative case; ὅταν δὲ παραῖψῃ ὁ καρπὸς, &c.

33 And with many such parables he spoke to them the word, according as they were able to hear.

34 And without parable he did not speak unto them: but apart, he explained all things to his disciples.

35 And he saith to them that day, when evening was come: Let us pass over to the other side.

36 ^a And sending away the multitude, they take him even as he was in the ship: and there were other ships with him.

37 And there arose a great storm of wind, and the waves beat into the ship, so that the ship was filled.

38 And he was in the hinder part of the ship, sleeping upon a pillow; and they awake him, and say to him: Master, doth it not concern thee that we perish?

39 And rising up, he rebuked the wind, and said to the sea: Peace; be still. And the wind ceased; and there was made a great calm.

40 And he said to them: Why are you fearful? have you not faith yet? And they feared exceedingly, and they said one to another: Who is this (thinkest thou) that both wind and sea obey him?

CHAP. V.

Christ casts out a legion of devils: he heals the issue of blood, and raises the daughter of Jairus to life.

AND they came over the strait of the sea into the country of the Gerasens.

2 And when he went out of the ship, immediately there met him out of the tombs a man with an unclean spirit:

3 Who had his dwelling in the tombs, and no man now could bind him, not even with chains:

4 For having been often bound with fetters and chains, he had burst the chains, and broken the fetters in pieces, and no man could tame him.

5 And he was always day and night in the tombs, and in the mountains, crying and cutting himself with stones.

6 And seeing Jesus, afar off, he ran and adored him:

7 And crying with a loud voice, he said: What have I to do with thee, Jesus, thou Son of the most high God? I adjure thee by God, that thou torment me not.

8 For he said to him: Go out of the man, thou unclean spirit.

9 And he asked him: What is thy name? And he saith to him: My name is Legion; for we are many.

10 And he besought him much, that he would not drive him away out of the country.

11 And there was there near the mountain a great herd of swine, feeding.

^a Matt. viii. 23; Luke viii. 22.—^b A. D. 31. Matt. viii. 28; Luke viii. 26.

CHAP. V. VER. 2. Ven. Bede gives a beautiful explanation of this miracle. He says that it represents the Gentiles, who were converted to the faith by the apostles. The legion represents the innumerable vices to which they were subject, neither restrained by the laws of God nor man, but breaking through every restraint, and wallowing in all kinds of uncleanness. Ven. Bede.

VER. 7. I adjure thee by God. The sense is, I earnestly beg of thee not to torment me, by sending me into hell, and confining me in the abyss, there to be more tormented than I am at present. See S. Luke viii. 31. Wl.

VER. 9. My name is Legion. Spirits have no names, only with regard to our languages. These devils say their name is Legion, because they are many. Wl.

VER. 17. Astonished at the miracle that had been performed, and displeased with the loss of their herds, they refused the Saviour of the world entrance into their country. Theophy.

VER. 18. That he might be with him; i. e. as one of his disciples. S. Amb. says Christ did not grant his request, lest they might think that he sought to be 12 And the spirits besought him, say ἡμεῖς: Send us into the swine, that we may enter into them.

13 And Jesus immediately gave them leave. And the unclean spirits went out, and entered into the swine: and the herd with great violence was carried headlong into the sea, being about two thousand, and were stifled in the sea.

14 And they that fed them fled, and told it in the city, and in the fields. And they went out to see what was done.

15 And they come to Jesus, and they see him that was troubled with the devil, sitting, clothed, and of a sound mind; and they were afraid.

16 And they that had seen it, told them in what manner he had been dealt with who had the devil; and concerning the swine.

17 And they began to pray him to depart from their coasts.

18 And when he went up into the ship, he that had been troubled with the devil, began to beseech him that he might be with him.

19 And he admitted him not, but saith to him: Go into the house to thy friends, and tell them how great things the Lord hath done for thee, and hath had mercy on thee.

20 And he went his way, and began to publish in Decapolis how great things Jesus had done for him: and all men wondered.

21 And when Jesus had passed again into the ship over the strait, a great multitude assembled together unto him, and he was nigh unto the sea.

22 And there cometh one of the rulers of the synagogue, named Jairus: and seeing him, he falleth down at his feet;

23 And he besought him much, saying: My daughter is at the point of death; come, and lay thy hand upon her, that she may be safe, and may live.

24 And he went with him, and a great multitude followed him, and they thronged him.

25 And a woman who was under an issue of blood twelve years,

26 And had suffered many things from many physicians: and had spent all that she had, and was nothing the better, but rather worse:

27 When she had heard of Jesus, came in the crowd behind him, and touched his garment.

28 For she said: If I shall but touch his garment, I shall be whole.

29 And forthwith the fountain of her blood was dried up, and she felt in her body that she was healed of the evil.

glorified by men, in having always in his company a man out of whom he had cast so many devils. Christ himself seems to give us another reason, that the man might go, and publish in his own country the miracles done by Jesus. Wl.

VER. 23. S. Matt. says, My daughter is even now dead. The sense in both is exactly the same. S. Matt. attended rather to the thoughts of Jairus, than to his words; for, as he left her dying, he could not reasonably hope to find her still in the same state; and, as he expected she was already dead, when he spoke this to Jesus, S. Matt. relates what the man thought at that instant, not what he said. S. Aug.

VER. 28. Touch his garment. Almighty God is pleased to give occasionally to the relics and clothes of his pious and faithful servants, a degree of virtue. See Acts v., and xix., where the very shadow of S. Peter, and the handkerchiefs and aprons that had touched the body of S. Paul, and were brought to the sick, cured their diseases, and banished the wicked spirits. See S. Chrysostom, t. 5, contra Gent. in Vit. Babylæ.

30 And immediately Jesus knowing in himself the virtue that had proceeded from him, turning to the multitude, said: Who hath touched my garments?

31 And his disciples said to him: Thou seest the multitude thronging thee; and sayest thou, Who hath touched me?

32 And he looked about to see her who had done this.

33 But the woman fearing and trembling, knowing what was done in her, came and fell down before him, and told him all the truth.

34 And he said to her: *Daughter, thy faith hath made thee whole: go in peace, and be thou whole of the disease.

35 While he was yet speaking, some come from the ruler of the synagogue's house, saying: Thy daughter is dead: why dost thou trouble the master any further?

36 But Jesus having heard the word that was spoken, saith to the ruler of the synagogue: Fear not: only believe.

37 And he admitted not any man to follow him, but Peter, and James, and John, the brother of James.

38 And they came to the house of the ruler of the synagogue; and he seeth a tumult, and people weeping and wailing much.

39 And going in, he saith to them: Why make you this ado, and weep? the damsel is not dead, but sleepeth.

40 And they laughed him to scorn. But he having put them all out, taketh the father and the mother of the damsel, and them that were with him, and entereth in where the damsel was lying:

41 And taking the damsel by the hand, he saith to her: Talitha, cumi; which is, being interpreted: Damsel, (I say to thee,) arise.

42 And immediately the damsel rose up, and walked: now she was twelve years old: and they were astonished with a great astonishment.

43 And he charged them strictly that no man should know it: and commanded that something should be given her to eat.

CHAP. VI.

Christ teaches at Nazareth. He sends forth the twelve apostles. He feeds five thousand with five loaves: and walks upon the sea.

AND ^bgoing out from thence, he went into his own country; and his disciples followed him.

2 And when the sabbath-day was come, he began to teach in the synagogue: and many hearing him were in admiration at his doctrine: saying: How came this man by all these things? and what wisdom is this that is given to him, and such mighty works as are wrought by his hands?

3 *Is not this the carpenter, the son of Mary, the brother of James and Joseph, and Jude and Simon? are not also his sisters here with us? and they were scandalized in regard of him.

4 And Jesus said to them: *A prophet is not without honour, but in his own country, and in his own house, and among his own kindred.

5 And he could not do any mighty work there, only that he healed a few that were sick, laying his hands upon them;

6 And he wondered because of their unbelief, and he went through the villages round about teaching.

7 *And he called the twelve; and began to send them two and two, and gave them power over unclean spirits.

8 And he commanded them that they should take nothing for their journey, but a staff only: no scrip, no bread, nor money in their purse, 9 *But to be shod with sandals, and that they should not put on two coats.

10 And he said to them: Wheresoever you shall enter into a house, there abide till you depart from that place.

11 And whosoever shall not receive you, nor hear you, *going forth from thence, shake off the dust from your feet for a testimony to them.

12 And going forth they preached that they should do penance:

13 And they cast out many devils, *and anointed with oil many that were sick, and healed them.

14 *And king Herod heard (for his name was made manifest): and he said: John the Baptist is risen again from the dead, and therefore mighty works show forth themselves in him.

15 And others said: He is Elias. But others said: He is a prophet, as one of the prophets.

16 Which Herod hearing, said: John whom I beheaded, he is risen again from the dead.

17 *For Herod himself had sent and apprehended John, and bound him in prison for the sake of Herodias, the wife of Philip, his brother, because he had married her.

18 For John said to Herod: *It is not lawful for thee to have thy brother's wife.

19 Now Herodias laid snares for him: and was desirous to put him to death, and could not.

20 For Herod feared John, knowing him to be a just

VER. 30. Virtue that had proceeded from him. Virtue to heal this woman's malady proceeded from Christ, though she touched but his coat: so when the saints by their relics and garments perform miracles, the grace and force thereof cometh from our Saviour; they being but the means or instruments of the same. B.

VER. 36. Only believe. Dissenters grossly abuse this and other similar texts of Scripture, to prove that faith alone will suffice for justification; whereas God only declares, that he requires a faith in his almighty power for the performance of miracles, and that without this necessary predisposition he will not do any miracles. See ver. 5, of following chapter.

VER. 41. Only three resurrections from the dead are mentioned as performed by our Saviour: one just dead; one carried out to be buried; and Lazarus, already in his tomb. These represent the different states of sinners dead in sin, some more desperate than others.

VER. 13. It was usual for the Jews to prescribe oil as a proper thing to anoint the sick; but its virtue in the present instance, when used by the apostles, was not natural, but supernatural, and was derived from him who sent them; because this unction always produced a certain and constant cure in those who were anointed. This miraculous gift of healing the sick with oil, which Christ conferred on his apostles, was a prelude or gradual preparation to the dignity to which he raised this unction, when he established it a perpetual rite in his holy Church. Rutter.—With oil. &c. This anointing the sick, was at least a figure of the sacrament, which Christ was pleased to institute for the spiritual relief of persons in danger of death: and which is fully expressed by S. James, in his Catholic Epistle, chap. v. The Council of Trent says this sacrament was insinuated in S. Mark, and published in the Epistle of S. James. Trid. Sess. 14, c. 1. Wi.

VER. 14. The Herod here mentioned was the son of Herod, from whom S. Joseph fled with Jesus and Mary into Egypt. S. Chrys. hom. 49. in Matt.—How great was the envy of the Jews, is easily to be conceived from this passage.

VER. 20. Herod. &c. The sense both of the Latin and Greek text seems to and holy man : and kept him, and having heard him, did many things : and he heard him willingly.

21 And when a convenient day was come, Herod made a supper for his birthday, for the princes, and tribunes, and chief men of Galilee.

22 And when the daughter of the same Herodias had come in, and had danced, and pleased Herod, and them that were at table with him, the king said to the damsel : Ask of me what thou wilt, and I will give it thee.

23 And he swore to her : Whatsoever thou shalt ask I will give thee, though it be the half of my kingdom.

24 And when she was gone out, she said to her mother : What shall I ask ? But she said : The head of John the Baptist.

25 And she came in immediately with haste to the king, and asked, saying : I will that forthwith thou give me in a dish the head of John the Baptist.

26 And the king was struck sad : yet because of his oath, and because of them that were with him at table, he would not displease her :

27 But sending an executioner, he commanded that his head should be brought in a dish. And he beheaded him in the prison, 28 And brought his head in a dish ; and gave it to the damsel : and the damsel gave it to her mother.

29 ^aWhich his disciples bearing, came, and took his body : and laid it in a tomb.

30 ^bAnd the apostles coming together unto Jesus, related to him all things : that they had done and taught.

31 And he said to them : 'Come ye apart into a desert place, and rest a little. For there were many coming and going : and they had not so much as time to eat.

32 And going up into a ship, they went into a desert place apart.

33 And they saw them going away, and many knew : and they ran flocking thither on foot from all the cities, and were there before them.

34 ^dAnd Jesus going out, saw a great multitude : and he had compassion on them, because they were as sheep not having a shepherd, and he began to teach them many things.

35 And when the day was now far spent, his disciples came to him, saying : This is a desert place, and the hour is now past :

36 ^eSend them away, that going into the next villages and towns, they may buy themselves meat to eat.

VER. 29. Church history informs us, that the Christians were accustomed to frequent this tomb with great piety and respect. till the reign of Julian the Apostate, at which time the pagans, through hatred for Christianity, broke open his tomb, and dispersed his bones ; but immediately after, thinking it better to burn them, they endeavoured to collect them again. But some religious of a neighbouring convent, joining themselves to the pagans, under pretence of collecting the bones to burn, secreted the greater part of them, and sent them to Philip, at Jerusalem, who sent them to Athanasius, bishop of Alexandria ; and in the reign of Theodosius, the temple of Serapis was converted into a Christian church, and dedicated to the honour of S. John the Baptist, where his relics were deposited. Gloss. Ordina.

VER. 37. For two hundred pence. See Matt. xviii. 28. The apostles seem to speak these words ironically, to signify that they had not so much money as would procure a mouthful for each of them. Wi.

37 But he answering, said to them : Give you them to eat. And they said to him : Let us go and buy bread for two hundred pence, and we will give them to eat.

38 And he saith to them : How many loaves have you ? go and see. And when they knew, they say : Five, and two fishes.

39 And he commanded them to make them all sit down by companies upon the green grass.

40 And they sat down in ranks, by hundreds, and by fifties.

41 And when he had taken the five loaves, and the two fishes ; looking up to heaven, he blessed, and broke the loaves, and gave to his disciples to set before them : and the two fishes he divided among them all.

42 And they all did eat, and had their fill.

43 And they took up the leavings, twelve baskets full of fragments, and of the fishes.

44 And they that did eat, were five thousand men.

45 And immediately he obliged his disciples to go up into the ship, that they might go before him over the water to Bethsaida : whilst he dismissed the people.

46 And when he had dismissed them, he went up to the mountain to pray.

47 And when it was late, the ship was in the midst of the sea, and he alone on the land.

48 ^fAnd seeing them labouring in rowing, (for the wind was against them,) and about the fourth watch of the night he cometh to them, walking upon the sea : and he would have passed by them.

49 But they seeing him walking upon the sea, thought it was an apparition, and they cried out.

50 For they all saw him, and were troubled. And immediately he spoke with them, and said to them : Have a good heart, it is I ; fear ye not.

51 And he went up with them into the ship, and the wind ceased. And they were far more astonished within themselves.

52 For they understood not concerning the loaves : for their heart was blinded.

53 ^gAnd when they had passed over, they came into the land of Genesareth, and set to the shore.

54 And when they were gone out of the ship, immediately they knew him :

55 And running through that whole country, they began to carry about in beds those that were sick, where they heard he was.

VER. 45. The apostles were in a desert place belonging to Bethsaida, which probably was divided from it by some bay or creek, that ran into the land ; and Christ only ordered them to pass over this to the city, where he might afterwards have joined them, when he had sent away the people. But in their passage a great storm arose, and they were driven by an adverse wind to the open sea, towards Capharnaum ; or, probably, when they found the wind so violent, afraid of shipwreck if they neared the shore, they rowed out to sea. This reconciles the seeming discrepance of S. Mark and S. John, when notwithstanding the directions Christ had given his disciples to go before him to Bethsaida, we find them going to Capharnaum. Rutter.

* V. 5. Non posse in the Scripture, is divers times the same as nolle. So, Gen. xxxvii. it is said of Joseph's brothers, they could not, (non poterant.) i. e. would not, speak to him peaceably. See John xii. 39, &c.

† V. 20. Custodiebat eum, συνέριπτε αὐτόν. The Prot. translation, observed him.

56 And whithersoever he entered, into towns, or into villages, or cities, they laid the sick in the streets, and besought him that they might touch but the hem of his garment: and as many as touched him were made whole.

CHAP. VII.

Christ rebukes the Pharisees. He heals the daughter of the woman of Chanaan; and the man that was deaf and dumb.

AND there assemble together unto him the Pharisees, and some of the Scribes, coming from Jerusalem.

2 *And when they had seen some of his disciples eat bread with common, that is, with unwashed, hands, they found fault.

3 For the Pharisees, and all the Jews, eat not without often washing their hands, holding the tradition of the ancients:

4 And when they come from the market, unless they be washed, they eat not: and many other things there are that have been delivered to them to observe, the washings of cups, and of pots, and of brazen vessels, and of beds.

5 And the Pharisees and Scribes asked him: Why do not thy disciples walk according to the tradition of the ancients, but eat bread with common hands?

6 But he answering, said to them: Well did Isaias prophesy of you, hypocrites, as it is written: *This people honoureth me with their lips, but their heart is far from me.

7 And in vain do they worship me, teaching doctrines and precepts of men.

8 For leaving the commandment of God, you hold the tradition of men, the washing of pots, and of cups: and many other things you do like to these.

9 And he said to them: Well do you make void the commandment of God, that you may keep your own tradition.

10 For Moses said: *Honour thy father and thy mother: and he that shall curse father or mother, dying let him die the death.

11 But you say: If a man shall say to his father or mother, Corban, (that is, a gift,) whatsoever is from me, shall profit thee:

12 And further you suffer him not to do any thing for his father or mother, 13 Making void the word of God by your tradition, which you have given forth. And many other such like things you do.

14 *And calling again the multitude unto him, he said to them: Hear ye me all, and understand.

15 There is nothing from without a man entering into him, that can defile him: but the things which come from a man, those are they that defile a man.

16 If any man have ears to hear, let him hear.

17 And when he was come into the house from the multitude, his disciples asked him the meaning of the parable.

18 And he said to them: Are you also so unwise? understand you not that whatsoever thing from without entereth into a man, it cannot defile him:

19 Because it entereth not into his heart, but goeth into the belly, and goeth out into the privy, purging all meats?

20 And he said that the things which come out from a man, they defile a man.

21 *For from within, out of the heart of men, proceed evil thoughts, adulteries, fornications, murders, 22 Thefts, covetousness, wickedness, deceit, lasciviousness, an evil eye, blasphemy, pride, foolishness.

23 All these evil things come from within, and defile a man.

24 *And he arose from thence, and went to the borders of Tyre and Sidon: and entering into a house, he would have no man know it, but he could not be hid.

25 For a certain woman heard of him, whose daughter had an unclean spirit, and presently came in, and fell down at his feet.

26 For the woman was a Gentile, a Syrophenician born. And she besought him to cast forth the devil out of her daughter.

27 And he said to her: Let the children first be filled: for it is not good to take the bread of the children, and cast it to the dogs.

28 But she answered, and said to him, Yea, Lord; for the whelps also eat under the table of the crumbs of the children.

29 And he said to her: For this saying, go thy way, the devil is gone out of thy daughter.

30 And when she was come to her house, she found the girl lying upon the bed, and that the devil was gone out.

31 And again going out of the borders of Tyre, he came by Sidon to the sea of Galilee, through the midst of the territories of Decapolis.

32 *And they bring to him one that was deaf and dumb, and they besought him to lay his hand upon him.

33 And taking him aside from the multitude, he put his fingers into his ears, and spitting, he touched his tongue;

VER. 7. See the annotations Matt. xv. 9, 11. It is groundless to pretend from this text, that the precepts and traditions of the Church are not binding and obligatory, for Christ himself has commanded all to hear his Church, and obey their lawful pastors. These indeed may be called the precepts of men, but they are precepts of men invested with power and authority from God, and of whom Christ himself said. (Luke x. 16,) He that heareth you, heareth me; and he that despiseth you, despiseth me.

VER. 24. If he desired to conceal himself, and could not, his will it seems was under control; but this is impossible. His will must always take place. On this occasion, therefore, he wished himself to be sought for by these Gentiles, but not to be made known by his own apostles. Wherefore it came to pass, that not the persons who were his followers, but the Gentiles who entered the house in which he was, published his fame abroad. S. Augustin.

VER. 25. This part, in which S. Mark says that Christ was in the house, when the woman came to petition in behalf of her daughter, seems to differ from the narration of S. Matthew, who says that the disciples besought Christ to dismiss her, because she cried after them; by which he signifies, that she followed them as they were on the road. These apparent differences may thus easily be reconciled. The woman came to our Lord when he was in the house, and he, according to S. Matthew, not answering her a word, went out during the silence; the woman followed after, and by her perseverance obtained her request. S. Austin.

34 And looking up to heaven, he groaned, and said to him: Ephphetha; that is, Be opened.

35 And immediately his ears were opened, and the string of his tongue was loosed, and he spoke right.

36 And he charged them that they should tell no man. But the more he charged them, so much the more a great deal did they publish it:

37 And so much the more did they wonder, saying: He hath done all things well: he hath made both the deaf to hear, and the dumb to speak.

CHAP. VIII.

Christ feeds four thousand. He gives sight to a blind man. He foretells his passion.

IN those days again, when there was a great multitude, and they had nothing to eat; calling his disciples together, he saith to them:

2 I have compassion on the multitude: for behold they have now been with me three days, and have nothing to eat:

3 And if I send them away fasting to their own houses, they will faint in the way; for some of them came from afar off.

4 And his disciples answered him: From whence can any one satisfy them here with bread in the wilderness?

5 And he asked them: How many loaves have ye? and they said: Seven.

6 And he commanded the people to sit down on the ground: and taking the seven loaves, giving thanks, he broke, and gave to his disciples to set before them, and they set them before the people.

7 And they had a few little fishes: and he blessed them, and commanded them to be set before them.

8 And they did eat and were filled, and they took up that which was left of the fragments, seven baskets.

9 And they that had eaten were about four thousand: and he sent them away.

10 And immediately going up into a ship with his disciples, he came into the parts of Dalmanutha.

11 And the Pharisees came forth, and began to ques-

VER. 34. Ephphetha, a Syriac word. Jesus Christ, in the cure of this man, uses many and various actions; but as of their own nature they are no ways equal to such a cure, they show, first, that the cure was miraculous; and secondly, the virtue which his Divinity communicated to his sacred body. V.

* V. 2. Crebo, ἐὰν μὴ πνιγῇ. Mr. Bois, prebend of Ely, defends the Latin version, and says πνιγῇ comes from πνικῆ and πνικῶς. But Theophylactus would have it to signify, up to the elbows; ἀχρι τοῦ ἀγκῶνος.

† V. 32. Mutum, dumb; Greek, μογιᾶλον, qui parum loquitur.

CHAP. VIII. VER. 8. After the multitude had eaten and were filled, they did not take the remains; but these the disciples collected, as in the former miracle of the multiplication of the loaves. By this circumstance we are taught to be content with what is sufficient, and to seek no unnecessary supplies. We may likewise learn from this stupendous miracle the providence of God and his goodness, who sends us not away fasting, but wishes all to be nourished and enriched with his grace. Theoph.

VER. 9. S. Matt. (xv. 38) adds, without counting either the women or the children.

VER. 10. Dalmanutha. S. Matt. (xv. 39) has to the borders of Magedan; in Greek, Μαγδαλά, or Μαγείδαν. These were two towns beyond the sea of Galilee, situated near to each other; it is of little consequence which of these names the evangelists mention; perhaps our Saviour visited both. Tir.—The major part of commentators, if we can believe the Bible of Venice, take Magedan, or Magdala, to be the town of that name situated to the east of the lake of Tiberias, in the vicinity of Gerasa, and Dalmanutha to be the name of that part of the country in which these two towns were situated. 12 And sighing deeply in spirit, he saith: Why doth this generation seek a sign? Amen, I say to you, a sign shall not be given to this generation.

13 And leaving them, he went up again into the ship, and passed to the other side of the water.

14 And they forgot to take bread: and they had but one loaf with them in the ship.

15 And he charged them, saying: Take heed and be ware of the leaven of the Pharisees, and of the leaven of Herod.

16 And they reasoned among themselves, saying: Be cause we have no bread.

17 Which Jesus knowing, saith to them: Why do you reason, because you have no bread? do you not yet know nor understand? have you still your heart blinded?

18 Having eyes, see you not? and having ears, hear you not? Neither do you remember.

19 When I broke the five loaves among five thousand: how many baskets full of fragments took you up? They say to him: Twelve.

20 And when the seven loaves among four thousand, how many baskets of fragments took you up? And they say to him: Seven.

21 And he said to them: How do you not yet understand?

22 And they came to Bethsaida: and they bring to him a blind man, and they besought him to touch him.

23 And taking the blind man by the hand, he led him out of the town, and spitting upon his eyes, laying his hands on him, he asked him if he saw any thing.

24 And looking up, he said: I see men, as trees, walking.

25 After that he laid his hands again upon his eyes, and he began to see, and was restored, so that he saw all things clearly.

26 And he sent him to his house; saying: Go into thy house, and if thou enter into the town, tell nobody.

It may be answered, that he did it not to seem to perform his prodigies through vain-glory; and thence to teach us to shun the empty praises of men: 2ndly, to facilitate recollection, and to give himself to prayer, before he cured the blind man: and, lastly, he went out of the city because the inhabitants of Bethsaida had already rendered themselves unworthy of the miracles of Christ. For among them our Saviour had wrought many miracles, yet they would not believe. S. Matt. xi. 21.

29 Then he said to them: But who do you say that I am? Peter answering, said to him: Thou art the Christ.

30 And he strictly charged them that they should not tell any man of him.

31 And he began to teach them, that the Son of man must suffer many things, and be rejected by the ancients, and by the high priests, and the Scribes, and be killed: and after three days rise again.

32 And he spoke the word openly: 'And Peter taking him, began to rebuke him.

33 But he turning about and seeing his disciples, threatened Peter, saying: Go after me, satan, because thou dost not relish the things that are of God, but the things that are of men.

34 And calling together the multitude with his disciples, he said to them: 'If any man will follow me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross, and follow me.

35 'For whosoever will save his life, shall lose it; and whosoever shall lose his life for my sake, and for the gospel, shall save it.

36 For what will it profit a man, if he gain the whole world, and lose his own soul?

37 Or what shall a man give in exchange for his soul?

38 'For whosoever shall be ashamed of me, and of my words in this adulterous and sinful generation: the Son of man also shall be ashamed of him, when he shall come in the glory of his Father with the holy angels.

5 For he knew not what he said: for they were struck with fear.

6 And there was a cloud that overshadowed them, and a voice came out of the cloud, saying: This is my most beloved Son: hear ye him.

7 And immediately looking about, they saw no man any more, but Jesus only with them.

8 'And as they came down from the mountain, he charged them not to tell any man what things they had seen, till the Son of man shall be risen again from the dead.

9 And they kept the word to themselves: questioning together what that should mean: When he should be risen from the dead.

10 And they asked him, saying: 'Why then do the Pharisees and Scribes say, that Elias must come first?

11 And he answered, and said to them: Elias, when he shall come first, shall restore all things: and how 'it is written of the Son of man, that he must suffer many things, and be despised.

13 And when he came to his disciples, he saw a great multitude about them, and the Scribes questioning with them.

14 And presently all the people seeing Jesus, were astonished and struck with fear: and running to him, they saluted him.

15 And he asked them, what do you question about among yourselves?

16 'And one of the multitude answering, said: Master, I have brought to thee my son who hath a dumb spirit.

17 And wheresoever he taketh him, he dasheth him, and he foameth, and gnasheth with his teeth, and pineth away; and I spoke to thy disciples to cast him out, and they could not.

18 And Jesus answering them, said: O incredulous generation, how long shall I be with you? how long shall I suffer you? bring him to me.

19 And they brought him. And when he had seen him, immediately the spirit troubled him: and being thrown down upon the ground, he rolled about, foaming.

20 And he asked his father: How long a time is it since this hath happened unto him? But he said: From his infancy.

22 And Jesus saith to them: If thou canst believe, all things are possible to him that believeth.

23 And immediately the father of the boy crying out, with tears, said: I do believe, Lord; help thou my unbelief.

24 And when Jesus saw the multitude running together, he threatened the unclean spirit, saying to him: Thou deaf and dumb spirit, I command thee, go out of him: and enter no more into him.

25 And crying out, and greatly tearing him, he went out of him, and he became as one dead, insomuch that many said: He is dead.

26 But Jesus taking him by the hand, lifted him up, and he arose.

27 And when he was come into the house, his disciples asked him privately: Why could not we cast him out?

28 And he said to them: This kind can go out by nothing, but by prayer and fasting.

31 But they understood not the word: and they were afraid to ask him.

32 And they came to Capharnaum. And when they were in the house, he asked them: What did you treat of in the way?

believeth could do all things; but that any thing might be done by the Divine power and goodness, in favour of him that had a firm and lively faith. Wi.

VER. 23. If the man believed, as he said, why does he add, help my unbelief? It may be answered, because faith is manifold; there is a faith of beginners, and a faith of the perfect. The incipient faith this man already possessed, and he besought our Saviour to help him to the higher degrees of this virtue. No one becomes great and perfect all at once, but must first set off with small beginnings, and thus gradually ascend to the height of perfection. Thus the man, who, by the inspiration of grace, has received imperfect faith, may be said at the same time to believe, and still to be incredulous. Ven. Bede.

VER. 37. This person, whom the apostles had forbidden to work miracles in the name of Christ, believed indeed in Christ, but did not follow him, on account of the great poverty of the apostles: he was not perfect, nor had he left all things to follow Christ. 7 For this cause ^ca man shall leave his father and mother : and shall cleave to his wife.

8 ^dAnd they two shall be in one flesh. Therefore now they are not two, but one flesh.

9 What therefore God joined together, let not man put asunder.

10 And in the house again his disciples asked him concerning the same thing.

11 And he said to them : Whosoever shall put away his wife, and marry another, committeth adultery against her.

12 And if the wife shall put away her husband, and be married to another, she committeth adultery.

13 And they brought to him young children, that he might touch them. And the disciples rebuked them that brought them.

16 And embracing them, and laying his hands upon them, he blessed them.

17 And when he was gone forth into the way, a certain man running up and kneeling before him, ^easked him : Good Master, what shall I do that I may receive life everlasting ?

22 But he being struck sad at the saying, went away sorrowful : for he had great possessions.

23 And Jesus looking round about, saith to his disciples : How hardly shall they who have riches, enter into the kingdom of God !

24 And the disciples were astonished at his words. But Jesus answering again, saith to them : Children, how hard is it for them that trust in riches, to enter into the kingdom of God !

25 It is easier for a camel to pass through the eye of a needle, than for a rich man to enter into the kingdom of God.

26 And they wondered the more, saying among themselves : Who then can be saved ?

27 And Jesus looking on them, saith : With men it is impossible ; but not with God : for all things are possible with God.

28 ^gAnd Peter began to say to him : Behold, we have left all things, and have followed thee.

30 Who shall not receive a hundred times as much, now in this time ; houses, and brethren, and sisters, and mothers, and children, and lands, with persecutions : and in the world to come, life everlasting.

31 ^hBut many that are first, shall be last, and the last first.

38 And Jesus said to them : You know not what you ask. Can you drink of the chalice that I drink of : or be baptized with the baptism wherewith I am baptized ?

39 But they said to him : We can. And Jesus saith to them : You shall indeed drink of the chalice that I drink of : and with the baptism wherewith I am baptized, you shall be baptized :

3 And if any man shall say to you: What are you doing? say ye that the Lord hath need of him: and immediately he will let him come hither.

4 And going their way, they found the colt tied before the gate without, in the meeting of two ways: and they loose him.

5 And some of them that stood there, said to them: What do you, loosing the colt?

6 And they said to them as Jesus had commanded them: and they let him go with them.

7 ^dAnd they brought the colt to Jesus: and they lay their garments on him, and he sat upon him.

8 And many spread their garments in the way: and others cut down boughs from the trees, and strewed them in the way.

9 And they that went before, and they that followed, cried, saying: Hosanna:

10 Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord: Blessed be the kingdom of our father, David, that cometh Hosanna in the highest.

11 ^eAnd he entered Jerusalem, into the temple: and having viewed all things round about, when now the hour of evening was come, he went out to Bethania with the twelve.

12 And the next day, when they came out from Bethania, he was hungry.

13 ^fAnd when he had seen afar off a fig-tree having leaves, he came, if perhaps he might find any thing on it. And when he was come to it, he found nothing but leaves: for it was not the time for figs.

14 And answering, he said to it: May no man hereafter eat fruit of thee any more for ever. And his disciples heard it.

15 And they came to Jerusalem. And when he had entered into the temple, he began to cast out them that sold and bought in the temple, and he overthrew the tables of the money-changers, and the chairs of them that sold doves.

CHAP. XI. VER. 1. This place, doubtless, had its name from the great number of olive-trees that grow upon it. It lay a little out of Jerusalem, on the east side, about five furlongs from the city, according to Josephus; but he must be understood of the nearest part of it, since S. Luke makes the distance to be a sabbath-day's journey, i. e. eight furlongs, or a mile; unless we suppose he meant the summit of the hill, from which our Saviour ascended. Acts i. 12.—In the Greek, being between Bethphage and Bethania. Bethania, which they had just left, was about one mile and a half from Jerusalem: Bethphage was between the two. V.

VER. 2. This order of Jesus Christ shows his omniscience and supreme dominion. By the former, he informs his two disciples that in Bethphage they would find a colt tied; and by the latter, he assures them that the master, on learning that the Lord hath need of the colt, will immediately let him go. A.

VER. 9. They that went before, were the prophets; and they that come after, are the apostles. S. Jerom.—All these voluntary offerings were grateful to our Divine Saviour; so are the like offerings made to him in the blessed sacrament. B.

VER. 10. They call the kingdom of Christ the kingdom of David, because Christ was descended of the family of David. David is likewise interpreted, strong of hand; but who is strong of hand but the Lord, whose hand hath wrought so many and such great wonders? Theophy.—How great is the similarity of this sentence with that delivered by the angel Gabriel, when he addressed the blessed Virgin Mary: "the Lord God will give to Him the seat of David his father." Ven. Bede.—In the highest. By this is meant, that the just shall be built upon the ruins of the angels; and, that the inhabitants of the earth shall obtain salvation. S. Jerom.—The literal meaning is: Blessed be the kingdom of our father David, which he sees arrive in the person of his Son: Hosanna, glory and salvation to this Son so long expected, so ardently desired: peace, and salvation, and glory be given to Him, by the great Lord and God, who dwelleth in the highest heaven. S. Matt. xxi. 9; S. Luke xix. 38.

VER. 11. In going into the temple immediately on entering the city, he shows what religion recommends to us, viz. to enter first into a place of worship, if there be one, where we visit. Ven. Bede.—Looking into the hearts of all, he could not, amongst those who contradicted the truth, find where to recline his head; therefore he withdraws to his faithful servants, and takes up his abode with the children of obedience. Idem.

VER. 13. He came, if perhaps, &c. Christ knew there was no fruit upon it, and that it was not the season, or a season for figs. See Matt. xxi. 19, what instruction he designed to give his disciples by what he said and did to the fig-tree. Wi.—Jesus Christ here curses the barren tree, on account of his disciples, who were present; for as he every where gave instances of his most beneficent will, it was proper he should also give them proofs of his justice and severity. Hence his principal motive for cursing the fig-tree was not on account of any hunger he then experienced; for it is not probable that Christ should experience so great hunger and at so early an hour, as these words seem to indicate. Ven. Bede.

16 And he suffered not that any man should carry a vessel through the temple.

17 And he taught, saying to them : Is it not written : My house shall be called the house of prayer to all nations ? But you have made it a den of thieves.

18 Which when the chief priests, and the Scribes, had heard, they sought how they might destroy him : for they feared him, because the whole multitude was in admiration at his doctrine.

19 And when evening was come, he went forth out of the city.

20 And when they passed by in the morning, they saw the fig-tree dried up from the roots.

21 And Peter remembering, said to him : Rabbi, behold the fig-tree, which thou cursedst, is withered away.

22 And Jesus answering, saith to them :^b Have the faith of God.

23 Amen, I say to you, that whosoever shall say to this mountain : Be thou removed, and be thou cast into the sea, and shall not stagger in his heart, but believe, that whatsoever he shall say shall be done : it shall be done for him.

24 Therefore, I say to you, all things, whatsoever you ask when ye pray, believe that you shall receive, and they shall come unto you.

25 And when you shall stand to pray, forgive, if you have any thing against any man, that your Father also, who is in heaven, may forgive you your sins.

26 But if you will not forgive, neither will your Father, who is in heaven, forgive you your sins.

27 And they came again to Jerusalem. And when he was walking in the temple, there come to him the chief priests, and the Scribes, and the ancients ;

28 And they say to him : By what authority dost thou these things ? and who hath given thee this authority to do these things ?

VER. 16. The vessels here spoken of as not allowed to be carried through the temple, were not any belonging to the temple, but only such as were brought by those who were buying and selling.—If Christ could not bear to see his Father's house profaned, even with those things which in another place were not unbecoming, how indignant must he be to see the temple of God defiled with blasphemous and heretical doctrines, and with that levity and inattention observed in thoughtless giddy Christians, who thus scandalize and pervert his devoted children. A.

VER. 18. What effect this strong reproof of our Saviour had upon the Jewish priests, and other ministers of the temple, is related by the evangelist in the subsequent words : they sought how they might destroy him. Still they were obliged to protract their iniquitous designs for a short time, as the multitude were in admiration of his doctrine. Gloss.

VER. 28. "It was a reasonable demand," says Dr. Barrow, "which was made to our Saviour : Tell us by what authority thou doest these things, and who hath given thee this authority." The reasonableness of it our Lord did often avow, declaring, that if by his doctrine and works he had not vouched the Divinity of his authority, it had been no sin to disbelieve or reject him." John v. 31, 36 ; x. 25, 37, and xv. 22, 24. Dr. Barrow on Supremacy, p. 49.—This principle, which supposes in pastors the necessity of a lawful mission, was formerly, and may still be, triumphantly urged against Luther, Calvin, Tindal, Cranmer, and all the first pretended Reformers of the Catholic Church. For whence, said the Catholics, did these innovators derive their mission ? Who sent them to preach ? Who gave them authority to reform and alter the whole state of God's Church ? Let them show their commission for this purpose, either ordinary or extraordinary. Unless they can do this, we have nothing to do with usurpers and intruders If it be proved that they had extraordinary mission, immediately derived from God, 31 But they thought with themselves, saying : If we say, From heaven : he will say, Why then did not you believe him ?

32 If we say, From men, we fear the people. For all men counted John that he was a prophet indeed.

33 And they answering, say to Jesus : We know not. And Jesus answering, saith to them : Neither do I tell you by what authority I do these things.

CHAP. XII.

The parable of the vineyard and husbandmen. Cæsar's right to tribute. The Sadducees are confuted. The first commandment. The widow's mite.

AND^f he began to speak to them in parables : A man planted a vineyard, and made a hedge round it, and dug a place for the wine-vat, and built a tower, and let it to husbandmen, and went into a far country.

2 And at the season he sent to the husbandmen a servant, to receive from the husbandmen the fruit of the vineyard.

3 And they having laid hands on him, beat him : and sent him away empty.

4 And again he sent to them another servant : and him they wounded in the head, and used him reproachfully.

5 And again he sent another, and him they killed : and many others, of whom some they beat, and others they killed.

6 Having therefore as yet one dearly beloved son : he sent him also to them last of all, saying : They will reverence my son.

7 But the husbandmen said one to another : This is the heir : come, let us kill him : and the inheritance shall be ours.

Luke xi. 9.—^e Luke xx. 1.—^f A. D. 33. Isa. v. 1 ; Jer. ii. 21 ; Matt. xxi. 33 ; Luke xx. 9.

why did they not show their credentials, stamped with the broad seal of heaven ; that is, why did they not by clear and evident miracles, such as Christ and his apostles wrought, attest their being thus extraordinarily commissioned for the extraordinary work of the Reformation ? Without such proofs as these, no pretensions to an extraordinary mission, in opposition to the ordinary Church authority, can be admitted. Otherwise every fanatic or enthusiast, following his own caprice, may pretend to a call from heaven ; and, upon this foolish plea, preach up his own dreams for the pure word of God, in contempt of all authority, whether of Church or State.

CHAP. XII. VER. 1. Under these figurative modes of speech, or parables, Jesus Christ began to trace out for their reflection a true portraiture of their ingratitude, and of the Divine vengeance. By this certain man we are to understand God the Father, whose vineyard was the house of Israel, which he guarded by angels ; the place dug for the wine-vat is the law ; the tower, the temple ; and Moses, the prophets, and the priests, whom the Jews afflicted and persecuted, are the husbandman or servants. S. Jerom.—This same parable was employed by Isaiah, (v. 1,) where, speaking of Christ, he says, My Beloved had a vineyard, and he fenced it in. Tirimus.—He went into a far country, not by a change of place, for he is every where, but by leaving the workmen the power of free-will, either to work or not to work ; in the same manner as a man in a far country cannot oversee his husbandmen at home, but leaves them to themselves. Ven. Bede.—This parable is thus morally explained : Jesus Christ planted a Church with his own blood, surrounded it with evangelical doctrine, as with a hedge ; dug a place for the wine-vat, by the abundance of spiritual graces which he has prepared for his Church ; built a tower, by appointing his angels to guard each individual Christian, who are the husbandmen to whom he has let it out. Nic. de Lyra.

VER. 2. The just servant whom the Almighty sent, was Moses ; but they sent him away empty ; for, says the Psalmist, they provoked him to anger in the camp. Psal. ev. The second servant sent was David, whom they used reproachfully, saying, What have we to do with David ? 3 Kings xii. 16. The third was the school of the prophets ; and which of the prophets did they not kill ? Matt. xxiii. Ven. Bede.

8 And laying hold on him, they killed him : and cast him out of the vineyard.

9 What, therefore, will the lord of the vineyard do? He will come and destroy the husbandmen : and will give the vineyard to others.

10 And have you not read this Scripture : *The stone which the builders rejected, the same is become the head of the corner :

11 By the Lord hath this been done, and it is wonderful in our eyes?

12 And they sought to lay hands on him : but they feared the people. For they knew that he spoke this parable against them. And leaving him, they went their way.

13 ^bAnd they send to him some of the Pharisees, and of the Herodians ; to catch him in his words.

14 And coming, they say to him : Master, we know that thou art a true speaker, and carest not for any man : for thou regardest not the person of men, but teachest the way of God in truth. Is it lawful to give tribute to Cæsar ; or shall we not give it?

15 But he knowing their dissimulation, saith to them : Why tempt you me? bring me a penny, that I may see it.

16 And they brought it to him. And he saith to them : Whose is this image and inscription? They say to him : Cæsar's.

17 And Jesus answering, said to them : *Render, therefore, to Cæsar the things that are Cæsar's, and to God the things that are God's. And they marvelled at him.

18 ^aAnd there came to him the Sadducees, who say there is no resurrection ; and they asked him, saying :

19 Master, Moses wrote unto us, *that if any man's brother die, and leave his wife behind him, and leave no children, his brother should take his wife, and raise up seed to his brother.

20 Now there were seven brethren ; and the first took a wife, and died, leaving no issue.

21 And the second took her, and died : and neither did he leave any issue. And the third in like manner.

22 And the seven took her in like manner ; and did not leave issue. Last of all the woman also died.

23 In the resurrection, therefore, when they shall arise again, whose wife shall she be of them? for the seven had her to wife.

VER. 8. They cast the heir, Jesus Christ, out of the vineyard, by leading him out of Jerusalem to be crucified. Theophy.

VER. 10. By this question, Christ shows that they were about to fulfil this prophecy, by casting him off, planning his death, and delivering him up to the Gentiles, by which he became the corner-stone, joining the two people of the Jews and Gentiles together, and forming out of them the one city and one temple of the faithful. Ven. Bede.

VER. 14. The disciples of the Pharisees said this in order to induce our Saviour to answer them, "that they were not to pay tribute to Cæsar, being the people of God;" an answer they confidently anticipated, and which the Herodians hearing, might immediately apprehend him, and thus remove the odium from themselves to Herod. Ven. Bede.

VER. 17. Although Christ clearly establishes here the strict obligation of paying to Cæsar what belongs to Cæsar, to the confusion of his very enemies, we shall still find them bringing forward against him the charge of disloyalty, as if he forbade tribute to be paid to Cæsar. Luke xxiii. 2. After the example of her Divine model, the Catholic Church has uniformly taught, with S. Paul, the necessity of obeying the powers in being ; and this not for fear of their wrath, but for conscience sake.—With reason were they astonished at the wisdom of this answer, which eluded all their artifices, and taught them at the same time what they owed 24 And Jesus answering, said to them : Do ye not therefore err, not understanding the Scriptures, nor the power of God?

25 For when they shall rise again from the dead, they shall neither marry, nor be given in marriage, but are as the angels in heaven.

26 And, as concerning the dead that they rise again, have you not read in the book of Moses, how in the bush God spoke to him, saying :^f I am the God of Abraham, and the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob?

27 He is not the God of the dead, but of the living. You therefore do greatly err.

28 ^gAnd there came one of the Scribes, that had heard them reasoning together, and seeing that he had answered them well, asked him which was the first commandment?

29 And Jesus answered him : The first commandment of all is :^h Hear, O Israel, the Lord thy God is one God :

30 And thou shalt love the Lord thy God with thy whole heart, and with thy whole soul, and with thy whole mind, and with thy whole strength. This is the first commandment.

31 ⁱAnd the second is like to it : Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself. There is no other commandment greater than these.

32 And the Scribe said to him : Well, master, thou hast said in truth, that there is one God, and there is no other besides him.

33 And that he should be loved with the whole heart, and with the whole understanding, and with the whole soul, and with the whole strength : and to love one's neighbour as himself, is a greater thing than all holocausts and sacrifices.

34 And Jesus seeing that he had answered wisely, said to him : Thou art not far from the kingdom of God. And no man after that durst ask him any question.

35 And Jesus answering, said, teaching in the temple How do the Scribes say, that Christ is the son of David?

36 For David himself saith by the Holy Ghost : *The Lord said to my Lord, Sit thou on my right hand, until I make thy enemies thy footstool.

37 David, therefore, himself calleth him Lord, and whence is he then his son? And a great multitude heard him gladly.

to their prince, and what they owed to God : and whoever hopes for the favour of heaven, must conscientiously observe this double duty to God and to the magistrate.

VER. 26. The doctrine of the resurrection from the dead is clearly given in the book of Moses, where mention is made of the burning bush, from the midst of which God appeared to Moses : have you not read, I say, what God there said to him? As God is the God of the living, you must be in an egregious error in imagining that such as die in the eyes of the world, not to return thither any more, die in the same manner in the eyes of God, to live no more. V.

VER. 33. Venerable Bede gathers from this answer of the Scribe, that it had been long disputed among the Scribes and Pharisees, which was the greatest commandment in the law ; some preferring the acts of faith and love, because many of the Fathers, before the law was instituted, were pleasing to God on account of their faith and piety, and not on account of their sacrifices ; yet none were agreeable to God who had not faith and charity. This excellency of charity teacheth us that faith only is not sufficient. B.

VER. 37. This interrogation of Jesus instructs us how to refute the adversaries of truth ; for if any assert that Christ was but a simple and holy man, a mere descendant of the race of David, we will ask them, after the example of Jesus ; If Christ be man only, and the son of David, how does David, under the inspiration

38 And he said to them in his doctrine :^a Beware of the Scribes, who love to walk in long robes, and to be saluted in the market-place,

39 And to sit in the first chairs in the synagogues, and to have the highest places at suppers :

40 Who devour the houses of widows under the pretence of long prayer : these shall receive greater judgment.

41 ^bAnd Jesus sitting over against the treasury, beheld now the people cast money into the treasury, and many that were rich cast in much.

42 And there came a certain poor widow, and she cast in two mites, which make a farthing.

43 And calling his disciples together, he saith to them : Amen, I say to you, this poor widow hath cast in more than all they who have cast into the treasury.

44 For they all did cast in of their abundance ; but she, of her want, cast in all she had, even her whole living.

CHAP. XIII.

Christ foretells the destruction of the temple, and the signs that shall forerun the day of judgment.

AND^c as he was going out of the temple, one of his disciples saith to him : Master, behold what manner of stones, and what buildings are here.

2 And Jesus answering, said to him : Seest thou all these great buildings ? "There shall not be left a stone upon a stone, that shall not be thrown down.

3 And as he sat on the Mount of Olives, over against the temple, Peter and James, John and Andrew, asked him apart :

4 Tell us, when shall these things be ? and what shall be the sign when all these things shall begin to be fulfilled.

5 And Jesus answering, began to say to them : "Take heed, lest any man deceive you.

6 For many shall come in my name, saying : I am he : and they shall deceive many.

7 And when you shall hear of wars, and rumours of wars, fear ye not : for such things must needs be : but the end is not yet.

8 For nation shall rise against nation, and kingdom

As Christ had frequently denounced the destruction of the temple, his disciples, surprised that so beautiful an edifice should be reduced to nothing, wish on that account to show him the grandeur and magnificence of it ; upon which Christ exclaimed, There shall not remain a stone upon a stone. Theophy.

VER. 4. When shall these things be ? The miseries that took place previously to the destruction of the temple and city of Jerusalem, were a figure of the extreme calamity that will happen before the last day, in the reign of Antichrist : hence Jesus Christ speaketh indifferently of both. B.

VER. 6. At the destruction of Jerusalem there appeared many impostors, many who professed themselves to be the Christ, and assured the populace that their delivery was at hand.—So shall many seducers come towards the end of the world, who shall make themselves authors of sects, and shall gain many disciples : as followeth in plain words, ver. 22, of this chapter. against kingdom, and there shall be earthquakes in places, and famines. These are the beginning of sorrows.

9 But look to yourselves. For they shall deliver you up to councils, and in the synagogues you shall be beaten, and you shall stand before governors and kings for my sake, for a testimony unto them.

10 And unto all nations the gospel must first be preached.

11 ^fAnd when they shall lead you, delivering you up be not thoughtful beforehand what you shall speak ; but whatsoever shall be given you in that hour, that speak ye. For it is not you that speak, but the Holy Ghost.

12 And the brother shall betray his brother unto death, and the father his son ; and children shall rise up against the parents, and shall put them to death.

13 And you shall be hated by all men for my name's sake. But he that shall endure unto the end, he shall be saved.

14 ^gAnd when you shall see the abomination of desolation, standing where it ought not : let him that readeth, understand : then let those who are in Judea, flee to the mountains :

15 And let him that is on the house-top not go down into the house, nor enter therein to take any thing out of his house :

16 And let him that shall be in the field, not turn back again to take up his garment.

17 And woe to them that are with child, and that give suck in those days.

18 But pray ye, that these things may not happen in winter.

19 For in those days, shall be such tribulations as were not from the beginning of the creation which God created until now, neither shall be.

20 And unless the Lord had shortened the days, no flesh should be saved : but for the sake of the elect which he hath chosen, he hath shortened the days.

21 ^hAnd then if any man shall say to you : Lo, here is Christ ; or lo, he is there : do not believe.

VER. 20. This may be explained in a more general sense of the persecution of Antichrist, which will be dreadful beyond description, and executed in every part of the world. The time, however, allowed to him and his wicked agents to tread under foot the holy city, (Apoc. xi. 2,) i. e. the Church of Christ, will not extend beyond forty-two months, or three years and a half. This space of time Christ has set apart to purify his Church, and try his servants ; and therefore he allows them to fall under the power of this merciless tyrant ; and it was given unto him, says S. John, speaking of this event, to make war with the saints, and overcome them. Apoc. xiii. 7. We are admonished of the same by the prophet Daniel (vii. 21) : I beheld, says he, and lo that horn (Antichrist) made war against the saints, and prevailed against them ; and he shall speak words against the Most High, and shall crush the saints of the Most High . . . and they shall be delivered into his hand until a time, and times, and half a time, (Dan. vii. 25,) i. e. a year, two years, and half a year, or three years and a half, the same with S. John. Pastorini. p. 327 and 8.—S. Austin, speaking of this dreadful period, says, this persecution will be the last ; it will happen towards the approach of the last judgment, and will fall upon the Church in every part of the world ; that is, the whole city of Christ will be persecuted by the whole city of the devil, as far as both are extended upon earth. De Civit. l. 20. c. 11. But our Saviour will put a stop to these calamities on account of his elect, unwilling that they should be tempted above their strength ; for he will descend himself from heaven, and, as S. Paul tells us, will kill the wicked man, Antichrist, with the breath of his mouth, and shall destroy him with the brightness of his coming.

VER. 24. In the day of judgment the luminaries of heaven shall be darkened, not by the privation of their light, but by the approach of the true light of the phets; and they shall show signs and wonders, to seduce, if it were possible, even the elect.

23 Take ye heed, therefore: behold, I have foretold you all things.

24 *But in those days, after that tribulation, the sun shall be darkened, and the moon shall not give her light.

25 And the stars of heaven shall be falling down, and the powers that are in heaven, shall be moved.

26 And then shall they see the Son of man coming in the clouds, with great power and glory.

27 *And then shall he send his angels, and shall gather together his elect from the four winds, from the uttermost part of the earth to the uttermost part of heaven.

28 Now of the fig-tree learn ye a parable. When the branch thereof is now tender, and the leaves are come forth, you know that summer is very near:

29 So you also, when you shall see these things come to pass, know ye that it is very nigh, even at the doors.

30 Amen, I say to you, that this generation shall not pass, until all these things be done.

31 Heaven and earth shall pass away, but my words shall not pass away.

32 But of that day or hour no man knoweth, neither the angels in heaven, nor the Son, but the Father.

33 *Take ye heed, watch, and pray: for ye know not when the time is.

34 Even as a man who, going into a far country, left his house; and gave authority to his servants over every work, and commanded the porter to watch.

35 Watch ye, therefore, (for you know not when the lord of the house cometh: at even, or at midnight, or at the cock-crowing, or in the morning.)

36 Lest coming on a sudden, he find you sleeping.

37 And what I say to you, I say to all: Watch.

CHAP. XIV.

The first part of the history of the passion of Christ.

NOW ^athe feast of the Pasch, and of the azymes, was after two days: and the chief priests, and the Scribes, sought how they might by some wile lay hold on him, and kill him.

world, i. e. the great Judge. And what cause for wonder can there be, that man should be terrified at the thoughts of the last day, when the angelic powers shall tremble; or, how will these mortal habitations of ours stand the shock, when the very pillars of heaven shall be moved? what will the tender osier suffer, when the lofty cedars of Paradise bend their head! Ven. Bede.

VER. 32. But how can the Son be ignorant of that last day? Were this the case, we must thence conclude that his nature was imperfect; since he was under the necessity of a second coming, and yet was ignorant when that time should be. But we must remember, that the meaning of this sentence is not, that Christ was really ignorant of this circumstance, but only that it was not then a convenient time to disclose the secret. S. Austin.—Not as if Christ were ignorant himself, as certain Eutychian heretics, called Agnostæ, held; but because he knew it not as our teacher, to teach it others, as being not expedient. S. Ambrose de Fide, l. 5, c. 8.—The Son of God is ignorant of this day, not according to his Divinity, which sees and knows all things; but according to his humanity, which does not know it of itself, of its own light, but by the revelation which is made to it by the Divinity, which is intimately united to it. In naturâ quidem Divinitatis novit, says Gregory, non ex naturâ humanitatis. See S. Matt. xxiv. 36.

VER. 33. Some will perhaps think, that it would have been much better, if the Almighty had not left the hour of death uncertain; as in that case, they would not have been so solicitous with regard to its arrival. But S. Austin, S. Gregory, and other saints assure us, on the contrary, that it is a very great mercy of God to keep us in this ignorance, that we may always be prepared for it. For, if we knew the precise period, this assurance would give occasion of living more unguardedly, and of sinning more freely. If, with this uncertainty of the hour of our death, we live,

2 But they said: Not on the festival day, lest there should be a tumult among the people.

3 *And when he was in Bethania, in the house of Simon, the leper, and was at meat: there came a woman, having an alabaster box of ointment of precious spikenard: and breaking the alabaster box, she poured it out upon his head.

4 Now there were some that had indignation within themselves, and said: Why was this waste of the ointment made?

5 For this ointment might have been sold for more than three hundred pence, and given to the poor. And they murmured against her.

6 But Jesus said: Let her alone; why do you molest her? She hath wrought a good work upon me.

7 For the poor you have always with you: and whensoever you will, you may do them good: but me you have not always.

8 She hath done what she could: she is come beforehand to anoint my body for the burial.

9 Amen, I say to you, wheresoever this gospel shall be preached in the whole world, that also which she hath done, shall be told for a memorial of her.

10 *And Judas Iscariot, one of the twelve, went to the chief priests, to betray him to them.

11 And they hearing it, were glad: and promised to give him money. And he sought how he might conveniently betray him.

12 *Now, on the first day of the unleavened bread, when they sacrificed the Pasch, the disciples say to him: Whither wilt thou that we go, and prepare for thee to eat the Pasch?

13 And he sendeth two of his disciples, and saith to them: Go ye into the city: and there shall meet you a man carrying a pitcher of water, follow him;

14 And wheresoever he shall go in, say to the master of the house: The master saith, Where is my refectory: where I may eat the Pasch with my disciples?

15 And he will show you a large dining-room, furnished: and there prepare ye for us.

16 And his disciples went their way, and came into the notwithstanding, so very remissly; what should we do, were we assured that we were not to die for some years?

VER. 35. At even, at midnight, or at the cock-crowing, or in the morning. These are generally referred to the different ages of man's life; infancy, youth, manhood, and old age. We are exhorted to be always in readiness, for we know not at what hour the Judge will come. Nic. de Lyra.

CHAP. XIV. VER. 1. Though the evangelists generally use the words pasch and azymes promiscuously, yet S. Mark distinguishes them, being really different. The pasch is used for the 14th day of the moon of the first month. But the 15th day, on which they departed out of Egypt, was the feast of the azymes, or the unleavened bread; which continued seven days, till the 21st day of the moon inclusive. Ven. Bede.—Pasch is also used for the sabbath-day, within the seven days of the solemnity (John xix. 14); and also for all the sacrifices made during the seven days of the feast.

VER. 3. Of precious spikenard.* This was a perfume extracted and distilled from the leaves, tops, or stalks, of the plant or herb called nard. It was the custom of the Eastern people to pour such precious perfumes on their own heads, or on the heads of their guests whom they had a mind to honour. Wi.

VER. 4. It was chiefly Judas Iscariot that murmured here. S. John only mentions him; perhaps some others had been excited to complain, by the traitor.

VER. 12. Whither wilt thou, &c. By these words the disciples teach us to direct our every step according to the will of God; therefore does their Lord tell them, with whom he would eat the Pasch, to go two of them into the city. S. Jerom.

VER. 14. Where is my refectory. . . where I may eat the Pasch, or the pas city: and they found as he had told them, and they prepared the Pasch.

17 *And when evening was come, he cometh with the twelve.

18 And when they were at table, and eating, Jesus saith: Amen, I say to you,^b that one of you who eateth with me, shall betray me.

19 But they began to be sorrowful, and to say to him one by one: Is it I?

20 And he said to them: One of the twelve who dipeth his hand in the dish with me.

21 And the Son of man indeed goeth,^c as it is written of him: but woe to that man, by whom the Son of man shall be betrayed. It were better for him if that man had not been born.

22 *And whilst they were eating, Jesus took bread: and blessing, broke, and gave to them, and said: Take ye, This is my body.

23 And having taken the chalice, giving thanks, he gave it to them, and they all drank of it.

24 And he said to them: This is my blood of the new testament, which shall be shed for many.

25 Amen, I say unto you, that I will drink no more of this fruit of the vine, until that day when I shall drink it new in the kingdom of God.

26 And when they had sung a hymn, they went forth to the Mount of Olives.

27 And Jesus saith to them: *You will all be scandalized in me this night: for it is written: 'I will strike the shepherd, and the sheep shall be dispersed;

28 But after I shall be risen again, I will go before you into Galilee.

29 But Peter saith to him: Although all shall be scandalized in thee, yet not I.

that supper of the lamb sacrificed? Lit. in the Lat. where is my eating, or my refection? but it is generally agreed that here is meant a place to eat in. Wi.

This is my body.

VER. 22. This which I now give, and which you now receive; for the bread is not the figure only of Christ, but is changed into the true body of Christ; and he himself says, The bread, which I will give you, is my flesh. S. John vi. But the flesh of Christ is not seen, on account of our infirmity; for if we were allowed to see with our eyes the flesh and blood of Jesus, we should not dare to approach the blessed sacrament. Our Lord therefore, condescending to our weakness, preserves the outward species of bread and wine, but changes the bread and wine into the reality of flesh and blood. Theophy.—S. Chrysostom, in his thirtieth sermon on the treason of Judas, says, "Christ is also now present to adorn our table, (altar,) the same that was present to adorn that table. The priest stands his viceregent, and pronounces the words, but the power and grace is of God. He says, This is my body, and the word changes the elements: and as the sentence 'increase and multiply, and fill the earth,' was only spoken once, but still imparts fecundity to human nature throughout all time; so these words (of consecration) once spoken, constitute an absolute, perfect sacrifice upon every altar of the Church from that day to this, yea, even to the time when Christ shall come again at the last day." S. Chrysostom, Sermon. 30, on the treachery of Judas.

These words are so plain, that it is difficult to imagine others more explicit. Their force and import will however appear in a still stronger light, if we consider the formal promise Christ had made to his apostles, as related by S. John, that he would give them his flesh to eat, that same flesh he was to deliver up for the life of the world. He on that occasion confirmed with remarkable emphasis of expression the reality of this manducation, assuring them that his flesh was meat indeed, and his blood drink indeed; and when some of the disciples were shocked at such a proposal, he still insisted that unless they eat his flesh, they should have no life in them. The possibility of it he evinced from his Divine power, to be exemplified in his miraculous ascension; the necessity of it he established, by permitting those to abandon him who refused to believe it; and the belief of it he enforced on the minds of his disciples, from the consideration that he, their teacher, was the Son of God, and the author of their eternal salvation. The apostles were day, even in this night, before the cock crow twice, thou shalt deny me thrice.

31 But he spoke the more vehemently: *Although I should die together with thee, I will not deny thee: And in like manner also said they all.

32 *And they came to a farm called Gethsemani. And he saith to his disciples: Sit you here while I pray.

33 And he taketh Peter, and James, and John, with him; and he began to fear, and to be heavy.

34 And he saith to them: My soul is sorrowful even unto death: stay you here and watch.

35 And when he had gone forward a little, he fell flat on the ground: and he prayed, that, if it were possible, the hour might pass from him:

36 And he said: Abba, Father, all things are possible to thee; take away this chalice from me: but not what I will, but what thou wilt.

37 And he cometh, and findeth them sleeping. And he saith to Peter: Simon, sleepest thou? couldst thou not watch one hour?

38 Watch ye, and pray that you enter not into temptation. The spirit indeed is willing, but the flesh is weak.

39 And going away again, he prayed, saying the same words.

40 And when he returned, he found them again asleep, (for their eyes were heavy,) and they knew not what to answer him.

41 And he cometh the third time, and saith to them: Sleep ye now, and take your rest. It is enough: the hour is come: behold the Son of man shall be betrayed into the hands of sinners.

42 Rise up: let us go. Behold, he that will betray me, is at hand.

43 And while he was yet speaking, cometh Judas Iscariot, one of the twelve: and with him a great multi-deeply impressed with these thoughts, previously to the institution of the holy Eucharist; consequently when they beheld Jesus Christ, just before his death, taking bread into his sacred hands; when, after blessing it with solemnity, they heard him say, Take, eat; this is my body, which shall be given for you; they must necessarily have concluded, that it was truly his body, which he now gave them to eat, according to his former promise. And though their reason or senses might have started difficulties, yet all these were obviated by their belief of his being God, and consequently able to effect whatever he pleased, and to make good whatever he said.—Moreover, if we consult tradition, we shall find that the Greek, as well as the Latin Church, has uniformly declared in favour of the literal sense of Christ's words, as may be seen at large in all Catholic controvertists. The learned author of the Perpetuité de la Foi, and his continuator, Renaudot, in the two additional quarto volumes, have invincibly demonstrated, that the belief of all the Oriental Christians perfectly coincides with that of the Catholic Church, respecting the real presence.

This is my blood.

VER. 24. Which shall be shed. With words so explicit, with the unanimous agreement of the Eastern and Western Churches, how can any Dissenters bring themselves to believe that there is nothing more designed, or given, than a memorial of Christ's passion and death? Catholics, who believe in the real presence, do certainly renew in themselves the remembrance of our Saviour's death and passion, with more lively sentiments of devotion than they who believe it to be mere bread and wine.

VER. 27. Christ permitted his disciples to fall, that they might learn not to trust in themselves. To strengthen his prediction, he adduces the testimony of Zacharias the prophet, (xiii. 7,) I will strike the shepherd, and the sheep shall be dispersed. Theophy. . . . This text is expressed in other words, being there spoken in the person of the prophet, Strike the pastor, and the sheep shall be dispersed. Ven. Bede.—By these words, the prophet prays for the passion of the Lord. The Almighty Father answers his prayer, I will strike the shepherd. The Son is sent by the Father, and is stricken by becoming incarnate, and suffering death. S. Jerom.

VER. 45. Our Lord received the kiss of the traitor, that he might not appear tude, with swords and staves, from the chief priests, and the Scribes, and the ancients.

44 And he that betrayed him had given them a sign, saying: Whomsoever I shall kiss, that is he, lay hold on him, and lead him away cautiously.

45 And when he was come, immediately going up to him, he saith: Hail, Rabbi: and he kissed him.

46 But they laid hands on him, and held him.

47 And one of them that stood by, drawing a sword, struck the servant of the chief priest, and cut off his ear.

48 And Jesus answering, said to them: Are you come out as against a robber with swords and staves to apprehend me?

49 I was daily with you in the temple teaching, and you did not lay hands on me. But, that the Scriptures may be fulfilled.

50 *Then his disciples leaving him, all fled away.

51 And a certain young man followed him, having a linen cloth cast about his naked body: and they laid hold on him.

52 But he casting off the linen cloth, fled from them naked.

53 *And they brought Jesus to the high priest: and all the priests, and the Scribes, and the ancients, were assembled together.

54 And Peter followed him afar off, even into the palace of the high priest: and he sat with the servants at the fire, and warmed himself.

55 *And the chief priests, and all the council, sought for evidence against Jesus, that they might put him to death; and they found none.

56 For many bore false witness against him, and their evidence did not agree.

57 And some rising up, bore false witness against him, saying:

58 We heard him say: *I will destroy this temple made with hands, and within three days I will build another, not made with hands.

59 And their witness did not agree.

60 And the high priest rising up in the midst, asked

Jesus, saying: Answerest thou nothing to the things that are laid to thy charge by these men?

61 But he held his peace, and answered nothing. Again the high priest asked him, and said to him: Art thou the Christ, the Son of the blessed God?

62 And Jesus said to him: I am: *And you shall see the Son of man sitting on the right hand of the power of God, and coming with the clouds of heaven.

63 Then the high priest rending his garments, saith: What need we any farther witnesses?

64 You have heard the blasphemy. What think you? And they all condemned him to be guilty of death.

65 And some began to spit on him, and to cover his face, and to buffet him, and to say to him: Prophecy: and the servants struck him with the palms of their hands.

66 *Now, when Peter was in the court below, there cometh one of the maid-servants of the high priest:

67 And when she had seen Peter warming himself, looking on him, she saith: Thou also wast with Jesus of Nazareth.

68 But he denied, saying: I neither know nor understand what thou sayest. And he went forth before the court, and the cock crew.

69 *And again a maid-servant seeing him, began to say to the standers-by: This is one of them.

70 But he denied again. *And after a while they that stood by, said again to Peter: Surely thou art one of them: for thou art also a Galilean.

71 But he began to curse and to swear, saying: I know not this man of whom you speak.

72 And immediately the cock crew again. *And Peter remembered the word that Jesus had said to him: Before the cock crow twice, thou shalt deny me thrice. And he began to weep.

Caiphas, in order to excite their hatred against what was said, rent his garments, and thus deprived himself of the priestly dignity, by transgressing the precepts; which, speaking of the high priest, says, He shall not uncover his head, and his garments he shall not rend. Lev. xxi. 10. S. Leo the Great.—By the high priest rending his garments he shows, that the Jewish priesthood, on account of their crimes, was now dissolved; whereas the tunic of Christ, by which the one true Catholic Church is prefigured, was seamless, and not to be divided. Ven. Bede.

VER. 71. In this one apostle, Peter, the first and chief in the order of apostles, in whom the Church was figured, both sorts were to be signified, viz. the strong and the weak, because the Church is not without both. S. Austin, Ser. 13, de Verb. Do.

* V. 3. Unguenti nardi spicati pretiosi, μύρον νάρδον πιστικῆς πολυτελοῦς. Both here in S. Mark, and also in S. John, (chap. xii. 3,) we read πιστικῆς, which by the Greek agrees with nard, and not with ointment. The interpreters are much divided about the signification of the word πιστικῆς: some late writers would needs have πιστικῆς to come from πινω or πινω, and to signify liquid, but this does not seem well grounded. Others, with S. Aug., would have πιστικῆς to be taken from the name of some country or place from whence this precious nard was brought. The most common opinion seems that of S. Hieron., with whom agree Theophylactus, and Euthymius, that πιστικά, derived from πιστις, signifies true and genuine nard, and so of the greatest price and value.

CHAP. XV. VER 1 It was customary with the Jews to bind and deliver

2 And Pilate asked him: Art thou the king of the Jews? But he answering, saith to him: Thou sayest it.

3 *And the chief priests accused him in many things.

4 And Pilate again asked him, saying: Answerest thou nothing? behold in how many things they accuse thee.

5 But Jesus still answered nothing; so that Pilate wondered.

6 Now on the festival-day he was wont to release unto them one of the prisoners, whomsoever they demanded.

7 And there was one called Barabbas, who was put in prison with seditious men, who in the sedition had committed murder

8 And when the multitude was come up, they began to desire that he would do as he had always done to them.

9 And Pilate answered them, and said: Will you that I release to you the king of the Jews?

10 For he knew that the chief priests had delivered him up through envy.

11 But the chief priests moved the people, that he should rather release Barabbas to them.

12 *And Pilate again answering, saith to them: What will you then that I do to the king of the Jews?

13 *But they again cried out: Crucify him.

14 And Pilate saith to them: Why, what evil hath he done? But they cried out the more: Crucify him.

15 So Pilate being willing to satisfy the people, released to them Barabbas, and delivered up Jesus, when he had scourged him, to be crucified.

16 *And the soldiers led him into the court of the palace, and they call together the whole band.

17 And they clothe him with purple, and plating a crown of thorns, they put it upon him.

18 And they began to salute him: Hail, king of the Jews!

19 And they struck his head with a reed: And they did spit on him, and bowing their knees, they worshipped him.

20 And after they had mocked him, they took off the purple from him, and put his own garments on him, and they led him out to crucify him.

over to the Roman governors those whom they had condemned in their own councils; but we must not suppose that this was the first time they bound Jesus; for, as S. John informs us, when first they apprehended him, they put manacles upon him. Ven. Bede.

VER. 2. It may be remarked upon this answer of our Lord, that he was not unwilling to answer the questions put to him by the governor, who condemned him contrary to his inclination, though he would not condescend to return an answer to the question of the high priests, as they were not worthy of the favour. Theophyl.

VER. 6. This practice of releasing to the people any prisoner they might think proper, was instituted in order to captivate the will of the people; which was most commonly done on the festival day, when the Jews were assembled from the different provinces to Jerusalem. Gloss.

VER. 21. S. Jerom thinks Alexander and Rufus were disciples of Christ, and in this account the name of their father is here expressed. S. Jerom in D. Diony.

VER. 25. S. Matthew says mixed with gall; for gall is here used for bitterness, and wine that has myrrh in it is a very strong bitter; although, perhaps, both gall and myrrh might have been ingredients to increase the bitterness. S. Austin. —This was given to criminals, to lessen their torments. Our Lord was pleased to taste the bitterness, but he would not permit the relief which the admittance of the same into his stomach might have afforded. Thus also were the Scriptures fulfilled: They gave me gall for my food, and in my thirst they gave me vinegar to drink. Psal. lxxviii. Ven. Bede.

VER. 25. S. Mark is the only evangelist who says it was the third hour. S. John says it was the sixth. But these may easily be reconciled by supposing that 21 *And they forced one Simon, a Cyrenian, who passed by, coming out of the country, the father of Alexander, and of Rufus, to take up his cross.

22 And they bring him into the place called Golgotha, which being interpreted, is, The place of Calvary.

23 And they gave him to drink wine mingled with myrrh: but he took it not.

24 *And crucifying him, they divided his garments, casting lots upon them what every man should take.

25 And it was the third hour, and they crucified him.

26 And the inscription of his cause was written over, THE KING OF THE JEWS.

27 And with him they crucify two thieves; the one on his right hand, and the other on his left.

28 *And the Scripture was fulfilled, which saith: And with the wicked he was reputed.

29 And they that passed by, blasphemed him, wagging their heads, and saying: Vah, thou that destroyest the temple of God, and in three days buildest it up again:

30 Save thyself, coming down from the cross.

31 In like manner also the chief priests, with the Scribes, mocking, said one to another: He saved others, himself he cannot save.

32 Let Christ, the king of Israel, come down now from the cross, that we may see and believe. And they that were crucified with him, reviled him.

33 And when the sixth hour was come, there was darkness over the whole earth, until the ninth hour.

34 And at the ninth hour, Jesus cried out with a loud voice, saying: Eloi, Eloi, lamma sabacthani? which is, being interpreted, My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me?

35 And some of the standers-by hearing, said: Behold, he calleth Elias.

36 And one running, and filling a sponge with vinegar, and putting it upon a reed, gave him to drink, saying: Stay, let us see if Elias will come to take him down.

37 And Jesus having cried out with a loud voice, gave up the ghost.

38 And the veil of the temple was rent in two, from the top to the bottom.

he was crucified towards the end of the third hour, that is, about eleven of the clock, or half-past eleven, which being near the sixth hour, or twelve, the evangelist might say it was the sixth hour. Nic. de Lyra.—The third hour. The ancient account divided the day into four parts, which were named from the hour from which they began: the first, third, sixth, and ninth hour. Our Lord was crucified a little before noon; before the third hour had quite expired; but when the sixth hour was near at hand. Ch.

VER. 26. It was written on a board, expressing the cause why he was crucified, viz. because he was the King of the Jews. Pilate, by putting up his cause, wished to revenge himself of the Jews, for their importunity and obstinacy in compelling him, partly against his will, to condemn him to death. For what could be more ignominious to the Jews than to see their king crucified at their own request, and for no other reason than because he was their king, and they did not wish him to reign over them. Sirinus.

VER. 28. This text of Isaias regards the Messiah according to the very letter. V.

VER. 32. Afterwards they saw him arising out of the sepulchre whom they thought unable to descend from the cross. Where, O Jew, is thy infidelity? I ask you yourselves. You shall be your own judges. How much more astonishing is it to be able, when dead, to rise again, than, when living, to descend from the cross? You desired a small exertion of power, and a much greater is here performed: but still your infidelity would not be cured. All have turned out of the way, all have become useless. S. Jer.—If the Scribes and Pharisees did not believe in Christ when he rose from the dead, neither would they have believed in him had he left the cross. Tir

42 "And when evening was now come, (because it was the Parasceve, that is, the day before the sabbath,)

43 Joseph, of Arimathea, a noble counsellor, who was also himself looking for the kingdom of God, came and went in boldly to Pilate, and begged the body of Jesus.

44 But Pilate wondered that he should be already dead. And sending for the centurion, he asked him if he were already dead.

45 And when he had understood it by the centurion, he gave the body to Joseph.

46 And Joseph buying fine linen, and taking him down, wrapped him up in the fine linen, and laid him in a sepulchre, which was hewed out of a rock, and he rolled a stone to the door of the sepulchre.

47 And Mary Magdalene, and Mary, the mother of Joseph, beheld where he was laid.

CHAP. XVI.

Christ's resurrection and ascension.

AND^a when the sabbath was past, Mary Magdalene, and Mary, the mother of James and Salome, bought sweet spices, that coming they might anoint Jesus.

2 And very early in the morning, the first day of the week, they come to the sepulchre, the sun being now risen.

3 And they said one to another: Who shall roll us back the stone from the door of the sepulchre?

4 And looking, they saw the stone rolled back. For it was very great.

VER. 39. The centurion considered the crying out of our Saviour as an effect not of human, but Divine power, since it generally happens that people at the moment the soul quits the body are reduced to so debilitated a state, that they are scarce able to utter the least word.

VER. 42. Ven. Bede thinks the word parasceve is derived from the Greek παρασκευή, signifying a preparation. It was the day before the sabbath, on which the Jews were accustomed to prepare two meals, one for the parasceve, and another for the sabbath; the Jews not being allowed to dress any meat on the latter day, on account of its great solemnity. Ven. Bede.

VER. 43. A noble Decurion. The Decurions among the Romans were first called so as having ten men under them, as the centurions were over a hundred. But some of the Decurions were also counsellors in towns, as is here signified by the Greek word βουλευτής. Wi.

CHAP. XVI. VER. 1. Saturday evening, after the sun was set, for the sabbath began and ended with the setting sun.

VER. 5. S. Matthew says the angel was sitting on the stone, whilst S. Mark says that they saw him sitting on the right side of the sepulchre. This must not surprise us; for the angel which first appeared sitting upon the stone, might have been afterwards seen by him sitting on the right side of the sepulchre. Theophy.—Perhaps the angel mentioned by S. Matthew is different from the one mentioned by S. Mark. Or it may be understood, that the women entering the monument, which may mean the enclosure of it, saw the angel sitting on the stone, which was placed on the right side of the sepulchre. S. Austin.

VER. 9. This appearance of our Saviour is more fully related by S. John. Our Lord arose early from the monument in which he had been placed late in the evening, thus fulfilling the words of the Psalmist, In the evening weeping shall have place, and in the morning gladness. Psal. xxix. Ven. Bede.—Rising early. It appears from this that our Saviour arose early, about sun-rise, as was the sentiment of S. Austin; though S. Gregory seems to think that he arose at midnight, in the same manner as Samson, who was a figure of Christ, arose in the middle of 5 "And entering into the sepulchre, they saw a young man sitting on the right side, clothed with a white robe and they were astonished.

6 And he saith to them: Be not affrighted; you seek Jesus, of Nazareth, who was crucified: he is risen, he is not here: behold the place where they laid him.

7 But go tell his disciples, and Peter, that he goeth before you into Galilee: there you shall see him, as he told you

8 But they going out, fled from the sepulchre: for a trembling and fear had seized them: and they said nothing to any man: for they were afraid.

9 But he rising early^a the first day of the week, appeared first to Mary Magdalene, out of whom he had cast seven devils.

10 She went, and told them that had been with him, who were mourning and weeping.

11 And they hearing that he was alive, and had been seen by her, did not believe.

12 "And after that he appeared in another form to two of them walking, as they were going into the country.

13 And they going, told it to the rest: neither did they believe them.

14 At length he appeared to the eleven, as they were at table: and he upbraided them with their incredulity and hardness of heart; because they did not believe them who had seen him after he was risen again.

15 And he said to them: Go ye into the whole world, and preach the gospel to every creature.

16 He that believeth, and is baptized, shall be saved: but he that believeth not, shall be condemned.

17 And these signs shall follow them that believe: "they shall speak with new tongues:

18 "They shall take up serpents: and if they shall drink any deadly thing, it shall not hurt them: "they shall lay their hands upon the sick, and they shall recover.

19 And the Lord Jesus, after he had spoken to them,

Luke xxiv. 4; John xx. 12.—^f Supra, xiv. 28.—^g John xx. 16.—^h Luke xxiv. 13.
ⁱ Acts xvi. 18.—^k Acts ii. 4, and x. 46.—^l Acts xxviii. 5.—^m Acts xxviii. 8.

the night and carried away the gates of Gaza. If we follow this opinion, we must understand the word early as referring to the verb appeared, not to the participle rising, and then the sentence will be, He rising, (having arisen,) appeared early the first day of the week. The first interpretation, however, of S. Austin seems more agreeable to the text, He rising early the first day of the week, appeared, &c.

VER. 14. At length,* &c., in the Latin text, taken according to the letter, is lastly, or last of all: but if we examine and compare the four Gospels, this was not the last time that Christ appeared to his disciples after his resurrection. We can only then understand it of the last time mentioned by this evangelist.—To the eleven. If this apparition (as it was the opinion of S. Augustin) was made when S. Thomas was not with them, they were only then ten, without S. Thomas and Judas. The evangelist here calls them eleven, because the apostolical college (Judas being dead) consisted of no more than eleven.

VER. 16. Let those weep and lament who have not yet seen him, and in a short time they shall receive consolation. Blessed are they that weep, for they shall be comforted, S. Matt. v. S. Jcrom.—Perhaps some one will say within himself, I have already believed, I shall be saved: he says true, if his faith be supported by good works; for that only is true faith, which does not contradict in words what is believed in words. S. Greg.

VER. 19. By these words, it is not to be understood that Jesus is to be confined to that particular posture of body, or that the Father has any hands, or any human shape; for God is a pure, incorporeal, and all-perfect Spirit. The image of God, as he is in himself, comes not within the reach of our mortal senses. When the Scripture, therefore, speaks of God, it uses such imagery of language as is adapted to our senses, that it may thereby convey to us some imperfect knowledge of those sublime mysteries, which are ineffable in themselves, and incomprehensible to our understanding. Thus we are informed that Jesus Christ sits at the right hand of God, the Father Almighty, to signify that, as man, our Lord is raised to the height of glory, and to that supreme beatitude, than which there is nothing higher, and nothing greater in the whole bliss of heaven; and that he, moreover, holds the same sovereign dominion with the Father over all creatures; because, as God, he is equal to the Father in power, in wisdom, and in all perfection. See Pouget, p. 256, ed. in fol.—On the right hand of God. Jesus Christ, our Redeemer, was not man only, but truly God, the same God with his eternal Father; and hereby is signified that the person, who took upon him human nature and became man, is equal in dignity with the Father; he who, as man, ascended into heaven.

'was taken up into heaven, and sitteth on the right hand of God.

* Luke xxiv. 51.

20 But they going forth, preached every where: the Lord co-operating with them, and confirming the word, with signs, that followed.

VER. 20. Let us here take notice, that, as the apostles confirmed their words by the signs that followed, so also in us must our words be confirmed by works. "Grant, O Jesus! that the discourses we deliver, concerning virtue, may be confirmed by works and actions; that thus, by thy co-operation, we may become perfect in word and work; for to Thee is due the glory of our discourses and actions." Theophylactus.

THE

HOLY GOSPEL OF JESUS CHRIST,

ACCORDING TO

S. L U K E.

S. LUKE* was a physician, a native of Antioch, the metropolis of Syria, and well skilled in the Greek language, as his writings sufficiently evince. In some ancient MSS. he is called Lucius, and Lucanus. S. Luke was the disciple, travelling companion, and fellow-labourer of S. Paul. Of him S. Paul is supposed to speak (2 Cor. viii. 18): We have sent also with him (Titus) the brother, whose praise is in the Gospel, through all churches: and again, Luke, the most dear physician, saluteth you (Coloss. iv.): and, only Luke is with me, 2 Tim. iv. Some are of opinion that as often as S. Paul, in his Epistles, says, according to my Gospel, he speaks of the Gospel of S. Luke. His Gospel he wrote as he heard it; but the Acts of the Apostles, from his own observations; and both, as some believe, about the same time in which his history of the Acts finishes, towards the year of Christ 63. But the received opinion now is, that S. Luke wrote his Gospel in Achaia, in the year 53, ten years previously to his writing of the Acts, purposely to counteract the fabulous relations concerning Jesus Christ, which several persons had endeavoured to palm upon the world. It does not appear, as Calmet observes, that he had ever read the Gospels of S. Matt. and S. Mark. . . He chiefly insists in his Gospel, upon what relates to Christ's priestly office; hence the ancients gave, of the four symbolical representations, mentioned in Ezechiel, that of the ox, or calf, to S. Luke, as an emblem of sacrifices. He lived eighty-four years in the state of celibacy, was crucified at Elœa, in Peloponnesus, near Achaia, and was buried in the church of the apostles, at Constantinople; to which city his remains were translated, together with those of S. Andrew and S. Timothy, in the year 357, by order of the emperor Constantius. S. Luke writes purer Greek than any of the other agiographers; yet many Syriac words, and turns of expressions, occur in both his Gospel and Acts of the Apostles; some also that imitate the genius of the Latin tongue. He cites Scripture according to the Septuagint, and not after the Hebrew text. S. Paul, in his Epistles, generally quotes the Gospel in a manner the most conformable to S. Luke, as may be seen in the following instances: 1 Cor. xi. 23, and 24; xv. 5.

CHAPTER I.

The conception of John the Baptist, and of Christ: the visitation and canticle of the blessed Virgin: the birth of the Baptist, and the canticle of Zachary.

FORASMUCH as many have taken in hand to set forth, in order, a narration of the things that have been accomplished among us:

2 According as they have delivered them unto us, who from the beginning were eye-witnesses and ministers of the word:

3 It seemed good to me also, having diligently attained

CHAP. I. VER. 1. *That have been accomplished. In the Prot. translation, of things most surely believed. They have followed Beza, and Erasmus; but other learned critics have shown that the same Greek word often signifies to fulfil; and it is clearly proved by S. Chrysostom.

VER. 3. Having diligently attained. Here we see, that although the Holy Ghost regulated the pen of the holy writers, that they might not err, they still employed human means to search and find out the truth of things they mentioned. Even so do general councils, and the president thereof, the holy pontiff, discuss and examine all causes by human means, although they have the promise from Jesus Christ of the aid, assistance, and direction of his Holy Spirit (S. John xvi. 13); as is manifest from the very first council of the apostles, holden at Jerusalem. Acts xv. 7, and 28.—Most excellent Theophilus. This word, Theophilus, by its etymology, signifies a lover of God: but here we may rather understand some particular person, by the title given him of most excellent, or best; which, at that time, was given to persons in dignity; as to Felix, Acts xxiii. 26; and to Festus, Acts xxvi. 25. Wi.

VER. 5. The Almighty appointed to Moses, that there should be but one high priest at a time, to whom, at his decease, a successor should be chosen. This rule obtained till the time of David, by whom, by the inspiration of God, many were appointed at once. 1 Par. xxiv. According to this regulation, Zachary is said to perform the office of priest, according to the order of his course. Ven. Bede to all things from the beginning, to write to thee in order, most excellent Theophilus,

4 That thou mayest know the truth of those words in which thou hast been instructed.

5 There was in the days of Herod, the king of Judea, a certain priest named Zachary, ^aof the course of Abia, and his wife was of the daughters of Aaron, and her name Elizabeth.

6 And they were both just before God, walking in all —The people waited without, according to Lev. xvi. 12; whilst the high priest carried the incense into the holy of holies, on the tenth day of the seventh month. Ven. Bede.—Of the course of Abia.† What we read in the Greek for course, is commonly put for the employment of one day, but here for the functions of a whole week. For, by the appointment of David, (1 Par. xxiv.) the descendants from Aaron were divided into twenty-four families; of which the eighth was Abia, from whom descended this Zachary, who at this time was in the week of his priestly functions. Wi.—It is worthy of remark, that there were three Herods. The first was the one here spoken of, (surnamed Ascalonite, from his palace in the city of Ascalon, in Palestine,) the same who murdered the Innocents. The second was son of the first, (surnamed Antipas,) who derided Christ at the time of his passion, the same who beheaded the Baptist. The third was Herod Agrippa, who beheaded S. James, imprisoned S. Peter, and who was afterwards, for his great pride, stricken by an angel, and devoured by worms. Our Saviour was born in the reign of the first Herod, by whom the prophecy of Jacob, related in the book of Genesis, (chap. xlix.) was fulfilled, The sceptre shall not be taken, &c. Herod was an Idumean, and made king of the Jews by the Romans.

* 1 Par. xxiv. 10.

VER. 6. Both just, . . . walking . . . without blame.† Not that in the sight of God they were exempt even from all lesser failings, which are called venial faults; but only from such sins as might make them forfeit the grace and favour of God. Wi.—Three things are here to be noticed: 1. that good men do keep all the commandments and justifications of the Lord without blame.

7 And they had no son, for that Elizabeth was barren, and they both were well advanced in years.

8 And it came to pass, that while he executed the priestly office before God, in the order of his course,

9 According to the custom of the priestly office, it was his lot to offer incense, going into the temple of the Lord ;

10 ^a And all the multitude of the people were praying without, at the hour of incense.

11 And there appeared to him an angel of the Lord, standing on the right side of the altar of incense.

12 And Zachary seeing him, was troubled, and fear fell upon him.

13 But the angel said to him : Fear not, Zachary, for thy prayer is heard : and thy wife, Elizabeth, shall bear thee a son, and thou shalt call his name John ;

14 And thou shalt have joy and gladness, and many shall rejoice at his birth.

15 For he shall be great before the Lord : and shall drink no wine, nor strong drink, and he shall be filled with the Holy Ghost, even from his mother's womb :

16 And he shall convert many of the children of Israel to the Lord, their God :

17 And he shall go before him in the spirit and power of Elias : ^b that he may turn the hearts of the fathers to the children, and the incredulous to the wisdom of the just, to prepare for the Lord a perfect people.

^a Exod. xxx. 7 ; Lev. xvi. 17.

18 And Zachary said to the angel : Whereby shall I know this ? for I am an old man, and my wife is advanced in years.

19 And the angel answering, said to him : I am Gabriel, who stand before God : and am sent to speak to thee, and to bring thee these good tidings.

20 And behold, thou shalt be dumb, and shalt not be able to speak until the day wherein these things shall come to pass : because thou hast not believed my words, which shall be fulfilled in their time.

21 And the people were waiting for Zachary : and they wondered that he staid so long in the temple.

22 And when he came out he could not speak to them, and they understood that he had seen a vision in the temple. And he made signs to them, and remained dumb.

23 And it came to pass, after the days of his office were accomplished, that he departed to his own house.

24 And after those days his wife, Elizabeth, conceived, and hid herself five months, saying :

25 Thus hath the Lord dealt with me in the days wherein he hath had regard to take away my reproach among men.

26 And in the sixth month, the angel Gabriel was sent from God into a city of Galilee, called Nazareth, 27 To a virgin espoused to a man whose name was Joseph, of the house of David ; and the name of the virgin was Mary.

^b Mal. iv. 6 ; Matt. xi. 14.

God's commandments, which some moderns declare to be impossible ; 2. that men are justified not by imputation only of Christ's justice, nor by faith alone, but by walking in the commandments ; 3. that keeping and doing the commandments is properly our justification through Jesus Christ.

VER. 9. It was his lot. The priests drew lots for the different functions to be performed in the same week ; and now it fell by lot to Zachary, to burn or offer up incense, morning and evening, in that part of the temple called the holy, where was the altar of incense : Zachary was in this part of the tabernacle. Wi.—See Exod. xxx. 6, 8.

VER. 10. And all the . . . people were praying without ; i. e. in that part of the temple called the court of the Israelites. For the Jews themselves were not permitted to enter into the first part of the tabernacle, called the holy, much less into the second part of it, called the holy of holies : the people then prayed, and performed their private devotions, in that division of the temple called the court of the Israelites, and were there waiting for the coming out of the priest Zachary. Wi.—We here see that the priest's functions profited the people, though they neither heard nor saw the priest, but only joined in intention with him ; and so may the prayers of the priest in the Catholic Church, though offered up in an unknown tongue.

VER. 13. Thy prayer is heard. We cannot suppose, as S. Aug. observes, (l. 2, QQ. Evang. c. 1, tom. 3, part 2, p. 249, ed. Ben.,) that he was praying to have children, when his wife was so advanced in years ; that he did not think possible ; but he was praying for the people, and for the coming of the Messias. See S. Chry. Hom. 2, de Incomprehensibili, tom. 1, p. 454, nov. ed. Ben. Wi.

VER. 14. This was fulfilled not only at his birth, but ever after by the Catholic Church, celebrating his nativity. A.

VER. 15. After the angel had assured him of the joy this son should bring to many, he acquaints him of the excellency of his virtue : he shall be great before the Lord.—And shall drink no wine, nor strong drink ; || lit. sicera, by which is signified any liquor that is apt to make a man drunk, according to S. Jerom. Wi.—This prohibition of the angel was a part of the consecration of the Nazarites. See Num. vi. 3. The word sicera properly signifies wine of the palm-tree ; and, next to wine of the grape, there was no more common liquor, none more intoxicating. V.—And he shall be filled with the Holy Ghost, even from his mother's womb ; from which words some conjecture that S. John the Baptist, though conceived in original sin, yet might have been freed from the guilt of it before he came into the world. Of this see S. Aug. Ep. 57, now Ep. 187, ad Dardanum, t. 2, p. 685, ed. Ben. Wi.

VER. 17. Turn the hearts of the fathers, &c. The angel applies these words (Mal. iv. 6) to S. John the Baptist ; telling his father, that he shall convert many of the children of Israel, &c. by bringing them to the knowledge of Christ. Secondly, that he shall go before him, or be his precursor and forerunner.—In the spirit and power of Elias ; i. e. S. John shall be the forerunner of Christ's first coming to redeem mankind, as Elias shall be the forerunner of Christ's second coming to judge the world. Thirdly, that S. John, by converting the Jews, shall also turn the hearts of the fathers to the children, &c. The meaning of which obscure words seems to be, that, whereas Moses, Abraham, and the prophets, (whose souls were in a place of rest,) knew by a revelation from God, that their children, the Jews, lived in sin and disobedience to the laws of God ; and on this account were offended and displeased at them ; now when they shall know that they have been converted by the preaching of S. John, they shall rejoice, and be reconciled to their children, the Jews : for as our Saviour tells us, (Luke xv. 7,) there is joy in heaven upon any one sinner that doth penance. The angel, to explain the foregoing words, adds, and the incredulous to the wisdom and prudence of the just ; i. e. S. John's preaching shall make them truly wise and just. Wi.

VER. 18. Whereby shall I know this ? Zachary could not question the Divine power, but he doubted of what the angel told him. Wi.—It was customary with the Jews, when they heard that any wonderful event was to take place, to inquire whether the Almighty had manifested his will by any supernatural sign.

VER. 19. The name Gabriel signifies, the strength of God ; or, God is my strength. The angels are sometimes styled by proper names, in order to show their respective duties ; thus, no angel could better be appointed to declare the precursor, as also the Messias himself, than he who was styled the power of God : since he came to declare the coming of one who was to destroy the power of the devil, and overthrow his kingdom. Nic. de Lyra. See Tob. xii. 15 ; Apoc. i. 4, and viii. 2.

VER. 20. On account of the many signs the angel had given, that what he said was true, the unbelief of Zachary seemed inexcusable ; for the angel appeared in a holy place, in the temple, and during divine service : he, moreover, foretold what related to the redemption of all the people, and to the glory of God ; from all which circumstances Zachary ought to have concluded, that it was a good angel, and that what he said would eventually come to pass. Nic. de Lyra.—Shalt be dumb, &c. He seems to have been both dumb and deaf by the Greek text, and by what we may learn from ver. 62 ; where we find that those who were present did not speak, but rather made signs to him. Wi.

VER. 23. After the days of his office were accomplished ; i. e. the weekly ministry : for during that time, the priests lodged in buildings joining to the temple, separated from their wives. Wi.

VER. 27. The word Miriam, or Mary, is expounded by S. Jerom from different etymologies, to signify in Hebrew, star of the sea, and in Chaldaic, lady. Both interpretations admirably well agree with her, who is the glorious Queen of heaven, our patroness, and star, to direct us in the stormy ocean of this world.—“O you,” cries out S. Bernard, “who find yourselves tossed to and fro in this tempestuous life, turn not your eyes away from the brightness of this star, if you would not be overwhelmed in these storms. If the winds of temptations arise ; if you fall among the rocks of tribulation ; look up to the star, call upon Mary. If you are agitated, and hard driven with the surges of pride, ambition, detraction, jealousy, or envy ; look up to the star, call upon Mary. If anger, covetousness, or lust, beat furiously on the vessel of your soul ; look up to the star, call upon Mary. If you are beginning to founder, and are just sinking into the gulf of 28 And the angel being come in, said to her: Hail, full of grace, the Lord is with thee: Blessed art thou among women.

29 And when she had heard, she was troubled at his saying, and thought with herself what manner of salutation this should be.

30 And the angel said to her: Fear not, Mary, for thou hast found grace with God:

31 Behold thou shalt conceive in thy womb, and shalt bring forth a Son, and thou shalt call his name, Jesus.

32 He shall be great, and shall be called the Son of the Most High, and the Lord God shall give unto him the throne of David, his father: and he shall reign in the house of Jacob for ever, 33 And of his kingdom there shall be no end.

34 And Mary said to the angel: How shall this be done, because I know not man?

35 And the angel answering, said to her: The Holy Ghost shall come upon thee, and the power of the Most High shall overshadow thee. And therefore also the Holy which shall be born of thee, shall be called the Son of God.

36 And behold thy cousin, Elizabeth, she hath also conceived a son in her old age: and this is the sixth month with her that is called barren:

37 Because no word shall be impossible with God.

38 And Mary said: Behold the handmaid of the Lord, be it done to me according to thy word. And the angel departed from her.

39 And Mary rising up in those days, went into the mountainous country with haste, into a city of Juda:

a Isa. vii. 14.—b Infra, ii. 21.—c Dan. vii. 14, and 27; Mic. iv. 7.

melancholy and despair; think on Mary. In dangers, in distresses, in perplexities, think on Mary, call on Mary. Let her name be never absent from your mouth; from your mouth let it constantly descend into your heart; and, that you may obtain the suffrage of her prayers, both in life and death, never depart from the example of her pious conversation." S. Bernard. Hom. 2, super Missus est.

VER. 28. Hail, full of grace: § by the greatest share of Divine graces granted to any creature. This translation, approved by the ancient Fathers, agrees with the ancient Syriac and Arabic versions. There was no need therefore to change it into gracious, with Erasmus; into freely beloved, with Beza; into highly favoured, with the Prot. translators. For if the seven deacons (Acts vi. 3) are said to be full of the Holy Ghost, as it is again said of S. Stephen, (Acts vii. 55.) and also of the same S. Stephen, (Acts vi. 8,) that he was full of grace, (as the learned Dr. Wells translates it in his amendments made to the Prot. translation,) why should any one be offended at this salutation given to the blessed mother of God; who would not have been raised to this highest dignity, had not her soul been first prepared for it by the greatest share of Divine graces?—The Lord is with thee, by his interior graces; and now, at this moment, is about to confer upon thee the highest of all dignities, by making thee truly the mother of God. Wi.

VER. 31. It may perhaps in the first instance of reflection appear shocking to our ideas, that a God should dwell in a human body; but does not the sun emit rays into all kinds of places, without any detriment to its purity? How much more would the Sun of justice, assuming a most pure body, formed of the purest blood of the spotless Virgin, not only remain free from every the least stain himself, but even impart additional sanctity to his virgin Mother. S. Thos. Aquinas.

VER. 32. He . . . shall be called: i. e. according to the style of the Scriptures, he shall truly be the Son of God. Wi.

VER. 34. How shall this be done? She only asks about the manner.—Because I know not man. This answer, as S. Aug. takes notice, would have been to no purpose, had she not made a vow to God to live always a virgin. Wi.—Listen to the words of this pure Virgin. The angel tells her she shall conceive; but she insists upon her virginity, holding her purity in higher estimation than the promised dignity. S. Greg. of Nyssa.

VER. 35. The Holy Ghost shall come upon thee, &c. By the Divine power thou shalt bring forth, and yet remain always a pure virgin.—And therefore also the Holy which shall be born of thee, shall be called (shall be) the Son of God. The second person of the ever blessed Trinity, being united to our human nature, remaining unchangeably the same God, and being born of the Virgin Mary; it must needs be true to say — God was born, that God suffered and died for us;

40 And she entered into the house of Zachary, and saluted Elizabeth.

41 And it came to pass, that when Elizabeth heard the salutation of Mary, the infant leaped in her womb: and Elizabeth was filled with the Holy Ghost:

42 And she cried out with a loud voice, and said: Blessed art thou among women, and blessed is the fruit of thy womb.

43 And whence is this to me, that the mother of my Lord should come to me?

44 For behold as soon as the voice of thy salutation sounded in my ears, the infant in my womb leaped for joy.

45 And blessed art thou that hast believed, because those things shall be accomplished that were spoken to thee by the Lord.

46 And Mary said: My soul doth magnify the Lord:

47 And my spirit hath rejoiced in God, my Saviour

48 Because he hath regarded the humility of his handmaid: for behold, from henceforth all generations shall call me blessed.

49 For he that is mighty hath done great things to me: and holy is his name.

50 And his mercy is from generation to generations, to them that fear him.

51 He hath showed might in his arm: he hath scattered the proud in the conceit of their heart.

52 He hath put down the mighty from their seat, and hath exalted the humble.

53 He hath filled the hungry with good things: and the rich he hath sent away empty.

a Isa. li. 9; Psal. lxxxviii. 14.—c 1 Kings ii. 5; Psal. xxxiii. 11.

and consequently that the blessed Virgin Mary was truly the mother of God, or of him that is truly God; though not the mother of the Godhead: as the Catholic Church declared in the Council of Ephesus, (431,) against the heretic Nestorius. Wi.

VER. 36. We find that Aaron, who was of the tribe of Levi, took a wife of the tribe of Juda, viz. Elizabeth, the sister of Naasson. In the successors of David we find that Joiada, the chief priest, took a wife of the family of David, viz. the daughter of Joram; from which it appears that both the royal and sacerdotal tribes were united, and that Mary and Elizabeth were relatives. It was certainly proper that Christ should be born of both these tribes, because he was in himself both king and priest. Ven. Bede.

VER. 39. This city is generally supposed to be Hebron, a sacerdotal town, (Jos. xxi. 11,) situated in the mountains, to the south of Juda, and about 120 miles from Nazareth. V.

VER. 41. *The infant leaped in her womb. According to the general opinion of the interpreters, this motion of the child at this time was not natural: and some think that God gave to S. John, even in his mother's womb, a passing knowledge of the presence of his Redeemer. See S. Aug. in the above-cited letter to Dardanus. Wi.

VER. 43. The mother of my Lord. A proof that Christ was truly God, and the blessed Virgin Mary truly the mother of God. Wi.

VER. 47. In God, my Saviour, as appears by the Greek text,†† though literally in Latin, in God my salvation. Wi.

VER. 48. The humility of his handmaid,†† i. e. the humble, low, and abject condition; as perhaps might be translated both in this and in ver. 52. For the blessed Virgin does not here commend and praise her own virtue of humility; as divers interpreters observe. See S. Francis of Sales, in his Introduction to a Devout Life, part 3, c. 6. Wi.—Not Elizabeth only, but all nations of believers are to call her Blessed. Theophyl.

VER. 51. The wise men of the Gentiles, the Pharisees and Scribes, were powerful; but these the Almighty cast down, and exalted those, who humbled themselves under his powerful hand. 1 Pet. v. The Jews were proud in their strength, but their ineredulity brought on them their humiliation; whilst the low and mean among the Gentiles, have by faith ascended to the summit of perfection. S. Cyril Alex. in S. Thom. catenâ aureâ. Wi.

VER. 53. The Jews were rich in the possession of the law, and the doctrines of the prophets; but, as they would not humbly unite themselves to the incarnate Word, they were sent away empty, without faith, without knowledge, deprived of 54 He hath received Israel, his servant, being mindful of his mercy.

56 And Mary abode with her about three months: and she returned to her own house.

57 Now Elizabeth's full time of being delivered was come, and she brought forth a son.

58 And her neighbours and kinsfolks heard that the Lord hath showed his great mercy towards her, and they congratulated with her.

59 And it came to pass that on the eighth day they came to circumcise the child, and they called him by his father's name, Zachary.

60 And his mother answering, said: Not so, but he shall be called John.

61 And they said to her: There is none of thy kindred that is called by this name.

62 And they made signs to his father, how he would have him called.

63 And demanding a table-book, he wrote, ^bsaying: John is his name. And they all wondered.

64 And immediately his mouth was opened, and his tongue loosed, and he spoke, blessing God.

65 And fear came upon all their neighbours: and all these words were divulged over all the mountainous country of Judea.

66 And all they who had heard them, laid them up in their heart, saying: What a one, think ye, shall this child be? For the hand of the Lord was with him.

69 ^aAnd hath raised up a horn of salvation to us, in the house of David, his servant.

70 ^aAs he spoke by the mouth of his holy prophets, who are from the beginning:

71 Salvation from our enemies, and from the hand of all that hate us:

72 To show mercy to our fathers: and to remember his holy covenant.

73 The oath which he swore to Abraham, our father, that he would grant to us:

74 That being delivered from the hand of our enemies, we may serve him without fear, 75 In holiness and justice before him, all our days.

76 And thou, child, shalt be called the prophet of the Most High: for thou shalt go before the face of the Lord, to prepare his way.

77 ^aTo give knowledge of salvation to his people, unto the remission of their sins.

all hopes of temporal goods, excluded from the terrestrial Jerusalem, and also from that which is in heaven. But the Gentiles, oppressed with hunger and thirst, by adhering to their Lord, were filled with all spiritual gifts. S. Basil in Psal. xxxiii.

VER. 63. As then in circumcision, so now in baptism, names are given. And as we see here, and in all the Old Testament, great respect was had of names, so must we be aware of profane and secular names, and rather, according to the Catechism of the Council of Trent, take names of saints and holy persons, which may put us in mind of their virtues. De Bap. in fine.

VER. 69. As Christ was born of the race of David, he is here called the horn of salvation in the house of David. As Isaias says, A vineyard is planted in the horn, chap. v.—A powerful salvation.||| According to the letter both of the Latin and Greek text, a horn of salvation.

VER. 71. That he would save us, &c. Lit. salvation from our enemies. The construction and sense is, that God, as he had declared by his prophets, would grant us salvation, or would save us. Wi.

VER. 72. To remember his holy covenant, i. e. of his promise, or of the covenant made with Abraham, that he would bless all nations in his seed. Wi.

VER. 73, 74. According to the oath which he swore. §§ The words according to, are no addition to the letter of the text: they only barely express what is here signified; to wit, that God swore to Abraham, that he would grant us, or make it come to pass, that being delivered from our enemies, sin and the devil, we should be in a condition to serve him without fear, in holiness, &c. Wi.

VER. 78. The rising light, || or the rising sun, hath visited us from on high. The Rheims translation hath the Orient, the Prot. the day-spring. Both seem more obscure than they need be. Wi.—The Orient. It is one of the titles of the Messias, the true Light of the world, and the Sun of justice. Ch.—By this he shows that God has forgiven us our sins, not through our merits, but through his own most tender mercy (Theophy.); and that we are to solicit this forgiveness through the bowels of his most tender mercy.

VER. 79. The Gentiles were in darkness, and given to the adoration of idols, till the light arose and dispelled the darkness, spreading on all sides the splendour of truth. S. Basil on Isa.—With reason is it said in this place, who sit in darkness; for we did not walk in darkness, but sat down, as if destitute of all hopes of being delivered. S. Chrys. hom. 14, on S. Matt.

VER. 80. S. John remained in the desert till the thirtieth year of his age. The reason why he concealed himself so long was because he feared the cruelty of Herod; for, though he was not under his jurisdiction, not being on the confines of Bethlehem, yet on account of the remarkable events that took place at his birth, by which he was declared the precursor of the Messias, he had reason to dread the cruelty of the jealous and suspicious Herod. Peter of Alexandria, Nicephorus, Baronius, and others, say, that when he was yet in his mother's arms, he was conveyed into the desert, and there concealed in the caves and fissures of the rocks, where people concealed themselves on the approach of their enemies. Cedrinus adds, that forty days after their flight, the mother of S. John died; after which, an angel is said to have undertaken the care of the Baptist; but most probably this office was performed by some attendant on S. Elizabeth. Tirinus.—The Baptist remained in the desert till he began his public ministry, which by a law of the Jews could not be much before he had attained his thirtieth year. He is styled by antiquity the first hermit. See S. Jerom in Vita Pauli.

But bunilis, and humilitas, in Latin, even in Cicero, is put to signify vilem et abjectam conditionem: and so also ταπεινος, and ταπεινώσις, in Greek, as in the Seventy. 1 Kings i. 11, the Latin Vulgate, for ταπεινώσιν, has afflictionem famulæ tuæ. THE ANNUNCIATION

CHAP. II.

*The birth of Christ his presentation in the temple: Simeon's prophecy.
Christ, at twelve years of age, is found amongst the doctors.*

AND it came to pass, that in those days there went out a decree from Cæsar Augustus, that the whole world should be enrolled.

2 This enrolling was first made by Cyrenus, the governor of Syria.

3 And all went to be enrolled, every one into his own city.

4 And Joseph also went up from Galilee, out of the city of Nazareth, into Judea, to the city of ^aDavid, which is called ^bBethlehem, because he was of the house and family of David,

5 To be enrolled with Mary, his espoused wife, who was with child.

6 And it came to pass, that when they were there, her days were accomplished, that she should be delivered.

7 And she brought forth her first-born son, and wrapped him up in swaddling-clothes, and laid him in a manger: because there was no room for them in the inn.

8 And there were in the same country shepherds, watching, and keeping the night-watches over their flock.

9 And behold an angel of the Lord stood by them, and the brightness of God shone round about them, and they feared with a great fear.

10 And the angel said to them: Fear not: for behold I bring you good tidings of great joy, that shall be to all the people:

11 For this day is born to you a Saviour, who is Christ, the Lord, in the city of David.

12 And this shall be a sign unto you: You shall find the infant wrapped in swaddling-clothes, and laid in a manger.

CHAP. II. VER. 1. By the whole world, is understood the Roman empire. Wi.—This decree was promulgated in the 752nd year of Rome, in the 3970th year of the world, and the 42nd year of the reign of Augustus, when there was universal peace, and the temple of Janus remained shut for 12 years. Jans. Concord. Evan.—It was the custom among the Jews to be numbered according to their tribes and families. Hence arose the necessity of the journey of the Holy Family to Nazareth. This enrolment probably included the number, as well as the property, of each family, that the taxes might be proportioned. Idem ibid.

VER. 2. By Cyrenus, or Publius Sulp. Quirinus. Wi.—This was the first census made by Quirinus, governor of Syria: nine years after the birth of Christ, this same Quirinus was charged to make a second, when Judea was reduced to a Roman province, by the deposition and exile of Archelaus. V.

VER. 3. Into his own city, i. e. the city of every one's family. Now Joseph and Mary, being both of the family of David, were obliged to go to Bethlehem, the city of David, where by Providence, according to the predictions of the prophets, the Messiah was to be born. Wi.—This circumstance, moreover, was a public testimony, to be kept in the archives of the country, of the birth and descent of the Messiah. Augustus only meant to enumerate his subjects, but among them was numbered his God.

VER. 7. In a manger within a stable, or place where beasts were sheltered. And it is the common opinion that an ox and an ass were there at that time. See Baronius, Tillemont, &c. Wi.—O wonderful mystery! O astonishing condescension of a God-man! From his birth he takes upon himself poverty. Had such been his pleasure, Christ might, at his birth, have shaken the heavens by his power, and terrified all nature by his majesty. But these were not the attendants of his coming; for he came not to destroy, but to save; not to display riches, but to teach us a contempt of human grandeur. He therefore condescended not only to become man, but even the vilest of men. Metaphrastes.

VER. 12. On the eastern side of the town of Bethlehem, says S. Justin, S. Jerom, &c., there was a cave cut in the side of a rock, in which was a manger, used by the people of those environs; so that these shepherds easily understood the angel, who told them they should find him laid in a manger. SS. Jer., Greg. Naz., Cyril, say that they found the child between an ox and an ass, according to the version of the Septuagint, Hab. iii. 2, You shall find him laid between two beasts. In the place where this crib was, S. Helen built a magnificent church in honour of the blessed Virgin Mary. Tirinus.

13 And suddenly there was with the angel a multitude of the heavenly host, praising God, and saying:

14 Glory to God in the highest: and on earth, peace to men of good will.

15 And it came to pass, that after the angels departed from them into heaven, the shepherds said one to another. Let us go over to Bethlehem, and let us see this word that is come to pass, which the Lord hath showed to us.

16 And they came with haste: and they found Mary and Joseph, and the infant lying in a manger.

17 And seeing, they understood of the word that had been spoken to them concerning this child.

18 And all they that heard, wondered: and at those things that were told them by the shepherds.

19 But Mary kept all these words, pondering them in her heart.

20 And the shepherds returned, glorifying and praising God, for all the things they had heard, and seen, as it was told unto them.

21 And after eight days were accomplished, that the child should be circumcised: his name was called ^aJesus, which was called by the angel, before he was conceived^b in the womb.

22 And after the days of her purification, ^caccording to the law of Moses, were accomplished, they carried him to Jerusalem, to present him to the Lord.

23 As it is written in the law of the Lord: ^dThat every male opening the womb shall be called holy to the Lord.

24 And to offer a sacrifice, according as it is ^ewritten in the law of the Lord, a pair of turtle-doves, or two young pigeons.

25 And behold there was a man in Jerusalem named Simeon, and this man was just and devout, waiting for ^d Matt. i. 21; Supra, i. 31.—^e Lev. xii. 6.—^f Exod. xiii. 2; Num. viii. 16.—^g Lev. xii. 8.

VER. 14. *And on earth, peace to men of good will. The reason why the will is designated in preference to any other power of the soul, is, because the will moves the rest; consequently the goodness or badness of an action depends chiefly on the will. By this also the angels wished to show, that the peace which Christ came to bring into the world, was the internal peace of our souls, of which the external peace that subsisted under Augustus was a figure. Nic. de Lyra.—Peace is made on earth, since human nature, before an enemy to God, is now reconciled and united to him by his incarnation. Theophy.—In this hymn of the angels, there is a remarkable difference observable in some of the Greek and the Latin copies. The latter have it, according to this text, men of good will; the former, good will among men, or to men. Eὐδοκία, signifies the gratuitous benevolence of God towards man. So that this sentence seems divided into three parts: glory to God, peace on earth, and good will to men. Jans. Cone. Evang.

VER. 15. The Word which always was, let us see how it is made for us; that, which we could not see, when it was the Word, let us see because it is made flesh. Ven. Bede.—See how particularly the Scripture weighs the meaning of every word. The shepherds hastened to see the Word, for when the flesh of the Lord is seen, the Word is seen, which is the Son. S. Amb.

VER. 17. They saw this with the eyes of their body, but with their internal eyes they discovered other wonders, viz. that he, who lay there in such great poverty, was their Messias, their great King, and the Son of God. Barradius.

VER. 19. Mary kept all these things, and compared what was accomplished in her, concerning the Lord, with what had been written of him by the prophets. Ven. Bede.—She considered in her heart the arguments of faith. S. Ambrose.

VER. 21. Should be circumcised; which might be done not only in the temple, or in a synagogue, but in any house. Wi.

VER. 22. Of her purification. The blessed Virgin mother stood not in need of this ceremony, to which she submitted herself, as her Son did to that of circumcision. Wi.

VER. 23. Every male opening the womb.† This translation is more conformable to the doctrine of the Fathers, that Christ was born without opening the womb; which Bede calls the doctrine of the Catholic Church. Wi.—See Exod. xiii. 2, and Num. viii. 16.

VER. 24. This was the offering of the poorer classes.

VER. 25. A man . . . named Simeon, whom some conjecture to have been one of the Jewish priests.—Waiting for the consolation of Israel, for the happy coming the consolation of Israel, and the Holy Ghost was in him.

26 And he had received an answer from the Holy Ghost; that he should not see death, before he had seen the Christ of the Lord.

27 And he came by the Spirit into the temple. And when his parents brought in the child Jesus, to do for him according to the custom of the law;

28 He also took him into his arms, and blessed God, and said:

29 Now thou dost dismiss thy servant, O Lord, according to thy word, in peace:

30 Because my eyes have seen thy salvation,

31 Which thou hast prepared before the face of all people:

32 A light to the revelation of the Gentiles, and the glory of thy people, Israel.

33 And his father and mother were wondering at these things which were spoken concerning him.

34 And Simeon blessed them, and said to Mary, his mother: Behold, this child is set for the ruin, and for the resurrection of many in Israel, and for a sign which shall be contradicted.

35 And thy own soul a sword shall pierce, that out of many hearts thoughts may be revealed.

36 And there was a prophetess, called Anna, the daughter of Phanuel, of the tribe of Aser: she was far advanced in years, and had lived with her husband seven years from her virginity.

37 And she was a widow until fourscore and four years: who departed not from the temple, by fastings and prayers serving night and day.

38 Now she at the same hour coming in, gave praise to the Lord: and spoke of him to all that looked for the redemption of Israel.

* Isa. viii. 14; Rom. ix. 33; 1 Pet. ii. 7.

of the Messias.—And the Holy Ghost was in him, by the spirit of grace and of prophecy. Wi.—The consolation here expected by holy Simeon, was the coming of the Messias, and the consequent redemption of mankind from sin and the devil; not a redemption only, as some carnal Jews thought, from the power of temporal enemies. S. Greg. of Nyssa in Dionys.

VER. 27. And he came by the Spirit, or moved by the Holy Spirit. Wi.

VER. 30. Thy salvation; i. e. the Saviour whom thou hast sent. Wi.

VER. 31. Before the face of all people; not of Israel only, but also as a light to be revealed to the Gentiles, the spiritual children of Abraham: to whom also the promises were made. Wi.

VER. 33. In the Greek, Joseph, and the mother of Jesus. V.

VER. 34. Is set for the ruin. Christ came for the redemption and salvation of all men; but Simeon prophesies what would happen in consequence of the wilful blindness and obstinacy of many. Wi.—Not that God sent his Son for the fall of any man; but that many, by their own perverseness, in wilfully refusing to receive and obey him, would take occasion of falling. Ch.—And for a sign which shall be contradicted, to signify that Christ, and his doctrine, should be as it were a mark, or butt, against whom the Jews should discharge the arrows and darts of their malice. Wi.

VER. 35. And thy own soul a sword shall pierce. These words, which figuratively express the grief of the blessed Virgin mother, when present at the death of her Son, are to be taken by way of a parenthesis.—That out of many hearts thoughts may be revealed: and these are to be joined with what went before; to wit, that child shall be a sign of contradiction, set unto the fall and resurrection of many, that the thoughts of many hearts may be revealed and disclosed; when some shall believe, and others remain in their obstinacy. Wi.—Bede, and most others, understand this of the sharp sorrow, which wounded the soul of the blessed Virgin Mary, at the time of Christ's passion. Barradius.

VER. 36. Anna, a prophetess. She was another witness that Jesus was the Messias, venerable for age, and more for her piety.—And had lived with her husband seven years from her virginity; i. e. had been seven years a wife: and from the death of her husband, had remained always a widow: now eighty-four years of age: who departed not from the temple, but was constantly there at the times of prayer, with fastings and prayers, serving God day and night. Wi.

VER. 40. The child grew, and waxed strong, full of wisdom, and (ver. 52) in-39 And after they had performed all things according to the law of the Lord, they returned into Galilee, to their own city, Nazareth.

40 And the child grew, and waxed strong, full of wisdom, and the grace of God was in him.

41 And his parents went every year to Jerusalem, at the solemn day of the Pasch.

42 And when he was twelve years^a old, they went up to Jerusalem, according to the custom of the feast.

43 And after they had fulfilled the days, when they returned, the child, Jesus, remained in Jerusalem, and his parents knew it not.

44 And thinking that he was in the company, they came a day's journey, and sought him among their kins folks and acquaintance.

45 And not finding him, they returned into Jerusalem seeking him.

46 And it came to pass, that after three days they found him in the temple, sitting in the midst of the doctors, hearing them, and asking them questions.

47 And all, that heard him, were astonished at his wisdom, and his answers.

48 And seeing him, they wondered. And his mother said to him: Son, why hast thou done so to us? behold, thy father and I have sought thee, sorrowing.

49 And he said to them: How is it that you sought me? did you not know, that I must be about the things that are my Father's?

50 And they understood not the word that he spoke unto them.

51 And he went down with them, and came to Nazareth: and was subject to them. And his mother kept all these words in her heart.

52 And Jesus increased in wisdom, and age, and grace with God and men.

^b Exod. xxiii. 15, and xxxiv. 18; Deut. xvi. 1.—A. D. 12. Secundum Vul. 5.

creased in wisdom and age. The Arians, from this, pretend to prove that Christ was not truly God, who cannot advance or increase in wisdom. The true meaning is, that Jesus, as he advanced in age as man, gave greater marks of his Divine wisdom, and discovered himself full of knowledge, wisdom, &c. Wi.

VER. 44. It may be asked how the blessed Virgin and S. Joseph could possibly have come so far without missing him; but we must take notice, that when the people went up to the temple from remote parts of Judea, the men went in one company, and the women in a separate company, whilst the children went in either company indifferently: so that S. Joseph imagined that he was with Mary, his mother, whilst she imagined he was with S. Joseph. Nic. de Lyra.

VER. 49. I must be about the things that are my Father's? By these words he showed, that not S. Joseph, but only God, was his Father. Wi.

VER. 51. Was subject to them. Astonishing humility! which the Son of God was pleased to teach by his example, as also obedience to parents. Wi.

VER. 52. Not that he was wiser at any future period of his life, than he was at the moment of his conception, but this is said, because he chose to manifest increasing signs of wisdom as he increased in years.—In the same manner also he increased in grace, by displaying, as he advanced in age, the gifts of grace with which he was endowed; and by this excited men to the praise of God, from the consideration of favours God had bestowed upon him; and thus he conducted to the honour of God, and the salvation of men. S. Greg.—The sun, always equally brilliant in itself, is said to increase in splendour, till it has reached its meridian brilliancy.

* V. 14. Pax hominibus bonæ voluntatis. The Greek copies, εἰρήνη ἐν ἀνθρώποις εὐδοκίας, hominibus bona voluntas; but the author of the Latin Vulgate must have read, ἀνθρώποις εὐδοκίας, which reading is found in some ancient Greek MSS. in the Alexandrian, that called of Cambridge, and others. The common reading of the ancient Fathers is, bonæ voluntatis, and not bona voluntas, but then some expounded it thus: pax sit hominibus, qui habent bonam voluntatem, scilicet per Dei gratiam. Others thus: sit pax bonæ voluntatis divinæ hominibus; which sense and construction Lucas Brugensis prefers. And what confirms this exposition is, that εὐδοκία, and εὐδοκείν, are commonly applied when the will of God is signified; yet sometimes also εὐδοκία signifies the good will of men, as Phil. i. 25; Rom. x. 1, &c.

CHAP. III.

John's mission and preaching. Christ is baptized by him.

NOW in the fifteenth year* of the reign of Tiberius Cæsar, Pontius Pilate being governor of Judea, and Herod being tetrarch of Galilee, and Philip, his brother, tetrarch of Iturea, and the country of Trachonitis, and Lysanias, tetrarch of Abilina,

2 ^b Under the high priests, Annas and Caiphas: The word of the Lord came to John, the son of Zachary, in the desert.

3 ^c And he came into all the country about the Jordan, preaching the baptism of penance for the remission of sins,

4 As it is written in the book of the words of Isaias, the prophet: "A voice of one crying in the wilderness: Prepare ye the way of the Lord: make his paths straight:

5 Every valley shall be filled: and every mountain and hill shall be brought low: and the crooked shall be made straight, and the rough ways plain:

6 And all flesh shall see the salvation of God.

7 He said, therefore, to the multitudes that came forth to be baptized by him: ^e Ye offspring of vipers, who hath showed you to flee from the wrath to come?

8 Bring forth, therefore, fruits worthy of penance, and do not begin to say: We have Abraham for our father. For I say to you, that God is able of these stones to raise up children to Abraham.

9 For now the axe is laid to the root of the trees. Every tree, therefore, that bringeth not forth good fruit, shall be cut down and cast into the fire.

CHAP. III. VER. 1. Pilate being governor of Judea, lit. procurator; i. e. with a subordination to the president of Syria. Wi.—This was Herod Antipas, son of Herod the Great, mentioned in chap. i. 5.

VER. 2. Under the high priests, Annas and Caiphas. There was properly but one high priest at a time: and Caiphas had this office and title all the ten years that Pilate governed Judea. See Joseph. l. 18, Antiq. c. 3. Wi.

VER. 3. To all who read, it is plain, that S. John not only preached baptism, but likewise conferred it upon many; yet, he could not give baptism to the remission of sins. S. Greg. Hom. 20.—When the victim was not yet immolated, how could they obtain remission of sins? How could S. Luke say, preaching the baptism of penance, to the remission of sins? The ignorant Jews not considering the greatness of their transgressions, S. John came exhorting them to acknowledge their sins, and do penance for them; that being converted, and truly contrite, they might seek after their Redeemer, and thus obtain remission of their offences. S. Chrys. hom. 10, in Matt.—S. John's baptism was only a ceremony or initiation, by which they enrolled themselves as his disciples, to do penance, as a preparation for the remission of sins by means of the second baptism, viz. of Jesus Christ. Jans. Evan. Conc.

VER. 5. Every valley, &c. If these words, in one sense, were a prediction of the deliverance of the Israelites from their captivity, (Isa. xl. 3,) and an admonition to level the roads for those that were to return, they also signified the redemption of mankind from the slavery of sin; and that all obstacles, which retarded this benefit, should be removed, and also that the proud should be depressed, and the humble receive graces. Wi.

VER. 8. It is not sufficient for penitents to forsake their sins, they must also bring forth worthy fruits, according to that of the Psalmist, Decline from evil, and do good, Psal. xxxvi. S. Chrys. hom. 10, on S. Matt.—He does not mean to say that they did not descend from Abraham, but that their descending from Abraham would avail them nothing, unless they kept up the succession of his virtues. S. Chrys. hom. 11 and 12, on S. Matt.

VER. 9. By this example is meant the anger of God, which the Jews raised against themselves by their impiety towards their Messias. The axe is laid to the root of the tree, for the branches are already lopt off; but the tree was not rooted up, for a remnant of Israel shall be saved. S. Cyril. l. 3, on Isa. xl.

VER. 11. He that hath two coats, &c. S. John exhorts them to works of charity towards the poor, by giving what is superfluous. Wi.—Here we are taught that whatever we have more than our own wants require, must be bestowed on those who are in need; for the love of that God, of whom we have received all.

* Basil. in Avar.—Charity to the poor is frequently recommended in Scripture, as 10 And the people asked him, saying: What then shall we do?

11 And he answering, said to them: ^f He that hath two coats, let him give to him that hath none: and he that hath meat, let him do in like manner.

12 And the publicans also came to be baptized, and said to him: Master, what shall we do?

13 But he said to them: Do nothing more than that which is appointed you.

14 And the soldiers also asked him, saying: And what shall we do? And he said to them: Do violence to no man: neither calumniate any man: and be content with your pay.

15 And as people were of opinion, and all were thinking in their hearts of John, that perhaps he might be the Christ:

16 John answered, saying to them all: ^g I indeed baptize you with water: but there shall come one mightier than I, the latchet of whose shoes I am not worthy to loose: ^h he shall baptize you with the Holy Ghost, and with fire:

17 Whose fan is in his hand, and he will purge his floor, and will gather the wheat into his barn, but the chaff he will burn with unquenchable fire.

18 And many other things, exhorting, did he preach to the people.

19 ⁱ But Herod, the tetrarch, when he was reproved by him for Herodias, his brother's wife, and for all the evils which Herod had done, a powerful method of redeeming sin, and reconciling us to Divine mercy. This was Daniel's advice to king Nabuchodonosor, "May my counsel please thee, O king, and do thou redeem thy sins with alms and mercy to the poor." Dan. iv.

VER. 12. The Baptist exhorts worldlings to abstain from every species of fraud, that by first restraining all desires of the good of others, they may at length come to communicate some of their own to their neighbours. Ven. Bede.

VER. 13. Do nothing more. You who are military men, exact no more of the people than what is allowed and appointed you. Wi.

VER. 14. The Baptist knew that such as engage in war, are not murderers, but ministers of the law; not avengers of injuries, but defenders of the public weal. Had he thought otherwise, he would have said, "Cast away your arms, abandon the service, never strike, maim, or destroy any one;" these are not the things which are blameable in the military, but their cruelty, their revenge, their implacable dispositions, and lust of power. S. Austin, l. 22, cont. Faust.

VER. 15. Many reasons might have induced the people to think that John was the Christ: 1. The wonders that took place at his birth and conception, his mother being very old, and without any prospect of offspring; 2. the excellence of his preaching, his mortified life, and the novelty of his baptism; and, 3. the report which then generally prevailed among the Jews, that the Messias was already come; on account of the coming of the magi, and the murder of the infants by Herod: both which circumstances were probably fresh in their memory; and several perhaps, who witnessed them, were still living. Dion. Carth.

VER. 16. See Matt. iii. 11. That baptism cannot be valid, in which the name of the Holy Ghost only is invoked. For, the tradition concerning life-giving grace, must be preserved entire. To add or to omit any thing, may exclude from life everlasting. For, as we believe, so also are we baptized, in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost. S. Basil, l. de Spirit. Sanc. c. 22.—Fire. This is a metaphor, to signify the Holy Ghost and his gifts, particularly the fire of Divine love to the expiation of sins, and is very common in Scripture. Sometimes also he is represented by water, as in S. John iv. 10, et dem., and vii 38, 39; Isa. xlv., &c., &c.

VER. 17. By the barn-floor is here prefigured the Church of Christ, in which many are called, but few are chosen. This perfectly cleansing of the floor, as it is in the Greek, is performed both now, when the wicked, on account of their open crimes, are excluded from the communion of the faithful by the Church; or, on account of their hidden sins, are after death by infinite justice chastised; but most especially at the end of the world, when the Son of man shall send his angels to gather from his kingdom all scandals. Ven. Bede.

VER. 19. See in S. Mark vi. 17. The wife of his brother (Philip). The Greek adds the name, and he is also named in S. Mark; but he is a different person from the tetrarch, mentioned in chap. iii. l. V.—It was not at this time that John was cast into prison; but, as S. John relates, after our Saviour had begun to work miracles, and after his baptism. S. Luke anticipates this event, in order to 20 He added this also above all, and shut up John in prison.

21 *Now it came to pass, when all the people were baptized, that Jesus also being baptized, and praying, heaven was opened :

22 And the Holy Ghost descended in a bodily shape, as a dove, upon him : and a voice came from heaven : 'Thou art my beloved Son, in thee I am well pleased.

23 And Jesus himself was beginning about the age of thirty years : being (as it was supposed) the son of Joseph, who was of Heli, who was of Mathat,

24 Who was of Levi, who was of Melchi, who was of Janne, who was of Joseph,

25 Who was of Mathathias, who was of Amos, who was of Nahum, who was of Hesli, who was of Nagge,

26 Who was of Mahath, who was of Mathathias, who was of Semei, who was of Joseph, who was of Juda,

27 Who was of Joanna, who was of Reza, who was of Zorobabel, who was of Salathiel, who was of Neri,

28 Who was of Melchi, who was of Addi, who was of Cosan, who was of Elmadan, who was of Her,

29 Who was of Jesus, who was of Eliezer, who was of Jorim, who was of Mathat, who was of Levi,

30 Who was of Simeon, who was of Judas, who was of Joseph, who was of Jona, who was of Eliakim,

31 Who was of Melea, who was of Menna, who was of Mathatha, who was of Nathan, who was of David,

32 Who was of Jesse, who was of Obed, who was of Booz, who was of Salmon, who was of Naasson, describe more strongly the malice of Herod ; who, whilst he saw multitudes flocking to hear the words of John, his own soldiers believing, and all the people receiving baptism, still could despise the Baptist, could imprison him, and put him to death. Ven. Bede.

VER. 21. The motive of his baptism, as he himself informs us, was, that he himself might fulfil all justice. What is here meant by justice, but that obligation of doing first ourselves what we wish others to observe? Let no one then refuse the laver of grace, since Christ did not refuse the laver of penance. S. Amb.—Although all our sins are forgiven in baptism, still the frailty of the flesh is not yet perfectly strengthened. For, after passing this red sea, we rejoice at the destruction of the Egyptians, but still we must fight with assurance of the grace of Christ, against the enemies we shall undoubtedly meet with in the desert of this world, till at length we arrive at our true country. Ven. Bede.

VER. 22. The reason why the Holy Ghost showed himself in the shape of a dove, was because he could not be seen in the substance of his Divinity. But why a dove? To express that simplicity acquired in the sacrament of baptism, Be ye simple as doves; to signify that peace bestowed by baptism, and prefigured by the olive branch which the dove carried back to the ark, a true figure of the Church, and which was the only security from the destructive deluge. S. Amb.

Remarks on the two Genealogies of Jesus Christ.

To make some attempt at an elucidation of the present very difficult subject of inquiry, we must carry in our minds, 1. That in the Scripture language the word begat, applies to the remote, as well as the immediate, descendant of the ancestor. This accounts for the omission of several descents in S. Matthew. 2. The word begat, applies not only to the natural offspring, but to the offspring assigned to the ancestor by law. 3. If a man married the daughter and only child of another, he became in the view of the Hebrew law the son of that person, and thus was a son assigned to him by law. The last two positions show in what sense Zorobabel was the son of both Neri and Salathiel, and Joseph the son both of Jacob and of Heli, or Joachim.—“S. Matthew, in descending from Abraham to Joseph, the spouse of the blessed Virgin, speaks of a son properly so called, and by way of generation, Abraham begot Isaac, &c. But S. Luke, in ascending from Jesus to God himself, speaks of a son properly or improperly so called. On this account, he makes use of an indeterminate expression, in saying, the son of Joseph, who was of Heli. That S. Luke does not always speak of a son properly called, and by way of generation, appears from the first and last he names; for Jesus was only the putative son of Joseph, because Joseph was the spouse of Mary, the mother of Christ; and Adam was only the son of God by creation. This being observed, we must acknowledge in the genealogy in S. Luke, two sons improperly so called, that is, two sons-in-law, instead of sons. As among the Hebrews, the women entered not into the genealogy, when a house finished by a daughter, instead of naming the daughter in the genealogy, they named the son-in-law, who had for father-in-law

33 Who was of Aminadab, who was of Aram, who was of Esron, who was of Phares, who was of Judas,

34 Who was of Jacob, who was of Isaac, who was of Abraham, who was of Thare, who was of Nachor,

35 Who was of Sarug, who was of Ragau, who was of Phaleg, who was of Heber, who was of Sale,

36 Who was of Cainan, who was of Arphaxad, who was of Sem, who was of Noe, who was of Lamech,

37 Who was of Mathusale, who was of Henoch, who was of Jared, who was of Malaleel, who was of Cainan, 38 Who was of Henos, who was of Seth, who was of Adam, who was of God.

Christ's fasting, and temptation. He is persecuted in Nazareth : his miracles in Capernaum.

AND Jesus being full of the Holy Ghost, returned from the Jordan : and was led by the spirit into the desert,

2 For the space of forty days, and was tempted by the devil. And he did eat nothing in those days : and when they were ended he was hungry.

3 And the devil said to him : If thou be the Son of God, command this stone that it be made bread.

4 And Jesus answered him : It is written : "That man liveth not by bread alone, but by every word of God.

5 And the devil led him into a high mountain, and showed him all the kingdoms of the world in a moment of time :

6 And he said to him : To thee will I give all this the father of his wife. The two sons-in-law mentioned by S. Luke are Joseph, the son-in-law of Heli, and Salathiel, the son-in-law of Neri. This remark clears up the difficulty. Joseph, the son of Jacob, in S. Matt., was the son-in-law of Heli, in S. Luke; and Salathiel, the son of Jechonias, in S. Matt., was the son-in-law of Neri, in S. Luke. Mary was the daughter of Heli, or Eliachim, or Joachim. Joseph, the son of Jacob, and Mary, the daughter of Heli, had a common origin; both descending from Zorobabel, Joseph by Abiud the eldest, and Mary by Resa, the younger brother. Joseph descended from the royal branch of David, of which Solomon was the chief; and Mary from the other branch, of which Nathan was the chief. By Salathiel, the father of Zorobabel, and son of Jechonias, Joseph and Mary descended from Solomon, the son and heir of David. And by the wife of Salathiel, the mother of Zorobabel, and daughter of Neri, of which Neri Salathiel was the son-in-law, Joseph and Mary descended from Nathan, the other son of David; so that Joseph and Mary re-united in themselves all the blood of David. S. Matt. carries up the genealogy of Jesus to Abraham; this was the promise of the Messias, made to the Jews; S. Luke carries it up to Adam, the promise of the Messias, made to all men."

Whatever the difficulties attending the genealogies may be, it is evident that they arise from our imperfect knowledge of the laws, usages, and idiom of the Jews, from our ignorance of the true method of reconciling the seeming inconsistencies, or from some corruptions that in process of time may possibly have crept into the text. The silence of the enemies of the gospel, both heathen and Jewish, during even the first century, is itself a sufficient proof, that neither inconsistency nor corruption could be then alleged against this part of the evangelical history.

VER. 36. Who was of Cainan. Notwithstanding the veneration due to the Latin Vulgate, which is to be esteemed authentic, Corn. A. Lapide calls it a chronological problem, whether the word Cainan be the true reading, or whether it hath slipped into the text. It is true Cainan is found in the Sept. Gen. x. 24; xi. 14, and 1 Par. i. 18; though, in this last place, A. Lapide says, it is wanting in one edition of the Sept. put out by Sixtus V.: at least it is not read in all those places, neither in the Hebrew nor Latin Vulgate. Some say, that here, in S. Luke's text, is found Cainan, because his citations are conformable to the Sept. Others conjecture that Cainan and Sale were only different names of one and the same person, so that the sense may be, who was of Sale, who is also Cainan. Qui fuit Sale, qui et Cainan. Wi.

CHAP. IV. VER. 2. In collating the present narrative with that of S. Matt., it appears that Jesus Christ was not tempted till the expiration of forty days. V.—Many reasons may be assigned why Christ permitted himself to be tempted. First, To merit for man the grace of overcoming temptations. Secondly, To encourage us under temptations. Thirdly, To teach us not to be cast down with temptations, however grievous they may be, since even Jesus Christ submitted to them. Fourthly, To point out to us the manner in which we ought to behave in time of temptation. D. Dior.

power, and the glory of them: for to me they are delivered, and to whom I will I give them.

7 If thou, therefore, wilt adore before me, all shall be thine.

8 And Jesus answering, said to him: * It is written: Thou shalt adore the Lord, thy God, and him only shalt thou serve.

9 And he brought him to Jerusalem, and set him on a pinnacle of the temple, and said to him: If thou be the Son of God, cast thyself down from hence.

10 * For it is written, that he hath given his angels charge over thee, that they keep thee:

11 And that in their hands they shall bear thee up, lest thou dash thy foot against a stone.

12 And Jesus answering, said to him: It is said: * Thou shalt not tempt the Lord, thy God.

13 * And when all the temptation was ended, the devil departed from him for a time.

14 * And Jesus returned in the power of the Spirit into Galilee, and the fame of him went out through the whole country.

15 And he taught in their synagogues, and was extolled by all.

16 * And he came to Nazareth, where he was brought up, and he went into the synagogue, according to his custom, on the sabbath-day, and he rose up to read.

17 And the book of Isaías, the prophet, was delivered unto him. And as he unfolded the book, he found the place where it was written:

18 * The Spirit of the Lord is upon me: wherefore he hath anointed me, to preach the gospel to the poor he hath sent me, to heal the contrite of heart,

19 To preach deliverance to the captives, and sight to the blind, to set at liberty them that are bruised, to preach the acceptable year of the Lord, and the day of reward.

20 And when he had folded the book, he restored it to the minister, and sat down. And the eyes of all in the synagogue were fixed on him.

21 And he began to say to them: This day is fulfilled this Scripture in your ears.

22 And all gave testimony to him: and they wondered at the words of grace that proceeded from his mouth, and they said: Is not this the son of Joseph?

23 And he said to them: Doubtless you will say to me this similitude: Physician, heal thyself: as great things as we have heard done in Capharnaum, do also here in thy own country.

24 And he said: Amen, I say to you, that no prophet is accepted in his own country.

25 In truth I say to you, there were many widows in the days of Elias, in Israel, when heaven was shut up three years and six months: when there was a great famine throughout all the land:

26 And to none of them was Elias sent, but to a widow at Sarepta of Sidon.

27 * And there were many lepers in Israel in the time of Eliseus, the prophet: and none of them was cleansed but Naaman, the Syrian.

28 And all they in the synagogue, hearing these things, were filled with anger.

29 And they rose up, and thrust him out of the city: and they brought him to the brow of the hill, whereon their city was built, that they might cast him down head long.

30 But he passing through the midst of them, went his way.

31 * And he went down into Capharnaum, a city of Galilee, and there he taught them on the sabbath-days.

32 * And they were astonished at his doctrine: for his word was with power.

33 * And in the synagogue there was a man who had an unclean devil, and he cried out with a loud voice, 34 Saying: Let us alone; what have we to do with thee, Jesus of Nazareth? art thou come to destroy us? I know thee who thou art, the Holy One of God.

35 And Jesus rebuked him, saying: Hold thy peace, and go out of him. And when the devil had thrown him into the midst, he went out of him, and hurt him not at all.

36 And there came fear upon all, and they talked among themselves, saying: What word is this: for with authority and power he commandeth the unclean spirits, and they go out?

VER. 10. We have the devil here again citing Scripture, (Psal. xc. 11,) [read what is given on this subject in note on ver. 6, chap. iv. of S. Matthew's Gospel,] which shows how very dangerous a thing it is to put the Scripture, in the first instance, indiscriminately into every, even the most illiterate, person's hands, without any previous disposition of the mind and heart, by study and prayer. How much more satisfactory must it be to be guided by the Church of God, which Christ has promised to secure against all error, and which he commands all to obey! How much more rational to begin with distributing elementary catechisms, approved by the Catholic Church as conformable to the word of God, and then only opening to them the sacred mystic book, when their minds and hearts are better prepared to avail themselves of the inestimable treasure, and of justly appreciating and exploring the golden lore. If humility be a virtue that renders us most pleasing to God, it is a virtue particularly necessary for the proper understanding of Holy Writ.

VER. 13. For a time, viz. until his Passion, in which he again most grievously tempted him, by the hands of impious persecutors, whom he could not overcome with sensuality, covetousness, or vanity.

VER. 17. As he unfolded the book: and again, (ver. 20,) when he had folded the book. Books at that time were not like ours now-a-days, but were skins or parchments, rolled or folded up. Wi.

VER. 18. By the poor are to be understood the Gentiles; who might truly be called poor, since they possessed neither the knowledge of the true God, nor of the law, nor of the prophets. Origen.

VER. 19. To set at liberty them that are bruised, or oppressed. These words are not in the prophet; but are added by S. Luke, to explain the others.—To preach the acceptable year, as it were the jubilee year, when slaves used to be set at liberty. Wi.

VER. 20. To observe and admire a person that had never learned letters, and who stood up amongst them an experienced teacher. Menochius. See John vii. 15, and Maldonatus.

VER. 21. By this Christ wished to show that he was the Messiah foretold by the prophet Isaías, whom they so anxiously expected: he declares himself to be the person pointed out by the prophet. There seems also to be a secret reprehension in these words of Christ; as if he were to say, Why are you so desirous to behold the Messiah, whom, when he is before your eyes, you will not receive? Why do you seek him in the prophets, when you neither understand the prophets, nor perceive the truth of their predictions, when they are fulfilled before your eyes? Maldonatus.

VER. 23. I see you will object to me this similitude, (παραβολήν), or true saying, applied to such as attended to the concerns of others, and neglected their own. Menochius.

VER. 30. Passing through the midst of them, went his way. Perhaps by making himself on a sudden invisible, or by striking them with blindness, or by changing their minds and hearts, as he pleased. Wi.—All commentators observe on these words, that the evangelist wished to show that Christ worked a miracle on this occasion, and by it proved his Divinity. This is the opinion of SS. Euthymius, Ambrose, and Thomas.

VER. 3d. It is evident that S. Peter was married; but after his call to the 37 And the fame of him was published in every place of the country.

38 And Jesus rising up out of the synagogue, went into Simon's house. ^aAnd Simon's wife's mother was taken with a great fever: and they besought him for her.

39 And standing over her, he commanded the fever: and it left her. And immediately rising, she ministered to them.

40 And when the sun was down, all they that had any sick with divers diseases, brought them to him. But he laying his hands on every one of them, healed them.

41 ^bAnd devils went out of many, crying out and saying: Thou art the Son of God. And he, rebuking them, suffered them not to speak: for they knew that he was Christ.

42 And when it was day, going out, he came into a desert place: and the multitudes sought him, and came to him: and they detained him, that he should not depart from them.

43 And he said to them: I must preach the kingdom of God to other cities also: for therefore am I sent.

44 And he was preaching in the synagogues of Galilee.

apostleship, he left his wife, as S. Jeron writes, in Ep. 43, c. 2, ad Julianum, and l. 1, adv. Jovin. See Matt. xix. 29.

VER. 40. The evangelist mentions this circumstance, because these distressed people did not dare to bring their sick before that time, either through fear of the Pharisees, or violating the sabbath. Origen.

VER. 41. It appears, that when the devil expresses himself thus, it is less through conviction than artifice. He suspected the fact; and to certify the same, he said to him in the desert, if you be the Son of God, change these stones into bread. In the same manner by saying here, you are the Son of God, he wished to give him an occasion of explaining himself on the subject. V.—But Jesus Christ would not accept of the testimony of evil spirits, lest he might be suspected of some intelligence with them, to cause himself to be acknowledged the Son of God. Ibid.

VER. 43. From the apparent good dispositions of these people, we might be induced to think, that if Christ had yielded to their solicitations, and remained with them, he could have drawn all to himself; yet he did not choose to do this, but has left us an example worthy our imitation, in seeking out the perishing and strayed sheep; for by the salvation of one soul, our many sins will be remitted. S. Chrys. in Cat. Græc. Pat. hom. in Matt.

VER. 44. Our Divine Redeemer frequented the Jewish synagogue, to show he was no seducer. If he had inhabited wilds and deserts, it might have been objected to him, that he concealed himself, like an impostor, from the sight of men. S. Chrys. ibid.

CHAP. V. VER. 1. What S. Luke here gives till ver. 10, is mentioned purposely to show on what occasion, and by what miracle, Peter, Andrew, James, and John, were called. Maldon.

VER. 2. Washing their nets. See S. Matt. iv. 18, and S. Mark i. 16, where it is said, that Christ saw them when they were casting their nets; i. e. some of them were casting, others washing, or mending their nets. Wi.

VER. 3. Why is it mentioned that there were two ships; that one of them was Simon Peter's, that Christ went into that one, and sat down in it, and sitting he taught out of that ship? No doubt, answer many of the ancient commentators, to show that the Church was figured by the bark of Peter, and that in it is the chair of Christ, a permanent authority, prefigured by Christ's sitting down, and the true word of God. A.

VER. 4. Επανάγαις εἰς τὸ βάθος. Put back from whence you have just now returned. Where you failed without Christ, with Christ you will prove successful.

VER. 7. The other ship was probably at such a distance from them, that they he desired him to thrust out a little from the land. And sitting down, he taught the multitudes out of the ship.

4 Now when he had ceased to speak, he said to Simon: Launch out into the deep, and let down your nets for a draught.

5 And Simon answering, said to him: Master, we have laboured all the night, and have taken nothing: but at thy word I will let down the net.

6 And when they had done this, they enclosed a very great multitude of fishes, and their net was breaking.

7 And they beckoned to their partners that were in the other ship, that they should come and help them. And they came, and filled both the ships, so that they were almost sinking.

8 Which when Simon Peter saw, he fell down at Jesus's knees, saying: Depart from me, for I am a sinful man, O Lord.

9 For he was wholly astonished, and all that were with him, at the draught of the fishes which they had taken.

10 And so were also James and John, the sons of Zebedee, who were Simon's partners. And Jesus saith to Simon: Fear not; from henceforth thou shalt be taking men.

11 And when they had brought their ships to land, leaving all things, they followed him.

12 ^eAnd it came to pass, when he was in a certain city, behold a man full of the leprosy, who seeing Jesus, and falling on his face, besought him, saying: Lord, if thou wilt, thou canst make me clean.

13 And stretching forth his hand, he touched him, saying: I will: Be thou cleansed. And immediately the leprosy departed from him.

14 And he charged him to tell no man: but, Go, show could not be heard, had they called out to them; and this also is another proof of the greatness of the miracle, that though the other ship was fishing in the same place, though a little removed, they could catch nothing. Maldonatus.—This also shows that Peter was to call in other co-labourers, and that all were to come into Peter's ship. S. Ambrose in Luc.

VER. 8. Such was the excess of S. Peter's humility, that he judged himself unworthy the presence of Christ, and by this rendered himself more worthy. So the centurion, for a similar act of self-debasement, merited to hear from Truth itself, that he was preferred to all Israel. Maldonatus.

VER. 10. Jesus Christ answers the thought of S. Peter, that instead of any loss or evil coming to him, he should, on the contrary, receive a great reward, by being appointed a fisher of men; and, as he had taken so many fishes by the Divine assistance, so he should take in his net innumerable souls, not so much by his own industry, as by the Divine grace and assistance. Maldonatus.

VER. 11. We may suppose that these four apostles, like Andrew, followed Jesus Christ at the first call, but without attaching themselves to him; and that now they attached themselves to him, never to leave him more.

VER. 12. By falling on his face, he showed his humility and modesty, that all men might learn to be ashamed of the stains of their lives; but this, his bashfulness, did not prevent him from confessing his misery; he exposes his wound, he solicits a cure: Lord, if thou wilt, thou canst make me clean. He did not doubt the goodness of the Lord, but in consideration of his own unworthiness, he durst not presume. That confession is full of religion and faith, which places its trust in the will of God. S. Ambrose.

VER. 13. The law forbade lepers to be touched; but he, who is the Lord of the law, dispenses with it. He touches the leper, not because he could not cleanse him without it, but in order to show that he was not subject to the law, nor to fear of any infection. At the touch of Christ, leprosy is dispelled, which before communicated contagion to all that touched it. S. Ambrose.

VER. 14. Because men in sickness generally turn their thoughts towards God, but when they recover, forget him, the leper is commanded to think of God, and return him thanks. Therefore is he sent to the priest, to make his offering, (Lev. xiv. 4,) that, committing himself to the examination of the priest, he might be accounted among the clean. S. Chrys. hom. 26, in Matt.—Jesus Christ seems here to approve of the legal sacrifices, which the Church does not receive; and this he did, because he had not yet established that most holy of all holy sacrifices, the sacrifice of his own body. The figurative sacrifices were not to be abrogated, before that, which they prefigured, was established by the preaching of the apostles and the faith of Christian believers. S. Austin, quest. 2, b. iii., de Quest. Evang.

thyself to the priest, *and offer for thy cleansing according as Moses commanded, for a testimony to them.

15 But the fame of him went abroad the more: and great multitudes came together to hear, and to be healed of their infirmities.

16 And he retired into the desert, and prayed.

17 And it came to pass on a certain day, that he sat teaching. And there were Pharisees and doctors of the law sitting by, that were come out of every town of Galilee, and Judea, and Jerusalem: and the power of the Lord was to heal them.

18 *And behold, men brought in a bed a man who had the palsy: and they sought means to bring him in, and to lay him before him.

19 And when they could not find by what way they might bring him in, because of the multitude, they went up upon the roof, and let him down through the tiles, with his bed, into the midst, before Jesus.

20 And when he saw their faith, he said: Man, thy sins are forgiven thee.

21 And the Scribes and the Pharisees began to think, saying: Who is this who speaketh blasphemies? Who can forgive sins, but God alone?

22 And when Jesus knew their thoughts, answering, he said to them: What is it you think in your hearts?

23 Which is it easier to say? Thy sins are forgiven thee: or to say: Arise, and walk?

24 But that you may know that the Son of man hath power on earth to forgive sins, (he said to the sick of the palsy,) I say to thee: Arise, take up thy bed, and go into thy house.

25 And immediately rising up before them, he took up the bed on which he lay: and he went away into his own house, glorifying God.

26 And all were astonished, and they glorified God. And they were filled with fear, saying: We have seen wonderful things to-day.

27 *And after these things he went forth, and saw a

* Lev. xiv. 4.—b Matt. ix. 2; Mark ii. 3.—c Matt. ix. 9; Mark ii. 14.

VER. 16. Christ did not stand in need of this retirement, since, being God, he was free from every stain, and likewise present in every place. But, by this his conduct, he wished to teach us the time most proper, both for our active employments, and for the more sublime duties of prayer and contemplation. S. Greg. Naz. Orat. 28.—ἦν ὑποχωρῶν, he withdrew after his great prodigies, to avoid the praise of the multitude, and to pray assiduously, and with fresh instance, for the salvation of men.

VER. 17. But the fame of Jesus had now spread far and wide. It was for this reason that it is here said, The Pharisees and doctors of the law came out of every town in Galilee, &c., not indeed through any intention of becoming his disciples, but through a spirit of envy; as they now saw every one leaving them, and following our Saviour. Perhaps also to calumniate him, as we often find them to have done, when they beheld him making converts from them. D. Dion. Carth.

VER. 19. Let us learn from this example, how diligent we should be in procuring spiritual health, both for ourselves and for our friends. A.

VER. 21. How great is the madness of this unbelieving people, who confessing that God alone can forgive sins, will not believe God when he grants pardon. S. Ambrose.

VER. 24. The Son of man . . . on earth. By which act, says S. Cyril, it is clear that the Son of man hath power on earth to remit sins; which he said both for himself and us. For he, as God-man, the Lord of the law, forgiveth sins; and we also have obtained by him that wonderful grace, when he said to his disciples, Whose sins you shall forgive, they are forgiven them. John xx. 23. And how should he not be able to remit sins, who gave others power to do the same? B.

VER. 29. And Levi made him a great feast, to testify his gratitude to Jesus for the favour he had done him. It appears that both S. Mark and S. Luke affect, through consideration for S. Matthew, to designate him here by his less known name of Levi; whereas he designates himself, through humility, in this same circumstance, by his more known appellation of Matthew. See Matt. ix. 9. V.

VER. 33. S. Matt. says, it was S. John's disciples themselves that objected publican, named Levi, sitting at the custom-house. and he said to him: Follow me.

28 And leaving all things, he rose up, and followed him.

29 And Levi made him a great feast in his own house: and there was a great company of publicans, and of others, that were at table with them.

30 *But their Pharisees and Scribes murmured, saying to his disciples: Why do you eat and drink with publicans and sinners?

31 And Jesus answering, said to them: They who are in health need not the physician: but they that are sick.

32 I came not to call the just, but sinners, to penance.

33 And they said to him: *Why do the disciples of John fast often, and make prayers, and the disciples of the Pharisees in like manner: but thine eat and drink.

34 And he said to them: Can you make the children of the bridegroom fast, whilst the bridegroom is with them?

35 But the days will come, when the bridegroom shall be taken away from them; then shall they fast in those days.

36 And he spoke also a similitude to them: That no man putteth a piece from a new garment upon an old garment: otherwise he both rendeth the new, and the piece taken from the new agreeth not with the old.

37 And no man putteth new wine into old bottles: otherwise the new wine will burst the bottles, and it will be spilled, and the bottles will be lost.

38 But new wine must be put into new bottles, and both are preserved.

39 And no man drinking old, hath presently a mind to new: for he saith, The old is better.

CHAP. VI.

Christ excuses his disciples. He cures upon the sabbath-day: chooses the twelve, and makes a sermon to them.

AND 'it came to pass on the second first sabbath, that as he went through the corn-fields, his dis-this to Christ. Most probably both they and the Pharisees endeavoured all they could to press this objection. S. Austin de Cons. Eváng. l. 2, c. 27.—Why do you not fast, as is customary with all that wish to regulate their lives according to the law? The reason why the saints fasted was, that they might, by afflicting their bodies, subdue their passions. Jesus Christ, therefore, had no need of fasting, being God, and of course free from every, the least, disorderly motion of concupiscence. Neither did his attendants stand in need of fasting, for being enriched with his grace, they were strengthened in virtue, without the help of fasting. When, therefore, Christ fasted forty days, he fasted to set an example to carnal men. S. Cyril.—As long as the Spouse is with us, we are in joy, we cannot fast, we cannot mourn. But, when he has been driven away by sin, then we must both fast and weep. Ven. Bede.

CHAP. VI. VER. 1. As this chapter is almost verbally like to the 5th, 7th, and 12th of S. Matthew, and the 3rd of S. Mark, the reader is referred to those for further explanation.—On the second-first sabbath. An obscure passage, on which S. Jeron. says to Nepotianus,* that he had consulted his master, S. Greg. Nazianzen, but in vain. S. Chry. hom. 40, in Matt., takes it for a double feast, or a double rest: by which we may either understand a sabbath and another feast concurring on the same day; or a sabbath and a feast immediately succeeding to each other. Theophylactus says the same; and that then the latter day, on which they were to rest, was called the second-first. Others say, that when the Jews kept their solemn paschal feast for seven days, the last day was called the second-first, because it was kept with equal solemnity as the first day had been. See Maldonatus. Later interpreters have found out other expositions, of which the most plausible seems to be, that by the second-first sabbath may be understood the feast of Pentecost (which also happened when corn was ripe in Palestine). To understand this, we must take notice, that the Jews had three great and solemn feasts: 1st, That of the Pasch, or the great paschal feast, with the seven days of unleavened bread; the 2nd was the great feast of Pentecost; and the 3rd was the feast called of tabernacles. It is supposed then that the paschal feast was ciples plucked the ears of corn, and did eat, rubbing them in their hands.

2 And some of the Pharisees said to them: Why do you that which is not lawful to do on the sabbath-days?

3 And Jesus answering them, said: Have you not read so much as this, what David did, when himself was hungry, and they that were with him:

4 ^aHow he went into the house of God, and took and eat the bread of proposition, and gave to them that were with him, which it is not lawful to eat^b but only for the priests?

5 And he said to them: The Son of man is Lord also of the sabbath.

6 And it came to pass also on another sabbath, that he entered into the synagogue, and taught. ^cAnd there was a man, whose right hand was withered.

7 And the Scribes and Pharisees watched, to see if he would heal on the sabbath: that they might find an accusation against him.

8 But he knew their thoughts: and said to the man who had the withered hand: Arise, and stand forth in the midst. And he rising, stood forth.

9 Then Jesus said to them: I ask you, if it be lawful on the sabbath-days to do good, or to do evil: to save life, or to destroy?

10 And looking round about on them all, he said to the man: Stretch forth thy hand. And he stretched it forth: and his hand was restored.

11 And they were filled with madness, and they talked one with another, what they might do to Jesus.

12 And it came to pass in those days, that he went out into a mountain to pray, and he passed the whole night in the prayer of God.

13 ^dAnd when it was day, he called his disciples: and he chose twelve of them (whom also he named apostles):

14 Simon, whom he surnamed Peter, and Andrew, his brother, James and John, Philip and Bartholomew, 15 Matthew and Thomas, James, the son of Alphaeus, and Simon, who is called Zelotes:

called the first-first sabbath, that Pentecost was called the second-first sabbath, and that of tabernacles the third-first, or great sabbath. Wi.

VER. 13. These twelve Christ chose as individual companions and domestics. To these he committed the charge of founding and governing his Church. He sent them as legates, or ambassadors, (for this is the import of the word apostle), to all the world. Hence their power was more universal than that of bishops, which is confined to their own dioceses or districts. The jurisdiction of the apostles was not limited to place. Tirinus.—This power which Jesus Christ delegated to his apostles, and which was for the benefit and regulation of the universal Church in all future ages, the apostles, in their turn, delegated to their successors in the ministry, with such regulations and limitations as have been judged in the Holy Ghost necessary for the proper government of the spiritual kingdom of God upon earth. And it is the height of presumption to question any ordinations that come to us with the authority of the Catholic Church.

VER. 16. Judas, surnamed Thaddeus in S. Matthew x. 3, and in S. Mark iii. 18. At the head of his epistle he styles himself Judas, brother of James. V.

VER. 20. S. Matt. (v. 3—10) mentions eight beatitudes, S. Luke only four; but S. Luke only gives an abridgment in this place of the discourse, which S. Matt. gives more at length. We are also to remark, that in these four the whole eight are comprised, and that both evangelists place poverty in the first place, because it is the first in rank, and, as it were, the parent of the other virtues; for he who hath forsaken earthly possessions, deserves heavenly ones. Neither can any man reasonably expect eternal life, who is not willing to forsake all in affection, and in effect also, if called upon for the love of Jesus Christ. S. Ambrose.

VER. 24. Jesus Christ having declared how meritorious poverty of spirit was 16 And Jude, the brother of James, and Judas Iscariot, who was the traitor.

17 And coming down with them, he stood in an open plain, and the company of his disciples, and a very great multitude of people from all Judea and Jerusalem, and the sea-coast both of Tyre and Sidon, 18 Who had come to hear him, and to be healed of their diseases. And they that were troubled with unclean spirits, were cured.

19 And all the multitude sought to touch him, for virtue went out from him, and healed all.

20 ^eAnd he lifting up his eyes on his disciples, said: Blessed are ye poor: for yours is the kingdom of God.

21 ^fBlessed are ye that hunger now: for you shall be filled. Blessed are ye that weep now: for you shall laugh.

22 ^gBlessed shall you be when men shall hate you, and when they shall separate you, and shall reproach you, and cast out your name as evil, for the Son of man's sake.

23 Be glad in that day, and rejoice: for behold, your reward is great in heaven. For according to these things did their fathers to the prophets.

24 ^hBut woe to you that are rich: for you have your consolation.

25 ⁱWoe to you that are filled: for you shall hunger. Woe to you that laugh now: for you shall mourn and weep.

26 ^jWoe to you when men shall bless you: for according to these things did their fathers to the false prophets.

27 But I say to you that hear: ^kLove your enemies, do good to them that hate you.

28 Bless them that curse you, and pray for them that calumniate you.

29 And to him that striketh thee on the one cheek, offer also the other. And him that taketh away from thee thy cloak, hinder not to take thy coat also.

30 Give to every one that asketh thee, and of him that taketh away thy goods, ask them not again.

31 And as you would that men should do to you, do you also to them, in like manner.

to eternal life, proceeds to denounce heavy chastisements upon the rich and proud. Idem ibidem.—Although in great riches there are great inducements to sin, yet there are not wanting even in that state great incitements to virtue; neither is this woe aimed against those who abound in affluence; but against "those who abuse that affluence which Providence has bestowed upon them: Non enim census, sed affectus, in criminis est." S. Ambrose.

VER. 25. As before he promised blessings to those that hunger, that weep, that are outcasts for Christ's sake; so here, and in the next verse, he denounces curses to such as are filled, that laugh, and are praised; i. e. to such, as so far seek their beatitude in present enjoyment, as to become indifferent with regard to the good things of the next world. A.

VER. 26. Woe to you when men shall bless you. The ministers of the gospel must not value themselves, when they are applauded by men: for so did the for-fathers of the Jews formerly commend the false prophets, when they flattered the people, and spoke things that were pleasing to them. Wi.

VER. 30. Jesus Christ does not order us never to refuse a petition; but the meaning of his words is, that we are to give what is just and reasonable, what will be neither injurious to yourself nor your family; for what is unjustly asked, may be justly denied. S. Austin, l. 10, c. 40, de Serm. Dom. in Monte.—But in this, the sin we commit is often far from trivial; particularly when to the refusal of a just request we add also reprehensions and complaints. . . . Abraham, in the number of guests he received, had the honour of receiving under his roof even angels. Let us not, therefore, be strict and unfavourable judges in regard of our suffering and distressed neighbours, lest perhaps we ourselves come to be more severely judged. S. Chrys. collected from Hom. 21, in Ep. ad Rom., Hom. 11, in Fo. ad Heb., and Hom. 2, de Lazaro.

32 And if you love them that love you, what thanks have you? for sinners also love those that love them.

33 And if you do good to them who do good to you; what thanks have you? for sinners also do this.

34 *And if you lend to them of whom you hope to receive; what thanks have you? for sinners also lend to sinners, for to receive as much.

35 But love ye your enemies: do good, and lend, hoping for nothing thereby: and your reward shall be great, and you shall be the sons of the Most High: for he is kind to the unthankful, and to the evil.

36 Be ye, therefore, merciful, as your Father also is merciful.

37 ^bJudge not, and you shall not be judged: condemn not, and you shall not be condemned. Forgive, and you shall be forgiven.

38 Give, and it shall be given to you: good measure, and pressed down, and shaken together, and running over, shall they give into your bosom. ^cFor with the same measure that you shall measure, it shall be measured to you again.

39 And he spoke also to them a similitude: Can the blind lead the blind? do they not both fall into the ditch?

40 ^dThe disciple is not above his master: but every one shall be perfect, if he be as his master.

41 *And why seest thou the mote in thy brother's eye, but the beam that is in thy own eye, thou considerest not?

42 Or how canst thou say to thy brother: Brother, let me pull the mote out of thy eye: when thou thyself seest not the beam in thy own eye? Thou hypocrite, cast first the beam out of thy own eye: and then shalt thou see clearly to take out the mote from thy brother's eye.

43 ^eFor there is no good tree that bringeth forth evil fruit: nor an evil tree that bringeth forth good fruit.

44 For every tree is known by its fruit. For men do not gather figs from thorns: Nor from a bramble bush do they gather grapes.

45 A good man, out of the good treasure of his heart, bringeth forth that which is good: and an evil man, out of the evil treasure, bringeth forth that which is evil. For out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh.

46 And why call you me ^fLord, Lord: and do not the things which I say?

CHAP. VII. VER. 1. It was not immediately after he had spoken the preceding words that Christ entered Capharnaum, for in the interim he healed the man afflicted with the leprosy, according as S. Matthew related it in its proper place. S. Austin.

VER. 2. This history, though different in some circumstances from that related by S. Matthew, chap. viii., is most likely a relation of the same event, and the apparent discrepancies may be easily reconciled. S. Matt. says it was the centurion's boy; S. Luke calls him his servant: but in these terms there is no necessary 47 Whosoever cometh to me, and heareth my words, and doth them: I will show you to whom he is like.

48 He is like to a man building a house, who digged deep, and laid the foundation upon a rock. And when a flood came, the stream beat vehemently upon that house, and it could not shake it: for it was founded on a rock.

49 But he that heareth, and doth not: is like to a man building his house upon the earth without a foundation: against which the stream beat vehemently, and immediately it fell: and the ruin of that house was great.

CHAP. VII.

Christ heals the centurion's servant: raises the widow's son to life: answers the messengers sent by John: and absolves the penitent sinner.

AND ^hwhen he had finished all his words in the hearing of the people, he entered into Capharnaum.

2 And the servant of a certain centurion, who was dear to him, was sick, and ready to die.

3 And when he had heard of Jesus, he sent to him the ancients of the Jews, desiring him to come and heal his servant.

4 And when they came to Jesus, they besought him earnestly, saying to him: He is worthy that thou shouldst do this for him.

5 For he loveth our nation: and he hath built us a synagogue.

6 And Jesus went with them. And when he was now not far from the house, the centurion sent his friends to him, saying: ⁱLord, trouble not thyself: for I am not worthy that thou shouldst enter under my roof.

7 Wherefore neither did I think myself worthy to come to thee: but say the word, and my servant shall be healed.

8 For I also am a man subject to authority, having under me soldiers: and I say to one, Go, and he goeth: and to another, Come, and he cometh: and to my servant, Do this, and he doth it.

9 Which when Jesus heard, he marvelled: and turning about to the multitude that followed him, he said: Amen, I say to you, I have not found so great faith, even in Israel.

10 And they who were sent, returning to the house, found the servant whole, who had been sick.

11 And it came to pass, after this, that he went into a city called Naim: and there went with him his disciples, and a great multitude.

contradiction. And whereas the former says the centurion went himself to Christ, S. Luke mentions that he sent the ancients, or senators, of the Jews. Here, as in other places, we may suppose that the former evangelist, for the sake of brevity, attributes to the centurion what was done in his name and with his authority; and through the whole narrative he represents our Saviour answering the centurion as if personally present. Jans. Concord. Evau.

VER. 3. When S. Luke says that the centurion begs of our Lord to come to him, he must not be supposed to contradict S. Matt., who says, that the centurion objected he was not worthy to receive him under his roof. S. Luke seems here to relate the words of the Jews, who most probably would stop the centurion as he was going to Christ, and promise to intercede with our Lord for him. S. Chrysos hom. 27, in Matt.

VER. 9. Our Lord does not speak of the patriarchs, but of the Israelites of his own time, with whose faith he compares and prefers that of the centurion, because they had the assistance of the law and of the prophets; but this man, without any such instruction, willingly believed. Ven. Bede.

VER. 11. Naim is a city of Galilee, about two miles from Mount Thabor. It was by Divine dispensation, that so very great a multitude was present on this occasion, in order to witness this stupendous miracle. Ven. Bede.—The burying places of the Jews were out of the precincts of the city, as well for ^kthe preservation 12 And when he came nigh to the gate of the city, behold a dead man was carried out, the only son of his mother: and she was a widow: and much people of the city was with her.

13 And when the Lord saw her, he had compassion on her, and said to her: Weep not.

14 And he came near and touched the bier. (And they that carried it, stood still.) And he said: Young man, I say to thee, arise.

15 And he that was dead, sat up, and began to speak. And he delivered him to his mother.

16 And there came a fear on them all: and they glorified God, saying: "That a great prophet is risen up among us: and God hath visited his people.

17 And this rumour of him went forth throughout all Judea, and throughout all the country round about.

18 And John's disciples told him of all these things.

19 "And John called to him two of his disciples, and sent them to Jesus, saying: Art thou he who is to come: or expect we another?"

20 And when the men were come to him, they said: John, the Baptist, hath sent us to thee, saying: Art thou he who is to come: or expect we another?"

21 (And in that same hour, he cured many of their diseases, and sores, and of evil spirits, and to many that were blind, he gave sight.)

22 And, answering, he said to them: Go and relate to John what you have heard and seen: "That the blind see, the lame walk, the lepers are made clean, the deaf hear, the dead rise again, to the poor the gospel is preached:

23 And blessed is he, whosoever shall not be scandalized in me.

24 And when the messengers of John were departed, he began to speak to the multitudes concerning John: What went you out into the desert to see? a reed shaken with the wind?

25 But what went you out to see? a man clothed in soft garments? Behold, they that are in costly apparel and live delicately, are in the houses of kings.

of health as decency. Thus Joseph, of Arimathea, had his sepulchre in the rock of Mount Calvary, which was out of the city. TIRIUS.

VER. 12. The evangelist seems to relate this miracle, as if it had happened by mere accident; though, beyond a doubt, Divine Providence disposed all things to increase the splendour of the miracle. Jesus Christ would not raise this young man to life before he was carried out to be buried, that he might meet him near the gates of the city, where the assembly of the people took place. Besides this, there were present, both the multitude that followed Jesus, and the multitude that followed the corpse, to the end that all these might be eye-witnesses to the miracle, and many might praise God, as Ven. Bede remarks.

VER. 14. Here Christ shows that he raised the dead by his own power, and at his own command, I say to thee, arise. This shows that it is the voice of God that speaks; for the dead can hear the voice of him alone, according to S. John: Amen, I say to you, the hour cometh, and now is, when the dead shall hear the voice of the Son of God; and they who hear shall live. S. John v. 25. Maldon.

VER. 16. And there came a fear on them all; i. e. a certain reverential awe and trepidation seized them, and an uncommon degree of astonishment at the Divinity which appeared to them. Menoch.—And they glorified God (ἐδόξασαν): they gave praise and glory to God for thus visiting his people, by sending them the Saviour he had promised them. Polus Synop. Crit.

VER. 20. The men (οἱ ἄνδρες); viz. the two disciples sent by John, who delivered their master's message; but, before Jesus Christ undertook to reply to their question, he performed on the spot various kinds of miracles.

VER. 22. Then addressing himself to these disciples of John, he ordered them to go and relate to their master all they had seen and heard; and to tell him, that he declared all those to be happy, who, strong in faith, should not take occasion to doubt of his Divine power, (the proofs of which they had so recently seen,) from the weakness of his flesh, which he had taken upon himself for the love of man.—

26 But what went you out to see? a prophet? Yea, I say to you, and more than a prophet.

27 "This is he of whom it is written: Behold I send my angel before thy face, who shall prepare thy way before thee.

28 For I say to you: Amongst those that are born of women, there is not a greater prophet than John, the Baptist: but he who is lesser in the kingdom of God, is greater than he.

29 And all the people hearing, and the publicans, justified God, being baptized with the baptism of John.

30 But the Pharisees, and the lawyers, despised the counsel of God against themselves, being not baptized by him.

31 And the Lord said: "Whereunto then shall I liken the men of this generation? and to what are they like?"

32 They are like to children sitting in the market place, and speaking one to another, and saying: We have piped to you, and you have not danced: we have mourned, and you have not wept.

33 "For John, the Baptist, came, neither eating bread, nor drinking wine, and you say: He hath a devil.

34 The Son of man is come eating and drinking, and you say: Behold a man that is a glutton and a drinker of wine, a friend of publicans and sinners.

35 And wisdom is justified by all her children.

36 And one of the Pharisees desired him to eat with him. And being entered into the house of the Pharisee, he sat down to meat.

37 "And behold, a woman in the city, who was a sinner, when she knew that he sat at meat in the Pharisee's house, brought an alabaster-box of ointment:

38 And standing behind at his feet, she began to wash his feet with tears, and wiped them with the hairs of her head, and kissed his feet, and anointed them with the ointment.

39 And the Pharisee, who had invited him, seeing it, spoke within himself, saying: This man, if he were a

Jesus Christ alludes to the known and full testimonies that had been given of him by the prophets. The Lord giveth food to the hungry, the Lord looseth them that are in fetters, the Lord enlighteneth the blind, he lifteth up them that are cast down, and he who does these things, shall reign for ever thy God, O Zion, from generation to generation. Psal. cxlv. S. Ambrose.

VER. 29. Justified God; i. e. feared and worshipped God, as just, merciful, &c. Wi.—There are only two different sets of men, who glorified God for the baptism of John, and these seemed the most remote from works of piety; viz. the ignorant multitude, who scarcely knew the law; and the publicans, who were in general the most avaricious of mortals, and were looked upon as public sinners. If the preaching of the Baptist had such an effect upon these men; what kind of hearts must not the Scribes have had, who, with all the advantage of the knowledge of the law, still refused to believe? Maldon.

VER. 32. Speaking one to another (προσφωνοῦσιν ἀλλήλοις): they seem to have been alternate choirs of youths, answering each other in the above words Menochius.

VER. 36. And one of the Pharisees, by name Simon, as we learn in ver. 40.

VER. 37. A woman in the city, who was a sinner. Some say she had only been of a vain, airy carriage; one that loved to be admired for her beauty and wit; but the common exposition, and more conformable to the text, is, that she had been of a lewd, debauched life and conversation. Wi.—Mary Magdalene.

VER. 38. Jesus Christ was then at table, after the manner of the Orientals, reclined at length on a couch, a little raised from the ground, having his feet turned towards the table, and his feet extended. He had quitted his sandals, according to the custom of the country, before he had laid himself on the couch. V.

VER. 39. The Pharisee was egregiously deceived: 1. In thinking that Christ was ignorant of the character of the woman, when he not only clearly saw the past bad conduct of the woman, but the present unjust thoughts of the Pharisee; 2. In prophet, would know surely who and what kind of woman that is that toucheth him : for she is a sinner.

40 And Jesus answering, said to him : Simon, I have something to say to thee. But he said : Master, say it.

41 A certain creditor had two debtors ; the one owed five hundred pence, and the other fifty.

42 And, whereas they had not wherewith to pay, he forgave them both. Which, therefore, of the two loveth him most ?

43 Simon answering, said : I suppose that he to whom he forgave most. And he said to him : Thou hast judged rightly.

44 And turning to the woman, he said to Simon : Dost thou see this woman ? I entered into thy house, thou gavest me no water for my feet : but she hath washed my feet with tears, and wiped them with her hair.

45 Thou gavest me no kiss : but she, since she came in, hath not ceased to kiss my feet.

46 My head, with oil, thou didst not anoint : but she, with ointment, hath anointed my feet.

47 Wherefore I say to thee : Many sins are forgiven her, because she hath loved much. But to whom less is forgiven, he loveth less.

48 And he said to her : *Thy sins are forgiven thee.

49 And they that sat together at table began to say within themselves : Who is this that forgiveth sins also ?

50 And he said to the woman : Thy faith hath made thee safe : go in peace.

CHAP. VIII.

The parable of the seed. Christ stills the storm at sea : casts out the legion : heals the issue of blood : and raises the daughter of Jairus to life.

AND it came to pass afterwards, that he travelled through the cities and towns, preaching and publishing the gospel of the kingdom of God : and the twelve with him,

2 And certain women who had been healed of evil spirits and infirmities :^b Mary called Magdalene, out of whom seven devils were gone forth, his erroneous inference that Christ could not be a prophet ; for all things are not necessarily revealed by God to his prophets ; 3. By judging of Christ, after his own and the other Pharisees' treatment of sinners ; who, elated with pride, and thinking themselves just, kept all public sinners at a respectful distance ; whereas not those who are well, but such as are sick, need the physician. Menochius.

VER. 47. Many sins are forgiven her, because she hath loved much. In the Scripture an effect sometimes seems attributed to one only cause, when there are divers other concurring dispositions : the sins of this woman, in this verse, are said to be forgiven, because she loved much : but (ver. 50) Christ tells her, thy faith hath made thee safe. In a true conversion are joined faith, hope, love, sorrow, and other pious dispositions. WI.

VER. 50. This is one of those places upon which modern sectaries lay so much stress, in order to prove that faith alone can save us. But if they will attentively consider the different parts of this history, they will easily discover the fallacy of their argument. Because, before Christ spoke these words, thy faith, &c., he had said to Magdalene, many sins are forgiven her, because she hath loved much. Therefore she was justified not so much through her faith, as her charity : still she had faith, or she would not have come to Jesus, to be delivered from her sins. It was therefore her faith, working by charity, that justified her : and this is the doctrine of the Catholic Church. Nevertheless, she had not that faith, which modern sectaries affirm to be necessary for their justification, viz. a belief that they are together, and hastened out of the cities to him, he spoke by a similitude :

5 ^aA sower went out to sow his seed : and as he sowed, some fell by the way-side, and it was trodden down, and the fowls of the air devoured it.

6 And some fell upon a rock : and as soon as it was sprung up, it withered away, because it had no moisture.

7 And some fell among thorns, and the thorns growing up with it, choked it.

8 And some fell upon good ground : and sprung up, and yielded fruit a hundred-fold. Saying these things, he cried out : He that hath ears to hear, let him hear.

9 And his disciples asked him what this parable might be.

10 To whom he said : To you it is given to know the mystery of the kingdom of God : but to the rest in parables : ^athat seeing, they may not see, and hearing, may not understand.

11 Now the parable is this : The seed is the word of God.

12 And they, by the way-side, are they that hear ; then the devil cometh, and taketh the word out of their heart, lest believing, they should be saved.

13 Now they upon the rock : are they who when they hear, receive the word with joy : and these have no roots ; who believe for a while, and in time of temptation, fall away.

14 And that which fell among thorns : are they who have heard, and going their way, are choked with the cares and riches, and pleasures of this life, and yield no fruit.

15 But that on the good ground, are they who in a good and perfect heart, hearing the word, keep it, and bring forth fruit in patience.

16 ^aNow no man that lighteth a candle, covereth it with a vessel, or putteth it under a bed : but setteth it upon a candlestick, that they who come in, may see the light.

17 ^aFor there is not any thing secret, that shall not be made manifest : nor hidden, that shall not be known, and come abroad.

18 Take heed, therefore, how you hear. ^aFor whosoever hath, to him shall be given : and whosoever hath not, already justified, and that their sins are forgiven : this faith the woman here mentioned had not before Christ spoke those words to her ; for it was to obtain the remission of her sins, that she performed so many offices of charity, washing his feet with her tears, &c. But it may be asked, Why then does Christ attribute her salvation to her faith ? The answer is easy, and has often been given, viz. that faith is the beginning of salvation ; for it was her faith that brought her to Christ : for had not the woman believed in him, she never would have come to him to obtain the remission of her sins. Maldonatus.

CHAP. VIII. VER. 2. Mention is made in the Gospels of a woman who was a sinner, (Luke vii.,) of Mary of Bethania, the sister of Lazarus, (John xi, and xii. ; Mark xiv. ; Matt. xxvi.) ; and of Mary Magdalene, who followed Jesus from Galilee, and ministered to him. Many think all this to belong to one and the same person : others think these were three distinct persons. See the arguments on both sides in Alban Butler's Lives of Saints, July 22nd ; and also more at large in the dissertation upon the three Marys, at the conclusion of the harmony in the Bible de Venice.

VER. 16. Our Lord calls himself the lighted candle, placed in the middle of the world. Christ was by nature God, and by dispensation man : and thus, not unlike to a torch placed in the middle of a house, does our Lord, seated in the soul of man, illumine all around him. But by the candlestick is understood the Church, which he illuminates by the refulgent rays of his Divine word. S. Maximus.

that also which he thinketh he hath, shall be taken away from him.

19 ^aAnd his mother and brethren came to him, and they could not come at him for the crowd.

20 And it was told him: Thy mother and thy brethren stand without, desiring to see thee.

21 And he answered, and said to them: My mother and my brethren are they, who hear the word of God, and do it.

22 ^bAnd it came to pass on a certain day, that he went into a little ship with his disciples, and he said to them: Let us go over to the other side of the lake. And they launched forth.

23 And when they were sailing, he slept: and there came down a storm of wind on the lake, and they were filled, and were in danger.

24 And they came and awaked him, saying: Master, we perish. But he arising, rebuked the wind, and the raging of the water: and it ceased, and there was a calm.

25 And he said to them: Where is your faith? And they being afraid, wondered, saying one to another: Who is this (think you): that he commandeth both the winds and the sea, and they obey him?

26 And they sailed to the country of the Gerasens, which is over against Galilee.

27 And when he was come forth to the land, there met him a certain man who had a devil now for a long time, and he wore no clothes, neither did he abide in a house, but in the tombs.

28 And when he saw Jesus, he fell down before him: and crying out with a loud voice, he said: What have I to do with thee, Jesus, Son of the most high God? I beseech thee, do not torment me.

29 For he commanded the unclean spirit to go out of the man. For many times it seized him, and he was bound with chains, and kept in fetters: and he broke the bonds, and was driven by the devil into the deserts.

30 And Jesus asked him, saying: What is thy name? But he said: Legion: because many devils were entered into him.

31 And they besought him that he would not command them to go into the deep.

32 And there was there a herd of many swine feeding on the mountain: and they besought him that he would suffer them to enter into them. And he suffered them.

33 The devils, therefore, went out of the man, and entered into the swine: and the herd run violently down a steep place into the lake, and were stifled.

34 Which, when they that fed them, saw done, they fled away, and told it in the city and in the villages.

35 And they went out to see what was done: and they came to Jesus, and found the man, out of whom the devils had departed, sitting at his feet, clothed, and of a sound mind, and they were afraid.

36 And they also that had seen it told them, how he had been healed from the legion.

37 And all the multitude of the country of the Gerasens besought him to depart from them: for they were taken with great fear. And he went up into the ship and returned back again.

38 Now the man, out of whom the devils were departed, besought him that he might be with him. But Jesus sent him away, saying:

39 Return to thy house, and tell how great things God hath done to thee. And he went through the whole city, publishing how great things Jesus had done to him.

40 And it came to pass, that when Jesus was returned, the multitude received him. For they were all waiting for him.

41 ^cAnd behold there came a man whose name was Jairus, and he was a ruler of the synagogue: and he fell down at the feet of Jesus, beseeching him that he would come into his house, 42 For he had an only daughter, almost twelve years old, and she was dying. And it happened, as he went, that he was thronged by the multitudes.

43 And there was a certain woman having an issue of blood twelve years, who had bestowed all her substance on physicians, and could not be healed by any:

44 She came behind him, and touched the hem of his garment: and immediately her issue of blood stopped.

45 And Jesus said: Who is it that touched me? And when all denied, Peter, and they that were with him, said: Master, the multitudes throng thee, and press thee, and dost thou say: Who touched me?

46 And Jesus said: Somebody hath touched me: for I know that virtue is gone out from me.

47 And the woman seeing, that she was not hid, came trembling, and fell down before his feet: and declared, before all the people, for what cause she had touched him, and how she was immediately healed.

VER. 25. VER. 30. He did not put the question through ignorance of his name, but that his answer might show forth the Divine power in a more glorious manner; as also for our instruction, that knowing the great number of our invisible enemies, we might work out our salvation with fear and trembling, placing all our confidence in God. VER. 32. If, says S. Athanasius, the infernal spirits have no power over such impure beasts as swine, with much greater reason then are they deprived of power over man, who is made after God's own image, and redeemed by the blood of his Son, Christ Jesus. We should therefore fear only God, and despise the devil. In Vit. S. Ant.

48 But he said to her : Daughter, thy faith hath made thee whole : go in peace.

49 While he was yet speaking, there cometh one to the ruler of the synagogue, saying to him : Thy daughter is dead, trouble him not.

50 But Jesus hearing this word, answered the father of the maid : Fear not, believe only, and she shall be safe.

51 And when he was come to the house, he suffered no man to go with him, but Peter, and James, and John, and the father and mother of the maiden.

52 And all wept and mourned for her. But he said : Weep not ; the maid is not dead, but sleepeth.

53 And they laughed at him, knowing that she was dead.

54 But he taking her by the hand cried out, saying : Maid, arise.

55 And her spirit returned, and she rose immediately. And he bade them give her to eat.

56 And her parents were astonished, whom he charged not to tell any one what had been done.

CHAP. IX.

Christ sends forth his apostles : feeds five thousand with five loaves . is transfigured : and casts out a devil.

THEN^a having called together the twelve apostles, he gave them power, and authority over all devils, and to cure diseases.

2 And he sent them to preach the kingdom of God, and to heal the sick.

3 ^bAnd he said to them : Take nothing for your journey, neither staff, nor scrip, nor bread, nor money, neither have two coats.

4 And whatsoever house you shall enter into, abide there, and depart not from thence.

5 And whosoever will not receive you : ^cwhen ye go out of that city, shake off even the dust of your feet for a testimony against them.

6 And going out, they went about through the towns preaching the gospel, and healing every where.

7 ^dNow Herod, the tetrarch, heard of all that was done by him ; and he was in a doubt, because it was said

8 By some : That John was risen from the dead : but by some others : that Elias had appeared . and by others : that one of the ancient prophets was risen.

VER. 4. And depart* not from thence. In the ordinary Greek copies we find, and depart from thence. The sense appears, by the other evangelists, (Matt. x. 11, and Mark vi. 10,) that Christ gave this admonition to his disciples, not to change their lodging from house to house ; but while they staid in a town, to remain in the same house. And though the negative be here omitted in the Greek, interpreters bring it to the same, by telling us that the sense is, stay here, and depart from thence ; i. e. stay in that house, so that leaving the town, you may depart from the same house. they had done : and having taken them, he retired apart into a desert place, which belongeth to Bethsaida.

11 Which, when the people knew, they followed him : and he received them, and spoke to them of the kingdom of God, and healed them who had need of healing.

12 Now the day began to decline. And the twelve came and said to him : *Send away the multitude, that going into the towns and villages round about, they may lodge and get victuals : for we are here in a desert place.

13 But he said to them : Give you them to eat. And they said : 'We have no more than five loaves and two fishes : unless we should go and buy food for all the multitude.

14 Now they were about five thousand men. And he said to his disciples : Make them sit down by fifties in a company.

15 And they did so : and made them all sit down.

16 And taking the five loaves, and the two fishes, he looked up to heaven, and blessed them : and he broke, and distributed to his disciples, to set before the multitude.

17 And they did all eat, and were filled. And there were taken up of fragments, that remained to them, twelve baskets.

18 ^eAnd it came to pass, as he was alone praying, his disciples also were with him : and he asked them, saying : Who do the people say that I am ?

19 But they answered, and said : John the Baptist : but some say Elias ; and others say, that one of the former prophets is risen again.

20 And he said to them : But who do you say that I am ? Simon Peter answering, said : The Christ of God.

21 But he strictly charging them, commanded they should tell this to no man, 22 Saying : ^hThe Son of man must suffer many things and be rejected by the ancients, and chief priests, and Scribes, and be killed, and rise again the third day.

23 ⁱAnd he said to all : If any man will come after me, let him deny himself and take up his cross daily, and follow me.

24 ^kFor whosoever will save his life, shall lose it : for he that shall lose his life for my sake, shall save it.

25 For what doth it profit a man if he gain the whole world, and lose himself, and cast away himself ?

26 ^lFor whosoever shall be ashamed of me, and of my words ; of him shall the Son of man be ashamed, when he shall come in his majesty, and of his Father's, and of the holy angels.

VER. 8. Risen from the dead. Herod was perplexed and in suspense about the report that it was John that was risen from the dead. . . . From this it appears, that some of the Jews, and Herod himself, believed in some kind of metempsychosis, or transmigration of souls.—Most of the Jews believed the true doctrine of a resurrection, viz. that of the body ; which must one day be renewed to life by the same soul which now animates it : and this is the doctrine of faith and of the Church, which she teaches from both the Old and New Testament, instead of that transmigration of souls, which has no foundation or appearance of truth. It is probable that this error was widely diffused among the Jews in our Saviour's time. It was a doctrine suited to the taste of the Orientals. Some think they can see traces of it in the history of Elias. That prophet being taken away, and the Jews seeing Eliseus perform the same miracles, said, that the spirit of Elias had rested on him. here that shall not taste death, till they see the kingdom of God.

28 *And it came to pass about eight days after these words, that he took Peter, and James, and John, and went up into a mountain to pray.

29 And whilst he prayed, the appearance of his countenance was altered: and his raiment became white and shining.

30 And behold two men were talking with him. And they were Moses and Elias, 31 Appearing in majesty: and they spoke of his decease, which he was to accomplish in Jerusalem.

32 But Peter, and they that were with him, were heavy with sleep. And awaking, they saw his majesty, and the two men that stood with him.

33 And it came to pass, that as they were departing from him, Peter said to Jesus: Master, it is good for us to be here: and let us make three tabernacles, one for thee, and one for Moses, and one for Elias: not knowing what he said.

34 And as he spoke these things, there came a cloud, and overshadowed them: and they were afraid, when they entered into the cloud.

35 And a voice came out of the cloud, saying: ^bThis is my beloved Son, hear him.

36 And whilst the voice was uttered, Jesus was found alone. And they held their peace, and told no man in those days any of these things which they had seen.

37 And it came to pass, that on the day following, when they came down from the mountain, there met him a great multitude.

38 ^cAnd behold a man, among the crowd, cried out, saying: Master, I beseech thee, look upon my son, for he is the only one I have.

39 And lo, a spirit seizeth him, and he suddenly crieth out, and he throweth him down, and teareth him so that he foameth, and bruising him hardly, departeth from him:

40 And I desired thy disciples to cast him out, and they could not.

VER. 30. And behold two men. Moses and Elias, by ministering to our Lord in his glory, showed him to be the Lord of both Old and New Testament. The disciples also, upon seeing the glory of their fellow-creatures, would be filled with admiration at the condescension of their Divine Master; and considering the delights of future happiness, be stirred up to a holy emulation of those who had laboured before them, and be fortified in their ensuing conflicts; for nothing so much lightens the present labour, as the consideration of the future recompence. Thou wouldst never have obtained the keys of the kingdom of heaven, and the reign of death would not have been destroyed. Damasus, Orat. de Transfigur. Domini.

VER. 35. And a voice, &c. This is the voice of the Father from the cloud, as if he should say, "I call him not one of my sons, but my true and natural Son, to the resemblance of whom all others are adopted." S. Cyril.

VER. 45. They understood not this word. They understood well enough what was meant by being delivered into the hands of his enemies, and being put to death; but they could not comprehend how Jesus Christ, whom they knew to be the Messiah, and the Son of God, and whom they believed to be immortal, and eternal, could suffer death, or affronts and outrages from men. These ideas seemed incompatible; they perceived in them some mystery, which they could not penetrate. Calmet.

VER. 49. We forbade him. S. John having the most love for his Lord, and being particularly beloved by him, thought all were to be excluded from these gifts who were not obedient to his Divine Master. S. Aug.—But we must remem-

41 And Jesus answering, said: O faithless and perverse generation, how long shall I be with you, and suffer you? Bring thy son hither.

42 And as he was coming near, the devil threw him down and tore him.

43 And Jesus rebuked the unclean spirit, and cured the boy, and restored him to his father.

44 And all were astonished at the mighty power of God: but while they all wondered at all the things he did, he said to his disciples: Lay you up in your hearts these words: for it shall come to pass, that the Son of man shall be delivered into the hands of men.

45 But they understood not this word, and it was hid from them, so that they perceived it not. And they were afraid to ask him concerning this word.

46 ^dAnd there entered a thought into them, which of them should be greater.

47 But Jesus seeing the thoughts of their heart, took a child, and set him by him, 48 And said to them: Whosoever shall receive this child in my name, receiveth me: and whosoever shall receive me, receiveth him that sent me. For he that is the least among you all, he is the greatest.

49 And John answering, said: Master, we saw one casting out devils in thy name, and we forbade him, because he followeth not with us.

50 And Jesus said to him: Forbid him not: for he that is not against you, is for you.

51 And it came to pass when the days of his assumption were accomplishing, that he stedfastly set his face to go to Jerusalem.

52 And he sent messengers before his face: and going, they entered into a city of the Samaritans to prepare for him.

53 And they received him not, because his face was of one going into Jerusalem.

54 And when his disciples, James and John, had seen this, they said: Lord, wilt thou that we command fire to come down from heaven and consume them?

ber, that not the minister is the author of these miracles, but the grace which is in him, who performs these wonders by virtue of the power of Christ. S. Cyril.

VER. 51. The days of his assumption, i. e. of his ascension into heaven. See the same Greek word, Mark xvi. 19, and Acts i. 11.—He stedfastly set his face to go to Jerusalem, or literally, he fixed † his countenance to go up to Jerusalem.—And (ver. 53) because his face was of one going into Jerusalem. These expressions come from the style of the Hebrews. See 4 Kings xii. 17; Jer. xlii. 15, Ezec. iv. 3. The sense is, that the Samaritans perceived that he and his company were going up to adore in Jerusalem, at which they were displeased, having an antipathy against the Jews and their temple. Wi.—It is not here said, as some interpreters have believed, that this journey to Jerusalem was the last of his life, in which he was crucified. It appears from the context, that there were still many months before the death of Christ, and that this journey was probably for the feast of Pentecost. But that year was the last of the life of Jesus Christ; and he already knew the dispositions of the Jews, and what was to befall him shortly.

VER. 52. Messengers, &c. S. Jerom believes that Christ sent true angels before him to announce his coming. The Greek word ἀγγελος, generally signifies an angel; but it likewise means a messenger. Most interpreters believe he sent James and John, to prepare what was necessary for provisions and lodging. This precaution was necessary, as he was always followed by great crowds. The history, from ver. 51 to the end of the chapter, is mentioned by none of the evangelists, except S. Luke. Calmet.

VER. 54. Wilt thou that we command fire, &c. In the Greek is added, as Elias did. These words might be first in the margin, and thence by transcribers taken into the text. The two apostles, called the sons of thunder, knew their Master was greater than Elias; and therefore they are for calling for fire from heaven, as he had done. Wi.—It was probably this trait in the life of James and John, which gained them the name of Boanerges, the sons of thunder. Their 55 And turning, he rebuked them, saying : You know not of what spirit you are.

56 *The Son of man came not to destroy souls, but to save. And they went into another town.

57 And it came to pass as they walked in the way, that a certain man said to him : I will follow thee whithersoever thou goest.

58 *Jesus said to him : The foxes have holes, and the birds of the air, nests ; but the Son of man hath not where to lay his head.

59 But he said to another : Follow me. And he said : Lord, suffer me first to go, and to bury my father.

60 And Jesus said to him : Let the dead bury their dead : but go thou, and preach the kingdom of God.

61 And another said : I will follow thee, Lord, but let me first take my leave of them that are at my house.

62 Jesus said to him : No man putting his hand to the plough, and looking back, is fit for the kingdom of God.

AND after these things the Lord appointed also other seventy-two : and he sent them two and two before his face, and into every city and place, whither he himself was to come.

great zeal for the glory of Jesus Christ, and the spirit of revenge, of which they were not yet healed, caused them to make this petition ; which seemed in some manner justified by the example of Elias. 4th book of Kings, chap. i. 10. Many editions have the addition of these words, as Elias did. Calmet.

VER. 55. You know not of what spirit you are, i. e. that my Spirit, which you ought to follow, is the Spirit of mercy, mildness, and patience. Wi.

VER. 57. Follow thee, &c. Although the Sovereign Lord of all is most munificent, yet he does not lavish his gifts on all without distinction, but bestows them on the worthy only. When, therefore, this man offered to follow Christ, he answers him by telling him, that all who follow him, must daily take up their cross, and renounce the conveniences of this life. Thus he mentions what was reprehensible in this person. S. Cyril in Divo Thoma.

CHAP. X. VER. 1. Other seventy-two. Most Greek copies, and the Syriac version, have seventy, as in the Prot. translation. Yet there seems no doubt but the true number was seventy-two. For seventy-two may be called seventy ; but had they been only seventy, they could never have been called seventy-two. This was also the exact number of the judges chosen to assist Moses (Exod. xxiv. 1) ; though called also seventy, (Num. xi. 16,) as it is evident, because there were six chosen out of every one of the twelve tribes—Two and two, that one might be a help and comfort to the other ; as also a witness of the carriage and behaviour of his companion. Wi.

VER. 4. As Moses formerly chose twelve elders as princes and fathers of the twelve tribes of Israel, and afterwards gave to each of these elders six others, to 10 But into whatsoever city you enter, and they receive you not, going forth into the streets thereof, say :

11 *E'en the very dust of your city that cleaveth to us, we wipe off against you : yet know this that the kingdom of God is at hand.

12 I say to you, it shall be more tolerable at that day for Sodom, than for that city.

13 *Woe to thee, Corozain, woe to thee, Bethsaida : for if in Tyre and Sidon had been wrought the mighty works, that have been wrought in you, they would have done penance long ago, sitting in sackcloth and ashes.

assist them in the arduous work of governing the people, so our Divine Saviour chose twelve apostles to govern his Church. He likewise afterwards gave six disciples to each apostle, which makes seventy-two, to serve as priests, and assist in governing the Church. Tirinus.—Salute no man, i. e. go forwards promptly, and do not stay to amuse yourselves with vain compliments and useless civilities towards those whom you meet. This was a proverb. Calmet.

VER. 15. And thou, Capharnaum, &c. Capharnaum is situated on the western coast of the sea of Tiberias. Christ having left Nazareth, made the former city the usual place of his abode. There was no city in which he had preached so much, or wrought so many miracles. On this account, he said it was exalted to the heavens ; but for its incredulity he threatens it shall be cast even unto hell. Calmet.

VER. 18. I saw satan as lightning, &c. Many expound it in this manner : I, who am from eternity, saw satan with all the rebellious angels, as glorious as they were, fall from heaven ; fear then, and tremble, though you have received such favours from God. Others take it in this sense, that Christ, by his incarnation, hath seen the power of the devils lessened and confounded, according to what he also said, (John xii. 31,) Now shall the prince of this world be cast out. Wi.—What connexion have these words with what goes before ? Some understand them thus : the reign of the devil is near at an end ; this prince of darkness is going to be overturned ; he will fall from the air, where he reigns, with the same precipitation as lightning, which cuts the clouds and presently disappears. It is almost the same thing he says in other places. "The prince of this world is already judged ; behold now is the judgment of this world ; behold now the prince of this world shall be cast forth ! When I sent you to preach the gospel to the poor, I saw satan fall ; I saw his empire overturned. The last effort which this empire of darkness shall make, is the death of our Saviour, as he himself says : This is your hour, and the power of darkness. Since his resurrection he has bound the dragon in the abyss for a thousand years ; he has shut up the entrance, and sealed it with his seal." Apoc. xii. 9 ; xx. 2. Others think that Jesus speaks here of the fall of Lucifer, at the beginning of the creation. Wishing to give his disciples a lesson of humility, on account of the vain complacency which he saw they took in the miracles they wrought, he says to them, Beware of pride, that precipitated the first angel from heaven : I have seen him in the glory with which he was surrounded, and I have seen him hurried into the abyss. Fear, lest the same should happen to you. The former explanation appears to us more simple and literal. Calmet.

pents, and scorpions, and upon all the power of the enemy: and nothing shall hurt you.

20 But yet rejoice not in this, that spirits are subject unto you: but rejoice in this, that your names are written in heaven.

21 ^aIn that same hour he rejoiced in the Holy Ghost, and said: I give thanks to thee, O Father, Lord of heaven and earth, that thou hast hid these things from the wise and prudent, and hast revealed them to little ones. Yea, Father: because so it hath pleased thee.

22 All things are delivered to me by my Father: and no one knoweth who the Son is, but the Father: and who the Father is, but the Son, and to whom the Son will reveal him.

23 And turning to his disciples, he said: ^bBlessed are the eyes that see the things which you see.

24 For I say to you, that many prophets and kings have desired to see the things that you see, and have not seen them; and to hear the things that you hear, and have not heard them.

25 ^cAnd behold a certain lawyer stood up, tempting him, and saying: Master, what must I do to possess eternal life?

26 But he said to him: What is written in the law? how readest thou?

27 He answering, said: ^dThou shalt love the Lord, thy God, with thy whole heart, and with thy whole soul, and with all thy strength, and with all thy mind: and thy neighbour as thyself.

28 And he said to him: Thou hast answered right: this do, and thou shalt live.

29 But he, willing to justify himself, said to Jesus: And who is my neighbour?

30 And Jesus answering, said: A certain man went down from Jerusalem to Jericho, and fell among robbers, who also stripped him, and having wounded him, went away leaving him half dead.

31 And it happened that a certain priest went down the same way, and seeing him, he passed by.

32 In like manner, also, a Levite, when he was near the place and saw him, passed by.

33 But a certain Samaritan being on his journey,

VER. 25. Eternal life. The law of Moses does not expressly promise eternal life to the observers of it, but confines its promises to temporal blessings during this life. Still we always find that the Jews hoped in another life after this. This opinion is clearly observable in the books of Scripture, written both before and after the captivity, and in Josephus and Philo. Calmet.

VER. 30. A certain man, &c. This some would have to be a history: others rather judge it spoken by way of parable, to teach us to perform offices of charity towards all men without exception. Wi.—Were we to adhere to the mere words of this parable, it would seem to follow, that only those who do us good were to be esteemed our neighbours; for the context seems to intimate, that the Levite and the priest were not neighbours to the man who fell among the robbers, because they did not assist him. But according to the opinion of most Fathers, the intent of this parable is to show, that every person who has need of our assistance is our neighbour. Maldonatus.

VER. 40. Calvin here ridicules the professors of evangelical poverty, because they gather from this place that there are two states of life, viz. the active and the contemplative, figured by Martha and Mary. But what will he answer, when he is informed that this is the opinion not merely of monks, but even of a S. Austin, (Serm. 27, De Verbis Domini,) of a S. Jerom, (Com. 3 cap.,) of Jeremiah, of a S. Greg., and many others? Not that they were ignorant that there was another more natural explanation; but they were of opinion that nothing could be found more proper for the illustration of these different states of life. Maldonatus.

VER. 42. One thing is necessary. Some think that Christ's meaning was, came near him: and seeing him, was moved with compassion;

34 And going up to him, bound up his wounds, pouring in oil and wine: and setting him upon his own beast, brought him to an inn, and took care of him.

35 And the next day he took out two-pence, and gave them to the host, and said: Take care of him; and whatsoever thou shalt spend over and above, I at my return will repay thee.

36 Which of these three, in thy opinion, was neighbour to him that fell among the robbers?

37 But he said: He that showed mercy to him. And Jesus said to him: Go, and do thou in like manner.

38 Now it came to pass as they went, that he entered into a certain town: and a certain woman, named Martha, received him into her house:

39 And she had a sister, called Mary, who sitting also at the Lord's feet, heard his word.

40 But Martha was busy about much serving: who stood, and said: Lord, hast thou no care that my sister hath left me alone to serve? speak to her, therefore, that she help me.

41 And the Lord answering, said to her: Martha, Martha, thou art careful, and art troubled about many things.

42 But one thing is necessary. Mary hath chosen the best part, which shall not be taken away from her.

He teaches his disciples to pray. Casts out a dumb devil. Confutes the Pharisees: and pronounces woes against them for their hypocrisy.

AND it came to pass, that as he was praying in a certain place, when he ceased, one of his disciples said to him: Lord, teach us to pray, as John also taught his disciples.

2 And he said to them: When you pray, say: ^aFather, hallowed be thy name. Thy kingdom come.

3 Give us this day our daily bread.

that Martha was preparing many dishes, when one was sufficient. But others, that this one thing necessary, was to learn, and comply with the will of God; which Mary was employed about. Wi.

CHAP. XI. VER. 2. Father, hallowed be thy name, &c. See Matt. vi. In the ordinary Greek copies here are all the seven petitions, as in S. Matthew: and so they are in the Prot. Testament. Yet S. Aug., in his Enchiridion, (c. 1, tom. 6, p. 240,) says, there were read seven petitions in S. Matt., and only five in S. Luke. We may also take notice, that though in the Greek copies here in S. Luke be all the seven petitions of the Lord's prayer, yet the doxology, for thine is the kingdom, &c., is omitted in all Greek copies, and by the Protestants; which is a new argument and proof, that the said doxology is an addition from the Greek liturgy. Wi.

VER. 4. Christ does not teach us to pray for afflictions of the body, but always enjoins us to pray, that we may not enter into temptation. When, therefore, temptation attacks us, we must beg of God grace to withstand it, that the promise in S. Matthew (chap. x.) may be fulfilled in us, he who perseveres to the end shall be saved. S. Bede in Reg. Brev. 221.

VER. 5. This parable is not found in any one of the evangelists, except S. Luke. Our Saviour having taught his disciples the aforesaid form of prayer, now shows them the utility and efficacy of prayer in general. He wishes to inculcate the necessity of perseverance in prayer. A friend comes to borrow of another friend at an unreasonable hour; his request is refused; he insists, and obtains, by his perseverance, what he could not have gained without it. Thus also the friend, and shall go to him at midnight, and shall say to him : Friend, lend me three loaves ?

6 For a friend of mine is come off his journey to me, and I have nothing to set before him.

7 And he, from within, should answer and say : Trouble me not, the door is now shut, and my children are with me in bed ; I cannot rise and give thee.

8 Yet if he shall continue knocking : I say to you, although he will not rise and give him, because he is his friend : yet because of his importunity he will rise, and give him as many as he needeth.

9 *And I say to you : Ask, and it shall be given you : seek, and you shall find : knock, and it shall be opened to you.

10 For every one that asketh, receiveth : and he that seeketh, findeth : and to him that knocketh, it shall be opened.

11 ^bAnd which of you, if he ask his father bread, will he give him a stone ? or a fish, will he, for a fish, give him a serpent ?

12 Or, if he shall ask an egg, will he reach him a scorpion ?

13 If you then, being evil, know how to give good gifts to your children, how much more will your Father from heaven give the good Spirit to them that ask him ?

14 *And he was casting out a devil, and the same was dumb. And when he had cast out the devil, the dumb spoke, and the multitude admired.

15 But some of them said : He casteth out devils,^d in Beelzebub, the prince of devils.

16 And others tempting, asked of him a sign from heaven.

17 But he seeing their thoughts, said to them : Every kingdom divided against itself shall be brought to desolation, and a house upon a house shall fall.

18 And if satan also be divided against himself, how shall his kingdom stand ? because you say, that in Beelzebub I cast out devils.

19 Now if I cast out devils in Beelzebub : in whom do your children cast them out ? Therefore they shall be your judges.

Almighty wishes to be importuned ; he wishes us to pray with zeal and perseverance. This is the model we ought to follow. Calmet.

VER. 9. Our petitions are frequently not immediately granted, that our earnestness and assiduity may be increased ; that we may learn to esteem the gifts of God, and preserve them with care ; for whatever we procure with labour, we preserve with care, lest by losing it we lose our labour also. S. Basil in Con. Mon.

VER. 10. How comes it to pass then, that many pray, and receive not ? To this we answer, that if they approach in a proper manner, and observe the necessary conditions of the petition, they will undoubtedly receive what they ask for ; but if, on the contrary, they deviate from this rule, and ask not as they ought, they will not receive ; because, as S. James says, you ask, and receive not, because you ask amiss. Chap. i. By asking for things that are prejudicial to your well-being ; or, if for spiritual blessings, you do not receive them, on account of your evil motives. Origen ex S. Thoma.

VER. 17. And a house upon a house shall fall. He speaks of a house or family divided, which thereby shall fall to ruin. Wi.

VER. 19. Your judges. They will condemn you of injustice, envy, and hatred against me, and blasphemy against God ; because when they perform any exorcisms, though there appear but little more than human in their actions, yet you ascribe them to the virtue of God ; but when I perform any miracle, though there always appear most evident signs of the power and virtue of God, you ascribe all to the hand and machinations of the devil. Tirinus.

VER. 24. Man, &c. By this one man is meant the whole Jewish people, out of whom the unclean spirit had been driven by the law. S. Ambrose.—For as long as they were in Egypt, they lived after the manners of the Egyptians, and 20 But if I in the finger of God cast out devils : doubtless the kingdom of God is come upon you.

21 When a strong man, armed, keepeth his court, those things which he possesseth are in peace.

22 But if a stronger than he come upon him and overcome him, he will take away all his armour wherein he trusted, and will distribute his spoils.

23 He that is not with me, is against me : and he that gathereth not with me, scattereth.

24 When the unclean spirit is gone out of a man, he walketh through places without water, seeking rest : and not finding, he saith : I will return into my house whence I came out.

25 And when he is come, he findeth it swept and garnished.

26 Then he goeth and taketh with him seven other spirits more wicked than himself, and entering in they dwell there. And the last state of that man cometh worse than the first.

27 And it came to pass, as he spoke these things, that a certain woman, from the crowd, lifting up her voice, said to him : Blessed is the womb that bore thee, and the paps that gave thee suck.

28 But he said : Yea, rather, blessed are they who hear the word of God, and keep it.

29 And when the people were gathered together, he began to say : *This generation is a wicked generation : they ask a sign, and a sign shall not be given them, but the sign of Jonas, the prophet.

30 ^fFor as Jonas was a sign to the Ninivites, so shall the Son of man also be to this generation.

31 ^gThe queen of the South shall rise in the judgment with the men of this generation, and shall condemn them : because she came from the ends of the earth to hear the wisdom of Solomon ; and behold more than Solomon here.

were the habitation of the unclean spirit ; but it was expelled from them, when they slew the paschal lamb in figure of Christ, and escaped destruction by sprinkling themselves with its blood. S. Cyril ex Divo Thoma.—But the evil spirit returned to his former habitation, the Jews, because he saw them devoid of virtue, barren, and open for his reception. And their latter state is worse than their former ; for more wicked demons possessed the breasts of the Jews than before. S. Chrys. 44 hom. on S. Matt.

VER. 26. The last state, &c. But these words are also addressed to us Christians, who may often, and with reason, fear lest the vice we think extinguished in us, again return and seize on our slothful and careless souls, finding them cleansed indeed from the filth of sin by the grace of baptism, but destitute of every ornamental and protective virtue. It brings with it seven other evil spirits, by which we must understand every vicious inclination. Ven. Bede.

VER. 28. Μενοιρη, imo vero, yes, indeed. Our Saviour does not here wish to deny what the woman had said, but rather to confirm it : indeed how could he deny, as Calvin impiously maintained, that his mother was blessed ? By these words, he only wishes to tell his auditors what great advantages they might obtain by attending to his words. For the blessed Virgin, as S. Augustin says, was more happy in having our Saviour in her heart and affections, than in having conceived him in her womb. Tirinus.

VER. 29. But the sign of Jonas. Instead of a prodigy in the heavens or in the air, I will give you one in the bosom of the earth, more wonderful than that of the prophet Jonas, who came out alive from the belly of the fish, which had swallowed him. Thus I will return alive from the bosom of the earth three days after my death. Calmet.

den place, nor under a bushel: but upon a candlestick, that they that come in may see the light.

34 "The light of thy body is thy eye. If thy eye be single, thy whole body will be lightsome: but if it be evil, the body, also, will be darksome.

35 Take heed, therefore, that the light which is in thee, be not darkness.

36 If then thy whole body be lightsome, having no part of darkness; the whole shall be lightsome, and as a bright lamp shall enlighten thee.

37 And as he was speaking, a certain Pharisee prayed him to dine with him. And he went in, and sat down to eat.

38 And the Pharisee began to say, thinking within himself, why he was not washed before dinner.

39 And the Lord said to him: "Now you Pharisees do make clean the outside of the cup, and of the platter: but your inside is full of rapine and iniquity.

40 Foolish men, did not he that made that which is without, make also that which is within?

41 But yet that which remaineth, give alms; and behold all things are clean unto you.

42 But woe to you Pharisees, because you tithe mint and rue, and every herb, and pass over judgment, and the charity of God: Now these things you ought to have done, and not to leave those undone.

43 "Woe to you Pharisees, because you love the uppermost seats in the synagogues, and salutations in the market-place.

44 Woe to you, because you are as sepulchres that appear not and men that walk over them are not aware.

45 Then one of the lawyers answering, said to him: Master, in saying these things, thou reproachest us also.

46 And he said: Woe to you lawyers also: "because you load men with burdens which they cannot bear, and you yourselves touch not the packs with one of your fingers.

47 Woe to you who build the monuments of the prophets: and your fathers killed them.

VER. 34. If thy eye be single. As when the eyes of the body are pure, and free from the mixture of bad humours, the whole body is lightsome; so if the eyes of the mind, viz. reason, faith, and understanding, are not infected with the pestiferous humours of envy, avarice, and other vices, the whole mind will be illumined by the presence of the Holy Ghost. Take care, therefore, lest by giving way to these vices, the light which is in thee be turned into darkness. Barradius.

VER. 41. But yet that which remaineth, give alms. The sense seems not to be of what remaineth, give alms, as some expound it; but by the Greek, the sense is, give alms of what you have, i. e. of your goods, according to your abilities; and, as Toby said to his son, If thou hast much, give much: if little, give a little willingly. Tob. iv. 9.—All things are clean unto you. Not that alms, without other pious dispositions, will suffice to your salvation; but that other necessary virtues will be given you, by the mercies of God. Wi.

VER. 43. Salutations in the market-place, &c. Such as wish to be saluted, and have the first places, that they may appear great, are likened to sepulchres, which are covered externally with ornaments, but are filled inwardly with rottenness. Cyril ex D. Thoma.

VER. 44. Sepulchres that appear not. This comparison is partly different from that of Matt. xxiii. 27. For there Christ compares hypocrites to whitened sepulchres, which may be seen and avoided; here he compares them to sepulchres covered with grass, which appear not: yet the comparison, in the main, is the same; that whether they appear or not, still under them is corruption: as the interior of the Pharisees was always full of vice and corruption. Wi.

VER. 45. Then one of the lawyers, &c. Correction, which turns to the advantage of the meek, appears always more intolerable to the wicked. Christ denounces woes against the Pharisees for deviating from the right path, and the doctors of the law found them equally applicable to themselves. S. Cyril ex D. Thoma.

VER. 47. Woe to you who build, &c. Not that the building of the monuments

48 Truly you bear witness that you consent to the doings of your fathers: for they indeed killed them, and you build their sepulchres.

49 Therefore, also, the wisdom of God said: I will send to them prophets and apostles, and some of them they will kill and persecute:

50 That the blood of all the prophets, which was shed from the foundation of the world, may be required of this generation,

51 "From the blood of Abel unto the blood of Zacharias, who was slain between the altar and the temple. Yea, I say to you, it shall be required of this generation.

52 Woe to you lawyers, for you have taken away the key of knowledge: you yourselves have not entered in, and those that were entering in you have hindered.

53 And as he was saying these things to them, the Pharisees and the lawyers began vehemently to urge him, and to oppress his mouth about many things, 54 Lying in wait for him, and seeking to catch something out of his mouth, that they might accuse him.

CHAP. XII.

Christ warns us against hypocrisy, the fear of the world, and covetousness: and admonishes all to watch.

AND when great multitudes stood about him, so that they trod one upon another, he began to say to his disciples: "Beware ye of the leaven of the Pharisees, which is hypocrisy.

2 "For there is nothing covered, that shall not be revealed: nor hidden, that shall not be known.

3 For whatsoever things you have spoken in darkness, shall be published in the light: and that which you have spoken in the ear, in the chambers, shall be proclaimed on the house-tops.

4 And I say to you, my friends: Be not afraid of them that kill the body, and after that have no more that they can do.

5 But I will show you whom ye shall fear: fear ye him who, after he hath killed, hath power to cast into hell. Yea, I say to you, fear him.

^a Gen. iv. 8.—^b 2 Par. xxiv. 22.—^c Matt. xvi. 6; Mark viii. 15.—^d Matt. x. 26; Mark iv. 22.

of the prophets was in itself blameworthy, but only the intention of these unhappy men, who made use of this outward show of religion and piety, as a means to carry on their wicked designs against the Prince of prophets. Ch.

VER. 48. Build, &c. See the notes, Matt. xxiii. 29. Wi.

VER. 51. Blood of Zacharias, &c. This Zacharias was, according to some, Zacharias, the son of Joiada, whom the Jews slew between the temple and the altar. Theophylactus, also S. Jerom, who moreover mentions that some editions had Zacharias, son of Joiada.—This generation. Not that this generation of the Jews should be punished for the crimes of others, but that having before their eyes the severe chastisements their ancestors had received, in punishment of their wickedness, they had not grown better, but had imitated their perversity. Chrys. 75, hom. in Matt.

VER. 52. You have taken away the key of knowledge. A comparison of a master that locks others out. As if Christ said: You pretend, as masters and teachers, to open and expound the law and the prophets; and by your false doctrine and interpretations, you neither observe the law, nor permit others to observe it. See Matt. xxiii. 13. Wi.

* V. 41. Verumtamen quod superest, date eleemosynam πλὴν τὰ ἐνοῦντα δόξα ἐλεημοσύνην; quæ adsunt, quæ penes vos sunt. It is not τὰ λοιπὸν, &c.

CHAP. XII. VER. 1. Beware ye of the leaven, &c. Christ calls the hypocrisy of the Pharisees leaven, which changes and corrupts the best intentions of men; for nothing is more destructive than hypocrisy to such as give way to it. Theophylact.

VER. 3. House-tops. Our Divine Saviour speaks here according to the custom of his own nation, where it was not uncommon for men to preach from the house-top, when they wished to deliver any thing to the public; for their houses had flat roofs. Ven. Bede.

6 Are not five sparrows sold for two farthings, and not one of them is forgotten before God?

7 But even the very hairs of your head are all numbered. Fear not, therefore: you are of more value than many sparrows.

8 And I say to you: ^aWhosoever shall confess me before men, him shall the Son of man also confess before the angels of God.

9 But he that shall deny me before men, shall be denied before the angels of God.

10 ^bAnd whosoever speaketh a word against the Son of man, it shall be forgiven him: but to him that shall blaspheme against the Holy Ghost, it shall not be forgiven.

11 And when they shall bring you into the synagogues, and to magistrates, and powers, be not solicitous how or what you shall answer, or what you shall say.

12 For the Holy Ghost shall teach you in the same hour what you ought to say.

13 And one of the multitude said to him: Master, speak to my brother that he divide the inheritance with me.

14 But he said to him: Man, who hath made me a judge or a divider over you?

15 And he said to them: Take heed and beware of all covetousness: for a man's life doth not consist in the abundance of things which he possesseth.

16 And he spoke a similitude to them, saying: ^cThe land of a certain rich man brought forth plenty of fruits.

17 And he thought within himself, saying: What shall I do, because I have not where to lay up together my fruits?

18 And he said: This will I do: I will pull down my barns, and will build greater: and into them will I gather all things that are grown to me, and my goods.

19 And I will say to my soul: Soul, thou hast much goods laid up for many years, take thy rest, eat, drink, make good cheer.

20 But God said to him: Thou fool, this night do they require thy soul of thee: and whose shall those things be, which thou hast provided?

21 So is he that layeth up treasure for himself, and is not rich towards God.

22 And he said to his disciples: Therefore I say to you: ^dBe not solicitous for your life, what you shall eat: nor for your body, what you shall put on.

VER. 8. Whosoever shall confess me. By these words we are informed, that more than bare inward protestations of fidelity will be demanded of us; for he moreover requires an exterior confession of our faith. S. Ambrose.

VER. 14. Judge, &c. Our Saviour does not here mean to say that he or his Church had not authority to judge, as the Anabaptists foolishly pretend; for he was appointed by his Father, the King of kings, and the Lord and Judge of all. He only wished to keep himself as much detached as possible from worldly concerns: 1. Not to favour the opinion of the carnal Jews, who expected a powerful king for the Messiah. 2. To show that the ecclesiastical ministry was entirely distinct from political government, and that he and his ministers were sent not to take care of earthly kingdoms, but to seek after and prepare men for a heavenly inheritance. S. Ambrose, Euthymius, Ven. Bede.

VER. 22. Therefore I say to you, &c. Our Lord proceeds step by step in his discourse, to inculcate more perfect virtue. He had before exhorted us to guard ourselves against the fatal rocks of avarice, and then subjoined the parable of the rich man; thereby insinuating what folly that man is guilty of, who applies all his thoughts solely to the amassing of riches. He next proceeds to inform us that we 23 The life is more than the food, and the body is more than the raiment.

24 Consider the ravens, for they do not sow, nor do they reap, neither have they store-house, nor barn, and God feedeth them. How much are you more valuable than they?

25 And which of you by thinking can add to his stature one cubit?

26 If then you are not able to do even the least thing, why are you solicitous for the rest?

27 Consider the lilies how they grow: they labour not, neither do they spin. But I say to you, not even Solomon, in all his glory, was clothed like one of these.

28 Now if God clothe in this manner the grass that is to-day in the field, and to-morrow is cast into the oven: how much more you, O ye of little faith?

29 And seek not you what you shall eat, or what you shall drink: and be not lifted up on high:

30 For all these things do the nations of the world seek after. But your Father knoweth that you have need of these things.

31 But seek ye first the kingdom of God and his justice: and all these things shall be added unto you.

32 Fear not, little flock, for it hath pleased your Father to give you a kingdom.

33 ^eSell what you possess, and give alms. Make to yourselves bags which grow not old, ^fa treasure in heaven which faileth not: where the thief approacheth not, nor the moth corrupteth.

34 For where your treasure is, there will your heart be also.

35 Let your loins be girded, and lamps burning in your hands,

36 And you yourselves like to men who wait for their lord, when he shall return from the wedding: that when he cometh, and knocketh, they may open to him immediately.

37 Blessed are those servants, whom the Lord, when he cometh, shall find watching. Amen, I say to you, that he will gird himself, and make them sit down to meat, and passing, will minister to them.

38 And if he shall come in the second watch, or if he shall come in the third watch, and find them so, blessed are those servants.

39 ^gBut this know ye, that if a master of a family did should not be solicitous even for the necessities of life: wishing by this discourse to eradicate our wicked propensity to avarice. Theophy.

VER. 32. Christ styles the elect in this place, his little flock, on account of the greater number of the reprobate; or rather through his love of humility, because though the Church be most numerous, yet he wishes it to continue in humility to the end of the world, and by humility to arrive at the reward which he has promised ^h the humble. Therefore, in order to console us in our labours, he commands us to seek only the kingdom of heaven, and promises us that the Father will bestow it as a reward upon us. Ven. Bede.

VER. 33. Be not solicitous that whilst you are fighting for the kingdom of heaven, the necessities of this life will be wanting to you, on account of his command. Sell what you possess, that you may bestow charity; which those do, who having left all things, nevertheless labour with their hands for their livelihood, and to bestow the rest in charity. Ven. Bede.

VER. 35. Let your loins be girded; i. e. be prepared to walk in the way of virtue; a comparison taken from the custom of the eastern people, who girded up their long garments, when they went about any work. Wi.

know at what hour the thief would come, he would surely watch, and would not suffer his house to be broke open.

40 Be you also ready: *for at what hour you think not, the Son of man will come.

41 And Peter said to him: Lord, dost thou speak this parable to us, or likewise to all?

42 And the Lord said: Who (thinkest thou) is the faithful and wise steward, whom his lord setteth over his family, to give them their measure of wheat in due season?

43 Blessed is that servant, whom when his lord shall come, he shall find so doing.

44 Verily I say to you, he will set him over all that he possesseth.

45 But if that servant shall say in his heart: My lord is long a coming; and shall begin to strike the men-servants, and maid-servants, and to eat, and to drink, and be drunk:

46 The lord of that servant will come in a day that he expecteth not, and at an hour that he knoweth not, and shall separate him, and shall appoint him his portion with unbelievers.

47 And that servant who knew the will of his lord, and hath not prepared, and did not according to his will, shall be beaten with many stripes.

48 But he that knew not, and did things worthy of stripes, shall be beaten with few stripes. And unto whomsoever much is given, of him much shall be required: and to whom they have committed much, of him they will demand the more.

49 I am come to send fire on the earth, and what will I but that it be kindled?

50 And I have a baptism, wherewith I am to be baptized: and how am I straitened until it be accomplished?

51 *Think ye that I am come to give peace on earth: I tell you no, but separation:

52 For there shall be from henceforth five in one house divided, three against two, and two against three.

* Apoc. xvi. 15.—b Matt. x. 34.

VER. 48. Shall be beaten with few stripes. Ignorance, when it proceeds from a person's own fault, doth not excuse, but only diminisheth the fault. Wi.

VER. 49. I am come to send fire on the earth. By this fire, some understand the light of the gospel, and the fire of charity and Divine love. Others, the fire of trials and persecutions. Wi.—What is the fire, which Christ comes to send upon the earth? Some understand it of the Holy Ghost, of the doctrine of the gospel, and the preaching of the apostles, which has filled the world with fervour and light, and which was signified by the flames of fire which appeared at the descent of the Holy Ghost upon the apostles. My words, says the Lord, in Jeremias, (xxiii. 29,) are as a fire, and as a hammer, that breaketh the rock in pieces. Others understand it of the fire of charity, which Christ came to enkindle upon the earth, and which the apostles carried throughout the whole world. But the most simple and literal opinion seems to be, the fire of persecution and war. Fire is often used in Scripture for war: and our Saviour declares in S. Matt. that he is come to bring the sword, and not peace; that is, the doctrine of the gospel shall cause divisions, and bring persecutions, and almost an infinity of other evils, upon those who shall embrace and maintain it. But it is by these means that heaven must be acquired, it is thus that Jesus Christ destroys the reign of satan, and overturns idolatry, superstition, and error, in the world. So great a change could not be made without noise, tumult, fire, and war. Calmet.

VER. 50. I am to be baptized, with troubles and sufferings.—And how am I straitened? &c., not with fear, but with an earnest desire of suffering. Wi.

VER. 54. In these words he reproaches them, that they knew well enough how to judge of the weather by the appearance of the heavens; but were ignorant how to distinguish the times; i. e. could not discern that the time marked by the prophets, for the coming of the Messias, was accomplished. Calmet.

CHAP. XIII. VER. 1. Whose blood Pilate had mingled with their sacrifices. These seem to have been some of the seditious followers of Judas, the Galilean, or Gaulonite, who denied that God's people were to pay taxes; and it is thought that some of them, coming to offer up sacrifices in the temple, Pilate caused 53 Shall be divided: the father against the son, and the son against the father, the mother against the daughter, and the daughter against the mother, the mother-in-law against her daughter-in-law, and the daughter-in-law against her mother-in-law.

54 *And he said also to the multitudes: When you see a cloud rising out of the west, presently you say: A shower is coming: and so it happeneth:

55 And when ye see the south wind blow, you say: There will be heat: and it cometh to pass.

56 You hypocrites, you know how to discern the face of the heavens, and of the earth; but how is it that you do not discern this time?

57 And why even of yourselves do you not judge that which is just?

58 *And when thou goest with thy adversary to the prince, whilst thou art in the way, endeavour to be delivered from him: lest, perhaps, he draw thee to the judge, and the judge deliver thee to the exactor, and the exactor cast thee into prison.

59 I say to thee: thou shalt not go out thence, until thou payest the very last mite.

CHAP. XIII.

The necessity of penance. The barren fig-tree. The cure of the infirm woman, &c.

AND there were present, at that very time, some that told him of the Galileans, whose blood Pilate had mingled with their sacrifices.

2 And he answering, said to them: Think you that these Galileans were sinners above all the men of Galilee, because they suffered such things?

3 I say to you, No: but unless you do penance, you shall all likewise perish.

4 Or those eighteen upon whom the tower fell in Siloe, and slew them: think you that they also were debtors above all the men that dwell in Jerusalem?

5 I tell you: No: but unless you do penance, you shall all likewise perish.

* Matt. xvi. 2.—d Matt. v. 25.

them to be slain at that very time, so that their blood was mixed with the sacrifices. Wi.

VER. 2. Sinners, &c. People are naturally inclined to believe, that those who are unfortunate, and afflicted with calamities, must likewise be culpable and impious. The Jews were very much given to these sentiments, as we see in many places of Scripture. John ix. 2, and 3. Our Saviour wishes to do away this prejudice, by telling them that the Galileans, who are here spoken of, were not the most culpable among the inhabitants of that country; showing by this, that God often spares the most wicked, and sends upon the good the most apparent signs of vengeance, that he may exercise the patience and crown the merit of the latter, and give to the former an example of the severity which they must expect, if they continue in their disorders. Calmet.

VER. 3. This prediction of our Saviour upon the impenitent was afterwards completely verified; for Josephus informs us, that under the government of Cumanus, 20,000 of them were destroyed about the temple. Antiq. lib. xx. c. 4. That upon the admission of the Idumeans into the city, 8500 of the high priest's party were slain, insomuch that there was a flood of blood quite round the temple. De Bello Jud. lib. iv. c. 7. That in consequence of the threefold faction that happened in Jerusalem before the siege of the Romans, the temple was every where polluted with slaughter; the priests were slain in the exercise of their functions; many who came to worship, fell before their sacrifices; the dead bodies of strangers and natives were promiscuously heaped together, and the altar defiled with their blood. De Bel. Jud. lib. vi. c. 1.

VER. 4. Or those eighteen, &c. The Almighty permitted these people to be thus chastised, that the others might be filled with fear and apprehension at the sight of another's dangers, and thus become the heirs of the kingdom of heaven. But then you will say, is another punished that I may become better? No; he is punished for his own crimes; but his punishment becomes to those that witness it the means of salvation. S. Chrys. Concio. 3, de Lazaro.

VER. 5. Unless you do penance, &c. The Jews did not penance; and there-

6 He spoke also this parable: A certain man had a fig-tree planted in his vineyard, and he came seeking fruit on it, and found none.

7 And he said to the tiller of the vineyard: Behold these three years I come seeking fruit on this fig-tree, and I find none. Cut it down, therefore; why doth it take up the ground?

8 But he answering, said to him: Lord, let it alone this year also, until I dig about it, and dung it.

9 And if happily it bear fruit: but if not, then after that thou shalt cut it down.

10 And he was teaching in their synagogue on the sabbath.

11 And behold there was a woman who had a spirit of infirmity eighteen years: and she was bent down, and could not look upwards at all.

12 And when Jesus saw her, he called her to him, and said to her: Woman, thou art delivered from thy infirmity.

13 And he laid his hands upon her, and immediately she was straight, and glorified God.

14 And the ruler of the synagogue, being angry that Jesus had healed on the sabbath, answering, said to the multitude: There are six days wherein you ought to work: in them therefore come, and be healed, and not on the sabbath-day.

15 And the Lord answering him, said: Ye hypocrites, doth not every one of you, on the sabbath-day, loose his ox or his ass from the manger, and lead them to water?

16 And ought not this daughter of Abraham, whom satan hath bound, lo, these eighteen years, be loosed from this bond on the sabbath-day?

17 And when he said these things, all his adversaries were ashamed: and all the people rejoiced for all the things that were gloriously done by him.

18 He said, therefore: To what is the kingdom of God like, and whereunto shall I resemble it?

19 "It is like to a grain of mustard-seed, which a man took and cast into his garden, and it grew, and became a great tree, and the birds of the air rested in the branches thereof.

fore, forty years after our Lord's Passion, the Romans came, and, beginning with Galilee, destroyed this impious nation to its roots, and polluted not only the court of the temple, whither the sacrifices were carried, but the inner sanctuary, with human blood. Ven. Bede.

VER. 6. A certain man, &c. Each one, inasmuch as he holds a place in life, if he produce not the fruit of good works, like a barren tree encumbers the ground; because the place he holds, were it occupied by others, would be a place of fertility. S. G. agory.

VER. 9. And if happily it bear fruit. It is a way of speaking, when a sentence is left imperfect; yet what is not expressed, may be easily understood; as here we may understand, well and good, or the like. Wi.

VER. 14. This president of the synagogue, when he saw the woman, who before crept on the ground, now raised by the touch of Christ, and hearing the mandate of God, was filled with envy, and decried the miracle, apparently through solicitude for keeping the sabbath. But the truth is, he would rather see the poor woman bent to the earth like a beast, than see Christ glorified by healing her. S. Cyril ex D. Thoma Aquin.

VER. 19. Our Lord was this mustard-seed, when he was buried in the earth; and he became a tree, when he ascended into heaven; but a tree that overshadowed the whole creation, in the branches of which the birds of heaven rested; that is, the powers of heaven, and all such as by good works have raised themselves from the earth. The apostles are the branches, to repose in whose bosoms we take our flight, borne on the wings of Christian virtue. Let us sow this seed (Christ) in the garden of our hearts, that the grace of good works may flourish, and you may send forth the various perfumes of every virtue. S. Ambrose 20 And again he said: Whereunto shall I esteem the kingdom of God to be like?

21 "It is like to leaven, which a woman took and hid in three measures of meal, till the whole was leavened.

22 And he went through the cities and towns teaching, and making his journey to Jerusalem.

23 And a certain man said to him: Lord, are they few that are saved? But he said to them:

24 "Strive to enter by the narrow gate: for many, I say to you, shall seek to enter, and shall not be able.

25 "But when the master of the house shall be gone in, and shall shut the door, you shall begin to stand without, and knock at the door, saying: Lord, open to us: and he answering, shall say to you: I know you not whence you are.

26 Then you shall begin to say: We have eaten and drank in thy presence, and thou hast taught in our streets.

27 And he shall say to you: "I know you not whence you are: 'depart from me, all ye workers of iniquity.

28 There shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth: when you shall see Abraham, and Isaac, and Jacob, and all the prophets, in the kingdom of God, and you yourselves thrust out.

29 And there shall come from the east, and the west, and the north, and the south, and shall sit down in the kingdom of God.

30 "And behold they are last who shall be first, and they are first who shall be last.

31 The same day there came some of the Pharisees, saying to him: Depart, and get thee hence: for Herod hath a mind to kill thee.

32 And he said to them: Go, and tell that fox: Behold I cast out devils, and do cures, to-day and to-morrow, and the third day I am consummated.

33 Nevertheless I must walk to-day, and to-morrow, and the day following: because it cannot be that a prophet perish out of Jerusalem.

34 "Jerusalem, Jerusalem, that killest the prophets, and stonest them that are sent to thee, how often would I have gathered thy children, as the bird doth her brood under her wings, and thou wouldst not?

VER. 24. Shall seek, &c. Shall desire to be saved; but for want of taking sufficient pains, and not being thoroughly in earnest, shall not attain to it. Ch.—Our Lord answers here in the affirmative; viz. that the number of those who are saved is very small, for a few only can enter by the narrow gate. Therefore does he say, according to S. Matthew, (chap. vii.) Narrow is the way that leadeth to life, and few there are that enter therein. This does not contradict what is said in the eighth chapter of S. Matthew: That many shall come from the east, and sit down in the kingdom of God; for many indeed shall join the blessed company of the angels, but when considered with the number of the slain, they will appear but few. S. Aust. Ser. 32, de Verb. Dni.

VER. 26. These words are addressed particularly to the Jews, because Christ was born of them according to the flesh, eat and drank with them, and taught publicly in their streets; but they apply to us Christians also, for we eat the body of Christ, and drink his blood, when each day we approach to the mystical table, and we hear him teaching us in the streets of our souls. Theophylactus.

VER. 32. Christ, by these words, probably wished to show that he was not in the least afraid of him whom the Pharisees feigned to have a design on his life for it is supposed that the Pharisees had invented this fiction, in order to compel him to leave them quiet. Maldonatus.

VER. 33. Nevertheless I must walk (i. e. labour in the mission, teaching, &c.) to-day, and to-morrow, &c., i. e. for a while.—It cannot be that a prophet, &c. Not that all the prophets suffered in Jerusalem, though many did; and it is rather to prophesy, that he himself, the great Prophet, and their Messias, should be put to death at Jerusalem. CHAP. XIV.

Christ heals the dropsical man. The parable of the supper. The necessity of renouncing all to follow Christ.

AND it came to pass, when Jesus went into the house of a certain prince of the Pharisees, on the sabbath-day, to eat bread, and they were watching him.

2 And behold there was a certain man before him, who had the dropsy.

3 And Jesus answering, spoke to the lawyers and Pharisees, saying: Is it lawful to heal on the sabbath-day?

4 But they held their peace. But he, taking him, healed him, and sent him away.

5 And answering them, he said: Which of you, whose ass or his ox shall fall into a pit, and will not immediately draw him out, on the sabbath-day?

6 And they could not answer him to these things.

7 And he spoke a parable also to them that were invited, marking how they chose the first seats at the table, saying to them:

8 When thou art invited to a wedding, sit not down in the highest place, lest perhaps one more honourable than thou be invited by him:

9 And he who invited thee, and him, come and say to thee: Give place to this man; and then thou begin, with blushing, to take the lowest place.

10 But when thou art invited, go sit down in the lowest place; that when he who inviteth thee cometh, he may say to thee: Friend, go up higher. Then shalt thou have glory before them that sit at table with thee.

11 Because every one that exalteth himself, shall be humbled: and he that humbleth himself, shall be exalted.

12 And he said to him also that had invited him: When thou makest a dinner, or a supper, call not thy friends, nor thy brethren, nor thy kinsmen, nor thy neighbours who are rich; lest they also invite thee again, and a recompense be made to thee.

CHAP. XIV. VER. 1. This was the Hebrew expression for to take a meal; their frugality probably suggested this method of expression, bread being the principal part of their repast. Calmet.

VER. 2. Our Divine Saviour, regardless of the wicked designs which these Pharisees meditated to his destruction, cures the sick man, who did not dare to ask the favour of him, for fear of the Pharisees. He could only persuade himself to stand in his presence, hoping that Christ would at length cast a compassionate look upon him: who being well pleased with him, did not demand of him if he wished to be cured, but without demur proceeded to work this stupendous miracle in his behalf. S. Cyril.

VER. 3. Is it lawful? Jesus knew their thoughts, and that they would blame him as a sabbath-breaker: yet he healed the man, and confounded them by the example and common practice of pulling an ass out of a pit on the sabbath-day. Wi.

VER. 7. A parable. What parable? In the text there is no parable, but only instruction. Maldonatus thinks that our Saviour spoke a parable on this occasion, which S. Luke has omitted, giving us only the moral and the substance of the instruction conveyed by it. Calmet.

VER. 9. The lowest place. A person of the first quality is not to do this literally, which would be preposterous; but it is to teach every one humility of heart and mind. Wi.

VER. 12. Christ does not here forbid the invitation of friends and relatives, since that would be acting directly contrary to his own maxims and spirit, which breathe nothing but charity and union. He merely wishes to purify our motives in the disposal of our charity, by insinuating that there is more merit in giving to the indigent, from whom we can expect no remuneration. Calmet.

VER. 16. By this man we are to understand Christ Jesus, the great Mediator

13 But when thou makest a feast, call the poor, the feeble, the lame, and the blind.

14 And thou shalt be blessed, because they have not wherewith to make thee recompense: for recompense shall be made thee at the resurrection of the just.

15 When one of them that sat at table with him, had heard these things, he said to him: Blessed is he that shall eat bread in the kingdom of God.

16 But he said to him: A certain man made a great supper, and invited many.

17 And he sent his servant, at supper-time, to say to them that were invited, that they should come, for now all things are ready.

18 And they began all at once to make excuse. The first said to him: I have bought a farm, and I must needs go out and see it: I pray thee, have me excused.

19 And another said: I have bought five yoke of oxen, and I go to try them: I pray thee, have me excused.

20 And another said: I have married a wife, and therefore I cannot come.

21 And the servant returning, told these things to his lord. Then the master of the house being angry, said to his servant: Go out quickly into the streets and lanes of the city, and bring in hither the poor, and the feeble, and the blind, and the lame.

22 And the servant said: Lord, it is done as thou hast commanded, and yet there is room.

23 And the lord said to the servant: Go out into the highways and hedges, and compel them to come in, that my house may be filled.

24 But I say to you, that none of those men that were called, shall taste my supper.

25 And there went great multitudes with him: and turning, he said to them:

26 If any man come to me, and hate not his father and mother, and wife, and children, and brethren, and sisters, yea, and his own life also, he cannot be my disciple.

27 And whosoever doth not carry his cross, and come after me, cannot be my disciple.

28 For which of you, having a mind to build a tower, between God and man. He sent his servants, at supper-time, to say to them that were invited, that they should come; i. e. he sent his apostles to call the people of Israel, who had been invited to his supper on almost innumerable occasions: but they not only refused the invitation, but also murdered the Lord who had invited them. We may remark, that the three different excuses exactly agree with what S. John says, All that is in the world is the concupiscence of the flesh, the concupiscence of the eyes, and the pride of life. The one says, I have married a wife, by which may be understood the concupiscence of the flesh; another says, I have bought five yoke of oxen, by which is denoted the concupiscence of the eyes; and the pride of life is signified by the purchase of the farm, which the third alleges in his justification. S. Aug. de Verb. Dei.

VER. 23. Compel them to come in. This is almost the only expression in the New Testament, which can give to the intolerant a plea for persecution. The spirit of the gospel is the spirit of mildness, and the compulsion which it authorizes to bring infidels or heretics into the Church, is such as we use towards our friends, when we press them to accept of our hospitality. The great Pope, S. Gregory, forbade the Jews to be persecuted in Rome, who refused to receive the faith of Christ. "That is a new and unheard-of kind of preaching," says he, "which demands assent by stripes." A.

VER. 26. Hate not, &c. The law of Christ does not allow us to hate even our enemies, much less our parents: but the meaning of the text is, that we must be in that disposition of soul, as to be willing to renounce and part with every thing, how near or dear soever it may be to us, that would keep us from following Christ. Ch.—The word hate is not to be taken in its proper sense, but to be expounded by the words of Christ, (Matt. x. 37,) that no man must love his father more than God, &c. Wi.

CHAP. XV.

The parables of the lost sheep, and of the prodigal son.

NOW the publicans and sinners drew near unto him, to hear him.

2 And the Pharisees and the Scribes murmured, saying: This man receiveth sinners, and eateth with them.

3 And he spoke to them this parable, saying:

4 ^bWhat man among you that hath a hundred sheep: and if he shall lose one of them, doth he not leave the ninety-nine in the desert, and go after that which is lost until he find it?

5 And when he hath found it, doth he not lay it upon his shoulders rejoicing:

6 And coming home call together his friends and neighbours, saying to them: Rejoice with me, because I have found my sheep that was lost?

7 I say to you, that even so there shall be joy in heaven upon one sinner that doth penance, more than upon ninety-nine just who need not penance.

8 Or what woman, having ten groats, if she lose one

* Matt. v. 13; Mark ix. 50.

VER. 29. Lest after, &c. Here he wishes to show us, that we are not to embrace any state of life, particularly that of an ecclesiastic, without previous and serious consideration, whether we shall be able to go through with the difficulties and dangers which will inevitably befall us: lest afterwards we find ourselves constrained to yield to our enemies, who will deride us, and say, This man began to build, and was not able to finish. Tirinus.

VER. 34. But if the salt, &c. Man, after he has once been illumined with the light of faith, should he be so unfortunate as to fall into the sink of his former evil habits, what remedy is there remaining for him? He is, as our Saviour says, as either profitable for the land nor for the dunghill, but shall be cast out. Luke xiv. 35. Ven. Bede.

CHAP. XV. VER. 4. What man, &c. Christ left the ninety-nine in the desert, when he descended from the angelic choirs, in order to seek lost man on the earth, that he might fill up the number of the sheepfold of heaven, from which his sins had excluded him. S. Amb.

VER. 7. Joy in heaven, &c. What incitement ought it to be to us to practise virtue, when we reflect that our conversion causes joy to the troops of blessed spirits, whose protection we should always seek, and whose presence we should always revere. S. Amb.—There is greater joy for the conversion of a sinner, than for the perseverance of the just; but it frequently happens, that these being free from the chain of sin, remain indeed in the path of justice, but press not on eagerly to their heavenly country; whilst such as have been sinners, are stung with grief at the remembrance of their former transgressions, and calling to mind how they have forsaken their God, endeavour by present fervour to compensate for their past misconduct. But it must be remembered that there are many just, whose lives cannot be preferred before them. S. Gregory, Hom. 34.

groat, doth not light a candle and sweep the house, and seek diligently, till she find it?

9 And when she hath found it, call together her friends and neighbours, saying: Rejoice with me, because I have found the groat which I had lost.

10 So I say to you, there shall be joy before the angels of God upon one sinner doing penance.

11 And he said: A certain man had two sons:

12 And the younger of them said to his father: Father, give me the portion of substance that falleth to me. And he divided unto them his substance.

13 And not many days after, the younger son gathering all together, went abroad into a far country: and there wasted his substance by living riotously.

14 And after he had spent all, there came a mighty famine in that country, and he began to be in want.

15 And he went, and joined himself to one of the citizens of that country. And he sent him into his farm to feed swine.

16 And he would fain have filled his belly with the husks the swine did eat: and no man gave unto him.

17 And returning to himself, he said: How many hired servants in my father's house have plenty of bread, and I here perish with hunger?

18 I will arise, and will go to my father, and say to him: Father, I have sinned against heaven, and before thee:

19 I am not now worthy to be called thy son: make me as one of thy hired servants.

20 And rising up, he went to his father. And when he was yet a great way off, his father saw him, and was moved with compassion, and running to him, fell upon his neck and kissed him.

21 And the son said to him: Father, I have sinned against heaven and before thee: I am not now worthy to be called thy son.

22 But the father said to his servants: Bring forth, quickly, the first robe, and put it on him, and put a ring on his hand, and shoes on his feet:

23 And bring hither the fatted calf, and kill it, and let us eat and make merry:

^b Matt. xviii. 12.

VER. 10. Before the angels. By this it is plain that the spirits in heaven have a concern for us below, and a joy at our repentance, and consequently a knowledge of it. Ch.

VER. 11. A certain man had two sons. By the elder son is commonly expounded the Jewish people, who for a long time had been chosen to serve God; and by the younger son, the Gentiles, who for so many ages had run blindly on in their idolatry and vices. Wi.

VER. 12. It is very probable, from this verse, that the children of the family, when come to age, could demand of their parents the share of property which would fall to their lot. For these parables suppose the ordinary practices of the country, and are founded on what was customarily done. Grotius thinks this was the common law among the Phœnicians.

VER. 16. Husks. This expresses the extreme misery of his condition. There is no need of seeking any other mystery in this word.—And no man gave unto him; i. e. gave him bread, mentioned before; for as for the husks, he could take what he pleased. Wi.

VER. 18. How merciful is the Almighty, who, though so much offended, still does not disdain the name of Father!—I have sinned. These are the first words of a sinner's confession to the Author of nature. God knows all things; still does he expect to hear the voice of your confession. It is in vain to think of concealing your sins from the eyes of him whom nothing can escape; and there can be no danger of acknowledging to him what his infinite knowledge has already embraced. Confess then, that Christ may intercede for you, the Church pray for you, the people pour forth their tears for you. Hear not that you cannot obtain pardon, for pardon is promised to you; grace, and a reconciliation with a most tender Parent, are held out to you. S. Ambrose.

VER. 22. The first; i. e. the best robe: by it is meant the habit of grace. Wi 24 Because this, my son, was dead, and is come to life again: he was lost and is found. And they began to be merry.

25 Now his elder son was in the field: and when he came and drew nigh to the house, he heard music and dancing:

26 And he called one of the servants, and asked what these things meant.

27 And he said to him: Thy brother is come, and thy father hath killed the fatted calf, because he hath received him safe.

28 And he was angry, and would not go in. His father, therefore, coming out, began to entreat him.

29 And he answering, said to his father: Behold, for so many years I serve thee, and I have never transgressed thy commandment, and yet thou hast never given me a kid to make merry with my friends:

30 But as soon as this, thy son, is come, who hath devoured his substance with harlots, thou hast killed for him the fatted calf.

31 But he said to him: Son, thou art always with me, and all I have is thine.

32 But it was fit that we should make merry and be glad, for this, thy brother, was dead, and is come to life again: he was lost, and is found.

CHAP. XVI.

The parable of the unjust steward: of the rich man and Lazarus.

AND he said also to his disciples: There was a certain rich man who had a steward: and the same was accused unto him, that he had wasted his goods.

2 And he called him, and said to him: What is this

I hear of thee? Give an account of thy stewardship: for now thou canst not be steward.

3 And the steward said within himself: What shall I do, for my lord taketh away from me the stewardship? To dig I am not able: To beg I am ashamed.

4 I know what I will do, that when I shall be put out of the stewardship, they may receive me into their houses.

5 Therefore, calling together every one of his lord's debtors, he said to the first: How much dost thou owe my lord?

6 But he said: A hundred barrels of oil. And he said to him: Take thy bill: and sit down quickly, and write fifty.

7 Then he said to another: And how much dost thou owe? Who said: A hundred quarters of wheat. He said to him: Take thy bill, and write eighty.

8 And the lord commended the unjust steward, forasmuch as he had done wisely: for the children of this world are wiser in their generation than the children of light.

9 And I say to you: Make to yourselves friends of the mammon of iniquity, that when you shall fail, they may receive you into everlasting dwellings.

10 He that is faithful in that which is least, is faithful also in that which is greater: And he that is unjust in that which is little, is unjust also in that which is greater.

11 If then you have not been faithful in the unjust mammon, who will trust you with that which is the true?

12 And if you have not been faithful in that which is another's: who will give you that which is your own?

13 *No servant can serve two masters: for either he

* Matt. vi. 24.

VER. 24. Was dead, and is come to life again. A sinner, in mortal sin, is deprived of the Divine grace, which is the spiritual life of the soul. At his conversion it is restored to him, and he begins to live again. Wi.

VER. 25. His elder son, &c. We have already remarked, that this son represents the Jews. He boasts of having always served his father faithfully, and of never disobeying him. This is the language of that presumptuous people, who believe themselves alone holy; and despising the Gentiles with sovereign contempt, could not bear to see the gates of salvation laid open also to them. Calmet.

VER. 29. I have never transgressed, &c. With what face could the Jews, represented here by the eldest son, say they had never transgressed the commandments of their father? But we should recollect, that it is not uncommon for presumption to boast of what it never has done. The whole history of the Jews is full of numberless details of their prevarication and disobedience. Calmet.

CHAP. XVI. VER. 1. There was a certain rich man, &c. By this parable our Saviour advises his disciples to accompany their penitential works with deeds of mercy to the poor. Ven. Brde.—There is a certain erroneous opinion, that obtains pretty generally amongst mankind, and which tends to increase crimes, and to lessen good works: and this is, the foolish persuasion that men are not accountable to any one, and that we can dispose as we please of the things in our possession. S. Chrys.—Whereas we are here informed that we are only the dispensers of another's property, viz. God's. S. Amb.—When, therefore, we employ it not according to the will of our Master, but fritter and squander it away in pleasure, and in the gratification of our passions, we are, beyond all doubt, unjust stewards. Theophylactus.—The intention of this parable, is to show what use each one ought to make of the goods which God has committed to his charge. Calmet.—A steward, &c. The parable puts us in mind, that let men be ever so rich or powerful in this world, God is still their master; they are his servants, and must be accountable to him how they have managed his gifts and favours; that is, all things they have had in this world. Wi.

VER. 2. And he called him, &c. Such are the words which our Lord daily addresses to us. We daily see persons equally healthy and likely to live as ourselves, suddenly summoned by death, to give an account of their stewardship. Happy summons to the faithful servant, who has reason to hope in his faithful administration. Not so to the unfaithful steward, whose pursuits are earthly: death to him is terrible indeed, and his exit is filled with sorrow. All thunder-stricken at these words, "now thou canst be steward no longer," he says within himself, what shall I do! Ex D. Thoma.

VER. 8. And the lord commended, &c. By this we are given to understand, that if the lord of this unjust steward could commend him for his worldly prudence, though it were an overt act of injustice; how much more will the Almighty be pleased with those who, obedient to his command, seek to redeem their sins by alms-deeds! Ex D. Thoma.—Children of this world, &c. are more prudent and circum-spect as to what regards their temporal concerns, than they who profess themselves servants of God, are about the concerns of eternity.—*Commended the unjust steward. Lit. the steward of iniquity: not for his cheating and injustice, but for his contrivances in favour of himself.—In their generation; i. e. in their concerns of this life. They apply themselves with greater care and pains, in their temporal affairs, than the children of light, whom God has favoured with the light of faith, do to gain heaven. Wi.

VER. 9. Make to yourselves friends, &c. Not that we are authorized to wrong our neighbour, to give to the poor: evil is never to be done, that good may come from it. D. Thoma.—But we are exhorted to make the poor our friends before God, by relieving them with the riches which justly indeed belong to us, but are called the mammon of iniquity, because only the iniquitous man esteems them as riches, on which he sets his affections; whilst the riches of the virtuous are wholly celestial and spiritual. S. Aug. de Quæst. Evang.—Of the mammon of iniquity. Mammon is a Syriac word for riches; and so it might be translated, of the riches of iniquity. Riches are called unjust, and riches of iniquity, not of themselves, but because they are many times the occasion of unjust dealings, and of all kind of vices. Wi.—Mammon signifies riches. They are here called the mammon of iniquity, because oftentimes ill-gotten, ill-bestowed, or an occasion of evil; and at the best are but worldly, and false: and not the true riches of a Christian.—They may receive. By this we see that the poor servants of God, whom we have relieved by our alms, may hereafter, by their intercession, bring our souls to heaven. Ch.

VER. 10. He that is faithful in that which is least. This seems to have been a common saying, and that men judged of the honesty of their servants by their fidelity in lesser matters. For example, a master that sees his servant will not steal a little thing, judges that he will not steal a greater, &c. Wi.

VER. 11. If then you have not been faithful in the unjust mammon; i. e. in fading and false riches, which are the occasion of unjust and wicked proceedings.—Who will trust you with that which is the true? i. e. God will not intrust you with the true and spiritual riches of his grace. Wi.

VER. 12. And if you have not been faithful in that which is another's: i. e. again is called false worldly wealth, which passeth from one to another; so that it cannot be called a man's own, who will give you that which is your own? i. e. how can you hope that God will bestow upon you, or commit to your care, spiritual riches or gifts, which, when rightly managed, would be your own for all eternity? See S. Aug. l. 2, qq. Evang. q. 35, p. 203. Wi.—That which is another's. Temporal riches may be said to belong to another, because they are the Lord's; and we have only the dispensing of them: so that when we give alms, we are liberal of another's goods. But if we are not liberal in giving what is another's, how shall we be so in giving our own? Calmet.

VER. 13. No servant can serve two masters, &c. This is added to show us that to dispose of our riches according to the will of the Almighty, it is necessary will hate the one, and love the other; or he will hold to the one, and despise the other: you cannot serve God and mammon.

14 Now the Pharisees who were covetous, heard all these things: and they derided him.

15 And he said to them: You are they who justify yourselves before men: but God knoweth your hearts: for that which is high to men, is an abomination before God.

16 *The law and the prophets were until John: from that time the kingdom of God is preached, and every one useth violence towards it.

17 ^bAnd it is easier for heaven and earth to pass, than for one tittle of the law to fail.

18 ^cEvery one that putteth away his wife, and marrieth another, committeth adultery: and he that marrieth her that is put away from her husband, committeth adultery.

19 There was a certain rich man, who was clothed in purple and fine linen: and feasted sumptuously every day.

20 And there was a certain beggar, by name Lazarus, who lay at his gate, full of sores, 21 Desiring to be filled with the crumbs that fell from the rich man's table; and no one did give him: moreover, the dogs came and licked his sores.

22 And it came to pass that the beggar died, and he was carried by the angels into Abraham's bosom. And the rich man also died: and was buried in hell.

23 And lifting up his eyes when he was in torments, he saw Abraham afar off, and Lazarus in his bosom:

24 And he cried, and said: Father Abraham, have to keep our minds free from all attachment to them. Theophylactus.—Let the avaricious man here learn, that to be a lover of riches, is to be an enemy of Christ. Ven. Bede.

VER. 14. Now the Pharisees, &c. Christ had admonished the Scribes and Pharisees not to presume too much on their own sanctity, but to receive repenting sinners, and to redeem their own sins with alms. But they derided these precepts of mercy and humility; either because they esteemed what he commanded them to be useless, or because they thought they had already complied with them. Ven. Bede.

VER. 15. Who justify yourselves, &c. But our Lord, detecting their hidden malice, shows that their pretended justice is all hypocrisy. Theophylactus.—But God knoweth, &c. They justify themselves before men, whom they look upon as despicable, and abandoned sinners, and esteem themselves as not standing in need of giving alms as a remedy of sin; but he who shall lay open the secrets of hearts, sees the base atrocity of that pride which thus blinds them, and swells within their breasts. Ven. Bede.

VER. 16. The law and the prophets, &c. Not that the law was made void by the coming of John, but that what the law and the prophets had taught, had been suited to the very imperfect dispositions of the Jews, who as yet were incapable of relishing perfect virtue. At the coming of John, the gospel began to be preached, and this called men to a life of perfect sanctity. S. Tho. Aquin.—Our Saviour came not to destroy, but to fulfil the law and the prophets. Matt. v. 17.

VER. 19. There was a certain rich man, &c. By this history of the rich man and Lazarus, he declares that those who are placed in affluent circumstances, draw upon themselves a sentence of condemnation, if, seeing their neighbour in want, they neglect to succour him. S. Cyril, in Cat. Græc. Patrum.—He that hath the substance of this world, and shall see his brother in need, and shut up his bowels against him, how doth the charity of God abide in him? 1 John iii. 17.—By this, we are not to understand that all poverty is holy, and the possession of riches criminal; but, as luxury is the disgrace of riches, so holiness of life is the ornament of poverty. S. Ambrose.—A man may be reserved and modest in the midst of riches and honours, as he may be proud and avaricious in the obscurity of a poor and wretched life. Wi.—In this parable, which S. Ambrose takes to be a real fact, we have the name of the poor mendicant; but our Lord suppresses the name of the rich man, to signify that his name is blotted out of the book of life: besides, the rich man tells Abraham that he has five brothers, who were probably still living; wherefore, to save their honour, our Lord named not their reprobated brother.

VER. 22. Abraham's bosom. The place of rest, where the souls of the saints resided, till Christ had opened heaven by his death. Ch.—It was an ancient tradition of the Jews, that the souls of the just were conducted by angels into paradise. The bosom of Abraham (the common father of a¹ the faithful) was the place where the souls of the saints, and departed patriarchs, waited the arrival of their Delimercy on me, and send Lazarus, that he may dip the tip of his finger in water, to cool my tongue, for I am tormented in this flame.

25 And Abraham said to him: Son, remember that thou didst receive good things in thy life-time, and likewise Lazarus evil things: but now he is comforted, and thou art tormented.

26 And besides all this, between us and you there is fixed a great chaos: so that they who would pass from hence to you, cannot, nor from thence come hither.

27 And he said: Then, father, I beseech thee that thou wouldest send him to my father's house:

28 For I have five brethren, that he may testify to them, lest they also come into this place of torments.

29 And Abraham said to him: They have Moses and the prophets; let them hear them.

30 But he said: No, father Abraham; but if one went to them from the dead, they will do penance.

31 And he said to him: If they hear not Moses and the prophets, neither will they believe if one rise again from the dead.

AND^d he said to his disciples: It is impossible that scandals should not come: but woe to him through whom they come.

verer. It was thither that Jesus went after his death; as it is said in the creed, "He descended into hell," to deliver those who were detained there, and who might at Christ's ascension enter into heaven. Calmet. See 1 Pet. iii. 19.

VER. 25. It appears from Philo, (de Excerpt. B. xxxvii. p. 9,) that the Jews not only acknowledged the existence of souls, and their state of happiness or misery after this life, but also that the souls of the saints and patriarchs interceded with God for their descendants, and obtained for them the succour they stood in need of. Calmet.

VER. 26. Between us and you is fixed a great chaos, or gulf; i. e. God's justice has decreed, that the bad should be for ever separated from the good. We may here take notice that the Latin and Greek word, (ver. 22,) translated hell, even in the Prot. translation, cannot signify only the grave. Wi.

VER. 31. If they hear not Moses, &c. We think that if we saw a man raised from the dead, who should tell us what he had seen and suffered in another world, it would make more impression upon us than past miracles, which we hear of, or the promises and threats of the prophets, apostles, and our blessed Saviour, which are contained in Scripture: but it is a false notion, a vain excuse. The wicked, and unbelievers, would even in that case find pretexts and objections for not believing. S. Chrys. Hom. 4.—They would say that the dead man was a phantom; that his resurrection was not real; his assertions nugatory. When Christ raised Lazarus from the dead, the miracle was known, evident, and public; yet we find none of the Pharisees converted by it. They were even so mad as to enter into a design to kill Lazarus, to get rid of a witness who deposed against their incredulity. How many other miracles did he not perform in their sight, which they attributed to the prince of darkness, or to magic! Christ raised himself from the dead. This fact was attested by many unexceptionable witnesses. And what do the hardened Jews do? They object, that his disciples, stealing away the body, maliciously persuaded the people that he had risen again. Calmet.

CHAP. XVII. VER. 1. The world being corrupted as it is, and the spread of evil so wide, it is impossible that scandals should not come. V.—It is impossible, morally speaking, with a regard to the malice of men. Wi.

VER. 2. It were better. Christ here speaks after the manner of the Jews, who were accustomed to inflict this punishment only on the greatest malefactors. So that we must be ready to undergo the most excruciating torments, rather than cause any scandal to our neighbour; though we must here observe, that if our neighbour take scandal at our good works, we ought not on that account to desist from doing good, or desert the truth. Ven. Bede.

3 Take heed to yourselves. *If thy brother sin against thee, reprove him: and if he do penance, forgive him.

4 And if he sin against thee seven times in a day, and seven times in a day turn again to thee, saying: I repent: forgive him.

5 And the apostles said to the Lord: Increase our faith.

6 ^bAnd the Lord said: If you had faith like a grain of mustard-seed, you might say to this mulberry-tree: Be thou plucked up by the root, and be thou transplanted into the sea, and it shall obey you.

7 But which of you having a servant ploughing or feeding cattle, will say to him when he is come from the field: Immediately go, sit down:

8 And will not rather say to him: Make ready my supper, and gird thyself, and serve me whilst I eat and drink, and afterwards thou shalt eat and drink?

9 Doth he thank that servant, because he did the things which he commanded him?

10 I think not. So you also, when you shall have done all the things that are commanded you, say: We are unprofitable servants: we have done that which we ought to do.

11 And it came to pass, as he was going to Jerusalem, that he passed through the midst of Samaria and Galilee.

12 And as he entered into a certain town, there met him ten men, that were lepers, who stood afar off:

13 And they lifted up their voice, saying: Jesus, master, have mercy on us.

14 And when he saw them, he said: *Go, show yourselves to the priests. And it came to pass, that as they went, they were cleansed.

15 And one of them, when he saw that he was cleansed, went back, with a loud voice, glorifying God, 16 And he fell on his face before his feet, giving thanks: and this man was a Samaritan.

VER. 5. Increase our faith. The disciples having heard our Saviour inculcating maxims hard to flesh and blood, such as avoiding scandal, and forgiving our enemies, humbly beg their faith may be increased, that they may be able to comply with these maxims; for they had heard Christ say, that every thing was possible to him that believed. Theophy.—Christ compares faith to a grain of mustard-seed; because, though the grain be small, it is nevertheless stronger than most herbs. S. Chrysos.

VER. 6. To this mulberry-tree. In S. Matthew (xvii. 19) we read, to this mountain. Christ might say both at different times. Wi.

VER. 7. The design and end of this parable is to show that, rigorously speaking, we are useless servants with regard to God. This sovereign Master has a right to exact of us every kind of service, and to make us apply ourselves to any task he may think proper, without our having any reason to complain either of the difficulty, trouble, or length of our labours; we are entirely his, and he is master of our persons, time, and talents. We hold of him whatever we possess, and woe to us if we abuse his trust, by applying our talents to any use contrary to his designs. But though he be Lord and Master, he leaves our liberty entire. If he produces in us holy desires, if he works in us meritorious actions, gives us virtuous inclinations and supernatural gifts, he sets to our account the good use we make of them; and in crowning our merits, he crowns his own gifts. S. Aug. lib. 9, Confes. and Serm. 131. Calmet.

VER. 10. Unprofitable servants. Because our service is of no profit to our Master; and he justly claims it as our bounden duty. But though we are unprofitable to him, our serving him is not unprofitable to us; for he is pleased to give, by his grace, a value to our good works, which, in consequence of his promise, entitles them to an eternal reward. Ch.

VER. 14. To the priests. Jesus sends them to the priests, to convince the latter of the reality of the cures which he wrought, and oblige them by that to acknowledge him for their Messias; 2ndly, That the lepers might enjoy the fruit of their cure, by returning to the society of their fellow men, after they had been declared clean, and satisfied all the demands of the law; for there were many ceremonies previously to be gone through. Calmet.—And lastly, To show that in the 17 And Jesus answering, said: Were there not ten made clean? and where are the nine?

18 There is no one found to return and give glory to God, but this stranger.

19 And he said to him: Arise, go thy way: for thy faith hath made thee whole.

20 And when he was asked by the Pharisees: when the kingdom of God should come? he, answering them, said: The kingdom of God cometh not with observation.

21 Neither shall they say: Behold here, or behold there; for, lo, the kingdom of God is within you.

22 And he said to his disciples: The days will come, when you shall desire to see one day of the Son of man, and you shall not see it.

23 *And they will say to you: Lo here, and lo there. Go ye not after, nor follow them:

24 For as the lightning that lighteneth from under heaven, shineth unto the parts that are under heaven, so shall the Son of man be in his day.

25 But first he must suffer many things, and be rejected by this generation.

26 *And as it was in the days of Noe, so shall it be also in the days of the Son of man.

27 They did eat and drink, they married wives, and were given in marriage, until the day that Noe entered into the ark: and the flood came, and destroyed them all.

28 *Likewise, as it was in the days of Lot: They did eat and drink, they bought and sold, they planted and built.

29 And in the day that Lot went out of Sodom, it rained fire and brimstone from heaven, and destroyed them all.

30 Even thus shall it be in the day when the Son of man shall be revealed.

31 In that hour he that shall be on the house-top, and his goods in the house, let him not go down to take them new law, such as are defiled with the leprosy of sin, should apply to the prelate. Hence, says S. Austin, let no one despise God's ordinance, saying that it is sufficient to confess to God alone. Lib. de Visit. Infirm.

VER. 20. When the kingdom of God should come? or when is it to come? when will the Messias come? The Pharisees might say this in a mocking and an insulting manner, to signify that he could not be their true Messias.—The kingdom of God cometh not with observation; that is, so as to be observed; not with great marks of temporal power, as you imagine. Wi.—The Pharisees expected a Messias powerful according to this world, a conqueror, a monarch, a revenger of the injuries of Israel; one who would restore them to liberty, and bless them with temporal goods and prosperity. In Jesus, they saw nothing which corresponded to these magnificent hopes; and therefore asked him, by way of insult and reproach, when this kingdom of God would come, which he so often talked of and announced to his disciples. He answers them, that the manifestation of the Messias, and the establishment of his kingdom, shall not be effected in a conspicuous, splendid manner. It shall be brought about insensibly, and the accomplishment of the designs of the omnipotence of our Lord shall appear a casualty, and the effect of secondary causes. You shall not see the Messias coming at the head of armies, to spread terror and desolation. His arrival shall not be announced by ambassadors, &c., every thing in the establishment of my kingdom shall be the reverse of temporal power. Calmet.

VER. 21. Is within you. It is with you; your Messias is already come.—He standeth in the midst of you, as John the Baptist told you. John i. 26. Wi.

VER. 22. To see one day, &c. Hereafter, when I shall be no longer visibly among you, you shall heartily wish for one day's conversation with me. Wi.

VER. 24. For as the lightning, &c. See Matt. xxiv. 27. Wi.—Christ here alludes to the glory with which he shall appear when he shall come to judge the world, surrounded by his angels, &c., when he will appear like lightning, that shall penetrate the inmost recesses of our souls, and shall suffer no crime, not even the slightest thought of our souls, to pass unnoticed. Ven. Bede.

34 I say to you, ^bin that night there shall be two men in one bed: the one shall be taken, and the other shall be left.

35 Two women shall be grinding together; the one shall be taken, and the other shall be left: two men shall be in the field; the one shall be taken, and the other shall be left.

CHAP. XVIII.

We must pray always. The Pharisee and the Publican. The danger of riches. The blind man is restored to sight.

AND he spoke also a parable to them, that we ought always to pray, and not to faint,

2 Saying: There was a judge in a certain city, who feared not God, nor regarded man.

3 And there was a certain widow in that city, and she came to him, saying: Avenge me of my adversary.

4 And he would not for a long time. But afterwards he said within himself: Although I fear not God, nor regard man,

5 Yet because this widow is troublesome to me, I will avenge her, lest continually coming, she weary me out.

6 And the Lord said: Hear what the unjust judge saith:

7 And will not God avenge his elect, who call to him day and night: and will have patience in their regard?

8 I say to you, he will quickly avenge them. But yet, when the Son of man cometh, shall he find, think you, faith on earth?

tions, and other prophecies of the apostles, according to Lactantius, (lib. 4, c. 21.) fled from the danger beyond the Jordan, into the states of Herod, to Pella and the neighbouring villages. See Eusebius, Eccles. Hist. lib. 3, c. 5.

VER. 34. By these different examples, Christ wishes to insinuate that good and bad men will be found in every state of life. By those in bed, are understood the rich; by those in the mill, are understood the poor; whilst those in the field designate the pastors of his flock, who are labouring in the vineyard of the Lord. S. Cyril and S. Amb.

VER. 37. To the question of his disciples in the preceding verse, our blessed Saviour only returns this enigmatical answer, which seems to mean, that wherever there are guilty Jews, there shall their enemies pursue them and find them out, not only in Jerusalem, but in all the cities of Judea, Galilee, &c., every where the vengeance of the Lord shall follow them, and overtake them. For the interpretation of other parts of this chapter, see S. Matt. xxiv. Calmet.

CHAP. XVIII. VER. 1. Always to pray, i. e. to pray daily, and frequently (WL); and also to walk always in the presence of God, by a spirit of prayer, love, and sorrow for sin.

VER. 2. This judge, who feared not God, nor cared for man, yet yielded to the importunity of the widow, represents the absolute and sovereign power of God. But we must not suppose the Almighty has any of the faults we see in this iniquitous judge. Comparisons are not meant to hold good in every particular. The only consequence to be drawn from the present parable, is this: if a man, who has neither piety nor tenderness for his fellow-creatures, yield to the importunity of a widow, who is not wearied out with repeating her petitions; how much more will God, who is full of bounty and tenderness to man, and only seeks occasions to grant him his gifts, hear the prayers of the fervent, and fill with benedictions the petitioner, who can continue, like the widow, to importune his interference, and can beg without languor or discouragement? Calmet.

VER. 3. Avenge me; i. e. do me justice. It is a Hebraism. WL.

VER. 4. And he would not for a long time. The Almighty does not always ~~grant us as soon as we could wish~~, nor in the manner that seems best to us; but if 9 He spoke also this parable to some who trusted in themselves as just, and despised others.

10 Two men went up into the temple, to pray: the one a Pharisee, and the other a publican:

11 The Pharisee standing, prayed thus with himself: O God, I give thee thanks that I am not as the rest of men, extortioners, unjust, adulterers, nor such as this publican.

12 I fast twice in the week: I give tithes of all that I possess.

13 And the publican, standing afar off, would not so much as lift his eyes towards heaven: but struck his breast, saying: O God, be merciful to me, a sinner.

14 I say to you, this man went down to his house justified rather than the other; "because every one that exalteth himself shall be humbled; and he that humbleth himself shall be exalted.

15 "And they brought to him also infants, that he might touch them. Which when the disciples saw, they rebuked them.

16 But Jesus, calling them together, said: Suffer children to come to me, and forbid them not; for of such is the kingdom of God.

17 Amen, I say to you: Whosoever shall not receive the kingdom of God as a child, shall not enter into it.

18 "And a certain ruler asked him, saying: Good master, what shall I do to possess everlasting life?

19 And Jesus said to him: Why dost thou call me good? None is good but God alone.

20 Thou knowest the commandments:^e Thou shalt not kill: Thou shalt not commit adultery: Thou shalt not steal: Thou shalt not bear false witness: Honour thy father and mother.

21 And he said: All these I have kept from my youth.

22 Now when Jesus had heard this, he said to him: Yet one thing is wanting to thee: sell all that thou hast, we are not always heard according to our desires, we always are as far as is conducive to our salvation. He sometimes delays, in order to exercise our patience, and increase our ardour: sometimes he grants, in his anger, what in his mercy he would refuse. S. Aug. in Psal. xxxvii.

VER. 5. She weary me out.^{*} This, as much as I am able to find out, seems the literal signification both of the Latin and Greek text. WI.

VER. 8. In the Greek, although he suffer for the present the elect to be oppressed. V.—Our Divine Redeemer adds this, to show that faith must necessarily accompany our prayers. For whosoever prays for what he does not believe he shall obtain, will pray in vain. S. Aug. de Verb. Dom. Serm. 36.

VER. 11. The Pharisee standing. The Greek is, standing by himself; i. e. separated from the rest. Some understand this term, standing, as if in opposition to knelling or prostrating, which they suppose to be the general posture in which the Jews offered up their prayers, and that of the humble publican. The Christians borrowed this practice from them. We see the apostles and disciples praying on their knees: Acts vii. 59; ix. 40; xx. 36. In the Old Testament we see the same observed. Solomon, (3 Kings viii. 54,) Daniel, (vi. 10.) and Micah, (vi. 6,) prayed in that posture. Others, however, think that the people generally prayed standing, as there were neither benches nor chairs in the temple. Calmet.—The pride of the Pharisee seems to have consisted in attributing to himself alone the qualities of which he boasted. S. Greg. Mor. l. 23, c. 4.

VER. 14. If any one should ask why the Pharisee is here condemned for speaking some few words in his own commendation, and why the like sentence was not passed on Job, who praised himself much more; the difference is evident: the former praised himself without any necessity, merely with an intention of indulging his vanity, and extolling himself over the poor publican; the latter, being overwhelmed with misery, and upbraided by his friends, as if, forsaken of God, he suffered his present distress in punishment of his crimes, justifies himself by recounting his virtues for the greater glory of God, and to preserve himself and others in the steady practice of virtue, under similar temptations. Theophylactus.

and give to the poor, and thou shalt have treasure in heaven: and come, follow me.

23 He having heard these things, was sorrowful: for he was very rich.

24 And Jesus, seeing him become sorrowful, said: How hardly shall they that have riches, enter into the kingdom of God.

25 For it is easier for a camel to pass through the eye of a needle, than for a rich man to enter into the kingdom of God.

26 And they that heard it, said: Who then can be saved?

27 He said to them: The things that are impossible with men, are possible with God.

28 Then Peter said: Behold we have left all things, and have followed thee.

29 And he said to them: Amen, I say to you, there is no man that hath left a house, or parents, or brethren, or wife, or children, for the kingdom of God's sake, 30 Who shall not receive much more in this present time, and in the world to come, life everlasting.

31 ^aThen Jesus took unto him the twelve, and said to them: Behold, we go up to Jerusalem, and all things shall be accomplished which were written by the prophets, concerning the Son of man.

32 For he shall be delivered to the Gentiles, and shall be mocked, and scourged, and spit upon:

33 And after they have scourged him, they will put him to death, and the third day he shall rise again.

34 And they understood none of these things, and this word was hid from them, and they understood not the things that were said.

35 ^bNow it came to pass, that when he drew nigh to Jericho, a certain blind man sat by the way-side, begging.

36 And when he heard the multitude passing by, he asked what this meant.

37 And they told him that Jesus, of Nazareth, was passing by.

38 And he cried out, saying: Jesus, Son of David, have mercy on me.

39 And they that went before, rebuked him, that he should hold his peace. But he cried out much more: Son of David, have mercy on me.

^a Matt. xx. 17; Mark x. 32.—^b Matt. xx. 29; Mark x. 46.

VER. 34. They understood well enough the sense of the words he spoke to them. But they could not understand how they could be reconciled with the idea they had previously conceived of the Messias. They were scandalized in the first place, to think that God should suffer any thing inflicted by man; they were scandalized in the second place, to hear that sufferings and death could lead to victory and empire; and lastly, they were scandalized, (their own feelings taking the alarm,) lest they should be forced to imitate their Master in this part which he had chosen for himself. A.

* V. 5. Sugillet me, ὑπωπιάζει με. The Greek word literally signifies, lest she give me strokes on the face, that make me appear black and blue; which were called, ὑπόπια. This word, ὑπωπιάζειν, is only used in one other place in the New Testament, (1 Cor. ix. 27,) where S. Paul says, castigo, or contundo corpus meum. Now, as we cannot imagine that this judge feared lest the widow should beat him in this shameful manner, the word metaphorically seems to imply, lest she should injuriously upbraid and continually reproach me.

CHAP. XIX. VER. 2. What sinner can despair, when he sees the Saviour of mankind seeking to save him; when he beholds even a publican, and a rich man at the same time, who, as our Saviour informs us in another place, are so seldom truly converted, brought to the light of faith, and the grace of a true conversion!

40 And Jesus stood, and commanded him to be brought to him. And when he was come near, he asked him, 41 Saying: What wilt thou that I do to thee? But he said: Lord, that I may see.

42 And Jesus said to him: Receive thy sight; thy faith hath made thee whole.

43 And immediately he saw, and followed him, glorifying God. And all the people, when they saw it, gave praise to God.

CHAP. XIX.

Zacheus entertains Christ. The parable of the pounds. Christ rides upon an ass, and weeps over Jerusalem.

AND entering in, he walked through Jericho.

2 And behold there was a man, by name Zacheus; and this was the chief of the publicans, and he was rich.

3 And he sought to see Jesus, who he was: and he could not for the crowd, because he was little of stature.

4 And he ran before, and climbed up into a sycamore tree, that he might see him: for he was to pass that way.

5 And when Jesus came to the place, he looked up, and saw him, and said to him: Zacheus, make haste, and come down; for to-day I must abide in thy house.

6 And he made haste, and came down, and received him with joy.

7 And when they all saw it, they murmured, saying: That he was gone to be a guest with a man that is a sinner.

8 But Zacheus stood, and said to the Lord: Behold, Lord, the half of my goods I give to the poor; and if I have wronged any man of any thing, I restore him fourfold.

9 Jesus said to him: This day is salvation come to this house: because he also is a son of Abraham.

10 ^aFor the Son of man is come to seek, and to save that which was lost.

11 As they were hearing these things, he added and spoke a parable, because he was nigh to Jerusalem: and because they thought that the kingdom of God should immediately be manifested.

12 He said, therefore: ^aA certain nobleman went into a far country, to receive for himself a kingdom, and to return.

^a Matt. xviii. 12.—^a Matt. xxv. 14.

S. Ambrose.—Zacheus (who was a farmer of the customs, not a collector, as some falsely imagine) immediately hearkened to the interior voice of the Almighty, calling him to repentance; he made no delay, and therefore deserved immediately not only to see, but to eat, drink, and converse with Jesus. S. Cyril.—Behold here the three steps of his conversion; 1. an ardent desire of seeing Jesus; 2. the honourable reception he gave him in his house; 3. the complete restitution of all ill-acquired property.

VER. 11. That the kingdom of God should immediately be manifested. The disciples were big with the expectation of the temporal kingdom of the Messias, though he had divers times told them he was to suffer and die on a cross. W1.—Notwithstanding all that Jesus had said to them about his kingdom, his death, his consummation, and resurrection, they still believed that the kingdom of God was going to be manifested, and that Jesus, in this journey, would make himself be acknowledged king by the whole nation of the Jews. They could not lay aside the ideas they had formed of the person and temporal reign of the Messias. Every thing which they could not reconcile to this standard, was completely impenetrable to them. It was a language they could not comprehend. Calmet.

VER. 12. With regard to the instruction, which is meant to be conveyed by this parable; this nobleman is the Son of God, who came among the Jews to take possession of the kingdom, which was his due. But being rejected and treated unworthily, and even put to a disgraceful death on the cross, he will one day come 13 And calling his ten servants, he delivered them ten pounds, and said to them: Trade till I come.

14 But his citizens hated him: and they sent an embassy after him, saying: We will not have this man to reign over us.

15 And it came to pass that he returned, having received the kingdom: and he commanded his servants to be called, to whom he had given the money: that he might know how much every man had gained by trading.

16 And the first came, saying: Lord, thy pound hath gained ten pounds.

17 And he said to him: Well done, thou good servant, because thou hast been faithful in a little, thou shalt have power over ten cities.

18 And the second came, saying: Lord, thy pound hath gained five pounds.

19 And he said to him: Be thou also over five cities.

20 And another came, saying: Lord, behold here is thy pound, which I have kept laid up in a napkin:

21 For I feared thee, because thou art an austere man: thou takest up what thou didst not lay down, and thou reapest what thou didst not sow.

22 He saith to him: Out of thy own mouth I judge thee, thou wicked servant. Thou knewest that I was an austere man, taking up what I laid not down, and reaping that which I did not sow:

23 And why then didst thou not give my money into the bank, that at my coming I might have required it with usury?

24 And he said to them that stood by: Take the pound away from him, and give it to him that hath the ten pounds.

25 And they said to him: Lord, he hath ten pounds.

26 But I say to you, that to every one that hath shall be given, and he shall abound: and from him that hath not, even that which he hath shall be taken from him.

27 But as for those my enemies, who would not have me reign over them, bring them hither; and kill them before me.

28 And when he had said these things, he went before going up to Jerusalem.

29 And it came to pass, when he was come nigh to Bethphage and Bethania, at the mountain called Olivet, he sent two of his disciples, 30 Saying: Go ye into the town, which is over against you; entering into it, you shall find the colt of an ass tied, on which no man hath ever sat: loose him, and bring him hither.

31 And if any man shall ask you: Why do you loose him? You shall say thus unto him: Because the Lord hath need of his service.

32 And they that were sent went their way, and found the colt standing, as he had said to them.

33 And as they were loosing the colt, the owners thereof said to them: Why loose you the colt?

34 But they said: Because the Lord hath need of him.

35 And they brought him to Jesus. And casting their garments on the colt, they set Jesus thereon.

36 And as they went, they spread their clothes underneath in the way.

37 And when he was now coming near the descent of Mount Olivet, the whole multitude of his disciples began with joy to praise God with a loud voice, for all the mighty works they had seen, 38 Saying: Blessed is he who cometh king in the name of the Lord, peace in heaven, and glory on high.

39 And some of the Pharisees, from amongst the multitude, said to him: Master, rebuke thy disciples.

40 And he said to them: I tell you, that if these should hold their peace, the stones will cry out.

41 And when he drew near, seeing the city, he wept over it, saying:

42 If thou also hadst known, and that in this thy day, the things that are for thy peace: but now they are hidden from thy eyes.

43 For the days shall come upon thee: and thy enemies shall cast a trench about thee, and compass thee round, and straiten thee on every side, 44 And beat thee flat to the ground, and thy children who are in thee: and they shall not leave in thee a stone upon a stone: because thou hast not known the time of thy visitation.

45 And entering into the temple, he began to cast out them that sold therein, and them that bought, again, armed with vengeance, and inflict the effects of his anger upon them. This was partly fulfilled at the destruction of Jerusalem, and will be completed at the general judgment. Calmet. V.

VER. 13. Ten pieces of money, each of which was called a mina. To translate pounds, gives the English reader a false notion, the Roman coin called a mina not corresponding to our pound. Wi.—A mina was 12½ ounces, which, at five shillings per ounce, is £3 2s. 6d.

VER. 19. All the disciples of Christ have not the same degree of honour in this world, nor in the next; because all do not make an equal use of the graces they receive. Calmet.

VER. 34. It may here be asked, how the owners of the colt knew who the Lord was, of whom the disciples spoke? It may be answered, that perhaps they had already heard that Jesus of Nazareth, whom the Jews thought was to be their temporal king, was coming about that time to Jerusalem, and that they saw from their dress, or other external marks, that they were the disciples of Jesus. Dionysius.

VER. 40. The stones. This is a proverb, as if he had said, God has resolved to glorify me this day, in order to fulfil the prophecies. Nothing can hinder the execution of his decrees; if men were silent, he would make even the stones to speak. Calmet.

VER. 41. He wept. S. Epiphanius tells us, that some of the orthodox of his time, offended at these words, omitted them in their copies, as if to shed tears were a weakness unworthy of Christ: but this true reading of the evangelist is found in all copies, and received by all the faithful; and the liberty which those who changed them took, was too dangerous ever to be approved of by the Church. Neither do these tears argue in Jesus Christ any thing unworthy of his supreme majesty or wisdom. Our Saviour possessed all the human passions, but not the defects of them. Calmet.

VER. 42. If thou also hadst known. It is a broken sentence, as it were in a transport of grief; and we may understand, thou wouldst also weep. Didst thou know, even at this day, that peace and reconciliation which God still offers to thee. Wi.—What can be more tender than the apostrophe here made use of by our Saviour! Hadst thou but known, &c., that is, didst thou but know how severe a punishment is about to be inflicted upon thee, for the numberless transgressions of thy people, thou likewise wouldst weep; but, alas! hardened in iniquity, thou still rejoicest, ignorant of the punishment hanging over thy head. Just men have daily occasion to bewail, like our blessed Redeemer, the blindness of the wicked, unable to see, through their own perversity, the miserable state of their souls, and the imminent danger they are every moment exposed to, of losing themselves for ever. Of these, Solomon cries out, (Prov. ii. 13,) They leave the right way, and walk through dark ways. We ought to imitate this compassion of our blessed Redeemer; and, as he wept over the calamities of the unfortunate Jerusalem, though determined on his destruction; so we ought to bewail the sins not only of our friends, but likewise of our enemies, and daily offer up our prayers for their conversion. D. Dionysius.

VER. 43. And compass thee, &c. Christ's prophecy is a literal description of what happened to Jerusalem, under Titus. Wi.

46 *Saying to them: It is written: My house is the house of prayer. But you have made it a den of thieves.

47 And he was teaching daily in the temple. And the chief priests, and the Scribes, and the rulers of the people, sought to destroy him:

48 And they found not what to do to him. For all the people were held in suspense, hearing him.

CHAP. XX.

The parable of the husbandmen. Of paying tribute to Cæsar: and of the resurrection of the dead.

AND^b it came to pass, in one of the days when he was teaching the people in the temple, and preaching the gospel, the chief priests and the Scribes, with the ancients, met together,

2 And spoke to him, saying: Tell us, by what authority dost thou these things? or, who is he that hath given thee this authority?

3 And Jesus answering, said to them: I will also ask you one word. Answer me:

4 The baptism of John, was it from heaven, or of men?

5 But they thought within themselves, saying: If we shall say, From heaven: he will say: Why then did you not believe him?

6 But if we say, Of men: the whole people will stone us: for they are certain that John was a prophet.

7 And they answered, that they knew not whence it was.

8 And Jesus said to them: Neither do I tell you by what authority I do these things.

9 And he began to speak to the people this parable: *A man planted a vineyard, and let it out to husbandmen: and he was abroad for a long time.

10 And at the season he sent a servant to the husbandmen, that they should give him of the fruit of the vineyard. But they beat him, and sent him away empty.

11 And again he sent another servant. And they beat him also, and treating him reproachfully, sent him away empty.

12 And again he sent the third: and they wounded him also, and cast him out.

13 Then the lord of the vineyard said: What shall I do? I will send my beloved son: it may be, when they see him, they will reverence him.

14 But when the husbandmen saw him, they thought within themselves, saying: This is the heir; let us kill him, that the inheritance may be ours.

15 And casting him out of the vineyard, they killed him. What, therefore, will the lord of the vineyard do to them?

16 He will come, and will destroy these husbandmen, and will give the vineyard to others. And when they heard this, they said to him: God forbid.

17 But he looking on them, said: What is this then that is written: "The stone which the builders rejected, the same is become the head of the corner?"

18 Whosoever shall fall upon that stone, shall be bruised: and upon whomsoever it shall fall, it will dash him to pieces.

19 And the chief priests, and the Scribes, sought to lay hands on him the same hour: but they feared the people: for they knew that he spoke this parable against them.

20 *And being upon the watch, they sent spies, who should feign themselves just, that they might take hold of him in his words, that they might deliver him up to the authority and power of the governor.

21 And they asked him, saying: Master, we know that thou speakest and teachest rightly: and thou hast no respect of person, but teachest the way of God in truth:

22 Is it lawful for us to give tribute to Cæsar, or not?

23 But he, considering their deceit, said to them: Why tempt you me?

24 Show me a penny. Whose image and inscription hath it? They answering, said to him: Cæsar's.

25 And he said to them: *Render, therefore, to Cæsar the things that are Cæsar's: and to God the things that are God's.

26 And they could not reprehend his word before the people: and wondering at his answer, they held their peace.

27 *And there came to him some of the Sadducees, who deny that there is any resurrection, and they asked him,

VER. 48. All the people were held in suspense, inasmuch as they heard him with so great attention. Wi.—The original Greek, ἐκπέματο αὐτοῦ ἀκούων, shows how eagerly they caught the words that dropped from his sacred lips, all enraptured with the wisdom of his answers, and the commanding superiority of his doctrines. Seneca (Controv. ix. 1) uses a similar turn of expression: Ex vultu dicentis pendent omnium vultus. The chief priests and rulers were all apprehension lest the people, who followed Jesus with such avidity, and who had conceived such high sentiments of his character, might prevent the execution of their murderous designs. . . .

CHAP. XX. VER. 1. In one of the days. This happened in the last week, (on the Tuesday,) two or three days before Christ suffered. See the contents of this chapter, Matt. xxi. and xxii., and Mark xi. and xii. Wi.

VER. 2. Authority? Our Saviour himself teaches, that if he had not proved the Divinity of his mission, by his doctrine and works, it had been no sin to disbelieve or reject him. John v. 31 and 36, and also x. 25, 37, and xv. 22, 24.

VER. 4. Jesus does not gratify them by a direct answer; they did not deserve it, because they only interrogated him through captious and improper motives. He only replies by casting on them the very difficulties with which they sought to entangle him. Calmet.—Our Divine Redeemer proposes to the chief priests a question concerning S. John Baptist, to show them how inconsistent was their uniform opposition to the ways of God. Because, though they believed in what was preached by S. John, (at least outwardly, through fear of the Jews,) yet they would not believe him, or his doctrines, to whom S. John had given testimony, "That he was the Lamb of God, that had come to take away the sins of the world." Theophylactus.

VER. 9. A long time. Not that God (who is here represented by the man that planted a vineyard) confines himself to any particular place, either distant or near; but he only seems to absent himself, in order that when he comes to receive the fruit of the vineyard, he may punish the negligent more severely, and reward the diligent with greater liberality. S. Ambrose.

VER. 15. As this whole parable may be applied exactly to the Jews, so the prophets, and Christ; so may this last part, with no less accuracy, be applied to our Saviour. The husbandmen, before they killed the lord's beloved son, first cast him out of the vineyard. So the Jews did not kill the Son of God immediately themselves: they first cast him out from themselves, into the hands of Pilate, a Gentile, and then procured his death. Theophylactus.

VER. 18. Fall upon. That is, whosoever sins against God, yet believes, will be spared by God for a short time, in order to his repentance, though he kills his own soul by mortal sin: but, upon whomsoever it shall fall, that is, he who denies Christ, and continues on hardened in his sin, upon him the fury of God shall fall, and he shall be utterly destroyed. It will grind him to powder, like the dust which the wind driveth from the face of the earth. Psal. i. Ven. Bede.

VER. 22. If our Divine Saviour had returned them for answer, that they ought to give tribute to Cæsar, they would have accused him of being an enemy to the law; but if, on the contrary, he said it was not lawful, they would then have accused him to Pilate as an enemy to the state. Theophylactus.

VER. 26. We may here be astonished at the incredulity of the chiefs of the Jews, who, though they ought to have admired his wisdom, as something Divine, and believed in him, are only surprised that he should have escaped their duplicity and snares. Ven. Bede.

28 Saying: Master, Moses wrote unto us: "If any man's brother die, having a wife, and he hath been without children, that his brother should take her to wife, and raise up seed to his brother.

29 There were therefore seven brethren: and the first took a wife, and died without sons.

30 And the next took her to wife, and he also died without a son.

31 And the third took her. And in like manner all the seven, and they left no seed, and died.

32 Last of all the woman died also.

33 In the resurrection, therefore, whose wife of them shall she be? since the seven had her to wife.

34 And Jesus said to them: The children of this world marry, and are given in marriage:

35 But they that shall be accounted worthy of that world, and of the resurrection from the dead, shall neither be married, nor take wives.

36 Neither can they die any more: for they are equal to angels, and are the children of God, since they are the children of resurrection.

37 Now that the dead rise again, Moses also showed at the bush, "when he calleth the Lord, The God of Abraham, and the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob.

38 For he is not the God of the dead, but of the living: for all live to him.

39 And some of the Scribes answering, said to him: Master, thou hast said well.

40 And after that they durst not ask him any more questions.

41 But he said to them: How say they that Christ is the son of David?

42 And David himself saith in the book of psalms: "The Lord said to my Lord, sit thou on my right hand, 43 Till I make thy enemies thy footstool.

44 David then calleth him Lord: and how is he his son?

45 And in the hearing of all the people, he said to his disciples

46 "Beware of the Scribes, who desire to walk in long robes, and love salutations in the market-place, and the first chairs in the synagogues, and the chief rooms at feasts:

47 Who devour the houses of widows, feigning long prayer. These shall receive greater damnation.

CHAP. XXI.

The widow's mites. The signs that should forerun the destruction of Jerusalem, and the end of the world.

AND "looking on, he saw the rich men cast their gifts into the treasury.

2 And he saw also a certain poor widow casting in two brass mites.

3 And he said: Verily I say to you, that this poor widow hath cast in more than they all.

4 For all these have, of their abundance, cast into the offerings of God: but she, of her want, hath cast in all her living that she had.

5 And as some were saying of the temple, that it was adorned with goodly stones and gifts, he said:

6 These things which you see, "the days will come, in which there shall not be left a stone upon a stone, that shall not be thrown down.

7 And they asked him, saying: Master, when shall these things be: and what shall be the sign when they shall begin to come to pass?

8 And he said: Take heed that you be not seduced; for many will come in my name, saying, I am he: and the time is at hand: go ye not, therefore, after them.

9 And when you shall hear of wars and seditions, be not terrified: these things must first come to pass, but the end is not yet immediately.

10 Then he said to them: Nation shall rise against nation, and kingdom against kingdom.

11 And there shall be great earthquakes in divers places, and pestilences and famines, and terrors from heaven, and there shall be great signs.

12 But before all these things they will lay their hands on you, and persecute you, delivering you up to the

VER. 36. The children of resurrection: i. e. of the just, who shall rise to a happy resurrection: not but that the wicked shall also rise, but to their condemnation and greater misery. Wi.—Jesus Christ begins with stating the wide difference between the state of things in this mortal life and in that which is to come: that marriage, necessary here, will be unnecessary hereafter. For, in this life, they are children of men, subject to death, and therefore under the necessity of continuing their race by generation; but in the next life, they shall be children of resurrection, living for eternity, never to die, and consequently sons of God, and immortal. Calmet.

VER. 39. The Scribes, seeing the Sadducees thus silenced, seem to side entirely with our Saviour, saying: Master, thou hast said well. And, apprehensive of being exposed to a similar disgrace and discomfiture themselves, they were afraid to ask him any more questions. But this was only an apparent and false conformity; for they afterwards procured him to be put to death by the Romans. Thus mortal hatred or envy may indeed be smothered for a time, but can hardly ever be extinguished. Theophylactus.

VER. 44. Christ indeed is both the Lord and Servant of David. He is Servant, according to the flesh, being a descendant of David; and he is Lord, according to the spirit, being Lord of all. S. Chrys.—He has two natures: the nature of man, according to which, David was his father; and the nature of God, according to which, he was Son of God, and Lord of David. Thus is the difficulty solved.

VER. 46. The reproach he makes the Scribes in this place, is similar to what he had objected against the Pharisees. S. Matt. xxiii. 5. Both these sects were filled with the same spirit of pride and vanity, which showed itself in their dress, in their exterior, and in every part of their conduct. If our Saviour here attacks them upon their long trains, or other affected forms of their dress, he does not pronounce an absolute condemnation of things, which in themselves are indifferent, but of their abuse of them, making them serve only the purposes of vanity and affectation. Calmet.

Mark xii. 38; Supra, xi. 43.—^e Mark xii. 41.—^f Matt. xxiv. 2; Mark xiii. 2; Supra, xix. 44.

VER. 47. These shall receive a greater condemnation, because they not only commit ordinary evil actions, but also make their prayers, and virtue itself, a cloak to their hypocrisy and vanity, and the cause of their greater depravity, famishing the widows whom themselves ought to compassionate and relieve. Theophylactus.—Or, the greater honours and rewards they receive for their wickedness, the greater punishment must they endure to expiate it. Ven. Bede.

CHAP. XXI. VER. 3. Whatever we offer to the Almighty with a good intention, is acceptable to him; for he regards not the gift, but the heart of the giver. Ven. Bede.—God does not appreciate the smallness of the gift, but the greatness of the affection with which it is offered. S. Chrys. hom. 1, ad Hebraeos.

VER. 7. Master, when shall these things be? &c. See the annotations, Matt. xxiv. 3. Wi.

VER. 8. In my name. They shall not say that they belong to me, or that I sent them; but they shall take to themselves my name, viz. Christ, or Messiah, which title is incommunicable to any but myself. In effect, in less than two centuries there appeared many false Christs and impostors, who pretended to be the one that was to come, the desired of nations. Calmet.

VER. 11. Terrors from heaven. Josephus, in his history of this war, in which Jerusalem was destroyed by Titus, (lib. 7, c. 12,) relates, at length, many of the prodigies which were the forerunners of the dreadful end of this unfortunate city. During a whole year a meteor, like a flaming sword, was seen impending over the city. There were likewise seen in the air, appearances of chariots and numerous armies, which pressed one upon another. On the night of Pentecost, the priests, after a confused noise, heard distinctly these words, "Let us go hence:" which are supposed to have been spoken by the angels, who had hitherto guarded and protected the holy city, but now were taking their leave of it. Josephus was in the Roman camp, before the city, during the siege, and an eye-witness of what passed on the occasion. A.

synagogues and into prisons, dragging you before kings and governors, for my name's sake :

13 And it shall happen to you for a testimony.

14 Lay it up, therefore, in your hearts, not to meditate before how you shall answer.

15 For I will give you a mouth and wisdom, which all your adversaries shall not be able to resist and gainsay.

16 And you shall be betrayed by your parents and brethren, and kinsmen and friends : and some of you they will put to death.

17 And you shall be hated by all men, for my name's sake.

18 But a hair of your head shall not perish.

19 In your patience you shall possess your souls,

20 ^a And when you shall see Jerusalem compassed about with an army : then know that the desolation thereof is at hand.

21 Then let them that are in Judea, flee to the mountains : and let them that are in the midst thereof, depart out : and let not them that are in the countries, enter into it.

22 For these are the days of vengeance, that all things may be fulfilled that are written.

23 But woe to them that are with child, and give suck in those days ; for there shall be great distress in the land, and wrath upon this people.

24 And they shall fall by the edge of the sword : and shall be led away captives into all nations, and Jerusalem shall be trodden down by the Gentiles : till the times of the nations be fulfilled.

25 ^b And there shall be signs in the sun, and in the moon, and in the stars : and upon the earth distress of nations, by reason of the confusion of the roaring of the sea and of the waves :

26 Men withering away for fear, and expectation of what shall come upon the whole world. For the powers of heaven shall be moved :

27 And then they shall see the Son of man coming in a cloud with great power and majesty.

28 ^c But when these things begin to come to pass, look up, and lift up your heads : because your redemption is at hand.

VER. 15. I will give, &c. In some parts it is said, that Christ himself will speak by the mouths of his disciples, as in this passage of S. Luke ; in other places, as S. Matt. xvi., that the Father will speak ; and S. Matt. x., that the Spirit of the Father will speak. In these different texts there is no contradiction, but a most perfect harmony. What one of the Divine Persons says, all three say ; for the voice of the Trinity is only one. S. Ambrose.

VER. 22. Days of vengeance, &c. These are truly the days of vengeance ; days, that will arise to punish this people for having spilt the blood of the Lord. Ven. Bede.

VER. 24. Whoever reads Josephus's history of the calamities which befell Jerusalem before its destruction, will find none of these terrible menaces unfulfilled. Seventy thousand were carried away captives in this war. After the soldiers were weary of killing, Titus ordered the finest of the young men to be kept to adorn his triumph.—Trodden down, &c. After Jerusalem had been taken and destroyed by the Romans, another city was built from its ruins, called Ælia, after the name of the emperor Ælius Adrian. This was inhabited by pagans and some Christians ; for the Jews were forbidden even to come near it for more than two or three centuries. Tertullian informs us that they even bought, at a great price, permission to see it at a distance, and drop a tear over the ashes of their ancient and ill-fated country. Thus was Jerusalem trodden under foot, till the time of the nations was accomplished : that is, till Christianity in every nation, had triumphed

29 And he spoke to them a similitude : See the fig-tree, and all the trees :

30 When they now shoot forth their fruit, you know that summer is nigh.

31 So you also, when you shall see these things come to pass, know that the kingdom of God is at hand.

32 Amen, I say to you, this generation shall not pass away, till all things be fulfilled.

33 Heaven and earth shall pass away : but my words shall not pass away.

34 And take heed to yourselves, lest perhaps your hearts be overcharged with surfeiting, and drunkenness, and the cares of this life : and that day come upon you suddenly.

35 For as a snare shall it come upon all that sit upon the face of the whole earth.

36 Watch ye, therefore, praying at all times, that you may be accounted worthy to escape all these things that are to come, and to stand before the Son of man.

37 And in the day-time he was teaching in the temple : but at night going out, he abode in the mount that is called Olivet.

38 And all the people came early in the morning to him in the temple, to hear him.

CHAP. XXII.

The treason of Judas. The last supper. The first part of the history of the Passion.

NOW^a the feast of unleavened bread, which is called the Pasch, was at hand.

2 And the chief priests, and the Scribes, sought how they might put Jesus to death : but they feared the people.

3 ^c And satan entered into Judas, who was surnamed Iscariot, one of the twelve.

4 And he went, and discoursed with the chief priests, and the magistrates, how he might betray him to them.

5 And they were glad, and covenanted to give him money.

6 And he promised. And he sought for an opportunity to betray him in the absence of the multitude.

7 And the day of the unleavened bread came, on which it was necessary that the Pasch should be killed.

over the persecution of paganism. Calmet.—Till the times of the nations be fulfilled. According to the common exposition of this, and some other places, the Jews, from the time of the destruction of their temple and city under Titus Vespasian, and especially from their utter destruction under the emperor Adrian, in punishment of their obstinate blindness, shall remain dispersed through the world under miseries and oppressions, till the gospel hath been preached to all nations : then, not long before the end of the world, the Jews shall be converted, and acknowledge Jesus to be their true Messiah. See Rom. xi. 25. Wi.

VER. 26. The powers of heaven, &c. Some explain this of the angels, who shall be terrified and tremble at the sight of so many calamities. Others understand it of the heavenly bodies, the sun, moon, stars, &c., which shall in some sort, likewise, be confused in the general dissolution. Calmet.

VER. 27. The Jews shall not see him corporally, but at the last judgment. Then, says the Scripture, (Zac. xii. 10,) They shall see him whom they pierced with nails. But in the ruin of Jerusalem, all who will compare his predictions with the event, can evidently see that this was the day of his coming, so plainly marked in his words. Every body could see that this was evidently the hand of God that punished them. Calmet.

VER. 37. In the mount that is called Olivet. In this last week, Christ, after preaching in the day-time in the temple, went constantly in the evenings to pray in the garden of Gethsemani, as Judas knew very well. See chap. xxii. 39. Wi.

CHAP. XXII. VER. 3. And satan entered into Judas. The meaning only seems to be, that the devil tempted and overcame him. Wi.

CHRIST BLESSING THE BREAD

8 And he sent Peter and John, saying: Go and prepare us the Pasch, that we may eat.

9 But they said: Where wilt thou that we prepare?

10 And he said to them: Behold, as you go into the city, there shall meet you a man carrying a pitcher of water: follow him into the house, which he entereth into:

11 And you shall say to the master of the house: The master saith to thee: Where is the guest-chamber, where I may eat the Pasch with my disciples?

12 And he will show you a large dining-room furnished: and there prepare.

13 And they going, found as he had said to them, and they made ready the Pasch.

14 *And when the hour was come, he sat down, and the twelve apostles with him.

15 And he said to them: With desire I have desired to eat this Pasch with you before I suffer.

16 For I say to you, that from this time I will not eat it, till it be fulfilled in the kingdom of God.

17 And having taken the chalice, he gave thanks, and said: Take, and divide it among you.

18 For I say to you, that I will not drink of the fruit of the vine, till the kingdom of God come..

19 *And taking bread, he gave thanks, and brake, and gave to them, saying: This is my body which is given for you: Do this for a commemoration of me.

20 In like manner, the chalice also, after he had supped, saying: This is the chalice, the new testament in my blood, which shall be shed for you.

21 *But yet behold, the hand of him that betrayeth me, is with me on the table.

22 And the Son of man indeed goeth,^d according to that which is determined: but woe to that man by whom he shall be betrayed.

23 And they began to inquire among themselves, which of them it was that should do this thing.

VER. 15. With desire I have desired: lit. *with a desire have I desired. The repetition expresseth a great and earnest desire. Wi.

VER. 17. Taken the chalice. This is not the chalice of his blood, (the latter is spoken of ver. 20, and 1 Cor. xi. 25,) but it is the cup which the master of the repast blessed with ceremony, then drank of it, and gave it to all the guests. The modern Jews still observe this custom; not only on the Pasch, but on all other great feasts. The father of the family pours wine into a cup, takes it in his right hand, elevates it, blesses it, tastes, and gives it round to the invited. Our Saviour on this occasion complies with the custom; and after supper takes the chalice, which he converts into his own blood. Calnet.

VER. 18. I will not drink, &c., i. e. from this hour of the supper, to the time of my resurrection, in which he will come in the kingdom of God, he would not taste wine. For S. Peter testifies, (Acts x. 41,) that he took meat and drink after his resurrection. Ven. Bede.

VER. 19. THIS IS MY BODY. See the annotations on the same words of consecration, Matt. xxvi. 26; Mark xiv. 22, and 1 Cor. xi. 24.—Do this for a commemoration of me. By these words he gave a power and precept to them, and their successors, to all bishops and priests, to consecrate and offer up the same; yet so, that they are only the ministers and instruments of Jesus Christ, who instituted this sacrifice, this and all other sacraments, who is the chief and principal Priest, or offerer.—This holy sacrifice and sacrament is to be offered and received with a devout and grateful remembrance of Christ's benefits, and especially of his sufferings and death for all mankind. But to teach that it is a bare, though devout memorial, or a remembrance only, so as to exclude the real presence of Christ, under the outward appearances of bread and wine, is inconsistent with the constant belief and consent of all Christian churches, both of the west and east, and contradicts the plain words of Christ. Wi.—This sacrifice and sacrament is to be continued in the Church to the end of the world, to show forth the death of Christ, until he cometh. But this commemoration, or remembrance, is by no means inconsistent with the real presence of his body and blood, under these sacramental veils, which represent his death; on the contrary, it is the manner that he himself hath commanded of commemorating and celebrating his death, by offering in sacrifice, and receiving in the sacrament, that body and blood by which we were 24 And there was also a strife amongst them, which of them should seem to be greater.

25 And he said to them: *The kings of the Gentiles lord it over them; and they that have power over them, are called beneficent.

26 But you not so: but he who is the greatest among you, let him be as the least: and he that is the leader, as he that serveth.

27 For which is greater, he that sitteth at table, or he that serveth? Is not he that sitteth at table? but I am in the midst of you, as he that serveth.

28 And you are they who have continued with me in my temptations:

29 And I appoint to you, as my Father hath appointed to me, a kingdom,

30 That you may eat and drink at my table, in my kingdom: and may sit upon thrones, judging the twelve tribes of Israel.

31 And the Lord said: Simon, Simon, behold satan hath desired to have you, that he may sift you as wheat:

32 But I have prayed for thee, that thy faith fail not: and thou being once converted, confirm thy brethren.

33 And he said to him: Lord, I am ready to go with thee, both into prison and to death.

34 *And he said: I say to thee, Peter, the cock shall not crow this day, till thou thrice deny that thou knowest me. And he said to them:

35 *When I sent you without purse, and scrip, and shoes, did you want any thing?

36 But they said: Nothing. Then said he to them: But now he that hath a purse, let him take it, and likewise a scrip: and he that hath not, let him sell his coat, and buy a sword.

37 For I say to you, that yet this, that is written, must be fulfilled in me: *And with the wicked he was reputed: For the things concerning me have an end.

redeemed. Ch.—Which is given, &c. He does not say, which shall be offered for you, but which is offered; † because it was already a true sacrifice, in which Christ was truly present, which he offered in advance to his eternal Father, before that which he was going to offer the next day, in a different manner, on the cross. This sacrifice was the consummation of the figurative Pasch, and the promise or pledge of the bloody offering, which Christ would make on the cross. . . . It was not the mere figure of the blood of Jesus Christ, which was spilt on the cross, nor a mere figure of his body, which was crucified, but the true body and the true blood. In the same manner it is both the one and the other which are given, and really present, in the Eucharist. Calnet.

VER. 30. That you may eat and drink of the spiritual banquet of the joys of heaven, which in the Scriptures are divers times compared to a feast or banquet. Wi.

VER. 31. Satan hath desired to have you, that he may sift you as wheat. In these words is expressed both what satan desired, and what God permitted. Satan desired leave to tempt them, that he might make them fall from their faith in Christ. Almighty God permitted this temptation, this trial, to convince them how weak they were of themselves: he permitted their frailty to be partly overcome, yet so that, rising again by his grace, they should be cleansed and purified as wheat when it is sifted: and that shortly after, being strengthened and confirmed by the coming of the Holy Ghost, they might become new men, enabled to stand firm against all the attacks of their greatest adversaries. Wi.

VER. 32. That thy faith fail not. The faith of Peter, established by the coming of the Holy Ghost, hath never failed, nor can fail, being built upon a rock, which is Christ himself, and being guided by the Spirit of truth, as Christ promised. John xv. 26, and xvi. 13.—And thou being once converted, confirm thy brethren, even all the other apostles and bishops, over whom I have made and constituted thee and thy successors the chief head, that such a head being appointed by Divine authority, all occasions of schism and divisions might cease, says S. Jerom. Wi.

VER. 36. That hath not, &c. Whilst the apostles are contending for pre-rogative, he reminds them that now is the time of danger and slaughter; for I, your Master, (says he,) shall be led to a dishonourable death, and reputed among the wicked: as all which hath been foretold of me shall have their end; that is, be fulfilled. Theophylactus.

38 But they said : Lord, behold here are two swords. And he said to them : It is enough.

39 "And going out, he went, according to his custom, to the Mount of Olives. And his disciples also followed him.

40 And when he was come to the place, he said to them : Pray, lest ye enter into temptation.

41 "And he was withdrawn away from them a stone's cast : and kneeling down, he prayed, 42 Saying : Father, if thou wilt, remove this chalice from me : nevertheless, not my will, but thine, be done.

43 And there appeared to him an angel from heaven, strengthening him. And being in an agony, he prayed the longer.

44 And his sweat became as drops of blood trickling down upon the ground.

45 And when he rose up from prayer, and was come to his disciples, he found them sleeping for sorrow.

46 And he said to them : Why sleep you ? arise, pray, lest you enter into temptation.

47 "As he was yet speaking, behold a multitude : and he that was called Judas, one of the twelve, went before them, and drew near to Jesus, to kiss him.

48 And Jesus said to him : Judas, dost thou betray the Son of man with a kiss ?

49 And they that were about him, seeing what would follow, said to him : Lord, shall we strike with the sword ?

50 And one of them struck the servant of the high priest, and cut off his right ear.

51 But Jesus answering, said : Suffer ye thus far. And when he had touched his ear, he healed him.

52 And Jesus said to the chief priests, and magistrates of the temple, and the ancients that were come to him : Are you come out, as it were against a thief, with swords and clubs ?

53 When I was daily with you in the temple, you did not stretch forth your hands against me : but this is your hour, and the power of darkness.

54 "Then apprehending him, they led him to the high priest's house : but Peter followed afar off.

VER. 38. Behold here are two swords, &c. The disciples not understanding the hidden meaning of the words in the preceding verse, and thinking they should have need of swords against the attack of the traitor Judas, say, Behold here two swords. S. Cyril.

VER. 43. An angel . . . strengthening him. Christ, our Redeemer, was truly God and truly man. And being made man by a real union of his Divine person and nature to our weak and infirm human nature, he likewise took upon him our infirmities, sin excepted. We must consider him as man when we read of his being tempted in the wilderness, (Matt. iv.,) when he wept at the raising of Lazarus out of the grave, (John xi.,) as often as we read of his praying ; and here, when we read of his praying, and redoubling his prayer in the garden, when we find him seized with fear, sadness, and grief : for though, as God, he could prevent and hinder these passions and affectionate natural to man, yet he could also permit them to affect his human nature ; as he permitted himself to be seized with hunger, after fasting forty days ; and so he permitted his human nature to be seized with fear and grief in this garden of Gethsemani. As angels came and ministered to him after his fast in the wilderness, so an angel came as it were to propose to him the Divine decree, that he was to suffer and die for the redemption of mankind ; and as man, he is said to be strengthened and comforted by the angel : he, who, as God, was Lord and Maker of the angels, and so needed not to be strengthened by his creatures. — In an agony. This Greek word signifies, a strife or combat ; not that there could be any opposition or contrariety in the interior of Christ, whose human will was always perfectly subject to his Divine will, and the sensitive part to reason : yet, inasmuch as he was truly man, his human nature dreaded all those sufferings which at that time were represented to his soul, and which in a few hours he was to undergo. Wi.

VER. 44. And his sweat became as drops of blood, &c. This passage of 55 "And when they had kindled a fire in the midst of the hall, and were sitting about it, Peter was in the midst of them.

56 Whom, when a certain servant maid had seen sitting at the light, and had looked upon him, she said : This man was also with him.

57 But he denied him, saying : Woman, I know him not.

58 And after a little while, another seeing him, said : Thou also art one of them. But Peter said : O man, I am not.

59 "And about the space of one hour after, another man affirmed, saying : Surely this man was also with him : for he is also a Galilean.

60 And Peter said : Man, I know not what thou sayest. And immediately, while he was yet speaking, the cock crew.

61 And the Lord turning, looked on Peter. And Peter remembered the word of the Lord, how he had said : "Before the cock crow, thou shalt deny me thrice.

62 And Peter went out, and wept bitterly.

63 And the men that held him, mocked him, and struck him.

64 And they blindfolded him, and smote him on the face. And they asked him, saying : Prophesy, who is it that struck thee ?

65 And many other things, blaspheming, they said against him.

66 "And as soon as it was day, the ancients of the people, and the chief priests, and Scribes, came together, and they brought him into their council, saying : If thou be the Christ, tell us.

67 And he said to them : If I shall tell you, you will not believe me :

68 And if I shall also ask you, you will not answer me, nor let me go.

69 But hereafter the Son of man shall be sitting on the right hand of the power of God.

70 Then said they all : Art thou then the Son of God ? And he said : You say that I am.

Christ's bloody sweat, and of the apparition of the angel, was heretofore wanting in divers both Greek and Latin copies ; as appears by S. Jeron. (l. 2, cont. Pelagianos, tom. 4, part 2, p. 521,) and by S. Hilary, l. 10, de Trin. p. 1062. Nov. Ed. It seems to have been left out by ignorant transcribers, who thought it not consistent with the dignity of Christ. But we find it in the above-said place, in S. Jeron. in S. Chrys. (hom. 84, in Matt.) in S. Aug. (in Psal. xli., tom. 4, p. 1564, and in Psal. xciii., p. 1013,) in S. Epiphanius in Ancorato, p. 36, Ed. Petav. Wi.

* V. 15. With a desire have I desired. This is commonly reputed a Hebraism, or form of speech peculiar to the Hebrews : hearing, I have heard ; seeing, I have seen, &c. But the judicious critic, Mr. Blackwall, has produced parallel expressions out of the most exact Greek classics, in his learned book, entitled, The Sacred Classics defended and illustrated ; and has clearly proved, by examples, that many forms of speech, called, reputed, and carpied at, as Hebraisms, are frequently found in the best Greek classics. Wi.

† V. 19. In the original, the present tense is used in this and in the following verse. Τοῦτο ἐστὶ τὸ αἷμά μου, τὸ ὑπὲρ ὑμῶν διδόμενον. And, Τοῦτο τὸ ποτήριον . . . τὸ ὑπὲρ ὑμῶν ἐκχυνόμενον. Here we must also remark, that the relative τὸ, which, is not governed, or ruled (as some would perhaps think) of the noun, blood, but of the word chalice, or cup (ποτήριον) ; which evidently sheweth that the blood, as the contents of the chalice, or as in the chalice, is shed for us (in the present tense, for so the Greek hath it, and not only as upon the cross) : and, therefore, as it followeth hence evidently, that it is no bare figure, but his blood indeed, so it followeth necessarily that it is a sacrifice and propitiatory, as shed for our sins. For all who know the Scripture phraseology, know also that blood to be shed for sin, is to be sacrificed in atonement for sin.

71 Then they said: What need we any farther testimony? For we ourselves have heard it from his own mouth.

CHAP. XXIII.

The continuation of the history of the Passion.

AND the whole multitude of them rose up, and led him away to Pilate.

2 And they began to accuse him, saying: We have found this man perverting our nation, and forbidding to give tribute to Cæsar, and saying that he is Christ, the king.

3 And Pilate asked him, saying: Art thou the king of the Jews? And he answered, and said: Thou sayest it.

4 Then Pilate said to the chief priests, and to the multitude: I find no cause in this man.

5 But they were more earnest, saying: He stirreth up the people, teaching throughout all Judea, beginning from Galilee to this place.

6 And Pilate hearing of Galilee, asked if the man were a Galilean?

7 And when he understood that he belonged to Herod's jurisdiction, he sent him away to Herod, who himself was also at Jerusalem in those days.

8 And Herod seeing Jesus, was very glad, for he was desirous of a long time to see him, because he had heard many things of him: and he hoped to see some miracle wrought by him.

9 And he questioned him with many words. But he answered him nothing.

10 And the chief priests, and the Scribes, stood by, earnestly accusing him.

11 And Herod, with his soldiers, despised him: and mocked him, putting on him a white garment, and sent him back to Pilate.

12 And Herod and Pilate were made friends together that same day: for before they were enemies one to another.

13 Then Pilate calling together the chief priests, and the magistrates, and the people, 14 Said to them: You have brought this man to me, as one that perverteth the people, and behold I, having examined him before you, find no cause in this man touching those things wherein you accuse him.

15 No, nor yet Herod: For I sent you to him, and behold nothing worthy of death is done to him.

16 I will chastise him, therefore, and release him.

17 Now of necessity, he was to release to them one upon the feast-day.

CHAP. XXIII. VER. 7. He sent him away to Herod. Pilate, in this instance, not only extricated himself from the importunities of the Jewish priests, (ver. 5,) but, moreover, obeyed the Roman law in that particular, which forbade any one to be condemned by a governor to whom he was not subject. Theophylactus.

VER. 11. And mocked him. It is evident, from the behaviour of Herod on this occasion, that he was far from believing him to be that seditious person he was represented; otherwise he would have undoubtedly treated his prisoner with less ridicule, and paid more serious attention to the accusations of his enemies. Theophylactus.

VER. 16. It was a very common punishment among the Jews, to scourge those who had committed crimes for which death would have been too severe. According to the laws of the Hebrews, (Deut. xxv. 3,) the number of blows could not exceed thirty-nine. Pilate dares not condemn Jesus to death, because he believes him innocent; yet not to disoblige the people and magistrates, who demand his death, he takes a middle way, which, as is usual in such cases, satisfies neither party. He neither saves the innocent Victim, nor satisfies justice. In lieu of one 18 But the whole multitude cried out at once, saying: Away with this man, and release unto us Barabbas.

19 Who, for a certain sedition made in the city, and for murder, was cast into prison.

20 And Pilate spoke to them again, desiring to release Jesus.

21 But they cried out, saying: Crucify him, crucify him.

22 And he said to them the third time:^a Why, what evil hath this man done? I find no cause of death in him: I will chastise him, therefore, and let him go.

23 But they were instant with loud voices, requiring that he might be crucified: and their voices prevailed.

24 And Pilate gave sentence that their petition should be granted.

25 And he released unto them him, who for murder and sedition, had been cast into prison, whom they had desired: but Jesus he delivered up to their will.

26 And as they led him away, they laid hold on one Simon, of Cyrene, that was coming out of the country: and they laid the cross on him to carry after Jesus.

27 And there followed him a great multitude of people and of women: who bewailed and lamented him.

28 But Jesus turning to them, said: Daughters of Jerusalem, weep not over me, but weep for yourselves, and for your children.

29 For behold the days shall come, wherein they will say: Blessed are the barren, and the wombs that have not borne, and the paps that have not given suck.

30 Then shall they begin to say to the mountains: Fall upon us; and to the hills: Cover us.

31 For if in the green wood they do these things, what shall be done in the dry?

32 And there were also two other malefactors led with him, to be put to death.

33 And when they were come to the place, which is called Calvary, they crucified him there; and the robbers, one on the right hand, and the other on the left.

34 And Jesus said: Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do. But dividing his garments, they cast lots.

35 And the people stood beholding, and the rulers with them derided him, saying: He saved others, let him save himself, if he be Christ, the chosen of God.

36 And the soldiers also mocked him, coming to him, and offering him vinegar, punishment, Jesus suffers two. He is at length both scourged and crucified. Calnet.

37 And saying: If thou be the king of the Jews, save thyself.

VER. 28. Weep not over me. If you knew the evils that threaten and must soon fall upon your city, upon yourselves, and upon your children, you would preserve your tears to deplore your own misfortunes. My death is for the good of mankind; but it will be fatal to your nation, because you have been pleased to make it so. Calnet.

VER. 31. In the green wood: by which are signified persons of virtue and sanctity; as by the dry wood, the wicked, who bring forth no fruit, and who, like dry wood, are fit to be cast into the fire. Wi.—If they be thus cruel with me, how will they treat you?

VER. 33. Called Calvary. A place at a small distance from Jerusalem, where condemned malefactors were beheaded. So Christ, as a malefactor, dies on Calvary for the redemption of all: that where sin abounded, grace might more abound. Ven. Bede.—In this mountain, according to the Hebrew doctors were interred the remains of our protoparent, Adam. Athana.

38 And there was also a superscription written over him in Greek, and Latin, and Hebrew letters: THIS IS THE KING OF THE JEWS.

39 And one of those robbers who were hanging, blasphemed him, saying: If thou be Christ, save thyself, and us.

40 But the other answering, rebuked him, saying: Neither dost thou fear God, seeing thou art under the same condemnation?

41 And we indeed justly, for we receive the due reward of our deeds: but this man hath done no evil.

42 And he said to Jesus: Lord, remember me, when thou shalt come into thy kingdom.

43 And Jesus said to him: Amen, I say to thee, this day thou shalt be with me in paradise.

44 And it was almost the sixth hour: and there was darkness over all the earth until the ninth hour.

45 And the sun was darkened; and the veil of the temple was rent in the midst.

46 And Jesus crying with a loud voice, said: Father, into thy hands I commend my spirit. And saying this, he gave up the ghost.

47 Now the centurion seeing what was done, glorified God, saying: Indeed this was a just man.

48 And all the multitude of them that were come together to that sight, and saw the things that were done, returned striking their breasts.

49 And all his acquaintance, and the women that had followed him from Galilee, stood afar off beholding these things.

50 And behold a man, by name Joseph, who was a senator, a good and just man:

51 This man had not consented to their counsel and doings; he was of Arimathea, a city of Judea, who also himself waited for the kingdom of God.

52 This man went to Pilate, and begged the body of Jesus.

53 And taking him down, he wrapped him in fine linen, and laid him in a sepulchre that was hewed in stone, wherein never yet any man had been laid.

54 And it was the day of the parasceve, and the sabbath drew near.

55 And the women that were come with him from Galilee, following after, saw the sepulchre, and how his body was laid.

56 And returning, they prepared spices, and ointments: and on the sabbath-day they rested, according to the commandment.

The construction is not, I say to thee this day, &c., but, thou shalt be with me this day in paradise. Wi.—In paradise. That is, in the happy state of rest, joy and peace everlasting. Christ was pleased, by a special privilege, to reward the faith and confession of the penitent thief with a full discharge of all his sins, both as to the guilt and punishment; and to introduce him, immediately after death, into the happy society of the saints, whose limbo (that is, the place of their confinement) was now made a paradise by our Lord's going thither. CHAP. XXIV.

Christ's resurrection; and manifestation of himself to his disciples.

BUT on the first day of the week, very early in the morning, they came to the sepulchre, bringing the spices which they had prepared.

2 And they found the stone rolled back from the sepulchre.

3 And going in, they found not the body of the Lord Jesus.

4 And it came to pass, while they were astonished in mind at this, behold two men stood by them in shining apparel.

5 And as they were afraid, and bowed down their countenance towards the ground, they said to them: Why seek you the living among the dead?

6 He is not here, but is risen: remember how he spoke to you, when he was yet in Galilee,

7 Saying: "The Son of man must be delivered into the hands of sinful men, and be crucified, and the third day rise again.

8 And they remembered his words.

9 And going back from the sepulchre, they told all these things to the eleven, and to all the rest.

10 Now it was Mary Magdalene, and Joanna, and Mary, the mother of James, and the other women that were with them, that told these things to the apostles.

11 And these words seemed to them as an idle tale: and they did not believe them.

12 But Peter rising up, ran to the sepulchre; and stooping down, he saw the linen cloths laid by themselves, and went away wondering in himself at that which was come to pass.

13 And behold, two of them went that same day to a town which was sixty furlongs from Jerusalem, named Emmaus.

14 And they talked together of all these things which had happened.

15 And it came to pass, that while they talked and reasoned with one another, Jesus himself also drew near, and went with them.

16 But their eyes were held, that they should not know him.

17 And he said to them: What are these discourses that you hold one with another, as you walk, and are sad?

18 And the one, whose name was Cleophas, answering, said to him: Art thou alone a stranger in Jerusalem, and hast not known the things that have been done there in these days?

CHAP. XXIV. VER. 5. It is worthy of remark, that not any of the disciples or friends of Christ were so much astonished and struck at the many apparitions of angels, &c., as to be cast down to the ground, as the guards and his enemies were, but only through respect and reverential fear looked down upon the ground. Ven. Bede.

VER. 13. S. Jerom thinks that Cleophas, one of the two disciples, was a citizen of Emmaus, and that he invited Jesus to take meat in his house. His house was afterwards changed into a church, which the same Father says existed in his time. Some think Cleophas was brother to S. Joseph; others, that he was husband of Mary, sister of the blessed Virgin Mary, and father of S. James the less. Both the Latins and Greeks keep the feast of S. Cleophas, and give him the name of an apostle. Usuard says he was martyred by the Jews. Calmet.

VER. 18. Art thou alone a stranger in Jerusalem? or, art thou the only

The Descent from the Cross

19 And he said to them : What things ? And they said : Concerning Jesus, of Nazareth, who was a prophet, mighty in work and word, before God, and all the people :

20 And how our chief priests and rulers delivered him to be condemned to death, and crucified him.

21 But we hoped that it was he who should have redeemed Israel : and now, besides all this, to-day is the third day since these things were done.

22 Yea, and certain women also of our company, affrighted us, who, before it was light, were at the sepulchre,

23 And not finding his body, came, saying, that they had also seen a vision of angels, who say that he is alive.

24 And some of our people went to the sepulchre, and found it so as the women had said ; but him they found not.

25 Then he said to them : O foolish, and slow of heart to believe in all the things which the prophets have spoken !

26 Ought not Christ to have suffered these things, and so to enter into his glory ?

27 And beginning from Moses, and all the prophets, he expounded to them in all the Scriptures, the things that were concerning him.

28 And they drew nigh to the town whither they were going : and he made as though he would go farther.

29 But they constrained him, saying : Stay with us, because it is towards evening, and the day is now far spent. And he went in with them.

30 And it came to pass, whilst he was at table with them, he took bread, and blessed ; and brake, and gave to them.

31 And their eyes were opened, and they knew him : and he vanished out of their sight.

32 And they said one to the other : Was not our heart burning within us, whilst he was speaking to us in the way, and opened to us the Scriptures ?

33 And they rose up the same hour and went back to Jerusalem : and they found the eleven gathered together, and those that were with them, stranger in Jerusalem? which was to signify, that every one must needs have heard of what had passed in regard to Jesus. Wi.

34 Saying : The Lord is risen indeed, and hath appeared to Simon.

VER. 21. We hoped, &c., as if they had lost their former hopes, or now knew not what to hope for : but perhaps, as S. Aug. observes, they might use this caution. speaking before a stranger. Wi.—These two disciples were in the same error as the other Jews ; who expected that the Messiah would deliver them from subjection to strangers, and re-establish them in their ancient liberty. The cross and passion had been a subject of scandal and fall to them. They say, we did hope ; as if their hopes were now at an end. What increased their diffidence was, that Christ had promised to rise again the third day, and some of the women had said that he really had risen. Thus the disciples reason, as if the third day were already past, and as if it were certain that he was not risen again. So difficult a thing is it to believe what we very ardently wish ! Calmet.

VER. 30. The ancient Fathers think our Saviour consecrated, on this occasion, and administered the Eucharist to the two disciples. In the Acts of the Apostles, this same term, breaking of bread, is explained without difficulty of the Eucharist. S. Luke seems fond of this manner of expression, to signify that sacrament. Calmet.

VER. 37. The apostles thought they saw a spirit, either good or bad, that had taken the form of Jesus, and was come to deceive them. Indeed S. Aug. thinks it cannot, without temerity, be denied, that there are occasional apparitions of angels, of demons, and of the souls of the dead. Calmet.—These occurrences are rare ; nor should we suppose that the Almighty would be willing to suspend or change the established laws of nature without a sufficient cause, viz. some known good either to the departed soul, or surviving friends. A.

VER. 39. A spirit hath not flesh and bones, as you see me to have. This was 35 And they told what things were done in the way : and how they knew him in the breaking of bread.

36 *Now whilst they were speaking these things, Jesus stood in the midst of them, and said to them : Peace be to you ; it is I, fear not.

37 But they being troubled and affrighted, supposed that they saw a spirit.

38 And he said to them : Why are you troubled, and why do thoughts arise in your hearts ?

39 See my hands and my feet, that it is I myself : feel, and see : for a spirit hath not flesh and bones, as you see me to have.

40 And when he had said this, he showed them his hands and his feet.

41 But while they yet believed not, and wondered for joy, he said : Have you here any thing to eat ?

42 And they offered him a piece of a broiled fish, and a honeycomb.

43 And when he had eaten before them, taking the remains, he gave to them.

44 And he said to them : These are the words which I spoke to you while I was yet with you, that all things must needs be fulfilled, which are written in the law of Moses, and in the prophets, and in the psalms concerning me.

45 Then he opened their understanding, that they might understand the Scriptures.

46 And he said to them : *Thus it is written, and thus it behoved Christ to suffer, and to rise again from the dead the third day :

47 And that penance and remission of sins should be preached in his name among all nations, beginning at Jerusalem.

48 *And you are witnesses of these things.

49 *And I send the promise of my Father upon you : but stay you in the city, till you be endued with power from on high.

50 And he led them out as far as to Bethania : and lifting up his hands, he blessed them.

51 *And it came to pass, whilst he blessed them, that he departed from them, and was carried up to heaven.

one argument of a true and real body. We may take notice, that Christ brought such proofs, as he knew were sufficient to convince them of his resurrection, though they were not of themselves demonstrations. But the arguments which Christ made use of at this time, to induce the apostles to believe his resurrection, are to be taken with all the circumstances : as, 1st, with the corroborating testimonies of the Holy Scriptures, in which his resurrection was foretold ; 2ndly, they called to their minds what he himself had told them so often, that he would rise again the third day ; 3rdly, concurred also the testimonies already given by the angels, that he was risen ; 4thly, the miracles at his death and resurrection ; 5thly, Christ himself at the same time opened their understanding, to know and believe this truth, that he was truly risen. VER. 45. If, after all the extraordinary opportunities of instruction, which the apostles had had from the mouth of our Divine Saviour, it was still necessary that he should instil into them a new light, by opening their minds to understand the Scriptures ; what are we to think of the presumptuous attempts of the numerous tribe of modern self-inspired interpreters, who are always ready to descant on the word of the Lord ; though so perfectly ignorant, that their authority, so far from being admitted, would be laughed to scorn, were they to attempt to explain the slightest difficulty, on the most indifferent subject of profane literature ? To such a degree has the spirit of seduction spread itself at the present day ! A.

THE

HOLY GOSPEL OF JESUS CHRIST,

ACCORDING TO

S. JOHN.

5. JOHN, the evangelist, a native of Bethsaida, in Galilee, was the son of Zebedee and Salome. He was by profession a fisherman. Our Lord gave to John, and to James, his brother, the surname of Boanerges, or, sons of thunder ; most probably for their great zeal, and for their soliciting permission to call fire from heaven to destroy the city of the Samaritans, who refused to receive their Master. S. John is supposed to have been called to the apostleship younger than any of the other apostles, not being more than twenty-five or twenty-six years old. The Fathers teach that he never married. Our Lord had for him a particular regard, of which he gave the most marked proofs at the moment of his expiring on the cross, by intrusting to his care his virgin Mother. He is the only one of the apostles that did not leave his Divine Master in his passion and death. In the reign of Domitian, he was conveyed to Rome, and thrown into a caldron of boiling oil, from which he came out unhurt. He was afterwards banished to the island of Patmos, where he wrote his book of Revelations ; and, according to some, his Gospel. Tota antiquitas in eo abunde consentit, quod Domitianus exilii Joannes auctor fuerit. Lampe. Proleg. l. 1, cap. 4.—In his Gospel, S. John omits very many leading facts and circumstances mentioned by the other three evangelists, supposing his readers sufficiently instructed in points which his silence approved. It is universally agreed, that S. John had seen and approved of the other three Gospels. S. Hier. de Vir. Illust. Euseb. l. 3, c. 24.—Our critics generally conceive S. John, with respect to language, as the least correct of the writers of the New Testament. His style argues a great want of those advantages which result from a learned education ; but this defect is amply compensated by the unexampled simplicity with which he expresses the most sublime truths, by the supernatural lights, by the depth of the mysteries, by the superexcellency of the matter, by the solidity of his thoughts, and importance of his instructions. The Holy Ghost, who made choice of him, and filled him with infused wisdom, is much above human philosophy and the art of rhetoric.—S. John is properly compared to the eagle, because in his first flight he ascends above all sublunary objects, and does not stop till he meets with the throne of the Almighty. He is so sententious, says S. Ambrose, that he gives us as many mysteries as words. De Sacram. l. 3, c. 2.—From Patmos our saint returned to Ephesus, where he died. Euseb. l. 3, Hist. Eccles.—It is said that the original Gospel was preserved in the church of Ephesus till the seventh age, at least till the fourth ; for S. Peter, of Alexandria, cites it. See Chron. Alex. and MS. fragment. de Paschate apud Petav. et Usher.—Besides the Gospel, we have of S. John three Epistles and the Book of Revelations ; and though other productions have been palmed on the world under the name of our evangelist, the Catholic Church only approves of those above specified. Ancient Fathers have given him the name of the Theologian : a title his Gospel, and particularly the first chapter, deserves. Polycrates, bishop of Ephesus, tells us that S. John carried on his forehead a plate of gold, as priest of Jesus Christ, to honour the priesthood of the new law, in imitation of the high priests of the Jews. Polycr. apud Euseb. l. 5, c. 24.—This Gospel was written in Greek, about the end of the first hundred years from Christ's nativity, at the request of the bishops of the Lesser Asia, against the Cerinthians and the Ebionites, and those heretics, or Antichrists, as S. John calls them, (1 Ep. iv. 3,) who pretended that Jesus was a mere man, who had no being or existence before he was born of Joseph and Mary. The blasphemies of these heretics had divers abettors in the first three ages, as Carpocrates, Artemon, the two Theodotuses, Paul of Samosata, Sabellius, and some others ; of whom, see S. Ireneus, S. Epiphanius, S. Augustin, &c. To these succeeded, in the beginning of the fourth century, Arius, of Alexandria, and the different branches of the blasphemous Arian sect. They allowed that Jesus Christ had a being before he was born of Mary ; that he was made and created before all other creatures, and was more perfect than any of them ; but still that he was no more than a creature : that he had a beginning, and that there was a time when he was not : that he was not properly God, or the God, not the same God, nor had the same substance and nature, with the eternal Father and Creator of all things. This heresy was condemned by the Church, in the first General Council, at Nice, ann. 325.—After the Arians rose up the Macedonians, who denied the Divinity of the Holy Ghost ; and afterwards the Nestorians, Eutychians, &c. In every age pride and ignorance have produced some heresies ; for, as the apostle says, (1 Cor. xi. 19,) there must be heresies.—Towards the beginning of the sixteenth age, Luther, Zuinglius, Calvin, &c., set themselves up for reformers, even of that general and Catholic faith which they found every where taught, and believed in all Christian Churches ; yet none of these called in question the mysteries of the Trinity, or of the incarnation.—But not many years after, came the blasphemous sect of the Socinians, so called from Lellius and Faustus Socini. These, and their followers, renewed the condemned errors of the Arians.—A self-conceited Socinian, big with the opinion he has of his own wit and knowledge, will boldly tell us, that to say or believe that three distinct persons are one and the same God, is a manifest contradiction. Must we believe him ? Or can he himself reasonably trust to his own natural reason in such a mystery, against the clear testimonies of the Scripture, and the received belief of the Christian Catholic Church, in all ages ? That is, against the greatest authority upon earth : whether we consider the Church as the most illustrious society and body of men ; or whether we consider the same Church as under the protection of Christ and his Divine promises, to teach them all truth to the end of the world.—The latest writers among the pretended Reformers stick not to tell us, that what the Church and its councils have declared, as to Christ's real presence in the holy sacrament, is contradicted by all our senses ; as if our senses, which are so often mistaken, were the supreme and only judges of such hidden mysteries. Another tells us, that for Christ to be truly and really present in many places, in ten thousand places at once, is a thing impossible in nature and reason ; and his demonstrative proof is, that he knows it to be impossible. With this vain presumption, he runs on to this length of an extravagant rashness, and boldly pronounces, that should he find such a proposition in the Bible, nay, though with his eyes he should see a man raise the dead, and declare that proposition true, he could not believe it : and merely because he knows it impossible : which is no more than to say, that it does not seem possible to his weak reason. I do not find that he offers to bring any other proof, but that it is contrary to his senses, and that God cannot assert a contradiction. And why must we take it for a contradiction, only because he tells us, HE KNOWS it to be so ? It was certainly the safest way for him, to bring no reasons to show it impossible to the infinite and incomprehensible power of the Almighty : this vain attempt would only have given new occasions to his learned antagonist, the author of the Single Combat, to expose his weakness even more than he has done.—May not every Unitarian, every Arian, every Socinian, every Latitudinarian, every Free-thinker, tell us the same ? And if this be a sufficient plea, none of them can be condemned of heresy or error.—But to conclude this preface, reason itself, as well as the experience we have of our own weak understanding, from the little we know even of natural things, might preserve every sober thinking man from such extravagant presumption, pride, and self-conceited rashness, so as to pretend to measure God's almighty and incomprehensible power by the narrow and shallow capacity of human understanding, or to know what is possible or impossible to Him that made all things out of nothing. In fine, let not human understanding exalt itself against the knowledge of God, but bring into a rational captivity and submission every thought to the obedience of Christ. Let every one humbly acknowledge with the great S. Augustin, whose learning and capacity, modestly speaking, were not inferior to those of any of these bold and rash pretenders to knowledge, that God can certainly do more than we can understand. Let us reflect with S. Greg. Nazian. (Orat. 37, p. 597, C.) that if we know not the things under our feet, we must not pretend to fathom the profound mysteries of God.*—And, in the mean time, let us pray for those who are thus tossed to and fro with every wind and blast of different doctrines, (Eph. iv. 14,) that God, of his infinite mercy, would enlighten their weak and blinded understanding with the light of the one true faith, and bring them to the one fold of his Catholic Church. Witham.

CHAPTER I.

The Divinity and incarnation of Christ. John bears witness of him. He begins to call his disciples.

IN the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God.

2 The same was in the beginning with God.

3 All things were made by him : and without him was made nothing that was made.

4 In him was life, and the life was the light of men.

5 And the light shineth in darkness, and the darkness did not comprehend it.

6 ^aThere was a man sent from God, whose name was John.

7 This man came for a witness, to bear witness of the light, that all men might believe through him.

8 He was not the light, but was to bear witness of the light.

^a Matt. iii. 1; Mark i. 4.—^b Infra, iii. 19.

CHAP. I. VER. 1. In the beginning was the Word; ^a or rather, the Word was in the beginning. The eternal Word, the increased Wisdom, the second Person of the blessed Trinity, the only begotten Son of the Father, as he is here called, (ver. 14,) of the same nature and substance, and the same God, with the Father and the Holy Ghost. This Word was always; so that it was never true to say, he was not, as the Arians blasphemed. This Word was in the beginning. Some, by the beginning, expound the Father himself, in whom he was always. Others give this plain and obvious sense, that the Word, or the Son of God, was, when all other things began to have a being; he never began, but was from all eternity.—And the Word was with God; i. e. was with the Father; and, as it is said, (ver. 18,) in the bosom of the Father; which implies, that he is indeed a distinct Person, but the same in nature and substance with the Father and the Holy Ghost. This is repeated again in the second verse, as repetitions are very frequent in S. John.—And the Word was God. This without question is the construction; where, according to the letter, we read, and God was the Word. Wi.—The Greek for the Word is Λόγος, which signifies not only the exterior word, but also the interior word, or thought; and in this latter sense it is taken here. V.—And the Word was God. Here the eternity and Divinity of the second Person are incontrovertibly established; or, we must say that language has no longer a fixed meaning, and that it is impossible to establish any point whatever from the words of Scripture. A.

VER. 3. All things were made by him, and without him was made nothing that was made. These words teach us, that all created beings, visible, or invisible on earth, every thing that ever was made, or began to be, were made, produced, and created by this eternal Word, or by the Son of God. The same is truly said of the Holy Ghost; all creatures being equally produced, created, and preserved by the three Divine Persons, as by their proper, principal, and efficient cause, in the same manner, and by the same action: not by the Son, in any manner inferior to the Father; nor as if the Son produced things only ministerially, and acted only as the minister and instrument of the Father, as the Arians pretended. In this sublime mystery of one God and three distinct Persons, if we consider the eternal processions, and personal proprieties, the Father is the first Person, but not by any priority of time, or of dignity; all the three Divine Persons being eternal, or co-eternal, equal in all perfections, being one in nature, in substance, in power, in majesty; in a word, one and the same God. But when we consider and speak of any creatures, of any thing that was made, or had a beginning, all things were equally created in time, and are equally preserved, no less by the Son and by the Holy Ghost, than by the Father. For which reason, S. John tells us again in this chapter, (ver. 10,) that the world was made by the Word. And our Saviour himself (John v. 19) tells us, that whatsoever the Father doth, these things also in like manner, or in the same manner, the Son doth. Again, the apostle, (Heb. i. 2,) speaking of the Son, says, the world was made by him: and in the same chapter, (ver. 10,) he applies to the Son these words, (Psal. ci. 26,) And thou, O Lord, in the beginning didst found the earth; and the heavens are the works of thy hands, &c. To omit other places, S. Paul again, writing to the Colossians, (chap. i. 16, 17,) and speaking of God's beloved Son, as may be seen in that chapter, says, that in him all things were created, visible and invisible—all things were created in him, and by him, or, as it is in the Greek, unto him, and for him; to show that the Son was not only the efficient cause, the Maker and Creator of all things, but also the last end of all. Which is also confirmed by the following words: And he is before all, and all things subsist in him, or consist in him; as in the Rheims and Protestant translations. The Arians, and now the Socinians, who deny the Son to be the true God, or that the word God agrees as properly to him as to the Father, but would have him called God, that is, a nominal god, in an inferior and improper sense; as when Moses is called the god of Pharaoh (Exod. vii. 1); or as men in authority are called gods (Psal. lxxxi. 6); pretend, after Origen, to find another difference in the Greek text; as if, when mention is made of the Father, he is styled the God; but that the Son is only called God, or a God. This objection S. Chrysostom, S. Cyril, and others, have shown to be groundless: that pretended significant Greek article being several times omitted, when the word God is applied to God the Father; and being found in other places, when the Son of God is called God. See this objection fully and clearly answered by the author of a short book, published in the year 1729, against Dr. Clark and Mr. Wiston, p. 64, and seq. Wi.

9 ^bThat was the true light, which enlighteneth every man that cometh into this world.

10 He was in the world, and the world was made by him, and the world knew him not.

11 He came unto his own, and his own received him not.

12 But as many as received him, to them he gave power to be made the sons of God, to them that believe in his name.

13 Who are born, not of blood, nor of the will of the flesh, nor of the will of man, but of God.

14 ^dAnd the Word was made flesh, and dwelt among us: and we saw his glory, the glory as of the only begotten of the Father, full of grace and truth.

15 John beareth witness of him: and crieth out, saying: This was he of whom I spoke, He that shall come after me, is preferred before me, because he was before me.

^c Heb. xi. 3.—^d Matt. i. 16; Luke ii. 7.

VER. 4. In him, i. e. in this Word, or Son of God, was life; because he gives life to every living creature. Or, as Maldonatus expounds it, because he is the author of grace, which is the spiritual life of our souls.—And the life was the light of men, whether we expound it of a rational soul and understanding, which he gives to all men; or of the spiritual life, and those lights of graces, which he gives to Christians. Wi.

VER. 5. And the light shineth, or did shine, in darkness. Many understand this, that the light of reason, which God gave to every one, might have brought them to the knowledge of God by the visible effects of his Providence in this world: but the darkness did not comprehend it, because men, blinded by their passions, would not attend to the light of reason. Or we may again understand it, with Maldonatus, of the lights of grace, against which obstinate sinners wilfully shut their eyes. Wi.

VER. 7. That all men might believe through him; i. e. by John's preaching, who was God's instrument to induce them to believe in Jesus the Christ, or the Messias, their only Redeemer. Wi.

VER. 8, 9. He, that is, John, was not the true light: but the Word was the true light. In the translation, it is necessary to express that the Word was the true light, lest any one should think that John the Baptist was this light. Wi.

VER. 10. He was in the world, &c. Many of the ancient interpreters understand this verse of Christ as God, who was in the world from its first creation, producing and governing all things: but the blind sinful world did not know and worship him. Others apply these words to the Son of God made man; whom even God's own chosen people, the Jews, at his coming, refused to receive and believe in him. Wi.

VER. 12. To them he gave power to be made the adoptive sons of God, and heirs of the kingdom of heaven. They are made the children of God by believing, and by a new spiritual birth in the sacrament of baptism, not of blood (literally, not of bloods); not by the will and desires of the flesh, not by the will of men, nor by human generation, as children are first born of their natural parents, but of God, by faith and Divine grace. Wi.

VER. 14. And the Word was made flesh. This Word, or Son of God, who was in the beginning, from all eternity, at the time appointed by the Divine decree, was made flesh, i. e. became man, by a true and physical union of his Divine person, (from which the Divine nature was inseparable,) to our human nature, to a human soul, and a human body, in the womb, and of the substance, of his virgin Mother. From the moment of Christ's incarnation, as all Christians are taught to believe, he that was God from eternity, became also truly man. In Jesus Christ, our blessed Redeemer, we believe one Divine person with two natures, and two wills; the one Divine, the other human: by which substantial union, one and the same person became truly both God and man; not two persons, or two sons, as Nestorius, the heretic, pretended.—And we saw his glory, manifested to the world by many signs and miracles; we in particular, who were present at his transfiguration. Matt. xvii.—Full of grace and truth. These words, in the construction, are to be joined in this manner: the Word dwelt in us, full of grace and truth; and we have seen his glory, &c. This fulness of grace in Christ Jesus infinitely surpassed the limited fulness, which the Scripture attributes to S. Stephen, (Acts vi. 8,) or to the blessed virgin Mother (Luke i. 28): they are said to be full of grace, only because of an extraordinary communication and greater share of graces than was given to other saints. But Christ, even as man, had a greater abundance of Divine graces, and being truly God as well as man, his grace and sanctity were infinite, as was his person.—As of the only begotten of the Father. If we consider Christ in himself, and not only as he was made known to men by outward signs and miracles, S. Chrysostom and others take notice that the word as, no ways diminisheth the signification; and that the sense is, we have seen the glory of him, who is truly from all eternity the only begotten Son of the Father. Wi.—Dwelt among us. In a material body, like ours, clothed with our nature. He is become mortal, and like us in every thing but sin and concupiscence. Calmet.

VER. 15. Is preferred before me.⁵ Lit. is made before me. The sense, says S. Chrys., is, that he is greater in dignity, deserves greater honour, &c.; though born after me, he was from eternity. Wi.

VER. 16. And of his fulness we all have received; not only Jews, but also ⁶

16 *And of his fulness we all have received, and grace for grace.

17 For the law was given by Moses, grace and truth came by Jesus Christ.

18 ^bNo man hath seen God at any time: the only begotten Son who is in the bosom of the Father, he hath declared him.

19 And this is the testimony of John, when the Jews sent from Jerusalem priests and Levites to him, to ask him: Who art thou?

20 And he confessed, and did not deny: and he confessed: I am not the Christ.

21 And they asked him: What then? Art thou Elias? and he said: I am not. Art thou the prophet? And he answered: No.

22 Then they said to him: Who art thou, that we may give an answer to them that sent us? What sayest thou of thyself?

23 He said: 'I am the voice of one crying in the wilderness: Make straight the way of the Lord, as the prophet, Isaias, said.

24 And they that were sent, were of the Pharisees.

25 And they asked him, and said to him: Why then dost thou baptize, if thou be not Christ, nor Elias, nor the prophet?

26 John answered them, saying: 'I baptize in water: but there hath stood one in the midst of you, whom you know not.

27 'The same is he that shall come after me, who is preferred before me: the latchet of whose shoe I am not worthy to loose.

28 These things were done in Bethania beyond the Jordan, where John was baptizing.

29 The next day John saw Jesus coming to him, and he saith: Behold the lamb of God, behold he who taketh away the sin of the world.

30 This is he of whom I said: After me cometh a man, who is preferred before me, because he was before me.

31 And I knew him not, but that he may be made manifest in Israel, therefore am I come baptizing in water.

* 1 Tim. vi. 17.—^b 1 Tim. vi. 16; 1 John iv. 12.—^c Isa. xl. 3; Matt. iii. 3; Mark i. 3; Luke iii. 4.—^d Matt. iii. 11.—^e Mark i. 7; Luke iii. 16; Acts i. 5, and xi. 16, and xix. 4.

lations.—And grace for grace. It may perhaps be translated grace upon grace, as Mr. Blackwall observes, and brings a parallel example in Greek out of Theognis, p. 164. It implies abundance of graces, and greater graces under the new law of Christ than in the time of the law of Moses; which exposition is confirmed by the following verse. Wi.

VER. 18. No man hath seen God. No mortal in this life by a perfect union and enjoyment of him. Nor can any creature perfectly comprehend his infinite greatness: none but his only begotten Divine Son, who is in the bosom of his Father, not only by an union of grace, but by an union and unity of substance and nature; of which Christ said, (John xiv. 11,) I am in the Father, and the Father in me. Wi.

VER. 19. The Jews sent, &c. These men, who were priests and Levites, seem to have been sent and deputed by the sanhedrim, or great council at Jerusalem, to ask of John the Baptist, who was then in great esteem and veneration, whether he was not their Messiah; who, as they knew by the predictions of the prophets, was to come about that time. John declared to them he was not. To their next question, if he was not Elias? He answered, he was not: because in person he was not; though our Saviour (Matt. xi. 14) says he was Elias; to wit, in spirit and office only. Their third question was, if he was a prophet? He answered, No. Yet Christ (Matt. xi.) tells us he was a prophet, and more than a prophet. In the ordinary acceptance, only they were called prophets who foretold things to come: John then, with truth, as well as humility, could say he was not a prophet; being not sent to foretell the coming of the Messiah, but to point him out already come, and present with the Jews. Wi.

VER. 23. The voice of one crying in the wilderness. See Matt. iii. 3; Mark i. 3; Luke iii. 4; and Isa. xl. 3; by all which John was his immediate precursor. Wi.

32 And John gave testimony, saying: 'I saw the Spirit coming down as a dove from heaven, and he remained upon him.

33 And I knew him not; but he, who sent me to baptize in water, said to me: He upon whom thou shalt see the Spirit descending, and remaining on him, he it is that baptizeth with the Holy Ghost.

34 And I saw: and I gave testimony, that this is the Son of God.

35 Again, the following day, John stood, and two of his disciples.

36 And looking upon Jesus, as he was walking, he saith: Behold the lamb of God.

37 And the two disciples heard him speak, and they followed Jesus.

38 And Jesus turning, and seeing them following him, saith to them: What seek you? They said to him: Rabbi, (which is to say, being interpreted, master;) where dwellest thou?

39 He saith to them: Come and see. They came, and saw where he abode, and they staid with him that day: now it was about the tenth hour.

40 And Andrew, the brother of Simon Peter, was one of the two who had heard of John, and followed him.

41 He first findeth his brother, Simon, and said to him: We have found the Messiah; which is, being interpreted, the Christ.

42 And he brought him to Jesus. And Jesus looking upon him, said: Thou art Simon, the son of Jona: thou shalt be called Cephas: which is interpreted, Peter.

43 On the following day he would go forth into Galilee, and he findeth Philip. And Jesus said to him: Follow me.

44 Now Philip was of Bethsaida, the city of Andrew and Peter.

45 Philip findeth Nathanael, and said to him: We have found him of whom ^aMoses in the law, ^band the prophets did write, Jesus, the son of Joseph, of Nazareth.

46 And Nathanael said to him: Can any thing of good come from Nazareth? Philip saith to him: Come and see.

47 Jesus saw Nathanael coming to him: and he saith

^c Matt. iii. 16; Mark i. 10; Luke iii. 22.—^d Gen. xlix. 10; Deut. xviii. 15.—^e Isa. xl. 10, and xlv. 8; Jer. xxiii. 5; Ezech. xxxiv. 23, and xxxvii. 24; Dan. ix. 24, and 25.

VER. 29. Behold the lamb of God. John let the Jews know who Jesus was, by divers testimonies. 1st, By telling them he was the lamb of God who taketh away the sin, or sins of the world, who was come to be their Redeemer, and to free mankind from the slavery of sin; 2ndly, that he was greater than he, and before him, though born after him; 3rdly, that God had revealed to him that Jesus was to baptize in the Holy Ghost; 4thly, that he saw the Spirit descending upon him from heaven, and remaining upon him; 5thly, that he was the Son of God, ver. 34. Wi. — Who taketh away. It was only a being like Christ, in whose person the Divine and human natures were united, that could effectually take away the sins of the world. As man, he was enabled to suffer; and as God, his sufferings obtained a value equal to the infinite atonement required. A.

VER. 42. Thou art Simon, the son of Jona, or of John. Jesus, who knew all things, knew his name, and at that first meeting told him he should hereafter be called Cephas, or Petrus, a rock, designing to make him the chief or head of his whole Church. See Matt. xvi. 18. Wi.—Hence S. Cyril saith, that our Saviour, by foretelling that his name should be now no more Simon, but Peter, did by the word itself aptly signify, that on him, as on a rock most firm, he would build his Church. Lib. ii. c. 12, in Joan.

VER. 46. Can any thing of good come from Nazareth? Nathanael did not think it consistent with the predictions of the prophets, that the Messiah should be of the town of Nazareth, who was to be the Son of David, and to be born at Bethlehem; which he did not imagine could be the place of Jesus's birth. But when he came to Jesus, and found that he knew the truth of things done in private, and in his absence, he professed his belief in Jesus in these words: Rabbi, thou art the Son of God, thou art the king of Israel. We may here take notice, with Dr. Pearson, on the second article of the Creed, that the Jews, before the coming of Christ, of him : Behold an Israelite indeed, in whom there is no guile.

48 Nathanael said to him : Whence knowest thou me ? Jesus answered, and said to him : Before that Philip called thee, when thou wast under the fig-tree, I saw thee.

49 Nathanael answered him, and said : Rabbi, thou art the Son of God, thou art the king of Israel.

50 Jesus answered, and said to him : Because I said to thee, I saw thee under the fig-tree, thou believest ; greater things than these shalt thou see.

51 And he saith to him : Amen, amen, I say to you, you shall see the heaven opened, and the angels of God ascending and descending upon the Son of man.

were convinced that he was to be the Son of God (though they have denied it since that time) ; for they interpreted, as foretold of their Messias, these words, (Psalm ii. 7.) The Lord said to me, Thou art my Son, this day have I begotten thee : and this is what Nathanael here confessed. Wi.

VER. 50. Greater things than these. Greater miracles and proofs that I am the Messias, and the true Son of God. Wi.

VER. 51. You shall see the heaven open, &c. It is not certain when this was to be fulfilled : S. Chrysostom thinks at Christ's ascension ; others refer it to the day of judgment. Wi.

* V. 1. Et Deus erat Verbum, και Θεός ἦν ὁ Λόγος. Λόγος was a word very proper to give all that should believe a right notion of the Messias, and of the true Son of God. Λόγος, according to S. Jerom, (Ep. ad Paulinum, tom. 4, part 2, p. 570, ed. Ben.,) signifies divers things ; as, the wisdom of the Father, his internal Word or conception, and, as it were, the express image of the invisible God. Here it is not taken for any absolute Divine attribute and perfection ; but for the Divine Son, or the second Person, as really distinct from the other two Divine Persons. And that by Λόγος was to be understood him that was truly God, the Maker and Creator of all things, the Jews might easily understand, by what they read and frequently heard in the Chaldaic Paraphrase, or Targum of Jonathan, which was read to them in the time of our Saviour, Christ, and at the time when S. John wrote his Gospel. In this Paraphrase they were accustomed to hear that the Hebrew word Memreth, to which corresponded in Greek, Λόγος, was put for him that was God : as Isa. xlv. 12, I made the earth ; in this Targum, I, by my Word, made the earth : Isa. xlviii. 13, My hand also hath founded the earth ; in this Paraphrase, in my Word I founded the earth : Gen. i. 8, They heard the voice of the Lord God ; in that Paraphrase, the voice of the Word of God. See Walton, Proleg. 12, num. 18, p. 86. Maldonatus on this place. Petavius, l. 6, de Trin. c. 1. Dr. Pearson on the Creed, p. 11. Dr. Hammond's note on S. Luke, chap. i., p. 203, &c. However, S. John shows us that he meant him who was the true God, by telling us that the world, and every thing that was made, was made by this Word, or Λόγος ; that in this Word was life ; that he was in the world, and was the light of the world ; that he had glory, as the glory of the only begotten of the Father, &c.

† V. 3. Omnia per ipsum facta sunt : πάντα δι' αὐτοῦ ἐγένετο : all things were made by him. Let not any one pretend that δι' αὐτοῦ, in this verse, signifies no more than, that all creatures were made by the Word, or Son of God, ministerially ; as if he was only the instrument of the eternal Father, and in a manner inferior to that by which they were created by the Father, the chief and principal cause of all things ; of whom the apostle says, ἐξ οὗ τὰ πάντα, ex ipso omnia.—Origen, unless perhaps his writings were corrupted by the Arians, seems to have given occasion to this λεπτολογία, as S. Basil calls it, to groundless quibbling and squabbling about the sense of the propositions ; when he tells us (tom. 2, in Joan. p. 55, ed. Huertii) that δι' οὗ never has the first place, but always the second place, meaning as to dignity : οὐδέποτε τὴν πρώτην χώραν ἔχει τὸ δι' οὗ, δευτέραν δὲ αἰ. It is like to many other false and unwarrantable assertions in Origen ; as when we find in the same Commentary on S. John, that he says only God the Father is called ὁ Θεός. Origen may perhaps be excused as to what he writes about δι' οὗ, and ἐξ οὗ, as if he spoke only with a regard to the Divine processions in God, in which the Father is the first Person, from whom proceeds even the eternal Son, the second Person. But whatever Origen thought, or meant, whom S. Epiphanius calls the father of Arius, whose works, as then extant, were condemned in the fifth General Council ; it appears that the Arians, in particular Aetius, of the Eunomian sect, pretended that ἐξ οὗ had always a more eminent signification, and was only applied to the Father ; the Father, said he, being the true God, the only principal efficient cause of all things ; and δι' οὗ was applied to the Word, or Son of God, who was not the same true God, to signify his inferior and ministerial production, as he was the instrument of the Father. Aetius, without regard to other places in the Scripture, as we read in S. Basil, (l. de Sp. S. c. 2, p. 293, ed. Morelli, an. 1637,) produced these words of the apostle (1 Cor. viii. 6) : εἰς Θεός, Πατήρ, ἐξ οὗ τὰ πάντα . . . και εἰς Κύριος, Ἰησοῦς Χριστός, δι' οὗ πάντα : unus Deus, Pater, ex quo omnia . . . et unus Dominus Jesus Christus, per quem omnia. He concluded from hence, that as the prepositions were different, so were the natures and substance of the Father and of the Son.—But that no settled and certain rule can be built on these prepositions, and that δι' οὗ, in this third verse of the first chapter of S. John, has no diminishing signification, so that the Son was equal to the proper and principal efficient cause of all things that were made and created ; we have the authority of the greatest doctors, and the most learned and exact writers of the Greek Church, who knew both the doctrine of the Catholic Church, and the rules and use of the Greek tongue.—S. Basil (l. de Spir. S. c. 3, et seq.) ridicules

Christ changes water into wine. He casts the sellers out of the temple.

AND the third day there was a marriage in Cana, of Galilee : and the mother of Jesus was there.

2 And Jesus also was invited, and his disciples, to the marriage.

3 And the wine failing, the mother of Jesus saith to him : They have no wine.

4 And Jesus saith to her : Woman, what is that to me and to thee ? my hour is not yet come.

this λεπτολογίαν, which, he says, had its origin from the vain and profane philosophy of the heathen writers, about the difference of causes. He denies that there is any such fixed rule ; and brings examples, in which δι' οὗ is applied to the Father, and ἐξ οὗ to the Son.—S. Greg. Naz. denies this difference, (Orat. 37, p. 604, ed. Morelli, Parisiis, ann. 1630,) and affirms that ἐξ οὗ, and δι' οὗ, in the Scripture, are said of all the three Divine Persons.—S. Chrysostom says the same ; and brings examples to show it on this verse of S. John ; and tells us expressly that δι' οὗ, in this verse, has no diminishing nor inferior signification : εἰ δὲ τὸ δι' οὗ νομίζεις ἁλλωσιώσως εἶναι, &c.—S. Cyril, of Alexandria, (l. 1, in Joan., p. 48,) makes the very same remark, and with the like examples. His words are, Quod si existimant (Ariani) PER QUEM, δι' οὗ, substantiam ejus (Filii) de aequalitate cum Patre deicere, ita ut MINISTER sit potius quam CREATOR, ad se redeant insani, &c.—S. Ambrose, a doctor of the Latin Church, (l. 2, de Sp. S. 10, p. 212, 213, ed. Par. an. 1586,) confutes, with S. Basil, the groundless and pretended difference of ex quo and per quem.—I shall only here produce that one passage to the Romans, (chap. xi. 36,) which S. Basil and S. Ambrose make use of, where we read, ex ipso, et per ipsum, et in ipso sunt omnia, (ἐξ αὐτοῦ, και δι' αὐτοῦ, και ἐν αὐτῷ τὰ πάντα,) et in ipsum omnia. Now either we expound all the three parts of this sentence, as spoken of the Son, our Lord Jesus Christ, (as both S. Basil and S. Ambrose understand them,) and then δι' οὗ is applied to the Son ; or we understand them of the Father, and δι' οὗ is applied to the first Person : or, in fine, as S. Aug. observes, (l. 1, de Trin. c. 6,) we interpret them in such a manner, that the first part be understood of the Father, the second of the Son, the third of the Holy Ghost ; and then the words that immediately follow in the singular number, to him be glory for ever, show that all the three Persons are but one in nature, one God ; and to all, and to each of the three Persons, the whole sentence belongs.—Had I not already said more than may seem necessary on these words, I might add all the Greek bishops in the Council of Florence, when they came to an union with the Latin bishops about the procession of the Holy Ghost. After many passages had been quoted out of the ancient Fathers, some of which had said that the Holy Ghost proceeded from the Father and the Son, ἐκ τοῦ Πατρὸς, και ἐκ τοῦ Υἱοῦ, and many others had asserted that he proceeded ἐκ τοῦ Πατρὸς διὰ τοῦ Υἱοῦ, Bessarion, the learned Grecian bishop, in a long oration, (Sess. 25.) showed that δι' Υἱοῦ was the same as ἐκ τοῦ Υἱοῦ. The Fathers, said he, show, δεικνυσιν ἰσοδυναμοῦσαν τῇ ἐκ τῆν διὰ. See tom. 13, Conc. Lab., p. 435. All the others allowed this to be true, as the emperor John Paleologus observed, p. 487. And the patriarch of Constantinople, when he was about to subscribe, declared the same : ἔστι τὸ διὰ τοῦ Υἱοῦ, ταῦτον τῷ ἐκ τοῦ Υἱοῦ. Can any one imagine that none of these learned Grecians should know the force and use of these two prepositions, in their own language ?

† V. 14. Gloriam quasi Unigeniti, ὡς μονογενοῦς. S. Chrys. says, the word quasi, ὡς, does no ways here diminish, but even confirms and increases the signification ; as when we say of a king, that he carries himself like a king. Τὸ ὡς ἐνταῦθεν οὐχ ὁμοσιώσως ἐστίν, ἀλλὰ βεβαιώσως.

§ V. 15, and 27. Ante me factus est, ἐμπροσθέν μου γέγονεν, is preferred before me : S. Chrys. says, he is λαμπρότερος, ἐντιμότερος, illustrior, honorabilior.

|| V. 16. Gratiam pro gratiā, χάριν ἀντὶ χάριτος, gratiam ; so Job, (li. 4,) pellem pro pelle, i. e. omnem pellem.

CHAP. II. VER. 3. They have no wine. The blessed virgin Mother was not ignorant of the Divine power of her Son, and that the time was come when he designed to make himself known to the world. She could not make her request in more modest terms. Wi.

VER. 4. Whatever turn be given to our Saviour's answer, it must be acknowledged it has in the appearance of something severe. But the Fathers have explained it with mildness, observing that our Saviour only meant to say, Mother, what affair is it of ours if they want wine ? Ought we to concern ourselves about that ? Others think that he wished, by these words, to let his Mother know that she must not forestall the time appointed by the heavenly Father, as if her demand were unreasonable and out of time. But most of the Fathers and best commentators understand, that he speaks here not as man and Son of Mary, but as God ; and in that quality, he observes to his Mother, I have nothing in common with you. It is not for you to prescribe when miracles are to be performed, which are not to be expected in compliance with any human respect. I know when my power is to be manifested for the greater glory of God. Calmet. See the like of me of speech, Mark i. 24 ; Luke iv. 34, &c.—My hour is not yet come. It is not yet time. He waited till the wine was quite done, lest any should believe that he had only increased the quantity, or had only mixed water with the wine. He would have his first miracle to be incontestable, and that all the company should be witnesses of it. S. Aug. et alii patres passim.

cording to the manner of the purifying of the Jews, containing two or three measures a-piece.

7 Jesus saith to them: Fill the water-pots with water. And they filled them up to the brim.

8 And Jesus saith to them: Draw out now, and carry to the chief steward of the feast. And they carried it.

9 And when the chief steward had tasted the water made wine, and knew not whence it was, but the waiters knew who had drawn the water: the chief steward calleth the bridegroom,

10 And saith to him: Every man at first setteth forth good wine, and when men have well drank, then that which is worse: but thou hast kept the good wine until now.

11 This beginning of miracles did Jesus in Cana, of Galilee: and he manifested his glory, and his disciples believed in him.

12 After this, he went down to Capharnaum, he and his mother, and his brethren, and his disciples: and they remained there not many days.

13 And the Pasch of the Jews was at hand, and Jesus went up to Jerusalem:

14 And he found in the temple those that sold oxen, and sheep, and doves, and the changers of money sitting.

15 And when he had made as it were a scourge of little cords, he drove them all out of the temple, the sheep also and the oxen, and he poured out the changers' money, and the tables he overthrew.

16 And he said to them that sold doves: Take these things hence, and make not the house of my Father a house of traffic.

17 And his disciples remembered that it was written: 'The zeal of thy house hath eaten me up.

18 Then the Jews answered, and said to him: What sign dost thou show us, seeing thou dost these things?

19 Jesus answered, and said to them: 'Destroy this temple, and in three days I will raise it up.

VER. 6. *Two or three measures, called metreta. Both the Latin and Greek text, by the derivation, may signify a measure in general, according to the Rhemish translation: but metreta was a particular measure of liquids: yet, not corresponding to our firkins, I could not think it proper with the Prot. and M. N. to put two or three firkins. Wi.

VER. 10. When men have well drank,† or plentifully; this is the literal sense. See Gen. xliii. 34; 1 Mac. xvi. 16; where the same word may be taken in the same sense. Wi.

VER. 11. This was the first miracle which Jesus had performed in public, and to manifest his glory; but Maldonatus is of opinion that he had before wrought many miracles, known to the blessed Virgin and S. Joseph; which gave her the confidence to ask one now. This opinion is no way contrary to the evangelist. His disciples believed in him. They had believed in him before, or they would not have followed him. This confirmed their faith. Calmet.

VER. 15. He drove them all out of the temple. According to S. Chrys. (hom. 67 in Matt.) this casting out was different from that which is there related, chap. xxi. 12. Wi.—Jesus Christ here shows the respect he requires should be shown to the temple of God; and S. Paul, speaking of the profaners of God's Church, saith: If any man defile the temple of God, him will God destroy. 1 Cor. iii. 17. VER. 20. Six and forty years, &c. This many understand of the time the second temple was building, from the edict of Cyrus to the sixth year of Darius Hytaspes. Others, of the enlarging and beautifying the temple, which was begun by Herod the Great, forty-six years before the Jews spoke this to our Saviour. Wi.

VER. 24. Trust himself to them. The Fathers generally understand these words, to them, to refer to those who believe in him, mentioned in the preceding verse. Though they believed in him, he did not trust himself to them, because he knew them. He knew their weakness, their inconstancy, their unsteadiness. He knew they would abandon him on the first occasion; and that his passion, his 20 The Jews then said: Six and forty years was this temple in building, and wilt thou raise it up in three days?

21 But he spoke of the temple of his body.

22 When, therefore, he was risen again from the dead, his disciples remembered that he had said this, and they believed the Scripture, and the word that Jesus had said.

23 Now when he was at Jerusalem, at the Pasch, upon the festival day, many believed in his name, seeing his miracles, which he did.

24 But Jesus did not trust himself to them, because he knew all men.

Christ's discourse with Nicodemus. John's testimony.

AND there was a man of the Pharisees, named Nicodemus, a ruler of the Jews.

2 This man came to Jesus by night, and said to him: Rabbi, we know that thou art come a teacher from God: for no man can do these miracles, which thou dost, unless God was with him.

3 Jesus answered and said to him: Amen, amen, I say to thee, except a man be born again, he cannot see the kingdom of God.

4 Nicodemus saith to him: How can a man be born when he is old? can he enter a second time into his mother's womb, and be born again?

5 Jesus answered: Amen, amen, I say unto thee, unless a man be born again of water and the Holy Ghost, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God.

6 That which is born of the flesh, is flesh: and that which is born of the spirit, is spirit.

7 Wonder not that I said to thee, you must be born again.

8 The Spirit breatheth where he will, and thou hearest his voice; but thou knowest not whence he cometh, nor whither he goeth: so is every one that is born of the Spirit.

cross, his doctrines, would be a subject of scandal. S. Austin compares these first believers to catechumens. They believe in Christ, confess his name, and sign their foreheads with his cross: but Jesus Christ does not trust himself to them; he does not trust to them the knowledge of his mysteries; he does not reveal to them the secrets of his religion. CHAP. III. VER. 2. By night. Nicodemus was at this time weak in faith, and therefore did not wish to endanger himself by coming to our Saviour in open day, when the enemies of Christ could see him. For many (as this evangelist informs us in chap. xii. 42) of the chief men also believed in him; but because of the Pharisees they did not confess, that they might not be cast out of the synagogue. S. Chrys.

VER. 5. Unless a man be born again of water and the Holy Ghost. Though the word Holy be now wanting in all Greek copies, it is certainly the sense. The ancient Fathers, and particularly S. Aug., in divers places, from these words, prove the necessity of giving baptism to infants: and by Christ's adding water, is excluded a metaphorical baptism. See also Acts viii. 36, and x. 47; and Titus iii. 5. Wi.—Except a man be born again. That is, unless you are born again by a spiritual regeneration in God, all the knowledge which you learn from me, will not be spiritual, but carnal. But I say to you, that neither you nor any other person, unless you be born again in God, can understand or conceive the glory which is in me. S. Chrys.

9 Nicodemus answered, and said to him: How can these things be done?

10 Jesus answered, and said to him: Art thou a master of Israel, and knowest not these things?

11 Amen, amen, I say unto thee: we speak what we know, and we testify what we have seen, and you receive not our testimony.

12 If I have spoken to you earthly things, and you believe not: how will you believe if I shall speak to you heavenly things?

13 And no man hath ascended into heaven, but he that descended from heaven, the Son of man, who is in heaven.

14 ^aAnd as Moses lifted up the serpent in the desert, so must the Son of man be lifted up:

15 That whosoever believeth in him, may not perish, but may have life everlasting.

16 ^bFor God so loved the world, as to give his only begotten Son: that whosoever believeth in him, may not perish, but may have life everlasting.

17 For God sent not his Son into the world, to judge the world, but that the world may be saved by him.

18 He that believeth in him is not judged: but he that doth not believe, is already judged: because he believeth not in the name of the only begotten Son of God.

19 And this is the judgment: ^cbecause the light is come into the world, and men loved darkness rather than the light; for their works were evil.

20 For every one that doth evil hateth the light, and cometh not to the light, that his works may not be re-proved.

21 But he that doth truth, cometh to the light, that his works may be made manifest, because they are done in God.

VER. 11. We speak what we know. It may perhaps be asked here, why Christ speaks in the plural number? To this we must answer, that it is the only Son of God, who is here speaking, showing us how the Father is in the Son, and the Son in the Father, and the Holy Ghost proceeding from both. S. Tho. Aquin.

VER. 13. No one hath ascended—but he that descended from heaven, the Son of man, who is in heaven. These words, divers times repeated by our Saviour, in their literal and obvious sense, show that Christ was in heaven, and had a being before he was born of the Virgin Mary, against the Cerinthians, &c. Wi.

VER. 14. This comparison of the serpent lifted up in the desert, upon which whoever looked was immediately cured from the bite of the fiery serpents, is a figure of the crucifixion of Christ on Calvary.

VER. 16, 17. Give his only begotten Son—God sent not his Son into the world. He was then his Son, his only begotten Son, before he sent him into the world. He was not, therefore, his Son only by the incarnation, but was his Son from the beginning, as he was also his Word from all eternity. This was the constant doctrine of the Church, and of the Fathers, against the heresy of the Arians, that God was always Father,^e and the Son always the eternal Son of the eternal Father. See note on chap. i. 14. Wi.

VER. 18. Is not judged. He that believeth, viz. by a faith working through charity, is not judged; that is, is not condemned; but the obstinate unbeliever is judged; that is, condemned already, by retrenching himself from the society of Christ and his Church. Ch.

the land of Judea: and there he abode with them, ^dand baptized.

23 And John also was baptizing in Ennon, near Salem, because there was much water there: and they came, and were baptized.

24 For John was not yet cast into prison.

25 And there arose a question between some of John's disciples and the Jews, concerning purification.

26 And they came to John, and said to him: Rabbi, he that was with thee beyond the Jordan, ^eto whom thou gavest testimony, behold he baptizeth, and all men come to him.

27 John answered, and said: A man cannot receive any thing except it be given him from heaven.

28 You yourselves do bear me witness, ^fthat I said, I am not the Christ; but that I am sent before him.

29 He that hath the bride, is the bridegroom: but the friend of the bridegroom, who standeth and heareth him, rejoiceth with joy, because of the bridegroom's voice. This my joy, therefore, is fulfilled.

VER. 30. He (Christ) must increase, not in virtue and perfection, with which he is replenished, but in the opinion of the world, when they begin to know him, and believe in him: and in like manner, I must be diminished, when they know how much he is above me. Wi.

VER. 31. He that cometh from above, meaning Christ. He that is of the earth, meaning himself, is from the earth,^t is earthly, is but a frail and infirm man; and so speaketh as from the earth: this seems rather the sense, than that he speaketh of or concerning the earth. See the Greek text. Wi.

VER. 33. He that hath received his testimony. These following words to the end of the chapter, seem to be the words of S. John the Baptist, rather than of the evangelist. The sense is, whosoever hath believed, and received the doctrine of Christ, hath attested, as it were, under his hand and seal, that God is true, and hath executed his promises concerning the Messias. Wi.

VER. 36. The Divinity of the Son is in this chapter proved as clearly as in 1 John v. 7, "There are three who give testimony in heaven; the Father, the Word, and the Holy Ghost; and these three are one." Which verse is entirely omitted by Luther in his version; for which omission he is severely reproved by Keckerman. But while Catholics and Protestants deduce from this and many other places in Scripture, the Divinity of Jesus Christ, as an indubitable and irrefragable consequence, how many learned Arians, Socinians, and Unitarians read the same texts, and deduce quite contrary consequences? How clearly does this prove that the Bible only cannot prove the exclusive rule of faith! With reason does the Cambridge divinity professor, Dr. Herbert Marsh, ask in his late publication on this subject, p. 18, "Are all Protestants alike in their religion? Have we not got Protestants of the Church of England, Protestants of the Church of Scotland, Protestants who hold the profession of Augsburg? Have we not both Arminian and Calvinistic Protestants? Are not the Moravians, the Methodists, the Baptists, the Quakers, and even the Jumpers, the Dunkers, the Swedenborgians, all Protestants? Since then Protestantism assumes so many different forms, men speak quite indefinitely, if they speak of it without explaining the particular kind which they mean. When I hear of a Swedish or Danish Protestant, I know that it means a person whose religion is the Bible only, as expounded by the Synod of Dort. In like manner, a Protestant of the Church of England, is a person whose religion is the Bible only; but the Bible as expounded by its Liturgy, and Articles. How, therefore, can we know, if we give the Bible only, what sort of Protestantism will be deduced from it?"—Idem ibidem, p. 21, adds, "Pro-

Christ talks with the Samaritan woman. He heals the ruler's son.

WHEN, therefore, Jesus understood that the Pharisees had heard that Jesus maketh more disciples, and baptizeth more than John,

2 (Though Jesus himself did not baptize, but his disciples,)

3 He left Judea, and departed again into Galilee.

4 And it was necessary he should pass through Samaria.

5 He cometh, therefore, to a city of Samaria which is called Sichar; near the piece of ground ^bwhich Jacob gave to his son Joseph.

6 Now Jacob's well was there. Jesus, therefore, being wearied with his journey, sat thus on the well. It was about the sixth hour.

7 There cometh a woman of Samaria to draw water. Jesus saith to her: Give me to drink.

8 (For his disciples were gone into the city, to buy food.)

9 Then that Samaritan woman saith to him: How dost thou, being a Jew, ask of me to drink, who am a Samaritan woman? For the Jews do not communicate with the Samaritans.

10 Jesus answered, and said to her: If thou didst know the gift of God, and who it is that saith to thee, Give me to drink: thou perhaps wouldst have asked of him, and he would have given thee living water.

11 The woman saith to him: Sir, thou hast nothing wherein to draw, and the well is deep: from whence then hast thou living water?

stants of every description, however various and even opposite in their opinions, claim severally for themselves the honour of deducing from the Bible irrefragable and indubitable consequences. The doctrine of conditional salvation is an indubitable consequence to the Arminian. The doctrine of absolute decree, an indubitable consequence to the Calvinist. The doctrines of the Trinity, the atonement, and the sacraments, which the Church of England considers as indubitable consequences of the Bible, would not be so, if the Unitarians and Quakers were right in the consequences which they draw from the Bible. But the consequences which they deduce appear indubitable to them." This the professor properly styles Protestantism in the abstract or generalized, and nearly allied to apostasy from Christianity. See his Inquiry into the Consequences of neglecting to give the Prayer Book with the Bible.

^a V. 16, 17. Αἰ ὁθός, αἰ ἡγός; ἡμα Πατήρ, ἡμα ἡγός. Arius began his heresy by denying this, as it appears in his letter to Eusebius, of Nicomedia, in S. Epiphani. Hær. 69. p. 731.

CHAP. IV. VER. 2. S. Chrysostom thinks that this baptism, given by the disciples of Christ, did not at all differ from the baptism of S. John; both, in his opinion, being used to prepare the people for Christ: but Alcuin interprets it otherwise. Some will ask, says he, whether the Holy Ghost was given by this baptism, since it is said the Holy Ghost was not yet given because Jesus was not yet glorified? To this we answer, that the Holy Ghost was given, though not in that manifest manner as it was after the ascension; for as Christ, as man, had always the Holy Ghost residing within him, and yet after his baptism received the Holy Ghost, coming upon him in a visible manner, in the shape of a dove; so before the manifest and public descent of the Holy Ghost, all the saints were his hidden temples. S. Thos. Aquinas.

VER. 5. This is what Jacob gave to his son Joseph, when calling him to him just before he died, he said, (Gen. xlviii. 22,) I give thee a portion above thy brethren, which I took out of the hand of the Amorrite, with my sword and bow. Theophylact.—It was thirty-six miles from Jerusalem, and the same place as Sichem, (Gen. xxxiv.) the capital of Samaria, now called Naplosa.

VER. 10. Thou didst know the gift of God; i. e. the favour now offered thee by my presence, of believing in me.—And he would have given thee living water, meaning Divine graces; but the woman understood him literally of such water as was there in the well. Wi.

VER. 12. The Samaritan woman says, our father Jacob; because Samaria us the well, and drank thereof himself, and his children, and his cattle?

13 Jesus answered, and said to her: Whosoever drinketh of this water shall thirst again: but he that shall drink of the water that I shall give him, shall not thirst for ever.

14 But the water that I shall give him, shall become in him a fountain of water, springing up into everlasting life.

15 The woman saith to him: Sir, give me this water, that I may not thirst, nor come hither to draw.

16 Jesus saith to her: Go, call thy husband, and come hither.

17 The woman answered, and said: I have no husband. Jesus said to her: Thou hast said well, I have no husband:

18 For thou hast had five husbands: and he whom thou now hast is not thy husband. This thou hast said truly.

19 The woman saith to him: Sir, I perceive that thou art a prophet.

20 Our fathers adored on this mountain, and you say that at Jerusalem is the place where men must adore.

21 Jesus saith to her: Woman, believe me, the hour cometh when you shall neither on this mountain, nor in Jerusalem, adore the Father.

22 "You adore that which you know not: we adore that which we know: for salvation is of the Jews.

23 But the hour cometh, and now is, when the true adorers shall adore the Father in spirit and in truth. For the Father also seeketh such to adore him.

24 "God is a spirit, and they that adore him, must adore him in spirit and in truth.

ritans claimed lineage from Abraham, who was himself a Chaldean; and they, therefore, called Jacob their father, because he was Abraham's grandson. S. Chrys. —Or she calls him their father because they lived under the law of Moses, and were in possession of that spot of ground which Jacob had bequeathed to his son Joseph. Ven. Bede.

VER. 16. Call thy husband. Christ begins to show her that he knows her life, to make her know him and herself. Wi.

VER. 20. Our fathers adored on this mountain, &c. She means Jacob and the ancient patriarchs, whom the Samaritans called their fathers; and by the mountain, that of Garizim, where the Samaritans had built a temple, and where they would have all persons adore, and not at Jerusalem: now she had a curiosity to hear what Christ would say of these two temples, and of the different worship of the Jews and of the Samaritans. Wi.—Sichem was at the foot of Mount Garizim. The Samaritans supposed the patriarchs had exercised their religious acts on this mountain. V.

VER. 22. The Israelites, on account of their innumerable sins, had been delivered by the Almighty into the hands of the king of Assyria, who led them all away captives into Babylon and Media, and sent other nations, whom he had collected from different parts, to inhabit Samaria. But the Almighty, to show to all nations that he had not delivered up these his people for want of power to defend, but solely on account of their transgressions, sent lions into the land to persecute these strangers. The Assyrian king, upon hearing this, sent them a priest to teach them the law of God; but neither after this did they depart wholly from their impiety, but in part only: for many of them returned to their idols, worshipping at the same time the true God. It was on this account that Christ preferred the Jews before them, saying, that salvation is of the Jews, with whom it was the chief principle to acknowledge the true God, and hold every denomination of idols in detestation; whereas, the Samaritans, by mixing the worship of the one with the other, plainly showed that they held the God of the universe in no greater esteem than their dumb idols. S. Chrys. ex S. Thoma.

VER. 23. Now is the time approaching, when the true adorers shall adore the Father in spirit and in truth, without being confined to any one temple or place; and chiefly in spirit, without such a multitude of sacrifices and ceremonies as even the Jews now practise. Such adorers God himself (who is a pure spirit) desires, of which they shall be taught by the Messiah. Wi.—Our Lord foretells her that sacrifices in both these temples should shortly cease, giving her these three instructions: 1. That the true sacrifice should be limited no longer to one spot or nation, but should be offered throughout all nations, according to that of Malachi (i. 11); 2. That the gross and carnal adoration by the flesh and blood of beasts not having in them grace, spirit, and life, should be taken away, and another 25 The woman saith to him : I know that the Messiah cometh (who is called Christ) : therefore when he is come, he will tell us all things.

26 Jesus saith to her : I am he, who am speaking with thee.

27 And immediately his disciples came : and they wondered that he talked with the woman. Yet no man said : What seekest thou, or why talkest thou with her ?

28 The woman, therefore, left her water-pot, and went away into the city, and saith to those men :

29 Come, and see a man who hath told me all things that ever I did. Is not he the Christ ?

30 Then they went out of the city, and came to him.

31 In the mean time the disciples prayed him, saying : Rabbi, eat.

32 But he said to them : I have food to eat which you know not of.

33 The disciples, therefore, said one to another : Hath any man brought him any thing to eat ?

34 Jesus said to them : My food is to do the will of him that sent me, that I may perfect his work.

35 Do not you say, there are yet four months, and then the harvest cometh ? Behold I say to you, lift up your eyes, and see the countries, ^afor they are white already to harvest.

36 And he that reapeth receiveth wages, and gathereth fruit into everlasting life : that both he that soweth, and he that reapeth, may rejoice together.

37 For in this is the saying true : that it is one man that soweth, and it is another that reapeth.

38 I have sent you to reap that in which you did not labour : others have laboured, and you have entered into their labours.

39 Now of that city many of the Samaritans believed in him, for the word of the woman giving testimony : that he told me whatsoever I have done.

40 So when the Samaritans were come to him, they desired him that he would stay there. And he stayed there two days.

41 And many more believed in him, because of his own word.

rice succeed, which should be in itself invisible, Divine, and full of life, spirit, and grace ; 3. That this sacrifice should be truth itself, wherof all former sacrifices were but shadows and figures. B.

VER. 25. I know that the Messiah cometh. So that even the Samaritans, at that time, expected the coming of the great Messiah. Wi.

VER. 27. His disciples . . . wondered, &c. They admired his humility, finding him discoursing with a poor woman, especially she being a Samaritan. Wi.

VER. 29. The Samaritans looked for the Messiah, because they had the books of Moses, in which Jacob foretold the world's Redeemer : The sceptre shall not depart from Juda, nor a leader from his thigh, until he come that is to be sent. Gen. xlix. 10. And Moses himself foretold the same : God will raise to us a prophet from amongst our brethren. Deut. xviii. 15. S. Chrys. ex S. Thoma.

VER. 35. For they are white already to harvest. The great harvest of souls was approaching, when Christ was come to teach men the way to salvation, and was to send his apostles to convert all nations. They succeeded to the labours of the prophets, but with much greater advantages and success. And to this is applied that common saying, that one soweth and another reapeth. Wi.

VER. 42. This is indeed the Saviour of the world. These Samaritans then believed that Jesus was the true Messiah, sent to redeem the world. Wi.

VER. 44. For Jesus himself gave testimony, &c. The connexion and reason given here by the word for, is obscure, when it is said Jesus went into Galilee, and gave testimony that a prophet hath not honour in his own country. One would think this should not be a reason for his going into Galilee, but rather why he should not go thither. S. Cyril,* and also S. Chrys., distinguish different parts ^f Galilee ; and say, that when Jesus went into Galilee, the meaning is, that he 42 And they said to the woman : We now believe, not for thy saying ; for we ourselves have heard him, and know that this is indeed the Saviour of the world.

43 Now, after two days, he departed thence ; and went into Galilee.

44 ^bFor Jesus himself gave testimony that a prophet hath not honour in his own country.

45 ^cThen, when he was come into Galilee, the Galileans received him, having seen all the things he had done at Jerusalem on the festival day : for they also went to the festival day.

46 He came again, therefore, into Cana of Galilee, ^dwhere he made the water wine. And there was a certain ruler whose son was sick at Capharnaum.

47 He having heard that Jesus was come from Judea into Galilee, went to him, and prayed him to come down and heal his son ; for he was at the point of death.

48 Then Jesus said to him : Unless you see signs and wonders, you believe not.

49 The ruler saith to him : Sir, come down before that my son die.

50 Jesus saith to him : Go thy way, thy son liveth. The man believed the word which Jesus said to him, and went his way.

51 And as he was going down, his servants met him : and they brought word, saying : that his son lived.

52 He asked, therefore, of them the hour wherein he grew better. And they said to him : Yesterday, at the seventh hour, the fever left him.

53 The father, therefore, knew that it was at the same hour that Jesus said to him : Thy son liveth : and himself believed, and his whole house.

54 This is again the second miracle that Jesus did, when he was come out of Judea into Galilee.

CHAP. V.

Christ heals on the sabbath the man languishing thirty-eight years ; his discourse upon this occasion.

AFTER ^ethese things there was a festival day of the Jews, and Jesus went up to Jerusalem.

2 Now there is at Jerusalem a pond, called Probatice, which in Hebrew is named Bethesda, having five ports would not at that time go to Nazareth, where he was bred, nor to Capharnaum where he had lived for a time, but went to Cana, and those other parts of Galilee ; and that the word for only gives the reason of this, that he would not go to Nazareth or Capharnaum, because no prophet is honoured in his own country. Wi.

* V. 44. S. Cyril, in Joan., p. 202. Interjacentem Nazareth præterit. παρά τρέχει τὴν Ναζαρεθ διὰ τοῦ μέσου κειμένην. S. Chrys. hom. 34, in Joan. tom. 4. p. 203, quare addidit, quia, γὰρ, quod non in Capharnaum, sed in Galileam, et in Cana abiit.

CHAP. V. VER. 1. Observe here the malice of the Pharisees ; they were more hurt at the cure of the sick man, than at the violation of the sabbath. Therefore they ask not, Who healed you ? but, as if they wished to keep that out of sight, Who told you to take up your bed ? S. Chrys.—But he answers, The same who healed me : Why should I not receive orders from him from whom I have received my health ? S. Aug.

VER. 2. Now there is at Jerusalem a pond, called Probatice. Some translate, the sheep-pond. It is true the Greek word signifies something belonging to sheep. But because the ancient Latin interpreter thought fit to retain the Greek, probatice, and also because of the different expositions, I have not changed the word. Some think it was so called, as being near the gate called the sheep-gate : others, as being near the sheep-market : others, because the sheep that were brought to be sacrificed, were washed in it ; or, at least, that the blood and entrails of sheep and beasts sacrificed, were thrown into it, or washed there. In the ordinary Greek copies we read thus : there is at, or near, the Probatice, a pond, at 3 In these lay a great multitude of sick, of blind, of lame, of withered, waiting for the moving of the water.

4 And an angel of the Lord went down at a certain time into the pond: and the water was moved: And he that went down first into the pond after the motion of the water, was made whole of whatsoever infirmity he lay under.

5 And there was a certain man there, that had been eight and thirty years under his infirmity.

6 Him when Jesus had seen lying, and knew that he had been now a long time, he saith to him: Wilt thou be made whole?

7 The infirm man answered him: Sir, I have no man when the water is troubled, to put me into the pond: for whilst I am coming, another goeth down before me.

8 Jesus saith to him: Arise, take up thy bed, and walk.

9 And immediately the man was made whole: and he took up his bed, and walked. And it was the sabbath that day.

10 The Jews, therefore, said to him that was cured: *It is the sabbath, it is not lawful for thee to take up thy bed.

11 He answered them: He that made me whole, he said to me: Take up thy bed, and walk.

12 They asked him, therefore: Who is that man that said to thee: Take up thy bed, and walk?

* Exod. xx. 11; Jer. xvii. 21.

fish-pond. In Hebrew it was called Bethsaida, a house for fishing: and in most Greek copies, Bethchesda, a house of mercy, (perhaps because of the cures done there,) having five porches, covered and arched, for the convenience of the infirm that laid there, waiting for the motion of the water. Wi.

VER. 4. And an angel of the Lord.† In many Greek copies is now wanting, of the Lord; but at least the ancient Fathers, and interpreters, expound it of a true angel, and of a miraculous cure: so that I cannot but wonder that so learned a man as Dr. Hammond should rather judge these cures to have been natural. By the angel, he would have us to understand a messenger sent from the temple, who was to stir up the blood, and the grosser and thicker parts from the bottom of the pond, and that these cures were made much after the same manner, as, in some cases, persons find a cure by being put into the belly of a beast newly opened. Into what extravagant interpretations are men of learning sometimes led by their private judgment! Wi.—The effect produced could not be natural, as only one was cured at each motion of the waters. The longing expectation of the suffering patients, is a mark of the persevering prayer with which poor sinners should solicit the cure of their spiritual infirmities. A.

VER. 5. Infirmity. The Greek, ἀσθένεια, signifies, in its radical interpretation, a loss of strength: in this place it seems to denote a confirmed palsy.

VER. 6. Wilt thou be made whole? No doubt but the poor man desired nothing more. Christ put this question, to raise him to a lively faith and hope. Wi.

VER. 8. Arise, take up thy bed, and walk. The man found himself healed at that very moment, and did as he was ordered, though it was the sabbath-day. The Jews blamed him for it: he told them that he who had healed him had him do so. And who it was he knew not, till Jesus, finding him in the temple, said to him (ver. 14): Sin no more, lest some worse thing happen to thee. Upon this he went, not out of malice, but out of gratitude, and told the Jews that Jesus had cured him. Wi.

VER. 14. Sin no more, &c. By these words our Saviour shows, that his infirmity was sent in punishment of his sins. When our souls are covered with the leprosy of sin, we are frequently insensible of our misfortune; whereas, as soon as the body is attacked with sickness, though ever so inconsiderable, we are not to be pacified till the physician has been consulted, and some remedy applied to remove, if possible, the complaint. S. Chrys. hom. 37, in Joan.—Men are astonished that God, for so short a pleasure as is found in the perpetration of sin, should have decreed an everlasting punishment in the fire of hell; for they say, Shall I be punished for ever, for having indulged a sinful thought for a single moment? But their astonishment will cease, when they consider that punishments are not inflicted on sins in proportion to the length of time that was spent in the perpetration, but that they are proportioned to their malice. Now the malice of sin being infinite, aimed against the infinite majesty and infinite sanctity of God, the punishment, to be any ways commensurate, must be infinite. If, therefore, the sinner dies charged with the infinite debt of mortal sin unrepented of, as the time of mercy and repentance finishes with the present life, the sin must necessarily remain, God's hatred for sin must necessarily remain, and the punishment justly inflicted must necessarily continue. A.

VER. 17. My Father worketh until now,† and I work. The Jews looked 13 But he that was healed, knew not who it was. For Jesus went aside from the multitude that was standing in the place.

14 Afterwards Jesus findeth him in the temple, and saith to him: Behold, thou art made whole: sin no more, lest some worse thing happen to thee.

15 The man went his way, and told the Jews that it was Jesus that had made him whole.

16 Thereupon, the Jews persecuted Jesus, because he did these things on the sabbath.

17 But Jesus answered them: My Father worketh until now, and I work.

18 Hereupon, therefore, the Jews sought the more to kill him, because he did not only break the sabbath, but also said that God was his Father, making himself equal to God. Then Jesus answered, and said to them:

19 Amen, amen, I say unto you: the Son cannot do any thing of himself, but what he seeth the Father do: for what things soever he doth, these the Son also doth in like manner.

20 For the Father loveth the Son, and showeth him all things which himself doth; and greater works than these will he show him, that you may wonder.

21 For as the Father raiseth up the dead, and giveth life: so the Son also giveth life to whom he will.

22 For neither doth the Father judge any man: but hath committed all judgment to the Son.

upon it of obligation to do nothing on the sabbath, because God is said to have rested the seventh day; on which account, the rest on the seventh day was commanded. Christ puts them in mind, that though it be said he rested the seventh day, (that is, produced no more new kinds of creatures,) yet that God may be said to work always, by preserving and continually governing the world: and I, saith he, do all things that he doth, I work with him, being one and the same in nature and substance with him: nay, even as man, I do nothing but what is conformable to his will; and so you need not fear that I break the sabbath. Wi.—If Christ had not been the natural Son of God, these words, which he says in excuse of his seeming breach of the sabbath, would rather have increased the strength of their accusation. For no governor, when accused of any crime, excuses himself by saying the king does the same. But as the Son is equal to the Father, his excuse is a true one. S. Chrysos. hom. 37, in Joan.

VER. 18. That God was his Father,‡ making himself equal to God. In divers places of the Old Testament, God is called the Father of the Israelites, and they his children: but here, and on several other occasions, the Jews very well saw, that he called God his Father in a quite different sense from that in which he could be said to be their Father; that his words made him equal to God, and that he made himself God. See John x. 33; xix. 7; Luke xxii. 70, &c. And therefore S. Augustin says on this verse, (trac. 17, in Joan.) Behold the Jews understand what the Arians do not. Wi.

VER. 19. The Son cannot do any thing of himself,|| but what he seeth the Father do. In like manner (ver. 30) Christ says, I can do nothing of myself. As I hear, so I judge. Again, (chap. viii. 28,) I do nothing of myself; but as the Father hath taught me, I speak these things. All these and the like expressions may be expounded, with Maldonat and Petavius, (1. 2, de Trin. c. 4,) of Christ, as man. But the ancient Fathers commonly allowed them to be understood of Christ as God, and as the true Son of God proceeding from him from all eternity; as when it is said, the Son cannot do any thing of himself, it is true, because the eternal Son is not of himself, but always proceeds from the Father. 2. Because the works of all the three Persons, by which all things are produced and preserved, are inseparable. 3. When it is said, that the Son doth nothing, but what he seeth the Father doing: that he heareth, as the Father hath taught him, or shewed to him: these expressions bear not the same sense as when they are applied to men, or to an inferior or a scholar, who learns of his master, and follows him; but here, says S. Aug., to see, to hear, to be taught by the Father, is no more than to proceed from him, to do and produce by the same action, all that the Father doth and produceth. This is the general interpretation of the ancient Fathers: of S. Athan., S. Basil, S. Greg. Naz., S. Chrys., S. Cyril, S. Amb., S. Ang. Wi.

VER. 20. Greater works than these will he (the Father) show him, &c. These words may also, with Mald., be expounded of Christ, as he is man; but the ancient interpreters understand them of Christ, as he is God, in this sense, that the Father and the Son, or the Father by the Son, will show greater miracles hereafter done by Christ, that more persons may admire and believe. Wi.

VER. 21. For as the Father . . . giveth life, so also the Son giveth life to whom he will; where these words, to give life to whom he will, show the power of the Son and of the Father to be equal. Wi.

VER. 22. Neither doth the Father judge any man It is certain that God's 23 That all men may honour the Son, as they honour the Father. He who honoureth not the Son, honoureth not the Father who hath sent him.

24 Amen, amen, I say unto you, he that heareth my word, and believeth him that sent me, hath everlasting life; and cometh not into judgment, but is passed from death to life.

25 Amen, amen, I say unto you, that the hour cometh, and now is, when the dead shall hear the voice of the Son of God, and they that hear shall live.

26 For as the Father hath life in himself; so he hath given to the Son also to have life in himself:

27 And he hath given him authority to execute judgment, because he is the Son of man.

28 Wonder not at this, for the hour cometh, wherein all that are in the graves shall hear the voice of the Son of God.

29 *And they that have done good, shall come forth unto the resurrection of life: but they that have done evil, unto the resurrection of judgment.

30 I can do nothing of myself. As I hear, so I judge: and my judgment is just: because I seek not my own will, but the will of him that sent me.

31 If I bear witness of myself, my witness is not true.

32 †There is another that beareth witness of me: and I know that the witness which he witnesseth of me is true.

33 You sent to John: and he gave testimony to the truth.

34 But I received not testimony from man: but I say these things that you may be saved.

35 He was a burning and a shining lamp. And you were willing, for a time, to rejoice in his light.

* Matt. xxv. 46.—† Matt. iii. 17; Supra, i. 15.—c Matt. iii. 17, and xvii. 5.—d Deut. iv. 12.

the Judge of all, by divers places of the Holy Scriptures; and to judge, belongs both to the Father and to the Son, as they are the same God: so that when it is added, that the Father hath given all judgment to the Son,† this is meant of the exterior exercise of his judgment upon all mankind at the end of the world, inasmuch as Christ then will return, in his human body, to judge all men, even as man, in their bodies. Wi.

VER. 24. Hath everlasting life. That is, a title to an eternal inheritance of glory, by believing in the Father, and in the Son, and also in the Holy Ghost, as we are taught to believe at our baptism. Wi.

VER. 25. The hour cometh . . . when the dead shall hear the voice of the Son of God. Though some understand this of the rising of Lazarus; others of those that rose with Christ at his resurrection: yet by these words, when the dead shall hear the voice of the Son of God, seems rather to be signified the general resurrection at the end of the world; and though it be said, that now is the hour, this may be spoken of the last age of the world; and, as S. John says, (1 Ep. ii. 18,) children, it is the last hour. Wi.

VER. 29. Unto the resurrection of judgment. That is, condemnation. Ch.

VER. 30. I can do nothing of myself, &c. See ver. 19. S. Chrys. also takes notice, that it may be no less with truth said of the Father, that he can do nothing of himself, nor without his Son, nor both of them without the Holy Ghost; because both they, and their actions, are inseparable. Wi.

VER. 31. If I bear witness of myself, &c. Christ tells the Jews elsewhere, (chap. viii. 14,) that though he should bear witness of himself, it would be true. But the sense of the words in this place is, I could allow you, that if I only gave testimony of myself, you might seem to have some reason to except against my testimony; but now, besides my own words, you have had also the testimony of John the Baptist, who divers times witnessed that I am the Messiah, and the Son of God, come to take away the sins of the world. 2. You have had the testimony of my eternal Father, particularly at my baptism. 3. You have yet a greater testimony, by the works and miracles wrought before your eyes, and at the same time foretold by the prophets. 4. The prophets, and the Scriptures, which you search, or which I remit to you, to search them diligently, these also bear witness concerning me. Wi.

VER. 39. Or, You search the Scriptures (serutimini; ἐπευνάρε.) It is not a command for all to read the Scriptures; but a reproach to the Pharisees, that reading the Scriptures, as they did, and thinking to find everlasting life in them, they would not receive him to whom all those Scriptures gave testimony, and through whom alone they could have that true life. Ch.—This hope is the cause and motive which leads to this study; and eternal life is the end they propose to 36 But I have a greater testimony than that of John For the works which the Father hath given me to perfect: the works themselves, which I do, give testimony of me, that the Father hath sent me.

37 And the Father himself, who hath sent me, †hath given testimony of me: neither have you heard his voice at any time: †nor seen his shape.

38 And you have not his word abiding in you: for whom he hath sent, him you believe not.

39 Search the Scriptures, for you think in them to have life everlasting: and the same are they that give testimony of me:

40 And you will not come to me that you may have life.

41 I receive not glory from men.

42 But I know you, that you have not the love of God in you.

43 I am come in the name of my Father, and you receive me not: if another shall come in his own name, him you will receive.

44 How can you believe, who receive glory one from another: *and the glory which is from God alone, you do not seek?

45 Think not that I will accuse you to the Father. There is one that accuseth you, Moses, in whom you trust.

46 For if you did believe Moses, you would perhaps believe me also; †for he wrote of me.

47 But if you do not believe his writings: how will you believe my words?

CHAP. VI.

Christ feeds five thousand with five loaves: he walks upon the sea, and discourses of the bread of life.

themselves in it. Hence, from the context and mode of argumentation made use of, the indicative, you search, instead of the imperative mood, search ye, is best supported. Catholics are most unjustly accused of depriving the faithful of the use of the Holy Scriptures.

VER. 40. And you will not come to me. Christ now gives them reasons why they do not receive him, and his doctrine, nor believe in him; because they are void of the love of God, full of self-love, envy, pride, seeking for praise and glory one from another. Hence you will not receive me, who come in the name of my Father, sent to redeem the world. But if another, such as false prophets, or even Antichrist himself, who will pretend to be the Messiah, come in his own name, him you will receive. Wi.

AFTER this, "Jesus went over the sea of Galilee, which is that of Tiberias :

2 And a great multitude followed him, because they saw the miracles which he did on them that were infirm.

3 And Jesus went up into a mountain, and there he sat with his disciples.

4 Now the Pasch, the festival day^b of the Jews, was near at hand.

5 When Jesus, therefore, had lifted up his eyes, and seen that a very great multitude cometh to him, he said to Philip : Whence shall we buy bread, that these may eat ?

6 And this he said to try him : for he himself knew what he would do.

7 Philip answered him : Two hundred penny-worth of bread is not sufficient for them, that every one may take a little.

8 One of his disciples, Andrew, the brother of Simon Peter, saith to him :

9 There is a boy here that hath five barley loaves, and two fishes ; but what are these among so many ?

10 Then Jesus said : Make the men sit down. Now there was much grass in the place. So the men sat down, in number about five thousand.

11 And Jesus took the loaves : and when he had given thanks, he distributed to them that were sat down : In like manner also of the fishes, as much as they would.

12 And when they were filled, he said to his disciples : Gather up the fragments that remain, lest they be lost.

13 So they gathered them up, and filled twelve baskets with the fragments of the five barley loaves, which remained over and above to them that had eaten.

14 Then those men, when they had seen what a miracle Jesus had done, said : This is the prophet indeed, that is to come into the world.

15 When Jesus, therefore, perceived that they would come to take him by force, and make him king, ^che fled again into the mountain himself alone.

16 And when evening was come, his disciples went down to the sea.

17 And when they had entered into a ship, they went over the sea to Capharnaum : and it was now dark, and Jesus was not come to them.

18 And the sea arose, by reason of a great wind that blew.

19 So when they had rowed about five and twenty or thirty furlongs, they see Jesus walking on the sea, and drawing near to the ship, and they were afraid.

20 But he said to them : It is I : be not afraid.

21 They were willing, therefore, to take him into the ship : and presently the ship was at the land to which they were going.

22 The next day the multitude that stood on the other side of the sea saw that there was no other ship there but one, and that Jesus had not entered into the ship with his disciples, but that his disciples only had gone away :

23 But other ships came in from Tiberias, near to the place where they had eaten the bread, the Lord giving thanks.

24 When the people, therefore, saw that Jesus was not there, nor his disciples, they took shipping, and came to Capharnaum, seeking for Jesus.

25 And when they had found him on the other side of the sea, they said to him : Rabbi, when camest thou hither ?

26 Jesus answered them, and said : Amen, amen, I say to you : you seek me, not because you have seen miracles, but because you did eat of the loaves, and were filled.

27 Labour not for the meat which perisheth, but for that which endureth unto everlasting life, which the Son of man will give you. ^dFor him hath God the Father sealed.

28 They said, therefore, to him : What shall we do, that we may work the works of God ?

29 Jesus answered, and said to them : ^eThis is the work of God, that you believe in him whom he hath sent.

30 They said, therefore, to him : What sign then dost thou show that we may see, and may believe thee ? what dost thou work ?

31 Our fathers did eat manna in the desert, as it is written : ^fHe gave them bread from heaven to eat.

CHAP. VI. VER. 1. Galilee. S. John does not usually relate what is mentioned by the other evangelists, especially what happened in Galilee. If he does it on this occasion, it is purposely to introduce the subject of the heavenly bread, which begins ver. 37. He seems, moreover, to have had in view the description of the different passovers during Christ's public ministry. As he, therefore, remained in Galilee during the third passover, he relates pretty fully what passed during that time. We may also remark, that as the other three evangelists give, in the same terms, the institution of the blessed sacrament, S. John omits the institution, but gives in detail the repeated promises of Jesus Christ, relative to this grand mystery.

VER. 4. From the circumstance of the passover, the number that followed Jesus was greatly increased. V.

VER. 5. Our Lord first said, (Matt. xiv. 16,) Give them to eat; but afterwards, accommodating himself to the weakness of his disciples, he says, Whence shall we buy bread? So there is no contradiction.

VER. 10. The text in S. Matthew adds: without counting the women and the children, who might possibly amount to an equal number.

VER. 12. To make the miracle still more conspicuous to the multitude, Jesus Christ showed, that not only their present wants were supplied, but that there remained as much, or more, after they had all been filled, as there had been, at first presented to Him.

VER. 14. The Prophet indeed. That is, the Messias. Wi.

VER. 19. Five and twenty or thirty furlongs. About three or four miles.

VER. 21. In S. Matt. xiv. 26, and S. Mark vi. 51, we find that Jesus entered into the boat. S. John does not deny it; but he remarks a circumstance not noticed by the others: The vessel was presently at the land. V.

VER. 26. Christ did not return an express answer to their words, but he replied to their thoughts. For they seem to have put this question to him, that by flattering him, they might induce him to work another miracle, similar to the former: but Christ answers them not to seek for their temporal prosperity, but for their eternal welfare. Maldon.

VER. 27. For him hath God the Father sealed. The sense seems to be, that Christ having wrought so many miracles in his Father's name, the Father himself hath thereby given testimony in his favour, and witnessed, as it were, under his seal, that Jesus is his true Son, whom he sent into the world. Wi.

VER. 30. What sign then dost thou show? And foreseeing that he might, with great propriety, allege the recent miracle, they contrast it with what Moses performed in the desert. It is true, they say, you once fed 5,000 persons with five loaves; but our fathers, to the number of 600,000, did eat, not for once, but during forty years, manna in the desert; a species of food this infinitely superior to barley bread. V. See Num. i. 46.

VER. 31. S. Chrysostom observes, that the Jews still acknowledge Christ for God, since they entreat Christ not merely to ask his Father to give it them; but, do thou thyself give it us.

VER. 32. Moses gave you not bread from heaven; i. e. the manna was not given to your forefathers by Moses, but by God's goodness. Secondly, Neither came it from heaven, but from the clouds, or from the region of the air only. Thirdly, It did not make them that eat it live for ever; but they that spiritually 32 Then Jesus said to them: Amen, amen, I say unto you: Moses gave you not bread from heaven; but my Father giveth you the true bread from heaven.

33 For the bread of God is that which cometh down from heaven, and giveth life to the world.

34 Then they said to him: Lord, give us always this bread.

35 And Jesus said to them: I am the bread of life: he that cometh to me, shall not hunger: and he that believeth in me, shall never thirst.

36 But I said to you, that you also have seen me, and you believe not.

37 All that the Father giveth me, shall come to me: and him that cometh to me, I will not cast out:

38 Because I came down from heaven, not to do my own will, but the will of him that sent me.

39 Now this is the will of him that sent me, the Father: that all that he hath given me, I lose not thereof, but raise it up again at the last day.

40 And this is the will of my Father, who sent me: that every one who seeth the Son, and believeth in him, may have everlasting life, and I will raise him up at the last day.

41 The Jews then murmured at him, because he had said: I am the living bread which came down from heaven.

42 And they said: Is not this Jesus the son of Joseph, whose father and mother we know? How then saith he, I came down from heaven?

43 Jesus, therefore, answered, and said to them: Murmur not among yourselves.

44 No man can come to me, except the Father, who hath sent me, draw him: and I will raise him up at the last day.

45 It is written in the prophets: And they shall all be taught of God. Every one that hath heard of the Father, and hath learned, cometh to me.

46 Not that any man hath seen the Father, but he, who is of God, he hath seen the Father.

47 Amen, amen, I say unto you: He that believeth in me, hath everlasting life.

48 I am the bread of life.

49 Your fathers did eat manna in the desert, and they died.

50 This is the bread descending down from heaven: that if any one eat of it, he may not die.

51 I am the living bread, which came down from heaven.

52 If any man eat of this bread, he shall live for ever: and the bread which I will give, is my flesh for the life of the world.

53 The Jews, therefore, debated among themselves, saying: How can this man give us his flesh to eat?

54 Then Jesus said to them: Amen, amen, I say to eat me, the living bread; that is, believe in me, and keep my commandments, shall live for ever.—Ver. 37, 44, and 66. *No one can come to me, unless the Father draw him. These verses are commonly expounded of God's elect; who are not only called, but saved, by a particular mercy and providence of God. God is said to draw them to himself by special and effectual graces, yet without any force or necessity, without prejudice to the liberty of their free-will. A man, says S. Aug., is said to be drawn by his pleasures, and by what he loves. Wi.

VER. 36. You demand this bread; behold it is before you, and yet you eat it not. I am the bread; to believe in me is to eat me. You see me, but you believe not in me. S. Austin.—It is to this place that those words of S. Austin are to be referred: "Why do you prepare your teeth and belly? believe in me, and you have eaten me." Words which do not destroy the real presence, of which he is not speaking in this verse. Maldon. 35.

VER. 38. Christ does not say this as if he did not whatever he wished; but he recommends to us his humility.

VER. 41. I am the living bread, which came down from heaven. These Jews did not believe that Christ was the true and eternal Son of God, who came from heaven, and was made flesh, was made man. He speaks of this faith in him, when he calls himself the living bread, the mystical bread of life, that came to give life everlasting to all true and faithful believers. In this sense S. Augustin said, (Trac. 25, p. 489,) Why dost thou prepare thy teeth and belly? only believe, and thou hast eaten: but afterwards he passeth to his sacramental and real presence in the holy sacrament. Wi.

VER. 44. Draw him. Not by compulsion; nor by laying the free-will under any necessity, but by the strong and sweet motions of his heavenly grace. Ch.

VER. 48. Because the multitude still insisted in begging for their corporal nourishment, and remembering the food that was given to their fathers, Christ, to show that all were figures of the present spiritual food, answered, that he was the bread of life. Theophylact.—Here Jesus Christ proceeds to the second part of his discourse, in which he fully explains what that bread of life is, which he is about to bestow upon mankind in the mystery of the holy Eucharist. He declares then, in the first place, that he is the bread of eternal life, and mentions its several properties; and secondly, he applies to his own person, and to his own flesh, the idea of this bread, such as he has defined it.

VER. 51. Christ now no longer calls the belief in him, or the preaching of the gospel, the bread that he will give them; but he declares that it is his own flesh, and that flesh which shall be given for the life of the world. Calmet.—This bread Christ then gave, when he gave the mystery of his body and blood to his disciples. Ven. Bede.

VER. 52. The bread which I will give, is my flesh for the life of the world.† In most Greek copies we read, is my flesh which I will give for the life of the world. Christ here promised what he afterwards instituted, and gave at his last supper. He promiseth to give his body and blood to be eaten: the same body (though the manner be different) which he would give on the cross for the redemption of the world. The Jews of Capharnaum were presently scandalized. How (said they) can this man give us his flesh to eat? But notwithstanding their murmuring, and the offence which his words had given, even to many of his disciples, he was so far from revoking, or expounding what he had said of any figurative or metaphorical sense, that he confirmed the same truth in the clearest and strongest terms. Amen, amen, I say to you, unless you eat, &c. And, again, (ver. 56,) For my flesh is meat indeed, and my blood is drink indeed. I cannot omit taking notice of what S. Chrysostom and S. Cyril, in their commentaries on this place, have left us on these words, How can this man do this? These words, which call in question the almighty and incomprehensible power of God, would hinder them, says S. Chrysostom, from believing all other mysteries and miracles: they might as well have said, How could he with five loaves feed five thousand men? This question, How can he do this? is a question of infidels and unbelievers. S. Cyril says, that How, or, How can he do this? cannot, without folly, be applied to God. 2ndly, He calls it a question of blasphemy. 3rdly, A Jewish word, for which these Capharnaites deserved the severest punishments. 4thly, He confutes them by the saying of the prophet Isaias, (lv. 9,) that God's thoughts and ways are as much above those of men, as the heavens are above the earth. But if these Capharnaites, who knew not who Jesus was, were justly blamed for their incredulous, foolish, blasphemous, Jewish saying, How can he give us his flesh to eat? much more blameable are those Christians, who, against the words of the Scripture, against the unanimous consent and authority of all Christian Churches in all parts of the world, refuse to believe his real presence, and have nothing to say, but with the obstinate Capharnaites, How can this be done? Their answers are the same, or no better, when they tell us that the real presence contradicts their senses, their reason, that they know it to be false. We may also observe, with divers interpreters, that if Christians are not to believe that Jesus Christ is one and the same God with the eternal Father, and that he is truly and really present in the holy sacrament of the Eucharist, it will be hard to deny but that Christ himself led men into these errors, which is blasphemy. For it is evident, and past all dispute, that the Jews murmured, complained, and understood that Christ several times made himself God, and equal to the Father of all. 2ndly, When, in this chapter, he told them he would give them his flesh to eat &c., they were shocked to the highest degree: they cried out, This could not be, that these words and this speech was hard and harsh, and on this very account many that had been his disciples till that time, withdrew themselves from him, and left him and his doctrine. Was it not then at least high time to set his complaining hearers right, to prevent the blasphemous and idolatrous opinions of the following ages, nay, even of all Christian Churches, by telling his disciples at least, that he was only a nominal God, in a metaphorical and improper sense; that he spoke only of his body being present in a figurative and metaphorical sense in the holy Eucharist? If we are deceived, who was it that deceived us but Christ himself, who so often repeated the same points of our belief? His apostles must be esteemed no less guilty in doing and affirming the very same, both as to Christ's Divinity, and his real presence in the holy sacrament, as hereafter will appear. Wi.

VER. 53. Because the Jews said it was impossible to give them his flesh to eat; Christ answers them by telling them, that so far from being impossible, it is very necessary that they should eat it. "Unless you eat," &c. S. Chrys.

VER. 54. Unless you eat . . . and drink, &c. To receive both the body and blood of Christ, is a Divine precept, insinuated in this text; which the faithful you : Unless you eat the flesh of the Son of man, and drink his blood, you shall not have life in you.

55 He that eateth my flesh, and drinketh my blood, hath everlasting life : and I will raise him up at the last day.

56 *For my flesh, is meat indeed : and my blood, is drink indeed :

57 He that eateth my flesh, and drinketh my blood, abideth in me, and I in him.

58 As the living Father hath sent me, and I live by the Father : so he that eateth me, the same also shall live by me.

59 This is the bread that came down from heaven. Not as your fathers did eat manna, and died. He that eateth this bread, shall live for ever.

60 These things he said, teaching in the synagogue, in Capharnaum.

61 Many, therefore, of his disciples hearing it, said : This saying is hard, and who can hear it ?

* 1 Cor. xi. 27.

fulfil, though they receive but in one kind ; because in one kind they receive both body and blood, which cannot be separated from each other. Hence life eternal is here promised to the worthy receiving, though but in one kind : (ver. 52) If any man eat of this bread he shall live for ever : and the bread which I will give, is my flesh for the life of the world : (ver. 58) He that eateth me, the same also shall live by me : (ver. 59) He that eateth this bread shall live for ever. Ch.

VER. 61. If Christ had wished to say nothing else than that his disciples should be filled with his doctrine, that being his flesh and blood, it would not have been a hard saying ; neither would it have shocked the Jews. He had already said as much in the former part of his discourse : but he goes on in still stronger terms, notwithstanding their complaints ; and, as they were ignorant how he would fulfil his promise, they left him, (Calmet,) and followed the example of the other unbelieving Jews, as all future searists have, saying, How can this be done ?

VER. 62. If you cannot believe that I can give you my flesh to eat, now that I am living amongst you, how will you believe, that, after my ascension, I can give you to eat my glorified and immortal flesh, seated on the right hand of the majesty of God ? V.

VER. 63. If then you shall see, &c. Christ, by mentioning his ascension, by this instance of his power and Divinity, would confirm the truth of what he had before asserted ; at the same time correct their gross apprehension of eating his flesh, and drinking his blood, in a vulgar and carnal manner, by letting them know he should take his whole body living with him to heaven ; and consequently not suffer it to be, as they supposed, divided, mangled, and consumed upon earth. Ch.

VER. 64. The flesh profiteth nothing. Dead flesh, separated from the spirit, in the gross manner they supposed they were to eat his flesh, would profit nothing. Neither doth man's flesh, that is to say, man's natural and carnal apprehension, (which refuses to be subject to the spirit and words of Christ,) profit any thing. But it would be the height of blasphemy, to say the living flesh of Christ (which we receive in the blessed sacrament, with his spirit, that is, with his soul and Divinity) profiteth nothing. For if Christ's flesh had profited us nothing, he would never have taken flesh for us, nor died in the flesh for us.—Are spirit and life. By proposing to you a heavenly sacrament, in which you shall receive, in a wonderful manner, spirit, grace, and life in its very fountain. Ch.—It is the spirit that quickeneth, or giveth life. These words sufficiently correct the gross and carnal imagination of these Capharnaïtes, that he meant to give them his body and blood to eat in a visible and bloody manner ; as flesh, says S. Aug., is sold in the market, and in the shambles ; but they do not imply a figurative or metaphorical presence only. The manner of Christ's presence is spiritual, and under the outward appearances of bread and wine ; but yet he is there truly and really present, by a change of the substance of bread and wine into the substance of his body and blood, which truly and really become our spiritual food, and are truly and really received in the holy sacrament.—The flesh of itself profiteth nothing, not even the flesh of our Saviour Christ, were it not united to the Divine person of Christ. But we must take care how we understand these words spoken by our Saviour : for it is certain, says S. Aug., that the Word made flesh, is the cause of all our happiness. Wi.—When I promise you life if you eat my flesh, I do not wish you to understand this of that gross and carnal manner, of cutting my members in pieces : such ideas are far from my mind : the flesh profiteth nothing. In the Scripture, the word flesh is often put for the carnal manner of understanding any thing. If you wish to enter into the spirit of my words, raise your hearts to a more elevated and spiritual way of understanding them. Calmet.

VER. 68. Jesus said to the twelve : Will you also go away ? He shows them, says S. Chrys., that he stood not in need of them, and so leaves them to their free choice. Wi.—Jesus Christ, remarking in the previous verse that the apostate disciples had left him, to walk no more with him, turning to the twelve, asks them, Will you also go away ? The twelve had heard all that passed ; they had seen the Jews strive amongst themselves, and the disciples murmur and leave their Master ; they understood what he said in the same literal sense ; it could, indeed, bear no other meaning ; but when Jesus put the above question to them, leaving 62 But Jesus knowing in himself, that his disciples murmured at this, said to them : Doth this scandalize you ?

63 If then you shall see" the Son of man ascend up where he was before ?

64 It is the spirit that quickeneth : the flesh profiteth nothing : the words that I have spoken to you, are spirit and life.

65 But there are some of you that believe not. For Jesus knew from the beginning who they were that did not believe, and who he was that would betray him.

66 And he said : Therefore did I say to you, that no man can come to me, unless it be given him by my Father.

67 After this many of his disciples went back : and walked no more with him.

68 Then Jesus said to the twelve : Will you also go away ?

69 And Simon Peter answered him : Lord, to whom shall we go ? thou hast the words of eternal life.

b Supra, iii. 13.

them to their free choice, whether to follow him or to withdraw themselves, Simon Peter answered him, "Lord, to whom shall we go ? Thou hast the words of eternal life : " and therefore able to make good thy words, however hard and difficult they may appear to others.

VER. 69. Simon Peter, the chief or head of them, said in the name of the rest, Lord, to whom shall we go ? It is only from thee that we hope for salvation. Thou hast the words of eternal life : we have believed, and known, and remain in this belief, that thou art the Christ, the Son of God. Wi.

CONCLUDING REFLECTIONS ON THIS CHAPTER.

If we take into consideration all the circumstances of this chapter, it will be difficult to conceive how any persons can bring their mind to think that there is no connexion between this chapter and the institution of the blessed sacrament. The holy Fathers have unanimously understood these repeated promises of Christ with a reference to the institution. S. Cyprian, of the third age, quoting the promises of Christ, the bread which I will give, is my flesh, for the life of the world, deduces this conclusion : "Hence it is manifest, that they have this life, who approach his body, and receive the Eucharist." Qui corpus ejus attingunt. De Orat. Dom., p. 147. S. Hilary, of the fourth age, quoting Christ's words, says, "There is no place left to doubt of the truth of Christ's flesh and blood, de veritate carnis et sanguinis non relictus est ambigendi locus ; for now, by the profession of the Lord himself, and according to our belief, it is truly flesh and truly blood." De Trin. l. 8. p. 954-6. S. Basil, of the fourth century also, citing ver. 53 and 54 of this chapter, says, "About the things that God has spoken there should be no hesitation, nor doubt, but a firm persuasion that all is true and possible, though nature be against it : ἡν ἡ φύσις μαχίται. Herein lies the struggle of faith." Reg. 8. Moral. t. 2, p. 240. Again the same saint says, "It is very profitable, every day, to partake of the body and blood of Christ, φάγειν τὸ σῶμα, καὶ πίνειν τὸ αἷμα τοῦ κυρίου ἡμῶν, for he that eateth my flesh," &c. John vi. 55.—"We communicate four times in the week, on Sunday, Wednesday, Friday, and Saturday, and on other days if there be a commemoration of any saint." Ep. 92, t. 3, p. 186.—S. Ambrose, of the same age, says, "The manna in the desert was given in figure. You have known things more excellent. For light is preferable to the shadow ; truth to figure ; the body of Christ to the manna of heaven. But you may say, I see somewhat else : how do you assert that I shall receive the body of Christ ?" He gives this answer : "How much more powerful is the virtue of the Divine blessing, than that of nature ; because by the former nature itself is changed ! . . . If the blessing of men (he here instances Moses changing a rod into a serpent, and many other miraculous changes) was powerful enough to change nature, what must we not say of the Divine consecration, when the very words of the Lord operate ? For that sacrament which you receive, is accomplished by the word of Christ. If the word of Elias could call down fire from heaven, shall not the word of Christ be able to change the outward elements ? . . . The word of Christ could draw out of nothing what was not, shall it not be able to change the things that are into that which they were not ? . . . Was the order of nature followed when Jesus was born of a Virgin ? Certainly not. Then why is that order to be looked for here ? It was the true flesh of Christ, which was crucified, which was buried ; and this is truly the sacrament of his flesh . . . Our Lord himself proclaims, This is my body."—Not one of all the ancient Fathers has ever denied the real presence ; not one of them all has ever said that the body of Jesus Christ is received in figure only.

70 *And we have believed, and have known that thou art the Christ, the Son of God.

71 Jesus answered them: Have not I chosen you twelve: and one of you is a devil?

72 Now he meant Judas Iscariot, the son of Simon: for this same was about to betray him, whereas he was one of the twelve.

CHAP. VII.

Christ goes up to the feast of the tabernacles: he teaches in the temple.

AFTER these things Jesus walked in Galilee, for he would not walk in Judea: because the Jews sought to kill him.

2 Now the feast of the Jews, called of the "tabernacles, was at hand.

3 And his brethren said to him: Pass from hence, and go into Judea, that thy disciples also may see thy works which thou dost.

4 For there is no man that doth any thing in secret, and he himself seeketh to be known openly: If thou do these things, manifest thyself to the world.

5 For neither did his brethren believe in him.

6 Then Jesus said to them: My time is not yet come: but your time is always ready.

7 The world cannot hate you: but me it hateth: because I give testimony of it, that the works thereof are evil.

8 Go you up to this festival day, but I go not up to this festival day: because my time is not yet fulfilled.

9 When he had said these things, he himself staid in Galilee.

10 But after his brethren were gone up, then he also went up to the feast, not publicly, but as it were in private.

11 The Jews, therefore, sought him on the festival day, and said: Where is he?

12 And there was much murmuring among the multitude concerning him. For some said: He is a good man. And others said: No, but he seduceth the people.

13 Yet no man spoke openly of him, for fear of the Jews.

VER. 8. Go you up to this festival day, which lasted eight days.—I go not with you, nor to be there at the first day, nor in that public manner as you desire. But when the feast was half over, about the fourth day, Jesus went thither in a private manner, yet so that, when he arrived, he spoke publicly in the temple. Wi.

VER. 10. But why does he ascend to the festival day, when he said he would not? He did not say, I will not ascend, but only, I do not ascend; that is, in your company. S. Chrys. hom. 47, in Joan.—Or, I do not go up to this festival, viz. the first or second day of the feast, which lasted eight days, and to which you wish me to ascend: but he went afterwards, when the first part of the festival was over. ‡ Austin, tract. 28, in Joan.

14 Now about the midst of the feast, Jesus went up into the temple, and taught.

15 And the Jews wondered, saying: How doth this man know letters, having never learned?

16 Jesus answered them, and said: My doctrine is not mine, but of him that sent me.

17 If any man will do the will of him: he shall know of the doctrine, whether it be from God, or whether I speak from myself.

18 He that speaketh from himself, seeketh his own glory: but he that seeketh the glory of him that sent him, he is true, and there is no injustice in him:

19 Did not Moses give you the law: and none of you keepeth the law?

20 Why seek you to kill me? The multitude answered, and said: Thou hast a devil: who seeketh to kill thee?

21 Jesus answered, and said to them: One work I have done: and you all wonder:

22 Therefore Moses gave you circumcision: (not because it is of Moses, but of the fathers:) and on the sabbath-day you circumcise a man.

23 If a man receive circumcision on the sabbath-day, that the law of Moses may not be broken: are you angry at me because I have healed the whole man on the sabbath-day?

24 Judge not according to the appearance, but judge a just judgment.

25 Then some of Jerusalem said: Is not this he whom they seek to kill?

26 And behold he speaketh openly, and they say nothing to him. Have the rulers known indeed that this is the Christ?

27 But we know this man whence he is: but when the Christ cometh, no man knoweth whence he is.

28 Jesus, therefore, cried out in the temple, teaching and saying: You both know me, and you know whence I am: and I am not come of myself: but he that sent me, is true, whom you know not.

VER. 15. Whilst the Jews proceeded no further than to admire the wisdom of our Saviour, when they could easily have seen that what he taught he knew by the power of God, Christ himself reveals to them the source of his wisdom, saying, My doctrine is not mine, but of him that sent me. VER. 18. He is true: seeketh truth, and not his own glory. Wi.

VER. 19. The law of Moses prescribes that you shall not kill, but this law you transgress; for why do you seek to kill me? You yourselves are transgressors of the law, and therefore no ways proper persons to judge me for transgressing it. S. Chrys. hom. 48, in Joan.

VER. 20. Thou hast a devil: art possessed with a devil, mad, &c. Wi.

VER. 21. One work I have done. He means by healing the man at the pond who had been ill thirty-eight years. Wi.

VER. 26. Have the rulers, &c., the chief priests, elders, and all the members of the great sanhedrim. Wi.

VER. 27. We know this man whence he is. They looked upon him as no more than a man, and they thought they knew his father to be S. Joseph; they knew his Mother and kindred.—But when the Christ cometh, no man knoweth whence he is. Thus said some of the people; but, doubtless, the more learned knew Christ was to be born at Bethlehem. Wi.—The Jews had imbibed this opinion of the secrecy of the origin of Christ from the prophet Isaiah, chap. liii. Who shall relate his generation? But they likewise were acquainted with many other texts of Scripture relative to the Messiah, which plainly point out the place of his birth, viz. Bethlehem, and also the place of his residence, when it is said, He shall be called a Nazarite. S. Austin, tract. 31, in Joan.

VER. 28. You both know me; i. e. you know me as man, and where I have been educated.—But he that sent me, from whom I proceeded, and who sent 29 I know him: because I am from him, and he hath sent me.

30 They sought, therefore, to apprehend him: but no man laid hands on him, because his hour was not yet come.

31 But of the people many believed in him, and said: When the Christ cometh, shall he do more miracles than these which this man doth?

32 The Pharisees heard the people murmuring these things concerning him: and the rulers and Pharisees sent ministers to apprehend him.

33 Jesus, therefore, said to them: Yet a little while I am with you: and I go to him that sent me.

34 *You shall seek me, and shall not find me: and where I am, you cannot come.

35 The Jews, therefore, said among themselves: Whither will he go, that we shall not find him? will he go to the dispersed among the Gentiles, and teach the Gentiles?

36 What is this saying that he hath said: You shall seek me, and shall not find me: and where I am, you cannot come?

37 Now on the last ^bgreat day of the festivity, Jesus stood and cried out, saying: If any man thirst, let him come to me, and drink.

38 ^cHe that believeth in me, as the Scripture saith, out of his belly shall flow rivers of living water.

39 Now this he said of the Spirit which they should receive who believed in him: for as yet the Spirit was not given, because Jesus was not yet glorified.

40 Of that multitude, therefore, when they had heard these words of his, some said: This is the prophet indeed.

41 Others said: This is the Christ. But some said: Doth the Christ come out of Galilee?

42 "Doth not the Scripture say: That Christ cometh of the seed of David, and out of Bethlehem, the town where David was?

43 So there arose a dissension among the people because of him.

44 And some of them would have apprehended him: but no man laid hands upon him.

45 So the ministers came to the chief priests and the Pharisees. And they said to them: Why have you not brought him?

46 The ministers answered: Never did man speak like this man.

47 Then the Pharisees answered them: Are you also seduced?

48 Hath any one of the rulers believed in him, or of the Pharisees?

49 But this multitude, that knoweth not the law, are accursed.

50 Nicodemus said to them, ^ehe that came to him by night, who was one of them:

51 Doth our law judge any man, unless it first hear him, ^fand know what he doth?

52 They answered, and said to him: Art thou also a Galilean? Search the Scriptures, and see that out of Galilee a prophet riseth not.

53 And every man returned to his own house.

CHAP. VIII.

The woman taken in adultery. Christ justifies his doctrine.

AND Jesus went to Mount Olivet.

2 And early in the morning he came again into the temple, and all the people came to him, and sitting he taught them.

3 And the Scribes and Pharisees bring to him a woman taken in adultery: and they set her in the midst.

4 And said to him: Master, this woman was even now taken in adultery.

5 ^aNow Moses in the law commanded us to stone such a one. But what sayest thou?

6 And this they said, tempting him, that they might accuse him. But Jesus, stooping down, wrote with his finger on the ground.

7 And when they continued asking him, he lifted up himself, and said to them: ^bHe that is without sin among you, let him first cast a stone at her.

8 And again he stooped down, and wrote on the ground.

9 But they hearing this, went out one by one, beginning from the eldest: and Jesus alone remained, and the woman standing in the midst.

10 Then Jesus lifting up himself, said to her: Woman, me into this world to be its Redeemer, you know not; because you know not, that he was always, and from all eternity, my eternal Father, and I his eternal Son. Wi.

VER. 32. The Pharisees understood well enough that his words signified he was their Messiah, and the true Son of God. And they sent some servants to seize him, and bring him to them. Wi.

VER. 33. Yet a little while I am with you: and then I go, and return to him that sent me, with whom I am always; but as man, I shall leave the world. Wi.

VER. 34. And shall not find me. Some understand it, you shall wish me conversing with you, as at present, healing diseases, &c., but as I shall suffer death shortly, you shall not find me. Others expound it, you shall seek for your Messiah, but not owning me, who am truly he, you shall not find your Messiah; and you cannot come to me in my kingdom of glory, because you will not believe in me. Wi.

VER. 35. Will he go to the dispersed among the Gentiles, or to the dispersed Gentiles, and Jews among them, to preach to them? Wi.

VER. 38. Out of his belly shall flow rivers of living water. By this living water, are signified the gifts of the Holy Ghost, which were promised to the faithful. Wi.

Wi.—The Holy Ghost is still received, but none speak with tongues; because the Church herself, being spread over the whole earth, speaks the languages of all. Idem. tract. 32, in S. quently communicated in the sacraments of baptism and confirmation. In his Epistle, addressed to them; (chap. xii.) he explains those gifts, and complains that some among the Corinthians made not a right use of these gifts; especially those who had the gift of tongues, and made use of it rather through vanity, than for the profit of others. In ver. ult., ibid., he adds: But be zealous for the better gifts. And I show to you a yet more excellent way. And in the 13th chapter he describes the excellence, the characters of charity, which he extols far above all other gifts. A.

VER. 49. But this multitude . . . are accursed; i. e. falls under the curses of the law, by being seduced and led away by false preachers. Wi.

VER. 52. They say to Nicodemus, Art thou also a Galilean, who defends this Galilean, whereas no prophet, nor especially the Messiah, comes from Galilee? Wi.

CHAP. VIII. VER. 1, &c.* The last verse of the foregoing chapter, and the eleven verses that follow in this, are not found in the greater part of our present Greek copies, yet they are in some MSS., and so are retained in the Prot. translation. We read nothing of them in the commentaries of S. Chrys., or S. Cyril; but S. Jerom (l. 2, cont. Pelag. tom. 4, part 2, p. 521, ed. Ben.) says they were found in many both Lat. and Gr. copies. S. Amb. (Ep. 52) says this passage, of the woman taken in adultery, was always famous in the Church. S. Aug. expounds them, tract. 33, in Joan, &c. Wi.

VER. 6. Wrote with his finger, as one that was musing about something else. Wi.

VER. 9. Went out one by one,† confounded, and, as it is in the ordinary Greek copies, convicted by their own consciences. Wi.

where are they that accused thee? Hath no man condemned thee?

11 And she said: No man, Lord. And Jesus said: Neither will I condemn thee. Go, and now sin no more.

12 And again Jesus spoke to them, saying: "I am the light of the world: he that followeth me, walketh not in darkness, but shall have the light of life.

13 The Pharisees, therefore, said to him: Thou givest testimony of thyself: thy testimony is not true.

14 Jesus answered, and said to them: Although I give testimony of myself, my testimony is true: for I know whence I came and whither I go: but you know not whence I come, or whither I go.

15 You judge according to the flesh: I judge not any man:

16 And if I do judge, my judgment is true, because I am not alone: but I and he that sent me, the Father.

17 And in your law it is written, "that the testimony of two men is true.

18 I am one that give testimony of myself; and the Father that sent me, giveth testimony of me.

19 They said, therefore, to him: Where is thy Father? Jesus answered: Neither me do you know, nor my Father: if you did know me, you would know my Father also.

20 These words Jesus spoke in the treasury, teaching in the temple: and no man laid hands on him, because his hour was not yet come.

21 Then Jesus said to them again: I go my way, and you shall seek me, and you shall die in your sin. Whither I go, you cannot come.

22 The Jews, therefore, said: Will he kill himself, because he said: Whither I go, you cannot come?

23 And he said to them: You are from beneath, I am from above. You are of this world, I am not of this world.

24 Therefore, I said to you, that you shall die in your sins: for if you believe not that I am he, you shall die in your sin.

25 They said, therefore, to him: Who art thou? Jesus said to them: The beginning, who also speak to you.

26 I have many things to speak, and to judge of you. But he that sent me is true: and the things I have heard from him, the same I speak in the world.

27 Now they did not know that he said God was his Father.

28 Jesus, therefore, said to them: When you shall have lifted up the Son of man, then shall you know that I am he, and that I do nothing of myself; but as the Father hath taught me, I speak these things:

29 And he that sent me is with me, and he hath not left me alone: for I do always the things that please him.

30 When he spoke these things, many believed in him.

31 Then Jesus said to those Jews that believed him: If you continue in my word, you shall be my disciples indeed:

32 And you shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free.

33 They answered him: We are the seed of Abraham, and we have never been slaves to any man: how sayest thou, You shall be free?

34 Jesus answered them: Amen, amen, I say unto you: "that whosoever committeth sin, is the servant of sin.

35 Now the servant abideth not in the house for ever: but the son abideth for ever.

36 If, therefore, the Son shall make you free, you shall be free indeed.

37 I know that you are the children of Abraham: but

VER. 11. Hence we may see how impious is the doctrine of those who say that God is the author of sin. Christ did not say to the woman, I do not condemn thy sin; or, Go and live now as thou pleasest, I will free thee from all punishment due to any sin thou shalt commit: but he only said, Go, and from henceforth sin no more: thus preserving his amiable virtue of clemency, and still not encouraging vice. S. Aug.

VER. 16. I am not alone. Christ does not here say that he is the Father and he is the Son, he only says that he is not alone, but that the Father is with him, plainly distinguishing the two Persons. The Father is truly the Father, and the Son truly the Son, not one elder or greater than the other, but both entirely equal in all perfections. One in substance, co-eternal, and of one perfect equality. S. Aug.

VER. 19. Where is thy Father? They knew well enough by other discourses, that he had called and declared God to be his Father; but they had a mind to make him own it again, that they might accuse him as guilty of blasphemy.—Neither me do you know, nor my Father: you will not own me to have been always his Son, nor him to have been always my Father, but did you know me to be his Son, always proceeding from him, you would know my Father also, and know him as my Father from all eternity. Wi.—Here might the Arians, and all who maintain that Christ is a mere creature, blush; for if he were a creature, how can any one who knows him likewise know God? Therefore is Christ consubstantial to the Father, for he who knows the Son knows the Father also. Theophyl.

VER. 21. I go my way, and you shall seek me, &c. See the foregoing chapter, ver. 34. Wi.

VER. 23. I am not of this world: he speaks of his Divine person, as the words evidently show. Wi.

VER. 25. Who art thou? Jesus said to them: The beginning, who also speak to you. This text and the construction of it is obscure, both in the Latin and in the Greek. S. Aug., and some of the Latin Fathers, expound it in this manner: I am the beginning of all things, who now being made man, speak to you. But this does not seem the construction, if we consult the Greek text (where the beginning is not in the nominative, but in the accusative case); and therefore S. Aug., having considered more attentively the Greek, thinks that something must be understood, as believe me to be the beginning: he looks upon this to be the sense and the construction, as being connected with what was said two verses before; to wit, if you believe not that I am he, the true Messiah, you shall die in your sins. "That they might," says S. Aug., (tract. 38, num. 11, p. 560,) "know what they were to believe," he made them this answer, as if he had said, Believe me to be the beginning, the cause, and author of all things, who am now become man, and speak to you. Other later interpreters are of opinion that the beginning is here a Grecism, and signifies the same as at first, or from the beginning. The sense, therefore, and construction may be, I am, what I said and told you at first, and from the beginning; that is, I am your Messiah, the true Son of God, sent into the world, &c. Wi.—The Pharisees, indignant at the liberty with which Jesus spoke to them, demand of him in rage, Who art thou, to speak to us in this imperious manner, to say that we shall die in our sins? Jesus answered them, that he was the Beginning, Author, Creator, and Ruler of all things. This is the more orthodox and more becoming interpretation. Calmet.

VER. 28. When you shall have lifted up, &c. That is, have put me to the death of the cross (see John iii. 14, and xii. 32); you, that is, many of you, shall know, and believe in me, as your Messiah. Wi.

VER. 31. If you persevere in the true faith, and in the observance of my words, you shall be my disciples indeed. It is not sufficient to believe; you must likewise do what my words command you to do: nor will it be sufficient to have the true faith for a time; you must persevere in that faith to the end. S. Aug., Ven. Bede, S. Chrys., Theophyl., Euthym., &c.—Faith alone without perseverance, or abiding in God's commandments, will not suffice. B.

VER. 35. Now the servant abideth not in the house for ever, nor has a right to live in that manner as a son and a child of the family has to live in his father's house. A slave or servant, though he live ever so long in his master's house, his condition is quite different from that of a son of the family: and thus Christ purs them in mind, that though they be of the race of Abraham, and in that sense can pretend to be his children, yet having made themselves slaves to sin, and remaining in that sin, by which they refuse to believe in him, their Messiah, they are not the spiritual children of Abraham, nor can inherit the promises made to Abraham, till, by the grace of Christ, they believe in him, and become his adoptive children. Wi.

VER. 36. Man never was without free-will; but, having the grace of Christ, you seek to kill me, because my word hath no power in you.

38 I speak that which I have seen with my Father: and you do the things that you have seen with your father.

39 They answered, and said to him: Abraham is our Father. Jesus saith to them: If you be the children of Abraham, do the works of Abraham.

40 But now you seek to kill me, a man who have spoken the truth to you, which I have heard from God: this Abraham did not.

41 You do the deeds of your father. They said then to him: We are not born of fornication: we have one Father, God.

42 But Jesus said to them: If God were your Father, verily you would love me. For I proceeded and came from God: for I came not of myself, but he sent me.

43 Why do you not know my speech? Because you cannot hear my word.

44 *You are of your father, the devil, and the desires of your father you will do. He was a murderer from the beginning, and he abode not in the truth: because truth is not in him. When he speaketh a lie, he speaketh of his own: for he is a liar, and the father thereof.

45 But if I say the truth, you believe me not.

46 Which of you shall convince me of sin? If I say the truth to you, why do you not believe me?

47 *He that is of God, heareth the words of God. Therefore, you hear them not, because you are not of God.

48 The Jews, therefore, answered, and said to him: Do we not say well that thou art a Samaritan, and hast a devil?

49 Jesus answered: I have not a devil: but I honour my Father, and you have dishonoured me.

50 But I seek not my own glory: there is one that seeketh and judgeth.

VER. 41. We are not born of fornication; we have one Father, God. These Jews perceived that Christ had hinted that they were not the true and faithful sons of Abraham; and therefore they replied in this manner. But Christ answered, If God was your Father, if you were his dutiful children, you would also believe in me, and love me: for I have proceeded from him, and am come from him, his true Son: and now sent into the world by him. But you cannot hear my word, because you will not, by your own wilful obstinate blindness. Wi.

VER. 44. You are of your father, the devil, and have made yourselves his slaves.—He was a murderer from the beginning of the world, having brought both a corporal and a spiritual death by sin, upon all mankind.—He abode not in the truth, in the ways of truth and obedience to God.—He is a liar, and the father thereof; that is, the father of lies. I speak truth, being truth itself. Wi.

VER. 56. Abraham, your father, rejoiced that he might see my day, my entrance into this world, my incarnation, my birth, my manifestation in Israel, my death and passion. S. Irenæus, Origen, S. Cyril, &c.—He waited with impatience for the deliverance of the whole world.—He saw it, and was glad. He saw it in spirit, for God revealed it to him. He saw it approaching in the birth of his son Isaac, and in the miraculous deliverance of his dear son, when he was commanded to offer him in sacrifice to the Lord. The vivacity of his faith made him, as it were, present at the time of my birth, though then so far off. S. Chrys. Leont. theophyl. Euth.

VER. 58. Before Abraham was made, I am. Christ here speaks of his eternal existence as God. S. Aug. shows this by these very words, I am. He does 51 Amen, amen, I say to you: if any man keep my word, he shall not see death for ever.

52 The Jews, therefore, said: Now we know that thou hast a devil. Abraham is dead, and the prophets: and thou sayest: If any man keep my word, he shall not taste death for ever.

53 Art thou greater than our father, Abraham, who is dead? and the prophets are dead. Whom dost thou make thyself?

54 Jesus answered: If I glorify myself, my glory is nothing: it is my Father that glorifieth me, of whom you say that he is your God.

55 And you have not known him: but I know him. And if I should say that I know him not, I should be like to you, a liar. But I know him, and keep his word.

56 Abraham, your father, rejoiced that he might see my day: he saw it, and was glad.

57 The Jews then said to him: Thou art not yet fifty years old, and hast thou seen Abraham?

58 Jesus said to them: Amen, amen, I say to you, before Abraham was made, I am.

59 Then they took up stones to cast at him: but Jesus hid himself, and went out of the temple.

CHAP. IX.

He gives sight to the man born blind.

AND Jesus passing by, saw a man that was blind from his birth:

2 And his disciples asked him: Rabbi, who hath sinned, this man, or his parents, that he should be born blind?

3 Jesus answered: Neither hath this man sinned, nor his parents, but that the works of God should be made manifest in him.

4 I must work the works of him that sent me, whilst it is day: the night cometh, when no man can work.

‡ V. 25. Principium qui et loquor vobis. S. Aug. reads, quia loquor vobis, as we find in some Greek MSS., and in S. Cyr., p. 511. In the common copies we read, τὴν ἀρχὴν ὅτι καὶ λαλῶ ὑμῖν. And as τὴν ἀρχὴν is in the accusative case, so we may take principium; and to be taken adverbially, to signify the same as primum, à principio, imprimis. Maldonat. is of the same opinion, as well as many others, and brings examples to show that τὴν ἀρχὴν (i. e. κατὰ τὴν ἀρχὴν) is often taken for primum: and so the sense will be, I am what I told you from the beginning. i. e. the Messiah, and this I now tell you again. We may also take notice, that the Greek construction is hard to be accounted for, τὴν ἀρχὴν ὅτι, not ὅς, qui, nor ἥ, to agree with ἀρχή.

§ V. 58. Abraham fieret ego sum; πρὶν Ἀβραὰμ γενέσθαι, ἐγὼ εἰμι. S. Aug. (tract. 43, in Joan. num. 17, p. 588,) intellige, fieret ad creaturam, sum vero pertinere ad divinam substantiam: non dixit, antequam Abraham esset, ego eram, neque dixit, ego factus sum . . . agnoscite creatorem, discernite creaturam.

CHAP. IX. VER. 2. When Christ healed the paralytic, he dismissed him with this injunction: Behold thou art made whole; now sin no more. From this the disciples concluded, that his infirmity was sent him in punishment of former sins. When, therefore, they saw this man afflicted with blindness, they inquired of their Divine Master, whether it was on account of his or his parents' sin. S. John Chrys. hom. 55, in Joan.

VER. 4. Whilst it is day. That is, during all the time of this mortal life the night comes, that is, death. Wi.—He speaks of that night of which mention is made in S. Matt. xxii. Cast him into exterior darkness. S. Chrys. as above.

and made clay of the spittle, and spread the clay upon his eyes;

7 And said to him : Go, wash in the pool of Siloe, which is interpreted, Sent). He went, therefore, and washed, and he came seeing.

8 The neighbours, therefore, and they who had seen him before that he was a beggar, said : Is not this he that sat, and begged ? Some said : This is he.

9 And others, No : but he is like him. But he said : I am he.

10 They said, therefore, to him : How were thy eyes opened ?

11 He answered : That man who is called Jesus, made clay : and anointed my eyes, and said to me : Go to the pool of Siloe, and wash. And I went, I washed, and I see.

12 And they said to him : Where is he ? He saith : I know not.

13 They bring him that had been blind, to the Pharisees.

14 Now it was the sabbath, when Jesus made the clay, and opened his eyes.

15 Again, therefore, the Pharisees asked him how he had received his sight. But he said to them : He put clay upon my eyes, and I washed, and I see.

16 Some, therefore, of the Pharisees said : This man is not of God, who keepeth not the sabbath. But others said : How can a man that is a sinner do such miracles ? And there was a division among them.

17 They say, therefore, to the blind man again : What sayest thou of him that hath opened thy eyes ? And he said : He is a prophet.

18 The Jews then did not believe concerning him, that he had been blind and had received his sight, until they called the parents of him that had received his sight :

19 And asked them, saying : Is this your son, who you say was born blind ? How then doth he now see ?

20 His parents answered them, and said : We know that this is our son, and that he was born blind :

21 But how he now seeth, we know not : or who hath opened his eyes, we know not : ask himself : he is of age ; let him speak for himself.

22 These things his parents said, because they feared the Jews : for the Jews had already agreed among themselves, that if any man should confess him to be Christ, he should be put out of the synagogue.

23 Therefore did his parents say : He is of age ; ask himself.

24 They, therefore, called the man again that had been blind, and said to him : Give glory to God. We know that this man is a sinner.

25 He said then to them : If he be a sinner, I know not : one thing I know, that whereas I was blind, now I see.

26 Then they said to him : What did he to thee ? how did he open thy eyes ?

27 He answered them : I have told you already, and you have heard : why would you hear it again ? will you also become his disciples ?

28 They reviled him, therefore, and said : Be thou his disciple : but we are the disciples of Moses.

29 We know that God spoke to Moses : but as to this man, we know not from whence he is.

30 The man answered, and said to them : For in this is a wonderful thing, that you know not from whence he is, and he hath opened my eyes :

31 Now we know that God doth not hear sinners : but if a man be a worshipper of God, and doth his will, him he heareth.

32 From the beginning of the world it hath not been heard, that any man hath opened the eyes of one born blind.

33 Unless this man were of God, he could not do any thing.

34 They answered, and said to him : Thou wast wholly born in sins, and dost thou teach us ? And they cast him out.

35 Jesus heard that they had cast him out : and when he had found him, he said to him : Dost thou believe in the Son of God ?

36 He answered, and said : Who is he, Lord, that I may believe in him ?

37 And Jesus said to him : Thou hast both seen him ; and it is he who talketh with thee.

38 And he said : I believe, Lord. And falling down, he adored him.

39 And Jesus said : For judgment I am come into this world : that they who see not, may see : and they who see, may become blind.

VER. 6. He spat on the ground. With clay and spittle he cured the blind man, to make the miracle more visible. Wi.—From the example of Jesus Christ, religious ceremonies are introduced in the administration of the sacraments ; and can the Church be blamed for copying her Divine Founder ? A.

VER. 7. The fountain of Siloe was at the foot of the walls of Jerusalem, to the east, where its waters were collected in a reservoir for the benefit of the city. Thither our Saviour sent the blind man. The word Siloe signifies sent, and was a figure of Christ, who was sent by his eternal Father into the world to enlighten all men, of whom this blind man was the emblem. The pool of Siloe represents the sacrament of baptism, by which we are sanctified and made Christians. Calmet.

VER. 17. The Hebrews gave the name of prophet to all those who were honoured by the Almighty in a particular manner. And it was a maxim amongst them, that a prophet could dispense with the law of the sabbath. Cal.—Do you wish to know what he believed Jesus to be ? asks S. Austin. And falling down, he adored him. Before, he regarded him as a holy man, as a prophet ; but he did not adore him until he understood him to be the Son of God ; whereas no sooner did he know this, than falling down, he paid him that sovereign worship which is due to God alone. Calmet.

VER. 22. The Jews had already agreed, or combined together, that if any one owned him for the Messias, he should be turned out of their synagogues, as a person excommunicated. Wi.

VER. 24. Give glory to God, before whom thou art speaking, and tell us the truth. It could not be this man who cured thee ; for we know he is a sinner, who seduceth the people. V.

VER. 27. I have told you already, and you have heard. In almost all Greek MSS. we now read, and you have not heard. Beza, with good reason, here prefers the Latin Vulgate, as more correct than the Greek. Wi.

VER. 28. They reviled him with scornful * and disdainful language. Wi.

VER. 31. God doth not hear sinners. That is, in so particular a manner as to work miracles in favour of them and their doctrine. Wi.

VER. 39. For judgment I am come into this world. Christ said (chap. iii. 17) that God did not send his Son to judge the world : the same he repeats (John xii. 47) ; nor is this contradictory to those words : the meaning here is not that he is come to exercise the office of a judge, but he tells them what will be the consequences of his coming, and their refusing to believe in him, that they shall be justly punished with the greatest severity for their wilful blindness. Wi.—I am come, &c. Not that Christ came for that end, that any one should be made blind : but that the Jews by the abuse of his coming, and by their not receiving him, brought upon themselves this judgment of blindness. Ch.

40 And some of the Pharisees, that were with him, heard : and they said to him : Are we also blind ?

41 Jesus said to them : If you were blind, you should not have sin : but now you say : We see. Your sin remaineth.

CHAP. X.

Christ is the door, and the good shepherd. He and his Father are one.

A MEN, amen, I say to you : he that entereth not by the door into the sheepfold, but climbeth up another way, the same is a thief and a robber.

2 But he that entereth in by the door, is the shepherd of the sheep :

3 To whom the porter openeth : and the sheep hear his voice, and he calleth his own sheep by name, and leadeth them out.

4 And when he hath let out his own sheep, he goeth before them : and the sheep follow him, because they know his voice.

5 But a stranger they follow not, but fly from him, because they know not the voice of strangers.

6 This parable Jesus spoke to them. But they understood not what he was speaking to them.

7 Jesus, therefore, said to them again : Amen, amen, I say to you, I am the door of the sheep.

8 All they who came, are thieves and robbers, and the sheep heard them not.

9 I am the door. If any one enter by me, he shall be saved : and he shall go in, and go out, and shall find pastures.

10 The thief cometh not, but to steal, and to kill, and to destroy. I am come that they may have life, and may have it more abundantly.

11 I am the good shepherd. ^aThe good shepherd giveth his life for his sheep.

12 But the hireling, and he that is not the shepherd, whose own sheep they are not, seeth the wolf coming, and leaveth the sheep, and flieth : and the wolf snatcheth, and scattereth the sheep :

13 And the hireling flieth, because he is a hireling : and he hath no care for the sheep.

14 I am the good shepherd : and I know mine, and mine know me.

15 ^bAs the Father knoweth me, and I know the Father : and I lay down my life for my sheep.

16 And other sheep I have, that are not of this fold : them also I must bring, and they shall hear my voice, and there shall be made one fold, and one shepherd.

17 Therefore doth the Father love me : ^cbecause I lay down my life, that I may take it again.

18 No man taketh it away from me : but I lay it down of myself, and I have power to lay it down : and I have power to take it up again. This commandment I have received from my Father.

19 A dissension rose again among the Jews for these words.

20 And many of them said : He hath a devil, and is mad : why hear you him ?

21 Others said : These are not the words of one that hath a devil : Can a devil open the eyes of the blind ?

22 ^dAnd it was the feast of the dedication at Jerusalem : and it was winter.

23 And Jesus walked in the temple, in Solomon's porch.

24 The Jews, therefore, came round about him, and said to him : How long dost thou hold our soul in suspense ? If thou be the Christ, tell us plainly.

25 Jesus answered them : I speak to you, and you believe not : the works that I do in the name of my Father, they give testimony of me :

26 But you do not believe, because you are not of my sheep.

^c Isa. liii. 7.—^d 1 Mac. iv. 56, and 59.

VER. 40, 41. The Pharisees then replied, And are we also blind? Jesus said to them : If you were blind, by an ignorance in not having heard of me, and my doctrine, you might be excused for not believing ; but now saying, We see ; and having been yourselves in the occasions and opportunities of seeing, your sin remaineth, and you in your sins. WI.—If you were blind, &c. If you were invincibly ignorant, and had neither read the Scriptures, nor seen my miracles, you would not be guilty of the sin of infidelity ; but now, as you boast of your knowledge of the Scriptures, you are inexcusable. CH.—We here see that it is judged by truth itself far better not to read the Scriptures at all, than to read them with bad dispositions ; not to see the miracles of Jesus Christ, than to refuse our assent to their author. At the present day all read the Scriptures, but do we see any marked improvement in the moral world ? The text, without any comment, is given to Churchmen and to Dissenters : the latter gladly accept the offering, because, as the Rev. Frederick Noland observes, (in his Objections of a Churchman to uniting with the Bible Society, p. 34,) “The authorized version is in many places accommodated to their peculiar opinions, through the conciliatory spirit of the Church, which revised the text for the purpose of doing their objections away.”

* V. 28. Maledixerunt, ἐλοιδόγησαν, reviled, rather than cursed.

CHAP. X. VER. 1, &c. In this parable the fold is the Church : the good shepherd, and also the door, is Christ : the thieves and robbers are false guides ; the hirelings, such ministers as seek their own profit and gain, and a good living, as they call it ; the wolves, heretics ; the sheep not yet brought into the fold, the Gentiles not then converted. WI.

VER. 3. His own sheep by name. By this is signified his particular care. WI.

VER. 4. He goeth before them, leads them by his instructions and example. WI.

VER. 8. All they who came are thieves, meaning those who came on their own accord, without being sent : not so the prophets, who had their mission from God. WI.

VER. 11. How happy are we in such a shepherd, so great, so good, so loving, so careful of our true welfare ! He has exposed his life and his repose, he has spilled his blood, he delivered himself to the fury of his enemies, and has offered himself as a victim upon the cross to his eternal Father, to free us, his lost sheep, from the most cruel wolf, the devil. And ever since his death he has always protected his Church, assisted and consoled his distressed flock under all their sufferings, pouring into their hearts the consolations of the Holy Spirit, and sending to them holy teachers, to govern and lead them in the holy path to salvation. Such were the apostles and their successors, the bishops and priests of the holy Catholic Church, whom he has sent, and will continue to send, to govern his flock to the end of time. Calmet.

VER. 13. Every bishop and pastor is bound to abide with his flock in the time of danger and persecution, except himself be personally sought for, rather than the flock, or the flock itself forsake him. In such cases the pastor may fly, as the apostles did, S. Athanasius, and others. S. Athan. Apol. de sua fuga. S. Aug. Ep. 180.

VER. 14. I know mine, and mine know me. To know, in the style of the Holy Scriptures, is to love and approve. WI.

VER. 16. One fold. In the Greek, one flock. The signification is the same : that is, there shall be one church of Jews and Gentiles converted. WI.

VER. 17. Therefore doth the Father love me, because I lay down my life, &c. Christ here speaketh of himself, as made man for the redemption of mankind : or rather, as he was our Redeemer, both God and man : for he laid down his life, and died as man, and had a power to take it again, as God. Yet the command of laying it down, he as man received from the Father : thus as he was man, he was obedient to him even to the death on the cross. See Philip. ii. 8. WI.

VER. 24. If thou be the Christ, tell us plainly. S. John the Baptist had told them several times who Jesus was. See John i. He himself had not only owned it in plain terms to the Samaritan woman, (John iv. 26,) but he had frequently delivered this truth so openly to them, that he came from heaven, that he was sent into the world that all men should be saved by believing in him, that he was the Son of God, and one with the Father, that they easily perceived he made himself God : but these men would have him to declare it again, that they might accuse him. WI.

VER. 25. The works and miracles that I do in the name of my Father, they give testimony of me, and show who I am, being foretold by the prophets. See John v. 31, &c. WI.

VER. 26. Because you are not of my sheep, refusing to believe in me, and to follow my doctrine, by your own wilful blindness. WI.

27 My sheep hear my voice, and I know them, and they follow me :

28 And I give them life everlasting : and they shall not perish for ever, and no man shall snatch them out of my hand.

29 That which my Father hath given me, is greater than all : and no man can snatch them out of the hand of my Father.

30 I and the Father are one.

31 The Jews then took up stones, to stone him.

32 Jesus answered them : Many good works I have shown to you from my Father : for which of those works do you stone me ?

33 The Jews answered him : For a good work we stone thee not, but for blasphemy : and because that thou, being a man, makest thyself God.

34 Jesus answered them : Is it not written in your law : * I have said, you are gods ?

35 If he called them gods to whom the word of God was spoken, and the Scripture cannot be made void :

36 Do you say of him, whom the Father hath sanctified and sent into the world : Thou blasphemest : because I said, I am the Son of God ?

37 If I do not the works of my Father, believe me not.

38 But if I do : though you will not believe me, believe the works, that you may know and believe that the Father is in me, and I in the Father.

39 They sought, therefore, to take him : and he escaped out of their hands.

40 And he went away again beyond the Jordan into that place where John was baptizing first : and there he abode :

41 And many resorted to him, and they said : John indeed did no sign.

* Psal. lxxxii. 6.

VER. 28. They shall not perish for ever : and no man shall snatch them out of my hand. He speaks of his elect, of those whom he called by a special providence and mercy, whom he blessed with more than ordinary graces, and with the gift of final perseverance to the end in his grace. Wi.

VER. 29. That which my Father hath given me, is greater than all. We may look upon this as the true reading by Tertullian, S. Hilary, S. Amb., S. Aug., &c. The ancient Fathers make use of these words, to show the eternal procession of the Son from the Father ; and that they are one in nature, substance, power, &c. The reading in the ordinary Greek copies is now different. My Father, who gave me them, (the sheep,) is greater than all. No one can snatch, or pull them by force, out of the hand of the Father. He had said just before, no one shall, or can snatch them, out of my hand. And this shows that the hand, that is, the power of the Father and the Son, is equal, is one and the same. See S. Aug., S. Chrysostom, &c. Wi.

VER. 30. I and the Father are one,† or one thing, not one person, nor one by an union of affection only, but in nature, substance, power, and other perfections, as appears by the whole text : for Christ here tells them that none of his elect shall perish, because no one can snatch them out of his hands, no more than out of the hands of his Father ; and then adds, that he and his Father are one, or have one equal power : and if their power, says S. Chrys., is the same, so is their substance. Christ adds, (ver. 38,) that the Father is in him, and he in the Father ; which also shows an union of nature and substance, and not only of love and affection, especially when taken with other words of our Saviour Christ. Wi.

VER. 31. Then took up stones, &c., because, said they, being a man, thou makest thyself God. The Jews, says S. Aug., understood well enough what the Arians will not understand, that from Christ's words it followed that he was one and the same God with the eternal Father. Wi.

VER. 34. This is addressed to princes established to govern the people of God. They are the image of God on earth by the authority they exercise, and which they have received from Him.—Is it not written in your law, (under which were also comprehended the psalms,) I have said, you are gods ? &c. Christ here stops the mouths of the Jews, by an argument which they could not answer, that sometimes they were called gods, who acted by God's authority. I have said, you are gods. Psal. lxxxii. 6. But then he immediately declares, that it is not in this sense only that he is God. 1st, Because he has been sanctified by the Father, which S. Aug. and others understand of that infinite sanctification, which he has necessarily by always proceeding from the Father. Others expound it of a greater sanctity and fulness of grace above all other saints, given to him, even as he was man. But, 42 But all things whatsoever John said of this man were true. And many believed in him.

CHAP. XI.

Christ raises Lazarus to life. The rulers resolve to put him to death.

NOW there was a certain man sick, named Lazarus, of Bethania, of the town of Mary, and of Martha, her sister.

2 (And Mary was she ^b that anointed the Lord with ointment, and wiped his feet with her hair : whose brother, Lazarus, was sick.)

3 His sisters, therefore, sent to him, saying : Lord, behold, he whom thou lovest, is sick.

4 And Jesus hearing it, said to them : This sickness is not unto death, but for the glory of God : that the Son of God may be glorified by it.

5 Now Jesus loved Martha, and her sister, Mary, and Lazarus.

6 When he had heard, therefore, that he was sick, he still remained in the same place two days.

7 Then after that he said to his disciples : Let us go into Judea again.

8 The disciples say to him : Rabbi, the Jews but just now sought to stone thee : and goest thou thither again ?

9 Jesus answered : Are there not twelve hours of the day ? If a man walk in the day, he stumbleth not, because he seeth the light of this world :

10 But if he walk in the night, he stumbleth, because the light is not in him.

11 These things he said : and after that he said to them : Lazarus, our friend, sleepeth : but I go that I may awake him out of sleep.

12 His disciples, therefore, said : Lord, if he sleep, he shall do well.

2ndly, he adds at the same time, and confirms what he had often told them, that he was the Son of God, sent into the world : that his works show that he was in the Father, and the Father in him. By this they saw that he was far from recalling or contradicting what he had said before. And therefore (ver. 39) they sought to apprehend him, and put him to death for blasphemy. Wi.

Chrys. takes notice, that by the hand of the Father, is here understood his power. And that it follows from hence, that the power or hand of the Father and the Son is equal, is one and the same ; and if their power, says he, is the same, so is their substance, εἰ δὲ ἡ δύναμις ἡ αὐτὴ, ἐνδεῶς ὅτι καὶ ἡ οὐσία. ὁμ. ξα. in Joan., 363, tom. 8, nov. ed. Ecce intelligunt Judæi, quod non intelligunt Ariani.*

CHAP. XI. VER. 1. At the end of the preceding chapter, we are told that Jesus went into the place where John was first baptizing. This place, as may be gathered from S. John, (chap. i. 28 and 44,) was Bethania ; but not the Bethania where the sisters of Lazarus resided. The Bethania where Christ was at this time was beyond the Jordan, and was likewise called Bethabara.

VER. 4. This sickness is not unto death. Lazarus indeed died of this sickness, but he did not die as other men, to continue dead ; for Jesus raised him again, to the glory of God. SS. Cyril, Chrys., &c.

VER. 9. Some, by the day, in this place, understand the time preceding the Passion of our Saviour ; and, by the night, the time of his Passion. Theophy.—By this he encouraged his disciples, assuring them that the day of his sojournment on earth was not yet over ; and therefore that the Jews, with all their malice and hatred, could not hurt him. But when the night (the time of his Passion) comes, then their power over him commenced. This is your hour, says he to them, and the power of darkness. Calmet.—The Hebrews then divided the day into twelve parts of equal duration, from the rising to the setting sun. V.

13 But Jesus spoke of his death: and they thought that he spoke of the repose of sleep.

14 Then, therefore, Jesus said to them plainly: Lazarus is dead.

15 And I am glad, for your sake, that I was not there, that you may believe: but let us go to him.

16 Then Thomas, who is called Didymus, said to his fellow-disciples: Let us also go, that we may die with him.

17 So Jesus came: and found that he had been four days already in the sepulchre.

18 (Now Bethania was near Jerusalem, about fifteen furlongs off.)

19 And many of the Jews were come to Martha, and Mary, to comfort them concerning their brother.

20 Martha, therefore, as soon as she heard that Jesus was come, went to meet him: but Mary sat at home.

21 And Martha said to Jesus: Lord, if thou hadst been here, my brother had not died:

22 But now also I know that whatsoever thou wilt ask of God, God will give it thee.

23 Jesus saith to her: Thy brother shall rise again.

24 Martha saith to him: I know that he shall rise again in the resurrection at the last day.

25 Jesus said to her: I am the resurrection, and the life: ^bhe that believeth in me, although he be dead, shall live:

26 And every one that liveth, and believeth in me, shall not die for ever. Believest thou this?

27 She saith to him: Yea, Lord, I have believed that thou art Christ, the Son of the living God, who art come into this world.

28 And when she had said these things, she went, and called her sister, Mary, secretly, saying: The master is come, and calleth for thee.

29 She, as soon as she heard this, riseth quickly, and cometh to him.

30 For Jesus was not yet come into the town: but he was still in that place where Martha had met him.

31 The Jews, therefore, who were with her in the house, and comforted her, when they saw Mary that she rose up speedily and went out, followed her, saying: She goeth to the sepulchre to weep there.

32 When Mary, therefore, was come where Jesus was, seeing him, she fell down at his feet, and saith to him: Lord, if thou hadst been here, my brother had not died.

33 When Jesus, therefore, saw her weeping, and the Jews that were come with her weeping, he groaned in the spirit, and troubled himself.

34 And said: Where have you laid him? They say to him: Lord, come and see.

35 And Jesus wept.

36 The Jews, therefore, said: Behold how he loved him.

37 But some of them said: 'Could not he that opened the eyes of the man born blind, have caused that this man should not die?

38 Jesus, therefore, again groaning in himself, cometh to the sepulchre: Now it was a cave: and a stone was laid over it.

39 Jesus saith: Take away the stone. Martha, the sister of him that was dead, saith unto him: Lord, by this time he stinketh, for he is now of four days.

40 Jesus saith to her: Did not I say to thee, that if thou wilt believe, thou shalt see the glory of God?

41 They took, therefore, the stone away: And Jesus, lifting up his eyes, said: Father, I give thee thanks that thou hast heard me.

42 And I knew that thou hearest me always; but because of the people who stand about, have I said it: that they may believe that thou hast sent me.

43 When he had said these things, he cried with a loud voice: Lazarus, come forth.

44 And presently he that had been dead came forth, bound feet and hands with winding-bands, and his face was bound about with a napkin. Jesus said to them: Loose him, and let him go.

45 Many, therefore, of the Jews, who were come to Mary and Martha, and had seen the things that Jesus did, believed in him.

46 But some of them went to the Pharisees, and told them the things that Jesus had done.

47 The chief priests, therefore, and the Pharisees, gathered a council, and said: What do we, for this man doth many miracles?

48 If we let him alone so, all men will believe in him: And the Romans will come, and take away our place and nation.

^b Supra, vi. 40.—^c Supra, ix. 6.

VER. 12. To men indeed he was dead, but to God he slept. For the Almighty as easily raised him from his grave, as man can raise the slumberer from his bed. S. Aust. tract. 49. in Joan.

VER. 15. When Christ says, that you may believe, we must not suppose he means, that they might begin then for the first time to believe, but that their faith, already begun, might be increased; for the faith of the disciples still stood in need of miracles, to make it grow more strong and rooted. S. Aust. as above.

VER. 16. Thomas . . . said: Let us also go, that we may die with him. That is, with Jesus: this he said, exhorting the other disciples not to fear. Wi.

VER. 21. If thou hadst been here. These words show that the faith of the two sisters was but weak; as if the Son of God was not every where: or as if he could not restore him to life when dead and buried. Wi.

VER. 25. I am the resurrection, and the life. That is, the author of both. Wi. —I am the resurrection, I am he who will at the last day raise him up; I can, therefore, if I will, raise him up now also. S. Aust.

VER. 27. Thou art Christ, the Son of the living God. Martha breaks out into an act of perfect faith. See chap. i. 49. Wi.

VER. 33. He groaned in the spirit, and troubled himself. The Latin and Greek, both in this and the 38th verse, express a more than ordinary inward trouble. Christ, as he was truly man, had the affections and passions of human nature; yet so that he was master, even of the first motions, which could not raise in him any disturbance or disorderly inclinations. He permitted, therefore, and, as it is said, raised in himself these affections of compassion and grief at this time. Wi.

VER. 34. Where have you laid him? He asks what he knows, says S. Aug., to raise their attention, their faith, hope, &c. Wi.

VER. 35. Jesus wept. A mark of his human nature, when he was going to give them a proof of his Divinity, in raising the dead to life. Wi.

VER. 39. Take away the stone. He could have done this by his word and command; or he could have made Lazarus come out without taking off the stone; he needed not to pray, who could do and command every thing. Wi.

VER. 41. Father, I give thee thanks, that thou hast heard me. He knew that what he asked, even as man, must needs be granted; but he prayed for our instruction. Wi.

VER. 43. He cried with a loud voice: Lazarus, come forth. His will had been sufficient. He calls upon the dead man, says S. Chrys., as if he had been living, and it is no sooner said than done. Wi.

VER. 44. Loose him, and let him go. Christ, says S. Greg., by giving these orders to his apostles, shows that it belongs to his ministers to loose and absolve sinners, when they are moved to repentance, though it is God himself that forgiveth their sins; and they by his authority only. Wi.—S. Cyril and S. Austin both adduce this verse to show the power of priests in absolving sinners. See Cyril, l. 7. c. ult. in Joan., and Aug. tract. 49. in Joan.

49 *But one of them, named Caiphas, being the high priest of that year, said to them : You know nothing at all.

50 Neither do you consider that it is expedient for you that one man should die for the people, and that the whole nation perish not.

51 And this he spoke not of himself : but being the high priest of that year, he prophesied that Jesus should die for the nation.

52 And not only for the nation, but to gather together in one the children of God, that were dispersed.

53 From that day, therefore, they devised to put him to death.

54 Wherefore Jesus walked no more openly among the Jews, but he went into a country near the desert, unto a city that is called Ephrem, and there he abode with his disciples.

55 And the Pasch of the Jews was at hand : and many from the country went up to Jerusalem before the Pasch, to purify themselves.

56 They sought, therefore, for Jesus : and they discoursed one with another, standing in the temple : What think you, that he is not come to the festival day ? And the chief priests and the Pharisees had given a commandment, that if any man knew where he was, he should tell, that they might apprehend him.

CHAP. XII.

The anointing of Christ's feet. His riding into Jerusalem upon an ass. A voice from heaven.

NOW *six days before the Pasch, Jesus came to Bethania, where Lazarus had been dead, whom Jesus raised to life.

2 And they made him a supper there : and Martha served, but Lazarus was one of them that were at table with him.

3 Mary, therefore, took a pound of ointment of right spikenard, of great value, and anointed the feet of Jesus, and wiped his feet with her hair : and the house was filled with the odour of the ointment.

4 Then one of his disciples, Judas Iscariot, he that was about to betray him, said :

* Infra, xviii. 14.—b Matt. xxvi. 6 ; Mark xiv. 3.

VER. 48. The Romans will come upon us, in case he be owned for our great Messias, and our King. Wi.

VER. 49. But one of them, named Caiphas, being the high priest, &c. He said not this, says the evangelist, of himself, but as the high priest of that year. The spirit of prophecy was given him, and he foretells that Jesus was to lay down his life both for the nation of the Jews, and for all mankind. The gift of prophecy itself does not make a man holy. It was also given to the wicked Balaam. Num. xxiv. Wi.—It is supposed that he exercised the sacrificial office alternatively with his father-in-law, Annas, who, as we have seen in Luke iii. 2, was also high priest. V.

VER. 51. The same words have an impious and sacrilegious sense in the intention of the high priest, the enemy of Jesus Christ ; and a Divine and prophetic sense, in the intention of the Holy Ghost. V.—We here behold the privilege of the office and order, though in a wicked person ; and as we have the assistance of God for the utterance of truth, which Caiphas neither meant nor knew, we may rest satisfied that Christ will not leave Peter's seat (Luke xxii. 32) ; whose faith he promises should never fail, though the occupants be as bad as their enemies describe them.

VER. 54. Ephrem was a small city or town in the neighbourhood of Bethel. Some suppose it to be the same as Ephron, mentioned in 2 Par. xiii. 19, and 1 Mac. v. ; 2 Mac. xii. 17. Eusebius and S. Jerom say it was situated about twenty miles to the north of Jerusalem. Calmet.

VER. 55. This was the last Pasch that our Saviour kept upon earth, and the one on which he suffered death for our salvation. Calmet.

VER. 56. He had not then arrived, because he would not expose himself to the fury of his enemies before his own time. V.

CHAP. XII. VER. 1. On the tenth day of the month, the Jews were accus-

5 Why was not this ointment sold for three hundred pence, and given to the poor ?

6 Now he said this, not because he cared for the poor, but because he was a thief, and having the purse, carried what was put therein.

7 But Jesus said : Let her alone, that she may keep it against the day of my burial.

8 For the poor you have always with you : but me you have not always.

9 A great multitude, therefore, of the Jews knew that he was there : and they came, not for Jesus's sake only, but that they might see Lazarus, whom he had raised from the dead.

10 But the chief priests thought to kill Lazarus also :

11 Because many of the Jews, by reason of him, went away, and believed in Jesus.

12 And on the next day a great multitude, that was come to the festival day, when they had heard that Jesus was coming to Jerusalem :

13 Took branches of palm-trees, and went forth to meet him, and cried : Hosannah, blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord, the king of Israel !

14 *And Jesus found a young ass, and sat upon it ; as it is written :

15 Fear not, daughter of Sion : behold, thy king cometh, sitting on the colt of an ass.

16 These things his disciples did not know at the first : but when Jesus was glorified, then they remembered that these things were written of him : and that they had done these things to him.

17 The multitude, therefore, gave testimony, which was with him, when he called Lazarus out of the grave, and raised him from the dead.

18 For which reason also the people came to meet him : because they heard that he had done this miracle.

19 The Pharisees, therefore, said among themselves : Do you see that we prevail nothing ? Behold, the whole world is gone after him.

20 Now there were certain Gentiles among them, that came up to adore on the festival day.

* Zac. ix. 9 ; Mark xi. 7 ; Luke xix. 35.

tomed to collect the lambs, and other things, in preparation for the ensuing great feast. On this day likewise, they generally had a small feast, or treat for their friends, at which time Jesus coming to Bethania, joined his friends in their entertainment. This was most likely in the house of Lazarus, Martha and Mary. Martha served at the table herself, thinking herself happy in waiting on Jesus, whom she considered as her Lord and God. Lazarus was one of them that were at the table, to show himself alive, by speaking and eating with them, and thus confounding the inexcusable ineredulity of the Jews. And Mary too showed her loving attachment to Jesus, by anointing his feet with her precious ointment. Theophyl., S. Aug., and S. Chrys.

VER. 8. Me you have not always with you. He speaks of his corporal presence ; for by his majesty, by his providence, by his ineffable and invincible grace, he ever fulfils what he said, (Matt. xxviii.) Behold I am with you all days, even to the consummation of the world. S. Aug. tract. 50, in Joan.

VER. 10. To kill Lazarus. A foolish thought, says S. Aug., as if Christ, who had raised him to life from a natural death, could not also restore him to life, when murdered by them. Wi.—O foolish thought, and blinded rage ! As if you could, by putting Lazarus to death, take away power from the Lord ; as if Christ, who had already raised one that had died, could not as easily have raised one that was slain. But, lo ! he has done both. Lazarus dead, he hath restored to life, and himself slain, he hath raised to life. S. Aug. tract. 50, in Joan.

VER. 19. Do you see that we prevail nothing ? Thus said the Pharisees, being vexed that so many followed Christ, even after they had ordered, that whosoever owned him, should be turned out of their synagogues ; and after they had employed men to apprehend him, but to no purpose. Wi.

VER. 20. Gentiles . . . came up to adore. These either were proselytes who had been Gentiles, and now had embraced the Jewish law : or they were such 21 These, therefore, came to Philip, who was of Bethsaida, of Galilee, and desired him, saying: Sir, we would willingly see Jesus.

22 Philip cometh, and telleth Andrew: Again Andrew and Philip told Jesus.

23 But Jesus answered them, saying: The hour is come that the Son of man should be glorified.

24 Amen, amen, I say to you, unless the grain of wheat fall into the ground, and die, 25 Itself remaineth alone. But if it die, it bringeth forth much fruit. *He that loveth his life, shall lose it: and he that hateth his life in this world, keepeth it unto life everlasting.

26 If any man minister to me, let him follow me: and where I am, there also shall my minister be. If any man minister to me, him will my Father honour.

27 Now is my soul troubled. And what shall I say? Father, save me from this hour. But for this cause I came unto this hour.

28 Father, glorify thy name. A voice, therefore, came from heaven: I have both glorified it, and I will glorify it again.

29 The multitude, therefore, that stood and heard, said that it thundered. Others said: An angel spoke to him.

30 Jesus answered, and said: This voice came not for me, but for your sake.

31 Now is the judgment of the world: now shall the prince of this world be cast out.

32 And I, if I be lifted up from the earth, will draw all things to myself.

33 (Now this he said, signifying what death he should die.)

34 The multitude answered him: We have heard^b out of the law, that Christ abideth for ever: and how sayest thou: The Son of man must be lifted up? Who is this Son of man?

35 Jesus, therefore, said to them: Yet a little while, among the Gentiles, who owned and served the one true God, as Cornelius did, (Acts x.,) but did not submit themselves to circumcision, and all the other Jewish rites and ceremonies. These could only enter into that part of the temple, called the court of the Gentiles. Wi.

* Matt. x. 39, and xvi. 25; Mark viii. 35; Luke ix. 34, and xvii. 33.

VER. 24. Unless the grain of wheat. By this grain of corn our Saviour means himself, who was to die by the infidelity of the Jews, and be multiplied by the faith of the Gentiles. S. Aug. tract. 51, in Joan.

VER. 27. Now is my soul troubled. Christ permitted this fear and horror to come upon his human nature, as he did afterwards in the garden of Gethsemani. Father, save me from this hour; yet he presently adds, but for this cause I came unto this hour; that is, I came into this world for this end, that I might die on a cross for all mankind. In like manner, when he said in the garden, let this cup pass from me, he presently joined these words: but not my will, but thine be done. Wi.

VER. 28. Father, glorify thy name, by my sufferings and death, as well as by many miracles that shall follow.—A voice came from heaven, and so loud, that some there present compared it to thunder: and at the same time these words were heard: I have glorified it, thy name, and I will glorify it again, by a number of ensuing miracles at Christ's death, at his resurrection, and ascension, as well as by all those miracles, which the apostles and disciples wrought afterwards. Wi.

VER. 31. Now is the judgment of the world: Their condemnation, says S. Chrys., for not believing.—The prince of this world, that is, the devil, shall be cast out from that great tyranny which he had over mankind, before Christ's incarnation. Wi.

VER. 32. And I, if I be lifted up from the earth; that is, on the cross. See the same expression, John iii. 14, and viii. 28.—I will draw all things, all nations, to myself; by faith. Wi.

VER. 34. How sayest thou: The Son of man must be lifted up? By these words of the people, Christ in this discourse must have called himself the Son of man, though it is not here mentioned by the evangelist. Wi.

VER. 35. Yet a little while, that is, for a very few days, I, who am the light of the world, am with you. Wi.

the light is among you. Walk whilst you have the light, that the darkness overtake you not: and he that walketh in darkness, knoweth not whither he goeth.

36 Whilst you have the light, believe in the light, that you may be the children of light. These things Jesus spoke, and he went away, and hid himself from them.

37 And whereas he had done so many miracles before them, they believed not in him:

38 That the saying of Isaias, the prophet, might be fulfilled, which he said: *Lord, who hath believed our hearing? And to whom hath the arm of the Lord been revealed?

39 Therefore they could not believe, for Isaias said again:

40 *He hath blinded their eyes, and hardened their heart: that they should not see with their eyes, nor understand with their heart, and be converted, and I should heal them.

41 These things said Isaias, when he saw his glory, and spoke of him.

42 However, many of the chief men also believed in him: but because of the Pharisees, they did not confess it, that they might not be cast out of the synagogue.

43 For they loved the glory of men, more than the glory of God.

44 But Jesus cried out, and said: He that believeth in me, doth not believe in me, but in him that sent me.

45 And he that seeth me, seeth him that sent me.

46 I, the light, am come into the world; that whosoever believeth in me, may not remain in darkness.

47 And if any man hear my words, and keep them not, I do not judge him: for I came not to judge the world, but to save the world.

48 He that despiseth me, and receiveth not my words, hath one that judgeth him.* The word that I have spoken, the same shall judge him in the last day.

* Isa. liii. 1; Rom. x. 16.—^a Isa. vi. 9; Matt. xiii. 14; Mark iv. 12; Luke viii. 10; Acts xxviii. 26; Rom. xi. 8.—^b Matt. xvi. 16.

VER. 39. They could not believe, that is, they would not, says S. Aug., or it could not be, considering their wilful, obstinate blindness. Wi.—But where then is the sin, if they could not believe? They could not believe, because they would not. For as it is the glory of the will of God, that it cannot be averse to its own glory, so it is the fault of the will of man, that it cannot believe. S. Aug. tract. 53, in Joan.

VER. 40. He hath blinded their eyes, &c. See Matt. xiii. 14. Wi.—God blinded the Jews, not by filling them with malice, but by refusing them his graces, of which they had made themselves unworthy, and which they before abused and despised. It was their perverse will, their pride, presumption, and obstinacy, that brought on them this judgment. S. Aug.

VER. 43. For they loved the glory of men. This was one of the chief obstacles of their belief, yet many even of the chief of them believed in him; but durst not own it for fear of being disgraced, and turned out of their synagogues. Do not human considerations, and temporal advantages, hinder men from seeking out and embracing the truth?

VER. 45. He that seeth me, seeth him that sent me. In what sense these words are true, see John xiv. 9, where they are repeated again, and with other expressions to the same sense. Wi.

VER. 47. I do not judge him. To judge here, may signify to condemn. S. Aug. expounds it in this manner: I do not judge him at this my first coming. S. Chrys. says, it is not I only that judgeth him, but the works also that I do.

* V. 19. Quia nihil proficimus. In most G. copies, and also in S. Chrys., we read: you see that you prevail nothing; as if these words had been spoken by some of Christ's friends, to make his adversaries desist. Θαυμάσιον ὅτι οὐκ ἀπολείπει οὐδὲν.

† V. 35. Adhuc modicum lumen in vobis est, ἵνα μὴ πρὸν χάριν, τὸ φῶς μὴ δῶκεν ἱστί. They mistake, who take modicum for an adjective, that agrees with lumen.

49 For I have not spoken of myself, but the Father who sent me, he gave me command what I should say, and what I should speak.

50 And I know that his command is life everlasting. The things, therefore, that I speak, even as the Father said unto me, so do I speak.

CHAP. XIII.

Christ washes his disciples' feet: the treason of Judas: the new commandment of love.

BEFORE^a the festival day of the Pasch, Jesus knowing that his hour was come, that he should pass out of this world to the Father: having loved his own who were in the world, he loved them to the end.

2 And when supper was done, the devil having now put into the heart of Judas, the son of Simon, the Iscariot, to betray him:

3 Knowing that the Father had given him all things into his hands, and that he came from God, and goeth to God.

4 He riseth from supper, and layeth aside his garments: and having taken a towel, he girded himself.

5 After that, he poureth water into a bason, and began to wash the feet of the disciples, and to wipe them with the towel, wherewith he was girded.

6 He cometh, therefore, to Simon Peter. And Peter saith to him: Lord, dost thou wash my feet?

7 Jesus answered, and said to him: What I do, thou knowest not now, but thou shalt know hereafter.

8 Peter saith to him: Thou shalt never wash my feet. Jesus answered him: If I wash thee not, thou shalt have no part with me.

9 Simon Peter saith to him: Lord, not only my feet, but also my hands and my head.

10 Jesus saith to him: He that is washed, needeth not but to wash his feet, but is clean wholly. And you are clean, but not all.

11 For he knew who he was that would betray him; therefore he said: You are not all clean.

^a A. D. 53. Matt. xxvi. 2; Mark xiv. 1; Luke xxii. 1.—^b Matt. x. 24; Luke vi. 40; Infra, xv. 20.

CHAP. XIII. VER. 1. Before the festival day, or feast of the Pasch. See the note on this word Pasche, Matt. xxvi. 2. Here when S. John says, Before the festival day, he means in the evening, or latter evening after sunset, on the 14th day of the month of Nisan, when the great feast of Azyms or unleavened bread was begun, (for the Jews began their feasts from sunset on the foregoing day,) so that the hours from sunset, at least, on the 14th day of the month of Nisan, (at which time the paschal lamb was to be eaten with unleavened bread,) belonged to the first, and great day of Azyms, which lasted till sunset on the 15th day of the month of Nisan. S. John therefore says, The day before, meaning after sunset on the 14th day of the month: but yet it was part of the same great feast, which was kept on the 15th day. See also the note, Matt. xxvi. 17. Wi.

VER. 2. And when supper was done. By this we must not understand, that the supper was over; for we afterwards find that Jesus again sat down, and gave bread to the traitor. But these words only mean, that all had partook of refreshment, and might be therefore said to have supped. S. Aug. tract. 55, in Joan.

VER. 4. He riseth from supper; that is, after supper was done, or ended, as it is here said, (ver. 2, and 1 Cor. xi. 25,) girded himself like a servant, to wash and wipe the feet of his apostles. Wi.—If we compare the text of the four evangelists, it will appear that the washing of the feet preceded the institution of the blessed Eucharist, of which S. John is silent. V.

VER. 5. S. Ambrose and S. Bernard show that this washing was mysterious, and significative of the very great purity expected of those that receive the blessed Eucharist.

VER. 10. He that is washed, &c. The feet are always apt to contract some dust or dirt; and in the mystical sense, he that is washed by the sacraments of baptism, or penance, from greater sins, must still endeavour to cleanse and purify his affections from lesser failings of human frailty. And you, my apostles, are clean from greater offences, but not all of you; meaning the traitor Judas. Wi.—It is impossible that the extremities of the soul (if we may be allowed the expression) should not, as long as we tread upon this earth, receive some stain or other;

12 Then after he had washed their feet, and taken his garments, having sat down again, he said to them: Know you what I have done to you?

13 You call me, Master, and Lord: and you say well for so I am.

14 If I then, being Lord and Master, have washed your feet: you also ought to wash one another's feet.

15 For I have given you an example, that as I have done to you, so you do also.

16 ^aAmen, amen, I say to you: The servant is not greater than his lord: neither is an apostle greater than he that sent him.

17 If you know these things, you shall be blessed if you do them.

18 I speak not of you all: I know whom I have chosen: but that the Scripture may be fulfilled: ^cHe that eateth bread with me, shall lift up his heel against me.

19 At present I tell you before it come to pass: that when it shall come to pass, you may believe, that I am the Messiah.

20 ^dAmen, amen, I say to you, he that receiveth whomsoever I send, receiveth me: and he that receiveth me, receiveth him that sent me.

21 When Jesus had said these things, he was troubled in spirit: and he protested, and said: ^eAmen, amen, I say to you, that one of you will betray me.

22 The disciples, therefore, looked one upon another, doubting of whom he spoke.

23 Now there was leaning on Jesus's bosom one of his disciples, whom Jesus loved.

24 Simon Peter, therefore, beckoned to him: and said to him: Who is it, of whom he speaketh?

25 He, therefore, leaning on the breast of Jesus, saith to him: Lord, who is it?

26 Jesus answered: He it is, to whom I shall reach bread dipped. And when he had dipped the bread, he gave it to Judas Iscariot, the son of Simon.

27 And after the morsel, satan entered into him.

^e Psal. xl. 10.—^d Matt. x. 40; Luke x. 16.—^e Matt. xxvi. 20; Mark xiv. 18; Luke xxii. 21.

although in the opinion of men, the soul appear just. Many indeed, after baptism, are covered with the dust of sin, even to the head, but those who are disciples, indeed, need only to wash their feet. Origen, tract. 32, in Joan.

VER. 14. You also ought to wash one another's feet. Not that he made this a standing precept according to the letter; but designed it as a lesson of humility. We find this custom literally observed in several churches, as it is now done every year by diverse prelates, and by Christian kings and princes. Wi.

VER. 18. Shall lift up his heel against me. It is the sense of those words, (Psal. xl. 10,) hath supplanted me; and they were spoken of Judas's sin in betraying Christ. Wi.

VER. 23. One of his disciples. S. John himself was lying at table in (or towards) the bosom of Jesus.^a These words seem to express the manner that the Jews were placed at table. They had couches about a table, to lean or lie upon; and three for example upon each couch. The master, or head of the company, was placed in the midst; so that we may suppose that Christ was placed on one of these couches in the midst, S. Peter on one side of him, and S. John on the other; and that S. John, in that resting and leaning posture, had his head all the time turned and inclined towards Christ's bosom: yet it can scarce be imagined that his head laid continually upon our Saviour's breast or bosom; for this posture would have been very uneasy to Jesus, or to any one. S. John then leaned all supper time towards Jesus's bosom or breast, but not upon it. Wi.—Whilst all were fearing for themselves, and Peter, the very head of the apostles, was trembling, S. John rests; reposing on the bosom of Jesus. S. Chrys. hom. 71, in Joan.

VER. 25. When Christ had said, One of you is to betray me, S. Peter whispered with S. John, by turning to him behind Jesus's back, and desired him to ask, who this was: now when John had leaned down upon the breast of Jesus, or as the Greek hath it, falling down on the breast of Jesus, as a person may do in a great concern, or fit of grief, he said, Lord, who is it? This posture seems to have been only for that moment of whispering, and to have been different from the posture of eating at table. Wi.

And Jesus said to him: That which thou dost, do quickly.

28 Now no man at the table knew for what intent he said this to him.

29 For some thought, because Judas had the purse, that Jesus had said to him: Buy those things which we have need of for the festival day: or that he should give something to the poor.

30 He then having received the morsel, went out immediately. And it was night.

31 When, therefore, he was gone out, Jesus said: Now is the Son of man glorified: and God is glorified in him.

32 If God be glorified in him, God will also glorify him in himself: and immediately will he glorify him.

33 Little children, yet a little while I am with you. You shall seek me: and as I said to the Jews: Whither I go, you cannot come: so now I say to you.

34 I give you a new commandment: That you love one another, as I have loved you, that you also love one another.

35 By this shall all men know that you are my disciples, if you have love one for another.

36 Simon Peter saith to him: Lord, whither goest thou? Jesus answered: Whither I go, thou canst not follow me now: but thou shalt follow me afterwards.

37 Peter saith to him: Why cannot I follow thee now? I will lay down my life for thee.

38 Jesus answered him: Wilt thou lay down thy life for me? Amen, amen, I say to thee, the cock shall not crow, till thou deny me thrice.

CHAP. XIV.

Christ's discourse after his last supper.

* Supra, vii. 34.—b Lev. xix 18; Matt. xxii. 39; Infra, xv. 12.

VER. 27. Satan entered into him, who presently went out with great anger and indignation. It was then night, likely about nine o'clock. Wi.—That which thou dost, do quickly. It is not a licence, much less a command, to go about his treason: but a signification to him, that Christ would not hinder or resist what he was about, do it as soon as he pleased: but was both ready and desirous to suffer for our redemption. Ch.

VER. 31. Jesus said: Now is the Son of man glorified: the time is at hand, when he shall be glorified by miracles at his death, resurrection, &c. Wi.

VER. 34. This commandment was already in the old law, where it is written, Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself; how then does our Saviour call it a new command? It is new, not because we simply love one another; but because we love one another, as he has loved us: not as men love one another, as being fellow creatures, but united in love, as being all the children of the Most High; that so we may be brethren to his only begotten Son, bearing to all the same love that he has borne to us. S. Aug., tract. 64, in Joan.—By this shall I, moreover, know that you truly love me. V.

VER. 38. The love which S. Peter bore our Saviour was exceedingly tender, but it was not yet sufficiently strong. S. Bern., Sermon 4, in Cant.—Jesus therefore asks him, Wilt thou lay down thy life for me? Do you think yourself sufficiently strong to perform this heroic act for love of me? so far are you from exposing your life for me, that you will shortly deny me. Menochius.

* V. 28. Erat recumbens in sinu Jesu, ver. 23. And cum recubisset super pectus Jesu, ver. 25. In the Greek, ver. 23, ἀνακείμενος ἐπὶ τῷ κόλπῳ τοῦ Ἰησοῦ; and ver. 25, ἐπιπεσὼν ἐπὶ τὸ στήθος τοῦ Ἰησοῦ. The word ἀνακείμενος, from ἀνακίσσθαι, seems to express no more than the manner in those days of leaning, or lying at table; as in the Latin, accumbere, or discumbere; but ἐπιπεσὼν, from ἐπιπίπτειν ἐπὶ τὸ στήθος, signifies a bowing or falling down on Christ's breast, as it were in a fit of trouble or grief. See the author of the Analysis, Diss. 36. S. Chrys. (hom. 72, p. 423, tom. 8, nov. ed. Ben.) seems to make a difference betwixt these two expressions, when he says: Joannes . . . in sinu Jesu recubat, nec recubat solum, sed in pectus incidit: neque hoc solum quaesitu dignum est, &c., ὁ Ἰωάννης ἀνάκειται εἰς τὸν κόλπον τοῦ Ἰησοῦ, καὶ οὐκ ἀνάκειται μόνον, ἀλλὰ καὶ τῷ στήθει ἐπιπίπτει, καὶ οὐ τοῦτο μόνον ἄξιον ζητήσεως, &c.

CHAP. XIV. VER. 1. After having answered the questions of S. Peter, Jesus again addresses himself to his disciples, and bids them not to be afflicted or troubled at what he says to them. Many Greeks and Latins begin this chapter thus: Jesus said to his disciples, Let not your hearts be troubled. S. Chrys.—

LET not your heart be troubled. You believe in God, believe also in me.

2 In my Father's house there are many mansions. If not, I would have told you: because I go to prepare a place for you:

3 And if I shall go, and prepare a place for you: I will come again, and will take you to myself, that where I am, you also may be.

4 And whither I go you know, and the way you know.

5 Thomas saith to him: Lord, we know not whither thou goest; and how can we know the way?

6 Jesus saith to him: I am the way, and the truth, and the life. No man cometh to the Father, but by me.

7 If you had known me, you would surely have known my Father also: and from henceforth you shall know him, and you have seen him.

8 Philip saith to him: Lord, show us the Father, and it is enough for us.

9 Jesus saith to him: Have I been so long a time with you; and have you not known me? Philip, he that seeth me, seeth the Father also. How sayest thou, Show us the Father?

10 Do you not believe, that I am in the Father, and the Father in me? The words that I speak to you, I speak not of myself. But the Father who abideth in me, he doth the works.

11 Believe you not that I am in the Father, and the Father in me?

12 Otherwise believe for the works themselves. Amen, amen, I say to you, he that believeth in me, the works that I do, he shall do also, and greater than these shall he do: because I go to the Father.

* Matt. xxvi. 35; Mark xiv. 29; Luke xxii. 23.

Euthym., Leont., Theophyl., Theodor., &c., agree, that our Saviour wished to encourage his apostles, who were so much troubled, because he had said, that Peter should deny him.—Let not your heart be troubled. Christ here begins those incomparable discourses to his apostles, which are set down in the next four chapters. His sufferings and death now approaching, he forewarns them not to be troubled. Wi.

VER. 2. In my Father's house. He does not say of your Father: for though God be the Father of all by creation, and of the just, by the grace of adoption; yet Christ, in several places, calls him his Father, in a quite different sense, that is, as he was his eternal Father, as the ancient interpreters observe. Wi.—These many mansions signify different degrees of glory in heaven. S. Jer., l. 2, adv. Jovin.

VER. 4. And whither I go you know, and the way you know. Thomas replied, We know neither. Jesus saith to him, I am the way. They knew it, says S. Aug., (tract. 69,) but they did not know that they knew it: they knew their Master, Jesus Christ, and he was the way: they also knew, that is, believed, the kingdom of heaven, but they knew not that he was returning thither: for as yet their imaginations were upon a temporal kingdom. Wi.

VER. 7. If you had known me, you would surely have known my Father also. That is, (says S. Chrys., S. Cyril, &c.,) did you know me to be his true and eternal Son, you would also know him to be the Father from all eternity. And from henceforth, especially from the coming of the Holy Ghost, you shall know him with a more perfect knowledge.—And you have seen him, not as to the Divine nature: in this manner, you have neither seen him, nor me. But,

VER. 9. He that seeth me, seeth the Father also: † that is, he seeth him, who is not a man only, but who also, by my Divine nature, am one and the same with the Father: so that he who believes, and as it were sees, or knows by faith, who I am, cannot but know that I am one with my eternal Father; not one person, as the Sabellians fancied, but one in nature and substance. The ancient Fathers take notice against the Arians, that these words, and others that follow in this chapter, could not be true, if Christ was no more than a creature, though ever so perfect, there being an infinite distance betwixt God and the highest of his creatures. Wi.

VER. 10. Do you not believe, that I am in the Father, and the Father in me? These words confirm the equality of the Father and the Son: nor can they be expounded of an union of affection only, by what Christ told them before, John v. 17. 19. As the Father worketh till now, so I work: and whatsoever things the Father worketh, these also in like manner the Son doth. Wi.

VER. 12. And greater than these shall he do, because I go to the Father. Christ speaks of the greatness of visible miracles, and tells them, that after his ascension they shall be enabled, even to do greater miracles than he has yet shown to the world. Wi.

13 *And whatsoever you shall ask the Father in my name, that will I do: that the Father may be glorified in the Son.

14 If you shall ask me any thing in my name, that I will do.

15 If you love me, keep my commandments.

16 And I will ask the Father, and he shall give you another Paraclete, that he may abide with you for ever,

17 The Spirit of truth, whom the world cannot receive, because it seeth him not, nor knoweth him: but you shall know him; because he shall abide with you, and shall be in you.

18 I will not leave you orphans: I will come to you.

19 Yet a little while: and the world seeth me no more. But you see me: because I live, and you shall live.

20 In that day, you shall know that I am in my Father, and you in me, and I in you.

21 He that hath my commandments, and keepeth them: he it is that loveth me. And he that loveth me, shall be loved by my Father: and I will love him, and will manifest myself to him.

22 Judas saith to him, not the Iscariot: Lord, how is it, that thou wilt manifest thyself to us, and not to the world?

23 Jesus answered, and said to him: If any one love me, he will keep my word, and my Father will love him, and we will come to him, and will make an abode with him:

* Matt. vii. 7, and xxi. 22; Mark xi. 24; Infra, xvi. 23.

VER. 13. That will I do. He does not now say, this the Father will do: to show that the power of both is equal, and the same. Wi.

VER. 16. Paraclete. This is a comforter, or also an advocate: inasmuch as by inspiring prayer, he prays, as it were, in us, and pleads for us.—For ever. Hence it is evident, that this Spirit of truth was not only promised to the persons of the apostles, but also to their successors, through all generations. Ch.—I have not changed the word Paraclete, which signifies both an advocate and a comforter. He shall remain with you, and in you, for ever. What greater happiness, what greater security for the faithful, than to have this Divine promise, the Holy Ghost, the Spirit of truth, remaining with the Church for ever, to protect them, and preserve them from all errors and heresies? Wi.

VER. 19. The world seeth me no more, after my death: but you shall see me, conversing with you for forty days, after my resurrection. Wi.

VER. 20. In that day, when I am risen again, or when the Holy Ghost is come, you shall know that I am in the Father, and how, and in what manner: as also, how I am in you, and you in me. The Arians and Socinians lay hold on these expressions, and of the words, (chap. xvii. 21,) when Christ prays that his disciples may be one, as he and his Father are one, which words imply no more than a similitude, and an imitation of that union of love, (with which the three Divine Persons love one another,) though at an infinite distance. If the old or new Arians examined, with a sincere desire of finding the truth, (which they ought to seek from many passages in the New Testament, as well as from the sense and tradition of the Church, guided by the promised Spirit of truth,) they might certainly find how different is the union of nature and substance of the eternal Son with his eternal Father, and of that union of the three Divine Persons, when they are said to be one; from that inferior and lesser union of love and affection, by which either God loves his adoptive children, his faithful servants, or they love one another: they would easily discover that many things are said of the unity and union of the Divine Persons, which could not be true, unless they were one and the same God, coeternal and consubstantial, which by no means can be said of God and his creatures, nor of the union of affections only, by which the creatures love one another. Wi.

VER. 22—25. Lord, how is it? Lit. what is done, or what will be done, that thou art about to manifest thyself to us, and not to the world? This apostle imagined that the Messiah would make manifest his glory of a temporal kingdom, not to them only, but to all the world. But Christ, by his answer, lets him know, that he spoke only of a manifestation of his love to those that loved him. If any man love me, my Father will love him, and we will come to him, that is, the three Divine Persons will come to his soul, in a special manner, so as to bless him with an infusion of graces, and make our abode in his soul. Wi.

VER. 26. The Paraclete, the Holy Ghost, whom the Father will send in my name, as proceeding also from me: and therefore Christ saith in the next chapter, (ver. 26,) that he himself will send him from the Father. He will teach you all things, &c. He will give you a more perfect knowledge of all those truths which I have taught you. Wi.—Teach you all things. Here the Holy Ghost is promised to the apostles, and their successors, particularly, in order to teach them all truth, and to preserve them from error. Ch.

24 He that loveth me not, keepeth not my words. And the word which you have heard is not mine: but the Father's who sent me.

25 These things have I spoken to you, remaining with you.

26 But the Paraclete, the Holy Ghost, whom the Father will send in my name, he will teach you all things, and bring all things to your mind, whatsoever I shall have said to you.

27 Peace I leave with you, my peace I give to you: not as the world giveth, do I give to you. Let not your heart be troubled, nor let it be afraid.

28 You have heard that I said to you: I go away, and I come again to you. If you loved me, you would indeed be glad, because I go to the Father: for the Father is greater than I.

29 And now I have told you before it come to pass: that when it shall come to pass, you may believe.

30 Now I will not speak many things with you. For the prince of this world cometh, and in me he hath not any thing.

31 But that the world may know that I love the Father, and as the Father hath given me commandment so I do. Arise, let us go hence.

CHAP. XV.

A continuation of Christ's discourse to his disciples.

I AM the true vine; and my Father is the husbandman.

b Acts ii. 23.

VER. 28. The Father is greater than I. According to the common exposition, Christ here speaks of himself, as he is made man, which interpretation is drawn from the circumstances of the text, Christ being at that time going to suffer and die, and shortly after to rise again, and ascend into heaven, all which agree to him as he was man, and according to his human nature. But the Arians can take no advantage from these words (though, with divers of the ancient Fathers, we should allow them to be spoken of Christ, as he is the Son of God): the Father may be said in some manner to be greater than the Son, if we consider the order of the Divine processions, that is, that the Father is the first Person, and proceeds from no other; whereas the Son proceeds from the Father. If any one, says S. Chrys., will contend that the Father is greater, inasmuch as he is the cause, from which the Son proceedeth, we will bear with him, and this way of speaking; provided he grant that the Son is not of a different substance, or nature. S. Athanasius allows the same, and takes notice, that though the Father is said to be greater, yet he is not said to be better, nor more excellent than the Son; because they are one and the same in substance, nature, and other perfections. Wi.—The enemies to the Divinity of Christ here triumph, and think they have the confession of Christ himself, that he is less than the Father. But if they would distinguish the two natures of Christ, their arguments would all fall to the ground. Jesus Christ, as man, and a creature, is inferior to his Father, the Creator; but, as God, he is, in every respect, equal to him. S. Basil, S. Aug., &c.

VER. 31. As the Father hath given me commandment, so I do.—He again speaks of himself as man.—Arise, let us go hence. Yet, by chap. xviii. 1, Christ still continued the like instructions, either in the same place, or in the way to Gethsemani. Wi.

* V. 7. Cognoscetis eum, in the present Greek copies (one excepted) we read, cognoscitis, γνώσκετε; Maldonatus judges it the true reading. But not only S. Aug. and the Latin Fathers, but even S. Chrys. reads it in the future tense, γνώσεσθε: and takes particular notice of this reading, τὸ μὲν μέλλοντος. Homi 73, tom. 8, p. 432, ed. Montfaucon.

† V. 9. Qui videt me, videt et Patrem. See S. Chrys. ὁμ. δδ. p. 435, nov. ed., si alterius esset substantiæ, non hoc dixisset, εἰ δὲ ἐτέρας οὐσίας ἦν οὐκ ἂν τοῦτε εἶπεν. See S. Cyr. p. 777.

‡ V. 28. Pater major me est, ὁ Πατὴρ μείζων μου ἐστίν. S. Chrys. Hom. δε. p. 443, nov. ed. Si quis verò dixerit majorem esse Patrem, ut filii principium, non huic contradicemus, καθ' ὃ αἰτίας τοῦ υἱοῦ, οὐδὲ τοῦτο ἀντιρροῦμεν. See S. Athan. Orat. 1, cont. Arianos, p. 362, ed. Ben., non dixit, Pater præstantior est me. κρείττων μου ἐστίν, ne quis eum alium à Patris naturâ esse suspicaretur, sed majorem dixit, non quidem magnitudine quadam, aut tempore, sed quia ex ipso Patre gignitur, &c. See S. Aug. tract. 78, p. 699, propter formam servi, dicit, Pater major me est, &c.

CHAP. XV. VER. 1. I am the true vine. Christ, says S. Aug., speaks of himself as man, when he compares himself to a vine, his disciples to the branches, and his Father to the husbandman. He himself, as God, is also the husbandman. Without me you can do nothing, that shall be meritorious of a reward in heaven. 14

2 Every branch in me, that beareth not fruit, he will take away: and every one that beareth fruit, he will purge it, that it may bring forth more fruit.

3 ^aNow you are clean, by reason of the word, which I have spoken to you.

4 Remain in me: and I in you. As the branch cannot bear fruit of itself, unless it abide in the vine: so neither can you, unless you abide in me.

5 I am the vine: you the branches: he that abideth in me, and I in him, the same beareth much fruit: for without me you can do nothing.

6 If any one remaineth not in me, he shall be cast forth as a branch, and shall wither, and they shall gather him up, and cast him into the fire, and he burneth.

7 If you remain in me, and my words remain in you: you shall ask whatever you will, and it shall be done to you.

8 In this is my Father glorified, that you bring forth very much fruit, and become my disciples.

9 As the Father hath loved me, I also have loved you. Remain in my love.

10 If you keep my commandments, you will remain in my love, as I also have kept my Father's commandments, and do remain in his love.

11 These things I have spoken to you: that my joy may be in you, and your joy may be filled.

12 ^bThis is my commandment, that you love one another, as I have loved you.

13 Greater love than this no man hath, that a man lay down his life for his friends.

14 You are my friends, if you do the things that I command you.

15 I will not now call you servants: for the servant knoweth not what his lord doth. But I have called you friends: because all things whatsoever I have heard from my Father, I have made known to you.

16 You have not chosen me: but I have chosen you, d 1 John iii. 11, and iv. 7.

VER. 3. See supra, xiii. 10.

VER. 7. On account of our being in this world, we sometimes ask for that which is not expedient for us. But these things will not be granted us, if we remain in Christ, who never grants us any thing, unless it be profitable to us. S. Aug. tract. 81, in Joan.—If we abide in Christ by a lively faith, and his words abide in us by a lively, ardent charity, which can make us produce the fruits of good works, all that we ask will be granted us. V.—These conditional expressions, if you remain in the vine, if you keep my commandments, &c., &c., give us to understand, that our perseverance and salvation are upon conditions, to be fulfilled by us.—S. Aug. de Cor. et Gra., c. 13.

VER. 8. It is the glory of the husbandman, to see his vine well cultivated, and laden with fruit. And it is the glory of God, my Father, to see you filled with faith, charity, and good works, and to behold you usefully employed in the conversion of others. Then will men, seeing your good works, and the fruit of your preaching, among all nations, glorify your heavenly Father, as the author of all these blessings. S. Matt. v. 16. Calmet.

VER. 10. As I also have kept my Father's commandments. He still speaks of himself as he was man. Wi.—This frequent admonition, of keeping the commandments, proves that a Christian's life consists not in faith only, but in good works. B.

VER. 14. You are my friends. A wonderful condescension, says S. Aug., in our blessed Redeemer, who was God as well as man, to call such poor and sinful creatures his friends; who, when we have done all we can and ought, are still but unprofitable servants. I have called you my friends, because I have made known to you, &c. Wi.

VER. 18. If the world hate you. The wicked, unbelieving world, hate and persecute you, as they have done me; remember, that the servant must not desire to be treated better than his master. Wi.

VER. 22. They would not have sin, or would not be guilty of sin: that is, they might be excused, as to their not believing me to be their Messiah: but after so many instructions, which I have given them, and so many, and such and have appointed you, that you should go, and should bring forth fruit, and your fruit should remain: that whatsoever you shall ask of the Father in my name, he may give it to you.

17 ^aThese things I command you, that you love one another.

18 If the world hate you: know ye that it hated me before you.

19 If you had been of the world: the world would love its own; but because you are not of the world, but I have chosen you out of the world, therefore the world hateth you.

20 Remember my word that I said to you: The servant is not greater than his lord. If they persecuted me, they will also persecute you: if they have kept my word, they will keep yours also.

21 But all these things they will do to you for my name's sake: because they know not him that sent me.

22 If I had not come, and spoken to them, they would not have sin: but now they have no excuse for their sin.

23 He that hateth me, hateth my Father also.

24 If I had not done among them the works that no other man hath done, they would not have sin: but now they have both seen, and hated both me and my Father.

25 But that the word may be fulfilled which is written in their law: They have hated me without cause.

26 ^bBut when the Paraclete shall come, whom I will send you from the Father, the Spirit of truth, who proceedeth from the Father, he shall give testimony of me:

27 And you shall give testimony, because you are with me from the beginning.

CHAP. XVI.

The conclusion of Christ's last discourse to his disciples.

THESE things have I spoken to you, that you may not be scandalized.

2 They will put you out of the synagogues: yea, the miracles done in their sight, which also were foretold of their Messiah, they can have no excuse for their obstinate sin of not believing.

VER. 24. How can this be true, that Christ wrought greater wonders than any one else had ever done? We find recounted in the Old Testament, the miracles of Elias and Eliscus, who raised the dead to life, healed the sick, and brought down fire from heaven; of Moses, who afflicted Egypt with plagues, divided the Red Sea for the passage of the Israelites, and brought water from the rock; of Josue, who stopped the waters of the Jordan for the passage of the children of Israel, and in the battle at Gabaon made the sun and moon stand still; in all which miracles there appears a greater manifestation of power, than in any of the miracles wrought by our Saviour, during his ministry. But to this may be answered, that the miracles of our Saviour were much more numerous than those of any of the saints of the Old Testament, even of Moses himself; particularly when we compare the few years which he preached, and manifested the glory of his Father by his miracles, with the long life of Moses: Christ did not preach full four years, whereas Moses governed the people forty years. Add to this, the ease and authority with which he performs them, which are most sensible proofs of their superiority. But what chiefly distinguishes his miracles from those of the other saints, is, that he performed them in proof of his Divinity, and of his mission, as the deliverer of Israel: whereas the prophets only perform miracles as the ministers of the Lord, and as so many voices, which foretold the Messiah. We omit mentioning his resurrection, which at this time he had not performed, but had already foretold, and which was the greatest miracle that has ever been performed. Calmet.—They have hated both me and my Father: that is, by hating me, the true Son, who have one and the same nature with my Father, they have also hated him, though they pretend to honour him as God. See on this chap., S. Aug. (tract. 81) and S. Chrys., (hom. 76,) Lat. edit.; hom. 77. in Joan., in the Greek.

VER. 26. Whom I will send. The Holy Ghost is sent by the Son: therefore he proceedeth from him also, as from the Father; though the schismatical Greeks think differently (B.); otherwise, as Dr. Challoner says, he could not be sent by the Son.

hour cometh, that whosoever killeth you, will think that he doth a service to God.

3 And these things will they do to you, because they have not known the Father, nor me.

4 But these things I have told you: that when the hour of them shall come, you may remember that I told you.

5 But I told you not these things from the beginning, because I was with you: And now I go to him that sent me: and none of you asketh me: Whither goest thou?

6 But because I have spoken these things to you, sorrow hath filled your heart.

7 But I tell you the truth: it is expedient for you that I go: for if I go not, the Paraclete will not come to you: but if I go, I will send him to you.

8 And when he shall come, he will convince the world of sin, and of justice, and of judgment.

9 Of sin indeed: because they have not believed in me.

10 And of justice: because I go to the Father: and you shall see me no longer:

11 And of judgment: because the prince of this world is already judged.

12 I have yet many things to say to you: but you cannot bear them now.

13 But when he, the Spirit of truth, shall come, he will teach you all truth: for he shall not speak of himself: but what things soever he shall hear, he shall speak: and the things that are to come, he will show you.

14 He shall glorify me: because he shall receive of mine, and will declare it to you.

15 All things whatsoever the Father hath are mine. Therefore, I said, that he shall receive of mine, and will declare it to you.

16 A little while, and now you shall not see me: and again a little while, and you shall see me: because I go to the Father.

17 Then some of his disciples said one to another: What is this that he saith to us: A little while, and you shall not see me: and again a little while, and you shall see me: and because I go to the Father?

18 They said, therefore: What is this that he saith, A little while? we know not what he speaketh.

19 And Jesus knew that they were desirous to ask him: and he said to them: Of this do you inquire among yourselves, because I said: A little while, and you shall not see me; and again a little while, and you shall see me.

20 Amen, amen, I say to you, that you shall lament and weep, but the world shall rejoice: and you shall be sorrowful, but your sorrow shall be turned into joy.

21 A woman, when she is in labour, hath sorrow, because her hour is come: but when she hath brought forth the child, she remembereth no more the anguish, for joy that a man is born into the world.

22 So also you now indeed have sorrow, but I will see you again, and your heart shall rejoice: and your joy no man shall take from you.

23 And in that day you shall not ask me any thing. Amen, amen, I say to you: if you ask the Father any thing in my name, he will give it you.

* Matt. vii. 7, and xxi. 22; Mark xi. 24; Luke xi. 9; Supra, xiv. 13; James i. 5.

CHAP. XVI. VER. 4. That when the hour of them shall come, you may remember that I told you.* This is both the sense and the construction, by the Greek text, which here determines the construction of the Latin. Wi.

VER. 5. None of you asketh me: Whither goest thou? S. Peter had put this question, chap. xiii. 36, and Thomas, chap. xiv. 5. The meaning, then, of Christ's words here, seems to be, that having told you, I am going to leave you, and also going to him that sent me, you do not ask, says S. Cyril, to be fully and thoroughly informed about it. Wi.

VER. 6. Sorrow hath filled your heart: and this sorrow hindereth you from asking, what you should earnestly desire to know. Wi.

VER. 7. I tell you . . . it is expedient for you that I go: that I leave you, as to my corporal presence: that I suffer death, for the redemption of all men. —And if I go not, the Paraclete will not come, according to the order of the Divine decrees: his coming to sanctify you with his gifts, and to teach you all things, is not to be till after my ascension. When I am gone, I will send him to you. The Father and I will send him, for he proceedeth from both. Wi.

VER. 8. He will convince,† or convict the world. Others translate, he will reprove the world of sin, &c. These words have occasioned a great many expositions. I here follow S. Cyril, that the Holy Ghost will condemn the Jews, and all obstinate unbelievers, of their sin, in not believing, after so many miracles, and so many pregnant motives, that ought to induce them to submit to the Christian faith. 2ndly, Of justice, by showing the justice and innocence of Christ, and also, that true justice and sanctification cannot be attained to but by his grace. 3rdly, Of judgment, by showing that the world, and the prince of this wicked world, the devil, is justly condemned, his empire in a great measure destroyed, and that all the wicked will be justly condemned, and punished with him. Wi.—The Holy Ghost, by his coming, brought over many thousands, 1st, To a sense of their sin, in not believing in Christ. 2ndly, To a conviction of the justice of Christ, now sitting at the right hand of his Father. And 3rdly, To a right apprehension of the judgment prepared for them that choose to follow satan, who is already judged and condemned. Ch.—The Greek text, in addition, has 'Οτι ου πιστευοντες εις εμε, Because they have not believed in me. This accusation and conviction of sin, cannot naturally fall on any, but the incredulous Jews. S. Aug., V. Bede, S. Chrys., Theophyl., and many others, are of opinion that this sin was their disbelief in Jesus, after all the miracles he had done in their presence, after so many prophecies so clearly accomplished in his person, after so many prodigies and wonders, which happened at his death, at his resurrection, and after his resurrection.

VER. 13. When he, the Spirit of truth, shall come, he will teach you all truth; will direct you and the Church in the ways of truth.—For he shall not speak of himself, or of himself only, because, says S. Aug., he is not from himself, but proceedeth from the Father and the Son.—Whatsoever he shall hear, he shall speak; † this his hearing, says S. Aug., is his knowledge, and his knowledge is his essence, or being, which from eternity is from the Father and the Son. The like expressions are applied to the Son, as proceeding from the Father. John v. 30, and viii. 16, &c. Wi.—If he shall teach all truth, and that for ever, (chap. xi. 26,) how is it possible that the Church can err, or hath erred in matters of faith, at any time, or in any point of doctrine? In this supposition, would not the Holy Ghost have forfeited his title of Spirit of truth?

VER. 15. All things whatsoever the Father hath are mine. The obvious sense of these words, shows, that the Son hath the same nature, and the same substance with the Father, and that he is one, and the same God with him. And by Christ's adding, therefore he (the Holy Ghost) shall receive of mine, we are taught that the third Person proceeds both from the Father, and the Son, and that he receives, and has the same perfections. Wi.

VER. 16. A little while, and now you shall not see me, &c. Many expound these words in this manner: that after a little while you shall not see me, because even to-morrow I shall be taken from you by death: and again, after a little while, you shall see me, because the third day I shall rise again, and converse with you, till my ascension. S. Aug. gives another interpretation, (Tract. 101,) that by the first little while, may be understood, the short time till Christ's ascension, and by the latter little while, the short time that the apostles were to live in this world; after which they should see, and enjoy Christ for ever in the kingdom of heaven. And this exposition seems to agree better with the following promise. Wi.—S. Chrys., both SS. Cyrils, Theophyl., Euthym., S. Aug., and others, interpret this verse differently; thus: Not long hence, I shall be entirely separated from you; you shall not see me, because I shall go to the Father, by my ascension; but you shall see me again, after a short time, at my second coming, to judge the living and the dead. All the time, that shall pass between my ascension, and my second coming, is in the eyes of God only as a moment. For a thousand years in thy sight are but as yesterday, which is past and gone. Psal. lxxxix. 4. And the apostle calls all time a moment, a time that soon passes. 1 Cor. vii., and 2 Cor. iv.

VER. 20. Your sorrow shall be turned into joy, chiefly at the end of your mortal life: then you shall have a joy, never to be taken from you. Wi.

VER. 22. The joy you will feel at my resurrection, shall ever be unalterable, and unremitted, because there I shall give you assurances and proofs of your future resurrection and immortality.

VER. 23. In that day, or at that time, in that happy state, you shall not ask, you shall not need to ask me any questions: nor even desire to have any happiness, but what you will enjoy. But now if you ask, that is, petition for any thing of the Father in my name, he will give it you, whatever graces or assistances you stand in need of: ask them in my name, as I am your chief Mediator, through whose merits all shall be granted you. This is the constant practice of the Church, to ask for all graces through our Lord Jesus Christ. Wi.—In my 24 Hitherto you have not asked any thing in my name : Ask, and you shall receive : that your joy may be full.

25 These things I have spoken to you in proverbs. The hour cometh when I will no more speak to you in proverbs, but will show you plainly of the Father.

26 In that day you shall ask in my name : and I say not to you, that I will ask the Father for you.

27 For the Father himself loveth you, because you have loved me, and have believed that I came forth from God.

28 I came forth from the Father, and am come into the world : again I leave the world, and I go to the Father.

29 His disciples say to him : Behold now thou speakest plainly, and speakest no proverb.

30 Now we know that thou knowest all things, and that for thee it is not needful that any man ask thee : in this we believe, that thou camest forth from God.

31 Jesus answered them : Now do you believe ?

32 *Behold the hour cometh, and is now come, that you shall be dispersed, every man to his own, and shall leave me alone : and yet I am not alone, because the Father is with me.

33 These things I have spoken to you, that in me you may have peace. In the world you shall have distress : but have confidence, I have overcome the world.

CHAP. XVII.

Christ's prayer for his disciples.

* Matt. xxvi. 31 ; Mark xiv. 27.

THESE things Jesus spoke, and lifting up his eyes to heaven, he said : Father, the hour is come, glorify thy Son, that thy Son may glorify thee.

2 *As thou hast given him power over all flesh, that he may give life everlasting to all whom thou hast given him.

3 And this is life everlasting : that they may know thee, the only true God, and Jesus Christ, whom thou hast sent.

4 I have glorified thee upon the earth : I have finished the work which thou gavest me to do :

5 And now glorify thou me, O Father, with thyself, with the glory which I had with thee, before the world was.

6 I have manifested thy name to the men whom thou hast given me out of the world. Thine they were, and to me thou gavest them : and they have kept thy word.

7 Now they have known that all things which thou hast given me are from thee.

8 Because the words which thou gavest me, I have given to them : and they have received them, and have known for certain that I came forth from thee, and they have believed that thou didst send me.

9 I pray for them : I pray not for the world, but for them whom thou hast given me : because they are thine :

10 And all mine are thine, and thine are mine : and I am glorified in them.

11 And now I am no more in the world, and these are in the world, and I come to thee. Holy Father, keep name. In consequence of this promise, the Church concludeth all her prayers, even those that are addressed to the saints, Per Christum Dominum nostrum, Through Christ our Lord.

VER. 24. Hitherto you have not asked any thing in my name : by the merits of me, your Mediator and Redeemer. They were not yet acquainted, says S. Cyril, with this manner of praying and petitioning, as they were afterwards. Wi.

VER. 29, &c. In this we believe that thou camest forth from God ; that is, we are more confirmed than ever, that thou art the Messiah, the true Son of God. Yet S. Chrys., S. Cyril, and S. Aug. take notice, that their faith was but imperfect, till after Christ's resurrection, and the coming of the Holy Ghost ; and therefore Christ answered them, (ver. 31, &c.,) Now do you believe? the hour cometh, that you shall be dispersed, &c. Wi.

* V. 4. Ut cum venerit hora eorum, reminiscamini quæ Ego dixi vobis, ὅταν ᾖ ἡ ὥρα, μνημονεύετε αὐτῶν, &c., where the construction is not hora eorum, but reminiscamini eorum, &c.

† V. 8. Arguet mundum, ἐλέγξει, which S. Cyr. expounds by κατακρίνῃ. See S. Aug. interpretation on that verse, tract. 95, p. 733.

‡ V. 13. Non loquetur a semetipso, S. Aug. says on these words, (tract. 99,) quia non est a semetipso. Sed quæcunque audiet, loquetur . . . ab illo audiet, a quo procedit . . . a quo est illi essentia, ab illo scientia, et audientia nihil aliud est quam scientia.

§ V. 23. Non me rogabit quicquam, οὐκ ἐρωτήσει, which commonly signifies to ask questions : but when it follows, αἰτήσῃτε τὸν πατέρα, this is properly to petition for.

CHAP. XVII. VER. 1. Glorify thy Son, by signs and miracles, lest dying so disgraceful a death, I seem to be no more than another man ; that thy Son may glorify thee, that my death may make thee praised and glorified. Wi.

VER. 2. Power over all flesh, that he may give life everlasting to all whom thou hast given him.* He speaks of himself, as made man, and the Redeemer of mankind. Wi.—Thou hast given him power over all flesh : by this our Saviour showed, that his preaching was directed, not to the Jews only, but to every nation of the earth. Are then all saved ? Christ has done sufficient for the salvation of all, and if they are not saved, it is the fault, not of him that speaketh, but of those that receive not his word. S. Chrys. hom. 79, in Joan.

VER. 3. This is life everlasting ; that is, the way to life everlasting, that they may know thee, the only true God, and Jesus Christ, whom thou hast sent.† The Arians, from these words, pretended that the Father only is the true God. S. Aug. and divers others answer, that the sense and construction is, that they may know thee, and also Jesus Christ thy Son, whom thou hast sent to be the only true God. We may also expound them with S. Chrys. and others, so that the Father is here called the only true God, not to exclude the Son, and the Holy Ghost, who are the same one true God with the Father ; but only to exclude the false gods of the Gentiles. Let the Socinians take notice, that (1 John v. 20) the Son of God, Christ Jesus, is expressly called the true God, even with the Greek article, upon which they commonly lay so much stress. Wi.

VER. 5. And now glorify thou me, O Father, with thyself, with the glory which I had with thee, before the world was. Glorify me, is the same as make me known to men ; so that the sense may be, make men know, that I had the same glory with thee, before the world was created, and from all eternity. Others understand, that Christ, as man, here prays, that his eternal Father would make known to men that glory, which it was decreed from eternity should be given him : that is, that all creatures should be made subject to him, even as he was man, and appointed to be judge of the living and the dead. See 1 Cor. xv. 26 ; Ephes. i. 22. Wi.

VER. 6. To the men whom thou gavest me out of the world. By whom we may understand his apostles and disciples. They were thine, and also mine, as I am God. See ver. 10.—And to me thou gavest them, inasmuch as I am become man, their Saviour, their Redeemer, &c. Wi.

VER. 7, 8. Now they have known that all things which thou gavest me are from thee. That is, says S. Aug.,† they now know, and will know more perfectly hereafter, that I myself am from thee, or proceed from thee, and am sent by thee to redeem the world. Wi.

VER. 9. I pray for them : I pray not for the world. That is, now in this prayer, when I desire special graces and assistances for them, to discharge their duty, as my apostles ; yet we must take notice that (ver. 20) Christ prayed for all those, who should believe in him. He also prayed (Luke xxiii. 34) for all, even for those that crucified him, Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do. Wi.

VER. 10. And all mine are thine, and thine are mine. They must needs be equal, says S. Aug., to whom equally belong all things, and all persons ; on which words, S. Chrys. also says, (hom. 81,) Do you see the equality? Wi.—And all mine are thine, and thine are mine : as if he said, whatever thou hast given to me, remains still thine, for mine are thine ; and whatever is thine, is likewise mine : for thine are all mine. S. Chrys. hom. 80, in Joan.

VER. 11. And now I am no more in the world : that is, I am now leaving the world, as to a corporeal and visible presence : yet S. Aug. takes notice, that Christ saith afterwards, (ver. 13,) these things I speak in the world : therefore he was still for some short time in the world. And as to his true invisible presence with his Church, he gave us this promise, (Matt. xxviii. 20,) Behold, I am with you all days, even to the end of the world.—Keep them in thy name, whom thou hast given me.‡ Christ, as man, says S. Aug., asks of his Father, to preserve those disciples, whom he had given him, who were to preach the gospel to the world.—That they may be one, as we also are. These words cannot signify an equality, nor to be one in nature and substance, as the Divine Persons are one, but only that they may imitate, as much as they are able, that union of love and affection. —See S. Chrys., S. Cyril, and S. Aug., on these words. Wi.

them in thy name, whom thou hast given me: that they may be one, as we also are.

12 While I was with them, I kept them in thy name. *Those whom thou gavest me, I have kept: and none of them hath perished, except the son of perdition, ^bthat the Scripture may be fulfilled.

13 And now I come to thee: and these things I speak in the world, that they may have my joy filled in themselves.

14 I have given them thy word, and the world hath hated them, because they are not of the world: as I also am not of the world.

15 I do not ask that thou take them away out of the world, but that thou preserve them from evil.

16 They are not of the world: as I also am not of the world.

17 Sanctify them in truth. Thy word is truth.

18 As thou hast sent me into the world, I also have sent them into the world.

19 And for them I do sanctify myself: that they also may be sanctified in truth.

20 And not for them only do I pray, but for those also who through their word shall believe in me.

21 That they all may be one, as thou, Father, in me, and I in thee, that they also may be one in us: that the world may believe that thou hast sent me.

22 And the glory which thou hast given me, I have given to them: that they may be one, as we also are one.

23 I in them, and thou in me: that they may be made perfect in one: and that the world may know that thou hast sent me, and hast loved them, as thou hast also loved me.

* Infra, xviii. 9.—b Psal. cviii. 8.—2 Kings xv. 23; Matt. xxvi. 36;

VER. 12. While I was with them, I kept them in thy name. He still speaks, says S. Chrys., as man, and after a human manner, by mentioning the advantage they seemed to enjoy, as long as he conversed visibly with them on earth, not that his invisible presence should be less beneficial to them.—And none of them hath perished, except the son of perdition, the wretched Judas, whose fall was foretold in the Scriptures. Psal. cviii. He hath perished, that is, now is about being lost by his own fault, says S. Chrys., on this place. And S. Aug., on Psal. cxxxviii. How did the devil enter into the heart of Judas? he could not have entered, had not he given him place. Wi.—That the Scripture may be fulfilled; this does not any ways show that it was the will of God that Judas should be lost; but only, that what happened to Judas was conformable to the prophecies, and not occasioned by them. Who will doubt, says S. Aug., (lib. de Unit. Eccl. c. 9,) but that Ju as might, if he pleased, have abstained from betraying Christ. But God foretold it, because he foresaw clearly the future perversity of his disposition. Calmet.—See above, (xiii. 18,) one of the principal passages of Scripture, relative to the treachery of Judas, in which the traitor's crime had been predicted.

VER. 18. As thou hast sent me into the world, I also have sent them into the world. He speaks of that mission, which agreed to him, as he was man, and become man for the salvation of mankind, to which also the apostles, and their successors, were to co-operate, as the ministers and instruments of Christ, by virtue of their mission from him. Wi.

VER. 19. And for them I do sanctify myself. S. Aug. expounds it, I sanctify them, who are my members, in myself. The interpretation of S. Chrys. and S. Cyril seems preferable, that to sanctify in the style of the Scriptures, is oftentimes the same as to offer up a sacrifice: so the sense here is, I sacrifice, and offer up myself on the cross for them, and all mankind. Wi.—By this Christ shows, that he sanctified the apostles, by sanctifying himself; because they are the members of his body. S. Aug. tract. 107, in Joan.

VER. 20. After having prayed for his apostles in particular, he now begins to pray for all that would afterwards, by their preaching, believe in his name (S. Aug. tract. 109, in Joan.); and by this he likewise comforts his disciples, showing them that they would prove the instruments of the salvation of others. S. Chrys. hom. 80, in Joan.

VER. 22. The glory which thou gavest me, I have given to them. S. Chrys. expounds this of the power of working miracles: S. Aug. rather understands the glory of heaven, which he had given, prepared, and designed to give them in heaven. This seems to be the sense by the 24th verse, where he says, Father, I will that where I am, they also whom thou hast given me, may be with me. Wi.

24 Father, I will that where I am, they also whom thou hast given me, may be with me: that they may see my glory, which thou hast given me: because thou hast loved me before the foundation of the world.

25 Just Father, the world hath not known thee: but I have known thee: and these have known, that thou hast sent me.

26 And I have made known thy name to them, and will make it known: that the love wherewith thou hast loved me, may be in them, and I in them.

CHAP. XVIII.

The history of the Passion of Christ.

WHEN^c Jesus had said these things, he went forth with his disciples over the brook Cedron, where there was a garden, into which he entered with his disciples.

2 Now Judas also, who betrayed him, knew the place: because Jesus had often resorted thither together with his disciples.

3 *Judas, therefore, having received a band of men, and servants, from the chief priests and the Pharisees, cometh thither with lanterns, and torches, and weapons.

4 Jesus, therefore, knowing all things that were to come upon him, went forward, and said to them: Whom seek ye?

5 They answered him: Jesus of Nazareth. Jesus saith to them: I am he. And Judas also, who betrayed him, stood with them.

6 As soon, then, as he had said to them: I am he: they went backward, and fell to the ground.

7 Again, therefore, he asked them: Whom seek ye? And they said: Jesus of Nazareth.

VER. 6. Jesus again shows the Jews his power, and works another miracle before them, to give them another opportunity of being converted; but they would 8 Jesus answered, I have told you, that I am he: if, therefore, you seek me, let these go their way.

9 That the word might be fulfilled which he said: *Of them whom thou hast given me, I have not lost any one.

10 Then Simon Peter having a sword, drew it, and struck the servant of the high priest, and cut off his right ear. And the name of the servant was Malchus.

11 Then Jesus said to Peter: Put up thy sword into the scabbard. The chalice which my Father hath given me, shall I not drink it?

12 Then the band, and the tribune, and the servants of the Jews, took Jesus, and bound him:

13 And they led him away to ^bAnnas first; for he was father-in-law to Caiphas, who was the high priest of that year.

14 Now Caiphas was he, ^cwho had given the counsel to the Jews: that it was expedient that one man should die for the people.

15 And Simon Peter followed Jesus, and so did another disciple. And that disciple was known to the high priest, and went in with Jesus into the court of the high priest.

16 But Peter stood at the door without. ^dThen the other disciple, who was known to the high priest, went out, and spoke to the portress, and brought in Peter.

17 And the maid that was portress, said to Peter: Art not thou also one of this man's disciples? He saith: I am not.

18 Now the servants and officers stood at a fire of coals, because it was cold, and warmed themselves: and with them was Peter also standing, and warming himself.

19 The high priest then asked Jesus of his disciples, and of his doctrine.

20 Jesus answered him: I have spoken openly to the world: I have always taught in the synagogue, and in the temple, whither all the Jews resort: and in private I have spoken nothing.

21 Why askest thou me? ask them who have heard what I have spoken to them: behold they know what things I have said.

22 And when he had said these things, one of the officers standing by, gave Jesus a blow, saying: Answerest thou the high priest so?

23 Jesus answered him: If I have spoken ill, give testimony of the evil: but if well, why strikest thou me?

not: they still persevere in their hardness of heart; he therefore now delivers himself up to them, as now they can have no excuse for their incredulity. S. Chrys.

VER. 15. Peter followed Jesus, but at a distance, for he was afraid. And so did another disciple. S. Jerom and S. Chrys., and after him, Theophyl., with some others, believe that this other disciple was S. John himself. Calmet.

VER. 17. S. John gives here Peter's first denial, which is reunited to the other two, by all the preceding evangelists. This is one of the circumstances, which the others may have neglected, to unite three similar facts, and relating to the same object. V.—S. Peter, the prince and head of the Church, was permitted to fall, to teach him to behave with more mildness and condescension to those, whom he would afterwards have to raise out of the same miserable state of sin. One weak and frail man is placed over another, that seeing him unhappily fallen, he may give him his kind and helping hand, to free him from that unhappy state, in which he knows himself to have been. S. Chrys.

VER. 24. Annas sent him bound to Caiphas. Christ was but a little while there: for both the box on the ear given to our Saviour, and S. Peter's denial, were at the house of Caiphas: so that S. John does not here observe the order of time. Wl.

VER. 28. That they might eat the Pasch. They who by the Pasch will 24 *And Annas sent him bound to Caiphas, the high priest.

25 And Simon Peter was standing, and warming himself. ^aThey said, therefore, to him: Art not thou also one of his disciples? He denied it, and said: I am not.

26 One of the servants of the high priest, a kinsman to him whose ear Peter cut off, said to him: Did I not see thee in the garden with him?

27 Then Peter again denied: and immediately the cock crew.

28 ^bThen they led Jesus from Caiphas to the governor's hall. And it was morning: and they went not into the hall, ^cthat they might not be defiled, but that they might eat the Pasch.

29 Pilate, therefore, went out to them, and said: What accusation bring you against this man?

30 They answered, and said to him: If he were not a malefactor, we would not have delivered him up to thee.

31 Pilate then said to them: Take him you, and judge him according to your law. The Jews, therefore, said to him: It is not lawful for us to put any one to death.

32 ^dThat the word of Jesus might be fulfilled, which he said, signifying what death he should die.

33 ^ePilate, therefore, went into the hall again, and called Jesus, and said to him: Art thou the king of the Jews?

34 Jesus answered: Sayest thou this thing of thyself, or have others told it thee of me?

35 Pilate answered: Am I a Jew? Thy nation and the chief priests have delivered thee up to me: what hast thou done?

36 Jesus answered: My kingdom is not of this world. If my kingdom were of this world, my servants would certainly strive that I should not be delivered to the Jews: but now my kingdom is not from hence.

37 Pilate, therefore, said to him: Art thou a king then? Jesus answered: Thou sayest that I am a king. For this was I born, and for this came I into the world: that I should give testimony to the truth: every one that is of the truth, heareth my voice.

38 Pilate saith to him: What is truth? And when he had said this, he went forth again to the Jews, and saith to them: I find no cause in him.

always understand the Paschal lamb, look upon it certain from these words, that the Scribes and Pharisees, at least, had deferred eating the Paschal lamb till Friday, the 15th day, in the evening: but there are passages in the Scripture, which show, that the word Pasch, or Phase, comprehends, not only the Paschal sacrifice of the lamb, but also all the sacrifices that were to be eaten with unleavened bread, during the seven days of the Paschal solemnity, as Deut. xvi. 2, Thou shalt offer up the Phase, or Pasch, to the Lord, of sheep and oxen. And 1 Par. xxxv. 8, They gave to the priests to make the Phase, or Pasch, altogether two thousand six hundred small cattle, and three hundred oxen. The oxen, therefore, were also given to make up the Pasch, and were comprehended by the word Pasch, or Phase. It might, therefore, be these Paschal sacrifices, and not the Paschal lamb, which the priests designed to partake of, and therefore would not enter into the palace of Pilate. See Tillemont against Lamy, on the second passage out of S. John, tom. 2, p. 696. See also the Lexicon of Mr. Heure, on the word Pâque. Wl.

40 Then they all cried again, saying: Not this man, but Barabbas. And Barabbas was a robber.

CHAP. XIX.

The continuation of the history of the Passion of Christ.

THEN, *therefore, Pilate took Jesus, and scourged him.

2 And the soldiers plating a crown of thorns, put it upon his head: and about him they put a purple garment.

3 And they came to him, and said: Hail king of the Jews: and they gave him blows.

4 Pilate, therefore, went forth again, and saith to them: behold I bring him forth to you, that you may know that I find no cause in him.

5 (So Jesus came forth bearing the crown of thorns, and the purple garment.) And he saith to them: Behold the man.

6 When the chief priests, therefore, and the officers, had seen him, they cried out, saying: Crucify him, crucify him. Pilate saith to them: Take him, you, and crucify him; for I find no cause in him.

7 The Jews answered him: We have a law; and according to the law he ought to die, because he made himself the Son of God.

8 When Pilate, therefore, had heard this saying, he feared the more.

9 And he entered into the hall again; and he said to Jesus: Whence art thou? But Jesus gave him no answer.

10 Pilate, therefore, said to him: Speakest thou not to me? knowest thou not that I have power to crucify thee, and I have power to release thee?

11 Jesus answered: Thou shouldst not have any power against me, unless it were given thee from above. Therefore, he that hath delivered me to thee, hath the greater sin.

12 And from thenceforth Pilate sought to release him. But the Jews cried out, saying: If thou release this man, thou art not Cæsar's friend. For whosoever maketh himself a king, speaketh against Cæsar.

13 Now when Pilate had heard these words, he CHAP. XIX. VER. 1. Pilate's motive for ordering our Saviour to be scourged, was no other than this; that the Jews might be satisfied with these his numerous sufferings, and might no longer seek his death. For the same reason, likewise, he permitted his soldiers to inflict those unheard of cruelties, related in the sequel. S. Aug. tract. 110, in Joan.

VER. 11. Unless it were given, or permitted thee from above. Therefore, he that delivered me to thee, hath the greater sin. Some expound this of Judas; others, rather of the high priest Caiaphas, with the Jewish council: for they could not be ignorant, that Jesus was their Messiah, having seen the miracles Jesus did, and knowing the predictions of the prophets. Wi.

VER. 14. The Parasceve of the Pasch; that is, the day before the Paschal sabbath. The eve of every sabbath was called the Parasceve, or day of preparation. But this was the eve of a high sabbath, viz. that which fell in the Paschal week. Ch.—It was about the sixth hour, when they crucified him. S. Mark, in his Gospel, says, it was at the third hour that Jesus was crucified. These two evangelists are easily reconciled, if we consider, that according to the custom of the Jews, all that took place between the third and sixth hour of their day, was said to have happened in the third hour; their days being divided into four parts of three hours each, in the same manner as the nights were into four watches, of three hours each. S. Mark, therefore, might say very well, that the crucifixion of our Saviour took place in the third hour; though it might have been towards the conclusion of this general division of the day: whilst S. John, with a reason equally as good, says, that it happened about the sixth hour. John Nicolaus, in his marginal notes on S. Thomas's Aurea Catena.

brought Jesus forth: and sat down in the judgment-seat, in the place that is called Lithostrotos, and in Hebrew, Gabbatha.

14 And it was the Parasceve of the Pasch, about the sixth hour, and he saith to the Jews: Behold your king.

15 But they cried out: Away with him, away with him, crucify him. Pilate saith to them: Shall I crucify your king? The chief priests answered: We have no king but Cæsar.

16 Then, therefore, he delivered him to them to be crucified. And they took Jesus, and led him forth.

17 *And bearing his own cross, he went forth to that place which is called Calvary, but in Hebrew, Golgotha:

18 Where they crucified him, and with him two others, one on each side, and Jesus in the midst.

19 And Pilate wrote a title also; and he put it upon the cross. And the writing was, JESUS OF NAZARETH, THE KING OF THE JEWS.

20 This title, therefore, many of the Jews read; because the place, where Jesus was crucified, was near to the city; and it was written in Hebrew, in Greek, and in Latin.

21 Then the chief priests of the Jews said to Pilate: Write not, The king of the Jews: but that he said, I am the king of the Jews.

22 Pilate answered: What I have written, I have written.

23 Then the soldiers, when they had crucified him, *took his garments, (and they made four parts, to every soldier a part,) and also his coat. Now the coat was without seam, woven from the top throughout.

24 They said then one to another: Let us not cut it but let us cast lots for it, whose it shall be; that the Scripture might be fulfilled, saying: *They have parted my garments among them; and upon my vesture they have cast lot. And the soldiers indeed did these things.

25 Now there stood by the cross of Jesus, his mother, and his mother's sister, Mary of Cleophas, and Mary Magdalene.

26 When Jesus, therefore, saw his mother, and the disciple standing, whom he loved, he saith to his mother: Woman, Behold thy son.

* Matt. xxvii. 33; Mark xv. 22; Luke xxiii. 33.—d Matt. xxvii. 33; Mark xv. 24; Luke xxiii. 34.—e Psal. xxi. 19.

VER. 20. As there were probably many Gentiles at Jerusalem at this time, on account of the festival day, this inscription was written in three different languages, that all might be able to read it. S. Chrys. hom. 84, in Joan.—It was written in Hebrew, on account of the Jews, who gloried in the law of God; in Greek, on account of the wise men of all nations; and in Latin, because of the Romans, who at that time commanded almost every nation of the earth. S. Aug. tract. 118, in Joan.

VER. 23. They made four parts. Christ's upper garment had seams, which the four executioners could easily divide: but his under garment, or vest, was without seam, so that being cut, it would have been of no use. Wi.—This coat without seam is a figure of the unity of the Church. S. Cyp. de Unit. Eccles.—S. Alexander, in the fourth century, says of the Arians, That seamless garment, which the murderers of Jesus Christ would not divide, these men have dared to rip asunder. Τοῦ ἀσπρετον χιτῶνα σχίσαι ἐτολμήσαν.

VER. 25. There stood by the cross . . . his mother. And so near to him, that from the cross he both spoke to her, and also to S. John. Wi.

VER. 26. Though there were other holy women standing by the cross, he takes notice of none but his mother, teaching us, by this, what we owe to our parents. For although it is our duty to disown them, when they place obstacles in our way to salvation; yet when they do not thus impede us, we owe every thing to them, and must prefer them to all. S. Chrys. hom. 84, in Joan.—We learn also here, what should be our respect and confidence in this Virgin Mother, so highly honoured by her Divine Son.

VER. 27. The disciple took her to his own home, or into his own care, not for his mother, by the Greek expression.* See S. Chrys. and S. Aug. Wi.

27 After that, he saith to the disciple: Behold thy mother. And from that hour the disciple took her to his own.

28 Afterwards Jesus knowing that all things were now accomplished, *that the Scripture might be fulfilled, said: I thirst.

29 Now there was a vessel set there full of vinegar. And they putting a sponge full of vinegar about hyssop, offered it to his mouth.

30 When Jesus, therefore, had taken the vinegar, he said: It is consummated. And bowing his head, he gave up the ghost.

31 Then the Jews, (because it was the Parasceve,) that the bodies might not remain upon the cross on the sabbath day, (for that was a great sabbath day,) besought Pilate that their legs might be broken, and that they might be taken away.

32 The soldiers, therefore, came; and they broke the legs of the first, and of the other that was crucified with him.

33 But when they came to Jesus, and saw that he was already dead, they did not break his legs.

34 But one of the soldiers opened his side with a spear, and immediately there came out blood and water.

35 And he that saw it, gave testimony; and his testimony is true. And he knoweth that he saith true; that you also may believe.

36 For these things were done, that the Scripture might be fulfilled: *You shall not break a bone of him.

37 And again another Scripture saith: * They shall look on him whom they pierced.

38 *And after these things, Joseph of Arimathea (because he was a disciple of Jesus, but in private, for fear of the Jews) besought Pilate that he might take away the body of Jesus. And Pilate permitted him. He came, therefore, and took away the body of Jesus.

39 And Nicodemus also came; *he who at first came to Jesus by night, bringing a mixture of myrrh and aloes, about a hundred pound.

40 They took, therefore, the body of Jesus, and bound it in linen cloths with the spices, as it is the custom with the Jews to bury.

41 And there was in the place, where he was crucified, a garden; and in the garden a new sepulchre, wherein no man had yet been laid.

42 There, therefore, by reason of the Parasceve of the Jews, they laid Jesus, because the sepulchre was nigh at hand.

CHAP. XX.

Christ's resurrection, and manifestation to his disciples.

AND * on the first day of the week, Mary Magdalene cometh in the morning, it being yet dark, to the sepulchre; and she saw the stone taken away from the sepulchre.

2 She ran, therefore, and cometh to Simon Peter, and to the other disciple whom Jesus loved, and saith to them: They have taken away the Lord out of the sepulchre, and we know not where they have laid him.

3 Peter, therefore, went out, and that other disciple, and they came to the sepulchre.

4 And they both did run together, and that other disciple outran Peter, and came first to the sepulchre.

5 And when he stooped down, he saw the linen cloths lying; but yet he went not in.

6 Then cometh Simon Peter, following him, and went into the sepulchre, and saw the linen cloths lying,

7 And the napkin, that had been about his head, not lying with the linen cloths, but apart, wrapt up into one place.

8 Then that other disciple also went in, who came first to the sepulchre: and he saw, and believed.

9 For as yet they knew not the Scripture, that he must rise again from the dead.

10 So the disciples went away again to their home

11 *But Mary stood without at the sepulchre, weeping. Whilst she was then weeping, she stooped down, and looked into the sepulchre:

12 And she saw two angels in white, sitting, one at the head, and one at the feet, where the body of Jesus had been laid.

VER. 31. Because it was the Parasceve. It is also called, (ver. 14,) the day of preparation of the Pasch. Lit. the Parasceve of the Pasch. And, (ver. 31,) the Jews, because it was the preparation, that the bodies might not remain on the cross on the sabbath, for that was a great sabbath day, &c. Some pretend, by these expressions, to prove, that Friday, the year Christ suffered, was not the first and great day of the feast of Azymis, but only the day of preparation, and that on Friday night the Jews eat the Paschal lamb, and not the night before, or Thursday night, as Christ had done with his disciples. But according to the common exposition, Friday is here called the day of preparation, for the great and solemn sabbath, which happened in the Paschal week. See Tillamont on the 5th passage out of John, p. 698, § 11, and 12. Wi.

VER. 34. There came out blood and water, which naturally could not come from a dead body. Wi.—Hence it is, that the sacred mysteries flow; as often, therefore, as thou approachest the awful cup, approach it as if thou wert going to drink from thy Saviour's sacred side. S. Chrys. hom. 84, in Joan.—The holy Fathers say, that the spouse of Jesus Christ was here taken out of his side, whilst sleeping on the cross, as Eve was from Adam's side, when he was cast asleep in Paradise.

VER. 36. You shall not break a bone of him. This, which was literally spoken of the Paschal lamb, (Exod. xii. 16,) the evangelist applies to Christ, of whom the lamb was a figure. Wi.—This had been said of the Paschal lamb, which was a figure of Jesus Christ. Exod. xii. 46, and Numb. ix. 12.

VER. 37. This text is from Zac. xii. 10, and seems to refer most literally to Jesus Christ.

VER. 39. About a hundred pound. This seems a great quantity. It may be.

they did not use it all. And besides, it was the custom of the Jews, at their great burials, to cover the body with spices and perfumes. Wi.

VER. 41. This is added, lest it should be said, that it was not Christ, but some other, that rose from the dead; or at least, that he rose by the virtue of some other person reposing there. Calmet.

CHAP. XX. VER. 1. As our Saviour had been interred in great haste, the holy women, who had before accompanied Jesus in all his journeys, brought perfumes to embalm his sacred body again, in a manner more proper, than Nicodemus and Joseph of Arimathea had been able to do before. S. John makes mention of Mary Magdalene only, because it was his intention to give a particular relation of all that she did: but we learn from the other evangelists, that there were three holy women at the sepulchre together, viz. Mary Magdalene, Mary, the mother of James, and Salome. Calmet.—This was on the first day of the week, the morrow of the sabbath. V.

VER. 5. He saw the linen cloths lying. S. Chrys. takes notice, that Christ's body being buried with myrrh, the linen would stick as fast to the body as pitch, so that it would be impossible to steal, or take away the body, without the linen cloths. Wi.

VER. 8. He saw, and believed. He did not yet believe that Jesus was risen from the dead, because he was still ignorant that he was to rise from the dead. For although the apostles had so often heard their Divine Master speak in the most plain terms of his resurrection, still being so much accustomed to parables, they 13 They say to her: Woman, why weepest thou? She saith to them: Because they have taken away my Lord, and I know not where they have laid him.

14 When she had said these words, she turned herself back, and saw Jesus standing: and she knew not that it was Jesus.

15 Jesus saith to her: Woman, why weepest thou? whom seekest thou? She thinking that it was the gardener, saith to him: Sir, if thou hast taken him away, tell me where thou hast laid him: and I will take him away.

16 Jesus saith to her: Mary. She turning, saith to him: Rabboni, (that is to say, Master).

17 Jesus saith to her: Do not touch me, for I have not yet ascended to my Father: but go to my brethren; and say to them: I ascend to my Father and to your Father, to my God and your God.

18 Mary Magdalene cometh, telling the disciples: I have seen the Lord, and these things he said to me.

19 Now when it was late that same day, being the first day of the week, and the doors were shut, where the disciples were gathered together for fear of the Jews: Jesus came and stood in the midst, and said to them: Peace be to you.

20 And when he had said this, he showed them his hands, and his side. The disciples therefore, were glad, when they saw the Lord.

21 And he said to them again: Peace be to you. As the Father hath sent me, I also send you.

22 When he had said this, he breathed on them: and he said to them: Receive ye the Holy Ghost:

23 Whose sins you shall forgive, they are forgiven them: and whose you shall retain, they are retained.

24 Now Thomas, one of the twelve, who is called Didymus, was not with them when Jesus came.

25 The other disciples, therefore, said to him: We have seen the Lord. But he said to them: Unless I shall see in his hands the print of the nails, and put my finger into the place of the nails, and put my hand into his side I will not believe.

26 And after eight days, his disciples were again within, and Thomas with them. Jesus cometh, the doors being shut, and stood in the midst, and said: Peace be to you.

27 Then he saith to Thomas: Put in thy finger hither, and see my hands, and bring hither thy hand, and put it into my side: and be not incredulous, but faithful.

28 Thomas answered, and said to him: My Lord, and my God.

29 Jesus saith to him: Because thou hast seen me,

* Mark xvi. 14; Luke xxiv. 36; 1 Cor. xv. 5.

b Matt. xviii. 18.

did not understand, and imagined something else was meant by these words. S. Aug. tract. 120, in Joan.

VER. 15. If thou hast taken him away. Thinking him, as the evangelist remarks, to be the gardener, how comes it, that without saying whom she sought, she asks if he had taken him away? Because such was the ardour of her love, that she could not imagine any one could think of any other but him, of whom her own mind was so full. S. Greg. hom. 25, in Evan.

VER. 16. Jesus saith to her: Mary. Magdalene, now in grief and tears, knew not Jesus, till he called upon her by her name, and with his usual voice: then, with joy, she cried out, Rabboni, Master. And Jesus saith to her, Touch me not, &c. The meaning of which words seems to be: I am not yet leaving thee, nor ascending to the Father, so that thou mayest have time enough to embrace my feet afterwards; now go to my disciples, &c. Wi.

VER. 17. I will not leave you again; be not in a hurry to touch me; you shall all have this pleasure. I will remain with you some time, before my ascension. Announce my resurrection to my apostles. You shall see me again. This is the interpretation most modern commentators put upon this place. Calmet.

VER. 19. And the doors were shut, or being shut; and remaining still shut, his glorified body entered by penetration through the doors, as he did at his resurrection. Maldonate takes notice, that Calvin was the first that denied this, against the belief of all the ancient Fathers and interpreters, who call this a miracle of Divine power. Wi.—The same power, which could bring Christ's whole body, entire in all its dimensions, through the doors, can, without the least question, make the same body really present in the sacrament; though both the one and he other be above our comprehension. Ch.

VER. 21. As the Father hath sent me. The word mission, when applied to our Saviour Christ, sometimes signifies his eternal procession from the Father, and sometimes his mission, as he was sent into the world to become man, and the Redeemer of mankind: the first mission agrees to him, as he is the eternal Son of God, the second, as he was man, or as he is both God and man. The mission which Christ here gives his apostles, is like to this latter mission, with this great difference, that graces and Divine gifts were bestowed on Christ, even as he was man, without measure: and the apostles had a much lesser share in both these missions. See S. Aug. l. 4, de Trin. c. 19, 20, tom. 4, p. 829, and seq. Wi.—Jesus Christ here shows his commission, and so giveth power to his apostles to forgive sins, as when he gave them commission to preach and baptize throughout the world, he made mention of his own power. Hence, whosoever denies the apostles, and their successors, the right of preaching, baptizing, and remitting sins, must consequently deny that Christ, as man, had the power to do the same. S. Cyprian, in the third cent. Ep. 73, says, "for the Lord, in the first place, gave to S. Peter, on whom he built his Church, super quem aedificavit Ecclesiam, the power that what he loosed on earth, should be loosed also in heaven. And after his resurrection, he speaks also to his apostles, saying, As the Father sent me, &c., whose sins you shall forgive," &c. Why, on this occasion, passing over the other apostles, does Jesus Christ address Peter alone? Because he was the mouth, and head of the apostles. S. Chrys. de Saerd. l. 2, c. 1.

VER. 22. Receive ye the Holy Ghost. It was said, (John vii. 39,) that the spirit was not yet given, because Jesus was not glorified. The sense must needs be, that the Holy Spirit was not given in that solemn manner, nor with so large an effusion of spiritual gifts and graces, till the day of Pentecost, after Christ's ascension: but the just, at all times, from the beginning of the world, were sanctified by the grace of the Holy Ghost, as no doubt the apostles were, before this time. Now at this present, he gave them the power of forgiving sins. Wi.

VER. 23. Whose sins you shall forgive, &c. These words clearly express the power of forgiving sins, which, as God, he gave to his apostles, and to their successors, bishops and priests, to forgive sins in his name, as his ministers, and instruments, even though they are sinners themselves. For in this, they act not by their own power, nor in their own name, but in the name of God, who, as the principal cause, always remitteth sins. This is generally allowed to be done by God's ministers in the sacrament of baptism, as to the remission of original sin; and the Catholic Church has always held the same of God's ministers, in the sacrament of penance. (See the Protestant Common Prayer Book, in the Visitation of the Sick.)—Whose sins you shall retain, they are retained: by which we see, that to priests is given a power to be exercised, not only by forgiving, but also by retaining; not only by absolving and loosing, but also by binding, by refusing, or deferring absolution, according to the dispositions that are found in sinners, when they accuse themselves of their sins. From hence must needs follow an obligation on the sinner's part, to declare, and confess their sins in particular, to the ministers of God, who are appointed the spiritual judges, and physicians of their souls. A judge must know the cause, and a physician the distemper; the one to pronounce a just sentence, the other to prescribe suitable remedies. Wi.

VER. 25. I will not believe. S. Cyril thinks that the grief and trouble S. Thomas was under, might partly excuse his want of belief: however, we may take notice, with S. Gregory, that his backwardness in believing, was permitted for the good of Christians in general, that thereby they might be more convinced of Christ's resurrection. Wi.

VER. 27. Put in thy finger hither. The evangelist does not say that S. Thomas went and touched Christ's body, though it is very probable he did as he was ordered. But how could a body that entered in, when the doors were shut, be felt, or be palpable? S. Chrys.† answers, that Christ at that time permitted his body to be palpable, and to resist another body, to induce S. Thomas to believe the resurrection; and that when he pleased, his body could not be felt.

VER. 28. My Lord, and my God; that is, I confess thee to be my Lord, and my God; and with the Greek article, to be him, that is, the Lord, and the God. Wi.

Thomas, thou hast believed: blessed are they that have not seen, and have believed.

30 *Many other signs also did Jesus in the sight of his disciples, which are not written in this book.

31 But these are written that you may believe that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God: and that believing you may have life in his name.

CHAP. XXI.

Christ manifests himself to his disciples by the sea side, and gives Peter the charge of his sheep.

AFTER this Jesus showed himself again to the disciples at the sea of Tiberias. And he showed himself after this manner:

2 There were together Simon Peter, and Thomas, who is called Didymus, and Nathanael, who was of Cana, in Galilee, and the sons of Zebedee, and two others of his disciples.

3 Simon Peter said to them: I go a fishing. They say to him: We also come with thee. And they went forth and entered into a ship: and that night they caught nothing.

4 But when the morning was come, Jesus stood on the shore: yet the disciples knew not that it was Jesus.

5 And Jesus said to them: Children, have you any meat? and they answered him: No.

6 He saith to them: Cast the net on the right side of the ship, and you shall find. They cast, therefore: and now they were not able to draw it for the multitude of fishes.

7 That disciple, therefore, whom Jesus loved, said to Peter: It is the Lord. Simon Peter, when he heard that it was the Lord, girded his coat about him, (for he was naked,) and cast himself into the sea.

8 But the other disciples came in the ship, (for they were not far from the land, but as it were two hundred cubits,) drawing the net with fishes.

* Infra, xxi. 25.

9 As soon, then, as they came to land, they saw bonfires lying, and a fish laid thereon, and bread.

10 Jesus saith to them: Bring hither of the fishes which you have now caught.

11 Simon Peter went up, and drew the net to land, full of great fishes, one hundred and fifty-three. And although there were so many, the net was not broken.

12 Jesus saith to them: Come, and dine. And none of them who were at meat, durst ask him: Who art thou? knowing that it was the Lord.

13 And Jesus cometh and taketh bread, and giveth them, and fish in like manner.

14 This is now the third time that Jesus was manifested to his disciples, after he was risen from the dead.

15 When, therefore, they had dined, Jesus saith to Simon Peter: Simon, son of John, lovest thou me more than these? He saith to him: Yea, Lord, thou knowest that I love thee. He saith to him: Feed my lambs.

16 He saith to him again: Simon, son of John, lovest thou me? He saith to him: Yea, Lord, thou knowest that I love thee. He saith to him: Feed my lambs.

17 He saith to him the third time: Simon, son of John, lovest thou me? Peter was grieved, because he said to him the third time, Lovest thou me? And he said to him: Lord, thou knowest all things: thou knowest that I love thee. He said to him: Feed my sheep.

18 Amen, amen, I say to thee: when thou wast younger thou didst gird thyself, and didst walk where thou wouldst: But when thou shalt be old, thou shalt stretch forth thy hands, and another shall gird thee, and lead thee whither thou wouldst not.

CHAP. XXI. VER. 3. How comes it that Peter, after his conversion, should return to his fishing, when Jesus Christ had said, that he that sets his hand to the plough, and looks back, is not worthy of the kingdom of heaven? The employments they applied to before their conversion, without being guilty of sin, these they might, without fault, exercise, after their conversion: therefore Peter returned to his fishing; but S. Matthew never returned to his custom-house, because, when once converted, we never can be allowed to give ourselves to those employments, which of themselves lead to sin. And there are many pursuits, which can scarcely, or not at all, be followed without sin. S. Greg. hom. 24, in Evan.

VER. 5. Have you any meat? * Have you any thing to eat? This is what is literally signified, both in the Latin and in the Greek text. Wi.

VER. 9. Hot coals lying, and a fish laid thereon, and bread. The fish caught in the net were not yet drawn to land. These things, then, were created out of nothing, or miraculously transported thither by the Divine power. Wi.

VER. 14. This is now the third time that Jesus was manifested to his disciples. He had appeared to them more than thrice, even the very day of his resurrection. Matt. xxviii. 16. Here it is called the third time, either because it was the third different day, or because it was the third time that he had then appeared to a pretty many together. After this, he appeared to them frequently, and conversed with them for forty days, till his ascension. See Acts i. 3; 1 Cor. xv. 5. Wi.—This must be understood of the third day, or of the third time, that our Saviour appeared to his apostles assembled: the first day, being the day of his resurrection; the second, eight days after, when S. Thomas saw, and believed; and on this day of their fishing. S. Aug. tract. 122, in Joan.—The evangelists relate ten different manifestations of our Saviour, after his resurrection. First, he was seen by the women at the sepulchre; secondly, he was again seen by the same holy women, returning from the sepulchre; thirdly, by S. Peter; fourthly, by the two going to Emmaus; fifthly, by many at Jerusalem, when Thomas was not with them; sixthly, at the time when S. Thomas saw him; seventhly, at the sea of Tiberias; eighthly, by the eleven, on a mountain of Galilee, according to S. Matthew; ninthly, according to S. Mark, by the disciples, at their refreshment, because he was going to sup with them no more; and tenthly, on the day of his ascension, raised from the earth into heaven. S. Aug. de Concord. Ev. lib. 3, c. 25.

VER. 15. Simon, son of John, lovest thou me more than these? That is, more than any one of these love me. Christ puts this question thrice to S. Peter, that this triple protestation of love, says S. Aug., might correspond to his triple denial. S. Peter did not answer that he loved him more than the rest did, which he could not know, but modestly said, Yea, Lord, thou knowest I love thee: and the third time, thou knowest all things, and the hearts of all men, thou knowest how much I love thee. At every protestation, Jesus answered, Feed my lambs; and the third time, Feed my sheep. To feed, in the style of the Scriptures, is to guide, rule, and govern. S. Ambrose, and some others, take notice, as if by the lambs might be understood the people, and by the sheep, those placed over them, as bishops, priests, &c.; but others make no such difference in this place, betwixt lambs and sheep, only as comprehending all the members of Christ's Church, of what condition soever, even the rest of the apostles. For here it was that Christ gave to S. Peter that power, which he had promised him, (Matt. xvi. 18,) that is, He now made S. Peter head of his whole Church, as he had insinuated at the first meeting, when S. Andrew brought him to our Saviour, when he changed his name from Simon to Peter; again, when he chose him, and made him the first of his twelve apostles; but particularly, when he said, Thou art Peter, (a rock,) and upon this rock will I build my Church, &c. Upon this account the Catholic Church, from the very first ages, hath always revered and acknowledged the supreme power of the successors of S. Peter, in spirituals, over all Christian Churches. This appears even by the writings of Tertullian, of S. Irenaeus, of S. Cyprian, of the greatest doctors and bishops both of the west and east, of S. Jerom, S. Augustine, of S. Chrysostom, in several places, of the first general Councils, particularly of the great Council of Chalcedon, &c. Wi.

VER. 16, 17. Feed my sheep. Our Lord had promised the spiritual supremacy to S. Peter (S. Matt. xvi. 19); and here he fulfils that promise, by charging him with the superintendency of all his sheep, without exception; and consequently of his whole flock, that is, of his whole Church. Ch.

VER. 18. Thou shalt stretch forth thy hands . . . signifying by what death he should glorify God; that is, that a cross should be the instrument of his death and martyrdom.—Whither thou wouldst not: which is no more than to say, that a violent death is against the natural inclination of any man, even though he be ever so willing, and disposed to undergo it. Wi.—By this is meant the martyrdom of S. Peter, which took place thirty-four years after this. He was first cast into prison, and then led out to punishment, as Christ had foretold him. He stretched out his arms to be chained, and again he stretched them out, when he was crucified; for he died by the cross, as the ancients assure us. Calmet.

should glorify God. And when he had said this, he saith to him: Follow me.

20 Peter turning about, saw that disciple whom Jesus loved, following, "who also leaned on his breast at the supper, and said: Lord, who is he that shall betray thee?"

21 Him, therefore, when Peter had seen, he saith to Jesus: Lord, and what shall this man do?

22 Jesus saith to him: So I will have him to remain all I come; what is it to thee? follow thou me.

23 This saying, therefore, went abroad among the bre-

VER. 22. Jesus saith: So I will have him remain.† &c. That is, in case I will have him remain; or, as it is in the Greek, if I will have him remain, what is that to thee? It is thy duty, and thy concern, to follow me. Wi.—When Christ told S. Peter to follow him, he meant, that he should go like himself to the death of the cross; but when he says of S. John, So I will have him to remain till I come, he insinuates that his beloved disciple should not undergo a violent death; but remain in the world, till he should visit him by death, and conduct him to glory. In the Greek it is, if I will have him to remain; and this is the true reading, according to Estius, and Jansenius, bishop of Ghent, authorized by many Latin copies.

VER. 23. This saying, therefore; § that is, a report went about among the disciples, that John was not to die. But S. John himself, as S. Aug. and S. Chrys. observe, took care to tell us, that Christ said not so. Nor do we find any sufficient grounds to think that S. John is not dead. Wi.

VER. 24. This is that disciple, &c. Some conjecture, that these words were added by the Church of Ephesus. But the ancient Fathers, S. Chrys., S. Cyril, S. Aug., expound them as they do the rest, without any such remark. Nor is it unusual for a person to write in this manner of himself, as it were of a third person. It is what S. John hath done of himself, chap. xix. 35. Wi.

VER. 25. The world|| itself, I think, &c. It is an hyperbolical way of speaking, says S. Cyril, common enough, even in the Holy Scriptures; and only signifies, that a very great number of things, which Christ did and said, have not been recorded. Wi.

thren, that that disciple dieth not. And Jesus did not say to him: He dieth not: but, So I will have him to remain till I come; what is it to thee?

24 This is that disciple who giveth testimony of these things, and hath written these things: and we know that his testimony is true.

25 ^b But there are also many other things which Jesus did: which if they were written every one, the world itself, I think, would not be able to contain the books that should be written.

THE ACTS OF THE APOSTLES.

LUKE, after giving us the history of the life, actions, miracles, sufferings, and instructions of Jesus Christ, in his Gospel, here gives us the life and actions of the apostles, the primitive Christians, and particularly all that relates to S. Paul, by way of an appendix. And what could he give more useful or more important to the Church, whether we consider the noble examples he offers for our imitation, or the excellent lessons for our improvement in spiritual wisdom? He describes in this book, the accomplishment of many things that had been predicted by Jesus Christ, the descent of the Holy Ghost, the prodigious change effected in the minds and hearts of the apostles: we behold here the model of Christian perfection, in the lives of the first Christians, and the practice of the most eminent virtues, in the conduct of the blessed apostles; the miraculous operations of the Holy Spirit, in the conversion of the Gentiles, and this wonder of wonders, the foundation of the holy Catholic Church, the establishment of the spiritual kingdom of God, promised through all the inspired oracles, and the daily addition which the Lord made to his Church, of such as should be saved. Chap. ii. 47, and xv. 5.—S. Luke has entitled this work, The Acts of the Apostles, that we may seek therein, says S. Chrysostom, (tom. 5, hom. 12,) not so much the miracles that the apostles performed, as their good deeds and eminent virtues. In appearing to give us a simple history, says S. Jerom, this holy physician furnishes us with as many remedies, to cure the maladies of our souls, as he gives us words for our instruction. Ep. 103.—It is thought, that his principal design was to oppose to the false acts of the apostles, that were then in circulation, a true and authentic history of the actions of S. Peter and S. Paul. The Catholic Church has ever held this work in such great esteem, that it has not only superseded every pretended history of the kind that preceded it, but also every adscititious one that has succeeded it. S. Aug. de Consen. Evang. l. 4, c. 8.—It is very probable that S. Luke wrote his Acts at Rome, whilst he was near S. Paul, during the time of his confinement, for he remained with him till his deliverance. There can be no doubt that the work was written in Greek, and in a more pure and polished style, than we find in any other writer of the New Testament. S. Luke generally cites the Septuagint, apparently because he was ignorant of the Hebrew; and because, S. Paul more frequently having to preach to the Gentiles, he preferred citing the sacred text in the language known in common, sooner than in Hebrew, which was understood by few. See S. Jer. in Isa. vi., and again, Tradit. Hebr. in Gen. xlv.—The Catholic Church has ever admitted this book into the Canon of Scriptures; though many heretics, says S. Augustin, have rejected it, Ep. 253, and l. de Util. Cred. 7. S. Chrysostom (hom. 1, in Acta) complains that this book, in his time, was not sufficiently attended to, which he esteems as no less useful than the gospel itself.—The Acts have not uniformly held the same place in the Testament which they hold at present. Sometimes this book was inserted immediately before the book of Revelations, as S. Augustin and others insinuate. At other times, we find it between the Epistles of S. Paul and the canonical epistles. Some persons express their surprise that S. Luke, who was the inseparable companion of S. Paul, has not given the account of S. Paul's martyrdom. S. Chrysostom (hom. 1, in Acta) gives an excellent solution: "The apostles, and other apostolic men, wrote little, but did a great deal." The martyrdom of S. Paul, that took place in the public theatre of Rome itself, and before the eyes of all the Christians of this capital of the world, could not remain unknown, but the voyages and other circumstances of his life, too useful to the Church to be suffered to pass into oblivion, called for the exertions of S. Luke's eloquent pen, which, though admirably accommodated to an historic design, is not wholly free from Hebraisms and Syriacisms.—The Acts of the Apostles include the history of the infant Church, from the day of our Lord's ascension into heaven, till the deliverance of S. Paul, two years after his arrival at Rome, i. e. a space of thirty years, from the year 33, to the year 63 of Jesus Christ, or, from the 19th year of Tiberius, till the 9th year of Nero. It may be divided into four parts. In the first eight chapters, S. Luke gives the origin and progress of the Christian Church among the Jews. From the 9th to the 16th, he shows how widely it was spread among the Gentiles: from the 16th to the 20th, the diverse peregrinations of S. Paul, till his last journey to Jerusalem: and from the 20th to the end, with what patience he underwent innumerable sufferings, trials, and indignities, with what magnanimity he made head against the violent surges of persecution, and his astonishing equanimity under every possible calamity.—This account, which is not continued beyond his two years, imprisonment in Rome, contains a general sketch of the history of the Church during the epoch it describes of thirty years. The leading facts therein contained are, the choice of Matthias to be an apostle, in the room of Judas; the descent of the Holy Ghost on the day of Pentecost; the preaching, miracles, and sufferings of the apostles at Jerusalem; the conversion of S. Paul; the call of Cornelius, the first Gentile convert; the persecution of the Christians, by Herod Agrippas; the preaching of Paul and Barnabas to the Gentiles, by the express command of the Holy Ghost; the decree made at Jerusalem, declaring that circumcision, and conformity to other Jewish rites and ceremonies, were not necessary in Gentile converts; the miraculous cures performed by the handkerchiefs and aprons which had only touched the body of S. Paul; whilst the latter part of the book is exclusively confined to the history of S. Paul, of whom, as we have already seen, S. Luke was the constant companion for several years.—The place of its publication is doubtful. A learned prelate advances, that the probability appears to be in favour of Greece, though some contend for Alexandria, in Egypt. This latter opinion rests upon the subscriptions at the end of some Greek manuscripts, and of the copies of the Syriac version; but the best critics think, that these subscriptions, which are also affixed to other books of the New Testament, deserve but little weight, and in this case they are not supported by any ancient authority. But the sentiment of this learned prelate does not bias the opinion we gave at the beginning, and which we find confirmed by Alban Butler, in his Life of S. Luke, vol. x. p. 432, where he says, "that S. Luke attended S. Paul to Rome, whither he was sent prisoner from Jerusalem in 61. The apostle remained there two years in chains; but was permitted to live in a house which he hired, though under the custody of a constant guard; and there he preached to those who daily resorted to hear him. From ancient writings and monuments belonging to the Church of S. Mary in via lata, which is an ancient title of a Cardinal Deacon, Baronius, in his Annals ad an. 55, and Aringhi, in his Roma Subterranea, l. 3, c. 41, tell us, that this Church was built upon the spot where S. Paul then lodged, and where S. Luke wrote the Acts of the Apostles."

CHAPTER I.

The ascension of Christ. Matthias is chosen in place of Judas.

THE former treatise I made, O Theophilus, of all things, which Jesus began to do and to teach,

2 Until the day ^aon which, giving commands by the Holy Ghost to the apostles whom he had chosen, he was taken up :

3 To whom also he showed himself alive after his passion, by many proofs, for forty days appearing to them, and speaking of the kingdom of God.

4 And eating with them, ^bhe commanded them, that they should not depart from Jerusalem, but should wait for the promise of the Father, ^cwhich you have heard (saith he) by my mouth.

5 For John indeed baptized with water, but you shall be baptized with the Holy Ghost not many days hence.

6 They, therefore, who were come together, asked him, saying : Lord, wilt thou at this time restore again the kingdom to Israel ?

7 But he said to them : It is not for you to know the times or moments, which the Father hath put in his own power :

8 ^dBut you shall receive the power of the Holy Ghost coming upon you, ^eand you shall be witnesses unto me in Jerusalem, and in all Judea and Samaria, and even to the uttermost part of the earth.

9 And when he had said these things, while they looked on, he was raised up : and a cloud received him out of their sight.

10 And whilst they were beholding him going up ^fto heaven, behold two men stood by them in white garments ;

11 Who also said : Ye men of Galilee, why stand you looking up to heaven ? This Jesus, who is taken up from you into heaven, so shall he come as you have seen him going into heaven.

12 Then they returned to Jerusalem, from the mount that is called Olivet, which is near Jerusalem, within a sabbath-day's journey.

13 And when they had entered in, they went up into an upper room, where there remained Peter and John, James and Andrew, Philip and Thomas, Bartholomew and Matthew, James, of Alphaeus, and Simon Zelotes, and Jude, of James.

14 All these were persevering with one mind in prayer with the women, and Mary, the mother of Jesus, and his brethren.

15 In those days Peter, rising up in the midst of the brethren, said : (now the number of persons together, was about a hundred and twenty.)

16 Men, brethren, the Scripture must be fulfilled, ^gwhich the Holy Ghost foretold by the mouth of David,

Luke iii. 16; John i. 26.—^d Infra, ii. 2.—^e Luke xxiv. 48.—^f Psal. xl. 10; John xiii. 18.

CHAP. I. VER. 1. S. Luke, who was the author of this history, alludes, in this verse, to his Gospel, which he calls his first discourse. In that he informs us, not only of the actions, but also of the doctrines of our Saviour. These words, to do and to teach, are the abridgment of the whole gospel : here he gives us the Acts of the Apostles, that is, a history of their travels and preaching. In the beginning of this work he speaks of all the apostles, and what they did before their dispersion. As soon as he comes to the mention of S. Paul, he takes notice of no one else, but is entirely taken up with the narrative of his actions. He addresses his book to Theophilus, which signifies a friend of God, or one who loves God, as if he intended to dedicate it to all the faithful, who believed in, and loved God. But it is most probable, that this was some distinct person, well known to S. Luke, and illustrious for his birth, because he gives him the title of κράτιστε, most excellent. Calmet.

VER. 2. Until the day on which, giving commands by the Holy Ghost to the apostles whom he had chosen, he was taken up. As the Scripture was written without distinction of verses, and without any stops, or commas, (which were added afterwards,) the construction, and joining of the words in this verse, is ambiguous. The question is, with what part of the verse these words, by the Holy Ghost, are to be joined. The sense might be, 1. That he was taken up by the Holy Ghost : but this is generally rejected. 2. That he gave his commands by the Holy Ghost to his apostles ; that is, says S. Chrys., that he gave them spiritual commands, that came from the Holy Ghost, or from his Holy Spirit. 3. The most probable exposition seems to be, that he gave his special commands to his apostles, or to those whom he chose to be his apostles, by the Holy Ghost, or by his holy and Divine Spirit. Wi.

VER. 3. Appearing, &c. Why did he not appear to all, but only to his disciples ? Because to many of them, who did not know the mystery, he would have seemed a phantom. For if the disciples themselves were diffident, and terrified, and required to touch him with their hands, how would others have been affected ? But we know from their miracles the truth of the resurrection, which is made evident to all succeeding generations.

VER. 4. And eating with them. ^aThis is a literal translation from the vulgar

Latin. But the Prot. translation, from some Greek copies, would have it, And being assembled together, he commanded them, &c. S. Jer. says, the derivation of the Greek word, is from eating salt together. Wi.

VER. 5. Baptized with the Holy Ghost, that is, cleansed and sanctified by the plentiful graces he shall pour upon you. Wi.

VER. 6, 7. Wilt thou at this time restore again the kingdom to Israel ? Some of them, as S. Chrys. observes, had still their thoughts upon a temporal kingdom of the Messias. Wi.

VER. 9. He was raised up. Raised himself up, and ascended, &c. Wi.

VER. 11. So shall he come, as you have seen him going. This word going, says S. Chrys., sufficiently intimates, that he ascended by his own power : for so will he come by his own power to judge the world. Wi.—Jesus Christ shall come on the last day, in the same body, in the same majesty, to judge the living and the dead. This he had likewise promised, in more than one place of the Gospel, speaking of the vengeance which he will exercise on the city of Jerusalem. S. Jerom, S. Hilary, and many other ancients, have believed that the Son of God will appear again on Mount Olivet, and that all people shall be assembled to judgment. S. Jerom, super Joel iii. 2. S. Hilary, super Matt. xxiv. 32.

VER. 12. Sabbath-day's journey. It cannot now be precisely determined what this distance was, but it is most probable that it was about a mile. On particular occasions, it perhaps was allowed to exceed a little. Calmet.

VER. 13, 14. Into an upper room, to be more retired in prayer. There they were persevering with one mind in prayer. These few words denote to us three dispositions to receive the Holy Ghost. 1. Prayer. 2. Perseverance in it. 3. To be of one mind, perfectly united in charity, and the love of one another. Wi.—This is the last mention that is made in Scripture of the blessed Virgin Mary. She lived the rest of her time with the Christians, (as here she is particularly named and noted amongst them,) and especially with S. John, the apostle, to whom our Lord recommended her. S. John xix. 26, 27.

VER. 15. Peter, rising up, &c. Peter, says S. Chrys., ^ton this place, who was prince or chief of the apostolical college, who had authority over them all, who by his place and dignity might, without them, have chosen and appointed a concerning Judas, who was the leader of them that apprehended Jesus :

17 Who was numbered with us, and had obtained part of this ministry.

18 *And he indeed hath possessed a field of the reward of iniquity, and being hanged, burst asunder in the midst : and all his bowels gushed out.

19 And it became known to all the inhabitants of Jerusalem : so that the same field is called in their tongue, Haceldama ; that is, The field of blood.

20 For it is written in the book of Psalms : †Let their habitation become desolate, and let there be none to dwell therein : †and let another take his bishopric.

21 Wherefore of these men who have been with us, all the time that the Lord Jesus came in and went out among us, 22 Beginning from the baptism of John, until the day wherein he was taken up from us, one of these must be made a witness with us of his resurrection.

23 And they appointed two, Joseph, called Barsabas, who was surnamed Justus, and Matthias.

24 And praying, they said : Thou, O Lord, who knowest the hearts of all men, show which of these two thou hast chosen,

25 To take the place of this ministry, and apostleship, from which Judas hath by transgression fallen, that he might go to his own place.

26 And he gave them lots, and the lot fell upon Matthias, and he was numbered with the eleven apostles.

VER. 18. Possessed a field. Judas is here said to have done what was done by others, with the thirty pieces of money, the reward of his iniquity.—And being hanged, that is, as S. Matt. says, (chap. xxvii. 5,) having hanged himself, he burst asunder. The Greek has it, falling headlong,† as perhaps he did, by the judgment of God, from the place or tree where he hanged himself. Wi.

VER. 20. His bishopric. The words were prophetically spoken in the Psalms, of the traitor Judas. Wi.

VER. 26. And he gave them lots, which they might lawfully do, when they knew that both of them were fit, and every way qualified for the office. Wi.—Lots. This method of deciding the election of ministers by lots, is one of those extraordinary methods which were inspired by God ; but can seldom or ever be imitated. Where both candidates appeared equally worthy, as in the present case, and human judgment cannot determine which is to be preferred, it cannot be said that it was wrong to decide it by lots. Thus were avoided any of the evil consequences, which might have happened by one party being preferred before the other.

12 And they were all astonished, and wondered, saying one to another : What meaneth this ?

13 But others mocking, said : These men are full of new wine.

14 But Peter, standing up with the eleven, lifted up his voice, and spoke to them : Ye men of Judea, and all ye that dwell in Jerusalem, be this known to you, and with your ears receive my word.

15 For these are not drunk, as you suppose, seeing it is but the third hour of the day :

16 But this is that which was spoken of by the prophet, Joel :

17 †And it shall come to pass in the last days, (saith the Lord,) I will pour out of my Spirit upon all flesh : and your sons and your daughters shall prophesy, and your young men shall see visions, and your old men shall dream dreams.

18 And upon my servants indeed, and upon my handmaids, will I pour out in those days of my Spirit, and they shall prophesy :

with a great wind, which filled with terror and awe the whole company, and disposed them to receive the gift of heaven with humility and fervour. This noise appears to have been heard over a great part of the city, and to have gathered together a great crowd, who came to learn the cause. This noise and wind were symbols of the Divinity. It was thus also that formerly on Mount Sinai, thunder and lightning, the dark cloud, the smoking mountain, &c., marked the majesty of God. Calmet.

VER. 3. Tongues . . . of fire. The Hebrews use the name tongue for almost any thing pointed. Thus they say, a tongue of the earth, for a promontory. Jos. xv. 5. A fiery tongue for a flame in shape of a tongue. Isa. v. 24.—By the fiery tongues is signified the efficacy of the apostles' preaching, and the gift of tongues bestowed upon them. M.

VER. 4. Began to speak divers tongues. Perhaps the apostles spoke only their own tongue, and the miracle consisted in each one's understanding it as if they spoke it in his language. S. Greg. Nazianzen, Orat. 44.—But S. Augustin, and most others, understand the text literally ; though the apostles had not this gift on all occasions, nor on all subjects, and therefore sometimes stood in need of interpreters. Vide S. Aug. in Psal. xvii., Expos. 2, and Serm. 188.—The same Father observes, that the conversion of all nations to the Church, and their being united in one faith, all having one language or confession, is a perpetuation of the same miracle in the Church.

VER. 14. But Peter, standing up, &c. As the prince of the apostolic college, and head of the Church, under Jesus Christ, hence Peter speaks in the name of the other apostles also, gives an account of the miracle, and promulgates the evangelical law. M.

VER. 15. About nine in the morning. On festival days the Jews did not eat till the morning devotions were finished, about mid-day. V.

VER. 17. In the last days, or the latter days, meaning the time of the M^{ss}.

19 And I will show wonders in the heaven above, and signs on the earth beneath: blood and fire, and vapour of smoke.

20 The sun shall be turned into darkness, and the moon into blood, before the great and manifest day of the Lord cometh.

21 * And it shall come to pass, that whosoever shall call upon the name of the Lord, shall be saved.

22 Ye men of Israel, hear these words: Jesus, of Nazareth, a man approved of God among you, by miracles and wonders, and signs, which God did by him in the midst of you, as you also know:

23 This same being delivered up by the determinate counsel and foreknowledge of God, you have crucified and put to death by the hands of wicked men:

24 Whom God hath raised up, having loosed the sorrows of hell, as it was impossible that he should be detained by it.

25 For David saith concerning him: ^bI foresaw the Lord always before my face: because he is at my right hand, that I may not be moved:

26 For this my heart hath been glad, and my tongue hath rejoiced: moreover, my flesh also shall rest in hope:

27 Because thou wilt not leave my soul in hell, nor suffer thy Holy One to see corruption.

28 Thou hast made known to me the ways of life: thou shalt make me full of joy with thy countenance.

29 Ye men, brethren, let me freely speak to you of the patriarch, David, ^cthat he died, and was buried: and his sepulchre is with us to this present day.

30 Whereas, therefore, he was a prophet, and knew ^dthat God had sworn to him with an oath, that of the fruit of his loins one should sit upon his throne:

31 Foreseeing he spoke of the resurrection of Christ, sias, I will pour out my Spirit upon all flesh, that is, all persons. See Joel ii. 28. Wi.

VER. 19. I will show wonders, &c. These prodigies are commonly expounded of those that shall forerun the last day; or of the prognostics of the destruction of Jerusalem, which was a figure of the destruction of the world. Wi.—Blood, fire, &c. These prodigies were accomplished at our Saviour's death, or before the destruction of Jerusalem. Calmet.

VER. 22, 23. Jesus, . . . a man, who suffered as man, though he was both God and man.—Delivered by the determinate decree, or counsel; to wit, by that eternal decree, that the Son of God should become man. He mentions this decree and foreknowledge of God, to signify, that Christ suffered not by chance, nor unwillingly, but what God, and he as God, had decreed. Wi.—By the determinate, &c. God delivered up his Son; and his Son delivered up himself, for the love of us, and for the sake of our salvation: and so Christ's being delivered up was holy, and was God's own determination. But they who betrayed and crucified him, did wickedly, following therein their own malice, and the instigation of the devil; not the will and determination of God, who was by no means the author of their wickedness; though he permitted it: because he could, and did draw out of it so great a good, viz. the salvation of man. Ch.

VER. 24. Having loosed the sorrows of hell, &c. In the ordinary Greek copies, of death. As to the sense of this place, 1. It is certain, Christ suffered the pains and pangs of a violent death. 2. That his soul suffered no pains after death, nor in any place called hell. 3. We believe, as in the Apostles' Creed, that his blessed soul descended into hell, that is, to that place in the inferior parts of the earth, (Eph. iv. 9,) which we commonly call Limbus Patrum, not to suffer, but to free the souls of the just from thence.—As it was impossible he should be detained there, either by death, or in hell, his soul being always united to the Divine Person: and his rising again being foretold in the Psalms, in the words here cited. Wi.—Having overcome the grievous pains of death, and all the power of hell. Ch.

VER. 27. Thou wilt not leave my soul in hell. This is also the Prot. translation; and the manner in which Beza translates it, is both very false and ridiculous, Thou shalt not leave my carcass in the grave. For allowing that the Latin and Greek word, which is here translated hell, may signify, sometimes, the grave; yet no excuse can be made for putting carcass, where the Greek, as well as Latin, signifies the soul. Wi.—Beza plainly confesseth that he translateth the *for neither was he left in hell, neither did his flesh see corruption.

32 This Jesus hath God raised up again, whereof we are all witnesses.

33 Being exalted, therefore, by the right hand of God, and having received of the Father the promise of the Holy Ghost, he hath poured forth this which you see and hear.

34 For David did not ascend into heaven: but he himself said: 'The Lord said to my Lord, Sit thou on my right hand, 35 Until I make thy enemies thy footstool.

36 Therefore let all the house of Israel know most assuredly, that God hath made him Lord and Christ, this same Jesus, whom you have crucified.

37 Now when they had heard these things, they had compunction in their heart, and they said to Peter and to the rest of the apostles: What shall we do, men, brethren?

38 But Peter to them: Do penance, (said he,) and be baptized, every one of you, in the name of Jesus Christ, for the remission of your sins: and you shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost.

39 For the promise is to you, and to your children, and to all that are far off, whomsoever the Lord our God shall call.

40 And with a great many other words did he testify and exhort them, saying: Save yourselves from this perverse generation.

41 They therefore that received his word were baptized: and there were added to them in that day about three thousand souls.

42 And they were persevering in the doctrine of the apostles, and in the communication of the breaking of bread, and in prayers.

text thus, Thou shalt not leave my carcass in the grave, against the doctrine of purgatory, and Christ's descending into hell, although he alloweth that most of the ancient Fathers were in that error. Thus opposing himself to plain Scripture, and to the ancient Fathers, perverting the former, and condemning the latter, to overthrow an article of the Apostles' Creed, He descended into hell. New Test. in 1556.

VER. 33. He hath poured forth this which you see and hear, by the effects, by the noise, as it were of thunder, by our speaking languages, &c. Wi.

VER. 37. They had compunction in their heart, with sorrow for their sins, especially against their Messias. Wi.

VER. 38. Be baptized: believing and making profession to believe, and hope for salvation, by the merits of Jesus Christ. Thus you shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost, the grace of God, and perhaps those other gifts of speaking with tongues, working miracles, &c. Wi.—The gift of the Holy Ghost. That is, justifying grace, which is diffused in our hearts by the laver of regeneration. The exterior gifts of the Holy Ghost, the gift of tongues, of miracles, prophecy, &c., were, in the beginning of the Church, more regularly the consequences of confirmation, or imposition of hands. Calmet.

VER. 40. And with a great many other words did he testify and exhort them. S. Luke only gives an abridgment of those exhortations, which S. Peter and the apostles frequently gave to all the people. S. Peter, as S. Chrys. observes, and as we see in these Acts, was the mouth of all the rest. And on this first day of Pentecost, about three thousand were converted. Wi.

VER. 42. In the communication of the breaking of bread, by which some understand their ordinary meals, and eating together; others, of the celestial bread of the holy Sacrament, rov áprov, panis illius, scilicet Eucharistiæ. The Eucharist is called, both by S. Luke and S. Paul, the breaking of bread. M. in ver. 42, and 46.—In the Syriac, for áprov, is a term that means Eucharist, both here and in Acts xx., as the learned Joannes Harleminus remarks in Indico Bibliorum.—S. Luke also gives here some account of the manner of living of these first Christians. 1. They were together, united in perfect charity. 2. They were frequently in the temple, and praying together. 3. They had all possessions in common. 4. They went from house to house to convert souls, taking the food they found with joy and simplicity of heart, their number daily increasing. 5. S. Luke says they were in favour, and esteemed by all the people. 6. The apostles did many prodigies and miracles, to confirm their doctrine, which struck others with great terror and horror for their past lives. Wi.

43 And fear came upon every soul: and many wonders and signs were done by the apostles in Jerusalem, and there was great fear in all.

44 And all they that believed were together, and had all things common.

45 They sold their possessions and goods, and divided them to all, according as every one had need.

46 And continuing daily with one accord in the temple, and breaking bread from house to house, they took their meat with gladness and simplicity of heart:

47 Praising God together, and having favour with all the people. And the Lord added daily to their society such as should be saved.

CHAP. III.

The miracle upon the lame man, followed by the conversion of many.

NOW Peter and John went up to the temple at the ninth hour of prayer.

2 And a certain man who was lame from his mother's womb, was carried: whom they laid daily at the gate of the temple, which is called the Beautiful, that he might beg alms of them that went into the temple.

3 He, when he had seen Peter and John about to go into the temple, begged to receive an alms.

4 But Peter with John, fixing his eyes upon him, said: Look upon us.

5 And he looked earnestly upon them, hoping that he should receive something from them.

6 But Peter said: Silver and gold I have none: but what I have, I give thee: in the name of Jesus Christ, of Nazareth, rise up, and walk.

7 And having taken him by the right hand, he lifted him up, and forthwith his feet and soles became firm.

8 And he leaping up, stood, and walked: and entered with them into the temple, walking and leaping, and praising God.

9 And all the people saw him walking and praising God.

* A. D. 33.

VER. 46. In the temple. Although by the death of our Saviour, the ceremonies and sacrifices were abrogated, and the new alliance had succeeded to the old, still it was not in the design of God, that the faithful should separate themselves from the rest of the Jews, or entirely give up the observances of the law. They continued to observe them as long as the utility of the Church required it, but they observed them not as Jews. Thus they avoided giving scandal to the weak, and driving them from submitting to the doctrine of the Church. They disposed them insensibly to a more pure and spiritual worship. S. Chrys. in Act. hom. 7.—This was burying the synagogue with honour.

VER. 47. More and more he added daily to the Church, as it is clearly expressed in the Greek, προσετίθει τῇ ἐκκλησίᾳ, that we may see the visible propagation and increase of the same. We may here, and throughout the whole book, observe a visible society of men joined in Christ, which visible society may be traced through ecclesiastical history, down to our days, and which will continue, in virtue of Christ's promise, to the end of time, as the point of union, by which the true disciples of Jesus Christ are to be connected together in one body, and one spirit; "one Lord, one faith, one baptism." Eph. iv. 5.

CHAP. III. VER. 1. To the temple. Though the Jewish ceremonies were shortly to cease, yet it was not unlawful to follow them; and they went to the temple as a proper place for prayer. Wi.—The custom of praying three times in the day, is ancient among the Jews. Daniel at Babylon opened his window on the side which looked towards the temple of Jerusalem, and three times a day bent his knees before the Lord.—In Catholic countries, the toll of a bell at morning, noon, and evening, announces the time for the recital of the Angelus Domini, a short prayer, in honour of the incarnation. At these moments, all, however employed, whether at labour in the field, or at home, all cease from their employment, till they have recited the prayer. The repetition of this, and similar practices, cannot 10 And they knew him, that it was he who sat for alms at the Beautiful gate of the temple: and they were filled with wonder and amazement at that which had happened to him.

11 And as he held Peter and John, all the the people, amazed, ran to them to the porch which is called Solomon's.

12 Which Peter seeing, made answer to the people. Ye men of Israel, why wonder you at this? or why look you upon us, as if by our strength or power, we had made this man to walk?

13 The God of Abraham, and the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob, the God of our fathers, hath glorified his Son, Jesus, whom you indeed delivered up and denied before the face of Pilate, when he judged he should be released.

14 But you denied the Holy and the Just One, and desired a murderer to be granted unto you.

15 But the author of life you killed, whom God hath raised from the dead, of which we are witnesses.

16 And his name, through the faith of his name, hath made this man strong whom you have seen and known: and the faith which is by him, hath given this perfect soundness in the sight of you all.

17 And now, brethren, I know that you did it through ignorance, as also your rulers.

18 But those things, which God had foretold by the mouth of all the prophets, that his Christ should suffer, he hath so fulfilled.

19 Be penitent, therefore, and be converted, that your sins may be blotted out:

20 That when the times of refreshment shall come from the presence of the Lord, and he shall send him who hath been preached unto you, Jesus Christ, be too strongly recommended to Catholics of the present day. They are of singular advantage in recalling the soul, which is too easily dissipated and distracted, to God, her first beginning, and her last end. A.

VER. 4. Look upon us. S. Peter said this to raise his attention and expectation, but the poor man thought of nothing but an alms. Wi.

VER. 6. But what I have, I give thee. Though S. Luke told us, (chap. ii. 43,) that the apostles did many miracles and prodigies, yet this is the first specified.—In the name of Jesus of Nazareth, (known by that name, though of Bethlehem,) arise, and walk. In the name of Jesus, lately nailed to a cross. Wi.—This is not the shadow of a great name, magnum nominis umbra, but the truth of what it signifies, a Saviour.

VER. 11. As he held Peter and John. That is, kept close by them, and with them, out of joy and gratitude. Wi.

VER. 12. Peter seeing, made answer to the people. This is the second sermon that is related, which, as S. Chrys. observes, was spoken publicly in the temple.—Why look you upon us? S. Peter, at the beginning, takes care to give the glory to God. Wi.

VER. 14, 15. The Just One, and the Holy One, even the author of life you killed: he that is the Just One promised, the Messiah, the Son of God, and true God. Wi.

VER. 17. You did it through ignorance, but such as could not excuse the chief of you. Wi.

VER. 20. The times of refreshment. The time of eternal rest and happiness, &c.—These words, you may be saved, must be understood, to make the sense complete. Wi.

VER. 21. Whom heaven indeed must receive, as also in the Prot. translation, not contain: nor can any argument be drawn from hence that Christ's body cannot be truly at the same time in the holy Sacrament, especially after a different manner. The true sense of these words is, that heaven is the place of Christ's abode, till the day of judgment, and that it was in vain for them to think that he would come to take possession of any temporal kingdom. Wi.—The restitution of all things. Jesus remains in heaven till his second coming to judge the living and the dead. That is, the great day, when every thing shall be finally settled, and the mouth of his holy prophets from the beginning of the world.

22 For Moses indeed said : *A prophet shall the Lord, your God, raise up unto you out of your brethren, like unto me : him you shall hear, according to all things whatsoever he shall speak to you.

23 And it shall be, that every soul which will not hear that prophet, shall be destroyed from among the people.

24 And all the prophets, from Samuel and afterwards, that have spoken, have foretold these days.

25 You are the children of the prophets, and of the covenant which God made to our fathers, saying to Abraham : ^bAnd in thy seed shall all the families of the earth be blessed.

26 To you first God, raising up his Son, sent him to bless you : that every one should convert himself from his wickedness.

CHAP. IV.

Peter and John are apprehended. Their constancy. The Church is increased.

AND^c when they were speaking to the people, the priests, and the officer of the temple, and the Sadducees, came unto them,

2 Being grieved that they taught the people, and declared in Jesus the resurrection from the dead :

3 And they laid hands on them, and put them in custody till the next day : for now it was evening.

4 But many of them, who had heard the word, believed : and the number of the men was made five thousand.

5 And it came to pass on the morrow, that their rulers, and ancients, and Scribes, were gathered together in Jerusalem :

6 And Annas, the high priest, and Caiphas, and John, and Alexander, and as many as were of the priestly race.

restored to their proper order. He shall avenge the injuries done to God ; restore peace to the afflicted just men of the earth, and justice to their persecutors. He shall exalt his Church, and himself receive the homage of adoration from every tribe of men. Calmet.—See 2 Pet. iii. 13, which text, together with what we read in this place, joins inseparably the last coming of Jesus Christ with the universal re-establishment promised in both these passages, and completely excludes the Millennium, which some erroneously expect to take place between the accomplishment of the first and second of these events. See Bossuet's reflections on the 20th chap. of the Apocalypse, where the errors of many Protestant writers, especially of Dodwell, are refuted. To show that the error of the Millennium cannot be assigned as a general cause which impelled the primitive Christians to martyrdom, it will suffice to produce this decisive passage of S. Justin, who, after Papias, was the first supporter of that system : speaking of Tryphon concerning this temporal kingdom, which Christ was to enjoy here below, in the re-established Jerusalem with the saints risen from the dead, for a thousand years, he says, "I have already confessed that many others, with myself, were of this opinion ; . . . but there are many others, and persons of sound faith, and exemplary conduct, who reject this opinion." In Dialog. cum Tryph. n. 84.

VER. 23. Which will not hear that prophet. S. Peter's argument is this. If disobedience to the ordinances of God, by the voice of Moses, was punishable with death, how much more severe will be the punishment of those who refuse obedience to the doctrines of Jesus, to whom all the prophets bore testimony, and whom the apostles then preached ! How different is this system of submission to the teaching of the prophets and apostles, from that libertinism, which undermines the whole fabric of religion, by taking away from the Church the power of commanding, and from the disciple the necessity of obeying.

VER. 25, 26. You are the children . . . to you first God, raising up his Son. He gives them encouragement, that not only the promise of sending the Messiah was made to them, but that he came, and is to be preached to them : and that the blessings of his coming are first offered to them. Wi.

CHAP. IV. VER. 1. The officer (of the guard) of the temple :* lit. the magistrate of the temple. But this magistrate, by the Greek, was an officer over soldiers ; we may presume, over those who were to guard the temple. Wi.

VER. 2. The resurrection. This vexed particularly the Sadducees, who denied the resurrection : and they had great power among the Jews. Wi.

7 And setting them in the midst, they asked : By what power, or in what name, have ye done this ?

8 Then Peter, filled with the Holy Ghost, said to them : Ye rulers of the people, and ancients, hear :

9 If we this day are examined concerning the good deed done to the infirm man, by what means he hath been made whole,

10 Be it known to you all, and to all the people of Israel, that in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ, of Nazareth, whom you crucified, whom God hath raised from the dead, even by him doth this man stand here before you, whole.

11 "This is the stone which was rejected by you, the builders : which is become the head of the corner :

12 Nor is there salvation in any other. For there is no other name, under heaven, given to men, whereby we must be saved.

13 Now they, seeing the constancy of Peter and John, knowing that they were illiterate and ignorant men, they wondered : and they knew them, that they had been with Jesus :

14 Seeing also the man standing with them, who had been healed, they could say nothing against it.

15 But they commanded them to go aside out of the council : and they conferred among themselves,

16 Saying : What shall we do to these men ? for a miracle, indeed, hath been done by them, conspicuous to all the inhabitants of Jerusalem : it is manifest, and we cannot deny it.

17 But that it may be no further divulged among the people, let us threaten them, that they speak no more in this name to any man.

18 And calling them, they charged them not to speak at all, nor teach in the name of Jesus.

19 But Peter and John answering, said to them : If it

VER. 4. Five thousand. Not that hereby is meant the whole number of the believers, but five thousand, by this miracle and preaching, were added to those that believed before. Wi.—Here again we remark the visible increase of the Catholic Church, by the preaching of the word.

VER. 5. Their rulers, &c. The chief of them, and Annas, the high priest ; perhaps he had lately succeeded Caiphas, high priest of the year before. Wi.

VER. 7. By what authority ? Is it by your own authority, or that of some other, you have healed this lame man ? They wished to know if it was a true miracle, or the effects of some secret magic or enchantment. The knowledge of this kind of affairs belonged to them. It was their duty to repress the attempts of false prophets, seducers, and magicians. But they might easily discover that the apostles were far removed from any thing of this kind. The simple narration of the fact was enough to acquit them. Calmet.

VER. 10. Name of our Lord Jesus. From this, S. Chrysostom takes occasion to make several pathetic exhortations against swearing and profaning this adorable name. What profit do you propose to yourselves by abusing this name ? Is it to gain credit to your discourse ? So you will tell me ; but, believe me, you are mistaken : if people saw you respected oaths, and were afraid to make free with them, then they would believe you. Not when you give them to understand that you undervalue them, by your frequent abuse of them. Break then so profane a custom. It will cost you neither money nor labour to do so : you are not required to part with any gratification for this purpose. Use only at the beginning a little diligence, and you will easily overcome so idle a practice. Wish, and it is done. S. Chrys. super Act. sparsim. A.—Whom you crucified. S. Peter, without fear or apprehension, openly and boldly tells them of their heinous crime : that Christ is the head corner stone, which they had rejected, as Christ himself had told them, (Matt. xli. 10,) and that there is no other name under heaven given to men to be saved by. Wi.

VER. 13. The constancy of Peter and John, surprised the council very much. They admired their knowledge of the Scriptures, seeing them men without learning or letters,† and (as they are called idiots) they could not find how to contradict the fact, the man that was healed being there present. Wi.

VER. 16. What shall we do to these men ? They were perplexed, says S. Chrys., and in greater fear than the apostles. They saw they could do nothing but threaten and charge them to speak no more of Jesus. Wi.

be just in the sight of God, to hear you rather than God, judge ye.

20 For we cannot but speak the things which we have seen and heard.

21 But they, threatening them, sent them away: not finding how they might punish them, because of the people: for all men glorified what had been done, in that which had come to pass.

22 For the man was above forty years old, in whom that miraculous cure had been wrought.

23 And being let go, they came to their own company, and related all that the chief priests and ancients had said to them.

24 Who, when they had heard them, with one accord lifted up their voice to God, and said: Lord, thou art he that didst make heaven and earth, the sea, and all things that are in them:

25 Who, in the Holy Ghost, by the mouth of our father, David, thy servant, hast said: "Why have the Gentiles raged, and the people devised vain things?"

26 The kings of the earth stood up, and the princes assembled together against the Lord, and against his Christ.

27 For there were truly assembled in this city, against thy holy Son, Jesus, whom thou hast anointed, Herod, and Pontius Pilate, with the Gentiles, and the people of Israel, 28 To do what thy hand and thy counsel decreed to be done.

29 And now, Lord, behold their threatenings, and grant to thy servants, with all confidence to speak thy word,

30 In this, that thou stretch forth thy hand to cures, and signs, and wonders, to be done by the name of thy holy Son, Jesus.

^a Psal. ii. 1.

VER. 19. But Peter and John stopped their mouths, by asking them, if it was reasonable for them to hearken to men rather than to God. For we, say they, (ver. 20,) cannot but speak things which we have seen and heard. Wi.

VER. 20. We have seen and heard. From these words, S. Chrysostom makes some important remarks on the conduct of Christians. On returning from the theatre, or any public meeting, each can relate what he has seen and heard. This is the fruit they reap from attending at public places of amusement; and would to God it were merely pleasure unmingled with poison. But on returning from Church, where they have been for instruction, they remember nothing, speak of nothing they have seen or heard. All is silence. Not even a thought is turned on what has been performed. Hom. 10, in Act.—It is a curious fact, which the apologists for the innocence of modern plays would do well to attend to, that the theatre has always been avoided by the good and the virtuous of every age. When one of the ancient Fathers was exorcising a female demoniac, who had been possessed at the theatre, and bade the devil to depart: No, replied he, I had a right to take possession of her, for I found her in my own house. A.

VER. 21. Threatening them. Here commences the history of the first persecution of religious opinion, which the passions of men have continued, and swelled to such a frightful length. But on this, as on all other occasions, it has defeated its own purpose, by adding firmness and constancy to the persecuted. Truth is not to be overpowered by violence. In vain have the kings and princes of the earth risen up against the Lord, and against his Christ. When will men learn that charity is the principle of conversion!

VER. 23. Being let go, they came to their own company, relating with simplicity all that had happened.

VER. 24. With one accord. With one mind, as in the Greek, and with one voice, being inspired by the Holy Ghost, they fell to prayer. Wi.

VER. 30. That thou stretch forth thy hand.[§] Lit. in this that thou stretch forth thy hand to cures, &c. They pray to God, that he would continue to confirm their preaching by miracles. Wi.

VER. 31. The place was shaken. Much in the same manner, as at the first coming of the Holy Ghost.—They were all filled with the Holy Ghost. Their hearts were inflamed and excited by a new motion of grace. Wi.

VER. 32. All things were common. Happy would it be for society, if the rich in the present day were to imitate, in some degree, this charity of the first disciples, by distributing to those that want. Both would hereby become more 31 And when they had prayed, the place was shaken wherein they were assembled: and they were all filled with the Holy Ghost, and they spoke the word of God with confidence.

32 And the multitude of the believers had but one heart and one soul: neither did any one of them say, that of the things which he possessed, any thing was his own, but all things were common to them.

33 And with great power did the apostles give testimony of the resurrection of Jesus Christ, our Lord: and great grace was in them all.

34 For neither was there any one among them that wanted. For as many as were owners of lands, or houses, sold them, and brought the price of the things they sold, 35 And laid it down before the feet of the apostles. And distribution was made to every man, according as he had need.

36 And Joseph, who by the apostles was surnamed Barnabas, (which, being interpreted, is the son of consolation,) a Levite, a Cyprian born, 37 Having land, sold it, and brought the price, and laid it at the feet of the apostles.

The judgment of God upon Ananias and Saphira. The apostles are cast into prison.

BUT^b a certain man, named Ananias, with Saphira, his wife, sold a field,

2 And by fraud kept part of the price of the field, his wife being conscious of it, and bringing a certain part of it, laid it at the feet of the apostles.

happy; nor would the rich derive less pleasure from such actions, than the poor. S. Chrys. hom. 11, in Acts.

VER. 33. And great grace was in them all. All of them there present were replenished with extraordinary graces of charity, zeal, &c. Wi.

VER. 36, 37. Joseph . . . surnamed Barnabas, the son of consolation, &c. He seems to be mentioned as the first that sold all he had, and brought the price, and laid it at the feet of the apostles. Wi.

VER. 37. At the feet of the apostles, out of respect. Thus the Samaritans fell down and embraced Eleseus's feet. Many that asked favours of Christ, fell down at his feet, and Mary kissed his feet. Such are the signs of reverence paid both to Christ, and to other sacred persons, prophets, apostles, popes.

CHAP. V. VER. 1. It is believed by many of the Fathers, that the resolution which the faithful made of selling their property, and laying the price at the feet of the apostles, implied a vow of reserving nothing for themselves, but giving all to the community; and that the crime of Ananias and Saphira consisted in the violation of this vow; on which account they regarded them as sacrilegious, and plunderers of sacred things. See S. Basil, serm. 1, de Instit. Monac. S. Cyprian, lib. 1, ad Quir., &c.—For, without this supposition, we cannot, as Menochius justly remarks, account for the sudden and severe punishment inflicted on the offending parties.

VER. 2. By fraud kept part.^{*} Ananias, and his wife Saphira, had made a promise, or vow, to put into the common stock the price of what they had to sell. When they had sold the field, they resolved by mutual consent to keep for their private use part of the money, and to bring in the rest, as if they had received no more. The whole price being promised, and by that means consecrated to God, S. Aug. calls it a sacrilegious fraud, and S. Chrys. a theft of what was already made sacred to God. Wi.

VER. 3. Why hath satan tempted thy heart? The present Greek copies filled thy heart. Wi.

4 Whilst it remained, did it not remain to thee? and being sold, was it not in thy power? Why hast thou conceived this thing in thy heart? Thou hast not lied to men, but to God.

5 And Ananias hearing these words, fell down, and gave up the ghost. And great fear came upon all that heard it.

6 And the young men, rising up, removed him, and carrying him out, buried him.

7 And it came to pass, about the space of three hours after, his wife also not knowing what had happened, came in.

8 And Peter said to her: Tell me, woman, whether you sold the field for so much? And she said: Yea, for so much.

9 And Peter said unto her: Why have you agreed together to tempt the Spirit of the Lord? Behold the feet of those, who have buried thy husband, are at the door, and they shall carry thee out.

10 Immediately she fell down before his feet, and gave up the ghost: And the young men coming in, found her dead; and carried her out, and buried her by her husband.

11 And there came great fear upon the whole church, and upon all that heard these things.

12 And by the hands of the apostles many signs and wonders were done among the people. And they were all, with one accord, in Solomon's porch.

13 But of the rest, no one durst join himself to them: but the people magnified them.

14 And the multitude of men and women, that believed in the Lord, was more increased,

15 Insomuch, that they brought out the sick into the streets, and laid them on beds and couches, that when Peter came, his shadow, at the least, might overshadow any of them, and they might be delivered from their infirmities.

16 And there came also together, to Jerusalem, a multitude out of the neighbouring cities, bringing sick persons, and such as were troubled with unclean spirits: who were all healed.

17 Then the high priest, rising up, and all that were with him, (which is the heresy of the Sadducees,) were filled with indignation.

18 And they laid hands on the apostles, and put them in the common prison.

19 But an angel of the Lord, by night opening the doors of the prison, and leading them out, said:

20 Go, and, standing, speak in the temple, and to the people, all the words of this life.

21 And they having heard this, entered early in the morning into the temple, and taught. Now the high priest being arrived, and they that were with him, assembled the council, and all the ancients of the children of Israel: and sent to the prison to have them brought.

22 But when the officers came, and having opened the prison, found them not, returning back, they told,

23 Saying: The prison indeed we found shut with all diligence, and the keepers standing before the doors: but opening it, we found no man within.

24 Now, when the magistrate of the temple, and the chief priest, heard these words, they were in doubt what was become of them.

25 But a certain man coming, told them: Behold, the men whom you put in prison, are standing in the temple and teaching the people.

26 Then went the magistrate with the officers, and brought them without violence: for they feared the people, lest they should be stoned.

27 And when they had brought them, they set them before the council. And the high priest spoke to them, 28 Saying: Commanding, we commanded you, that you should not teach in this name: and behold, you have filled Jerusalem with your doctrine, and you have a mind to bring the blood of this man upon us.

29 Peter then answering, and the apostles, said: We ought to obey God rather than men.

30 The God of our fathers hath raised up Jesus, whom you put to death, hanging him upon a tree.

31 This Prince and Saviour, God hath exalted with his right hand, to give penitence to Israel, and remission of sins.

32 And we are witnesses of these things, and the Holy Ghost, whom God hath given to all those that obey him.

VER. 4. Did it not remain to thee? That is, no one forced thee to make such a promise.—And being sold, was it not in thy power, and at thy free disposal, before such a promise? but promises and vows must be kept.—Thou hast not lied to men, but to God, by lying to the Holy Ghost. WI.—Thou hast not lied to men, only and principally, but to God also; for he had also lied to Peter, and the other apostles. Menochius.

VER. 5. Ananias . . . fell down, and gave up the ghost. S. Aug. says, † This severe judgment was to strike a terror of such dissembling fraudulent dealings into the new Church. It was also to show that S. Peter and the apostles had the gift of prophecy. WI.—Menochius and Cornelius à Lapide think that God struck him interiorly, as Peter spoke. . . There are likewise different opinions among the Fathers respecting the salvation of Ananias and Saphira. Some are of opinion, that as their fault was great, they died, and perished in their sin. But the ideas we are fond to cherish of the infinite mercy of God, would rather incline us to say, with S. Augustin, "I can believe that God spared them after this life, for his mercy is great. . . They were stricken with the scourge of death, that they might not be subject to eternal punishment" S. Aug. Sermon. 148, olim. 10, et in Parmen.

VER. 7. Not knowing. Because no one durst tell her; so much did they honour, fear, and obey S. Peter. S. Chrys. Hom. 12.

VER. 8. Yea, for so much. That is, for the same sum as Ananias mentioned. This the wife said, not knowing what had before happened to her husband. WI.

VER. 12. Solomon's porch. This was outside of the temple, open to all, Jews and Gentiles, pure and impure. They assembled here, because it was a large place, where they could speak to many assembled. Had it been within the temple, the priests would have interrupted them, and not have wanted pretexts to silence them. Calmet.

VER. 13. Of the rest, no one durst join himself to them. That is, none of those that did not believe: yet the people praised them, and the number of the faithful increased. WI.

VER. 15. On . . . couches, meaner beds for the poorer sort.—That Peter's shadow, &c. Thus was partly fulfilled what Christ had foretold, (John xiv. 12,) that his disciples should do even greater miracles than he had done. WI.—S. Augustin, speaking of the miracles performed by the saints now reigning in heaven, says, "If the shadow of Peter's body could afford help, how much more now the fulness of his power?" Sermon. 39, de Sanctis.

VER. 26. Then went the magistrate; § which by the Greek was a military officer. But he did not bind them like prisoners, for fear of a tumult, but desired them to go along with them to the sanhedrim. WI.—Without violence. They persuaded them to appear willingly before the sanhedrim, thinking, perhaps, moreover, that they could not bind them, whom the walls of the prison could not confine. The apostles here, and on all other occasions, show the most astonishing examples of patience, constancy, and obedience to the laws of the country. Menochius.

VER. 28. Commanding, we commanded you. That is, charged you severely.—You have a mind to bring the blood of this man upon us. You will make us pass for guilty of the murder of the Messiah. WI.

VER. 29. Peter answered boldly, We ought to obey God, rather than men. And withal adds, that God had raised from death Jesus, the Prince and Saviour of mankind, by whose merits all might find repentance and forgiveness of their sins; that they were witnesses of his resurrection, &c. WI.

33 When they had heard these things, they were cut to the heart, and they thought to put them to death.

34 But one in the council rising up, a Pharisee, by name Gamaliel a doctor of the law, respected by all the people, commanded the men to be put forth a little while.

35 And he said to them: Ye men of Israel, consider with yourselves, what you are about to do with these men.

36 For before these days rose up Theodas, affirming himself to be somebody, with whom joined a number of men, about four hundred: who was slain: and all who believed him, were dispersed, and reduced to nothing.

37 After this man rose up Judas, the Galilean, in the days of the enrolling, and drew away the people after him: he also perished: and all, whosoever consented to him, were dispersed.

38 And now, therefore, I say to you, refrain from these men, and let them alone: for if this design, or work be of men, it will fall to nothing:

39 But if it be of God, you are not able to destroy it: lest perhaps you be found to oppose God. And they consented to him.

40 And calling in the apostles, after they had been scourged, they charged them not to speak at all in the name of Jesus, and they dismissed them.

41 And they indeed went from the presence of the council, rejoicing that they were accounted worthy to suffer reproach for the name of Jesus.

VER. 33. They were cut to the heart; || exasperated to fury and madness, and were for killing them. Wi.

VER. 34. Gamaliel. He that had been S. Paul's master, according to S. Chrys., advised them to forbear, and do nothing rashly. Meddle not with these men; lit. go from them. || For, saith he, if this be the work of men only, it will soon fall to nothing; but if it be from God, you cannot hinder it, and you will only make yourselves guilty, by resisting the designs of God. They consented to him, so far as not to put them to death; but they made them be scourged, which they rejoiced at; and they dismissed them with reiterated threats. Wi.—Gamaliel was the master of S. Paul, Barnabas, Stephen, and others, and favoured the Christians. S. Clement and Ven. Bede think he was then a Christian, but concealed his conversion at the instigation of the apostles, that he might have an opportunity of defending Christ in the council. He afterwards professed his faith publicly, and was canonized with his son Abibas. See Baronius, 3rd of Aug. Tirinus.

VER. 39. Time, and the evident success of Christ's Church, prove it to be of God. No violence of the Jews, no persecution of heathen princes, no attempts of domestic adversaries, heretics, schismatics, or evil livers, have been able to prevail against it. Let, then, no Catholic be dispirited, because modern heresies continue; Arian and other heresies have continued much longer, have been more powerfully supported by temporal power, and yet have come to nothing. The Catholic religion was the first, and it will be the last religion.

CHAP. VI. VER. 1. *Of the Grecians against the Hebrews. By the Grecians we many times understood the heathens or pagans, as Acts xiv. 1; xviii. 4, &c., but here by Grecians, (which some translate Hellenists or Greeks;) we may understand those new-converted Christians, who had been Jews before, but who had been born in places where the Greek tongue was spoken; as by the Hebrews, we may understand those converted to the Christian faith, who were of the Jewish race, born and bred in those places where they spoke not Greek, but Syriac, which was then the language of the Jews. This difference is grounded on the Greek text.—Their widows were neglected; that is, they seemed less regarded, or less favoured in the daily distributions, than such as were of the Jewish race, and spoke the language of the Jews, as it was then spoken in Palestine. Wi.

VER. 2. And serve tables. The apostles did not judge it proper for them to be so much employed in managing that common stock, out of which every one, as they stood in need, were supplied, as to meat, and all other necessities: this took up too much of their time, which might be better employed in preaching, &c. Wi.

42 And they ceased not every day in the temple, and from house to house, to teach and preach Christ Jesus.

CHAP. VI.

The ordaining of the seven deacons. The zeal of Stephen.

AND^a in those days, the number of the disciples increasing, there arose a murmuring of the Grecians against the Hebrews, for that their widows were neglected in the daily ministration.

2 Then the twelve calling together the multitude of the disciples, said: It is not fit that we should leave the word of God, and serve tables.

3 Therefore, brethren, look ye out among you seven men of good reputation, full of the Holy Ghost and wisdom, whom we may appoint over this business.

4 But we will give ourselves continually to prayer, and to the ministry of the word.

5 And the discourse pleased all the multitude. And they chose Stephen, a man full of faith and of the Holy Ghost, and Philip, and Prochorus, and Nicanor, and Timon, and Parmenas, and Nicolas, a proselyte of Antioch.

6 These they placed in the presence of the apostles: and they, praying, imposed hands upon them.

7 And the word of the Lord increased, and the number of the disciples was multiplied very much in Jerusalem: a great multitude also of the priests obeyed the faith.

8 Now Stephen, full of grace and fortitude, did great wonders and miracles among the people.

^a A. D. 33.

—Word of God. The most essential duty of an apostle and bishop, is to announce the word of God. S. Paul would not even baptize, lest it should be a prejudice to the performance of this great duty, for which he had been sent. Calmet.

VER. 3. Look ye out among you seven men, and men of a good repute and character, full of the Holy Ghost. Wi.—Divers circumstances prove, that they were chosen to be about the altar also. They were to be full of the Holy Ghost and wisdom; they received the imposition of the apostles' hands, and in them S. Paul requireth, in a manner, the same conditions as in bishops; all which would not have been necessary for any secular stewardship. See Acts xiii. 3. Immediately after their ordination, they preached, baptized, disputed, as we see in S. Stephen, &c., &c. Hence S. Ignatius: "It is ours to please by all means the deacons, who are for the ministry of Jesus Christ; for they are not servitors of meat and drink, but ministers of the Church of God. For what are deacons, but imitators or followers of Christ, ministering to bishops, as Christ to his Father, and working unto him a clean and immaculate work, even as S. Stephen to S. James?" Ep. ad Tral.

VER. 5. By the names of these seven, it would appear, that they were all Greeks. The reason of this, most probably, is to silence more effectually all future murmurs, by giving to the aggrieved party protectors of their own nation. Tirinus.—The history of Stephen occurs hereafter. Philip, in the 8th chapter, is called an evangelist, that is, a preacher of the gospel. By Eusebius, Tertullian, and others, he is called an apostle, that is, an apostolic man. See Lives of the Saints, and Rom. Martyrology, June 6.—S. Jerom says, his tomb, and that of his four daughters, the prophetesses, was to be seen at Cæsarea, in Palestine. Ep. ad Bustocho.—Of the rest, except Nicolas, nothing certain is known: their acts have perished. Nicolas, as appears from the text, was a proselyte, first to Judaism, then to Christianity. S. Epiphanius, and many others, accuse him of being, by his incontinency, the author, or at least the occasion, of the impure sects of Nicolaites and Gnostics. S. Clement of Alexandria, and S. Augustin, acquit him of this, and attribute the above heresies to an abuse of some expressions, which he uttered in his simplicity, and which were susceptible of a good and bad sense. See Baronius and Tillemont.

VER. 6. And they, that is, the apostles, laid, or imposed hands upon them. These deacons, therefore, were designed and ordained for a sacred ministry, and not only to manage the common stock and temporals of the faithful. This is proved, 1. By the qualifications required in such men, who were to be full of the Holy Ghost. 2. This is evident by their ecclesiastical functions mentioned in this book of the Acts, and in the Epistles of S. Paul, and by the ancient Fathers. S. Stephen and S. Philip immediately preached the gospel, as we find in this and the 8th chapter; they baptized those that were converted. In the first ages, they assisted the bishops and priests at the Divine office, and distributed the sacred chalice, or cup of the holy Eucharist. They succeeded, as it were, to the Levites of the old law. And in the chief Churches, the deacons, or the archdeacons in the first ages, had the chief administration of the ecclesiastical revenues, as we read of S. Laurence at Rome. Wi.

VER. 9. Called of the Libertines.† That is, of the synagogues of those, whose fathers had been made slaves under Pompey and the Romans, but who had again

9 But certain men of the synagogue, that is called of the Libertines, and of the Cyreneans, and of the Alexandrians, and of those that were of Cilicia, and Asia, rose up disputing with Stephen :

10 And they were not able to resist the wisdom and the spirit with which he spoke.

11 Then they suborned men to say, that they had heard him speaking words of blasphemy against Moses and against God.

12 They stirred up therefore the people, and the ancients, and the Scribes : and running together they took him, and brought him before the council.

13 And they set up false witnesses, who said : This man ceaseth not to speak words against the holy place, and the law.

14 For we have heard him say, that this Jesus, of Nazareth, shall destroy this place, and shall change the traditions, which Moses delivered to us.

15 And all they who sat in the council looking earnestly upon him, saw his face as it were the face of an angel.

CHAP. VII.

Stephen's speech before the council : his martyrdom.

THEN^a the high priest said : Are these things so ?

2 And he said : Ye men, brethren, and fathers, give ear. The God of glory appeared to our father, Abraham, when he was in Mesopotamia, before he dwelt in Charan,

3 And he said to him : ^bGo forth out of thy country, and from thy kindred, and come into the land which I will show thee.

4 Then he went out of the land of the Chaldeans, and dwelt in Charan. And from thence, after his father was dead, he removed him into this land, in which you now dwell.

5 And he gave him no inheritance in it, no not the space of a foot : but he promised to give it him in possession, and his seed after him, when he had not a son.

been restored to their liberty, and had been made free. There were other synagogues for the Jews of Cyrene, of Alexandria, &c. Wi.

VER. 13. It was true that Jesus would destroy the place, and change their traditions, yet they were false witnesses, because they deposed, that Stephen had made these assertions, which he had not, purposely to excite the Jews to rise up against him, and put him to death. Besides, had Stephen spoken what was advanced against him, they still would have been false witnesses, for the words were in fact words of truth, which these suborned men called, words of blasphemy. See ver. 11.

VER. 15. Saw his face as it were the face of an angel. All in the council, or sanhedrim, saw an extraordinary or charming brightness in the countenance of Stephen, which struck them with admiration and fear. Wi.—Angel. His face shone with a wonderful brightness, an emblem of his interior perfection. In this he was like Moses, whose countenance was so bright, that the Jews could not steadfastly behold it. By this the beholders had an opportunity of being converted, had they so wished, or were rendered inexcusable for their neglect. It is also a testimony of the great sanctity of the deacon. This same miracle is not recorded to have happened to any other but Moses, and our Lord at his transfiguration. D. Dion. Carthus.

CHAP. VII. VER. 1. Are these things so? The high priest speaks after this mild manner, being either terrified, or charmed with his angelic countenance.

6 And God said to him : ^aThat his seed should sojourn in a strange country, and that they should bring them under bondage, and treat them ill for four hundred years :

7 And the nation which they shall serve, I will judge saith the Lord : and after these things they shall go out and shall serve me in this place.

8 ^aAnd he gave him the covenant of circumcision : ^aand so he begot Isaac, and circumcised him the eighth day : and ^aIsaac, Jacob : ^aand Jacob, the twelve patriarchs.

9 And the patriarchs, moved with envy,^b sold Joseph into Egypt : and God was with him.

10 And he delivered him out of all his tribulations : ⁱand gave him favour and wisdom in the sight of Pharaoh, king of Egypt, and he appointed him governor over Egypt, and over all his house.

11 Now there came a famine over all Egypt, and Chanaan, and great tribulation : and our fathers found no food.

12 ^kBut when Jacob had heard that there was corn in Egypt : he sent our fathers the first time :

13 ⁱAnd at the second time Joseph was known by his brethren, and his kindred was made known to Pharaoh.

14 And Joseph sending, called thither Jacob, his father, and all his kindred, seventy-five souls.

15 ^mSo Jacob went down into Egypt, and ⁿhe died, and our fathers.

16 And they were translated to Sichem, and were laid in the sepulchre, ^owhich Abraham bought for a sum of money of the sons of Hemor, the son of Sichem.

17 And when the time of the promise drew near, which God had promised to Abraham, ^pthe people increased and were multiplied in Egypt, 18 Till another king arose in Egypt who knew not Joseph.

19 The same dealing deceitfully with our race, afflicted our fathers, that they should expose their children, to the end they might not be kept alive.

VER. 5. Not the space of a foot ; not so much as a foot of land, that is, to dwell in, though he bought there a place to bury in. Gen. xxiii. 9. Wi.

VER. 6. For four hundred years, counting from the birth of Isaac, which was twenty-five years after the call and promises made to Abraham. It is certain the Israelites were not four hundred years in Egypt. Wi.—Four hundred. These words are taken from the fifteenth chapter of Genesis, in which Moses mentions the same number of years. This calculation is made from the entry of Abraham into Chanaan, to the departure of the Israelites out of Egypt. Strictly, the Israelites did not remain in Egypt more than two hundred and fifteen years.

VER. 8. The covenant, or the testament,* and alliance of circumcision, by which the Israelites should be known to be the elect people of God. Wi.—Literally, he gave them the alliance of circumcision ; he made with him an alliance, of which circumcision was the seal. V.

VER. 10. Gave him favour and wisdom in the sight of Pharaoh. Some understand Divine graces, and gifts of prophecy, and the like : others, that he made him find favour in the sight of king Pharaoh, who appointed him to be governor of Egypt. Wi.

VER. 16. Which Abraham bought . . . of the sons of Hemor, the son of Sichem. This purchase made by Abraham must be different from the purchase of a field made afterwards by Jacob. Gen. xxxiii. 19. See à Lapipe, the author of the Analysis, Dissert. 23. P. Alleman, &c. Wi.—Abraham bought. There must be an error of the copyist in this verse. Either the word Abraham ought to be omitted, or changed into Jacob. For it is plain, from Gen. xxxiii. 19, that the latter bought the land from the sons of Hemor. The Hebrew says, he bought it for one hundred kesitha, which some translate pieces of silver ; others, lambs. As for Abraham, and Jacob, they were buried in the cavern of Mambré, which Abraham had purchased from the children of Heth. Gen. xxiii. Calmet.

20 *At the same time was Moses born, and he was acceptable to God, and he was nourished three months in his father's house.

21 But he being exposed, Pharaoh's daughter took him up, and nourished him for her own son.

22 And Moses was instructed in all the wisdom of the Egyptians, and he was powerful in his words, and in his deeds.

23 And when he was full forty years old, it came into his heart to visit his brethren, the children of Israel.

24 †And having seen a certain man suffer an injury, he defended him: and striking the Egyptian, he avenged him who suffered the injury.

25 And he thought that his brethren understood that God, by his hand, would save them: but they understood it not.

26 †And the next day he showed himself to them that were at strife: and would have reconciled them in peace, saying: Men, ye are brethren, why hurt ye one another?

27 But he that did the injury to his neighbour, thrust him away, saying: Who hath appointed thee prince and judge over us?

28 Wilt thou kill me, as thou didst yesterday kill the Egyptian?

29 And Moses fled upon this word: and became a stranger in the land of Madian, where he begat two sons.

30 And when forty years were expired, †there appeared to him in the desert of Mount Sinai an angel, in a flame of fire, in a bush.

31 And Moses seeing it, wondered at the sight: and as he drew near to view it, the voice of the Lord came to him, saying:

32 I am the God of thy fathers, the God of Abraham, the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob. And Moses being terrified, durst not behold.

33 And the Lord said to him: Loose thy shoes from off thy feet; for the place wherein thou standest, is holy ground.

34 Seeing, I have seen the affliction of my people, which is in Egypt, and I have heard their groaning, and am come down to deliver them. And now come, and I will send thee into Egypt.

35 This Moses, whom they refused, saying: Who hath appointed thee prince and judge? him God sent a prince and redeemer, by the hand of the angel, who appeared to him in the bush.

36 †He brought them out, doing wonders and signs in the land of Egypt, and in the Red Sea, and in the desert for forty years.

37 This is that Moses who said to the children of Israel: †A prophet will God raise up to you out of your own brethren, as myself: him shall you hear.

38 †This is he who was in the church in the wilderness, with the angel, who spoke to him on Mount Sinai, and with our fathers: who received the words of life to give to us.

39 To whom our fathers would not be obedient: but repulsed him, and in their hearts returned back into Egypt, 40 Saying to Aaron: †Make us gods to go before us: for as to this Moses, who brought us out of the land of Egypt, we know not what is become of him.

41 And they made a calf in those days, and offered sacrifice to the idol, and rejoiced in the works of their own hands.

42 And God turned, and gave them up to serve the host of heaven, as it is written in the book of the prophets: †Did you offer victims and sacrifices to me for forty years in the desert, O house of Israel?

43 And you took unto you the tabernacle of Moloch, and the star of your god, Rempham, figures which you made to adore them. And I will carry you away beyond Babylon.

44 The tabernacle of the testimony was with our fathers in the desert, as God ordained for them, †speaking to Moses that he should make it according to the form which he had seen.

Polus, in his Synopsis Criticorum, on this place, says, "that no greater injury is done to God, by calling Moses a redeemer, in this place, than by calling him a mediator, in Gal. iii. 19. He is called a redeemer," says this learned Protestant commentator, "inasmuch as he led forth and preserved the people of God safe by the blood of a lamb, and thus exhibited a figure of the true redemption, through the blood of Christ." We all own that Jesus Christ, as having paid the ransom of our delivery with his own blood, is, strictly speaking, our only true Redeemer, and Advocate with his Father, who asks and obtains all things immediately by his own merit; but this does not exclude the prayers of the saints, both alive and dead. Did not the apostles pray for the people, and desire the people to pray for them? "Our Lord Jesus Christ still intercedes for us, and all the martyrs that are with him pray for us: nor will their intercession cease, till we cease our groanings," says S. Augustin, in Psal. lxxxv. in fine.

54 Now hearing these things, they were cut to the heart, and they gnashed with their teeth at him.

55 But he being full of the Holy Ghost, looking up stedfastly to heaven, saw the glory of God, and Jesus standing at the right hand of God. And he said: Behold I see the heavens opened, and the Son of man standing at the right hand of God.

56 And they crying out with a loud voice, stopped their ears, and with one accord rushed in violently upon him.

seen before possessed by the Gentiles.—This tabernacle, in which was kept the ark, remained with the Israelites till the time of David, or rather of Solomon, who built the temple. Wi.

VER. 48. But the Most High dwelleth not in houses made by hands. God is every where, nor is his presence confined to the temple, which was already once destroyed; and what if it be destroyed again, as Christ foretold? God must still be adored, worshipped, and served, as he was before the temple was first built, which was only by Solomon. Wi.—Dwelleth not in houses. That is, so as to stand in need of earthly dwellings, or to be contained, or circumscribed by them. Though otherwise, by his immense Divinity, he is in our houses, and every where else; and Christ in his humanity dwelt in houses: and is now on our altars. Ch.

VER. 51. With a stiff neck and uncircumcised heart. S. Stephen, inspired by the Holy Ghost, knowing he should die a martyr, boldly reproaches them for persecuting the prophets, for putting to death the Just One, that is, the Messiah, foretold by the prophets. Wi.

See Deut. xiii. 6; Num. xxiv.; 1 Mac. xi. 24, &c.

VER. 58. Invoking. See with what arms S. Stephen defended himself against the fury of his enemies. He put on charity for a breastplate, and by that came off victorious. By his love of God, he resisted the enraged Jews; by the love he bore his neighbour, he prayed for those that stoned him. S. Fulgentius, Serm. de

CHAP. VIII.

Philip converts the Samaritans, and baptizes the eunuch.

AND ^aat that time there was raised a great persecution against the church, which was at Jerusalem, and they were all dispersed through the countries of Juda and Samaria, except the apostles.

2 And devout men took care of Stephen's funeral, and made great mourning over him.

3 But Saul ravaged the church, entering into houses, and, hauling away men and women, committed them to prison.

4 They, therefore, who were dispersed, went about preaching the word of God.

5 And Philip going down to the city of Samaria, preached Christ to them.

6 And the people were attentive to those things, which were said by Philip, with one accord hearing, and seeing the miracles which he did.

7 For unclean spirits, crying out with a loud voice, went out of many who were possessed with them.

8 And many taken with the palsy, and that were lame, were healed.

9 And there was great joy in that city. But a certain man, named Simon, who before had been a magician in the city, seducing the people of Samaria, giving out that he was some great one:

10 To whom all hearkened, from the least to the greatest, saying: This man is the power of God, which is called great.

11 And they were attentive to him, because for a long time he had bewitched them with his sorceries.

12 But when they had believed Philip preaching of the kingdom of God, in the name of Jesus Christ, men and women were baptized.

13 Then Simon himself believed also: and being baptized, he adhered to Philip. Seeing also wonders and miracles done, he was struck with amazement.

CHAP. VIII. VER. 1. Were dispersed. During this great persecution of the Church, those who could not conceal themselves, were dispersed into different countries. Thus did the Almighty make use of the malice of his enemies, to the greater exaltation and glory of his own name. For those who fled, carried with them the light of the gospel wherever they went. Tirinus.—They were burning torches, which communicated of their holy fire to every place, in which they were scattered. S. Aug. Serm. 116.—Thus was the gospel disseminated from Jerusalem into all Judea and Samaria. Wi.

VER. 2. Took care. We see great devotion used in burying his body, and four centuries afterwards, at the finding and translating thereof. Very many miracles were performed on that occasion, as S. Augustin witnesses in his work de Civitate Dei, l. 22, c. 8, and Serm. de S. Steph. T. 8.

VER. 10. This man is the power of God, which is called (that is, which is truly) great. Simon pretended to be God, and the great God. See S. Iren. l. 1, c. 20.

VER. 11. *He had bewitched them with his sorceries, or magic: he had put them out of their wits, turned their heads, charmed them, stupified them. Wi.

VER. 13. Simon himself believed. That is, pretended to believe, that he might 14 Now when the apostles, who were in Jerusalem, had heard that Samaria had received the word of God, they sent to them Peter and John.

15 Who when they were come, prayed for them, that they might receive the Holy Ghost :

16 For he was not yet come upon any one of them, but they were only baptized in the name of the Lord Jesus.

17 Then they laid their hands upon them, and they received the Holy Ghost.

18 And when Simon saw, that by the imposition of the hands of the apostles, the Holy Ghost was given, he offered them money,

19 Saying : Give me also this power, that on whomsoever I shall lay hands, he may receive the Holy Ghost. But Peter said to him :

20 May thy money perish with thee : because thou hast esteemed the gift of God to be purchased with money.

21 Thou hast no part, nor lot in this matter : for thy heart is not right in the sight of God.

22 Do penance, therefore, for this thy wickedness : and pray to God, that perhaps this thought of thy heart may be forgiven thee.

23 For I see thou art in the gall of bitterness, and in the bonds of iniquity.

24 Then Simon answering, said : Pray you to the Lord for me, that none of these things which you have said, may come upon me.

25 And they indeed having testified, and preached the word of the Lord, returned to Jerusalem, and preached the gospel to many countries of the Samaritans.

26 And an angel of the Lord spoke to Philip, saying : Arise, and go towards the south, to the way that goeth down from Jerusalem to Gaza : this is desert.

27 And rising up, he went. And behold a man of Ethiopia, an eunuch, of great authority under Candace, queen of the Ethiopians, who had charge over all her treasures, had come to Jerusalem to adore :

28 And he was returning, sitting on his chariot, and reading Isaias, the prophet.

29 And the Spirit said to Philip Go near, and join thyself to that chariot.

30 And Philip running thither, heard him reading the prophet, Isaias, and he said : Thinkest thou that thou understandest what thou readest ?

31 And he said : How can I, unless some one show me ? And he desired Philip to come up, and sit with him.

32 And the place of the Scripture, which he read, was this : "As a sheep he was led to the slaughter : and like a lamb without a voice before his shearers, so opened he not his mouth.

33 In humility his judgment was taken away. Who shall declare his generation, for his life shall be taken away from the earth ?

34 And the eunuch answering Philip, said : I beseech thee, of whom doth the prophet speak this ? of himself, or of some other ?

35 And Philip, opening his mouth, and beginning at that Scripture, preached to him Jesus.

36 And as they went on their way, they came to a certain water : and the eunuch saith : See here is water, what hindereth me from being baptized ?

37 And Philip said : If thou believest with thy whole heart, thou mayest. And he answering, said : I believe that Jesus Christ is the Son of God.

38 And he commanded the chariot to stand still : and they both went down into the water, Philip, and the eunuch, and he baptized him.

obtain the power of speaking tongues, and working miracles, which was frequently imparted to the faithful at baptism. Menochius.

VER. 15. The Holy Ghost, which the apostles came to give the Samaritan Nophytes, was not the spirit of grace, of justice, and of sanctity, for that they had received at baptism ; but the spirit of strength, to confess with confidence and freedom the name of Jesus, and the supernatural and miraculous graces, usually at that time granted to the faithful, by the imposition of hands. Philip did not administer this sacrament, because he could not ; he was not a bishop. Hence now in the Church, we see only the chief pastors do it, principales et non alios videntur hoc facere. See S. Chrys. hom. 18, in Acta.—There is no mention here, it is true, of unction, but the most venerable antiquity clearly specifies it. S. Cyprian, in the third age, says, "It is moreover necessary, that he who has been baptized, should be anointed, that having received the chrism, that is, the unction, he may be the anointed of God." Ep. 70.—In the next age, S. Paeianus writes : "Do you say that this (the power of remitting sins) was granted only to the apostles ? Then I say, that they alone could baptize, and give the Holy Spirit, for to them alone was the command of doing it given. If, therefore, the right of conferring baptism, and of anointing, descended to their successors, to them also has come the power of binding and loosing." Ep. 1, ad Sym. Bibl. Max. T. 4, p. 307.

VER. 17. They received the Holy Ghost. Not but that they had received the grace of the Holy Ghost at their baptism ; but not that plenitude of grace, and those gifts, which they received from bishops in the sacrament of confirmation. This sacrament, as S. Chrys. observes,† S. Philip, the deacon, had not power to give. Wi.

VER. 18. Simon . . . offered them money. From hence it is called the sin of simony, to buy, sell, or give money for benefices, and spiritual things. It was vanity that made Simon desire this power. Wi.—Hence to give or receive money in exchange, or as a price for any spiritual good whatever, is justly esteemed sinful. It is called simony, from the name of the person who was first engaged in this sin. A.

VER. 20. May thy money perish with thee ; or go with thee to perdition. This was a prophecy, says S. Chrys., of S. Peter, who saw him incorrigible, and that he would not repent. Wi.

VER. 21. Nor lot in this matter. Lit. in this saying. Wi.

VER. 23. That perhaps this thought of thy heart may be forgiven thee. The word perhaps, as the interpreters commonly observe on this and other places, many times does not imply any doubt or uncertainty. There could be no doubt, says S. Chrys., only as to his repenting : if he repented, it is certain he would find remission of his sins. Wi.

VER. 23. In the gall of bitterness. In the bitter gall of hypocrisy, in the bonds, fetters, and chains of sin and iniquity. Wi.

VER. 24. Pray . . . for me. Instead of following the advice of S. Peter, he begs them to pray, not that God would touch his heart, and give him repentance ; but that the evils might not fall upon him. In this he is a true model of false penitents, who hate not the sin, but fear the punishment which is the consequence of it.

VER. 26. This is desert. In construction, whether we regard the Latin or Greek, to be desert, may either agree to the way leading to Gaza, or the city itself, which formerly had been almost destroyed. Wi.—To the site of old Gaza, which was then a desert ; above which was built the new Gaza, nearer to the sea. V.

VER. 27. An eunuch. It is likely a proselyte converted to the Jewish religion. He shows his zeal and devotion, says S. Chrys., not only by coming to Jerusalem, but by reading the prophets in his chariot. Wi.

VER. 31. How can I, unless some one show me,† or be a guide to me ? as in the Greek. Let every one, and especially the unlearned, take good notice of these words, not to wrest the Scriptures to his own perdition. To follow his own private judgment, or his private spirit, is to make choice of a blind and incompetent guide, as to the sense of the Scriptures, and the mysteries of faith. See the preface to the Gospel of S. John. Wi.—It appears this eunuch was not one of those, who are now so commonly seen, who think the Scripture is every where plain, and the sense open to every body. Such would do much better to acknowledge that they stand in need of a guide. Grotius, hic.

VER. 32, 33. As a sheep, or a lamb, &c. The eunuch, by Divine providence, was now reading the 53rd chap. of Isaias, which is of Christ, and his sufferings.—In humility his judgment was taken away. The sense seems to be, that Christ having humbled himself, so as to undergo an unjust judgment, or condemnation to die on the cross, hath been again raised from the dead, and delivered from that judgment by his glorious resurrection and ascension. Wi.

VER. 36. Here is water. This shows that baptism is to be given with water. Wi.

VER. 37. If thou believest, &c. The Scripture many times mentions one disposition, when others no less necessary are supposed, as here a sorrow for sins, a firm hope, love of God, &c. Wi.

VER. 38. We are not to suppose, in the administration of the sacraments in 39 And when they were come up out of the water, the Spirit of the Lord took away Philip, and the eunuch saw him no more. And he went on his way rejoicing.

40 But Philip was found in Azotus, and passing through he preached the gospel to all the cities, till he came to Cæsarea.

CHAP. IX.

Paul's conversion and zeal. Peter heals Eneas, and raises Tabitha to life.

AND *Saul, as yet breathing out threatenings, and slaughter against the disciples of the Lord, went to the high priest,

2 And asked of him letters to Damascus to the synagogues: that if he found any men and women of this way, he might bring them bound to Jerusalem.

3 *And as he went on his journey, it came to pass that he drew near to Damascus: and suddenly a light from heaven shined round about him.

4 And falling on the ground, he heard a voice saying to him: Saul, Saul, why dost thou persecute me?

5 And he said: Who art thou, Lord? And he: I am Jesus, whom thou dost persecute? It is hard for thee to kick against the goad.

6 And he, trembling and astonished, said: Lord, what wilt thou have me to do?

7 And the Lord said to him: Arise, and go into the city, and there it shall be told thee what thou must do. Now the men who went in company with him, stood amazed, hearing indeed a voice, but seeing no one.

8 And Saul arose from the ground, and his eyes being open, he saw nothing. But they leading him by the hands, brought him into Damascus.

9 And he was there three days, without sight, and he neither eat nor drank.

10 Now there was a certain disciple at Damascus, by name Ananias: and the Lord said to him in a vision: Ananias. And he said: Behold I am here, Lord.

11 And the Lord said to him: Arise, and go into the street, that is called Strait, and seek in the house of Judas, one named Saul, of Tarsus: for behold he prayeth.

12 (And he saw a man named Ananias coming in, and laying his hands upon him, that he might receive his sight.)

13 But Ananias answered: Lord, I have heard from many of this man, how great evils he hath done to thy saints in Jerusalem:

14 And here he hath authority from the chief priests to bind all, that invoke thy name.

15 And the Lord said to him: Go, for this man is a vessel of election to me, to carry my name before the Gentiles, and kings, and children of Israel.

16 For I will show him how great things he must suffer for the sake of my name.

17 And Ananias went his way, and entered into the house: and laying his hands on him, he said: Saul, brother, the Lord Jesus hath sent me, he who appeared to thee in the way as thou camest, that thou mayest receive thy sight, and be filled with the Holy Ghost.

18 And immediately there fell from his eyes as it were scales, and he received his sight: and rising up, he was baptized.

19 And when he had taken meat, he was strengthened. And he was with the disciples who were at Damascus, for some days.

20 And immediately he preached Jesus in the synagogues, that he is the Son of God.

21 And all were astonished that heard him, and said: Is not this he who in Jerusalem attacked violently those who called upon that name: and came hither for this purpose, that he might lead them bound to the chief priests?

22 But Saul increased much more in strength, and confounded the Jews who dwelt at Damascus, affirming that this is the Christ.

23 And when many days were passed, the Jews consulted together to kill him.

24 But their lying in wait was made known to Saul. And they guarded the gates also day and night, that they might kill him.

25 But the disciples taking him by night, conveyed him away by the wall, letting him down in a basket.

26 And when he was come into Jerusalem, he offered the primitive Church, nothing more was done than what we read, totidem litteris, in the Scripture. S. VER. 7. There it shall be told thee, &c. The Almighty having established a Church and ministry, the depositories of his doctrines, does not, even on this extraordinary occasion, transgress his own laws; but sends him to the ministers of religion, that instruction may be imparted through them, as through its proper channel. This observation is worthy the notice of the self-inspired of the present day, who pretend to receive their light direct from heaven. Nothing can be more opposite to the spirit of the gospel than such delusion. A.—Hear the great S. Augustin: "Paul, though with the Divine and heavenly voice prostrated and instructed, yet was sent to a man to receive the sacraments, and to be joined to the Church." De Doct. Chris. l. 1, in Præm.

his sorrow for his past conduct. He likewise spent the time in prayer, to prepare himself for the reception of grace. S. Chrys. Hom. 19.

VER. 15. A vessel of election. A chosen elect vessel, and minister of the gospel. Wi.—Σκεῦος ἐκλογῆς, an organ, or instrument.

VER. 17. Laying his hands on him. This imposition of hands, made use of on different occasions, was to pray that he might receive his sight, as well as the grace of the Holy Ghost, which God sometimes gave to persons not yet baptized, as to Cornelius. Acts x. 44. Wi.—This imposition of hands was not the same as that by which the faithful were confirmed, or ordained ministers, but a ceremony commonly used by the apostles to restore health to the sick. If Saul, in consequence, receives the Holy Ghost, it was an extraordinary miraculous event, which was not an unfrequent circumstance in the infancy of Christianity. Calmet.

VER. 23. When many days were passed. By the account S. Paul gives of himself, (Gal. i.) soon after his conversion, he went into Arabia, and about three years after he might come to Damascus. Then it seems to have happened that they were for killing him, for becoming a Christian; and the brethren saved his life, by conveying him down the walls of the town in a basket. After this he went to Jerusalem, where the disciples knew little of him, and were afraid of him, till S. Barnabas introduced him to the apostles, and gave an account of his conversion. Wi.—Many days. That is, three years. For Saul went for a time from Damascus to Arabia. Gal. i. 17, and 18. It was on his return from thence that the Jews conspired against his life, as is here related. Tirinus.

to join himself to the disciples, and all were afraid of him, not believing that he was a disciple.

27 But Barnabas took him and brought him to the apostles, and related to them how he had seen the Lord in the way, and that he had spoken to him, and how in Damascus he had acted confidently in the name of Jesus.

28 And he was with them, coming in and going out, in Jerusalem, and acting confidently in the name of the Lord.

29 He spoke also to the Gentiles, and disputed with the Grecians: but they sought to kill him.

30 Which when the brethren had known, they brought him down to Cæsarea, and sent him away to Tarsus.

31 The church indeed had peace throughout all Judea, and Galilee, and Samaria, and was increased, walking in the fear of the Lord, and was filled with the consolation of the Holy Ghost.

32 And it came to pass, that Peter, as he passed through, visiting all, came to the saints, who dwelt at Lydda.

33 And he found there a certain man, named Eneas, lying on his bed for eight years, who was ill of the palsy.

34 And Peter said to him: Eneas, the Lord Jesus Christ healeth thee: arise, and make thy bed. And immediately he arose.

35 And all that dwelt at Lydda, and Saron, saw him: and they were converted to the Lord.

36 And in Joppe there was a certain disciple, named Tabitha, which, being interpreted, is called Dorcas. This woman was full of good works and alms-deeds, which she performed.

37 And it came to pass in those days, that she was sick, and died. Whom when they had washed, they laid her in an upper chamber.

38 And Lydda being near to Joppe, the disciples hearing that Peter was there, sent two men to him with this request: Delay not to come even to us.

39 And Peter rising up, came with them. And when he was arrived, they brought him into the upper chamber: and all the widows stood round about him weeping, and showing him the coats and garments, which Dorcas had made them.

40 And having put them all out, Peter kneeling down, prayed; and turning to the body, he said: Tabitha, arise: and she opened her eyes: and having seen Peter, sat up.

41 And giving her his hand, he raised her up. And when he had called the saints and the widows, he presented her alive.

42 And it was made known throughout all Joppe; and many believed in the Lord.

43 And it came to pass, that he stayed many days in Joppe, with one Simon, a tanner.

CHAP. X.

Cornelius is received into the Church. Peter's vision.

NOW *there was a certain man in Cæsarea, named Cornelius, a centurion of the band, which is called the Italian,

2 A religious man, and one that feared God, with all his house, who gave much alms to the people, and prayed to God always:

3 He saw in a vision manifestly, about the ninth hour of the day, an angel of God coming in to him, and saying to him: Cornelius.

4 And he beholding him, being seized with fear, said: What is it, Lord? And he said to him: Thy prayers, and thy alms, have ascended for a memorial in the sight of God.

5 And now send men to Joppe, and call hither one Simon, who is surnamed Peter:

6 He lodgeth with one Simon, a tanner, whose house is by the sea side: he shall tell thee what thou must do.

7 And when the angel who spoke to him was departed, he called two of his household servants, and a soldier, that feared the Lord, of those who were under him:

8 To whom, when he had related all, he sent them to Joppe.

9 And on the next day, whilst they were going on their journey, and drawing near to the city, Peter went up to the higher parts of the house to pray, about the sixth hour,

* A. D. 39.

VER. 27. Brought him to the apostles Peter and James. See Gal. i. 18, and 19.

VER. 29. He spoke also to the Gentiles, and disputed with the Grecians, or Hellenists.* See chap. vi. 1. By the Gentiles, many understand those who had been Gentiles, and were become proselytes or converts to the Jewish religion, and not those who still remained Gentiles. And by the Greeks, or Hellenists, they understand Jews, who had lived in places where they spoke Greek, not Syriac, whom S. Paul endeavoured to convert to the Christian faith. Wi.

VER. 36. Tabitha, in Syriac, means the same as Dorcas in Greek, that is, a wild goat. V.—See here the powerful effects of good works, and alms-deeds; they reach even to the next life. B.—Hence that of the wise man, alms free from death.

VER. 40. And having put them all out, not to disturb him while he prayed. —Sat up, raised herself a little; and Peter taking her by the hand, lifted her quite up, and calling in the company, presented her to them alive and well. Wi.

VER. 41. Raising the dead to life can only be the work of God. This woman was raised to life for the comfort of the faithful, and the conversion of others. She herself might likewise have an opportunity of acquiring greater merit, otherwise the repose of another life is preferable to a return to the miseries of this world. D. Dion. Carthus.

VER. 43. In the Greek is added: instructing the new converts, and fortifying them in the faith they had just embraced.

* V. 29. Loquebatur quoque Gentibus, et disputabat cum Græcis. In almost all Greek copies, there is nothing for Gentibus, and we only read, he spoke and disputed with the Grecians, or Hellenists; πρὸς τοὺς Ἑλληνας. See chap. i. 1.

CHAP. X. VER. 1. A cohort, with the Romans, was a body of infantry 500 strong. There were ten cohorts in each legion. There were, generally speaking, two centurions appointed to the command of each cohort. V.

VER. 2. A religious man, and one that feared God. He was not a Jew, yet believed in one God.—Always, that is, frequently, praying, and giving alms. In the Rheims Testament we find this note: "Hereby it appeareth, that such works as are done before justification, though they suffice not to salvation, yet are acceptable preparatives to the grace of justification, and such as move God to mercy. . . . though all such preparative works come also of grace." Wi.—Cornelius religiously observed the law of nature, and the principal points of the Jewish moral law, though he did not profess Judaism. Calmet.—"His former goodness could no longer avail him, unless he were, by the bond of Christian society and peace, incorporated to the Church; he is therefore ordered to send unto Peter, that by him he may learn Christ, by him he may be baptized." S. Aug., l. i, de Bap. c. 8.

VER. 3. He saw in a vision manifestly. An angel appearing visibly to him. Wi.

VER. 9. Stated hours for prayer were appointed both in the old and new law. Of this S. Cyprian writes: "In celebrating their prayers, we find that the three children of Daniel observed the third, sixth, and ninth hour. Thus, afterwards, at the third hour, the Holy Ghost descended upon the apostles, fulfilling the grace of our Lord's promise: at the sixth hour, Peter going up to the higher room of the house, was both by voice and sign from God instructed, that all nations should be admitted to the grace of salvation, of which he before doubted; and our Lord being crucified at the sixth hour, at the ninth washed away our sins by his blood. But to us, besides the seasons observed of old, the set times of praying are increased; for we must pray in the morning early, that the resurrection of our Lord may be celebrated by morning prayer; in the morning early will I stand before Thee, early in the morning wilt thou hear my voice. Psal. v. Towards the evening also, when the sun departeth, we must of necessity pray again." De Orat. Dom. No. 15.

10 And being hungry, he was desirous to taste some-what. And as they were preparing, there came upon him an ecstasy of mind.

11 And he saw heaven opened, and a certain vessel descending, as it were a great sheet, let down by the four corners from heaven to the earth,

12 In which were all manner of four-footed beasts, and creeping things of the earth, and fowls of the air.

13 And there came a voice to him : Arise, Peter, kill, and eat.

14 But Peter said : Far be it from me, Lord, for I have never eaten any common and unclean thing.

15 And the voice spoke to him again the second time : That which God hath purified, do not thou call common.

16 And this was done thrice : and presently the vessel was taken up again into heaven.

17 Now, whilst Peter was doubting within himself, what the vision which he had seen should mean, behold the men who were sent by Cornelius, inquiring for Simon's house, stood at the gate.

18 And when they had called, they asked, if Simon, who is surnamed Peter, lodged there ?

19 And as Peter was thinking on the vision, the Spirit said to him : Behold three men seek thee.

20 Arise, therefore, go down, and go with them, doubting nothing : for I have sent them.

21 Then Peter going down to the men, said : Behold I am he whom you seek : what is the cause, for which you are come ?

22 And they said, Cornelius, a centurion, a just man, and one that feareth God, and that hath good testimony from all the nations of the Jews, received an answer of a holy angel, to send for thee into his house, and to hear words from thee.

23 Then bringing them in, he lodged them. And the day following, he arose and went with them : and some of the brethren from Joppe, accompanied him.

24 And the day after he entered into Cæsarea. Now Cornelius was waiting for them, having called together his kinsmen, and special friends.

25 And it came to pass, when Peter was come in, Cornelius met him, and falling down at his feet, worshipped.

a Deut. x. 17 ; 2 Par. xix. 7 ; Job xxxiv. 19 ; Wisd. vi. 8 ; Eccl. xxxv. 15 ; Rom. ii. 11 ;

26 But Peter raised him up, saying : Rise, I myself also am a man.

27 And talking with him, he went in, and found many that were come together.

28 And he said to them : You know how abominable a thing it is for a man that is a Jew, to keep company with, or to come to, one of another nation : but God hath showed to me, not to call any man common or unclean.

29 Wherefore, making no doubt, I came when I was sent for. I ask, therefore, for what cause you have sent for me ?

30 And Cornelius said : Four days ago, until this hour, I was praying in my house at the ninth hour, and behold a man stood before me in white apparel, and said :

31 Cornelius, thy prayer is heard, and thy alms are remembered in the sight of God.

32 Send, therefore, to Joppe, and call hither Simon, who is surnamed Peter : he lodgeth in the house of Simon, a tanner, by the sea side.

33 Immediately, therefore, I sent to thee : and thou hast done well in coming. Now, therefore, all we are present in thy sight, to hear all things whatsoever are commanded thee by the Lord.

34 Then Peter, opening his mouth, said : In truth, I perceive *that God is no respecter of persons.

35 But in every nation, he that feareth him, and worketh justice, is acceptable to him.

36 God sent the word to the children of Israel, preaching peace through Jesus Christ : (he is Lord of all).

37 You know the word which hath been published through all Judea : *for it began from Galilee, after the baptism which John preached, 38 Jesus, of Nazareth : how God anointed him with the Holy Ghost, and with power, who went about doing good, and healing all that were oppressed by the devil ; for God was with him.

39 And we are witnesses of all things, which he did in the land of the Jews, and in Jerusalem, whom they killed, hanging him upon a tree.

40 Him God raised up the third day, and gave him to be made manifest, 41 Not to all the people, but to witnesses pre-ordained of God, even to us, who eat and drank with him, after he rose again from the dead.

Gal. ii. 6 ; Eph. vi. 9 ; Col. iii. 25 ; 1 Pet. i. 17.—b Luke iv. 14.

VER. 10. There came upon him an ecstasy of mind.* This is the true sense by the Greek. I have never yet eaten any unclean thing. This seems to have happened, an. 35. Till then the apostles followed the ceremonies of the law of Moses. W1.

VER. 15. God hath purified. Not that the Almighty had already sanctified the Gentiles ; but he had called them, that they might become so. He had thrown down the wall of separation, which had stood between Jew and Gentile ; he had made one fold to contain all the sheep under one shepherd. Jesus Christ, by his blood, had generally reconciled all mankind to his Father. In this sense all were pure ; that is, all had a right, as all were called, to partake of the merits of the Son of God. All had a right to communicate in the truths of the gospel, and in the sacraments, which were the appointed channels, through which the graces and merits of Jesus Christ were applied. Calmet.—Here, then, God first announced to Peter that the time was come to preach to the Gentiles unto salvation, no less than to the Jews ; with full freedom to eat all meats, without respect to the prohibition of some made in the old law. B.

VER. 25. Cornelius . . . worshipped.† Some think Cornelius might look upon S. Peter as more than a man, and offer to him Divine worship : but by prostrating, he might only intend to pay such an honour to him as is paid to persons eminent in dignity, especially according to the custom of the eastern people. W1.

VER. 28. Abominable a thing. The Jews extended their aversion to the Gentiles to an unnatural length ; hence the frequent accusations of the latter, that they were a nation the enemies of mankind. Josephus defends his nation against the imputation. He allows that Moses forbids them to admit strangers into their solemnities, and exercises of religion, but not to refuse any thing which common humanity demands of all. Jos. lib. 2, cont. Ap.

VER. 35. In every nation, &c. That is to say, not only Jews, but Gentiles also, of what nation soever, are acceptable to God, if they fear him, and work justice. But then true faith is always to be presupposed, without which, (saith S. Paul, Heb. xi. 6,) it is impossible to please God. Beware then of the error of those who would infer from this passage, that men of all religions may be pleasing to God. For since none but the true religion can be from God, all other religions must be from the father of lies ; and therefore highly displeasing to the God of truth. Ch.—He that feareth him and worketh justice. So he calls the prayers, alms-deeds, and charitable works of this Gentile Cornelius. W1.

VER. 36. God sent the word.† By this word, some understand the eternal Word, the Son of God ; but by the next verse, we may rather expound it of the word of the gospel preached. Jesus Christ . . . he is Lord of all things. A proof of Christ's Divinity. W1.

VER. 37. For it began, or its beginning was, &c.
VER. 39. Whom they killed. At the very first, says S. Chrys., the apostles preached Christ crucified, and tell them they had put to death on a cross the Lord of all things, the Judge of the living and the dead. W1.

42 And he commanded us to preach to the people, and to testify that it is he who hath been appointed by God to be the judge of the living and of the dead.

43 *To him all the prophets give testimony, that through his name all receive remission of sins, who believe in him.

44 While Peter was yet speaking these words, the Holy Ghost fell upon all them that were hearing the word.

45 And the faithful of the circumcision, who had come with Peter, were astonished because the grace of the Holy Ghost was also poured out upon the Gentiles.

46 For they heard them speaking with tongues, and magnifying God.

47 Then Peter answered: Can any man forbid water, that these should not be baptized, who have received the Holy Ghost as well as we?

48 And he commanded them to be baptized in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ. Then they entreated him to stay with them some days.

CHAP. XI.

Peter defends his having received the Gentiles into the Church. Many are converted at Antioch.

AND the apostles and brethren who were in Judea, heard that the Gentiles also had received the word of God.

2 And when Peter was come up to Jerusalem, they who were of the circumcision, disputed against him,

3 Saying: Why didst thou go in to men uncircumcised, and didst eat with them?

4 But Peter began and declared to them the matter in order, saying:

5 I was in the city of Joppe, praying, and I saw in an ecstasy of mind a vision, a certain vessel descending, as it were a great sheet let down from heaven by four corners, and it came even to me.

6 Into which looking I considered, and saw four-footed creatures of the earth, and beasts, and creeping things, and fowls of the air:

7 And I heard also a voice, saying to me: Arise, Peter, kill and eat.

8 And I said: By no means, Lord: for nothing common or unclean hath ever entered into my mouth.

9 And the voice answered the second time from heaven: What God hath made clean, call not thou common.

VER. 42. The living and of the dead. This may be understood of the elect, who live by grace, and the reprobate, who are spiritually dead; or perhaps more literally, of those who shall be found living upon earth at the second coming of Christ, and of all who have died from the commencement of the world to the end of time. CHAP. XI. VER. 2. Disputed against him. S. Epiphanius makes Cerinthus, who was the next heresiarch to Simon Magus, the author of this dispute. He likewise says it was he, who excited the Jews against S. Paul, (Acts xxi.) and 10 And this was done three times: and all were taken up again into heaven.

11 And behold immediately there were three men come to the house wherein I was, sent to me from Cæsarea.

12 And the spirit said to me, that I should go with them, nothing doubting. And these six brethren went with me also, and we entered into the man's house.

13 And he told us, how he had seen an angel in his house, standing and saying to him: Send to Joppe, and call hither Simon, who is surnamed Peter, 14 Who shall speak to thee words, whereby thou and all thy house shall be saved.

15 And when I had begun to speak, the Holy Ghost fell upon them, as upon us also in the beginning.

16 And I remembered the word of the Lord, as he said: 'John indeed baptized with water, but you shall be baptized with the Holy Ghost.

17 If then God gave to them the same grace, as to us also who have believed in the Lord Jesus Christ: who was I, that I could oppose God?

18 When they had heard these things, they held their peace: and glorified God, saying: God then hath also to the Gentiles given repentance unto life.

19 And they indeed, who had been dispersed, by the persecution that arose on occasion of Stephen, went about as far as Phenice, and Cyprus, and Antioch, speaking the word to none, but to the Jews only.

20 But some of them were men of Cyprus and Cyrene, who, when they had entered into Antioch, spoke also to the Grecians, preaching the Lord Jesus.

21 And the hand of the Lord was with them: and a great number believing, was converted to the Lord.*

22 And the report of these things came to the ears of the church that was at Jerusalem, and they sent Barnabas as far as Antioch.

23 Who when he was come, and had seen the grace of God, rejoiced: and exhorted them all with purpose of heart to continue in the Lord.

24 For he was a good man, and full of the Holy Ghost, and of faith. And a great multitude was added to the Lord.

that the first Council of Jerusalem was convened to condemn him. S. Epiph. Hæres. 28, c. 2.

VER. 3. And didst eat with them. The Jews looked upon it as a thing altogether abominable for them to eat with uncircumcised Gentiles; but S. Peter satisfied them, or silenced them by a plain and sincere recital of his vision, and of what happened at the house of Cornelius. Wi.

VER. 20. Some of them, at Antioch, spoke also to the Grecians: * by which many understand, to the Gentiles, though in most Greek copies we read, to the Hellenists. Wi.

VER. 24. Multitude was added, as before, (chap. x.,) a few were added to the visible Church. Ever since Christ's ascension, this Church has been notoriously seen. Of her ministers, their preaching has been open, their sacraments visible, their discipline visible, their persecutions visible, their wonderful increase visible, and their manifestly Divine protection visible, and known to all the world.

VER. 26. At Antioch the disciples were first named Christians, when S. Paul and S. Barnabas were preaching there. Before that, they were called the disciples of Jesus, and sometimes Nazarenes, (see Acts xxiv. 5,) or perhaps Galileans. This honourable name of Christians, distinguished them from Gentiles and Jews, and from all heretical sects, who generally had some name from the authors of such sects, as Simonites, Cerinthians, Nicolaites, &c. Of which see S. Epiphanius. The faithful had also after some time the name of Catholics.

year: and they taught a great multitude, so that at Antioch the disciples were first named Christians.

27 And in these days there came prophets from Jerusalem to Antioch.

28 And one of them, named Agabus, rising up, signified by the spirit, that there should be a great famine over the whole world, which came to pass under Claudius.

29 And the disciples, every man according to his ability, resolved to send relief to the brethren who dwelt in Judea:

30 Which also they did, sending it to the ancients by the hands of Barnabas and Saul.*

Herod's persecution. Peter's deliverance by an angel. Herod's punishment.

AND ^aat the same time Herod, the king, stretched forth his hands, to afflict some of the church.

2 And he killed James, the brother of John, with the sword.

3 And seeing that it pleased the Jews, he proceeded farther to take Peter also. Now it was in the days of the azymes.

4 Whom as soon as he had apprehended, he cast into prison, delivering him to four quaternions of soldiers, to be kept, intending after the Pasch to bring him forth to the people.

5 Peter, therefore, was kept in prison. But prayer was made without ceasing, by the church, to God, for him.

6 And when Herod would have brought him forth, that very night Peter was sleeping between two soldiers, being taught in the Apostles' Creed to believe the Catholic Church. And S. Augustin, in several places, takes notice, that no heretics could ever get themselves called by this name; nor can they to this present. See S. Aug. de Util. Credendi, c. 8, de Vera Relig. c. 7, cont. Epist. Fundam. c. 4. Whosoever is of the true faith of Christ, may justly say, Christian is my name, Catholic my surname: a greater honour, and a greater advantage, than to be of any royal family. Wi.—S. Pacianus, in his letter to Sympronian, says, When heresies had arisen, and endeavoured by diverse names to tear the dove of the Lord and Queen in pieces, the faithful required their surname: hence they who before were called Christians, are now surnamed also Catholics. Christian is my name, and Catholic my surname. By this term Catholic, the apostles, in their creed, have distinguished the one true visible Church from all and every other congregation, sect, or party. This mark is so self-evident, that S. Augustin hesitates not to say, "In the lap of the Church the very name of Catholic keepeth me." Cont. Ep. Fund. c. 4.

VER. 29. Who dwell in Judea. Most of the faithful in Jerusalem, who wished to live perfect lives, had sold their possessions, and placed the price in the hands of the apostles; and many others, who had not voluntarily relinquished their property, had probably lost most of it in the persecutions. Hence arose the particular distress of the brethren in Jerusalem, to relieve which the Gentiles made collections. It was meet, that they who had been made partakers of their spiritual goods, should now in time of need administer to them of their temporal substance. De Dion. Carth.

VER. 30. Sending it to the ancients;† elders, &c. In this and divers other places, are not to be understood such as were elder in age, but such as had offices and dignities, and by Divine authority, and who with a due subordination were to govern the Church: so that by this word were signified apostles, bishops, and priests. But of this more hereafter. Wi.—The ancients or priests, seniors, πρεσβυτέρους. This is the first place in the New Testament where priests are mentioned. Some interpreters think, that by this word, ancients, are meant the apostles; but this is not likely. The apostles must at that time have been dispersed over all the world. Others think it was some of the older deacons, who had charge of the alms. We like the opinion of those who think it means priests, subordinate to the apostles, who had the charge of governing the faithful in their absence. Thus the Christian Church will appear modelled after the form of the synagogue. First, the bishop, who presides, corresponds to the head of the synagogue; the priests, to the ancients, who sat on the right and left of the chief; and the deacons, to the disciples of the scribes, who studied the law. It must be allowed that many passages occur in Scripture, which it seems necessary to explain of priests of the second rank. S. Paul, (1 Tim. v. 1, 17, 19,) S. James, (v. 14,) orders the priests to be called in to anoint the sick man, which cannot be explained bound with two chains: and the guards before the door kept the prison.

7 And behold an angel of the Lord stood by him: and a light shined in the room: and he striking Peter on the side, raised him up, saying: Arise quickly. And the chains fell off from his hands.

8 And the angel said to him: Gird thyself, and put on thy sandals. And he did so. And he said to him: Cast thy garment about thee, and follow me.

9 And going out, he followed him, and knew not that it was true, which was done by the angel: but thought he saw a vision.

10 And having passed through the first and the second ward, they came to the iron gate that leadeth to the city, which of itself opened to them. And going out, they passed on through one street: and immediately the angel departed from him.

11 And Peter coming to himself, said: Now I know indeed, that the Lord hath sent his angel, and hath delivered me out of the hand of Herod, and from all the expectation of the people of the Jews.

12 And considering he came to the house of Mary, the mother of John, who was surnamed Mark, where many were assembled, and praying.

13 And when he knocked at the door of the gate, a damsel came to hearken, named Rhode.

14 And as soon as she knew Peter's voice, she opened not the gate for joy, but running in, she told that Peter stood before the gate.

15 But they said to her: Thou art mad. But she affirmed that it was so. Then said they: It is his angel.

of bishops, as there was only one in each town. It must nevertheless be observed, that this same word ancient, or priest, is often used in Scripture, and primitive writings, to designate a bishop. Calmet.

† V. 30. Ad seniores, πρὸς τοὺς πρεσβυτέρους. This Greek word πρεσβύτερος, in our Latin Vulg., is sometimes translated presbyter, sometimes senior, sometimes major natu, and is commonly put to signify bishops, or priests, as shall be seen hereafter.

CHAP. XII. VER. 1. Herod. Agrippa, made king by the emperor Caius, (see Jos. vi. 18; Antiq. c. 8, and l. 19, c. 5,) put to death James the greater, brother to John. Wi.—This man was the same as Agrippa, by which name he is most commonly known. He was brother to the famous Herodias, who was the cause of S. John the Baptist's decollation, (Calmet,) and son-in-law of Herod the Great, by his father Aristobulus. V.

VER. 2. S. James the elder, brother of S. John the evangelist.

VER. 3. The days of the azymes. By this we may know about the time when S. James was executed. Peter was to be reserved till after the Pasch, because it was not usual for the Jews to put any one to a violent death on a festival day. They would not damp the joy of the solemnity by such actions. Menoch.

VER. 4. *To four quaternions of soldiers. To four times four soldiers, or to sixteen soldiers, each band or file consisting of four. Wi.

VER. 7. An angel. This was probably his angel guardian. It has always been the constant belief of the Church, that each individual is put under the protection of a tutelar angel. A.—S. Bernard, on these words of the psalm, he has given his angels a charge over thee, thus expresses himself: Wonderful condescension! and truly great love! He has given his angels a charge over thee, to guard thee in all thy ways. What is man, O God, that thou shouldst thus be mindful of him, or the son of man, that thou shouldst look upon him! What reverence, devotion, and confidence, should this word inspire into us! Reverence their presence, be grateful for their good will; have confidence in their protection; walk with circumspection; your angel is present. . . . If a grievous temptation urges; if great tribulation hangs over you; call upon your leader, your helper in opportunities, in tribulations; call upon him, and say, Save us, or we perish, &c. S. Bern. Sermon in Psalm. Qui habitat — A light shined in the room. To Peter only; not to the rest. Wi.

VER. 15. Thou art mad, or talkest idly.—Then said they, It is his angel. It seems ridiculous to translate here a messenger. Does a messenger speak the very voice of him that sends him? S. Chrys.† and others on this place, observe, that 16 But Peter continued knocking. And when they had opened, they saw him, and were astonished.

17 But he beckoning to them with his hand to hold their peace, told how the Lord had brought him out of prison, and he said: Tell these things to James and to the brethren. And being gone out, he went into another place.

18 As soon as it was day, there was no small confusion among the soldiers, what was become of Peter.

19 And when Herod had sought for him, and found him not, having examined the keepers, he commanded they should be led away: and going down from Judea to Cæsarea, he stayed there.

20 And he was angry with the Tyrians and the Sidonians. But they with one accord came to him, and having gained Blastus, who was the king's chamberlain, they desired peace, because their countries were nourished by him.

21 And upon a day appointed, Herod, arrayed in royal apparel, sat on the judgment-seat, and made an oration to them.

22 And the people with acclamations cried out: It is the voice of a god, and not of a man.

23 And forthwith an angel of the Lord struck him, because he had not given the honour to God: and eaten up by worms, he expired.*

24 But the word of the Lord increased and multiplied.

25 And Barnabas and Saul returned from Jerusalem, having fulfilled their ministry, taking with them John, who was surnamed Mark.

CHAP. XIII.

Saul and Barnabas are sent forth by the Holy Ghost. They preach in Cyprus and in Antioch of Pisidia.

they believed that every one, at least of the faithful, hath a good angel. Wi.—Such persons as can believe that God permits evil spirits to tempt us, can find no difficulty surely in believing that the same good, just, and merciful Creator, will permit good spirits to guide, protect, and assist us. Repeated proofs of both are found in holy writ. The learned Protestant commentator, Polus, on this text, says, Hujusmodi visis assueverat eo tempore Ecclesia, quæ etiam novit fideles præsidio angelorum esse circumseptos. The Church at that period had been accustomed to similar apparitions, nor is she ignorant that the faithful are secured by the protection of angels. T. 4, p. 1494.

VER. 17. He went into another place. Did not think fit to stay in the city of Jerusalem. S. Chrys. takes notice, that upon another occasion, when he was delivered by an angel out of prison, he went boldly the next day, and preached in the temple, (chap. v. 19,) but there he was ordered by an angel so to do: now to stay without such orders, would have been rashly to expose himself, and a kind of tempting God. Wi.

VER. 19. Should be led away to punishment or death, according to the sense both of the Latin and Greek text. Wi.

VER. 23. Struck him. Joseph relates, that when Herod saw he must die, he replied to the flatteries of the people, "See, he, whom you call a god, is snatched out of life, in spite of himself. The necessity of suffering death proves the falsity of your words; but we must submit to the will of God." Antiquit. lib. 17, c. 9, et de Bello, lib. 1, c. 21.—Princes may take warning from this example, not to take delight in the praises and flatteries of their subjects, so as to forget themselves to be men, and the God of heaven to be the supreme Lord of all, to whose just tribunal princes and subjects are equally amenable. A.—Eaten up by worms. A visible judgment of God, for his pride and vanity. Wi.

VER. 25. Returned from Jerusalem. to Antioch, the capital of Syria. Wi.—This John Mark, the companion of SS. Paul and Barnabas, was not the evangelist who bore that name; but a cousin of Barnabas, son of Mary, in whose house the apostles generally assembled at Jerusalem. Calmet.

nabas, and Simon, who was called Niger, and Lucius of Cyrene, and Manahen, who was the foster-brother of Herod, the tetrarch, and Saul.

2 And as they were ministering to the Lord, and fasting, the Holy Ghost said to them: Separate me Saul and Barnabas, for the work to which I have taken them.

3 Then they fasting and praying, and imposing their hands upon them, sent them away.

4 So they being sent by the Holy Ghost, went to Seleucia: and from thence they sailed to Cyprus.

5 And when they were come to Salamina, they preached the word of God in the synagogues of the Jews. And they had also John in their ministry.

6 And when they had gone through the whole island as far as Paphos, they found a certain man, a magician, a false prophet, a Jew, whose name was Bar-jesus,

7 Who was with the proconsul, Sergius Paulus, a prudent man. This man, sending for Barnabas and Saul, desired to hear the word of God.

8 But Elymas, the magician, (for so his name is interpreted,) withstood them, seeking to turn away the proconsul from the faith.

9 Then Saul, who also is Paul, filled with the Holy Ghost, looking upon him,

10 Said: O thou full of all guile, and of all deceit, son of the devil, enemy of all justice, thou dost not cease to pervert the right ways of the Lord.

11 And now behold the hand of the Lord upon thee, and thou shalt be blind, not seeing the sun for a time. And immediately there fell on him a mist and a darkness, and going about, he sought some one to lead him by the hand.

12 Then the proconsul, when he had seen what was done, believed, admiring at the doctrine of the Lord.

13 And when Paul, and they who were with him, had CHAP. XIII. VER. 1. Manahen . . . foster-brother of Herod, or nursed with the same milk. Wi.

VER. 2. As they were ministering to the Lord. Mr. N. and some others translate, offering up sacrifice. There are indeed good grounds to take this to be the true sense, as the Rhemish translators observed, who, notwithstanding, only put ministering,* lest (said they) we should seem to turn it in favour of our own cause, since neither the Latin nor Greek word signifies of itself to sacrifice, but any public ministry in the service of God; so that S. Chrys. says, when they were preaching. Wi.—Separate me. Though Paul and Barnabas are here chosen by the Holy Ghost for the ministry, yet they were to be ordained, consecrated, and admitted by men; which loudly condemns all those modish and disordered spirits, that challenge and usurp the office of preaching, and other sacred and ecclesiastical functions, without any appointment from the Church. B.

VER. 3. Fasting and praying, imposing their hands upon them. By which is clearly expressed, the manner by which the ministers of God were, and are still ordained bishops, priests, deacons in the Church. Wi.—Interpreters are much divided in opinion, whether this imposition of hands be a mere deputation to a certain employment, or the sacramental ceremony, by which orders are conferred. SS. Chrysostom, Leo, &c., are of the latter opinion: nor does it any where appear that S. Paul was bishop before this. Following the practice of the apostles, the Church of God ordains a solemn and general fast on the four public times for ordination, the ember days, as a necessary preparation for so great a work, and this S. Leo calls also an apostolical tradition. See S. Leo, Sermon 9, de Jejun., and Ep. 81, c. 1, and Sermon 3, and 4, de Jejun. 7 Mensis.

VER. 6. A magician . . . whose name was Bar-jesus, son of Jesus, or Josue. In Arabic, Elymas was the same as magician. This man did all he could to dissuade the proconsul, Sergius Paulus, from embracing the Christian faith. Wi.—Salamina was the capital of the island of Cyprus, and at the eastern extremity, as Paphos was at the western. A. D. 45.

VER. 9. Then Saul, who also is Paul. This is the first place in which this apostle is called Paul. He took this name out of respect to the illustrious convert he had made in the person of the proconsul, the governor of the island. Menochina.—Or, more probably, his former name, by a small change, was modelled into Paulus, which was a sound more adapted to a Roman ear. He begins to bear this name only when he enters on his mission to the Gentiles. Calmet.

sailed from Paphos, they came to Perge, in Pamphylia. *But John departing from them, returned to Jerusalem.

14 But they passing through Perge, came to Antioch, in Pisidia: and entering into the synagogue on the sabbath-day, they sat down.

15 And after the reading of the law and the prophets, the rulers of the synagogue sent to them, saying: Ye men, brethren, if you have any word of exhortation to make to the people, speak.

16 Then Paul rising up, and with his hand bespeaking silence, said: Ye men of Israel, and you that fear God, give ear:

17 The God of the people of Israel chose our fathers, and exalted the people, when they were sojourners^b in the land of Egypt, and with a mighty arm brought them out from thence,

18 And for the space of forty years endured their manners in the desert.

19 And destroying seven nations in the land of Chanaan, he divided their land to them, by lot, 20 As it were, after four hundred and fifty years:^f and after these things he gave them judges, until Samuel, the prophet.

21 And afterwards they desired a king: and God gave them Saul, the son of Cis, a man of the tribe of Benjamin, forty years.

22 And when he had removed him, he raised them up David to be king: to whom giving testimony, he said: I have found David, the son of Jesse, a man according to my own heart, who shall do all my wills.

23 Of this man's seed God, according to his promise, hath raised up to Israel a Saviour, Jesus, 24 John first preaching before his coming the baptism of penance to all the people of Israel.

25 And when John was fulfilling his course, he said: I am not he, whom you think me to be: but behold he cometh after me, the shoes of whose feet I am not worthy to loose.

26 Men, brethren, sons of the race of Abraham, and whosoever among you fear God, to you the word of this salvation is sent.

27 For they who inhabited Jerusalem, and the rulers thereof, not knowing him, nor the voices of the prophets, which are read every sabbath, judging him, have fulfilled them, 28 And finding no cause of death in him, they petitioned of Pilate, that they might put him to death.

29 And when they had fulfilled all things that were written of him, taking him down from the tree, they laid him in a sepulchre.

30 But God raised him up from the dead the third day: who was seen for many days by those,

31 Who went up together with him from Galilee to Jerusalem: who, to this present time, are witnesses of him to the people.

32 And we declare to you that the promise which was made to our fathers, 33 This same hath God fulfilled to our children, raising up Jesus again, as in the second Psalm also is written: Thou art my Son, this day have I begotten thee.

34 And that he raised him up from the dead to return now no more to corruption, he said thus: That I will give you the holy faithful things of David.

35 And, therefore, in another place also he saith: Thou shalt not suffer thy Holy One to see corruption.

36 For David, after he had served in his generation, according to the will of God, slept: and was laid unto his fathers, and saw corruption.

37 But he whom God hath raised from the dead, saw no corruption.

38 Be it known, therefore, to you, men, brethren, that through him forgiveness of sins is preached to you: and from all the things, from which you could not be justified by the law of Moses,

39 In him every one, who believeth, is justified.

40 Beware, therefore, lest that come upon you which is spoken by the prophets:

41 Behold, ye despisers, and wonder, and perish: for I work a work in your days, a work which you will not believe, if any man shall tell it you.

42 And as they went out, they desired them that on the next sabbath they would speak these words to them.

Tirinus.—Pamphylia and Pisidia were two provinces in Asia Minor.—The sabbath-day. Some not only understand, but even translate, the first day of the week: but here is rather meant the Jewish sabbath, as S. Paul went into their synagogues. And in this his first sermon to them, which S. Luke has set down, he speaks nothing that could offend or exasperate the Jews, but honourably of them, to gain them to the Christian faith; he commends in particular David, whose Son they knew the Messiah was to be: and of whom he tells them, that God had given them their Saviour, Jesus. He mentions this high eulogium, which God gave of David, Psal. lxxxviii. 21, that he was a man according to God's heart, who in all things should fulfil his will, that is, as to the true worship of God; though he fell into some sins, of which he repented, and did penance. obtained of Pilate a sentence, that he should be crucified; but that God raised him up from the dead the third day. And we, says he, publish to you this promise, the Messiah, promised to our forefathers.

VER. 33. He then shows them that Jesus was their Messiah, and the Son of God, begotten of his Father from eternity, who rose from the dead, and he applies these words, (Psal. ii. 7,) to prove Christ's resurrection, Thou art my Son, this day have I begotten thee. It is true, these words regard chiefly the eternal generation of Christ, as they are applied by S. Paul, (Heb. v. 5,) but the resurrection was a necessary consequence of his Divinity, since death could have no power over him. S. Paul here also proves Christ's resurrection by the following predictions. Wi.

VER. 35. In another place also he saith, (Psal. xv. 10,) Thou wilt not suffer thy Holy One to see corruption. That is, Christ's body to be corrupted in the grave. See the words of S. Peter, Acts ii. 27. Wi.

The prophet, by these words, foretold to the Jews in his time the evils that would come upon them in their captivity in Chaldea, but S. Paul here applies them at least to the miseries that the incredulous Jews would incur, if they obstinately refused to believe in Christ. Wi.

43 And when the synagogue was broken up, many of the Jews, and of the strangers who served God, followed Paul and Barnabas: who, speaking to them, persuaded them to continue in the grace of God.

44 But the next sabbath-day, the whole city almost came together, to hear the word of God.

45 And when the Jews saw the multitudes, they were filled with envy, and contradicted those things which were said by Paul, blaspheming.

46 Then Paul and Barnabas said boldly: To you it behoved us to speak first the word of God: but seeing you reject it, and judge yourselves unworthy of eternal life: behold we turn to the Gentiles.

47 For so the Lord hath commanded us: "I have set thee to be the light of the Gentiles: that thou mayest be for salvation unto the utmost part of the earth.

48 And the Gentiles hearing this, were glad, and glorified the word of the Lord: and as many as were pre-ordained to eternal life, believed.

49 And the word of the Lord was published throughout the whole country.

50 But the Jews stirred up religious and honourable women, and the chief men of the city, and raised a persecution against Paul and Barnabas: and cast them out of their territories.

51 "But they shaking off the dust of their feet against them, came to Iconium."

52 And the disciples were filled with joy and with the Holy Ghost.

VER. 48. As many as were pre-ordained to eternal life, † by the free election, and special mercies, and providence of God. Wi.—Some understand this as if it meant, predisposed by their docility, to receive the word of life. But the Fathers unanimously understand it literally of predestination, which is defined by S. Thomas, Serm. 1, qu. 23, a. 1, "The disposition of God, by which he prepares what he will himself perform, according to his infallible foreknowledge." In other words, it is the manner by which God conducts a reasonable creature to its proper destiny, which is eternal life. In this mystery of the Catholic faith, which cannot be clearly explained to human understanding, because it is a mystery, there are nevertheless several points, which we know for certain. 1st, Though it is certain, that this decree of the Almighty is infallible, and must have its effect, yet it is far removed from the blasphemy of Calvinists, who pretend that it destroys free-will, and therefore removes all motives of exertion to good works. For it is a 2nd point of Catholic faith, that this foreknowledge of the Almighty no way interferes with man's liberty, but leaves him still a perfectly free agent, and therefore responsible for his actions. 3rd, It is likewise decreed by the Council of Trent, that no one can certainly know that he is of the number of the predestinated, without a special revelation to that effect. These are the most essential points which it concerns us to know of this doctrine. How excellently well does the great genius of the Latin Church, S. Augustin, say, Melius est dubitare de occultis, quam litigare de occultis! How much better and wiser is it to confess our ignorance on mysteries, than idly to dispute on mysteries! of his grace, granting signs and wonders to be done by their hands.

4 And the multitude of the city was divided: and some indeed held with the Jews, and some with the apostles.

5 And when there was an assault made by the Gentiles and the Jews, with their rulers, to treat them contumeliously, and to stone them:

6 "They understanding this, fled to Lystra and Derbe, cities of Lycaonia, and to the whole country round about, and were there preaching the gospel.

7 Now there sat a certain man at Lystra disabled in his feet, lame from his mother's womb, who never had walked.

8 This man heard Paul speaking: who looking upon him, and perceiving that he had faith to be healed, 9 Said with a loud voice: Stand upright on thy feet. And he leaped up and walked.

10 And when the multitudes had seen what Paul had done, they lifted up their voice in the Lycaonian tongue, saying: The gods, in the likeness of men, are come down to us.

11 And they called Barnabas, Jupiter: but Paul, Mercury; because he was the chief speaker.

12 The priest also of Jupiter, that was before the city, bringing oxen and garlands before the gate, would have offered sacrifice with the people.

13 Which when the apostles, Barnabas and Paul, had heard, rending their clothes, they ran among the people, crying out,

14 And saying: O men, why do ye these things? We also are mortals, men like unto you, preaching to you to be converted from these vain things to the living God, "who made heaven, and earth, and the sea, and all things that are in them:

15 Who in past generations suffered all nations to walk in their own way.

16 Nevertheless he left not himself without testimony, doing good from heaven, giving rains, and fruitful seasons, filling our hearts with food and gladness.

17 And speaking these things, they scarce restrained the people from sacrificing to them.

Chrysostom says of him, Tricubitalis est, et cælos transcendit, though not more than three cubits high, he yet transcends the heavens, and hence for his eloquence he was called Mercury. Jupiter was wont to take Mercury with him, as may be seen in the Amphitruone Plauti.

Yet they of the Church of England allow, and maintain, that by this Greek word in this, and many other places, are signified the ministers of God, known by the name of bishops or priests, according to the ecclesiastical use of the same word.—We see from this text, first, that SS. Paul and Barnabas were bishops, having authority to confer holy orders; secondly, that there was even then a difference betwixt bishops and priests, though the name in the primitive Church was often used indifferently: thirdly, that fasting and praying were constant preparatives to holy orders. 5 But there rose up some of the sect of the Pharisees that believed, saying: They must be circumcised, and be commanded to observe the law of Moses.

6 And the apostles and ancients came together to consider of this matter.

7 And when there was much disputing, Peter rising up, said to them: *Men, brethren, you know that in former days God made choice among us, that the Gentiles by my mouth should hear the word of the gospel, and believe.

Paul undertook this journey in consequence of a Divine revelation, and was accompanied by Barnabas and Titus, the latter of whom he would not suffer to be circumcised. Such confidence had he in the rectitude of the opinion he defended. From the example of S. Paul and S. Barnabas, apostles, and men full of the Spirit of God, we learn, that as often as any contest arises about faith, recourse should be had to the supreme visible authority established by Jesus Christ, to have all differences adjusted. This is the order of Divine Providence with regard to the Church; without it there could not be truth and unity preserved; without it, the Church of God would be more defective and insufficient than any human government. Tell the Church: and if he will not hear the Church, let him be to thee as the heathen and the publican. Matt. xviii. 17

VER. 7. Former days. Lit. in the days of old; that is, at the conversion of Cornelius, many years ago, about the year 35; and it was now 51. Wi.—S. Peter, as the head of the Council, spoke first; S. James, as bishop of Jerusalem, spoke next, and all, as S. Jerom says, came into the sentence of Peter. Ep. 89, ad S. Aug. c. 2.

all nations upon whom my name is invoked, saith the Lord, who doth these things.

18 To the Lord is known his own work from the beginning of the world.

19 Wherefore I judge that they, who from among the Gentiles are converted to God, are not to be disquieted.

20 But that we write to them, that they refrain themselves from the pollutions of idols, and from fornication, and from things strangled, and from blood.

21 For Moses, from ancient times, hath in every city them that preach him in the synagogues, "where he is read every sabbath.

22 Then it pleased the apostles and ancients, with the whole church, to choose men of their own company, and to send them to Antioch, with Paul and Barnabas: Judas, who was surnamed Barsabas, and Silas, chief men among the brethren, 23 Writing by their hands. The apostles and ancients, brethren, to the brethren of the Gentiles, that are at Antioch, and in Syria, and Cilicia, greeting.

24 Forasmuch as we have heard, that some, who went out from us, have troubled you with words, subverting your souls, to whom we gave no commands:

25 It hath seemed good to us, assembled together, to choose out men, and send them to you, with our dearly beloved Barnabas and Paul,

26 Men who have given their lives for the name of our Lord Jesus Christ.

27 We have sent, therefore, Judas and Silas, who themselves also will, by word of mouth, tell you the same things.

28 For it hath seemed good to the Holy Ghost, and to us, to lay no further burthen upon you, than these necessary things:

29 That you abstain from things sacrificed to idols, and

VER. 19. Wherefore I judge, and join my judgment with Peter. S. Chrys. thinks that James had a special authority in the Council, as bishop of Jerusalem, and because of the great veneration which those zealous for the Jewish law had for him: but his power was certainly inferior to that of S. Peter, who was head of all, as S. Chrys. teacheth, Hom. 3, on the Acts.

VER. 20. Things strangled, and from blood. In these prohibitions, the Church humoured the particular feelings of the Jews, that the bond of union between them and the Gentiles might be more closely united; the latter in these two instances giving way to the prejudices of the former, who in their turn gave up much, by submitting to the abolition of the ceremonial law of Moses. This prohibition was of course only temporary, and to cease with the reasons which gave rise to it. Menochius.—By this we see the great authority of God's Church, and Councils, which may make permanent or temporary decrees, such as are fitting for the state of the times or peoples, without any express Scripture at all, and by this authoritative exaction, things become of strict obligation, which, previous to it, were in themselves indifferent. B.

VER. 21. For Moses . . . hath in every city. Not only the Jews, but the Christians converted from Judaism, still followed the ceremonies of the law of Moses. Wi.

VER. 24. Some, who went out from us, from Jerusalem, and pretended to speak our mind, and in our name, but we gave them no such commission. Wi.—A proper description of heretics, schismatics, and seditious preachers, who go out from their own superiors, and pretend to teach and preach without any mission, et quomodo predicabunt nisi mittantur; how can they preach, unless they are sent? Rom. x. 15.

VER. 28. It hath seemed good to the Holy Ghost, and to us. To us in these matters, wherein by the promises of Christ we are directed by the Holy Ghost, the Spirit of truth, &c.—Than these necessary things. Necessary at this juncture, and always, if we except that order of abstaining from blood, and things strangled, which was not a perpetual, unchangeable precept, but to last only for a time, as S. Chrys. observes. Wi.—This is the first general council held in the Church, and the model of all succeeding ones. In it the apostles, in a commanding and authoritative manner, laid down the law, which was to be the guide of the faithful, knowing they had a right to impose any regulations in the Church, and that they could not employ this authority but to good purposes, directed as they were by the unerring Spirit of truth, which Christ had promised (Matt. xxviii. 20) should remain with from blood, and from things strangled, and from fornication: from which things keeping yourselves, you shall do well. Fare ye well.

30 They, therefore, being dismissed, went down to Antioch: and when they had gathered together the multitude, they delivered the epistle.

31 Which when they had read, they rejoiced for the consolation.

32 But Judas and Silas, being prophets also themselves, comforted the brethren with many words, and confirmed them.

33 And having staid there some time, they were dismissed with peace, by the brethren, to those who had sent them.

34 But it seemed good to Silas to remain there: and Judas alone went back to Jerusalem.

35 But Paul and Barnabas continued at Antioch, teaching and preaching with many others the word of the Lord.

36 *And after some days, Paul said to Barnabas: Let us return and visit the brethren in all the cities, wherein we have preached the word of the Lord, to see how they do.

37 And Barnabas had a mind to take along with him John also, who was surnamed Mark.

38 But Paul desired that he (as having departed from them out of Pamphylia, and not gone with them to the work) might not be received.

39 And there was a dissension, so that they departed one from another, and Barnabas indeed having taken with him Mark, sailed to Cyprus.

40 But Paul, choosing Silas, departed, being delivered by the brethren to the grace of God.

41 And he went through Syria and Cilicia, confirming his Church for ever. Hence it would appear, that we have no more ground for refusing obedience to the voice of the Church at present, than at her first establishment: and that those who will not hear the Church now, speaking in her Councils, would with as little ceremony have opposed the apostles on this occasion, had they lived at the time. A.

VER. 29. From blood, and from things strangled. The use of these things, though of their own nature indifferent, was here prohibited, to bring the Jews more easily to admit of the society of the Gentiles; and to exercise the latter in obedience. But this prohibition was but temporary, and has long since ceased to oblige; more especially in the western churches. Ch.—See note on ver. 20, supra.

VER. 32. Judas and Silas, being prophets, that is, preachers, as the word prophet is divers times taken. Wi.—Not only such were called prophets as had the gift of predicting future events, but such moreover as had the gift of interpreting Scripture, and of speaking of the things of God. V.

VER. 39. There was a dissension,† or dispute, with reasoning, and arguing upon the matter. S. Paul represented to S. Barnabas, that he was not for having John Mark to be their companion, because he had before left them, but S. Barnabas was for having with them his kinsman Mark; and the dispute was such, that upon it S. Paul and Barnabas separated; which gave occasion to the preaching of the gospel in more places. See S. Chrys., Hom. 33.—The fault in this contention lay with S. Barnabas; ὁ Παῦλος τὸ δίκαιον, ὁ Βαρνάβας τὸ φιλόφρων: Paul sought what was just; Barnabas what was pleasing to nature. The Greeks, moreover, remark, that this severity of Paul was of service in strengthening the too pliant character of Mark, and as such he is saluted by Paul, Col. iv. 10. They separated, as formerly Abraham and Lot, without prejudice to their friendship. Gen. xiii. 9. Mat. Polus Synop. Criticorum, fol. 4, p. 1528.

* V. 2. πρεσβυτέρους, presbyteros. For the same Greek word we sometimes find in the vulgar Latin, presbyteros, sometimes seniores, sometimes majores natu: yet it is generally a word of dignity in the ministry of Christ, signifying those who were afterwards known by the name of bishops, or priests. When mention is made of πρεσβύτεροι, or seniores, of the old law, I have translated elders: but where the ministers of the new law are understood, when in the Latin we have presbyteri, I have put priests; when majores natu or seniores, I have put in English, seniors, bishops, or priests, being to be understood.

the churches: commanding them to keep the precepts of the apostles, and the ancients.

CHAP. XVI.

Paul visits the churches. He is called to preach in Macedonia. He is scourged at Philippi.

AND^a he came to Derbe and Lystra. And behold there was a certain disciple there named Timothy, the son of a Jewish woman who believed, his father being a Gentile.

2 To this man the brethren, who were in Lystra and Iconium, gave a good testimony.

3 Him Paul would have to go along with him: and taking him, he circumcised him, because of the Jews, who were in those places. For they all knew that his father was a Gentile.

4 And as they passed through the cities, they delivered to them the decrees for to keep, that were decreed by the apostles and ancients, who were at Jerusalem.

5 The churches indeed were confirmed in faith, and increased in number daily.

6 Now having passed through Phrygia, and the country of Galatia, they were forbidden, by the Holy Ghost, to preach the word of God in Asia.

7 And when they were come into Mysia, they attempted to go into Bithynia, and the Spirit of Jesus permitted them not.

8 And when they had passed through Mysia, they went down to Troas:

9 And a vision was shown to Paul in the night: A man of Macedonia standing, and beseeching him, and saying: Pass over into Macedonia, and help us.

10 And as soon as he had seen the vision, immediately we sought to go into Macedonia, being assured that God had called us to preach the gospel to them.

11 So sailing from Troas, we came with a direct course to Samothracia, and the day following to Neapolis:

12 And from thence to Philippi, which is the chief city of part of Macedonia, a colony. And we were in this city some days, conferring together.

13 And upon the sabbath-day, we went forth without the gate by a river side, where it seemed that there was prayer: and sitting down, we spoke to the women that were assembled.

14 And a certain woman, named Lydia, a seller of purple, of the city of Thyatira, one that worshipped God, heard us, whose heart the Lord opened to attend to the things which were spoken by Paul.

15 And when she was baptized, and her household, she besought us, saying: If you have judged me to be faithful to the Lord, come into my house, and there remain. And she constrained us.

16 And it came to pass, as we went to prayer, a certain girl, possessed with a pythonical spirit, met us, who brought her masters much gain by divining.

17 The same, following Paul and us, cried out, saying: These men are the servants of the most high God, who show you the way to salvation.

18 And this she did many days. But Paul being grieved, turned, and said to the spirit: I command thee, in the name of Jesus Christ, to go out of her. And he went out the same hour.

19 But her masters seeing that the hope of their gain was gone, having apprehended Paul and Silas, they brought them into the market-place to the rulers;

20 And presenting them to the magistrates, said: These men disturb our city, being Jews:

21 And preach a fashion which it is not lawful for us to receive, nor observe, being Romans.

22 And the people ran together against them: and their garments being torn off,^b the magistrates commanded them to be beaten with rods.

23 And when they had laid many stripes upon them, they cast them into prison, charging the jailor to keep them securely.

24 Who having received such a charge, thrust them into the inner prison, and made their feet fast in the stocks.

25 And at midnight, Paul and Silas praying, praised God: and they who were in prison heard them.

26 And suddenly there was a great earthquake, so that the foundations of the prison were shaken. And immediately all the doors were opened: and every one's bands were loosed.

27 And the keeper of the prison being awakened, and seeing the doors of the prison open, having drawn his sword, would have killed himself, imagining that the prisoners had fled.

28 But Paul cried with a loud voice, saying. Do thyself no harm, for we are all here.

CHAP. XVI. VER. 3. Circumcised him. Not to obstruct the conversion of the Jews: and because it was still lawful to observe the Jewish ceremonies, though the obligation of keeping the old law had ceased. Wi.—This S. Paul did in order to gain the Jews, and make Timothy acceptable to them. Tirinus.—To the Jew, says he, (1 Cor. ix. 20,) I became a Jew, that I might gain the Jews. If he refused to circumcise Titus, in order to vindicate the Christian's independence of the Mosaic ceremonies; he now submits to the observance of them, to show there is nothing of itself bad in them, and that they might without crime be practised, till time by degrees had abolished them. S. Aug., Ep. 82, ad S. Hieronymum.

VER. 6. They were forbidden by the Holy Ghost, to go and preach at that time in the Lesser Asia, perhaps because their preaching in Macedonia was more necessary; or because S. John was to be sent into Asia. Wi.—Forbidden. Why? Because they were not yet prepared to receive the gospel; or, perhaps, these provinces were reserved for S. John, as Bithynia was for S. Luke. Menochius.

VER. 7. The Spirit of Jesus permitted them not. It is the same Spirit, which first before was called the Holy Ghost: for the Holy Ghost is the Spirit of Jesus, as proceeding from the Son, as well as from the Father. Wi.

VER. 9. A vision, &c. The tutelar angel of the province, according to most interpreters, under the form of a Macedonian, who implored S. Paul in behalf of the province he guarded.

VER. 10. We. This change in the narration, from the third to the first person, we sought, &c., is remarkable. It is hence inferred, that S. Luke, the author of this book, joined S. Paul at Troas, and became his inseparable companion. Calmet.

VER. 13. There was prayer. The Greek word signifies either prayer itself, or an oratory, or place to pray in. Wi.—Not any prayer is here understood, but that which was joined in the celebration of the sacred mysteries. Estius in Diffic. Loca. See 1 Cor. vii., and Acts vi.

VER. 16. A pythonical spirit. A spirit pretending to divination, to tell secrets, and things to come. See 2 Kings xxviii.; Isa. viii. 19. Wi.

VER. 18. Observe here, that the servants of God have a power granted them of controlling wicked spirits, according to the promise of our Lord, Luke ix., and x. Hence the seventy disciples, returning, said, Lord, even the devils are subject to us in thy name. Est. in Diffic. Loc.

VER. 20. Jews. This was the name the first Christians went by among the pagans. Indeed our Saviour's being born of that nation, and his disciples adoring the same God, and following the same morality and Scriptures as the Jews, were sufficient reasons to make them confounded. Calmet.

VER. 24. Made their feet fast in the stocks. By the Latin and Greek text, they made them fast with wood. Wi.

VER. 26. All the doors were opened. This made the gaoler conclude the prisoners had made their escape. And he being answerable for them, and expecting to be put to death, was for stabbing himself. Wi.

29 Then calling for a light, he went in, and trembling, fell down at the feet of Paul and Silas :

30 And bringing them out, he said : Masters, what must I do, that I may be saved ?

31 And they said : Believe in the Lord Jesus : and thou shalt be saved, and thy house.

32 And they spoke the word of the Lord to him, and to all that were in his house.

33 And he taking them the same hour of the night, washed their wounds : and he was baptized, and presently all his family.

34 And when he had brought them into his own house, he laid the table for them, and rejoiced with all his family, believing God.

35 And when it was day, the magistrates sent the sergeants, saying : Dismiss those men.

36 And the keeper of the prison told these words to Paul : The magistrates have sent that you should be dismissed : now therefore depart, and go in peace.

37 But Paul said to them : After having whipped us publicly, uncondemned, men that are Romans, they sent us to prison : and now do they thrust us out privately ? Not so : but let them come,

38 And they themselves send us out. And the sergeants told these words to the magistrates. And they were afraid, having heard they were Romans :

39 And coming, they intreated them : and leading them out, they desired them to depart out of the city.

40 And coming out of the prison, they entered into the house of Lydia : and having seen the brethren, they comforted them, and departed.

VER. 35. Sent the sergeants,† vergers, or such like officers. Wi.

VER. 37. Romans. S. Paul inherited his right of citizenship from his father ; it does not appear how the latter obtained it, perhaps by purchase. There is no proof that Silas was a freeman of Rome. D. Dion. Carthus.—It was forbidden by the Porcian and Sempronian laws, for a Roman citizen to be scourged, unless he was likewise convicted of a capital crime. Cicero pro Rabirio. Pacinus est vinciri civem Romanum : scelus verberari. Id. cont. Verrem. The Romans were always very jealous of the dignity of their city. A.—Estius declares, that Silas was also a Roman citizen, and that from this circumstance he probably received a Roman name, as Paul did. For in other parts of Scripture we find him styled Silvanus, (2 Cor. i. 19,) and at the commencement of both the Epistles to the Thessalonians.

CHAP. XVII. VER. 2. It was customary with S. Paul to open the Scriptures first to the Jews, (Acts xiii. 46,) and to argue with them from the law and the prophets. Acts xxviii. 23. S. Paul made use of the same passages of Scripture to convince the Jews, as Jesus Christ did on a similar occasion. Mat. Polus.

VER. 3. That the Christ was to suffer. The suffering of Christ was the great stumblingblock to the Jews, which S. Paul now attempted to remove, by showing them from the Scripture, that this was one of the necessary characters of the Messias, contained in the prophets. All the other marks were likewise accomplished in Christ. D. Dion. Carth.

VER. 4. And some of them, that is, of the Jews, in whose synagogue he preached, believed, and of those that worshipped God*, that is, of those who adored the only true God, though they had not submitted to circumcision, and to the ceremonies of the Jewish law, and of the Gentiles, that is, of such as till that time

2 And Paul, according to his custom, went in to them : and for three sabbath-days he reasoned with them out of the Scriptures,

3 Opening and insinuating that the Christ was to suffer, and to rise again from the dead : and that this is Jesus the Christ, whom I declare to you.

4 And some of them believed, and were associated to Paul and Silas, and of those who served God, and of the Gentiles, a great multitude, and noble women not a few.

5 But the Jews moved with envy, taking with them some wicked men of the vulgar sort, and making a tumult, set the city in an uproar : and besetting Jason's house, sought to bring them out to the people.

6 And when they had not found them, they hauled Jason and certain brethren to the rulers of the city, crying out : That these who disturb the city, are come hither also,

7 Whom Jason hath received, and these all do contrary to the decrees of Cæsar, saying : that there is another king, Jesus.

8 And they stirred up the people, and the rulers of the city hearing these things.

9 And having received satisfaction from Jason, and the rest, they let them go.

10 But the brethren immediately sent away Paul and Silas by night to Berea. Who when they were come thither, entered into the synagogue of the Jews.

11 Now these were more noble than those of Thessalonica, who received the word with all eagerness, daily searching the Scriptures, whether these things were so.

12 And many indeed of them believed, and of honourable women that were Gentiles, and men not a few.

13 But when the Jews in Thessalonica had knowledge that the word of God was also preached by Paul at Berea, they came thither also, stirring up, and disturbing the multitude.

14 And then the brethren immediately sent away Paul, to go to the sea-side : but Silas and Timothy remained there.

had been heathens and idolaters. Some were proselytes to the Jewish religion, by a submission to circumcision, and to all the precepts and ceremonies of the Mosaic laws. These are also by some called proselytes of the covenant, being as much Jews as they who had been always so. Others are called proselytes of the gate, or proselytes to the God of the Jews, but not to the religion of the Jews. Such seem to have been Cornelius, the centurion, Acts x., Lydia, Acts xvi. 14, and Titus Justus, Acts xviii. 7. Such also seems to have been the eunuch of Candace, the queen of the Ethiopians, Acts viii., Naaman, the Syrian, after he was cured of his leprosy, (4 Kings v. 17,) and many others, that lived in Judea, and in other countries. These, therefore, are called worshippers, meaning of the true God, though they embraced not the legal precepts and ceremonies of the Jews. See Monsr. Heur's Dictionary. Wi.

VER. 6. Who disturb the city,† put it in an uproar. In the ordinary Greek copies, for the city, we read the whole world. Wi.

VER. 7. Another king. These Jews suppress, with great artifice, their true cause of vexation against the apostles, and change a mere question of religion into one of temporal policy.

VER. 11. These were more noble than those of Thessalonica. According to the common exposition, the sense is, that these of Berea were of a more noble and generous disposition of mind, not carried away with envy and malice, like those of Thessalonica.—Searching the Scriptures, or those places of the prophets by which S. Paul proved that Jesus was the Messias, who was to suffer death, &c. Wi.—Daily searching the Scriptures, &c. The sheep are not hereby made judges of their pastors, the people of their priests, and lay men and women of S. Paul's doctrine. The Bereans did not read the Old Testament (and the New was not then published) to dispute with the apostle, or to sanction his doctrines : but it was a great comfort and confirmation to the Jews that had the Scriptures, to find, even as S. Paul said, that Christ was God, crucified, risen, and ascended to heaven ; which by his expounding they understood, and never before, though they read them, and heard them read every sabbath. So it is a great comfort to a Catholic to see in the Scriptures the clear passages that prove the truth of his tenets, and 15 And they that conducted Paul, brought him as far as Athens, and receiving a commandment from him to Silas and Timothy, that they should come to him with all speed, they departed.

16 ^aNow whilst Paul waited for them at Athens, his spirit was excited within him, seeing the city given up to idolatry.

17 He disputed, therefore, in the synagogue with the Jews, and with them that served God, and in the market-place, every day, with those that were present.

18 And some Epicurean and Stoic philosophers disputed with him, and some said: What is it that this babler would say? But others: He seemeth to be a publisher of new gods: because he preached to them Jesus, and the resurrection.

19 And taking him, they brought him to the Areopagus, saying: May we know what this new doctrine is, which thou speakest of?

20 For thou bringest certain new things to our ears: We would know, therefore, what these things mean.

21 (Now all the Athenians, and strangers that were there, employed themselves in nothing else but either in telling or in hearing something new.)

22 But Paul, standing in the midst of the Areopagus, said: Ye men of Athens, I perceive that you are in all things, as it were, too superstitious.

23 For passing by, and seeing your idols, I found an altar also. on which was written: TO THE UNKNOWN GOD. What, therefore, you worship without knowing it, this I preach to you.

show the grounds of his hopes. But this by no means authorizes him to be judge of the true pastors of the Church, whom he is commanded by Jesus Christ to hear and obey, and from whom they are to learn the genuine sense of the Scriptures.

VER. 18. Epicurean and Stoic philosophers. The former of these philosophers held as their doctrine, that the Almighty did not interfere by his providence in the government of the world; that the soul did not subsist after the body; and consequently, that there was no future state of retribution. The latter denied that man had liberty of action, and maintained, that all things happened by destiny and fatal necessity. These were the two opposite sects S. Paul had to contend with. Calmet.—The Stoics believed in the immortality of the soul, and came the nearest to the Christian religion: but both Stoics and Epicureans, with all pagan philosophers, denied the resurrection of bodies; hence S. Augustin says, the faith of a resurrection is peculiar to Christians. Estius.—What is it that this babler would say? A word of contempt, which some translate, this prattler. It is thought to be a metaphor from birds picking up little seeds, or the like, for their food; and to signify, that S. Paul had picked up words and sentences without any solid meaning. Wi.

VER. 19. To the Areopagus. The Areopagus was the supreme and most famous tribunal of all Greece, before which all great causes were tried. The persons who composed it were much renowned for their wisdom. Cicero, and many other Romans, were ambitious of the honour of being an Areopagite; but the power of Athens being now much diminished, this court had sunk in importance, and was now not much more than the shadow of a great name. Calmet.

VER. 22. Too superstitious. Or very superstitious. To be superstitious, or given to superstition, is commonly taken for a vain and groundless religious worship, but it is also sometimes used in a good sense. And perhaps S. Paul, in the beginning of his speech to so many men of learning, does not so openly blame them for being vainly and foolishly superstitious, but by their inscription, to the unknown God, he takes notice how nice and exact they pretended to be, in not omitting to pay some kind of homage to any god, or gods of all other nations, whom they might not know. For some interpreters think, that by this altar, they designed to worship every god of any nation, who was not come to their knowledge: or to worship that great God hinted at in the writings of Plato: or, as others conjecture, the God of the Jews, of whom they might have heard such wonders, and whose name the Jews themselves said to be unknown, and ineffable. However, from this inscription S. Paul takes an occasion, with wonderful dexterity, with sublime reflections, and with that solid eloquence, of which he was master, and which he employed as often as it was necessary, to inform them, and instruct them, concerning the works of the one true God, of whom they had little knowledge, by their own fault. He then adds, (ver. 30.) that having, as it were, overlooked, and permitted men for many ages to run on in this ignorance and blindness, in punishment of their sins, (this their ignorance of one true God, the author of 24 ^bGod, who made the world and all things that are in it, he being the Lord of heaven and earth, dwelleth ^cnot in temples made with hands.

25 Nor is he served by the hands of men, as though he needed any thing, seeing it is he who giveth to all life, and breath, and all things;

26 And hath made of one, all mankind, to dwell upon the whole face of the earth, determining appointed times, and the limits of their habitation.

27 That they should seek God, if haply they may feel after him or find him: although he be not far from every one of us.

28 For in him we live, and we move, and we are: as some also of your own poets said: for we are also his offspring.

29 Being, therefore, the offspring of God, we must not suppose the Divinity to be like unto gold or silver, or stone, the graving of art, and device of man.

30 And God, indeed, having overlooked the times of this ignorance, now declareth to men, that all should every where do penance, 31 Because he hath appointed a day wherein he will judge the world in equity, by the man, whom he hath appointed, giving faith to all, by raising him up from the dead.

32 And when they had heard of the resurrection of the dead, some indeed mocked: but others said: We will hear thee again concerning this matter.

33 So Paul went out from among them.

34 But certain men adhered to him, and believed:

all things, being wilful and inexcusable,) now the same true God hath been pleased to denounce to all men, that henceforward they acknowledge and worship him, that they repent, and do penance for their sins. Wi.

VER. 23. It may be asked, why they had not implicit faith, worshipping the true, though unknown, God? § First, because the worship of the true God can never exist with the worship of idols; secondly, because an explicit faith in God is required of all; thirdly, because it is repugnant to implicit faith, to admit any thing contrary to it, as comparing this unknown God with the pagan idols; for God, to be at all, must be one.

VER. 24. God . . . dwelleth not in temples. He who is infinite, cannot be confined to space; nor stand in need of what human hands can furnish. Temples are not for God, but man. It is the latter who derives assistance from them. See c. 7, sup. v. 48.—God is not contained in temples; so as to need them for his dwelling, or any other uses, as the heathens imagined. Yet by his omnipresence, he is both there and every where. Ch.

VER. 28. S. Paul here cites Aratus, a Greek poet, and his own countryman, a native of Cilicia.

VER. 29. Cherubim, with extended wings, were ordered by God to be made, and placed over the propitiatory (Exod. xxxvii. 7); the brazen serpent is declared by Jesus Christ himself to have been a figure of him; therefore to blame the universally received practice of the Catholic Church, with regard to pictures and images, betrays either great prejudice or great ignorance. S. Gregory says, "What writing does for readers, that a picture does for the ignorant; for in it they see what they ought to follow, and in it they read, who know no letters." And he sharply rebukes Serenus's indiscreet zeal for removing pictures, instead of teaching the people what use may be made of them, l. 9, ep. 9.

VER. 30. Overlooked. Despicens, υπεριδων. It may either signify looking down on the ignorant world, and so taking pity of it; or rather that God having overlooked, and permitted mankind to go so long in their sins, now invites them to repentance, by sending Jesus, their Saviour and Redeemer. See the Analyse Dissert. 34. Wi.

VER. 34. Dionysius, the Areopagite. This illustrious convert was made the first bishop of Athens. The martyrologies say, S. Paul raised him to that dignity. It is the same person, who, observing the convulsions of nature, which paid homage, as it were, to its God, expiring upon the cross, and not knowing the cause, is said to have exclaimed, Either the universe is falling to ruin, or the God of nature must be suffering. It appears from his writings, that he was, previous to his conversion, of the Platonic school. Estius.

*Paul founds the church of Corinth: and preaches at Ephesus, &c.
Apollo goes to Corinth.*

AFTER these things, departing from Athens, he came to Corinth.

2 And finding a certain Jew, named Aquila, a native of Pontus, who had lately come from Italy, with Priscilla, his wife, (because Claudius had commanded all Jews to depart from Rome,) he came to them.

3 And because he was of the same trade, he remained with them, and wrought: (now they were tent-makers by trade.)

4 And he disputed in the synagogue every sabbath, interposing the name of the Lord Jesus, and he persuaded the Jews and the Greeks.

5 And when Silas and Timothy were come from Macedonia, Paul was earnest in preaching, testifying to the Jews that Jesus is the Christ.

6 But they contradicting and blaspheming, shaking his garments, he said to them: Your blood be upon your own heads: I am clean: from henceforth I will go to the Gentiles.

7 And departing thence, he entered into the house of a certain man, named Titus Justus, one that worshipped God, whose house joined to the synagogue.

8 And Crispus, the ruler of the synagogue, believed in the Lord with all his house: and many of the Corinthians hearing, believed, and were baptized.

9 And the Lord said to Paul in the night, by a vision: Fear not, but speak, and hold not thy peace:

10 Because I am with thee: and no man shall set upon thee to hurt thee: for I have much people in this city.

11 And he stayed there a year and six months, teaching the word of God among them.

12 But when Gallio was proconsul of Achaia, the Jews with one accord rose up against Paul, and brought him to the judgment-seat, 13 Saying: That this man persuadeth men to worship God contrary to the law.

14 And when Paul was beginning to open his mouth, Gallio said to the Jews: If it were some matter of wrong, or a heinous deed, you men, O Jews, it would be reasonable I should bear with you.

15 But if they be questions of a word, and of names, and of your law, look you to it: I will not be judge of such matters.

16 And he drove them from the judgment-seat.

17 And all laying hold on Sosthenes, the ruler of the synagogue, struck him before the judgment-seat: and Gallio cared for none of those things.

18 But Paul, when he had stayed yet many days, taking leave of the brethren, he sailed from thence into Syria, (and with him Priscilla and Aquila,) having shorn his head in Cenchra: for he had a vow.

19 And he came to Ephesus, and left them there. But he himself entering into the synagogue, disputed with the Jews.

20 And when they intreated him to make a longer stay, he consented not,

21 But taking his leave, and saying: I will return to you again, God willing, he departed from Ephesus.

22 And going down to Cæsarea, he went up, and saluted the church, and so came down to Antioch.

23 And after he had spent some time there, he departed, passing in order through the country of Galatia and Phrygia, strengthening all the disciples.

24 Now, a certain Jew, named Apollo, a native of Alexandria, an eloquent man, came to Ephesus, one mighty in the Scriptures.

25 This man was taught in the way of the Lord: and being fervent in spirit, spoke, and taught diligently the things that are of Jesus, knowing only the baptism of John.

26 This man, therefore, began to speak boldly in the CHAP. XVIII. VER. 3. Critics are divided in their opinions about the nature of S. Paul's employment: but it is generally supposed to be making tents of skins, such as were formerly used by travellers and soldiers. Tirinus.—Hence the expression, esse sub pellibus. The apostle submitted to this labour, that he might be no burden to whom he preached the gospel. S. Aug. tract. in Joan.—The Jews, with their characteristic good sense, in matters of this kind, made it the first duty of parents, to teach their children some trade, by which they might gain their livelihood. To neglect this, was supposed to be equivalent to teaching them to steal. Hence their learned men were likewise practitioners in some laborious trade. They were ignorant of the distinction between low and honourable professions, which refinement and vanity have introduced among us. Every employment was honourable, which was conducive to the good of their neighbour, and compatible with virtue and modesty; and the more so, in proportion as the wants of mankind made it more necessary. See Fleury's Manners of the Israelites, passim.

VER. 18. Shorn, &c. It was customary among the Jews to make vows of abstaining from all inebriating liquor, not to cut their hair for a limited time, &c. This was the vow of the Nazarites, mentioned Num. vi. 18; Acts xxii. 24. S. Paul had probably taken upon himself some obligation of this kind; perhaps in condescension to the Jews, who were yet weak in faith. The time being now expired, he cut his hair as before. It was lawful for converts to observe these legal ceremonies, till the gospel was perfectly established, provided they did not place their hopes of salvation in them, or believe that the faith and grace of Christ were ineffectual without them. D. Carthus.

VER. 22. He went up. To Jerusalem is most probably understood, that being the chief object of S. Paul's journey. It seems rather extraordinary that S. Luke should have omitted the express mention of the city. But having told us his object was to be at Jerusalem, he, perhaps, thought it was enough to say, he went up. Calmet.—In Palestine, the expression, to go up, was sometimes taken for going up to Jerusalem. John vii. 8, 10; xii. 20; Acts xxiv. 11. And reciprocally in chap. xxiv. 1, to go down, is taken for going down from Jerusalem to Cæsarea. V. Ibid.—In the Scripture, when Antioch and Cæsarea are simply mentioned, Antioch, in Syria, and Cæsarea, in Palestine, are uniformly designated. Wi.

VER. 24. Apollo . . . one mighty in the Scriptures. Lit. powerful in the Scriptures, yet knew no baptism, but that of John. Wi.—When we consider the great harvest, and few labourers, and the small time that the apostles could give to any one place for instructions, we shall not be so much surprised, that this zealous convert should not yet be perfectly instructed in every doctrine of Christianity. This happened about twenty years after our Lord's ascension. He is the same person as is mentioned 1 Cor. iii. 7. A.

27 And whereas he was desirous to go to Achaia, the brethren exhorting, wrote to the disciples to receive him. Who, when he was come, helped them much, who had believed.

28 For he vigorously convinced the Jews in public, showing, by the Scriptures, Jesus to be the Christ.

CHAP. XIX.

Paul establishes the church at Ephesus. The tumult of the silversmiths.

AND it came to pass, when Apollo was at Corinth, that Paul having passed through the upper parts, came to Ephesus, and found certain disciples:

2 And he said to them: Have you received the Holy Ghost since ye believed? But they said to him: We have not so much as heard whether there be a Holy Ghost.

3 And he said: In what then were you baptized? Who said: In John's baptism.

4 Then Paul said: John baptized the people with the baptism of penance, saying: That they should believe in him who was to come after him, that is to say, in Jesus.

5 Having heard these things, they were baptized in the name of the Lord Jesus.

6 And when Paul had imposed his hands on them, the Holy Ghost came upon them, and they spoke tongues and prophesied.

7 And all the men were about twelve.

8 And entering into the synagogue, he spoke boldly for the space of three months, disputing and persuading concerning the kingdom of God.

9 But when some were hardened and believed not, but spoke ill of the way of the Lord before the multitude, departing from them, he separated the disciples, disputing daily in the school of one Tyrannus.*

10 And this continued for two years, so that all that dwelt in Asia, heard the word of the Lord, Jews and Gentiles.

11 And God wrought special miracles by the hand of Paul:

12 So that even there were brought from his body to the sick handkerchiefs and aprons, and the diseases departed from them, and the wicked spirits went out of them.

13 Now^d some of the Jewish exorcists, who went about, attempted to invoke over them, that had evil spirits, the name of the Lord Jesus, saying: I conjure you by Jesus, whom Paul preacheth.

14 And there were certain men, seven sons of Sceva, a Jew, a chief priest, who did this.

15 But an evil spirit answering, said to them: Jesus I know, and Paul I know: but who are you?

16 And the man, in whom the evil spirit was, leaping upon them, and mastering them both, prevailed against them, so that they fled out of that house naked and wounded.

17 And this was known to all the Jews and the Gentiles who dwelt at Ephesus: and fear fell on them all, and the name of the Lord Jesus was magnified.

18 And many of those who believed, came confessing and declaring their deeds.

19 And many of those who had followed curious things, brought their books together, and burnt them before all: and the price of them being computed, they found the money to be fifty thousand pieces of silver.

20 So mightily increased the word of God, and was confirmed.

21 Now these things being ended, Paul purposed in the spirit, as soon as he had passed through Macedonia and Achaia, to go to Jerusalem, saying: After I have been there, I must also see Rome.

22 And sending into Macedonia two of those that ministered to him, Timothy and Erastus, he himself remained for a time in Asia.

23 Now at that time there arose no small disturbance about the way of the Lord.*

24 For a certain man, named Demetrius, a silversmith, who made silver temples for Diana, brought no small gain to the craftsmen:

25 Whom having called together, with workmen of like occupation, he said: You men, you know that our gain is by this trade:

26 Now you see, and hear, that this Paul, by per-

CHAP. XIX. VER. 1. Disciples. These were apparently disciples of S. John the Baptist, who believed in Christ from his testimony, and had received no further instruction, nor any baptism but John's. Calmet.

What wonder, then, if God work miracles by the relics of martyrs and saints, to testify the sanctity of his servants, and to encourage others both to give them a reasonable honour, and to imitate their lives? Wi.

VER. 13. The Jewish exorcists. Among the Jews were some, who by calling upon the name of the true God, sometimes cast out evil spirits. But these sons of Sceva, seeing S. Paul cast out devils by calling upon the name of Jesus, thought fit to do the same, though they did not believe in Jesus Christ. And God punished them in this manner, as it is here related, at least two of them. Wi.—It is uncertain whether the Jews really possessed the power of exorcising demoniacs. That this power of expelling devils resides in the Church every page of primitive ecclesiastical history testifies. Scripture is also equally explicit on this subject. The exorcisms, says S. Cyprian, are the spiritual torments and scourges of the demons. Ep ad Demetrium.—It was for this reason the Jews, on this occasion, used the name of Jesus, a name terrible to the infernal spirits, to add power to their imprecations. Tertullian urges facts of this power in the Christians, with much energy and eloquence, in his Apology. Prudentius has recorded the same, with equal elegance, in his verse—

VER. 19. Curious things. By which are here meant books of divination and magic art, to which study the Ephesians were much addicted. The price of the books burnt amounted to a great sum, even computing the 50,000 denarii each of them at sevenpence-halfpenny English money. Wi.—The value of the books here destroyed might have amounted to £1000 sterling.

VER. 21. I must also see Rome. It is what S. Paul earnestly desired, and what the Spirit now revealed to him. See Rom. i. Wi.

VER. 23. About the way of the Lord; that is, about Christian faith, and religion. Wi.—A great source of these troubles that ensued, was the preaching of the gospel.

masion hath drawn away a great multitude, not only at Ephesus, but almost throughout all Asia, saying: That they are no gods which are made with hands.

27 So that not only this our craft is in danger to be vilified, but also the temple of great Diana shall be thought nothing of, yea, and her majesty shall begin to be destroyed, whom all Asia and the world worshippeth.

28 Having heard these things, they were full of anger, and cried out, saying: Great is Diana of the Ephesians.

29 And the whole city was filled with confusion, and they rushed with one accord into the theatre, having caught Gaius and Aristarchus, men of Macedonia, companions of Paul.

30 And when Paul would have entered in unto the people, the disciples suffered him not.

31 And some also of the rulers of Asia, who were his friends, sent unto him, desiring that he would not venture himself into the theatre.

32 Now some cried out one thing, some another. For the assembly was confused, and the greater part knew not for what cause they were come together.

33 And they drew forth Alexander out of the multitude, the Jews thrusting him forward. And Alexander, beckoning with his hand for silence, would have given the people satisfaction.

34 But as soon as they perceived him to be a Jew, all with one voice, for the space of about two hours, cried out: Great is Diana of the Ephesians.

35 And when the town-clerk had appeased the multitudes, he said: Ye men of Ephesus, what man is there that knoweth not that the city of the Ephesians is a worshipper of the great Diana, and of Jupiter's offspring?

36 Seeing, therefore, these things cannot be contradicted, you ought to be quiet, and do nothing rashly.

37 For you have brought hither these men, neither guilty of sacrilege, nor of blasphemy against your goddess.

38 But if Demetrius, and the craftsmen who are with him, have a cause against any man, the courts of justice are open, and there are proconsuls: let them accuse one another.

39 And if you inquire after any other matter, it may be decided in a lawful assembly.

40 For we are in danger of being charged with this day's uproar: there being no man guilty (of whom we can give an account) of this concourse. And when he had said these things, he dismissed the assembly.

VER. 27. In danger to be vilified, and Diana of losing her reputation. They ought to have reflected, says S. Chrys., (Hom. 42,) that if such a poor man as Paul could destroy the worship and the majesty of this great goddess, whom, as they say, all the world adored, how much greater and worthy of adoration must the God be by whose power Paul could do this! Wi.

VER. 35. The town-clerk, &c. Lit. the scribe, or the recorder of the city.—Jupiter's offspring.† His daughter, according to the poets. The Greek text seems to signify a statue, or figure of Diana, which was pretended to have fallen from heaven, and from Jupiter. Wi.

CHAP. XX.

Paul passes through Macedonia and Greece: he raises a dead man to life at Troas. His discourse to the clergy of Ephesus.

AND after the tumult ceased, Paul calling to him the disciples, and exhorting them, took his leave, and set forward to go into Macedonia.

2 And when he had gone over those parts, and had exhorted them with many words, he came into Greece:

3 Where, when he had spent three months, the Jews laid wait for him, as he was about to sail into Syria: *so he took a resolution to return through Macedonia.

4 And there accompanied him Sopater, the son of Pyrrhus, of Berea, and of the Thessalonians, Aristarchus, and Secundus, and Gaius, of Derbe, and Timothy: and of Asia, Tychicus, and Trophimus.

5 These having gone before, waited for us at Troas.

6 But we sailed from Philippi after the days of the azymes, and came to them to Troas in five days, where we stayed seven days.

7 And on the first day of the week, when we assembled to break bread, Paul discoursed with them, being to depart on the morrow, and he continued his speech until midnight.

8 And there were a great number of lamps in the upper chamber, where we were assembled.

9 And a certain young man, named Eutychus, sitting on the window, being oppressed with a heavy sleep, as Paul was long preaching, by occasion of his sleep fell from the third loft down, and was taken up dead.

10 To whom, when Paul went down he laid himself upon him: and embracing him, said: Be not troubled; for his soul is in him.

11 Then going up, and breaking bread and tasting: and having talked a long while to them until day-light, so he departed.

12 And they brought the youth alive, and were not a little comforted.

13 But we going on board the ship, sailed to Assos, from whence we were to take in Paul: for so he had appointed, himself purposing to travel by land.

14 And when he had met with us at Assos, we took him in, and came to Mitylene.

15 And sailing from thence, next day we came over against Chius: and in another day we arrived at Samos: and the day following we came to Miletus.

16 For Paul had determined to sail by Ephesus, lest person again, it would appear S. Luke had rejoined the apostle. This writer modestly omits the reason of his accompanying S. Paul, who tells us it was at his own request, (2 Cor. viii. 19,) that no suspicion might be entertained that he applied improperly the money, which he was commissioned to carry to the distressed brethren in Jerusalem. T. irinus.

VER. 7. On the first day of the week.* The interpreters generally take notice, with S. Chrys., that the Christians, even at this time, must have changed the sabbath into the first day of the week, as all Christians now keep it. Which change (even as to the manner of keeping one of God's ten commandments) was made by the Church.—To break bread, meaning the blessed sacrament, as it is commonly expounded. Wi.

VER. 12. Alive. This accident, which gave occasion to a great miracle, was ordained by the particular providence of God, in order to confirm the preaching of S. Paul, and to fix more deeply in the hearts of his disciples the words of their dear master, who was just going to leave them. Admire likewise the apostle's solicitude for his neighbours' salvation, in prolonging his instructions through the whole night, which preceded his departure. D. Carthus.

he should be delayed any time in Asia. For he hastened on, if it were possible for him to keep the day of Pentecost at Jerusalem.

17 And sending from Miletus to Ephesus, he called the ancients of the church.

18 And when they were come to him, and were together, he said to them: You know from the first day that I came into Asia, in what manner I have been with you all the time,

19 Serving the Lord with all humility, and with tears, and temptations, which came upon me from the snares of the Jews:

20 How I have kept back nothing that was profitable to you, but have preached it to you, and taught you publicly, and from house to house,

21 Testifying both to Jews and Gentiles penance toward God, and faith in our Lord Jesus Christ.

22 And now behold bound in the spirit, I go to Jerusalem, not knowing the things that shall befall me there:

23 Only that the Holy Ghost in every city witnesseth to me, saying: That chains and afflictions wait for me at Jerusalem.

24 But I fear none of these things: neither do I count my life more precious than myself, so that I may consume my course, and the ministry of the word, which I have received from the Lord Jesus, to testify the gospel of the grace of God.

25 And now behold I know that all you, among whom I have gone preaching the kingdom of God, shall see my face no more.

26 Wherefore I take you to witness this day, that I am clear from the blood of all.

27 For I have not been wanting to declare to you all the counsel of God.

28 Take heed to yourselves, and to all the flock, over which the Holy Ghost hath placed you bishops, to rule the church of God, which he hath purchased with his own blood.

• 2 Cor. iv. 12; 1 Thess. ii. 9; 2 Thess. iii. 8.

VER. 17. He called the ancients of the Church. We might translate the bishops, as the very same persons in the 28th verse are called bishops. Wi.

VER. 20. I have kept back, &c. I have discovered to you every thing which can be useful to your salvation. Neither fear, nor any human considerations, have prevailed over me to disguise or suppress the truths, which might be serviceable to you. This is the model of a good pastor. Full of doctrine, and of zeal, he communicates what God puts into his heart, and charity inspires him to speak with abundance, with discretion, without jealousy, without fear.

VER. 22. Bound in the spirit, led by inspiration of the Holy Ghost. Wi.—Chained, and forced, as it were, by the Holy Spirit, who offers me a sweet violence; or I am so strongly persuaded of the chains, which await me at Jerusalem, that I already feel myself bound in idea. Calmet.

VER. 23. In every city. There were in every city Christian prophets, who foretold to Paul the tribulations which awaited him. It appears, then, that the apostle did not know these things by immediate revelation made to himself, but by that made to the prophets. Of this we have a proof in the next chapter.

VER. 25. I know, &c. It appears sufficiently evident, from many parts of S. Paul's epistles, that he not only designed, but likewise, according to the opinion of the most able critics, actually did revisit the churches in Asia. On this occasion, then, he only expresses his belief, his conviction, that he should see them no more, judging it impossible for him to escape all the dangers that were prepared for him. Calmet.—All you. Although S. Paul might return again to the same place, he might truly say of so great an assembly, that all of them should not see him again. Wi.

VER. 28. Take heed to yourselves, and to all the flock. The ministers of the gospel must in the first place take care of the salvation of their own souls; and in the next place, of the salvation of their flock, of the souls committed to their care, and to the Church; especially such ministers of God who are bishops,† placed by Divine institution, to govern the Church, or the churches under them. The word bishops, by its derivation, signifies overseers, or superintendants; but the sig-

36 And when he had said these things, kneeling down, he prayed with them all.

37 And there was much weeping among them all: and falling on Paul's neck, they kissed him, 38 Being very much grieved for the word which he had said, that they should see his face no more. *And they conducted him to the ship.

See his last adieu with the Tyrians, (chap. xx. 6, 7,) where they all kneeled down to pray on the shore. This is also reasonable, and becoming a Christian. It is a sign of communion and mutual charity, and implies a prosperous voyage for those who were departing, whilst those who remained, cherish in their mind the remembrance of the virtues of their absent friend. VER. 3. Cyprus, an island in the Mediterranean, to the east of Patara and Rhodes.

VER. 4. Not go up to Jerusalem. S. Paul says in the foregoing chapter, that he was pressed by the Holy Ghost to go to Jerusalem; and do these prophets now advise him to stay away, and disobey the inspiration? No: their dissuasion was who said to Paul through the Spirit, that he should not go up to Jerusalem.

5 And the days being expired, departing, we went forward, they all bringing us on our way, with their wives and children, till we were out of the city: and kneeling down on the shore, we prayed.

6 And when we had taken leave of one another, we took ship: and they returned home.

7 But we having finished the voyage by sea from Tyre, came down to Ptolemais: and saluting the brethren, we stayed one day with them.

8 And the next day departing, we came to Cæsarea. And entering into the house of Philip, the evangelist, *who was one of the seven, we stayed with him.

9 And he had four daughters, virgins, who did prophesy.

10 And as we stayed there for some days, there came from Judea a certain prophet, named Agabus.

11 And when he was come to us, he took Paul's girdle: and binding his own feet and hands, he said: These things saith the Holy Ghost: The man whose girdle this is, thus shall the Jews bind in Jerusalem, and shall deliver him into the hands of the Gentiles.

12 And when he had heard this, both we, and they who were of that place, besought him not to go up to Jerusalem.

13 Then Paul answered, and said: What do you mean, weeping and afflicting my heart? For I am ready not only to be bound, but also to die in Jerusalem, for the name of the Lord Jesus.

14 And when we could not persuade him, we ceased, saying: The will of the Lord be done.

15 And after those days, being prepared, we went up to Jerusalem.

16 And there went also with us some of the disciples from Cæsarea, bringing with them one Mnason, a Cyprian, an old disciple, with whom we should lodge.

17 And when we were come to Jerusalem, the brethren received us gladly.

18 And the day following Paul went in with us to James, and all the ancients were assembled.

19 And when he had saluted them, he related particularly what things God had wrought among the Gentiles, by his ministry.

20 But they hearing it, glorified God, and said to him: Thou seest, brother, how many thousands there are among the Jews who have believed: and they are all zealous for the law.

21 Now they have heard of thee, that thou teachest those Jews, who are among the Gentiles, to forsake Moses: saying, that they ought not to circumcise their children, nor to walk according to the custom.

22 What is it, therefore? the multitude must indeed come together: for they will hear that thou art come.

23 Do, therefore, this that we say to thee: We have four men, who have a vow upon them.

24 Having taken these with thee: purify thyself with them: and bestow on them, ^bthat they may shave their heads: and all will know that the things which they have heard of thee, are false: but that thou thyself also walkest keeping the law.

25 As for those of the Gentiles who have believed, ^cwe have written, decreeing that they should refrain themselves from that which has been offered to idols, and from blood, and from things strangled, and from fornication.

26 Then Paul having taken to him the men, the next day being purified with them, entered into the temple, giving notice of the accomplishment of the days of purification, until an oblation should be offered for every one of them.

27 But while the seven days were drawing to an end, those Jews who were of Asia, when they saw him in the temple, stirred up all the people, and laid hands upon him, crying out:

28 Men of Israel, help: This is the man that teacheth all men every where against the people, and the law, and this place: and moreover hath brought in Gentiles into the temple, and hath violated this holy place.

29 For they had seen Trophimus, the Ephesian, in the city with him, whom they supposed that Paul had brought into the temple.

30 And the whole city was in an uproar: and there was a concourse of people. And having seized on Paul, they drew him out of the temple: and immediately the doors were shut.

31 And as they were seeking to kill him, it was told the tribune of the band: That all Jerusalem was in confusion.

32 Who forthwith taking with him soldiers and centurions, ran down to them. And when they saw the tribune and the soldiers, they left off beating Paul.

33 Then the tribune coming near, took him, and com-not the effect of inspiration, but the expression of their tenderness and affection for him, which made them fear what they saw he was going to endure. D. Carthus. —Hence S. Paul disregarded their entreaties, as well as the imminent dangers that every where stared him in the face. See his heroic answer to the melting entreaties of the faithful of Cæsarea, and their final acquiescence: "The will of the Lord be done." Infra, ver. 14.

VER. 9. Prophecy. It is supposed that these daughters of S. Philip had made a vow of virginity, or at least remained in that state out of a motive of religion. S. Jerom thinks in reward of this they were gifted with a prophetic spirit. Lib. 1, c. 24, cont. Jov.—Others think that by prophesying is meant interpreting the Scriptures, or singing the praises of God. Estius.

VER. 18. To James, the bishop of Jerusalem, where all the seniors, that is, the bishops and priests, had assembled. Wi.

VER. 21. To forsake Moses. In the Greek, to depart or apostatize from Moses and the law. This is more than was true. For S. Paul circumcised Timothy, (chap. xvi.) and did not absolutely hinder converts who had been Jews, from practising the Jewish ceremonies. Wi.—There is a manifest falsity in this accusation against S. Paul. He had never commanded or advised the Jews, to whom he had preached, to renounce the law, abandon the ceremonies of Moses, or reject the ancient customs of the nation. He had never hindered any one from following in this respect the bias of his inclinations. He had indeed defended the liberty of the converts from these ceremonies; he had taught that Christ had taken away the necessity of this yoke; but he left them at liberty still to carry it if they pleased. Calmet.

VER. 23. Who have a vow upon them. On which account they will have sacrifices offered for them in the temple. Wi.

VER. 24. Bestow on them. It was thought a merit among the Jews to bear the expenses of any vow which another had made. They thus became partakers of it: in the same manner as at present those, who have not the courage to forsake the world by solemn vows, seek to have some share in the merits of those who do forsake it, by contributing part of their substance to their support. Calmet.

VER. 30. The doors were shut, lest the temple should be profaned by Gentiles entering into it. Wi.

manded him to be bound with two chains : and demanded who he was, and what he had done.

34 And some cried out one thing, some another, among the multitude. And when he could not know the certainty, because of the tumult, he commanded him to be brought into the castle.

35 And when he was come to the stairs, it happened that he was borne up by the soldiers, because of the violence of the people.

36 For the multitude of the people followed after, crying out : Away with him.

37 And as Paul was about to be brought into the castle, he said to the tribune : May I speak something to thee ? Who said : Canst thou speak Greek ?

38 Art not thou that Egyptian, who before these days didst raise a tumult, and didst lead forth into the desert four thousand men that were murderers ?

39 But Paul said to him : I am indeed a Jew, a man of Tarsus, in Cilicia, a citizen of no mean city. And I beseech thee, permit me to speak to the people.

40 And when he had given him leave, Paul standing on the stairs, beckoned with his hand to the people. And a great silence being made, he spoke to them in the Hebrew tongue, saying :

CHAP. XXII.

Paul declares to the people the history of his conversion. He escapes scourging by claiming the privilege of a Roman.

MEN, brethren, and fathers, hear ye the account which I now give you.

2 And when they heard that he spoke to them in the Hebrew tongue, they kept the more silence.

3 And he said : I am a man, who am a Jew, born at Tarsus, in Cilicia, but brought up in this city, at the feet of Gamaliel, taught according to the truth of the law of the fathers, zealous for the law, as also all you are this day :

4 And I persecuted this way unto death, binding and delivering into prisons both men and women,

5 As the high priest doth bear me witness, and all the ancients : from whom also taking letters, I went to the brethren at Damascus, to bring them bound from thence to Jerusalem, that they might be punished.

VER. 34. *Into the castle. Neither the Latin nor the Greek word signifies a castle, but rather a camp, or a place walled, or with a trench about it. It is true, we may here understand the tower, called Antonia ; but within its court might be tents for soldiers, where there was so great a number : for we see that Lysias could send away 470 with S. Paul, besides those that might stay behind. Wi.

VER. 38. This Egyptian coming to Jerusalem, and professing himself to be a prophet, had persuaded the people to accompany him to Mount Olivet, pretending he would throw down the walls of the city only by a word. Felix, the Roman governor, attacked the deluded multitude, and killed 400. The leader escaped, and was heard of no more. This was in the 13th year of Claudius, about three years before S. Paul's apprehension. Menochius.

6 And it came to pass, as I was going and drawing near to Damascus, at mid-day, that suddenly there shone from heaven a great light round about me :

7 And falling on the ground, I heard a voice saying to me : Saul, Saul, why persecutest thou me ?

8 And I answered : Who art thou, Lord ? And he said to me : I am Jesus of Nazareth, whom thou persecutest.

9 And they that were with me, saw indeed the light, but they heard not the voice of him that spoke with me.

10 And I said : What shall I do, Lord ? And the Lord said to me : Arise, and go into Damascus : and there it shall be told thee of all things thou must do.

11 And whereas I did not see for the brightness of that light, being led by the hand by my companions, I came to Damascus.

12 And one Ananias, a man according to the law, having a good character from all the Jews dwelling there, 13 Coming to me, and standing by me, said to me : Brother Saul, receive thy sight. And I the same hour looked upon him.

14 And he said : The God of our fathers hath pre-ordained thee that thou shouldst know his will, and see the Just One, and shouldst hear the voice from his mouth.

15 For thou shalt be his witness to all men, of those things which thou hast seen and heard.

16 And now why delayest thou ? Rise up, and be baptized, and wash away thy sins, calling upon his name.

17 And it came to pass, when I was come again to Jerusalem, and was praying in the temple, that I was in a trance,

18 And saw him, saying unto me : Make haste, and go quickly out of Jerusalem : because they will not receive thy testimony concerning me.

19 And I said : Lord, they know that I cast into prison, and beat in every synagogue, them that believed in thee.

20 And when the blood of Stephen, thy witness, was shed, I stood by and consented, and kept the garments of them who killed him.

21 And he said to me : Go, for unto the nations afar off will I send thee.

VER. 9. Heard not the voice. To reconcile this with chap. ix. 7, where it is said, that they heard the voice ; it may be answered, that they heard a noise, and a voice, but heard it not distinctly, nor so as to understand the words. Wi.—They heard not the voice of him who spoke to the apostle, but they heard the latter speak (chap. ix. 7) ; or perhaps they heard a noise, which they could not understand. They perhaps heard the voice of Paul answering, but not that of Christ complaining.

VER. 14. Shouldst . . . see the Just One. Our Saviour appeared to S. Paul, as it is said (chap. ix. 7) ; and he is divers times, both in the prophets and in the Testament, called the Just One. Wi.—To see and hear the Just One ; Him, who is just by excellence, that you also may prove a witness of his resurrection from the dead.

VER. 16. Wash, &c. The contrition and charity of S. Paul had, no doubt, merited for him the remission of his sins at the moment of his conversion. Still were these effects to be attributed to the desire of the sacrament of baptism, without which the Council of Trent defines that the forgiveness of sins, and the punishment due to them, are not obtained. It likewise added a new degree of lustre to his innocence and purity. Tirinus.—Calling upon his name. In such manner, says S. Chrys., (Hom. 47,) as we invoke the only true God ; not as we invoke the saints, and pray to them, that they would pray for us. Wi.

VER. 17. To Jerusalem . . . that I was in a trance. This might be when he went to Jerusalem, three years after his conversion, or at some other time. It might be in this ecstasy that he was rapt to the third heaven, as he tells the Corinthians, 1 Cor. xv. 9. Wi.

22 And they heard him until this word, and then lifted up their voice, saying: Away with such a one from the earth: for it is not fit that he should live.

23 And as they cried out, and threw off their garments, and dust into the air, 24 The tribune ^acommanded him to be brought into the castle, and to be scourged, and to be tortured: that he might know for what cause they cried out thus against him.

25 And when they had bound him with thongs, Paul saith to the centurion standing by him: Is it lawful for you to scourge a man that is a Roman, and uncondemned?

26 Which having heard, the centurion went to the tribune, and told him, saying: What art thou about to do? For this man is a Roman citizen.

27 Then the tribune came, and said to him: Tell me, if thou art a Roman? But he said: Yes.

28 And the tribune answered: I obtained the being free of this city with a great sum. And Paul said: But I was born so.

29 Immediately, therefore, they that were about to torture him, departed from him. The tribune also was afraid after he understood that he was a Roman citizen, and because he had bound him.

30 But on the next day, being desirous to know more diligently, for what cause he was accused by the Jews, he loosed him, and commanded the priests to come together and all the council: and bringing forth Paul, he set him before them.

Not that the Jews forbade preaching to the Gentiles; on the contrary, our Saviour reproached the Pharisees, that they would go over land and sea for the sake of making one proselyte. They were likewise enraged that S. Paul had not laid on the Gentiles the heavy yoke of the law. Calmet.

VER. 23. Threw off their garments. Or pulling them open, to show themselves ready to stone him. Wi.

VER. 25. A Roman. That is, a Roman citizen, a freeman of Rome. Wi.—The apostle, on this occasion, not to injure the faith of some weak Christians, who might be scandalized at his public disgrace, prevents the scourging, which on another occasion he patiently submitted to. By the thongs he was probably bound to a pillar (Tirinus); or being tied hand and foot, was stretched on the ground, with his face downwards. This was frequently done among the Romans. Calmet.

Aug. lib. 1, de Serm. Dni. c. 29.—It was under Claudius that the abuse of buying the freedom of Rome was introduced. At first the name of a Roman was esteemed much, and bought at a great price. Now (such is the emptiness and vanity of titles) it is refused and despised; nay, it is fled from, and reckoned disgraceful. Salvian. De Gubern. Dei, lib. 5.—If S. Paul, on this occasion, makes use of his privilege, it is not that he was unprepared or afraid to die for Christ; but because it was lawful to use ordinary means to extricate himself from difficulties, and preserve himself for future services to religion. 2 And the high priest, Ananias, commanded them who stood by him, to strike him on the mouth.

3 Then Paul said to him: God shall strike thee, thou whited wall. For sittest thou there to judge me according to the law, and, contrary to the law, commandest me to be struck?

4 And they that stood by, said: Dost thou revile the high priest of God?

5 And Paul said: I knew not, brethren, that he is the high priest. For it is written: ^cThou shalt not speak evil of the prince of thy people.

6 And Paul knowing that the one part were Sadducees, and the other Pharisees, cried out in the council: Men, brethren, ^dI am a Pharisee, the son of Pharisees: concerning the hope and resurrection of the dead I am called in question.

7 And when he had said this, there arose a dissension between the Pharisees and the Sadducees: and the multitude was divided.

8 ^eFor the Sadducees say that there is no resurrection, nor angel, nor spirit: but the Pharisees confess both.

9 Now a great clamour was raised. And some of the Pharisees rising up, contended, saying: We find no evil in this man: what if a spirit hath spoken to him, or an angel?

10 And when there arose a great dissension, the tribune, fearing lest Paul should be torn in pieces by them, commanded the soldiers to go down, and to take him by force from among them, and to bring him into the castle.

11 And the night following the Lord standing by him, said: Be constant: for as thou hast testified of me in Jerusalem, so must thou bear witness also at Rome.

12 And when it was day, some of the Jews assembled together, and bound themselves with a curse, saying: that they would neither eat, nor drink, till they had killed Paul.

^d Phil. iii. 5.—^e Matt. xxii. 29.

VER. 3. *God shall strike thee, thou whited wall. These words are rather by way of a prophecy. Wi.—Whited wall. That is, hypocrite, for pretending to judge me according to law; whereas, against all sense of justice, thou strikest me before my condemnation; nay, even without giving me a hearing. The Fathers admire, on this occasion, the greatness of mind and freedom S. Paul exhibited, in reproving the great. Tirinus.—To those who do not consider it, it may seem a curse; but to others, a prophecy, as it really was. S. Aug. lib. 1, cap. 19, de Verb. Dni.—For S. Chrysostom relates that the high priest, being thunderstruck by this answer, became speechless and half dead; so that not being able to reply a single word, the bystanders did it for him. Tirinus.

VER. 5. I knew not, &c. It seems rather surprising that S. Paul did not know that he was the high priest. The place which he held in the council, one would suppose, would have been sufficient to have pointed him out. The apostle's absence from Jerusalem is perhaps a sufficient reason to account for his not knowing this circumstance; especially, as the order of succession to the priesthood was at that time much confused and irregular, determined by favour of the Roman emperor, or by purchase. Calmet.

VER. 6. I am a Pharisee, the son of Pharisees.† It may signify only a disciple of the Pharisees, though the common Greek copies have of a Pharisee. Wi.—The address of the apostle in this is great. Knowing the different dispositions of his judges, he throws disunion into their councils, in order to draw himself from danger. Such innocent artifices are allowed in the defence of a just cause. It was one of our Saviour's counsels, to use the prudence of the serpent. S. Gregory, in his Morality, (lib. 34, cap. 3, and 4,) and S. Thomas, in his Sum. Theol., (ii. 2, quæst. 37, art. 2.) observe, that on similar occasions you may, without sin, cause divisions among the wicked; because their union being an evil, it is consequently a good thing that the enemies of peace and righteousness should be divided in sentiments and interests. It must, however, be acknowledged that this principle is very easily stretched beyond its proper limits, and therefore ought not to be acted upon but with the greatest caution and prudence. Calmet.

13 And they were more than forty men that had made this conspiracy.

14 And they came to the chief priests, and the ancients, and said: We have bound ourselves under a curse that we will eat nothing, till we kill Paul.

15 Now, therefore, do you with the council signify to the tribune, that he bring him forth to you, as if you meant to know something more certain concerning him. And we, before he come near, are ready to kill him.

16 And when Paul's sister's son had heard of their lying in wait, he came, and entered into the castle, and told Paul.

17 Then Paul calling to him one of the centurions, said: Bring this young man to the tribune, for he hath something to tell him:

18 So he took him, and brought him to the tribune, and said: Paul, the prisoner, desired me to bring this young man to thee, who hath something to say to thee.

19 And the tribune taking him by the hand, went aside with him privately, and asked him: What is it that thou hast to tell me?

20 And he said: The Jews have agreed to desire thee, that thou wouldst bring forth Paul to-morrow into the council, as if they meant to inquire something more certain concerning him:

21 But do not thou give credit to them: for there lie in wait for him more than forty men of them, who have bound themselves by oath neither to eat nor to drink till they kill him: and they are now ready waiting for thy promise.

22 The tribune, therefore, dismissed the young man, charging him to tell no man that he had made known these things to him.

23 Then having called two centurions, he said to them: Make ready two hundred soldiers, that they may go as far as Cæsarea, and seventy horsemen, and two hundred spearmen, from the third hour of the night:

24 And provide beasts, that they may set Paul on, and bring him safe to Felix, the governor.

25 (For he feared lest the Jews might take him away by force, and kill him, and he should afterwards be slandered, as if he was to receive money.)

26 And he wrote a letter after this manner: Claudius Lysias, to the most excellent governor, Felix, greeting.

27 This man having been seized by the Jews, and ready to be killed by them, I rescued coming in with an army, having understood that he is a Roman:

28 And being desirous to know the cause which they objected to him, I brought him forth into council.

29 Whom I found to be accused of questions concerning their law: but to have nothing laid to his charge worthy of death, or of bands.

30 And when it was told me that they had prepared an ambush for him, I sent him to thee, signifying also to his accusers to plead before thee. Farewell.

31 Then the soldiers, according as it was commanded them, taking Paul, brought him by night to Antipatris.

32 And the next day, leaving the horsemen, to go with him, they returned to the castle.

33 Who, when they were come to Cæsarea, and had delivered the letter to the governor, presented Paul also before him.

34 And when he had read it, and had asked of what province he was: and understood that he was of Cilicia:

35 I will hear thee, said he, when thy accusers come. And he commanded him to be kept in Herod's judgment-hall.

Paul defends his innocence before Felix, the governor. He preaches the faith to him.

AND after five days, the high priest, Ananias, came down, with some of the ancients, and one Tertullus, an orator, who went to the governor, against Paul.

2 And Paul being cited, Tertullus began to accuse him, saying: Whereas through thee we live in much peace, and many things are rectified by thy foresight,

3 We accept it always, and in all places, most excellent Felix, with all thankfulness.

4 But that I be no farther tedious to thee, I beseech thee, of thy clemency, to hear us in a few words.

5 We have found this a pestilent man, and raising seditions among all the Jews throughout the whole world, and author of the sedition of the sect of the Nazarenes:

6 Who also attempted to profane the temple: whom we apprehended, and would have judged according to our law.

7 But Lysias, the tribune, coming upon us, took him away with great violence out of our hands, ted themselves to a curse, if they did not kill Paul. It was a great imprecation, the violation of which would have been equivalent to renouncing their belief in God. See to what degree of iniquity this nation is come. When any good is in contemplation, none are found to undertake it; whilst all, even the priests too, are ready to concur in any wicked design. S. Chrys. in Act. hom. 49.—To take an unlawful oath is one sin; but to keep it, is another and greater sin: as when Herod, to keep his oath, put to death John the Baptist. Matt. iv. 9.

VER. 24. Felix. This man had been a slave of the emperor Claudius. The high priest, Jonathan, had procured him to be made governor of Judea. He governed the country with great cruelty and outrage; exercising the power of a king, says Tacitus, with all the insolence and meanness of a slave, who is neither restrained by fear nor shame. Tacitus, Hist. lib. 5.

9 And the Jews also assented, and said that these things were so.

10 Then Paul answered, (the governor making a sign to him to speak) Knowing that for many years thou hast been judge over this nation, I will with good courage answer for myself.

11 For thou mayest understand, that there are yet but twelve days, since I went up to adore in Jerusalem :

12 And neither in the temple did they find me disputing with any man, or causing any concourse of the people, neither in the synagogues,

13 Nor in the city : neither can they prove to thee the things of which they now accuse me.

14 But this I confess to thee, that according to the way, which they call a heresy, so do I serve the Father, and my God, believing all things which are written in the law and the prophets :

15 Having hope in God, which these also themselves look for, that there shall be a resurrection of the just and unjust.

16 In this I myself also study to have always a conscience without offence towards God, and towards men.

17 Now, after many years, I came to bring alms to my nation, and offerings, and vows.

18 *In which they found me purified in the temple : not with a crowd, nor with a tumult.

19 But certain Jews of Asia, who ought to be present before thee, and to accuse, if they had any thing against me :

20 Or let these men themselves say, if they found in me any iniquity, when standing before the council,

21 Except it be for this one voice only, that I cried out, standing among them :^b That concerning the resurrection of the dead am I judged this day by you.

22 And Felix put them off, knowing most certainly of this way, saying : When Lysias, the tribune, shall come down, I will hear you.

23 And he commanded a centurion to keep him, and to let him be easy, and that he should not hinder any of his friends to minister to him.

24 And after some days, Felix coming with Drusilla,

VER. 12. In Jerusalem there was only one temple, nor could there, by an express command of the Almighty, be any more throughout the whole kingdom. (Perhaps the Almighty may have wished by this singular circumstance to have impressed more forcibly on their minds the absolute necessity of unity in religion, A.) But there were many synagogues, which were a kind of schools, in which the law was publicly taught, and the people assembled to read the Scriptures, and to pray. Calmet.

VER. 25. Felix being terrified, &c. When S. Paul spoke of God's judgments, and hinted at such sins as his conscience reproached him with. Wi.—Whoever knows the infamous character of Felix and Drusilla, will not fail to admire the apostle's fortitude, that he durst speak (as formerly the Baptist did to Herod) to them on the subject of justice and chastity. Suetonius says of the former, that he married three queens. Drusilla, one of the three, was Herod's daughter, and wife of Aziz, king of Emesa, whom he had seduced by the enchantments of a Jew of Cyprus. See Josephus, ut supra, Tirinus, Calmet, and others. Next to the worship of God, the Christian religion requires of its followers, in the first instance, justice and chastity. Felix was unjust, avaricious, cruel ; and both Felix and Drusilla were guilty of adultery.—At a convenient time I will send for thee. Such his wife, who was a Jewess, called for Paul, and heard from him the faith, which is in Christ Jesus.

25 And as he treated of justice, and chastity, and of the judgment to come, Felix being terrified, answered : For this time, go thy way : but at a convenient time, I will send for thee.

26 Hoping also withal, that money would be given him by Paul : for which account he also frequently sent for him, and spoke with him.

27 But when two years were ended, Felix had for successor Portius Festus. And being willing to gratify the Jews, he left Paul a prisoner.

CHAP. XXV.

Paul appeals to Cæsar. King Agrippa desires to hear him.

NOW^a when Festus was come into the province, after three days he went up to Jerusalem from Cæsarea.

2 And the chief priests, and principal men of the Jews, went to him against Paul : and they besought him,

3 Requesting favour against him, that he would command him to be brought to Jerusalem, laying wait to kill him in the way.

4 But Festus answered : That Paul was to be kept in Cæsarea : and that he himself should go very shortly thither.

5 Let them, therefore, saith he, among you that are able, going down with me, accuse him, if there be any crime in the man.

6 And having stayed among them no more than eight or ten days, he went down to Cæsarea, and the next day he sat in the judgment-seat : and commanded Paul to be brought.

7 And when he was brought, the Jews that were come down from Jerusalem, stood about him, objecting many and grievous accusations which they could not prove ;

8 Paul making answer : That neither against the law of the Jews, nor against the temple, nor against Cæsar, have I offended in any thing.

9 But Festus being willing to gratify the Jews, answered Paul, and said : Wilt thou go up to Jerusalem, and there be judged of these things before me ?

is the expedient Felix has recourse to, to silence the voice of conscience : and in this how often is he not imitated by the sinner, who dreads nothing so much as to enter into himself. Why put that off to another time, which will never arrive ! Or why delay till death a repentance, which, like the remorse of the damned, will then be as unavailing as it will be eternal ?

CHAP. XXV. VER. 1. Festus having arrived at his province, goes to Jerusalem to be inaugurated. The Jews took this opportunity of requesting S. Paul might be sent to Jerusalem, that they might accomplish the iniquitous purport of their vow. Tirinus.

VER. 4. It would appear, from their first request being peremptorily denied them, how little solicitous their governors were to please them. The successors of Felix and Festus were not better disposed than their predecessors. Their extortions and oppressions were pushed so far, that the Jews attempted at last to deliver themselves by rebellion, which proved their utter ruin and extirpation. Indeed it was in vain to resist, for they already began to feel the truth of our Saviour's prediction, in their subjugation to the Gentiles. Josephus bears ample testimony to the fulfilment of the prophecy. De Bel. Jud. lib. 2, c. 16, &c. A.

VER. 8. Paul making answer,† or his apology, by the Greek. In the Latin, 189

10 Then Paul said : I stand at Cæsar's tribunal where I ought to be judged : To the Jews I have done no injury, as thou very well knowest.

11 For if I have injured them, or have committed any thing that deserveth death, I refuse not to die : but if there be nothing of these things whereof they accuse me, no man can deliver me to them. I appeal to Cæsar.

12 Then Festus having conferred with the council, answered : Hast thou appealed to Cæsar ? To Cæsar shalt thou go.

13 And after some days, king Agrippa and Bernice came down to Cæsarea, to salute Festus.

14 And as they stayed there many days, Festus told the king concerning Paul, saying : There is a certain man left prisoner by Felix, 15 Concerning whom, when I was at Jerusalem, the chief priests, and the ancients of the Jews, came to me, demanding condemnation against him.

16 To whom I answered : It is not the custom of the Romans to condemn any man, before that he who is accused have his accusers present, and that he have liberty of making his defence, to clear himself of the things laid to his charge.

17 When, therefore, they were come hither, without any delay, on the day following, I sat on the judgment-seat, and commanded the man to be brought forth.

18 Against whom, when the accusers stood up, they brought in no cause wherein I could suspect any evil :

19 But had certain questions of their own superstition against him, and of one Jesus deceased, whom Paul affirmed to be alive.

20 And as I was in doubt of this manner of question, I asked him whether he would go to Jerusalem, and there be judged of those things.

21 But Paul appealing to be reserved to the hearing of Augustus, I commanded him to be kept, till I might send him to Cæsar.

22 Then Agrippa said to Festus : I would also hear the man myself. To-morrow, said he, thou shalt hear him.

23 And on the next day, when Agrippa and Bernice were come with great pomp, and had entered into the hall of audience, with the tribunes and principal men of the city, Festus commanding it, Paul was brought forth.

24 And Festus saith : King Agrippa, and all ye men who are here present with us, you see this man, about whom all the multitude of the Jews made their request to me at Jerusalem, petitioning and crying out that he ought not to live any longer.

25 Yet have I found nothing that he hath committed worthy of death. But he himself appealing to Augustus, I have determined to send him.

26 Concerning whom I have nothing certain to write to my lord. Wherefore I have brought him forth before you, and especially before thee, O king Agrippa, that examination being made, I may have something to write.

27 For it seemeth to me unreasonable, to send a prisoner, and not to signify the things laid to his charge.

CHAP. XXVI.

Paul gives an account to Agrippa of his life, conversion, and calling.

THEN Agrippa said to Paul : Thou art permitted to speak for thyself. Then Paul stretching forth his hand, began to make his answer.

2 I think myself happy, O king Agrippa, that I am to answer for myself this day before thee, concerning all the things of which I am accused by the Jews,

3 Especially, as thou knowest all, both customs and questions, which are among the Jews : wherefore I beseech thee to hear me patiently.

4 And my life indeed from my youth, which was from the beginning among my own nation in Jerusalem, all the Jews do know :

5 Having known me from the beginning, (if they will give testimony,) that according to the most sure sect of our religion I lived a Pharisee.

6 And now I stand under judgment for the hope of the promise which God made to our fathers :

7 Unto which our twelve tribes, serving night and day, hope to come. For which hope, O king, I am accused by the Jews.

8 Why should it be thought a thing incredible with you, that God should raise the dead ?

9 And I myself was indeed persuaded that I ought to

VER. 10. S. Paul, seeing Festus only sought a plea to get rid of his cause, by putting it into the hands of the Sanhedrim, appeals to Cæsar. The apostle knew he was secured by making this appeal : as the Roman law declared provincial governors violators of the public peace, who should either strike, or imprison, or put to death a Roman citizen, that appealed to the emperor. Calmet.—Hence Pliny sent some Christians to Rome for this same reason, as he writes himself in his epistles. Lib. 10, Ep. 97.

VER. 26. To my lord. This was a title the emperors afterwards took, but which Augustus and Tiberius are said by Pliny, in his epistle to Trajan, and by Tertullian, to have refused, as too assuming and too high, ut nimis sublimem atque gloriosum. Tirinus.—Whilst we can approve and admire the motives which actuated the emperors in refusing this title, we cannot go to the lengths which some modern enthusiasts do, (mostly Americans, Quakers, &c.,) who pretend it is blasphemy to call a mortal man a lord, as if that name were incommunicable to any but the Creator of the universe. Whence they derive this article of faith it will not be easy for us to guess ; certainly not from Scripture, in which the word dominus, or lord, applied to man, occurs almost as frequently as king. Certainly not from our Saviour's words, who gives both himself and others this title, (Mark xiv. 14, et alibi passim.) nor from S. Paul's doctrine, who also uses this word indiscriminately through his epistles. Gal. iv. 1 ; Ephes. vi. 5, &c.

Paul still bore his chains about him, those chains in which he gloried (ver. 26) ; it is therefore necessary to suppose that his left hand only was tied ; or, what is less likely, that these chains were not so tight nor heavy as to hinder the easy motion of the right. do many things in opposition to the name of Jesus of Nazareth.

10 * Which also I did at Jerusalem, and many of the saints I shut up in prisons, having received authority from the chief priests: and when they were put to death, I brought the sentence.

11 And I punished them often in every synagogue, and compelled them to blaspheme: and being yet more mad against them, I persecuted them, even unto the foreign cities.

12 ^b Whereupon when I was going to Damascus with authority and permission of the chief priests, 13 At mid-day, O king, I saw in the way a light from heaven above the brightness of the sun, shining about me and those that were in company with me.

14 And when we were all fallen down to the ground, I heard a voice speaking to me in the Hebrew tongue: Saul, Saul, why persecutest thou me? It is hard for thee to kick against the goad.

15 And I said: Who art thou, Lord? And the Lord answered: I am Jesus, whom thou persecutest.

16 But rise up and stand upon thy feet: for to this end have I appeared to thee, that I may make thee a minister and a witness of those things which thou hast seen, and of those things for which I will appear to thee,

17 Delivering thee from the people, and from the nations, unto which now I send thee,

18 To open their eyes, that they may be converted from darkness to light, and from the power of satan to God, that they may receive forgiveness of sins, and a lot among the saints, by the faith that is in me.

19 Whereupon, O king Agrippa, I was not incredulous to the heavenly vision:

20 ^c But preached first to them that are at Damascus, and at Jerusalem, and throughout all the country of Judea, and to the Gentiles, that they should do penance, and turn to God, doing works worthy of penance.

21 For this cause the Jews, when I was in the temple, ^d having apprehended me, attempted to kill me.

22 But being aided by the help of God, I continue to this day witnessing both to small and great, saying no other things than those which the prophets and Moses did say should come to pass:

Wi.—First, &c. Many had been raised from the dead before Jesus; the child of the widow of Sarepta, Lazarus, and others. How, then, is Jesus first? He is the first who rises not to die again; and as such the Messiah is always represented by the prophets. Others were raised from the dead, but returned again to their graves. Jesus dies no more. He is the first too who raises himself. Calmet.

VER. 24. It is not surprising that Festus should have taken S. Paul for a madman. The resurrection of the dead, remission of sins, receiving baptism, and faith, announcing light to the nations, &c., were subjects completely unintelligible to a Roman.

the first that should rise from the dead, and should show light to the people and to the Gentiles.

24 Now, as he was speaking these things, and giving an account, Festus said with a loud voice: Paul, thou art beside thyself: much learning doth make thee mad.

25 And Paul said: I am not mad, most excellent Festus, but I speak words of truth and sobriety.

26 For the king knoweth of these things, to whom also I speak with confidence: for I am persuaded that none of these things are hidden from him. For neither were any of these things done in a corner.

27 Believest thou the prophets, O king Agrippa? I know that thou believest.

28 Then Agrippa said to Paul: In a little thou persuadest me to become a Christian.

29 And Paul said: I would to God, that both in a little and in much, not only thou, but also all that hear me this day, should become such as I also am, except these chains.

30 And the king rose up, and the governor, and Bernice, and they that sat with them.

31 And when they were gone aside, they conferred with one another, saying: This man hath done nothing that deserveth death or chains.

32 And Agrippa said to Festus: This man might have been set at liberty, if he had not appealed to Cæsar.

Paul is shipped for Rome. His voyage and shipwreck.

AND^e when it was determined that he should sail into Italy, and that Paul, with the other prisoners, should be delivered to a centurion, named Julius, of the band Augusta,

2 ^f Going on board a ship of Adrumetum, we weighed anchor, being about to sail by the coast of Asia, Aristarchus, the Macedonian, of Thessalonica, continuing with us.

3 And the next day we came to Sidon. And Julius treating Paul courteously, permitted him to go to his friends, and to take care of himself.

4 And when we had launched from thence, we sailed under Cyprus: because the winds were contrary.

5 And having sailed over the sea of Cilicia and Pamphilia, we came to Lystra, which is in Lycia:

6 And there the centurion finding a ship of Alexandria, sailing for Italy, he put us aboard her.

7 And when for many days we had sailed slowly, and were scarce come over against Gnidus, the wind not permitting us, we sailed near Crete, by Salmone :

8 And with much difficulty sailing by it, we came to a certain place which is called Good-havens, near to which was the city of Thalassa.

9 And when much time was spent, and when sailing now was dangerous, because the fast was now past, Paul comforted them,

10 Saying to them : Ye men, I see that the voyage begins to be with danger and much damage, not only of the lading and ship, but also of our lives.

11 But the centurion believed the pilot and the master of the ship more than those things which were said by Paul.

12 And whereas it was not a commodious haven to winter in, the greatest part gave counsel to sail thence, if by any means they might reach Phenice, to winter there ; which is a haven of Crete, looking towards the south-west and north-west.

13 And the south wind blowing gently, thinking that they had obtained their purpose, when they had loosed from Asson, they sailed close by Crete.

14 But not long after there arose against her a tempestuous wind, called Euroaquilo.

15 And when the ship was carried away, and could not bear against the wind, giving up the ship to the winds, we were driven.

16 And running under a certain island that is called Cauda, we had much work to come by the boat.

17 Which being taken up, they used helps, undergirding the ship, and fearing lest they should fall into the quicksands, they let down the sail-yard, and so were driven.

18 And we being mightily tossed with the tempest, the next day they threw overboard.

19 And the third day they cast out with their own hands the tackling of the ship.

20 And neither sun nor stars appearing for many days, and no small storm threatening, all hopes of our safety were now lost.

21 And after they had fasted a long time, Paul standing in the midst of them, said : You should indeed, O ye men, have hearkened to me, and not have put off from Crete, and to have suffered this harm and loss.

22 And now I exhort you to be of good cheer. For there shall be no loss of any man's life among you, but only of the ship.

23 For an angel of God, whose I am, and whom I serve, stood by me this night, 24 Saying : Fear not, Paul, thou must be brought before Cæsar : and behold God hath given thee all them that sail with thee.

25 Wherefore, sirs, be of good cheer : for I believe God that it shall so be as it hath been told me.

26 But we must come into a certain island.

27 Now after the fourteenth night was come, as we were sailing in the Adria about midnight, the ship-men deemed that they discovered some country.

28 And they sounded, and found twenty fathoms : and going on a little farther, they found fifteen fathoms.

29 Then, fearing lest we should fall upon rough places, they cast four anchors out of the stern, and wished for the day.

30 But as the ship-men sought to fly out of the ship, having let down the boat into the sea, under pretence as though they would have cast anchors out of the fore-ship,

31 Paul said to the centurion and to the soldiers : Unless these stay in the ship, you cannot be saved.

32 Then the soldiers cut off the ropes of the boat, and let her fall off.

33 And when it began to be light, Paul besought them all to take food, saying : This day is the fourteenth day that you have waited, and continued fasting, taking nothing.

34 Wherefore, I pray you, to take some food for your health's sake : for there shall not a hair of the head of any of you perish.

35 And when he had said these things, taking bread, he gave thanks to God in the presence of them all : and when he had broken it, he began to eat.

36 Then were they all of better cheer, and they also took food.

37 And we were in all, in the ship, two hundred and seventy-six souls.

38 And when they had eaten enough, they lightened the ship, casting out the wheat into the sea.

39 And when it was day, they knew not the land : but they discovered a certain creek with a shore, into which they thought, if they could, to thrust in the ship.

43 But the centurion, willing to save Paul, forbade it to be done: and he commanded them who could swim, to cast themselves first out, and save themselves, and get to land:

Paul, after three months' stay in Malta, continues his voyage, and arrives at Rome. His conference there with the Jews.

AND when we had escaped, then we knew that the island was called Melita. But the barbarians showed us no small courtesy.

2 For having kindled a fire, they refreshed us all, because of the rain falling, and of the cold.

3 And when Paul had gathered together a bundle of sticks, and had laid them on the fire, a viper coming out of the heat, fastened on his hand.

4 And when the barbarians saw the beast hanging on his hand, they said one to another: Undoubtedly this man is a murderer, who, though he hath escaped the sea, yet vengeance suffereth him not to live.

5 And he indeed shaking off the beast into the fire, suffered no harm.

6 But they supposed that he would begin to swell up, and that he would suddenly fall down, and die. And they waiting for it a long time, and seeing that no harm was done to him, changing their minds, they said he was a god.

8 And it happened that the father of Publius lay sick of a fever, and of a bloody flux. To whom Paul entered in: and when he had prayed, and laid his hands on him, he healed him.

9 Which being done, all that had diseases in the island came, and were healed:

10 Who also honoured us with many honours, and when we were to set sail, they laded us with such things as were necessary.

11 *And after three months, we sailed in a ship of Alexandria, that had wintered in the island, whose sign was the Castors.

12 And when we were come to Syracusa, we stayed there three days.

13 From thence coasting, we came to Rhegium: and after one day, the south wind blowing, we came the second day to Puteoli:

14 Where meeting with brethren, we were invited to stay with them seven days: and so we went for Rome.

15 And from thence, when the brethren had heard of us, they came to meet us as far as Appii-forum and the Three taverns: whom when Paul saw, he gave thanks to God, and took courage.

16 And when we were come to Rome, Paul was permitted to dwell by himself, with a soldier to guard him.

17 And after the third day, he called together the chief of the Jews. And when they were assembled, he said to them: Men, brethren, I, having done nothing against the people, or the custom of our fathers, was delivered up a prisoner from Jerusalem into the hands of the Romans:

18 Who when they had examined me, would have let me go, for that there was no cause of death in me:

19 But the Jews opposing it, I was forced to appeal to Cæsar, not that I had any thing to accuse my nation of.

20 For this cause, therefore, I desired to see you, and to speak to you. Because that for the hope of Israel, I am bound with this chain.

residence of, and giving the title to, the military order of Knights, who strenuously resisted the Turks, when they threatened to overrun Christendom. The inhabitants are called Barbarians, not as a term of reproach, for the manner he speaks of their humanity testifies the contrary; but in the classical sense of the word, it was applied by the Greeks and Romans to all who did not speak either of those languages. Their hospitality was rewarded by the light of faith, which they still maintain, although infidels have sometimes for a century had dominion over this island. Tirinus, &c.

VER. 4. Murderer. In this instance we see how unfounded are the judgments of men.—Not to live. The inhabitants of this island, called Barbarians, had a notion of a Deity, and also that murder was against the law of God and nature. Wi.

VER. 16. To dwell by himself, with a soldier to guard him. S. Paul was chained, as it appears by the 20th verse: and it was the custom to fasten one end of the chain by a lock to the prisoner's wrist, and the other end of the chain to the wrist of the soldier, who was to guard him. Wi.—S. Chrysostom attributes this liberty S. Paul enjoyed at Rome of going whither he liked, to their admiration of him. Hom. 54, in Acts.—Others, to the moderation of Afranius Burrus, who was prefect of the Prætorium in the year 51, and who used his authority, as long as he possessed any over Nero's mind, to repress that emperor's bad inclinations, and direct his councils with wisdom. Calmet.

VER. 17. Chief of the Jews. We have seen before, that the emperor Claudius banished all Jews from Rome. It would appear from this verse, that many of the principal Jews returned at his death, which happened five years before S. Paul's arrival. Calmet.

VER. 20. Because that for the hope of Israel. That is, of the Messiah, so long expected and hoped for by the Israelites. Wi.

brethren that came hither, relate or speak any evil of thee.

22 But we desire to hear from thee what thou thinkest : for as concerning this sect, we know that it is every where contradicted.

23 And when they had appointed him a day, there came very many to him to his lodgings ; to whom he expounded, testifying the kingdom of God, and persuading them concerning Jesus, out of the law of Moses and the prophets, from morning till evening.

24 And some believed the things that were said : and some believed not.

25 And when they agreed not among themselves, they departed, Paul saying this one word : Well did the Holy Ghost speak to our fathers by Isaias, the prophet,

26 "Saying. Go to this people, and say to them :

• Isa. vi. 9 ; Matt. xiii. 14 ; Mark iv. 12 ; Luke viii. 10 ; John xii. 40 ; Rom. xi. 8.

VER. 22. It is every where contradicted. Here we observe one of the characters of the true religion. It is contradicted and spoken against. As singular as this may appear, it is however true. Jesus, the author of that religion, had foretold it should be so. If the world hateth me, it will hate you also. The situation of the Catholic religion in this country, at present, is something similar to what is related here of Christianity ; and those who have the candour to inquire seriously into its merits, have generally the reward of being convinced, and of believing in it. A.

VER. 30. Two whole years in his own hired lodging. That is, in the lodgings which S. Paul was permitted to hire for himself, and to live there, with a soldier

With the ear you shall hear, and shall not understand : and seeing, you shall see, and shall not perceive.

27 For the heart of this people is grown gross, and with their ears have they heard heavily, and their eyes they have shut : lest perhaps they should see with their eyes, and hear with their ears, and understand with their heart, and should be converted, and I should heal them.

28 Be it known, therefore, to you, that this salvation of God is sent to the Gentiles, and they will hear it.

29 And when he had said these words, the Jews went out from him, having a great debate among themselves.

30 And he remained two whole years^b in his own hired lodging : and he received all that came in to him, chained to him for his guard. Happy soldier, if he knew how to make use of such a favourable opportunity ! Wi.

VER. 31. Here terminates the history of S. Paul, as contained in the Acts of the Apostles. The other actions of this great apostle, for want of being recorded, are involved in much obscurity. That he obtained his liberty again, and made many voyages to carry the light of the gospel into many countries, is certain ; but nothing is known as to the manner or time. He finished his labours by martyrdom, being beheaded at Rome in the 66th of the Christian era, and the 13th of Nero.

THE EPISTLE OF S. PAUL, THE APOSTLE, TO THE ROMANS.

After the Gospels, which contain the history of Christ, and the Acts of the Apostles, which contain the history of the infant Church, we have the Epistles of the Apostles. Of these, fourteen were penned on particular occasions, and addressed to particular persons, by S. Paul : the others, of S. James, S. Peter, S. John, and S. Jude, are called Catholic Epistles, because they are addressed to all Christians in general, if we except the two latter short Epistles of S. John.—The Epistles of S. Paul contain admirable advice, and explain fully several tenets of Christianity : but an humble and teachable mind and heart are essentially requisite to draw good from this inexhaustible source. If we prepare our minds by prayer, and go to these sacred oracles with proper dispositions, as to Jesus Christ himself, not preferring our own weak judgment to that of the Catholic Church divinely inspired, and which he has commanded us to hear, and which he has promised to lead into all truth unto the end of the world, we shall improve both our mind and heart by a frequent and pious perusal. We shall learn there that faith is essentially necessary to please God ; that this faith is but one, as God is but one ; and that faith which shows itself not by good works, is dead. Hence, when S. Paul speaks of works that are incapable of justifying us, he speaks not of the works of moral righteousness, but of the ceremonial works of the Mosaic law, on which the Jews laid such great stress as necessary to salvation.—S. Peter (in his Second Ep. chap. iii.) assures us that there were some in his time, as there are found some now in our days, who misconstrue S. Paul's Epistles, as if he required no good works any more after baptism than before baptism, and maintaining that faith alone would justify and save a man. Hence the other apostles wrote their Epistles, as S. Austin remarks in these words : "therefore because this opinion, that faith only was necessary to salvation, was started, the other apostolical Epistles do most pointedly refute it forcibly contending that faith without works profiteth nothing." Indeed S. Paul himself, in his First Epistle to the Corinthians, (chap. xiii. 2,) positively asserts : if I should have all faith, so that I could remove mountains, and have not charity, I am nothing. This Epistle, like most of the following, is divided into two parts : the first treats of points of doctrine, and extends to the eleventh chapter inclusively ; the second treats of morality, and is contained in the last five chapters : but to be able to understand the former, and to practise the latter, humble prayer and a firm adherence to the Catholic Church, which S. Paul (1 Tim. iii.) styles the pillar and ground of truth, are undoubtedly necessary. Nor should we ever forget what S. Peter affirms, that in S. Paul's Epistles there are some things hard to be understood, which the unlearned and the unstable wrest, as they do also the other Scriptures, to their own destruction. S. Peter, 2 Ep. iii. 16. A.—S. Paul had not been at Rome when he wrote to them this Epistle, which was in the year 57, or 58, when he was preparing to go to Jerusalem with the charitable contributions and alms, collected in Achaia and Macedonia, for the benefit and relief of the poor Christians in Judea, and at Jerusalem ; and after that he had preached in almost all places from Jerusalem even to Illyris, Illyrium, or Illyricum. See this Ep. chap. xv. It was written in Greek. It is not the first Epistle in order of time, though placed first, either because of the dignity of the chief Christian Church, or of the sublime contents.—The apostle's chief design was, not only to unite all the new Christian converts, whether they had been Gentiles or Jews, in the same faith, but also to bring them to an union in charity, love, and peace ; to put an end to those disputes and contentions among them, which were particularly occasioned by those zealous Jewish converts, who were for obliging all Christians to the observance of the Mosaic precepts and ceremonies. They who had been Jews, boasted that they were the elect people of God, preferred before all other nations, to whom he had given his written law, precepts, and ceremonies by Moses, to whom he had sent his prophets, and had done so many miracles in their favour, while the Gentiles were left in their ignorance and idolatry. The Gentiles, now converted, were apt to brag of the learning of their great philosophers, and that sciences had flourished among them : they reproached the Jews with the disobedience of their forefathers to God, and the laws he had given them ; that they had frequently returned to idolatry ; that they had persecuted and put to death the prophets, and even their Messiah, the true Son of God. S. Paul shows that neither the Jew nor the Gentile had reason to boast, but to humble themselves under the hand of God, the author of their salvation. He puts the Jews in mind, that they could not expect to be justified and saved merely by the ceremonies and works of their law, though good in themselves ; that the Gentiles, as well as they, were now called by the pure mercy of God : that they were all to be saved by believing in Christ, and complying with his doctrine ; that sanctification and salvation can only be had by the Christian faith. He does not mean by faith only, as it is one particular virtue, different from charity, hope, and other Christian virtues ; but he means by faith, Christian religion, and worship, taken with an opposition to the law of Moses and to the moral virtues of heathens. The design of the Epistle to the Galatians is much the same. From the 12th chapter he exhorts them to the practice of Christian virtues. Wi.

CHAPTER I.

He commends the faith of the Romans, whom he longs to see. The philosophy of the heathens, being void of faith and humility, betrayed them into shameful sins.

PAUL, a servant of Jesus Christ, called to be an apostle, separated unto the gospel of God,

2 Which he had promised before by his prophets in the holy Scriptures,

3 Concerning his Son, who was made to him of the seed of David, according to the flesh,

4 Who was predestinated the Son of God in power, according to the spirit of sanctification, by the resurrection of our Lord Jesus Christ from the dead :

5 By whom we have received grace and apostleship, for obedience to the faith, in all nations for his name,

6 Among whom are you also the called of Jesus Christ :

7 To all that are at Rome, the beloved of God, called to be saints. Grace to you, and peace from God, our Father, and from the Lord Jesus Christ.

8 First, I give thanks to my God, through Jesus Christ, for you all, because your faith is spoken of in the whole world.

9 For God is my witness, whom I serve with my spirit in the gospel of his Son, that, without ceasing, I make a commemoration of you

10 Always in my prayers : beseeching, that by any means I may at length have a prosperous journey, by the will of God, in coming to you.

11 For I long to see you, that I may impart unto you some spiritual grace, to strengthen you :

12 That is to say, that I may be comforted together in you, by that which is common to us both, your faith and mine.

• Hab. ii. 4 ; Gal. iii. 11 ; Heb. x. 38.

CHAP. I. VER. 1. Called to be an apostle, or a called apostle.* That is, not only having the name of an apostle, but having his call to this high function, and his mission from God.—Separated unto the gospel of God. He means that he was separated from others, and appointed by the Holy Ghost to preach the gospel, as we read Acts xiii. 2, when the Holy Ghost to those of the Church at Antioch said, Separate me Saul and Barnabas, for the work unto which I have taken them. Wi.

VER. 3. Who was made to him of the seed of David, according to the flesh. The sense is, that God promised, that he who was his true and only Son from eternity, should also become his Son, as man ; that the same Son should be man, as well as God, when the Word was made flesh, or when that Divine person should be united to our human nature. Thus the same person, who was his only begotten Son from eternity, being made man, and of the seed of David, by his incarnation, was still his Son, both as God, and also as he was man. Wi.

VER. 4. Who was predestinated† the Son of God. Christ, as man, was predestinated to be the Son of God : and declared to be so (as the apostle here signifies) first, by power, that is, by his working stupendous miracles ; secondly, by the spirit of sanctification ; that is, by his infinite sanctity ; thirdly, by his resurrection, or raising himself from the dead. Ch.

VER. 5. By whom, i. e. by this same Jesus Christ, God and man, we, I and the rest of the apostles, have received this grace and apostleship, this mission and commission from him, of preaching his gospel, and teaching his doctrine. Wi.

VER. 6. Among whom are you also the called of Jesus. That is, you also are a part of those, who by his mercy are called to this faith and belief in him. Wi.

VER. 7. To all that are at Rome . . . called to be saints. That is, who not only are named saints, but who, by such a call from God, are to be sanctified by his grace, and to become holy, or saints. Wi.

VER. 9. God is my witness. I call God to witness. It is an oath. Wi.

VER. 10. That by any means. Lit. if by any means. Wi.

VER. 14. I am a debtor. That is, I am bound to preach the word of God to all. Wi.—By Greeks in this place, are understood the Romans also, and by Barbarians, all other people, who were neither Greeks nor Romans. The Greeks called all Barbarians who did not speak the Greek language, even the Latins themselves. But after the Romans became masters of the world, they were excepted, through policy, from the number of Barbarians, and particularly after they began to cultivate the sciences of the Greeks.

13 And I would not have you ignorant, brethren : that I have often purposed to come to you, (and have been hindered hitherto,) that I might have some fruit among you also, even as among other nations.

14 To the Greeks, and to the Barbarians, to the wise, and to the unwise, I am a debtor :

15 So (as much as is in me) I am ready to preach the gospel to you also that are at Rome.

16 For I am not ashamed of the gospel. For it is the power of God unto salvation, to every one that believeth, to the Jew first, and to the Greek.

17 For the justice of God is revealed therein from faith to faith : as it is written : "The just man liveth by faith.

18 For the wrath of God is revealed from heaven, against all impiety and injustice of those men that detain the truth of God in injustice.

19 Because that which is known of God is manifest in them. . For God hath manifested it to them.

20 For the invisible things of him, from the creation of the world, are clearly seen, being understood by the things that are made : his eternal power also and divinity : so that they are inexcusable.

21 "Because that, when they had known God, they have not glorified him as God, nor gave thanks : but became vain in their thoughts, and their foolish heart was darkened :

22 For professing themselves to be wise, they became fools.

23 "And they changed the glory of the incorruptible God, into the likeness of the image of a corruptible man, and of birds, and of four-footed beasts, and of creeping things.

• Ephes. iv. 17.—Psal. cv. 20 ; Jer. xl. 10.

VER. 16. For it is the power of God unto salvation, to every one ; that is, it brings powerful helps to all, both Gentiles and Jews, in order to their salvation.—To the Jew first, inasmuch as the gospel is to be first preached to the Jews. Wi.—The promises of salvation were first made to the Jews. Jesus Christ preached to the Jews only, and forbade his disciples, during his life-time, to preach to any other nation. And after his resurrection, when they had full powers to preach every where, they did not turn to the Gentiles, till the Jews had refused to hear them. A miracle was necessary to determine S. Peter to communicate the gospel to the uncircumcised ; and S. Paul, in every place, first addressed himself to the Jew, and then to the Gentile. The apostle here sweetly endeavours, in an indirect manner, to silence the presumption of the Romans, who seemed to raise themselves above the Jews, and believed they had merited the grace of vocation to the faith. Calmet.

VER. 17. For the justice of God. He does not here mean that justice, by which God is just in himself, but that justice, or sanctification, which he communicates to men, and by which they are justified and sanctified.—From faith to faith. That is, by faith, and an increase in faith, inasmuch as, by increasing in faith, we advance in virtues ; as it is written, (Hab. ii. 4,) the just man liveth by faith ; including the love of God, hope, and other virtues. Wi.

VER. 18. For the wrath of God is revealed, &c. He begins to speak of the heathens, and of the wicked world, whose sins God punisheth from time to time with visible chastisements of plagues, famines, wars, &c., and that because they detain the truth of God in injustice, or in iniquity, that is, because they have not honoured God, even according to the knowledge which he has given them of him, especially their philosophers. Wi.

VER. 19, 20. That which is known of God, or may be easily known of God, is manifest in them. The light of reason demonstrates to them the existence of one God, the maker and preserver of all things. This is made known to them from the creation of the world, or from the creatures in the world : the Creator may be discovered by the creatures, and, as S. Chrys. here says, every Scythian, every Barbarian, may come to the knowledge of God by the wonderful harmony † of all things, which proclaims the existence of God louder than any trumpet : but having known him, they did not glorify him ; they acted contrary to their knowledge, abandoning themselves to idolatry, and the vain worship of many gods, and to all manner of vices and abominations against the light of reason. Wi.

24 Wherefore God gave them up to the desires of their heart, *to uncleanness: to dishonour their own bodies among themselves.

25 Who changed the truth of God into a lie: and worshipped and served the creature rather than the Creator, who is blessed for ever. Amen.

26 For this cause God delivered them up to shameful affections. For their women have changed the natural use into that use which is against nature.

27 And in like manner the men also, leaving the natural use of the woman, have burned in their lusts one towards another, men with men doing that which is filthy, and receiving in themselves the recompense which was due to their error.

28 And as they liked not to have God in their knowledge; God delivered them up to a reprobate sense, to do those things which are not convenient,

29 Being filled with all iniquity, malice, fornications, covetousness, wickedness, full of envy, murder, contention, deceit, malignity, whisperers,

30 Detractors, hateful to God, contumelious, proud, haughty, inventors of evil things, disobedient to parents, 31 Foolish, dissolute, without affection, without fidelity, without mercy.

32 Who, having known the justice of God, did not understand that they, who do such things, are worthy of death: and not only they who do them, but they also who consent to them that do them.

CHAP. II.

The Jews are censured, who make their boast of the law, and keep it not. He declares who are the true Jews.

WHEREFORE thou art inexcusable, O man, whosoever thou art that judgest.^b For wherein thou judgest another, thou condemnest thyself: for thou dost the same things which thou judgest.

2 For we know that the judgment of God is, according to truth, against them that do such things.

3 And thinkest thou this, O man, that judgest them who do such things, and dost the same, that thou shalt escape the judgment of God?

VER. 1. Wherefore thou art inexcusable, &c. He seems to give a general admonition to every one, both Jews and Gentiles, not to blame, judge, or condemn others, when perhaps he, or those of his religion, may be guilty of the like sins. Let him rather call to mind the just judgment of God, which, they that are sinners, cannot escape. Let him also reflect, that if God hath hitherto de-

5 But according to thy hardness, and impenitent heart, thou treasurest up to thyself wrath, against the day of wrath, and revelation of the just judgment of God,

6 *Who will render to every man according to his works:

7 To them indeed, who, according to patience in good work, seek glory, and honour, and incorruption, life everlasting:

8 But to them who are contentious, and who obey not the truth, but give credit to iniquity, wrath and indignation.

9 Tribulation and anguish upon every soul of man that doeth evil, of the Jew first, and also of the Greek.

10 But glory, and honour, and peace, to every one that worketh good, to the Jew first, and also to the Greek.

11 *For there is no respect of persons with God.

12 For whosoever have sinned without the law, shall perish without the law: and whosoever have sinned under the law, shall be judged by the law.

13 *For not the hearers of the law are just before God, but the doers of the law shall be justified.

14 For when the Gentiles, who have not the law, do by nature those things that are of the law, these having not the law, are a law to themselves:

15 Who show the work of the law written in their hearts, their conscience bearing witness to them, and their thoughts within themselves accusing them, or else defending them,

16 In the day when God shall judge the secrets of men, by Jesus Christ, according to my gospel.

17 *But if thou art called a Jew, and retest in the law, and makest thy boast of God,

18 And knowest his will, ^band approvest the things that are more profitable, being instructed by the law, ferred to punish him, it hath been through the riches and abundance of his goodness, patience, and long-forbearance, or longanimity: that he must take care not to harden his heart any longer, lest he heap up to himself a fatal treasure at the day of judgment, when God will render to every one according to his works, and not according to his faith only, says S. Chrys., Hom. 5. Wi.

VER. 5. The apostle is evidently speaking to the converted Jews, and not to the Gentiles. For the Gentiles believed in certain judges in hell, who passed sentence on every one as soon as he departed out of life. But besides a particular judgment at the hour of death, the Hebrews believed in a general judgment of all men, or at least of all the just, in the valley of Jehosaphat; as may be seen in the prophets, and in the Books of Wisdom and Machabees. Calmet.

VER. 12. Whosoever have sinned without the law. That is, without the written law of Moses, against their reason and conscience, &c. And also those who, being Jews, have sinned under this written law, shall be judged, even with greater severity, for having transgressed against the known law. Wi.

VER. 14, 15. When the Gentiles . . . do by nature, or naturally, that is, without having received any written law, these men are a law to themselves, and have it written in their hearts, as to the existence of a God, and their reason tells them, that many sins are unlawful: they may also do some actions that are morally good, as by giving alms to relieve the poor, honouring their parents, &c.; not that these actions, morally good, will suffice to their justification of themselves, or make them deserve a supernatural reward in the kingdom of heaven; but God, out of his infinite mercy, will give them some supernatural graces, by which they come to know and believe, that he will reward their souls for eternity. Such, says S. Chrys., were the dispositions of Melchisedech, Job, Cornelius the Centurion, &c. Wi.

21 Thou, therefore, that teachest another, teachest not thyself: thou that preachest that men should not steal, stealest:

22 Thou that sayest, men should not commit adultery, committest adultery: thou that abhorrest idols, committest sacrilege:

23 Thou that makest thy boast of the law, by the transgression of the law dishonourest God.

24 ^a(For the name of God, through you, is blasphemed among the Gentiles, as it is written.)

25 Circumcision profiteth indeed if thou keep the law: but if thou be a transgressor of the law, thy circumcision is made uncircumcision.

26 If then the uncircumcised keep the ordinances of the law: shall not his uncircumcision be reputed for circumcision?

27 ^bAnd shall not that which by nature is uncircumcision, if it fulfil the law, judge thee, who by the letter and circumcision art a transgressor of the law?

28 ^cFor it is not he is a Jew, who is so outwardly: nor is that circumcision which is outwardly in the flesh:

29 But he is a Jew that is one inwardly: and the circumcision is that of the heart, in the spirit, and in the letter: whose praise is not of men, but of God.

CHAP. III.

VER. 22. Idols, &c. The Jews, at the time of our Saviour, were free from idolatry, to which their ancestors had been so prone for so long a time. But to this evil had succeeded another, scarcely less heinous, viz. sacrilege, and a profanation of holy things. The greater part of the high priests bought their office. The priests permitted in the temple itself a kind of traffic, which caused our Saviour to declare to them, that they had made the house of his Father a den of thieves. And to favour their own avarice, they taught that it was lawful to defraud their creditors, and refuse to their parents the necessary succour, in the case of vows to give to the temple. Calmet.

VER. 24. The apostle here only repeats the reproaches which the prophets had repeated so often before, that the Jews, by the contrast between their lives and the sanctity of their religion, had been the cause of that religion and worship becoming the ridicule and laughing-stock of the Gentile world. Calmet.

VER. 25. Circumcision profiteth indeed, inasmuch as it was ordained by Almighty God, as were also the precepts of the law, which were to be observed before the publishing of the new law of Christ. See Gal. v. 6. But it was never profitable to the transgressors of the law. Nay, the uncircumcised Gentiles, who have complied with those natural precepts, which are also commanded by the law of Moses, shall judge and condemn those, who received the written law, and at the same time were transgressors of it. Wi.

CHAP. III. VER. 1. What advantage then? &c. The apostle, not to offend the Jews, by insisting too long in reprehending them, turns his discourse to the advantages they have hitherto had above other nations. As first, that the words of God, those Divine oracles, revelations, promises in the Scriptures, were credited or intrusted to them. And though some, or many of them have not believed God's promises, especially concerning their Messias; this hath not hindered God from being faithful to his word, in sending the Messias, and those blessings that were promised with him. For God is always true, or faithful in his promises, and therefore must needs be justified, or found just, when his proceedings are judged, that is, considered and examined. Wi.

VER. 4. God only is essentially true. All men in their own capacity, are liable to lies and errors: nevertheless God, who is the truth, will make good his promise of keeping his Church in all truth. See S. John xvi. 13. Ch.—That thou mayest be justified, &c. The particle that, is not causal in this place, but only marks the event. Thy conduct shows that thou art faithful and true to thy promises, and that, notwithstanding the judgments of men, thou art always unchangeable and infallible. Thou art victorious, when judged by them; thou showest them the falsity and injustice of their judgments. Calmet.

their unbelief make the faith of God without effect? God forbid.

4 ^eBut God is true: and every man a liar, as it is written: ^fthat thou mayest be justified in thy words, and mayest overcome when thou art judged.

5 But if our injustice commend the justice of God, what shall we say? Is God unjust, who executeth wrath?

6 (I speak according to man). God forbid: otherwise how shall God judge this world?

7 For if the truth of God hath more abounded through my lie, unto his glory: why am I also yet judged as a sinner?

8 And not rather (as we are slandered, and as some affirm that we say) let us do evil, that there may come good: whose damnation is just.

9 What then? Do we excel them? By no means. ^gFor we have charged both Jews, and Greeks, that they are all under sin:

10 As it is written: ^hThere is not any man just:

11 There is none that understandeth, there is none that seeketh after God.

12 All have turned out of the way, they are become unprofitable together: there is none that doth good, there is not so much as one.

13 ⁱTheir throat is an open sepulchre, with their tongues they have dealt deceitfully: ^jThe venom of asps is under their lips:

14 ^kWhose mouth is full of cursing and bitterness:

15 ^lTheir feet are swift to shed blood:

16 Destruction and misery are in their ways:

17 And the way of peace they have not known:

18 ^mThere is no fear of God before their eyes.

VER. 5, 6. But if our injustice, &c. S. Paul here puts this objection, that if men's sins and iniquities make the justice of God commendable, that is, make his justice more apparent and known; if the truth of God, as to his promises, be more discovered, praised, and glorified by our lies, that is, by our sins, how then can God blame, or punish men for sins, which contribute more to his honour? May we not say, (as some falsely pretended S. Paul said,) let us do evil things, that good things may come of them? The apostle answers in short both this objection, and the calumny against him. As to the first; that though men's sins give an occasion to God to show his justice, and make known his Divine perfections, yet this will not excuse them from being justly condemned, and punished, when God shall judge the wicked world: for if that were a sufficient plea, God could not judge and condemn the wicked: so that, as S. Chrys. ⁿobserves, the apostle resolves their question, by asking another, and shows their reasoning absurd, by taking notice of another absurdity that follows from it. Secondly, he tells them, they slander him, and his doctrine, by only telling them, they deserve to be condemned who say, let us do evil that good may come of it: the damnation, says he, of such men is just. Wi.

VER. 10. There is not any man just, viz. by virtue either of the law of nature, or of the law of Moses; but only by faith and grace. Ch.—These crimes, enumerated by the apostle, are not mentioned as if found in each individual, but some of this black catalogue of crimes were found in one man, some in another; yet so that all had become infected with sin and iniquity, all had deserted the path of virtue. There was none just, none was found who feared or sought after God. Estius.—These texts of Scripture, though formerly, even before the times of S. Jerom and S. Augustin, they were found together in some Latin editions, viz. Psal. xlii., cannot be found united either in the Hebrew text, or Sept. version, as S. Jerom affirms, in Præf. lib. 16, Commentar. in Isa. This, he says, all the Greek commentators allow. He says, that those who were ignorant of this apostle's art in uniting together the texts of different parts of Scripture, upon finding no part where they were all together, placed them, without any authority, in that psalm whence the first part of the citation is taken. The words, an open sepulchre, are taken from Psal. xlii., (Heb. text xiv.), the verse, "Their throat is an open sepulchre, with their tongues they have dealt deceitfully," from Psal. v., "The venom of asps is under their lips," from Psal. cxxxix., "Whose mouth is full of curses and bitterness," from Psal. ix., "Their feet are swift," &c., as far as there is no fear, from Isa. lix., "There is not the fear of God before their eyes," from Psal. xxxv. Estius.

VER. 17. S. Augustin says, that by the law of actions, is understood, that 19 *Now we know that what things soever the law speaketh, it speaketh to them that are in the law: that every mouth may be stopped, and all the world may be made subject to God:

20 Because by the works of the law no flesh shall be justified in his sight. For by the law is the knowledge of sin.

21 But now without the law the justice of God is made manifest: being witnessed by the law and the prophets.

22 Even the justice of God, by faith of Jesus Christ, unto all and upon all them that believe in him: for there is no distinction:

23 For all have sinned, and do need the glory of God.

24 Being justified gratis by his grace, through the redemption that is in Christ Jesus,

25 Whom God hath set forth to be a propitiation through faith in his blood, to the showing of his justice, for the remission of past sins,

26 Through the forbearance of God, for the showing of his justice in this time: that he himself may be just, and the justifier of him who is of the faith of Jesus Christ.

27 Where is then thy boasting? It is excluded. By what law? Of works? No: but by the law of faith.

28 For we account a man to be justified by faith without the works of the law.

* Gal. ii. 16.

which teaches us what we have to do: by the law of faith, is meant faith itself, which obtains for us grace of performing what the law requires. The law of actions, then, is the old law, which contains the precept; the law of faith is the new law, which gives assistance to fulfil the law. De Spir. et Lit. c. 4.

VER. 19. And all the world may be made subject to God. That is, God permitted these sins in all men, that sanctification and salvation might be from Christ only, the Redeemer of all men, so that neither Jew nor Gentile should be justified, but by the free and liberal gift of his grace. See S. Chrys.† Wi.

VER. 20, &c. To the end of this chapter, the apostle shows, that the Jews cannot be truly justified, and sanctified by the works of the written law of Moses only; that a knowledge of sin, or of what was sinful, came by the law, but if they did not comply with the precepts of the law, this knowledge made them more guilty. Now, at the coming of Christ, the justice of God, that is, the justice by which he made others just, and justified them, cannot be had without a faith in Christ, and by the grace of our Redeemer Jesus Christ, whom God hath proposed to all, both Gentiles and Jews, as a sacrifice of propitiation for the sins of all mankind, by faith in his blood; that is, by believing in him, who shed his blood, and died for us on the cross. It is he alone, (ver. 26,) that is the just one, and the justifier of all. S. Paul does not pretend that the virtue of faith alone will justify and save a man; nothing can be more opposite to the doctrine of the gospel, and of the apostles in many places, as hath been observed, and will be shown hereafter. He tells us in this chapter, (ver. 20, and 28,) that man is justified without the works of the written law: and he teaches us, that no works of the law of Moses, nor any works that a man does by the law of nature, are sufficient to justify a man, and save him of themselves, that is, unless they be joined with faith, and the grace of God. And when he seems to say, that men are justified or saved by faith, or by believing, as he says of Abraham in the next chapter, (ver. 3, and 5,) he never says (as some both ancient and later heretics have pretended) that faith alone is sufficient. And besides, by faith he understands the Christian faith and doctrine of Christ, as opposite to the law of Moses, to circumcision, and the ceremonies of that law, as it evidently appears by the design of the apostle, both in this Epistle and in that to the Galatians. He teaches us in this Epistle, (chap. ii. 6,) that God will judge every man according to his works (ver. 13): that "not the hearers of the law," but the doers, shall be justified. See also chap. vi. He tells the Galatians (chap. v. 6) that the faith, by which they must be saved, must be a faith working by charity. He also tells the Corinthians (i. 7, 19) that circumcision is nothing, nor uncircumcision, but the keeping of the commandments of God. That though a man should have a faith, so that he could remove mountains, it would avail him nothing without charity. How often does he tell us, that they who commit such and such sins shall not inherit or possess the kingdom of God! Does not S. James tell us, that faith without good works is dead? See chap. ii. Of this more hereafter. Wi.

VER. 30. God who justifieth circumcision, and also the uncircumcised, by faith; that is, by the faith and religion of the new law, or by a faith working by charity, and joined with good works proceeding of faith. See the Council of Trent, Sess. 6, cap. 8. "When the apostle says, that a man is justified by faith, and, gratis, according to the perpetual consent of the Catholic Church, we are said to be justified by faith, because faith is the beginning and foundation of man's salvation, and the root of his justification, without which we cannot please God, nor be made his sons: and we are said to be justified gratis, because nothing of 29 Is he the God of the Jews only? Is he not also of the Gentiles? Yes, of the Gentiles also.

30 For it is one God who justifieth circumcision by faith; and uncircumcision through faith.

31 Do we then destroy the law through faith? God forbid: but we establish the law.

CHAP. IV.

Abraham was not justified by works done, as of himself: but by grace, and by faith; and that before he was circumcised. Gentiles by faith are his children.

WHAT shall we say, then, that Abraham hath found, who is our father according to the flesh?

2 For if Abraham were justified by works, he hath glory, but not in the sight of God.

3 For what saith the Scripture? Abraham believed God, and it was reputed to him unto justice.

4 Now to him that worketh, the reward is not reckoned according to grace, but according to debt.

5 But to him that worketh not, yet believeth in him that justifieth the impious, his faith is reputed to justice, according to the purpose of the grace of God.

6 As David also termeth the blessedness of a man, to whom God reputeth justice without works:

7 Blessed are they, whose iniquities are forgiven, and whose sins are covered.

those things which go before justification, whether faith or works, are meritorious of the grace of justification." Wi.

‡ V. 25. Quem proposuit Deus propitiationem, ἱλαστήριον. Some read propitiatorium, as I find it cited in the Council of Trent, Sess. 6, cap. 2.

CHAP. IV. VER. 1. The apostle proves what he had advanced in the last chapter, that the Jews cannot be justified by the works of the written law, nor by any works, unless joined with faith in the Messiah, their Redeemer.

VER. 3. For what saith the Scripture? Abraham believed God, and it was reputed to him unto justice. The Scripture, therefore, teacheth us that he became just by his faith. And as he had this faith by the grace of God, grace was the cause of his justification, and not any works without grace. And when it is said, it was reputed to him, we must not understand an imputation of being just without a true and interior justice: for to be reputed just in the sight of God, who sees the heart, and sanctifies the soul by his interior grace, is the only true justice that can make a man acceptable to God. As not to have our sins imputed in the sight of God, is to have them forgiven, and to be free from our sins. Wi.—Reputed, &c. By God, who reputeth nothing otherwise than it is. However, we may gather from this word, that when we are justified, our justification proceedeth from God's free grace and bounty; and not from any efficacy which any act of ours could have of its own nature, abstracting from God's grace. Ch.

VER. 4. Now to him that worketh, &c., a reward may be looked upon as due for his works, and not bestowed upon him as a free gift; but when it is said he believed, and was justified, (this belief or faith is always a liberal gift of God,) and when no mention is made of his works, it appears that such a justification and sanctification are not from the works of the written law, nor from any works he could do of himself, but that they are according to the purpose, or decree of grace. Wi.—Such a man, says the apostle, challenges his reward as a debt, due to his own performances; whereas he who worketh not, that is, who presumeth not upon any works done by his own strength, but seeketh justice through faith and grace, is freely justified by God's grace. Ch.

VER. 7. Blessed are they, whose iniquities are forgiven, and whose sins are covered. That is, blessed are those who, by doing penance, have obtained pardon and remission of their sins, and also are covered; that is, newly clothed with the habit of grace, and vested with the stole of charity. Ch.—When it is said that the sins of man are covered, we must not imagine that they still remain, but, on account of the goodness of God, will not be punished, as the Lutherans contend; for the justice of God could not suffer this: but by it we must understand that they are entirely blotted out, and neither exist, nor are considered any longer by God. Estius.—Moreover, if sins were never blotted out, but only covered, why did the royal prophet pray to the Almighty, saying, Blot out all my iniquities; and in different parts of the 50th and 108th Psalms, speaking of the egregious sinner, he says, Let the sin of his mother not be blotted out; which would mean nothing at all, if sins were never blotted out? A.

8 Blessed is the man, to whom the Lord hath not imputed sin.

9 This blessedness, then, doth it abide in the circumcision only, or in the uncircumcision also? For we say that faith was reputed to Abraham unto justice.

10 How then was it reputed? When he was in circumcision, or in uncircumcision? Not in circumcision, but in uncircumcision.

11 *And he received the sign of circumcision, a seal of the justice of the faith, which is in uncircumcision: that he might be the father of all the believers uncircumcised, that to them also it may be reputed to justice:

12 And might be the father of circumcision, not to them only that are of the circumcision, but to them also who follow the steps of the faith, that our father Abraham had, being as yet uncircumcised.

13 ^bFor not through the law was the promise to Abraham or to his seed, that he should be the heir of the world, but through the justice of faith.

14 For if they who are of the law, be heirs: faith is made void, the promise is made of no effect.

15 For the law worketh wrath. For where there is no law, there is no transgression.

16 Therefore it is of faith, that according to grace the promise might be firm to all the seed; not to that only which is of the law, but to that also which is of the faith of Abraham, who is the father of us all,

17 (As it is written, 'I have made thee a father of many nations,) before God, whom he believed, who quickeneth the dead, and calleth those things that are not, as those that are.

18 Who, against hope, believed in hope, that he might be made the father of many nations, according to that which was said to him: "So shall thy seed be.

19 And he was not weak in faith: neither did he consider his own body now dead, whereas he was almost a hundred years old, nor the dead womb of Sara.

20 In the promise also of God he staggered not by distrust: but was strengthened in faith, giving glory to God:

21 Most fully knowing that whatsoever he has promised, he is able also to perform.

22 And therefore it was reputed to him unto justice.

23 Now it is not written only for him, that it was reputed to him unto justice:

24 But for us also, to whom it shall be reputed, if we believe in him, 'that raised up Jesus Christ, our Lord, from the dead,

25 'Who was delivered up for our sins, and rose again for our justification.

CHAP. V.

The grounds we have for hope in Christ. Sin and death came by Adam: grace and life by Christ.

THEREFORE, being justified by faith, let us have peace with God, through our Lord Jesus Christ:

2 ^aBy whom also we have access through faith into this grace, wherein we stand, and glory in the hope of the glory of the sons of God.

3 And not only so, but we glory also in tribulations: ^bknowing that tribulation worketh patience:

4 And patience trial, and trial hope;

5 'And hope confoundeth not: because the charity of God is poured out into our hearts, by the Holy Ghost, who is given to us.

6 For why did Christ, when as yet we were weak, according to the time, 'die for the ungodly?

VER. 8. Blessed is the man to whom the Lord hath not imputed sin. That is, blessed is the man who hath retained his baptismal innocence, that no grievous sin can be imputed to him. And likewise, blessed is the man who, after falling into sin, hath done penance, and leads a virtuous life by frequenting the sacraments necessary for obtaining the grace to prevent a relapse, that sin is no more imputed to him. Ch.

VER. 10. In effect, Abraham received circumcision a year only before the birth of Isaac; whereas he had received the promises and justification more than twenty-five years before, when the Almighty caused him to depart from Mesopotamia. Calmet.—Therefore he was justified by faith and grace, which is common both to the circumcised and uncircumcised. Menochius.

VER. 12. And might be the father of circumcision. The apostle here tells them that Abraham is the father of all true believers, uncircumcised as well as circumcised, and all that believe in Christ, his seed, in whom God promised to bless all nations, are the spiritual sons of Abraham, and partake of the blessings promised to him and his posterity: nor can the circumcised be his true and spiritual children, unless they follow the footsteps of his faith, by which he was justified, when he believed the promises which God made to him before that circumcision was instituted; to wit, that he and Sara should have a son, when they were naturally past the age of having children, and that in his posterity all the world should be blessed, that is, in Christ. Wi.

VER. 13. Of the world, &c. By the world, some understand the land of Chanaan, which is sometimes meant by the whole earth, particularly in the times of David and Solomon, when they ruled over the neighbouring nations. But others think that the apostle alludes to the passage of Genesis, where the Almighty promises that in his (Abraham's) seed all the nations of the earth should be blessed; which promise extends much beyond the narrow limits of Chanaan. In fine, it may be understood in a spiritual sense, of his dignity of father of all the faithful; which makes him, in a manner, master of the whole world, since his spiritual children, spread through the whole world, have the universe for their inheritance. Calmet.

VER. 14. For if they who are of the law, be heirs: faith is made void, the promise is made of no effect. That is, if the Jews, who are under the law, are the only heirs of the blessings promised, it will follow that the faith which Abraham had before the circumcision, and before the law, was of no value, which I have shown to be false. And, secondly, it will follow that the promise made to him, that in him all nations should be blessed, is also null. Wi.

VER. 15. For the law worketh wrath. The law, abstracting from faith and grace, worketh wrath occasionally, by being an occasion of many transgressions, which provoke God's wrath. Ch.

VER. 16. There are two kinds of children of Abraham, to whom alone these promises are made; the one is according to the flesh, the other according to the spirit. The former of these had no more part in the promises made to him and his seed than the Gentiles, unless they imitated the fidelity and obedience of their father. Calmet.

VER. 18. Who, against hope, believed in hope, or with hope. That is, Abraham, against all probability of human hopes, still hoped in God, says S. Chrys., that he should have a son by Sara: and in this he was not weak in faith. Wi.

VER. 25. The apostle here seems to refer our faith and justification only to the resurrection, not to the exclusion of other mysteries of religion, which are all, and every one of them, the objects of our faith. But the resurrection is, as it were, the seal and consummation of the rest; it eminently includes in itself all the others. Calmet.

• V. 3. Et reputatum est illi ad justitiam, kai ελογίσθη αὐτῷ εἰς δικαιοσύνην. The Greek word is sometimes translated in the Vulgate Latin, by imputare, or accipere ferre.

CHAP. V. VER. 1. The apostle proceeds in this chapter to show how great a benefit it is to be truly justified by the coming of Christ.—Let us have peace towards God.* That is, says S. Chrys., by laying aside all contentions. Or let us have peace with God, by sinning no more. Wi.

VER. 3. We glory in spirit in the afflictions, oppression, and persecution, which we suffer as Christians, esteeming them a great blessing. Thus the apostles went rejoicing from before the council, because they had been thought worthy to suffer disgrace for the name of Jesus. Acts v. Estius.

VER. 5. God having prevented us with his gifts when we did not at all deserve them, having showered upon us the blessings of faith, charity, patience, and fidelity, we cannot but have the greatest confidence that after this pledge and assurance of his good-will towards us, he will finish the work he has begun, and bring us to his heavenly kingdom. Calmet. Menochius.

VER. 6, &c. Why did Christ... die for the ungodly? He shows Christ's great mercy and love for mankind, that he would die for us, who were sinners, and consequently his enemies. How few are there that will lay down their lives for a just man, or for a just cause!—Perhaps for a good man. That is, for another, who 7 For scarce for a just man will one die: yet perhaps for a good man some one would venture to die.

8 But God commendeth his charity towards us; because when as yet we were sinners, according to the time,

9 Christ died for us: much more, therefore, being now justified by his blood, shall we be saved from wrath through him.

10 For if, when we were enemies, we were reconciled to God by the death of his Son: much more being reconciled, shall we be saved by his life.

11 And not only so: but also we glory in God, through our Lord Jesus Christ, by whom we have now received reconciliation.

12 Wherefore, as by one man sin entered into this world, and by sin death, and so death passed upon all men, in whom all have sinned.

13 For until the law, sin was in the world: but sin was not imputed, when the law was not.

14 But death reigned from Adam unto Moses, even over them that had not sinned after the similitude of the transgression of Adam, who is a figure of him that was to come.

15 But not as the offence, so also is the gift: for if by the offence of one, many have died: much more the grace of God, and the gift in the grace of one man, Jesus Christ, hath abounded unto many.

16 And not as it was by one sin, so also is the gift: for the judgment indeed was by one unto condemnation: but the grace is of many offences, unto justification.

17 For if by one man's offence, death reigned through

• Phil. xl. 8, and 9.—b 2 Pet. ii. 22.—c Gal. iii. 27; Col. ii. 12.

has been good to him, his friend or benefactor, we may find one that will expose or lay down his life. But Christ, in due time, appointed by the Divine decree, died for sinners, for us all. And if we have been reconciled to God, and justified by his death; now being made the children of God, and his friends, we may with greater confidence hope to be saved. Wi.

VER. 12. As by one man . . . in whom all have sinned. That is, in which man all sinned, (not in which death all sinned,) as it must be the construction by the Greek text: so that these words are a clear proof of original sin against the Pelagian heretics, as S. Aug. often brings them. Nor does S. Chrys. deny original sin, though in this place he expounds it that all by Adam's sin were made guilty of death and punishments. But how could they deserve these, had they not sinned in Adam? Wi.

VER. 13, 14. Until the law, sin was in the world. That is, from Adam's fall, both original sin and actual sins truly infected all mankind. Wi.—Not imputed. That is, men knew not, or made no account of sin; neither was it imputed to them, in the manner it was afterwards, when they transgressed the known written law of God. Ch.—All were conceived and born in sin, in what we call original sin, and liable to death, even infants, who were not come to the use of reason, and consequently could not sin after the similitude of the transgression of Adam, or by imitating his sin, but were born in sin: and besides this, all manner of actual sins, which men committed by their own perverse will, reigned every where in the world. But before the law these sins were not imputed, that is, were not declared sins, that deserved such punishments as were ordained by the law.

VER. 15, &c. But not as the offence, so also is the gift, or the benefits which mankind received by their Redeemer, Jesus Christ. For S. Paul here shows that the graces which Christ came to bestow upon men, and offers to all, are much greater than the evils which the sin of one man, Adam, caused. 1. Because, if by the offence of that one man, Adam, many, i. e. all died by original sin that descended from Adam, (the blessed Virgin nother by a special privilege being always to be excepted,) much more the grace of one man, Jesus Christ, hath abounded unto many; the comparison does not imply that more in number receive the grace of Christ, than the number of those that were infected with sin; but that they who receive the graces, which are offered to all, receive greater benefits than were the damages caused by the sin of Adam. 2. Because by it, that is, by the offence of one man, death reigned in the world, and made all men liable to damnation; yet now by the incarnation of Christ, (which would not have been, had not Adam sinned,) all they who are justified by the grace of their Redeemer, have Christ God and man for their head: he is become the head of that same mystical body which is his Church: they are exalted to the dignity of being the brothers of Christ, the Son of God: they are made joint-heirs with him of the kingdom of heaven, and so by the grace of Christ have a greater dignity in this world, and one: much more they who receive abundance of grace, and of the gift, and of justice, shall reign in life, through one, Jesus Christ.

18 Therefore, as by the offence of one, unto all men to condemnation: so also by the justice of one, unto all men unto justification of life.

19 *For as by the disobedience of one man, many were made sinners: so also by the obedience of one, many shall be made just.

20 Now the law entered in, that sin might abound. But where sin abounded, grace hath abounded more.

21 That as sin hath reigned unto death, so also grace might reign by justice, unto everlasting life, through Jesus Christ our Lord.

CHAP. VI.

The Christian must die to sin, and live to God.

WHAT shall we say then? shall we continue in sin, that grace may abound?

2 God forbid. For how shall we that are dead to sin, live any longer therein?

3 Know you not all that we, who are baptized in Christ Jesus, are baptized in his death?

4 *For we are buried together with him by baptism unto death: that as Christ is risen from the dead by the glory of the Father,^a so we also may walk in newness of life.

5 For if we have been planted together in the likeness of his death, in like manner we shall be of his resurrection.

6 Knowing this, that our old man is crucified with him, that the body of sin may be destroyed, and that we may serve sin no longer.

shall be exalted to a greater and more eminent degree of glory in the kingdom of his glory, for all eternity; which hath given occasion to the Church, in her liturgy, to cry out, as it were with a transport of joy, O happy fault, which hath procured us such and so great a Redeemer! See S. Chrys. § hom. 10. Wi.

VER. 20, 21. Now the law entered in, that sin might abound. Not as if the law were given on purpose for sin to abound; but that it so happened through man's perversity, taking occasion of sinning more, from the prohibition of sin. Ch.—Where sin abounded. Grace abounded in the elect; for the apostle does not say that grace abounded in every place where iniquity had abounded; but he says indefinitely where, that is, in many places where sin abounded, grace has abounded also. Estius.

* V. 1. Pacem habeamus. In the common Greek copies we read ἔχομεν, habemus. But in other MSS. ἔχωμεν, as S. Chrys. must have read by his commentary. μηκέτι ἀμαρτάνωμεν, &c.

† V. 12. In quo omnes peccaverunt, ἐφ' ᾧ πάντες ἡμαρτον. If it agreed with sin, in the Greek it must have been ἐφ' ἧς.

‡ V. 15. Abundavit in plures; Greek, εἰς τοὺς πολλοὺς, in multos; so that it is not to be taken comparatively for more, but absolutely for many, or for all; because all here are many, as in other places.

§ V. 19. See S. Chrys. hom. 10, p. 73, ed. Savil. εἰς ὑποβολὴν ἡχθήμεν . . . καὶ ἐγενόμεθα ἀδελφοὶ τοῦ μονογενοῦς, &c.

CHAP. VI. VER. 1. Shall we continue in sin, that grace may abound? He puts and rejects the same objection as before. Chap. iii. 7. Wi.

VER. 2. Dead to sin, &c. We are then dead to sin, when neither we live in sin by serving it, nor sin lives in us by reigning: in this case, how can we still live in it by yielding to its desires? S. Aug. (c. 6, de Spiritu et Litera) thus explains this passage: when grace has caused us to die to sin; if we live again in it, we must be exceedingly ungrateful to grace. Estius.

VER. 3, &c. We . . . are baptized in his death. Greek, unto his death. The apostle here alludes to the manner of administering the sacrament of baptism: which was then done by immersion, or plunging the person baptized under the water, in which he finds a resemblance of Christ's death and burial under ground, and of his resurrection to an immortal life. So must we, after baptism, rise to lead a quite different life: having been also, when we were baptized and made Christians, planted, as branches ingrafted in Christ, let us endeavour to bring forth the fruits of a virtuous life. Wi.—Old man . . . body of sin. Our corrupt state, subject to sin and concupiscence, coming to us from Adam, is called our old man, as our state, reformed in and by Christ, is called the new man. And the vices and sins, which then ruled in us, are named the body of sin. Ch.

7 For he that is dead, is justified from sin.

8 Now if we be dead with Christ, we believe that we shall live also together with Christ :

9 Knowing that Christ rising again from the dead, dieth now no more, death shall no more have dominion over him.

10 For in that he died to sin, he died once : but in that he liveth, he liveth unto God.

11 So do you also reckon yourselves to be dead indeed to sin, but alive to God in Christ Jesus, our Lord.

12 Let not sin, therefore, reign in your mortal body, so as to obey the lusts thereof.

13 *Neither yield ye your members as instruments of iniquity unto sin : but present yourselves to God as those that are alive from the dead : and your members as instruments of justice unto God.

14 For sin shall not have dominion over you : for you are not under the law, but under grace.

15 What then ? Shall we sin, because we are not under the law, but under grace ? God forbid.

16 ^bKnow you not, that to whom you yield yourselves servants to obey, his servants you are whom you obey, whether it be of sin, unto death, or of obedience, unto justice.

17 But thanks be to God, that you were the servants of sin, but have obeyed from the heart, unto that form of doctrine, into which you have been delivered.

18 Being then made free from sin, you are become the servants of justice.

19 I speak a human thing, because of the infirmity of your flesh : for as you have yielded your members to serve uncleanness, and iniquity unto iniquity : so now yield your members to serve justice, unto sanctification.

20 For when you were the servants of sin, you were free from justice.

* Col. iii. 5.—^b John viii. 34 ; 2 Pet. ii. 19.

VER. 7. *He that is dead, is justified from sin. Some translate, is freed from sin : this is true ; but perhaps it is better to retain the word justified, which is observed to be a law-word used in courts of justice, where to be justified, is to be acquitted, so that a man cannot be questioned again on that account ; and so are sinners, when their sins are forgiven. Wi.

VER. 10. For in that he died to sin. But the sense must be, for sins, or to destroy other men's sins, he himself being incapable of sinning. Wi.

VER. 12. Let not sin, therefore, reign, &c. He compares sin and justice to two kings, or generals, under one of which every man fights in this world. Sin is the tyrant, under which fight the wicked, and make their minds and their members the instruments, or arms of iniquity to sin, when they follow and yield to their disorderly lusts. But he exhorts them to live so as to make the powers of their souls, and their members, instruments or arms of justice to God, to fight under God, their lawful King, and under the banner of his justice. Wi.

VER. 14. You are not under the law of Moses, as some of you were before : but now you are all under grace, or of the law of grace, where you may find pardon for your sins. But take care not to abuse this grace of pardon offered you, nor to multiply your sins, and defer your conversion, as some may do, by presuming, that after all, by the merits of Christ, you can find pardon. This, says Tertullian, is the greatest ingratitude, to continue wicked, because God is good. Wi.

VER. 17. Thanks be to God, &c. He thanks God, not because they had been in sin, but because after having been so long under the slavery of sin, they had now been converted from their heart, and with their whole strength gave themselves to that form of doctrine to which they had been conducted by the gospel. He returns God thanks for their obedience to the faith, because this obedience of the human will is the work and gift of God, that so no one may glory in his sight. Eph. ii. Estius.

VER. 19. I speak a human thing,† or I am proposing to you what is according to human strength and ability assisted by the grace of God, with a due regard to the weakness and infirmity of your flesh. The sense, according to S. Chrys., is this, that the apostle having told them they must be dead to sin, lead a new life, &c., he now encourages them to it, by telling them, that what is required of them is not above their human strength, as it is assisted by those graces which God offers them, and which they have received. Wi.

21 What fruit, therefore, had you then in those things, of which you are now ashamed ? For the end of them is death.

22 But now being made free from sin, and become servants to God, you have your fruit unto sanctification and the end everlasting life.

23 For the wages of sin is death. But the grace of God, everlasting life, in Christ Jesus, our Lord.

CHAP. VII.

We are released by Christ from the law, and from the yoke of sin : though the inclination to it still tempt us.

KNOW you not, brethren, (for I speak to them that know the law,) how the law hath dominion over a man as long as it liveth ?

2 *For the woman that hath a husband, whilst her husband liveth, is bound to the law : but if her husband be dead, she is loosed from the law of her husband.

3 Wherefore, whilst her husband liveth, she shall be called an adulteress, if she be with another man : but if her husband be dead, she is free from the law of her husband : so that she is not an adulteress, if she be with another man.

4 Therefore, my brethren, you also are become dead to the law, by the body of Christ : that you may belong to another, who is risen again from the dead, that we may bring forth fruit to God.

5 For when we were in the flesh, the passions of sins, which were by the law, did work in our members, to bring forth fruit unto death.

6 But now we are loosed from the law of death, wherein we were detained, so that we should serve in newness of spirit, and not in the oldness of the letter.

7 What shall we say then ? Is the law sin ? God forbid. But I did not know sin, but by the law : for I had

* 1 Cor. vii. 39.

VER. 20—22. You were free from justice ; that is, says S. Chrys., you lived as no ways subject to justice, nor obedient to the law and precepts of God : as unhappy freedom, a miserable liberty, worse than the greatest slavery, the end of which is death, eternal death. Wi.

VER. 23. For the wages, which the tyrant sin gives to his soldiers and slaves, is eternal death ; but the wages, the pay, the reward, which God gives to those that fight under him, is everlasting life ; which, though a reward of our past labours, as it is often called in the Scriptures, is still a grace,† or free gift ; because if our works are good, or deserve a reward in heaven, it is God's grace that makes them deserve it. For, as S. Aug. says, when God crowns our works, he crowns his own gifts. Wi.

* V. 7. Is justified from sin, justificatus est a peccato ; δικαιώσται ἀπὸ τῆς ἀμαρτίας. Δικαίω est vocabulum forense. See Corr. à Lapide, Estius, &c.

† V. 19. Humanum dico, ἀνθρώπινον λέγω. Chap. iii. 6. Secundum hominem, κατ' ἀνθρώπον. See S. Chrys. Hom. 12.

‡ V. 23. Gratia Dei, vita æterna ; that is, in construction, vita æterna, est gratia Dei.

CHAP. VII. VER. 1. As long as it liveth ; or, as long as he liveth. Ch.—This seems the literal construction, rather than as long as he, the man, liveth. For S. Paul here compares the law (which in the Greek is in the masculine gender) to a husband, whom a wife cannot quit, nor be married to another as long as the husband liveth, without being an adulteress : but if the husband be dead, (as the law of Moses is now dead, and no longer obligatory after the publishing of the new law of Christ,) the people that were Jews, and under the Jewish law, are now free from that former husband, to wit, the written law of Moses. Wi.

VER. 5. For when we were in the flesh ; i. e. lived according to the flesh, the passions of sins, which were by the law : he does not say, as S. Chrys. observes, that they were caused by the law, but only were by it, meaning that they were occasioned by the knowledge of the law, but properly caused by ourselves, and our corrupt inclinations, that were wrought in our members, rather than did work. Wi.

VER. 7. Is the law (of Moses) sin ? God forbid. The apostle declares, that the law of itself was far from being sinful ; on the contrary, that it was good.

not known concupiscence, if the law had not said : *Thou shalt not covet.

8 But sin, taking occasion by the commandment, wrought in me all manner of concupiscence. For without the law, sin was dead.

9 And I lived some time without the law. But when the commandment came, sin revived.

10 And I died and the commandment, that was ordained to life, the same was found to be unto death to me.

11 For sin, taking occasion by the commandment, seduced me, and by it killed me.

12 ^bWherefore the law indeed is holy, and the commandment holy, and just, and good.

13 Was that then which is good, made death to me? God forbid. But sin, that it may appear sin, by that which is good, wrought death in me: that sin, by the commandment, might become sinful above measure.

14 For we know that the law is spiritual, but I am carnal, sold under sin.

15 For that which I work, I understand not. For I do not that good which I will, but the evil which I hate, that I do.

16 If, then, I do that which I will not, I consent to the law, that it is good.

17 Now, then, it is no more I that do it: but sin that dwelleth in me.

18 For I know that there dwelleth not in me, that is spiritual, holy: but, saith he, I should not know concupiscence to be sinful, unless the law said, Thou shalt not covet: by which it is made known to every one, that sins of thought consented to, and evil desires, are sins. Wi.

VER. 8. Sin, taking occasion. Sin, or concupiscence, which is called sin, because it is from sin, and leads to sin, which was asleep before, was awakened by the prohibition; the law not being the cause thereof, nor properly giving occasion to it: but occasion being taken by our corrupt nature to resist the commandment laid upon us. Ch.—Sin. The apostle here calls concupiscence by the name of sin; because it is the consequence and punishment of it, and drags us along to sin. This takes occasion from the precept of the law to induce us to transgress it; for we are naturally inclined to do what is forbidden,—Nitimur in vetitum—which is the offspring of a disorderly love of liberty and independence. Calmet.—Without the law, sin was dead; that is, many sins were so little known, that before the written law they seemed no sins; not but that, at all times, reason and conscience showed many things to be sinful and ill done, so that whosoever acted against these lights could not be excused. See what S. Paul says of the heathen philosophers, c. 1. Wi.

VER. 9, &c. I lived some time without the law; i. e. without the knowledge of the law. S. Paul, though he seems to speak of himself, yet represents the condition of any person that lived before the written law was given: but when the commandment came, after that the written law was given, and its precepts came to my knowledge, then sin revived, by giving me a perfect knowledge: and by transgressing those precepts, I became more guilty and without excuse.—I died; i. e. became guilty by transgression of the known law, and guilty of eternal death: and the commandments, or precepts, which were unto life, which were good in themselves, and designed to direct me what I was to do, and what I was to avoid, in order to an eternal life, were found to be unto death to me, but by my own fault; and occasionally only, from the commandments of the law and the knowledge of them, when with full knowledge I transgressed them. Thus I was seduced by sin, which with it brought death, though the law and the commandment (ver. 12) were in themselves holy, and just, and good. They could not but be good, as S. Chrys. says, their author being the true God, and not any evil principle or cause, that was the author of evils, as the impious Manicheans pretended. We might as well, says S. Chrys., find fault with the tree of life and the forbidden fruit in Paradise, which was not the cause, but only the occasion of our misery, when Adam eat of it. It cannot then be said, that that which was good, (to wit, the law,) was made death to me, or the cause of my death; but sin and my unresisted sinful inclinations, that it might appear sin, or that it might evidently appear how great an evil sin is, by that which is good, (i. e. by the transgression of the law which is good,) wrought and brought death to me, that by the occasion of the precepts given and known, sin might become sinful above measure. Wi.

VER. 13. That it may appear sin, or that sin may appear; viz. to be the monster it is, which is even capable to take occasion from that which is good to work death. Ch.

VER. 14. I am carnal, sold under sin, a slave subject to sinful inclinations, which are only properly sins when they are consented to by our free-will. There hath been a great dispute both among the ancient and later interpreters, whether S. Paul from this verse to the end of the chapter speak of a person reasoning in sin, either under the law of nature or of the written law, (which was 20)?

to say, in my flesh, that which is good. For to will good, is present with me; but to accomplish that which is good, I find not.

19 For the good which I will, I do not: but the evil which I will not, that I do.

20 Now if I do that which I will not, it is no more I that do it, but sin that dwelleth in me.

21 I find then a law, that when I have a will to do good, evil is present with me.

22 For I am delighted with the law of God, according to the inward man:

23 But I see another law in my members, fighting against the law of my mind, and captivating me in the law of sin, that is in my members.

24 Unhappy man that I am: who shall deliver me from the body of this death?

25 The grace of God, by Jesus Christ our Lord. Therefore, I myself, with the mind, serve the law of God: but, with the flesh, the law of sin.

CHAP. VIII.

There is no condemnation to them, who being justified by Christ, walk not according to the flesh, but according to the spirit. Their strong hope, and love of God.

THERE is, therefore, now no condemnation to them who are in Christ Jesus, who walk not according to the flesh.

once the opinion of S. Aug.,) or whether he speak of a person regenerated by baptism, and in the state of grace in the new law, and even of himself when he was a faithful servant of God. This is the opinion of S. Aug. in many of his later writings against the Pelagians, for which he also cites S. Hilary, S. Greg. Naz., and S. Amb. It is also the opinion of S. Jerom, (Ep. ad Eustochium de Custod. Virg.,) of S. Greg. the Great, of Bede, and the more approved opinion, according to which the apostle here by sin does not understand that which is, properly speaking, a sin, or sinful, but only speaks of sin improperly such, that is, of a corrupt inclination, of a rebellion of nature corrupted by original sin, of a strife betwixt the spirit and the flesh, which remains for a trial in the most virtuous persons: of which see again S. Paul, Gal. v. 17. Menochius.

VER. 15. For that which I work, I understand not. To know or understand is often, in the style of the Scriptures, the same as to approve or love; so the sense here is, I approve not what I do, that is, what happens to me in my sensitive part, in my imagination, or in the members of my body, which indeed the just man rather suffers than does; and this is the sense, by what immediately follows, the evil which I hate, that I do, i. e. that I suffer, being against my will; and I do that which I would not. Wi.—I do not that good which I will, &c. The apostle here describes the disorderly motions of passion and concupiscence; which oftentimes in us get the start of reason, and by means of which even good men suffer in the inferior appetite what their will abhors: and are much hindered in the accomplishment of the desires of their spirit and mind. But these evil motions, (though they are called the law of sin, because they come from original sin, and violently tempt and incline to sin,) as long as the will does not consent to them, are not sins, because they are not voluntary. Ch.

VER. 17, 18. Now, then, it is no more I that do it: . . . To will good is present with me. The meaning of this passage is, that although now healed and renewed by grace, he could have a perfect desire of doing good; yet still on account of the evil of concupiscence dwelling in his flesh, he found not himself able to perform all the good he wished, because concupiscence was always urging him on to evil against his will. Estius.

VER. 22. I am delighted with the law of God, according to the inward man. As long as the inward man, or man's interior, is right, all is right.—I perceive another law in my members, fighting, and different from the law of my mind: this is true in any just man striving against and resisting temptations, but not of the sinner, whose mind also and will consent to them. A man can never lose God's favour and grace, unless his mind and interior consent.—We must avoid here two heretical errors; that of those late pretended reformers, who, denying man's free-will, hold the commandments of God impossible, even to a just man. See also the first heretical proposition of Jansenius. Next we must detest the late abominable error of those called Quietists, who blushed not to say, that a man might yield and abandon himself to the most shameful disorders of the flesh, pretending that it was not they themselves, but sin and the devil that caused these abominations in their flesh. S. Aug. foresaw this frivolous excuse: (l. 1, de Nup. et Concup. c. 28.) "That man (saith he) is in a grievous mistake, who, consenting to the concupiscence of the flesh, and to do what the flesh prompts him to, thinks he can still say, It is not I that do that," &c. Wi.

CHAP. VIII. VER. 1. Notwithstanding this law of sin opposing the law of the spirit, and endeavouring to captivate us to sin, we can, by the success of the 2 For the law of the Spirit of life, in Christ Jesus, hath delivered me from the law of sin, and of death.

3 ^aFor what the law could not do, in that it was weak, through the flesh: God sending his own Son, in the likeness of sinful flesh, even of sin, condemned sin in the flesh,

4 That the justification of the law might be fulfilled in us, who walk not according to the flesh, but according to the spirit.

5 For they who are according to the flesh, relish the things that are of the flesh: but they who are according to the spirit, mind the things which are of the spirit.

6 For the wisdom of the flesh is death: but the wisdom of the spirit is life and peace.

7 Because the wisdom of the flesh is an enemy to God: for it is not subject to the law of God, neither can it be.

8 And they who are in the flesh, cannot please God.

9 But you are not in the flesh, but in the spirit, if so be that the Spirit of God dwell in you. Now if any man have not the Spirit of Christ, he is none of his.

10 And if Christ be in you, the body, indeed, is dead, because of sin, but the spirit liveth, because of justification.

11 ^bAnd if the Spirit of him, who raised up Jesus from the dead, dwell in you: he that raised up Jesus Christ from the dead, shall quicken also your mortal bodies, because of his Spirit dwelling in you.

12 Therefore, brethren, we are debtors, not to the flesh, to live according to the flesh.

13 For if you live according to the flesh, you shall die: but if by the spirit you mortify the deeds of the flesh, you shall live.

14 For whosoever are led by the Spirit of God, they are the sons of God.

15 ^cFor you have not received the spirit of bondage grace of Jesus Christ, preserve ourselves from sin and damnation, by resisting sin, and attaching ourselves strongly to Jesus Christ by faith and charity. Calmet.

VER. 2. The law of the Spirit of life, in Christ Jesus. That is, the new law, by which is given the Holy Ghost, or the Spirit of life, hath delivered me from the law of sin and of death; that is, from the slavery of sin, that causeth death: though some think that the law of Moses may be here called the law of death, and of sin, because occasionally it brought death upon such as transgressed the known law. Wi.

VER. 5, &c. For they who are according to the flesh. They who are subject to the flesh, by having their affections fixed on the things of the flesh, that is, carnal men, whilst they are such, cannot please God: for this prudence of the flesh makes them the enemies of God. Estius.—If Christ, or the Spirit of Christ, which he also (ver. 9) calls the Spirit of God, as being one and the same, dwell in you, and direct you, the body indeed is dead because of sin; that is, is mortal, and liable to death, the consequence of Adam's sin; but the spirit and the soul liveth by the life of grace, by reason of justification; that is, because she hath been justified, and sanctified by the merits of Christ. And the Spirit of God, who raised Jesus to life, will also raise all who remain sanctified by the grace of Christ to a happy resurrection. Wi.

VER. 14, &c. They are the sons of God, by this new grace of adoption, by which also they call God, Abba; that is to say, Father. Wi.—Abba is a Syriac word, which signifies my father. This is properly the word of free and noble children; for amongst the Hebrews, the children of slaves were not allowed to call their fathers Abba, nor their mothers Imma. This kind of expression was very rarely used under the old law. The Hebrews called the Almighty their Lord, their God, their Salvation, their King, their Protector, their Glory, &c., but seldom their Father; scarcely ever, except in the case of Solomon, who was a particular figure of the Messiah, the true Son of God. On this account God said to him, "He shall call me Father, and God; and I will be to him a Father, and will treat him as my first-born." But it is the property of the Christian to call the Almighty his Father with confidence indeed, yet tempered with a filial awe; remembering at the same time that he is his Judge. Calmet.—S. Chrys.* takes notice, that God was also called the Father of the Israelites, and they his children, in the Old Testament, when God rather governed his people by fear of punishments, and promises of temporal blessings, but not in that particular manner as in the new law. Wi.—The Spirit himself, &c. By the inward motions of Divine love, and the peace of conscience, which the children of God experience, they again in fear: but you have received the spirit of ^d adoption of sons, whereby we cry: Abba, (Father.)

16 For the Spirit himself giveth testimony to our spirit, that we are the sons of God.

17 And if sons, heirs also: heirs indeed of God, and joint-heirs with Christ: yet so if we suffer with him, that we may be also glorified with him.

18 For I reckon, that the sufferings of this present time are not worthy to be compared with the glory to come, that shall be revealed in us.

19 For the expectation of the creature waiteth for the revelation of the sons of God.

20 For the creature was made subject to vanity, not willingly, but by reason of him, that made it subject in hope:

21 Because the creature also itself shall be delivered from the servitude of corruption, into the liberty of the glory of the children of God.

22 For we know that every creature groaneth, and is in labour even till now.

23 And not only it, but ourselves also, who have the first-fruits of the spirit, even we ourselves groan within ourselves, waiting for the adoption of the sons of God, the redemption of our body.

24 For we are saved by hope. But hope that is seen, is not hope: For what a man seeth, why doth he hope for?

25 But if we hope for that which we see not: we wait for it with patience.

26 Likewise the Spirit also helpeth our infirmity: for we know not what we should pray for as we ought: but the Spirit himself asketh for us with unspeakable groanings.

27 And he that searcheth the hearts, knoweth what the have a kind of testimony of God's favour; by which they are much strengthened in their hope of their justification and salvation: but yet not so as to pretend to an absolute assurance, which is not usually granted in this mortal life; during which we are taught to work out our salvation with fear and trembling. Phil. ii. 12. And that he who thinketh himself to stand, must take heed lest he fall. 1 Cor. x. 12. See also Rom. xi. 20—22. Ch.

VER. 19. The expectation of the creature. He speaks of the corporeal creation, made for the use and service of man; and, by occasion of his sin, made subject to vanity, that is, to a perpetual instability, tending to corruption and other defects; so that, by a figure of speech, it is here said to groan and be in labour, and to long for its deliverance, which is then to come, when sin shall reign no more; and God shall raise the bodies, and unite them to their souls, never more to separate, and to be in everlasting happiness in heaven. Ch.—Waiteth for the revelation of the sons of God. That is, for the time after this life, when it shall be made manifest that they are the sons of God, and heirs of the kingdom of his glory. Several interpreters understand all creatures whatsoever, even irrational and inanimate creatures of this world, which are represented as if they had a knowledge and sense of a more happy condition, of a new unchangeable state of perfection, which they are to receive at the end of the world. See 2 Pet. i. 13; Apoc. xxi. 1.—Others, by the creature, or creatures, understand men only, and Christians, who groan under miseries and temptations in this mortal life, amidst the vanities of this world, under the slavery of corruption; who having already (ver. 23) received the first-fruits of the spirit, the grace of God in baptism, have been made the children of God, and now, with expectation and great earnestness, wait and long for a more perfect adoption of the sons of God: for the redemption of their bodies, when the bodies, as well as the souls of the elect, shall rise to an immortal life, and a complete happiness in heaven. Wi.

VER. 24, &c. For we are saved by hope, as it is the will of God we should be, waiting and hoping with patience for the things which we have not seen, which neither the eye hath seen, nor the ear hath heard, &c. 1 Cor. ii. 9.—And the Spirit also helpeth our infirmity . . . asketh for us with unspeakable groanings. If we understand this according to the common exposition of the Divine Spirit of the Holy Ghost, the sense is, says S. Aug., that the Holy Ghost maketh us ask: but we may understand the Spirit of God and his grace, diffused in our souls, and in particular that gift of the Holy Ghost, called the spirit of prayer, given to the new Christians, which taught them what to ask, and how to pray. See S. Chrys. Wi Spirit desireth: because he asketh for the saints according to God.

28 And we know that to them that love God, all things work together unto good, to such as according to his purpose are called to be saints.

29 For whom he foreknew, he also predestinated to be made conformable to the image of his Son: that he might be the first-born amongst many brethren.

30 And whom he predestinated, them he also called: and whom he called, them he also justified: and whom he justified, them he also glorified.

31 What shall we then say to these things? If God be for us, who is against us?

32 ^a He that spared not even his own Son, but delivered him up for us all: how hath he not also, with him, given us all things?

33 Who shall lay any thing to the charge of the elect of God? God who justifieth.

34 Who is he that shall condemn? Christ Jesus who died, yea, who rose also again, who is at the right hand of God, who also maketh intercession for us.

35 Who then shall separate us from the love of Christ? shall tribulation? or distress? or famine? or nakedness? or danger? or persecution? or the sword?

36 (As it is written: ^b For thy sake we are put to death, all the day long: we are accounted as sheep for the slaughter.)

^a Gen. xxii. 12.—^b Psal. xliii. 23.

VER. 28. To them that love God all things work together unto good. All trials, temptations, afflictions, must be taken as coming from the hand of God, who ordains, or permits them for the greater good of his elect.—For the good of those, who, according to his purpose, are called the saints. Lit. according to purpose; but it seems certain, that to translate his purpose, is only to give the literal sense, if we compare this place with other texts, both in the Greek and Latin, where the same words signify according to God's good will, or his eternal decree, and not according to the purpose, or will of men, as some expound it. Wi.

VER. 29. For whom he foreknew, he also predestinated to be made conformable to the image of his Son, in suffering with Christ, in following his doctrine, in imitating his life. This foreknowledge of God, according to S. Augustin, is not merely a foreseeing of what men will do by the assistances and graces of God's ordinary providence, much less a foreseeing of what they will do by their own natural strength, as the Pelagian heretics pretended: but is a foreknowledge including an act of the Divine will, and of his love towards his elect servants; God therefore hath foreseen and predestinated, or decreed, that these elect, by the help of his special graces, and by the co-operation of their free-will, should be conformable to the image of his Son, that so his Son, even as man, might be the first-born, the chief, and the head of all that shall be saved. Wi.—God hath pre-ordained that all his elect should be conformable to the image of his Son. We must not here offer to dive into the secrets of God's eternal election: only firmly believe that all our good, in time, and eternity, flows originally from God's free goodness, and all our evil from man's free-will. Ch.

VER. 32. He that spared not, &c. This is another argument for us to hope in the goodness of God, who hath so loved the world, that he hath delivered, and given his true and only Son for us all, to redeem all and every one, and has by his death obtained helps and graces by which we may all be saved. Wi.

VER. 35, &c. Who then, or what shall separate us from the love of Christ? Neither devils, nor men, nor any thing in nature, unless it be by our own fault, and unless we wilfully and sinfully leave God.—I am sure. In the Greek, I am fully persuaded, that nothing can separate us, &c. Wi.

VER. 39. So powerful and efficacious, so certain and unchangeable is the love of God, which conducts us to the kingdom of bliss, that no creature can separate us from it, either by making us cease to love him, or by frustrating our love of its effect, viz. life everlasting. Estius.

38 For I am sure that neither death, nor life, nor angels, nor principalities, nor powers, nor things present, nor things to come, nor might,

CHAP. IX.

The apostle's concern for the Jews. God's election is free, and not confined to their nation.

I SPEAK the truth in Christ, I lie not, my conscience bearing me witness in the Holy Ghost:

2 That I have great sadness, and continual sorrow in my heart.

3 ^c For I wished myself to be an anathema from Christ, for my brethren, who are my kinsmen according to the flesh,

4 Who are Israelites, to whom belongeth the adoption of children, and the glory, and the covenant, and the giving of the law, and the service of God, and the promises:

5 Whose are the fathers, and of whom is Christ according to the flesh, who is over all things, God blessed for ever. Amen.

CHAP. IX. VER. 3. I wished myself to be an anathema from Christ.*

The word anathema, according to its derivation, signifies a thing separated or laid apart for some particular use. Hence it was put to signify things given and consecrated to God, which therefore used to be presented and hung up in temples. 2. The word also was applied to signify things whose destruction was resolved upon, that is, men or things separated for destruction, as sometimes, men deputed to be sacrificed to the gods, to appease their anger. This signification was according to the Hebrew word cherem, and the Syriac word horma, as Numb. xxi. 3. He called the name of that place Horma, that is, anathema; because it was to be entirely destroyed. See 1 Mac. v. From hence anathema was also used for a curse, and to anathematize, to curse. See Acts xxiii. 14. This wish of S. Paul is generally expounded as proceeding from the great love and charity he had, when he was an apostle, for the conversion and salvation of his brethren, the Jews, who mostly remained obstinate and incredulous: and some will have it to be no more than an hyperbolical expression of his great love and affection for them.—The apostle's concern and love for his countrymen, the Jews, was so great, that he was willing even to suffer an anathema, or curse, for their sake; or any evil that could come upon him, without his offending God. Ch.

VER. 4, 5. To whom belongeth the adoption of children. Lit. whose is the adoption. He mentions the favours which God had done to his people, the Jews. Of whose race, i. e. of the family of David, Jesus Christ, as man, was born.—Who is over all things, God, blessed for ever. Amen. Though the apostles did not often, in express words, call Jesus Christ the God, lest the heathens, when they were not sufficiently instructed, should imagine that there were many gods. (as divers of the fathers take notice,) yet here, and in several places, they clearly delivered the Divinity of our Saviour, Christ. The Socinians might here observe that the apostle calls him the God blessed for ever, and with the Greek article Wi.

VER. 6, 7. Not as though the word of God hath failed in his promises made to Abraham and the patriarchs. The Jews pretended that the promises were made to them only, and to those that were of their race, and that the Gentiles were not to partake of them. S. Paul shows them their mistake, by telling them who are to be esteemed the true children of Abraham, and of the patriarchs, according to the promises which God made, and who are not. Wi.—All are not Israelites, &c. Not all, who are the carnal seed of Israel, are true Israelites in God's account: who, as by his free grace he heretofore preferred Isaac before

7 Neither are all they, who are the seed of Abraham, children: ^a but in Isaac shall thy seed be called:

8 That is to say, not they who are the children of the flesh, are the children of God: but they ^b that are the children of the promise, are counted for the seed.

9 For this is the word of the promise: ^c According to this time will I come: and Sara shall have a son.

10 And not only she: ^d but when Rebecca also had conceived at once, by Isaac, our father.

11 For when the children were not yet born, nor had done any good or evil, (that the purpose of God according to election might stand,)

12 Not of works, but of him that called, it was said to her:

13 ^e The elder shall serve the younger, as it is written: Jacob I have loved, but Esau I have hated.

14 What shall we say then? Is there injustice with God? God forbid.

15 For he saith to Moses: ^f I will have mercy on whom I will have mercy: and I will show mercy to whom I will show mercy.

16 So then it is not of him that willeth, nor of him that runneth, but of God that showeth mercy.

17 For the Scripture saith to Pharaoh: ^g To this pur-

Ismael, and Jacob before Esau, so he could, and did by the like free grace, election, and mercy, raise up spiritual children by faith to Abraham and Israel, from among the Gentiles, and prefer them before the carnal Jews. Ch.

VER. 9. To prove that the children of Abraham are the children of promise, he adduces the passage of Scripture: "I will come in a year's time, and Sara shall have a son." Gen. xviii. This promised child was Isaac, the true son of the promise of God, and of the faith of Abraham; and not the son of the flesh, for Ismael was this as well as Isaac; but he was granted to the prayers of Abraham, a child of the grace and mercy of God. All the faithful, therefore, of whatever race or nation they may be, are in this sense the children of Abraham, by being gratuitously chosen by God, and by the fidelity in which they are imitators of Abraham. Calmet.

VER. 10, &c. Not yet born. By this example of these twins, and the preference of the younger to the elder, the drift of the apostle is, to show that God, in his election, mercy, and grace, is not tied to any particular nation, as the Jews imagined, nor to any prerogative of birth, or any foregoing merits. For as, antecedently to his grace, he sees no merits in any, but finds all involved in sin, in the common mass of condemnation; and all children of wrath; there is no one whom he might not justly leave in that mass; so that whomsoever he delivers from it, he delivers in his mercy; and whomsoever he leaves in it, he leaves in his justice. As when, of two equally criminal, the king is pleased out of pure mercy to pardon one, whilst he suffers justice to take place in the execution of the other. Ch.—Nor had done any good or evil. God was pleased to prefer and promise his blessings to the younger of them, Jacob, declaring, that the elder shall serve the younger; that is, that the seed of the elder should be subject to that of the younger, as it happened afterwards to the Idumeans. And the prophet, Malachi, said of them, I have loved Jacob, but hated Esau, and turned his mountains into a desert, &c.—That the purpose of God, his will, and his decree, (see the foregoing chap. ver. 28,) might stand according to election; might be, not according to any works they had done, or that he foresaw they would do, but merely according to his mercy. And though the preference which God gave to Jacob was literally true, as to temporal benefits; yet S. Aug. observes, in divers places, that Jacob was a figure of the elect or predestinate, and Esau of the reprobate: and that as Jacob and his posterity was more favoured, purely by the mercy of God, without any merits on their side; so are God's elect, whom he has called, and to whom, according to his eternal purpose, he decreed to give eternal glory, and special graces to bring them thither. Wi.

VER. 14. What shall we say, then? Is there injustice with God, when he bestows special favours and benefits on some, and not on others? He answers, by no means. And he justifies almighty God's conduct, ver. 22. In the mean time, it is certain that there is no injustice in not giving what another has no right to: and besides, all men, having sinned, deserved punishment. If, then, he shows mercy to some, it is an effect of his goodness and liberality only, which they do not deserve. If he leaves others in their sins, they are only punished according to their deserts. Wi.

VER. 17. For the Scripture saith to Pharaoh, &c. S. Paul had shown that there was no injustice in God, by his giving special graces to the elect: now he shows that God cannot be accounted unjust for leaving the reprobate in their sins, or for punishing them as they deserve; for this purpose he brings the example of Pharaoh, who remained hardened against all the admonitions and chastisements of him and his kingdom. Wi.

VER. 18. And whom he will he hardeneth. That is, permits to be hardened pose have I raised thee up, that I may show my power in thee: and that my name may be declared throughout all the earth.

18 Therefore he hath mercy on whom he will, and whom he will he hardeneth.

19 Thou wilt say, therefore, to me: Why doth he then find fault? For who resisteth his will?

20 O man, who art thou that repliest against God? ^h Shall the thing formed say to him that formed it: Why hast thou made me thus?

21 Or hath not the potter power over the clay, of the same lump, to make one vessel unto honour, and another unto dishonour?

22 And if God, willing to show his wrath, and to make his power known, endured with much patience vessels of wrath, fitted to destruction.

23 That he might show the riches of his glory upon the vessels of mercy, which he hath prepared unto glory.

24 Even us, whom also he hath called, not of the Jews only, but also of the Gentiles, 25 As he saith in Osee: ⁱ I will call them my people, that were not my people: and her beloved, that was not beloved: and her, that had not obtained mercy, one that hath obtained mercy.

^f Exod. xxxiii. 19.—^g Exod. ix. 16.—^h Wisd. xv. 7; Isa. xlv. 9; Jer. xviii. 6.—ⁱ Osee ii. 24; 1 Pet. ii. 10.

by their own malice, as it is divers times said in Exod. that Pharaoh hardened his heart. God, says S. Aug., is said to harden men's hearts, not by causing their malice, but by not giving them the free gift of his grace, by which they become hardened by their own perverse will. Wi.—Not by being the cause, or author of his sin, but by withholding his grace, and so leaving him in his sin, in punishment of his past demerits. Ch.

VER. 19, &c. Thou wilt say, therefore, to me, &c. The apostle makes objection, that if God call some, and harden, or even permit others to be hardened, and no one resisteth, or can hinder his absolute will, why should God complain that men are not converted? S. Paul first puts such rash and profane men in mind, that it is unreasonable and impertinent for creatures to murmur and dispute against God, their Creator, when they do not comprehend the ways of his providence.—O man, who art thou that repliest against God? This might stop the mouths and quiet the minds of every man, when he cannot comprehend the mysteries of predestination, of God's foreknowledge, his decrees and graces, or the manner of reconciling them with human liberty. He may cry out with S. Paul again, (chap. xi. 33,) O the riches of the wisdom, and of the knowledge of God! how incomprehensible are his judgments, and how unsearchable his ways!—Shall the thing formed, &c. Hath not the potter power, &c. To teach men that they ought not to complain against God and his providence, when they cannot comprehend his works, he puts them in mind of their origin. Every one may say to God, with the prophet Isaias, (vi. 48,) Lord, thou art our Father, and we are but clay; thou art our Maker who framed us, and we are all of us the work of thy hands. Wi.—The potter. This similitude is used only to show that we are not to dispute with our Maker: nor to reason with him why he does not give as much grace to one as to another; for since the whole lump of our clay is vitiated by sin, it is owing to his goodness and mercy that he makes out of it so many vessels of honour; and it is no more than just that others, in punishment of their unrepented-of sins, should be given up to be vessels of dishonour. Ch.

VER. 22, 23. And if God, &c. He now gives the reason why God might, without any injustice, have mercy on some, and not on others; grant particular graces and favours to his elect, and not equally to all; because all mankind was become liable to damnation by original sin: the clay that all are made of, is a sinful clay; and, as S. Aug. says, was become a lump and mass of damnation. Every one had sinned in Adam. Wi.

VER. 24, &c. Whom also he hath called, &c. That is, he hath called some of the Jews, and many of the Gentiles, to be vessels of election, as he foretold by his prophet Osee, (ii. 24,) I will call them my people, that were not my people, . . . and I will make them the children of the living God. And as it was also foretold by the prophet Isaias, of all the numerous nation of the Jews, only a remnant shall be saved, by their obstinacy in not receiving, and refusing to believe in, their Messias. For finishing his word, and reducing it by his justice to a little, because the Lord will bring to pass his word reducing it to a small compass upon the earth. The sense and construction of this verse is equally obscure in the Greek and in the Latin text: the true sense seems to be, that finishing his word, or fulfilling his promises to Israel, those that are to be saved, will be reduced by his justice for their sins to a few; because, though he bring to pass his word, and his promises, the saved among the Israelites will be reduced to a small compass, in comparison of the great number of the Gentiles. This exposition agrees with the rest of the text, and with what follows, and was foretold by Isaias, (chap. i. 9,) that unless the God of sabaoth (of hosts) had, through his mercy, left them a seed, a small number, they would all in a manner have deserved 26 "And it shall be, in the place where it was said to them: You are not my people: there they shall be called the children of the living God.

27 And Isaias crieth out concerning Israel: "If the number of the children of Israel be as the sand of the sea, a remnant shall be saved.

28 For he shall finish his word, and cut it short in justice: because a short word shall the Lord make upon the earth.

29 And as Isaias foretold: "unless the Lord of sabaoth had left us a seed, we had been made as Sodom, and we had been like unto Gomorrha.

30 What then shall we say? That the Gentiles, who sought not after justice, have attained to justice: even the justice that is of faith.

31 But Israel, in pursuing the law of justice, is not come to the law of justice.

32 Why so? because they sought it not of faith, but as it were of works: for they stumbled at the stumbling-stone;

33 As it is written: "Behold I lay in Sion a stumbling-stone, and a rock of scandal: and whosoever believeth in him, shall not be confounded.

CHAP. X.

The end of the law is faith in Christ: which the Jews refusing to submit to, cannot be justified.

BRETHREN, the will of my heart, indeed, and my prayer to God, is for them unto salvation.

2 For I bear them witness, that they have a zeal of God, but not according to knowledge.

^a Osee i. 10.—^b Isa. x. 22.—^c Isa. i. 9.—^d Isa. viii. 14, and xxviii. 16; 1 Pet. ii. 7.—^e Lev. xviii. 5; Eze. xx. 11.

to be utterly destroyed, like Sodom and Gomorrha. Wi.—A remnant. That is, a small number only of the children of Israel shall be converted and saved. How perversely is this text quoted for the salvation of men of all religions, when it speaks only of the converts of the children of Israel! Ch.—S. Paul is here speaking of the reprobation of the Jews, and of the vocation of the Gentiles, and foretells that a remnant, or small number, of the children of Israel shall be converted, and saved. In the sense of S. Paul, we sincerely hope, and confidently trust, that a remnant of all will be saved through a timely conversion. But we nowhere read, in the Old, or New Scriptures, that a remnant of all will be saved, as if it were a matter of indifference to what society or connexion a Christian was joined. A.

VER. 30—32. What then shall we say? Or what shall we conclude from these testimonies of the Scripture, but this paradox, as S. Chrys. calls it, that they who sought for justice, or sanctification, found it not, and they who did not seek it, found it; that is, the Jews, who sought for this justice by the works of their law, which they magnified so much, have not attained to that law that could make them just; whereas the Gentiles, who had no such written law to confide in, have only sought to be justified by the faith and law of Christ, by which they have met with justice and sanctification? Wi.

VER. 33. Why then have not the Jews been justified? because they stumbled at the stumbling-stone: that is, the doctrine of Christ crucified has been a scandal to the Jews, at which being offended, they would not own him for their Messiah. Yet whosoever believeth in him, and follows his law and doctrine, shall not be confounded, but obtain justification and salvation. Wi.

Sav., where he says, that to expound S. Paul as if he wished to die for Christ's sake, is a childish exposition, not worthy of the great charity of S. Paul, that it deserves no confutation: οὐκ ἔστι ταῦτα, οὐκ ἔστι . . . οὐδὲ γὰρ ἀντιλέγειν πρὸς ταῦτα ἀξιόν. He thinks that S. Paul was willing to be separated, not from the love of Christ, (God forbid,) but from the glory of the kingdom of heaven; Pag. 135, ἀλλοτριωθῆναι οὐχὶ τῆς ἀγάπης αὐτοῦ, μὴ γένοιτο, ἀλλὰ τῆς ἀπολαύσεως ἐκείνης καὶ τῆς δόξης.

4 For the end of the law is Christ, unto justice to every one that believeth.

5 For Moses wrote, that the justice which is of the law, "the man that shall do it, shall live by it.

6 But the justice which is of faith, speaketh thus: "Say not in thy heart: Who shall ascend into heaven? that is, to bring Christ down:

7 Or who shall descend into the deep? that is, to bring up Christ again from the dead.

VER. 3. The justice of God. That is, the justice which God giveth us through Christ; as, on the other hand, the Jews' own justice is that which they pretended to by their own strength, or by the observance of the law, without faith in Christ. Ch.

VER. 5—7. Moses (Lev. xviii. 12) wrote, that the justice which is of the law . . . shall live by it. That is, shall have the recompence of a long temporal life, or even an everlasting life, by joining a faith in Christ their Redeemer, that was to come. But the justice which is of faith, speaketh thus, that is, Moses speaketh thus of it, (Deut. xxx.) say not in thy heart, Who shall ascend into heaven? &c., the apostle gives us the spiritual sense of the words by adding, to bring Christ down, &c. The sense is, that it is now fulfilled in the new law, when Christ is come from heaven by his incarnation, and is also again risen from the abyss by his resurrection.

VER. 9. Thou shalt be saved. To confess the Lord Jesus, and to call upon the name of the Lord, (ver. 13,) is not barely the professing a belief in the person of Christ: but moreover implies a belief of his whole doctrine, and an obedience to his law; without which the calling of him Lord will save no man. S. Matt. vii. 21. Ch.

VER. 14, &c. Or how shall they believe? &c. He shows the necessity of preachers, and that all true preachers must be sent, and have their mission from God.—Who hath believed our report? * Lit. our hearing? Some expound it thus: Who hath believed the things we have heard from God, and which we have preached? The common interpretation is, who hath believed what he hath heard from us? Wi.

15 And how can they preach, unless they be sent? as it is written: "How beautiful are the feet of them that preach the gospel of peace, of them that bring glad tidings of good things!"

16 But all do not obey the gospel. For Isaias saith: "Lord, who hath believed our report?"

17 Faith then cometh by hearing: and hearing by the word of Christ.

18 But I say: Have they not heard? "Yes, verily, their sound went over all the earth, and their words unto the ends of the whole world."

19 But I say: Hath not Israel known? First Moses saith: "I will provoke you to jealousy by that which is not a nation: by a foolish nation I will anger you."

20 But Isaias is bold, and saith: "I was found by them that did not seek me: I appeared openly to them that asked not after me."

21 But to Israel he saith: "All the day long have I spread forth my hands to a people, that believeth not, and contradicteth me."

CHAP. XI.

God hath not cast off Israel. The Gentiles must not be proud; but stand in faith, and fear.

I SAY then: Hath God cast away his people? God forbid. For I also am an Israelite, of the seed of Abraham, of the tribe of Benjamin.

2 God hath not cast away his people, which he foreknew. Know you not what the Scripture saith of Elias; how he calleth on God against Israel?

3 "Lord, they have slain thy prophets, and have dug down thy altars: and I am left alone, and they seek my life."

VER. 15. Unless they be sent. Here is an evident proof against all new teachers, who have all usurped to themselves the ministry, without any lawful mission, derived by succession from the apostles, to whom Christ said, (John xx. 21,) As my Father hath sent me, I also send you. Ch.—The Almighty sends people to preach two different ways. The one is extraordinary, by internal inspiration, as was that of the Baptist, and all the other prophets; in which case, however, extraordinary proofs must be given that they are sent by God; and the other is ordinary, which is derived from Christ, and from the apostles and their successors, whom he has appointed to be his vicegerents on earth. Estius.

VER. 18. But I say: Have they not heard? He puts an objection, and by his answer shows the Jews are inexcusable in not believing, since the gospel has been preached all the world over, and in places where the Jews were, as it was foretold: and also because the Gentiles every where have believed; which even excites you Jews to jealousy against them, as Moses foretold (Deut. xxxii. 21); that is, when you now see, that the Gentiles, whom you despised so much, by believing in Christ, have received the gifts of the Holy Ghost, of working miracles, of speaking tongues, of prophecy, &c. Wi.

* V. 16. Quis ereditit auditui nostro? τῇ ἀκοῇ ἡμῶν.

CHAP. XI. VER. 1, &c. S. Paul in this chapter endeavours to comfort the Jews, though the greatest part of them were rejected for their blindness; and to admonish the converted Gentiles, not to boast for being called and converted, but to persevere with humility, and the fear of God.—God hath not cast away his people. That is, not all of them, nor hath he cast off those whom he foreknew, and decreed to save.—The Scripture saith of Elias. He brings the example of Elias living among the ten tribes of Israel, when all the people were forbidden to go and adore in the temple of Jerusalem, when the altars of the true God were destroyed, and almost all in these tribes were fallen into idolatry, and worshipped Baal: he complains as if he were left alone in the worship of the true God. But the Divine answer showed him his mistake. I have reserved to myself seven thousand men, &c. Some take notice, that seven is divers times put for a great number, as three and a half for a small number: however, besides these seven thousand, all in the kingdom of Juda remained firm in the worship of the true God. In like manner, a remnant is now saved by the election of grace, by God's free and liberal gift of his Divine grace. Wi.—This is very ill alleged by some against the perpetual visibility of the Church of Christ: the more, because however the number of the faithful might be abridged by the persecution of Jezabel in the kingdom of the ten tribes, the Church was at the same time in a 4 But what saith the divine answer to him? "I have reserved to myself seven thousand men, who have not bowed their knees to Baal."

5 Even so then at this present time also, there is a remnant saved, according to the election of grace.

6 And if by grace, it is not now by works: otherwise grace is no more grace.

7 What then? that which Israel sought, he hath not obtained: but the election hath obtained it, and the rest have been blinded:

8 As it is written: "God hath given them the spirit of insensibility: eyes, that they should not see, and ears, that they should not hear, until this present day."

9 And David saith: "Let their table be made a snare, and a trap, and a stumbling-block, and a recompense to them."

10 Let their eyes be darkened, that they may not see: and bow down their back always.

11 I say then, have they so stumbled, that they should fall? God forbid. But by their offence, salvation is come to the Gentiles, that they may be emulous of them.

12 Now if the offence of them be the riches of the world, and the diminishing of them, the riches of the Gentiles: how much more the fulness of them?

13 For I say to you, Gentiles: "As long, indeed, as I am the apostle of the Gentiles, I will honour my ministry," 14 If by any means I may provoke to emulation those who are my flesh, and may save some of them.

15 For if the loss of them be the reconciliation of the world: what shall the receiving of them be, but life from the dead?

most flourishing condition (under Asa and Josaphat) in the kingdom of Juda Ch.

VER. 6. It is not now by works: otherwise grace is no more grace. If salvation were to come by works, done by nature, without faith and grace, salvation would not be a grace or favour, but a debt; but such dead works are indeed of no value in the sight of God towards salvation. It is not the same with regard to works done with and by God's grace; for to such works as these he has promised eternal salvation. Ch.

VER. 8. God hath given them, &c. Not by his working or acting in them; but by his permission, and by withdrawing his grace in punishment of their obstinacy. Ch.—Permitted them (says S. Chrys.) to fall into the spirit of insensibility. Lit. the spirit of * compunction. Compunction is not here taken, as in some spiritual writers, for a great sorrow for sins. In the Latin Vulg. (Isa. vi. 9) it is called the spirit of slumber, as in the Prot. translation. We cannot have a better judge of the sense of the word than S. Chrys., who tells us that it signifies a habit of the soul, firmly fixed in evil, and an insensible disposition: as, saith he, persons under a pious compunction are not to be removed from their good resolutions; so the wicked, under a hardened compunction, are nailed, as it were, to vice. Wi.—Although by bending their back is literally understood the yoke of servitude and captivity, with which the Jews were oppressed at the destruction of Jerusalem; yet it seems more conformable to the apostle's meaning, when considered in a spiritual sense, and then it will signify the insensibility of the Jews, as to heavenly things, and their anxious solicitude for the things of the earth. This their avaricious and carnal disposition was so manifest, that the poet said of them—

O curvæ in terram animæ et cœlestium inanes.—Estius.

VER. 11—15. Have they so stumbled, that they should fall? God forbid. The nation of the Jews is not absolutely and without remedy cast off for ever; but in part only (many thousands of them having been at first converted) and for a time; which fall of theirs God has been pleased to turn to the good of the Gentiles. Ch.—How much more the fulness of them? As if he should say, if the obstinacy of so many Jews seem to be an occasion, upon which God, whose mercy calls whom he pleaseth, hath bestowed the riches of his graces on other nations, and while the glory of the Jews, the elect people of God, has been diminished, the Gentiles have been made happy: how much more glorious will be the fulness of them! that is, according to the common interpretation, will be the re-establishment and conversion of the Jews hereafter, before the end of the world! See S. Chrys. Op. i. p. 164; S. Hilar. in Ps. lxxiii.; S. Jer. in c. 3; Osce; Habac. iii.; S. Aug. l. 20, de Civ. Dei, c. 29. Wi.

16 For if the first-fruit be holy, so is the mass also : and if the root be holy, so are the branches.

17 And if some of the branches be broken, and thou being a wild olive-tree, art ingrafted in them, and art made partaker of the root and of the fatness of the olive-tree,

18 Boast not against the branches. But if thou boast : thou bearest not the root, but the root thee.

19 Thou wilt say then : the branches were broken off that I might be grafted in.

20 Well : because of unbelief they were broken off. But thou standest by faith : be not high-minded, but fear.

21 For if God hath not spared the natural branches : fear lest he also spare not thee.

22 See, therefore, the goodness, and the severity of God : towards them, indeed, that are fallen, the severity : but towards thee, the goodness of God, if thou continue in goodness, otherwise thou also shalt be cut off.

23 And they also, if they abide not still in unbelief, shall be ingrafted : for God is able to ingraft them again.

24 For if thou wert cut out of the wild olive-tree, which is natural to thee, and, contrary to nature, wert ingrafted into the good olive-tree : how much more shall they, that are the natural branches, be grafted into their own olive-tree ?

25 For I would not have you ignorant, brethren, of this mystery, ^a(lest you should be wise in your own conceits,) that blindness in part has happened in Israel, until the fulness of the Gentiles should come in,

26 And so all Israel should be saved, as it is written : ^bThere shall come out of Sion he that shall deliver, and shall turn away impiety from Jacob.

27 And this is to them my covenant : when I shall take away their sins.

^a Prov. iii. 7 ; Isa. v. 21.—^b Isa. lix. 20.—^c Wisd. ix. 13 ; Isa. xl. 13 ; 1 Cor. ii. 16.

VER. 16, &c. If the first-fruit (see the Greek word) be holy, so also is the mass ; so also the rest, the product that follows. He alludes to the offering made by the law of the first-fruit, which was to acknowledge that all good things were from God, and to bring a blessing upon the rest.—If the root be holy, so are the branches. By the root, says S. Chrys., he understands Abraham, and the patriarchs, from whom all the Jewish nation proceeded, as branches from that root : and these branches are to be esteemed holy, not only because of the root they proceeded from, but also because they worshipped the true God. And if some, or a great part of these branches, have been broken, they may, as it is said, (ver. 23,) be ingrafted again. And you, Gentiles, ought to remember, that you were of yourselves a wild olive-tree : and it is only by the merciful call of God that you have the happiness to be ingrafted upon the same root of the patriarchs ; and so, by imitating the faith of Abraham, are become his spiritual children, and heirs of the promises, and by that means have been made partakers of the root, and of the sap, and fatness of the sweet olive-tree. Remember that you bear not the root, nor were you the root that was holy ; but the root beareth you ; and that being branches of a wild olive, you ought naturally still to bear bad fruit, though ingrafted on the root of a sweet olive. It is only by the mercies of God, if you bring forth good fruit. Do not then be high-minded, nor boast, but fear, and endeavour to continue in goodness ; lest God also spare not you, but cut you off, as unprofitable branches. And let me tell you, as to the Jews, if they abide not still in unbelief, God is able to ingraft them again into their own olive-tree ; and it seems more easy, that they, who are naturally branches of the sweet olive-tree, should bring forth good fruit, when they shall be ingrafted in their own olive-tree, being of the race of Abraham, to whom the promises were made. Wi.—We see here, that he who standeth by faith, may fall from it ; and therefore must live in fear, and not in the vain presumption and security of modern sectaries. Ch.—The Gentiles are here admonished not to be proud, nor to glory against the Jews ; out to take occasion rather from their fall to fear and to be humble, lest they be cast off. Not that the whole Church of Christ can ever fall from him ; having been secured by so many Divine promises in holy writ ; but that each one in particular may fall : and therefore all in general are to be admonished to beware of that, which may happen to any one in particular. Ch.

VER. 28. According to the gospel, indeed, they are enemies for your sake. That is, enemies both to you, because they see the gospel preached and received by you, and enemies to God, because he has rejected them at present for their wilful blindness : yet according to election, God having once made them his elect, ^aand because of their forefathers, the patriarchs, they are most dear for the sake of 28 According to the gospel, indeed, they are enemies for your sake : but according to election, they are most dear for the sake of the fathers.

29 For the gifts and the calling of God are without repentance.

30 For as you also in times past did not believe God, but now have obtained mercy, through their unbelief ;

31 So these also now have not believed for your mercy, that they also may obtain mercy.

32 For God hath concluded all in unbelief, that he may have mercy on all.

33 O the depth of the riches, of the wisdom, and of the knowledge of God ! How incomprehensible are his judgments, and how unsearchable his ways !

34 For who hath known the mind of the Lord ? Or who hath been his counsellor ?

35 Or who hath first given to him, and recompense shall be made him ?

36 For of him, and by him, and in him, are all things : to him be glory for ever. Amen.

CHAP. XII.

Lessons of Christian virtues.

I BESEECH you, therefore, brethren, by the mercy of God, ^athat you present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, pleasing to God, your reasonable service.

2 And be not conformed to this world : but be reformed in the newness of your mind : ^athat you may prove what is the good, and the acceptable, and the perfect will of God.

3 For I say, through the grace that is given me, to all that are among you, not to be more wise than it behoveth to be wise, but to be wise unto sobriety : ^aand according as God hath divided to every one the measure of faith.

the fathers : for the gifts and the calling of God are without repentance, inasmuch as God is unchangeable, and his promises, made absolutely, cannot fail. Wi.

VER. 30, &c. As you also in times past did not believe God, but now have obtained mercy through their unbelief, which was an occasion of God's sending his preachers to you : but the cause of your salvation is God's mercy.—That they also may obtain mercy. That is, God has permitted their incredulity, that being a greater object of pity, he may show greater mercy in converting them by the free gift of his grace.—For God hath concluded † all, that is, has permitted, at different times, both Gentiles and Jews, to fall into a state of unbelief, that the salvation of all may be known to come, not from themselves, but as an effect of his mercy and grace. Wi.—He hath found all nations, both Jews and Gentiles, in unbelief and sin ; not by his causing, but by the abuse of their own free-will ; so that their calling and election are purely owing to his mercy. Ch.

VER. 33–36. O the depth, &c.—How incomprehensible are his judgments, &c.—Who hath first given to him, and recompence shall be made him? That is, no one, by any merit on his part, can first deserve God's favours and mercy, by which he prevents us.—For of him, from God, or from Jesus Christ, as God, and by him, who made, preserves, and governs all things, and in him, with our continual dependence : for in him we live, we move, and we are. In the Greek it is, unto him, † to signify he is also our last end. See the notes, John i. Wi.

CHAP. XII. VER. 1. With this chapter S. Paul begins his second part, in which he gives us most excellent lessons of morality, after which every Christian should aim to form his life, and thus resemble Jesus Christ and his saints. A.—That you present your bodies a living sacrifice.—Your reasonable service, or worship, ^afrom you ; nothing being more reasonable, than for men to serve God with their souls and bodies, &c. Wi.

VER. 3. To be wise unto sobriety. Not pretending to be more wise, or more knowing than you are.—As God hath divided to every one the measure of faith

4 For as in one body we have many members, but all the members have not the same office :

5 So we, being many, are one body in Christ, and each one, members one of another.

8 He that exhorteth in exhorting, he that giveth with simplicity, he that ruleth with solicitude, he that sheweth mercy with cheerfulness.

9 Love without dissimulation. ^a Hating that which is evil, adhering to that which is good :

10 ^b Loving one another with brotherly love ; in honour preventing one another :

11 In solicitude not slothful : in spirit fervent : serving the Lord :

12 Rejoicing in hope : patient in tribulation ; instant in prayer :

13 Communicating to the necessities of the saints : pursuing hospitality.

14 Bless them that persecute you : bless, and curse not.

15 Rejoice with them that rejoice, weep with them that weep :

16 Being of one mind one to another : not high-minded, but condescending to the humble. Be not wise in your own conceits :

17 Render to no man evil for evil : ^a provide things good, not only in the sight of God, but also in the sight of all men.

18 ^c If it be possible, as much as is in you, have peace with all men.

19 ^d Revenge not yourselves, my dearly beloved : but but give place to wrath, for it is written : ^e Revenge is mine, I will repay, saith the Lord.

20 ^b But if thy enemy be hungry, give him to eat : if he thirst, give him drink : for, doing this, thou shalt heap coals of fire on his head.

21 ^f Be not overcome by evil, but overcome evil by good.

The sense by what follows is, that every one make the best use, for the glory of God, and the good of his neighbour, of the gifts and graces which he hath received together with the faith of Christ ; i. e. of prophecy, or the gift of interpreting past prophecies, or of foretelling things to come, of exhorting, of ministering as to those functions which belong to the ministers of the gospel, &c. VER. 20. Thou shalt heap coals of fire on his head. S. Jer. and S. Aug., by coals of fire, understand kindness and benefits, which shall touch the heart, and inflame the affections even of thy enemies, which shall make them sorry for what they have done, and become thy friends. Wi.

Lessons of obedience to superiors, and mutual charity.

LET ^k every soul be subject to higher powers : for there is no power but from God : and those that are, are ordained of God.

2 Therefore he that resisteth the power, resisteth the ordinance of God, and they that resist, purchase to themselves damnation.

3 For rulers are not a terror to the good work, but to the evil. Wilt thou then not be afraid of the power ? Do that which is good : and thou shalt have praise from the same.

4 For he is the minister of God to thee for good. But if thou do that which is evil, fear : for he beareth not the sword in vain. For he is the minister of God : and avenger to execute wrath upon him that doth evil.

5 Wherefore be subject of necessity, not only for wrath, but also for conscience sake.

6 For therefore also you pay tribute : for they are the ministers of God, serving unto this purpose.

7 ^l Render, therefore, to all their dues : tribute, to whom tribute is due : custom, to whom custom : fear, to whom fear : honour, to whom honour.

8 Owe no man any thing, but that you love one another : for he that loveth his neighbour, hath fulfilled the law.

9 ^m For thou shalt not commit adultery : Thou shalt not kill : Thou shalt not steal : Thou shalt not bear false witness : Thou shalt not covet : and if there be any other commandment, it is comprised in this word : ⁿ Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself.

10 The love of the neighbour worketh no evil. Love, therefore, is the fulfilling of the law.

11 And that knowing the time : that it is now the hour for us to rise from sleep : for now our salvation is nearer than when we believed.

12 The night is passed, and the day is at hand. Let us, therefore, cast off the works of darkness, and put on the armour of light.

lest Christians should misconstrue their Christian liberty, he here teacheth them that every one (even priests and bishops, says S. Chrys.) must be subject and obedient to princes, even to heathens, as they were at that time, as to laws that regard the policy of the civil government, honouring them, obeying them, and their laws, as it is the will of God, because the power they act by is from God. So that to resist them, is to resist God. And every Christian must obey them even for conscience sake. Wi.

VER. 8, 9. But that you love one another. This is a debt, says S. Chrys., which we are always to be paying, and yet always remains, and is to be paid again.—He that loveth his neighbour, hath fulfilled the law. Nay, he that loves his neighbour, as he ought, loves him for God's sake, and so complies with the other great precept of loving God ; and upon these two precepts (as Christ himself taught us Matt. xxii. 40) depend the whole law, and the prophets. Wi.

VER. 10. Love of the neighbour worketh no evil. This, by the Latin, is the true construction ; and not, love worketh no evil to the neighbour, as it might be translated from the Greek. Wi.

VER. 11. Now our salvation is nearer than when we believed. Some will have the sense to be, that our salvation is now nearer, when the gospel is preached, and Christ offers us his graces, than when we believed the Messiah was to come. Others expound it, that the more of our life is spent, we come nearer to the judgment of God, and to the salvation promised in heaven. Wi.

VER. 12. The night is passed. That is, the night of sin and infidelity, in which you lived, before you began to serve Christ. Wi.

CHAP. XIV.

The strong must bear with the weak. Cautions against judging ; and giving scandal.

NOW him, that is weak in faith, take unto you ; not in disputes about thoughts.

2 For one believeth that he may eat all things : but he that is weak, let him eat herbs.

3 Let not him that eateth, despise him that eateth not ; and he that eateth not, let him not judge him that eateth : For God hath taken him to him.

4 † Who art thou that judgest another man's servant ? To his own master he standeth, or falleth : and he shall stand : for God is able to make him stand.

5 For one judgeth between day and day : and another judgeth every day : let every man abound in his own sense.

6 He that regardeth the day, regardeth it unto the Lord : and he that eateth, eateth to the Lord : for he giveth thanks to God. And he that eateth not, to the Lord he eateth not, and giveth thanks to God.

7 For none of us liveth to himself : and no man dieth to himself.

8 For whether we live, we live to the Lord : or whether we die, we die to the Lord. Therefore, whether we live, or whether we die, we are the Lord's.

9 For to this end Christ died, and rose again : that he might be Lord both of the dead and of the living.

10 But why dost thou judge thy brother ? or why dost thou despise thy brother ? † For we shall all stand before the judgment-seat of Christ.

You must charitably bear with the weakness of such converts. Wi.

VER. 2. Eat all things. Viz. without observing the distinction between clean and unclean meats, prescribed by the law of Moses ; which was now no longer obligatory. Some weak Christians, converted from among the Jews, as we here gather from the apostle, made a scruple of eating such meats as were deemed unclean by the law ; such as swine's flesh, &c., which the stronger sort of Christians did eat without scruple. Now the apostle, to reconcile them together, exhorts the former not to judge or condemn the latter, using their Christian liberty ; and the latter to take care not to despise, or scandalize their weaker brethren, either by bringing them to eat what in their conscience they think they should not, or by giving them such offence as to endanger the driving them thereby from the Christian religion. Ch.

VER. 3, 4. God hath taken him to him, that eats of any meats ; he accounts him his servant, and will reward him as such.—God is able to make him stand, and will justify him before his tribunal. Wi.

11 For it is written : † As I live, saith the Lord, every knee shall bow to me : and every tongue shall confess to God.

12 So then every one of us shall render account for himself to God.

13 Let us not, therefore, judge one another any more : but judge this rather, that you put not a stumbling-block or a scandal in your brother's way.

14 I know, and am confident, in the Lord Jesus, that nothing is unclean of itself, but to him that esteemeth any thing to be unclean, to him it is unclean.

15 But if, because of thy meat, thy brother be grieved : thou walkest not now according to charity. † Destroy not him with thy meat, for whom Christ died.

16 Let not then our good be evil spoken of.

17 For the kingdom of God is not meat and drink : but justice, and peace, and joy in the Holy Ghost.

18 For he, that in this serveth Christ, pleaseth God, and is approved of men.

19 Therefore let us follow after the things that are of peace : and keep the things that are of edification one towards another.

20 Destroy not the work of God for meat. † All things indeed are clean : but it is evil for that man who eateth with giving offence.

21 † It is good not to eat flesh, and not to drink wine, nor any thing whereby thy brother is offended, or scandalized, or made weak.

22 Hast thou faith ? Have it to thyself before God. Happy is he that condemneth not himself in that which he alloweth.

23 But he, that discerneth, if he eat, is condemned : because not of faith. For all that is not of faith, is sin.

law. Ch.—And another judgeth every day. That is, thinks every day to be taken away, that was to be kept, merely because ordered under the Jewish law. And now since both they who keep days, or do not keep them ; and they who eat, or who abstain, do these things with a regard to God, and according to their conscience, let no one judge, or condemn the one party, nor the other : in these things, let every man abound in his own sense. It is without grounds that some would pretend from hence, that Christians cannot be bound to fast, or abstain from flesh on certain days. The apostle speaks only of the distinction of meats called clean and unclean, and of fasts or feasts particular to the law of Moses. It does not follow from hence, that the Catholic Church hath not power to command days of fasting, and abstaining, for self-denial or humiliation. Wi.

VER. 11. The apostle here gives a remarkable proof of the Divinity of our Saviour. He could not possibly be more express. He had said in the preceding verse, that all men should appear before the tribunal of Christ ; to prove this assertion, he adduces this testimony of the prophet Isaiahs, “As I live, saith the Lord, every knee shall bend before me, and every tongue shall confess to God,” Isa. xlv. Thus shall all acknowledge the power, the Divinity, and sovereign dominion of Christ, by bending the knee ; and by confessing to him, shall acknowledge him for the master and judge of all mankind. Calmet.

VER. 15. S. Paul repeats this, in almost the same words, in 1 Cor. viii., and plainly gives us to understand that Christ died for the salvation of all men, by supposing a Christian brother, for whom Christ had died, in danger of perishing by the scandal given by another. This supposition could never have been made, if the death of Christ was only offered up for the elect : but we here learn from S. Paul, that they, for whom Christ shed his blood and suffered the death of the cross, may perish eternally ; and therefore all, even the greatest reprobates, may be saved, if they effectually desire it, by virtue of the death of our Divine Redeemer.

VER. 20. Destroy not the work of God for meat. That is, do not hinder your brother's salvation, for whom, whoever he be, Christ died, who may be so offended at the liberty which you take, as to quit the Christian religion ; or you may make him sin against God, by eating, by your example, against his weak conscience. Wi.

VER. 22. Hast thou faith ? † He doth not here mean, saith S. Chrys., a faith to believe Divine truths. But, art thou by faith persuaded in mind and conscience, that to eat meats formerly forbidden, is now lawful, have it within thyself, remain in this faith and conscience, but make it not appear, when it is prejudicial to thy weak brother.

VER. 23. He that discerneth, or who judgeth that he ought to abstain from

CHAP. XV.

He exhorts them to be all of one mind: and promises to come and see them.

NOW we that are stronger, ought to bear the infirmities of the weak, and not to please ourselves.

2 Let every one of you please his neighbour for his good, unto edification.

3 For Christ did not please himself, but as it is written: “The reproaches of them that reproached thee, fell upon me.

4 For what things soever were written, were written for our instruction: that, through patience, and the comfort of the Scriptures, we might have hope.

5 Now the God of patience, and of comfort, ^bgrant you to be of one mind one towards another, according to Jesus Christ:

6 That with one mind, and with one mouth, you may glorify God and the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ.

7 Wherefore receive one another: as Christ also hath received you to the honour of God.

8 For I say that Christ Jesus was minister of the circumcision for the truth of God, to confirm the promises made to the fathers.

9 But that the Gentiles are to glorify God for his mercy, as it is written: “Therefore will I confess to thee, O Lord, among the Gentiles, and will sing to thy name.

10 And again he saith: Rejoice, ye Gentiles, with his people.

11 And again: “Praise the Lord, all ye Gentiles: and magnify him, all ye people.

12 And again Isaiah saith: “There shall be a root of Jesse: and he that shall rise up to rule the Gentiles, in him the Gentiles shall hope.

13 Now the God of hope fill you with all joy and peace in believing: that you may abound in hope, and in the power of the Holy Ghost.

14 And I myself also, my brethren, am assured of you, that you also are full of love, replenished with all knowledge, so that you are able to admonish one another.

15 But I have written to you, brethren, more boldly such meats, if he eat, is self-condemned, because he acts not according to his faith. For whatever a man doth, and is not according to what he believeth he may do, or whatever is against a man's conscience, is sinful in him. Wi.—Discerneth. That is, distinguisheth between meats, and eateth against his conscience, what he deems unclean.—Of faith. By faith is here understood judgment and conscience: to act against which is always a sin. Ch.

CHAP. XV. VER. 1, &c. We that are stronger, &c. The apostle goes on with his exhortation not to scandalize, or offend such as are weak, and not well instructed in faith. Wi.

VER. 7. Receive one another, in the spirit of charity, peace, patience, as Christ also hath received you, and bore with your infirmities. Wi.

VER. 8. Christ Jesus was minister of the circumcision. He calls our Saviour the minister of circumcision, that is, of the Jews, because he appeared amongst them, dwelt amongst them, and himself preached amongst them. This was a privilege which the Gentiles did not enjoy, having never seen nor heard Jesus Christ, since he confined his preaching to the strayed sheep of the house of Israel; and this, to accomplish the promises made to their fathers. Calmet.

VER. 15, &c. I have written to you, brethren, more boldly, &c. S. Chrys. admires with what mildness he addresses himself to them, yet puts them in mind, that he is the minister, and the apostle of the Gentiles, in which he may have reason to glory, or boast.—Sanctifying the gospel of God, preaching it in a holy in some sort, as putting you in mind: because of the grace which is given me from God, 16 That I should be the minister of Christ Jesus among the Gentiles; sanctifying the gospel of God, that the oblation of the Gentiles may be made acceptable, and sanctified in the Holy Ghost.

17 I have, therefore, glory in Christ Jesus towards God.

18 For I dare not speak of any of those things which Christ worketh not by me, for the obedience of the Gentiles, by word and by deeds, 19 By the virtue of signs and wonders, in the power of the Holy Ghost; so that from Jerusalem, round about as far as to Illyricum, I have fully preached the gospel of Christ.

20 And I have so preached this gospel, not where Christ was named, lest I should build upon another man's foundation; but as it is written:

21 “They to whom he was not spoken of, shall see, and they that have not heard, shall understand.

22 For which cause also I was hindered very much from coming to you, and have been kept away till now.

23 But now having no more place in these countries, and having a great desire these many years past to come to you,

24 When I shall begin to take my journey into Spain, I hope that as I pass, I shall see you, and be brought on my way thither by you, if first, in part, I shall have enjoyed you.

25 But now I shall go to Jerusalem, to minister to the saints.

26 For it hath pleased them of Macedonia, and Achaia, to make some contribution for the poor saints who are in Jerusalem.

27 For it hath pleased them: and they are their debtors. ^eFor if the Gentiles have been made partakers of their spiritual things, they ought also in carnal things to minister to them.

28 When, therefore, I shall have accomplished this, and consigned to them this fruit, I will come by you into Spain.

manner, that the Gentiles may be sanctified by it. Wi.—To be the minister of Jesus Christ among the nations, exercising in their regard the rite of sacrifice, as we read in the Greek, ἱερουργεῖντα.—For I dare not, I shall forbear to speak of any thing but my labours; I need not mention the power of miracles and wonders, which the Holy Ghost hath done by me in many places, from Jerusalem to Illyricum, in places where Christ had not been preached by others. And now having no more place, nor occasion to preach in these countries, when I begin my journey to Spain, &c., by which, it appears, he designed, at least to go into Spain. Wi.

VER. 24. It is a matter of dispute, whether S. Paul ever executed this his design of visiting Spain. The proofs of the Spaniards, who consider it as certain, are by no means unanswerable. There remain no certain monuments of this journey of his. The proof taken from the words of S. Clement, who lived at Rome in the time of S. Paul, is not certain, since he only says, that S. Paul came to the very extremities of the west. It is a subject on which commentators appear pretty equally divided. Calmet.

VER. 25—28. But I shall go to Jerusalem, &c. By this S. Paul is thought to have written this Epistle from Corinth, when he was about to set forward for Jerusalem, with the charities collected in Achaia and Macedonia, for the poor Christians in Judea. This he calls to minister to the poor saints, or to be serviceable to them. And to exhort others to the like charitable contributions, he says, (ver. 27,) they are their debtors; that the converted Gentiles are debtors to the converts, who had been Jews, as having been made partakers of the promises, particularly made to the people of the Jews, and sharers of those spiritual blessings, which Christ promised to the Jews, but were also conferred upon the Gentiles. He looks upon it, therefore, reasonable, that they relieve the Jews in their temporal wants. The apostle says, he goes to consign to them this fruit, to deliver to them these contributions. Wi.

29 And I know, that when I come to you, I shall come in the abundance of the blessing of the gospel of Christ.

30 I beseech you, therefore, brethren, through our Lord Jesus Christ, and by the charity of the Holy Ghost, that you assist me in your prayers for me to God.

31 That I may be delivered from the unbelievers that are in Judea, and that the oblation of my service may be acceptable in Jerusalem to the saints ;

32 That I may come to you with joy, by the will of God, and may be refreshed with you.

33 Now the God of peace be with you all. Amen.

CHAP. XVI.

He concludes with salutations, bidding them beware of all that should oppose the doctrine they had learnt.

AND I commend to you Phœbe, our sister, who is in the ministry of the church that is in Cenchrea :

2 That you receive her in the Lord, as becometh saints : and that you assist her in whatsoever business she shall have need of you. For she also hath assisted many, and myself also.

3 Salute ^a Prisca, and Aquila, my helpers in Christ Jesus,

5 And the church which is in their house. Salute Epænetus, my beloved, who is the first-fruits of Asia, in Christ.

6 Salute Mary, who hath laboured much among you.

7 Salute Andronicus, and Junias, my kinsmen and fellow captives : who are renowned among the apostles, who also were in Christ before me.

8 Salute Ampliatus, most beloved to me in the Lord.

9 Salute Urbanus, our helper in Christ Jesus, and Stachys, my beloved.

10 Salute Apelles, approved in Christ.

CHAP. XVI. VER. 1. I commend, &c. He concludes with a number of salutations, to show his affection for them.—Phæbe, who is in the ministry, or employed in the ministry, as women, called diaconissæ, used to be, privately instructing catechumens, assisting particularly at the baptizing of women, distributing charities, &c. Wi.

VER. 4. It is not exactly known to what the apostle here refers. Orig. thinks that they delivered the apostle from the snares of the Jews. Others, that they exposed themselves for him in the sedition raised at Corinth, or in that at Ephesus, when he was in such danger, on account of the outcry of the silversmiths. The obligations of the Churches of the Gentiles towards them must be understood of the hospitality, which these faithful servants of Christ exercised to all. Calmet.—Τὸν ἐαυτῶν τράχηλον ὑπέθηκεν, a proverbial expression, as in Latin, præbere servicos, caput obicere periculis, to support any thing, or person, that is in a sinking way, or in great danger.

VER. 5. This means the assembly of Christians, who probably resorted to the house of Prisca and Aquila, as to a place of retreat, and there held their religious assemblies. Or it may mean their family only, which was as regular and holy the Lord. Salute Persis, the dearly beloved, who hath much laboured in the Lord.

13 Salute Rufus, chosen in the Lord, and his mother and mine.

14 Salute Asyncritus, Phlegon, Hermas, Patrobas, Hermes, and the brethren who are with them.

15 Salute Philologus, and Julia, Nereus, and his sister, and Olympias : and all the saints who are with them.

16 Salute one another with a holy kiss. All the churches of Christ salute you.

17 Now I beseech you, brethren, to mark them who cause dissensions and offences, contrary to the doctrine which you have learned, and avoid them.

18 For they that are such, serve not Christ, our Lord, but their own belly : and by pleasing speeches, and good words, seduce the hearts of the innocent.

19 For your obedience is published in every place. I rejoice, therefore, in you. But I would have you to be wise in good, and simple in evil.

20 And may the God of peace crush satan speedily under your feet. The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you.

21 ^b Timothy, my fellow labourer, saluteth you, and Lucius, and Jason, and Sosipater, my kinsmen.

22 I, Tertius, who wrote this epistle, salute you in the Lord.

23 Caius, my host, and the whole church, saluteth you. Erastus, the treasurer of the city, saluteth you, and Quartus, a brother.

24 The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you all. Amen.

25 Now to him that is able to establish you, according to my gospel, and the preaching of Jesus Christ, according to the revelation of the mystery kept secret from eternity,

26 (Which now is made manifest by the Scriptures of the prophets, according to the commandment of the eternal God, for the obedience of faith,) known among all nations, as an assembly of saints. The apostle, in another place, salutes the Church in the house of Nymphæa, and writing to Philemon, salutes the Church in his house. 1 Cor. xvi. 19.

VER. 16. Thus the primitive Christians expressed their concord and benevolence, as also their perfect equality. For it was customary with the Persians, and all oriental nations, to salute only their equals thus ; though, to their inferiors, they presented their hand to be kissed. S. Clem. Pædog. and Polus.

VER. 17. The apostle does not here say that these men caused scandals contrary to the Scripture, but contrary to the doctrine delivered to them : this place, therefore, is an argument in favour of tradition. Estius.

VER. 22. This Tertius was the amanuensis or secretary of S. Paul, and wrote this Epistle as S. Paul dictated. It is not on that account less Divinely inspired than the rest. Estius.

VER. 25—27. Now to him that is able, &c. These three last verses, in diverse Greek copies, were found at the end of the 14th chapter, where we find them expounded by S. Chrysostom Wi.

FIRST EPISTLE OF S. PAUL, THE APOSTLE

TO THE CORINTHIANS.

CORINTH was the capital of Achaia, a very rich and populous city, where S. Paul had preached a year and a half, and converted a great many. See Acts xviii. 10. Now having received a letter from them, (chap. vii. 1,) and being informed of divers disputes and divisions among them, (chap. i. 11,) he wrote this letter to them, and sent it by the same persons, Stephanas, Fortunatus, and Achaicus, who had brought him their letter, chap. xvi. 17. It was written about the year 56, not from Philippi, as it is commonly marked at the end of the Greek copies, but rather from Ephesus. The subject and main design of this Epistle, was to take away the divisions among them about the talents and merits of those who had baptized and preached to them, and to settle divers matters of ecclesiastical discipline. Wi.—S. Paul having planted the faith in Corinth, where he had preached a year and a half, and converted a great many, went to Ephesus. After being there three years, he wrote this First Epistle to the Corinthians, and sent it by the same persons, Stephanas, Fortunatus, and Achaicus, who had brought their letter to him. It was written about twenty-four years after our Lord's ascension, and contains several matters appertaining to faith and morals, and also to ecclesiastical discipline. Ch.

CHAPTER I.

He reproveth their dissensions about their teachers: the world was to be saved by preaching of the cross, and not by human wisdom or eloquence.

PAUL, called to be an apostle of Jesus Christ, by the will of God, and Sosthenes, a brother,

2 To the church of God that is at Corinth, to them that are sanctified in Christ Jesus, called to be saints, with all that invoke the name of our Lord Jesus Christ, in every place of theirs and ours.

3 Grace to you, and peace from God, our Father, and from the Lord Jesus Christ.

4 I give thanks to my God always for you, for the grace of God, that is given you in Christ Jesus:

5 That in all things you are made rich in him, in every word, and in all knowledge:

6 As the testimony of Christ was confirmed in you:

7 So that nothing is wanting to you in any grace, waiting for the manifestation of our Lord Jesus Christ.

8 Who also will confirm you unto the end without crime, in the day of the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ.

9 * God is faithful: by whom you are called unto the fellowship of his Son, Jesus Christ, our Lord.

10 Now I beseech you, brethren, by the name of our Lord Jesus Christ, that you all speak the same thing, and that there be no schisms among you: but that you be perfect in the same mind, and in the same judgment.

11 For it hath been signified unto me, my brethren, of you, by those who are of the house of Chloe, that there are contentions among you.

12 Now this I say, that every one of you saith: I indeed am of Paul: and I am of Apollo: and I of Cephas: and I of Christ.

13 Is Christ divided? Was Paul crucified for you? or were you baptized in the name of Paul?

14 I give God thanks, that I baptized none of you, but Crispus and Caius:

15 Lest any should say that you were baptized in my name.

16 And I baptized also the household of Stephanas: besides, I know not whether I baptized any other.

17 For Christ sent me not to baptize, but to preach the gospel: not with wisdom of speech, lest the cross of Christ should be made void.

18 For the word of the cross, to them indeed that perish, is foolishness; but to them who are saved, that is, to us, it is the power of God.

19 For it is written: 'I will destroy the wisdom of CHAP. I. VER. 1. Paul, called to be an apostle. S. Paul had preached to the Corinthians, and had remained a long time with them, to instruct and confirm them in the faith. During his absence the faithful of Corinth were divided into several parties, on occasion of some new teachers, who had come amongst them. Calmet.—It was to heal the wounds caused by these divisions that the present Epistle was written. S. Thom. A.—And Sosthenes. There are various conjectures made concerning the person S. Paul here mentions. The common opinion is, that he was a great sufferer for the faith at Corinth, and S. Paul here mentions him as a man worthy their imitation. Calmet.

VER. 4. *That is given you in, or by, Christ Jesus. Where we may take notice, with S. Chrys., for the understanding of other places, that in is many times put for by or through. Wi.

VER. 5. Rich in him, in every word. Which, according to the style of the Scriptures, may signify in every thing. Wi.

VER. 6. As the testimony of Christ, what Christ testified and taught, was confirmed in you, that is, your faith in Christ hath been confirmed by those graces and gifts which you have received from the Holy Ghost at your baptism, and when by imposition of hands you were confirmed by me, or some other bishop. Wi.

VER. 10, &c. That there be no schisms . . . contentions, &c. To hinder these was the chief design of this letter; one saying, I am of Paul, &c., each party bragging of their master, by whom they had been baptized, and made Christians. I am of Apollo, the eloquent preacher; and I of Cephas, the head of the apostles, and of the whole Church; whilst others, the only party not to be blamed, contented themselves with saying, and I am of Christ.

VER. 11, 12. Chloe was a Christian woman of Corinth. Apollo is the person mentioned, Acts xviii. 24, &c. Cephas is S. Peter, so called in the Syriac tongue. V.

VER. 14. I give God thanks, that I baptized none of you, but, &c. It is strange that Quakers should from hence pretend, that S. Paul condemned baptism, when he only tells them he is glad they were baptized by some other, rather than by him, lest they should say, they were baptized in his name, or think that baptism had a greater virtue when given by a minister of greater sanctity; whereas it is Christ only, who is the chief minister, who gives grace in baptism, and in other sacraments. This makes him say, Was Paul crucified for you? &c. He tells them the occasion why he baptized few, because he was sent chiefly to preach, and to be their apostle, whereas other inferior ministers were employed in baptizing. Wi.

VER. 17, &c. Not to baptize. That is, the first and principal intent in my vocation to the apostleship, was to preach the gospel before the Gentiles, and kings, and the children of Israel. Acts ix. 15. To baptize is common to all, but to preach is peculiarly the function of an apostle. Est. Menoc. Grot.

VER. 18. For the word of the cross. That is, the preaching that the Son of God, both God and man, died nailed to an infamous cross, is folly, is looked upon as ridiculous and incredible, by all obstinate unbelievers that perish. But it is received, as the work of God, and an effect of his Divine power, by such as are saved. Wi.

VER. 19, 20. I will destroy the wisdom of the wise. I will confound the false and mistaken wisdom of the great and wise philosophers, of the learned doctors or scribes, of the curious searchers of the secrets of nature.—Hath not God made foolish the wisdom of this world, by the means he hath made use of to convert the wise: and the prudence of the prudent I will reject.

20 ^a Where is the wise? Where is the scribe? Where is the disputer of this world? Hath not God made foolish the wisdom of this world?

21 For seeing that in the wisdom of God the world by wisdom knew not God: it pleased God by the foolishness of preaching to save them that believe.

22 For now the Jews require signs, and the Greeks seek after wisdom:

23 But we preach Christ crucified, to the Jews a stumbling-block, and to the Gentiles, foolishness:

24 But to them that are called, both Jews, and Greeks, Christ the power of God, and the wisdom of God.

25 For that which appeareth foolish of God, is wiser than men: and that which appeareth weakness of God, is stronger than men.

26 For see your vocation, brethren, that not many are wise according to the flesh, not many mighty, not many noble:

27 But the foolish things of the world hath God chosen, that he may confound the wise: and the weak things of the world hath God chosen, that he may confound the strong:

28 And the mean things of the world, and the things that are contemptible, hath God chosen, and the things that are not, that he might destroy the things that are:

29 That no flesh should glory in his sight.

30 But from him you are in Christ Jesus, who is made to us wisdom, ^afrom God, ^band justice, and sanctification, and redemption.

31 That, as it is written, ^cHe that glorieth, may glory in the Lord.

^a Isa. xxxiii. 18.—^b Jer. xxv. 5.—^c Jer. ix. 23, and 24; 2 Cor. x. 17.

and save the world, particularly by sending his only Son to die upon a cross? the preaching of which seems a folly, &c. Only they who are called, believe Christ, though crucified, to be the power and the wisdom of God. Wi.

VER. 21. For seeing that in the wisdom of God, &c. That is, by the works of the Divine wisdom, by the visible creatures of this world, and the effects of his providence, the world had not wisdom, or was not wise enough, to know, and worship God, as they might, and ought to have done: it pleased God to show his power, by the foolishness of preaching, by sending illiterate men to preach a God crucified, which to human wisdom seems a folly, and to save men by this belief. Wi.

VER. 25. Foolish. That is to say, what appears foolish to the world in the ways of God, is indeed most wise: and what appears weak, is indeed above all the strength and comprehension of man. Ch.

VER. 26—28. Vocation is here used for the called, as Rom. iii. 30, circumcision for the circumcised. (ibid. xi. 7.) election for the elected. V.—Consider your manner of being called; not many, hitherto, of those who have believed, or of those who have preached the gospel, are wise according to the flesh, or as to worldly wisdom; and in the esteem of men, not many mighty, not many noble. God hath chosen such as are looked upon as illiterate, without power, without riches, without human wisdom, to confound the great and wise men: He hath chosen the things that are not, that is, says S. Chrys., men reputed as nothing, of no consideration, to confound, to destroy, to make subject to him and to the gospel, men, who had the greatest worldly advantages, that no flesh, no men how great, wise, rich, or powerful soever, might glory in his sight, or attribute their call and their salvation to their own merits. Wi.—And the mean things. In the beginning of Christianity, it was frequently objected to the Christians, that they had none but men of the basest extraction. The emperor Julian likewise made the Catholics the same reproach. Grot.—But this objection was not founded; for we find many persons of consideration mentioned in the Scriptures, who had embraced Christianity. Witness, ver. 1 of this chap., Eusthenes, the head of the synagogue at Corinth, and some in the very palace of Caesar.

VER. 29. Glory in his sight. God wished it to be known, that the establishment of his Church was not the work of human wisdom or power, but of the omnipotent power of his Divinity. Calmet.

CHAP. II.

His preaching was not in loftiness of words: but in spirit and power. And the wisdom he taught was not to be understood by the worldly wise, or sensual man, but only by the spiritual man.

AND I, brethren, when I came to you, ^dcame not in loftiness of speech or of wisdom: declaring to you the testimony of Christ.

2 For I judged not myself to know any thing among you, but Jesus Christ, and him crucified.

3 ^eAnd I was with you in weakness, and in fear, and in much trembling:

4 ^fAnd my speech, and my preaching was not in the persuasive words of human wisdom, but in the showing of the spirit and power:

5 That your faith might not stand on the wisdom of men, but on the power of God.

6 Howbeit, we speak wisdom among the perfect: yet not the wisdom of this world, neither of the princes of this world, who are destroyed:

7 But we speak the wisdom of God in a mystery, which is hidden, which God predestinated before the world, unto our glory,

8 Which none of the princes of this world knew: for if they had known it, they would never have crucified the Lord of glory.

9 But as it is written, ^gThe eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither hath it entered into the heart of man, what things God hath prepared for them that love him:

10 But to us God hath revealed them by his Spirit. For the Spirit searcheth all things, even the profound things of God.

11 For what man knoweth the things of a man but the spirit of a man that is in him? So the thing must not think, says S. Chrys., that this made the virtue of S. Paul less commendable. It is natural to every man to fear persecutions and torments. We admire the apostle, who, amidst these fears, was always ready to expose himself, was always fighting, and always victorious. Wi.

^d Supra, i. 17.—^e Acts xviii. 3.—^f 2 Pet. i. 16.—^g Isa. lxiv. 4.

VER. 4. In the showing of the spirit and power, &c. The gifts of the Holy Ghost bestowed on those that believed, and the miracles, which God wrought by his apostles, were the means God made use of to convert the world, which were of much greater force than human eloquence. Wi.

VER. 5. That your faith, &c. Had we employed the subtleties, the reasonings, and eloquence of man, some might perhaps be induced to believe that you had been seduced by artifice. But none can reasonably say so; your faith is founded on the force and evidence of truth, and upon the virtue and power of the Holy Ghost, who has bestowed upon you both the light of knowledge and the fire of love. Theod.

VER. 6, &c. Wisdom among the perfect. That is, when first we came amongst you, you were incapable of understanding the great mysteries of our religion; we therefore preached to you Christ crucified (Calmet); but to the true perfect disciples of Christ we reveal the most sacred mysteries. S. Chrys.—By wisdom, here, seems to be understood a more sublime doctrine concerning the most abstruse mysteries of faith, which the ignorant could not understand. To the same purpose, he tells them in the next chapter, and in the 5th chapter to the Hebrews, that milk is the proper food of little children, not solid meat, which is proper for those that are perfect.—Yet we speak not the wisdom of this world, nor of the great men, and princes of this world, because the doctrine of the Christian faith, which we preached, is not esteemed wisdom, but folly by them, who pretend to worldly wisdom.—We speak then in a mystery, or after a mysterious manner, according to the capacity of those that hear us, the great wisdom of God, which hidden, and not understood by the wise men of this world, God hath manifested by the incarnation of his Son, and by our redemption; which mystery, and which wisdom, none of the princes of this world knew, that is, the devils, according to the common interpretation; or Pilate, Herod, Caiaphas, &c., according to S. Chrys.; or they would never have crucified, nor have permitted others to crucify, the Lord of glory, Jesus Christ, who by his Divine person is truly the Lord of glory. See S. Aug. i. 1, de Trin. c. 12, &c. Wi.

VER. 10. But to us God hath revealed them by his Spirit; these mysteries, and secrets of the Divine wisdom.—For the Spirit searcheth all things; the Divine Spirit, the Holy Ghost, searcheth all things, and none but this Spirit of God, that is this Spirit, which is God, knoweth the things that are of God, as none but the also that are of God no man knoweth, but the Spirit of God.

12 Now we have received not the spirit of this world, but the Spirit that is of God, that we may know the things that are given us from God:

13 Which things also we speak, not in the learned words of human wisdom, but in the doctrine of the Spirit, comparing spiritual things with spiritual.

14 But the sensual man perceiveth not the things that are of the Spirit of God: for it is foolishness to him, and he cannot understand: because it is spiritually examined.

15 But the spiritual man judgeth all things: and he himself is judged by no one.

16 For who hath known the mind of the Lord, that he may instruct him? But we have the mind of Christ.

CHAP. III.

They must not contend about their teachers, who are but God's ministers; and accountable to him. Their works shall be tried by fire.

AND I, brethren, could not speak to you as to spiritual, but as to carnal. As to little ones in Christ,

2 I gave you milk to drink, not meat: for you were not able as yet: but neither indeed are you now able: for you are yet carnal.

3 For, whereas, there is among you envying and contention; are you not carnal, and walk according to man?

4 For while one saith, I indeed am of Paul: and spirit that is in man, knoweth the things of man, knoweth his thoughts and interior affections. But by the Spirit of God, we may understand the spirit of grace, of knowledge, of prophecy, which God hath given to his faithful, and particularly to his apostles, to raise them to a higher knowledge of the Divine mysteries. Wi.

^a Supra, i. 17, and ii. 1 and 4; 2 Pet. i. 16.—^b Wisd. ix. 13; Isa. xl. 13;

VER. 13. Which mysteries and Divine truths, we apostles (even when we speak to the more perfect sort of men) deliver not in the learned words of human wisdom, not in fine language, studied periods, and sentences ranged by the art of rhetoric, but in the doctrine of the Spirit, that is, as the Spirit of God within us teacheth us for the good of those that hear us.—Comparing spiritual things with spiritual, that is, treating of spiritual things with persons that are more spiritual and more perfect, adapting our discourses to the capacity of those we speak to. Wi. Calmet.

VER. 14, 15. But the sensual man, &c. They who are led away by sensual pleasures, do not even perceive or understand spiritual things; they seem foolish to them, and a folly to seek after them; because such things must be spiritually examined, that is, examined by the Spirit of God, which they have not.—But the spiritual man judgeth all things, passeth a right judgment, not only of the things of this life, as carnal men can do, but even of spiritual things, which concern his eternal salvation.—And he himself is judged by no one, that is, by no one who is not spiritual, or who is not taught by the Spirit of God to pass a right judgment: the sense also may be, that he cannot be justly blamed or condemned by any worldly man, who knows not how to judge of such spiritual things. Wi.—The sensual man is either he who is taken up by sensual pleasures, with carnal and worldly affections: or he who measureth Divine mysteries by natural reason, sense, and human wisdom only. Now such a man has little or no notion of the things of God. Whereas the spiritual man, who in the mysteries of religion, takes not human sense for his guide; but submits his judgment to the decisions of the Church, which he is commanded to hear and obey. For Christ hath promised to remain to the end of the world with his Church, and to direct her in all things by the Spirit of truth. Ch.

VER. 16. For who among the sensual men of the world, hath known the mind of the Lord, so as to be able to instruct him, or them, whom he guides by his Spirit.—But we, whom he has chosen to be his apostles, have the mind of Christ; having been taught and instructed by the Spirit of Christ. Some enthusiasts and fanatics pretend from this passage of S. Paul, that they, being led and inspired by the Spirit, can be judged by no one in matters of faith and religion. They pervert and wrest the words of S. Paul, as they do also other Scriptures, to their own perdition. 2 Pet. iii. 16. First, because no one knows by his pretended private spirit, that he is truly such a spiritual man, who has the Spirit of God in him. And many have too much reason to know by their sensual, carnal lives, that they have it not. Secondly, S. Paul here speaks only of spiritual men, in opposition to sensual men, and only says that they who are spiritual, have the spirit of discretion to judge what things are spiritual, and what are not; and that none can judge rightly of these matters but they who are spiritual, guided by the Spirit.

another, I am of Apollo: are you not men? What then is Apollo, and what is Paul?

5 The ministers of him whom you have believed: and to every one as the Lord hath given.

6 I have planted, Apollo watered: but God gave the increase.

7 So then neither he that planteth is any thing, nor he that watereth: but God who giveth the increase.

8 Now he who planteth, and he who watereth, are one. And every man shall receive his own reward according to his own labour.

9 For we are God's coadjutors: you are God's husbandry, you are God's building.

10 According to the grace of God, that is given to me, as a wise architect, I have laid the foundation: and another buildeth thereon. But let every man take heed how he buildeth thereupon.

11 For no one can lay another foundation but that which is laid: which is Christ Jesus.

12 Now if any man build upon this foundation, gold, silver, precious stones, wood, hay, stubble:

13 Every man's work shall be made manifest: for the day of the Lord shall declare it, because it shall be revealed by fire: and the fire shall try every man's work, of what sort it is.

14 If any man's work abide, which he hath built there upon: he shall receive a reward.

15 If any man's work burn, he shall suffer loss: but he himself shall be saved, yet so as by fire.

Rom. xi. 34.—Psal. lxi. 13; Matt. xvi. 27; Rom. ii. 6; Gal. vi. 5.

Thirdly, as to controversies about religion, the proper spiritual judges appointed by our Saviour, Christ, are the bishops, whom he has appointed to govern his Church, with an entire submission of every man's private judgment, and private spirit, to the judgment of the Catholic Church, which he has commanded us to hear and obey, with which he hath promised to remain to the end of the world, and to direct his Church in all things by the Spirit of truth. Wi.

CHAP. III. VER. 3. And walk according to man? As carnal and sensual men, as long as there are jealousies and divisions among you. Wi.

VER. 7, 8. According to his own labour. God does not recompense his servants according to the success of their labours, because their success depends upon him alone; but he recompenses them according to their sufferings and diligence in his service; for, whilst he crowns the labour of his apostles with success, he crowns his own work. S. Chrys.—This text most evidently proves that good works proceeding from grace are meritorious, and that the rewards in heaven are different, accordingly as God sees just to appropriate them. The Greek word here employed is μισθος, (merces,) or wages. See 1 Tim. v. 18; Apoc. xxii. 12; Matt. xvi. 27. It is by our union with Jesus Christ that our actions, of themselves without value or merit, become gold, silver, and precious stones. A.

VER. 10. I have laid the foundation well, as a wise architect, not of myself, but according to the grace of God, and the gifts he bestowed upon me: and another, or several others, build upon it, continue the building.—But let every man take heed how he buildeth, and that it be always upon the same foundation, which is Christ Jesus, his faith and his doctrine. Wi.

VER. 12—15. Now if any man build, &c. This is a hard place, says S. Aug., 1. de Fid. et Oper. c. 16, tom. 6, p. 180. The interpreters are divided as to the explication and application of this metaphorical comparison, contained in these four verses. S. Paul speaks of a building, where it is evident, says S. Aug., that the foundation is Christ, or the faith of Christ, and his faith working by charity.—But he himself shall be saved, yet so as by fire. Here the apostle speaks of fire in a more ample signification; of a fire which shall not only try, and examine, but also burn, and punish the builders, who notwithstanding shall also, after a time, escape from the fire, and be saved by fire, and in the day of the Lord, that is, after this life (for the time of this life is the day of men). Divers of the ancient Fathers, as well as later interpreters, from these words, prove the Catholic doctrine of a purgatory, that is, that many Christians, who die guilty, not of heinous or mortal sins, but of lesser, and what are called venial sins, or to whom a temporal punishment for the sins they have committed still remains due, before they can be admitted to a reward in heaven, (into which nothing defiled or unclean can enter,) must suffer some punishments for a time, in some place, which is called Purgatory, and in such a manner as is agreeable to the Divine justice, before their reward in heaven. These words of the apostle, the Latin Fathers in the Council of Florence² brought against the Greeks to prove purgatory, to which the Greeks (who did not deny a purgatory, or a third place, where souls guilty of lesser sins were to suffer for a time) made answer, that these words of S. Paul were expounded by S. Chrys.

16 Know you not that you are the temple of God, and that the Spirit of God dwelleth in you?

17 But if any man violate the temple of God: him shall God destroy. *For the temple of God is holy, which you are.

18 Let no man deceive himself: if any man among you seem to be wise in this world, let him become a fool that he may be wise.

19 For the wisdom of this world is foolishness with God. For it is written: *I will catch the wise in their own craftiness.

20 And again: *The Lord knoweth the thoughts of the wise, that they are vain.

21 Let no man, therefore, glory in men.

22 For all things are yours, whether it be Paul, or Apollo, or Cephas, or the world, or life, or death, or things present, or things to come: for all are yours:

23 And you are Christ's, and Christ is God's.

CHAP. IV.

God's ministers are not to be judged. He reprehends their boasting of their preachers: and describes the treatment the apostles every where met with.

LET "a man so look upon us as the ministers of Christ, and the dispensers of the mysteries of God.

* Infra, vi. 19; 2 Cor. vi. 16.—b Job v. 13.

and some of their Greek Fathers (which is true) of the wicked in hell, who are said to be saved by fire, inasmuch as they always subsist and continue in those flames, and are not destroyed by them: but this interpretation, as the Latin bishops replied, is not agreeable to the style of the Holy Scriptures, in which, to be saved, both in the Greek and Latin, is expressed the salvation and happiness of souls in heaven. It may not be amiss to take notice that the Greeks, before they met with the Latins at Ferrara, or Florence, did not deny the Catholic doctrine of purgatory. They admitted a third place, where souls guilty of lesser sins suffered for a time, till cleansed from such sins: they allowed that the souls there detained from the vision of God, might be assisted by the prayers of the faithful: they called this purgatory a place of darkness, of sorrow, of punishments, and pains, but they did not allow there a true and material fire, which the Council did not judge necessary to decide and define against them, as appears in the definition of the Council. Conc. Labb., tom. 13, p. 515. Wi.—The fire of which S. Paul here speaks, is the fire of purgatory, according to the Fathers, and all Catholic divines. Calmet.—S. Augustin, expounding Psalm xxxvii. 1, gives the proper distinction between this fire of purgatory, and that of hell: both are punishments, one temporary, the other eternal; the latter to punish us in God's justice, the former to amend us in his mercy.

VER. 16, 17. The Spirit of God dwelleth in you, having received the grace of God at your conversion: you are the holy temple of God: But if any one violate, or profane the temple of God, either by false doctrine, or by any grievous offence, he destroys the spiritual edifice, that was built in his soul upon the faith and grace of God. Wi.

VER. 18—21. Let no man deceive himself. It hence appears, that some of the Corinthians were renowned for that human eloquence which the world so much esteems, and accordingly the apostle discovers to them the danger to which they are exposing themselves, by pursuing their present line of conduct. Calmet.—If any man among you seem to be wise in this world. He hints at some new teachers among them, (not at Apollo,) who to gain the esteem of men, had introduced errors from profane philosophy, or the false principles of human wisdom, which, as he had told them before, was folly in the sight of God. He therefore tells such persons, that to become truly wise, they must become fools, by returning to the simplicity of the gospel-doctrine. Wi.

VER. 22, 23. All things are yours. Are ordained for your good. For this end, I, Apollo, and Cephas have been sent to promote your salvation. The world and all things in it are allowed you, are yours, that by making good use of them, you may save your souls: that death may be to you a passage to a happy eternity, that the things to come may be your eternal reward.

* V. 15. In the Council of Florence, which began at Ferrara, an. 1438. The Greeks at the very first declared they admitted a third place, where souls were punished for a time, which they called a place of darkness and sorrow. See Labb. tom. 13, Con. p. 20. Græci fateantur pœnam temporaneam, quod peccatis obnoxiorum animarum in locum abeant tenebrosos, in locum mœroris, in quod ad tempus, versantur in mœrore et pœnis, εἰς τόπον σκότεινον, καὶ τόπον λύπης, καὶ λυποῦνται μερικῶς.—Again, hæc est inter eos differentia: Græci pœnam, mœrorem, et pœnæ locum asserunt, Itali pœnam, purgationemque per ignem. See again p. 491, Sess. 25, where the Greeks say of such souls, that they are in a middle state, medias autem esse in loco tormentorum, sed sive ignis sit, sive caligo, sive turbo, sive quid aliud, non contendimus. See also the definition of the Council, p. 515, where it is only defined, eorum animas pœnis purgatoris post mortem purgari, et ut a pœnis hujusmodi releventur, prodesse vivorum suffragia, 2 Here now it is required among the dispensers, that a man be found faithful.

3 But as to me, it is a thing of the least account to be judged by you, or by human judgment: for neither do I judge myself.

4 For I am not conscious to myself of any thing: yet in this I am not justified: but he that judgeth me is the Lord.

5 Therefore judge not before the time: until the Lord come, who both will bring to light the hidden things of darkness, and will make manifest the counsels of the heart: and then shall every man have praise from God.

6 But these things, brethren, I have in a figure transferred to myself and to Apollo, for your sakes: that in us you may learn, that one be not puffed up against the other for another, above that which is written.

7 For who distinguisheth thee? And what hast thou that thou hast not received? And if thou hast received, why dost thou glory as if thou hadst not received it?

8 Now you are satiated, now you are become rich you reign without us: and I would to God you did reign that we also might reign with you.

9 For I think that God hath set forth us apostles the last, as it were men destined to death: because v which was the doctrine both of the Greek and Latin Church. See on this place of S. Paul, Bellarm. lib. 1, de Purgatorio, c. 5, Saceron Disn. 6, in 1 ad Corint Estius, a Lapide, &c.

CHAP. IV. VER. 1. Mysteries of God. That is, the dogmas of faith, revealed by the Almighty. Estius.

VER. 3. Or by human judgment. Lit. by human day. The sense, says S. Jerom, is, by any human judgment, or by men, whose judgment is in the day, or time of this life: but God judges in his day, after this life, and chiefly at the last day of judgment.—Neither do I judge myself, so as to look upon myself absolutely certain of the state of my soul, or that I am for certain justified, though I am not conscious to myself of any thing, because I am to be judged by an omniscient God, the great searcher of hearts, who perhaps may discover faults, which I, partial to myself, overlook. Now if S. Paul durst not say he was justified, what presumption is it for others to pretend to an absolute certainty, that they are just in the sight of God! Wi.

VER. 4. For I am not conscious. This great apostle of the Gentiles, though conscious to himself of no breach of duty, still does not dare to call himself just. How different is the conduct of this apostle, from those wicked impostors, who teach that a man is justified by believing himself so! Est.

VER. 6. These things, brethren, I have in a figure transferred to myself and to Apollo. Lit. these things have I transfigured in me and Apollo, that is, I have represented the divisions and disputes among you, as if it were by your contending, whether I, or Apollo, or Cephas were the best preachers, without naming those, as I might do, who are the true causes of these divisions, by striving who should be thought men of the greatest and brightest parts.—That in us, and by our example, who have no such proud disputes, you might learn that one be not puffed up against the other, and above that which is written, against the admonitions given in the Holy Scriptures of being humble: or against what I have now written to you, that we must strive for nothing, but to be the faithful ministers of God, and not seek the esteem of men. Wi.

VER. 7. For who distinguisheth, or hath distinguished, thee from another? He speaks particularly to those proud, vain preachers: if thou hast greater talents than another man, who hath given them to thee, or to any one, but God, who is the giver, and the author of every gift and perfection? Wi.

VER. 8. Now you are satiated, &c. You great, vain preachers, you are rich in every kind, blessed with all gifts, &c. You reign over the minds of the people, without us, you stand not in need of our assistance.—And I would to God you did reign, that we also might reign with you. I wish your reigning and governing the people were well grounded on virtue and truth, that we might be sharers of the like happiness. S. Chrys. takes notice, that S. Paul speaks thus, meaning the contrary, by the figure called irony: and so also S. Chrys. understands the two following verses, as if S. Paul only represented what those vain preachers said with contempt of him, as if he were only an apostle of an inferior rank, not one of the chief, nor of the twelve. And when he says, we are fools for Christ's sake, but you are wise, it is certain the apostles were not fools, nor these preachers whom he blames, wise, especially in Christ. To go about preaching in hunger, in thirst, in nakedness, in want, under afflictions and persecutions, in what they think is to be miserable: they despise such men as the out-cast, the dross,* and the dregs of mankind. (See the Greek text.) Wi.

VER. 9. Made a spectacle. It is evident from the writings of S. Paul, and from innumerable other records, that the apostles were made a spectacle to the world and to men; but now, some one may perhaps ask, were they made are made a spectacle to the world, and to angels, and to men.

10 We are fools for Christ's sake, but you are wise in Christ: we are weak, but you are strong; you are honourable, but we without honour.

11 Even unto this hour we both hunger, and thirst, and are naked, and are buffeted, and have no fixed abode.

12 *And we labour, working with our own hands: we are reviled, and we bless: we are persecuted, and we suffer it.

13 We are ill spoken of, and we intreat: we are made as the refuse of this world, the off-scouring of all even till now.

14 I write not these things to shame you: but I admonish you as my dearest children:

15 For if you have ten thousand instructors in Christ, yet not many fathers. For in Christ Jesus I have begotten you through the gospel:

16 Wherefore, I beseech you, be ye followers of me, as I also am of Christ.

17 For this cause have I sent to you Timothy, who is my dearest son, and faithful in the Lord: who will put you in mind of my ways, which are in Christ Jesus, as teach every where in every church.

18 Some are so puffed up, as though I would not come to you.

19 But I will come to you shortly, if it please the Lord: and will know, not the speech of them who are puffed up, but the power.

20 For the kingdom of God is not in speech, but in power.

21 What will you? shall I come to you with a rod; or in charity, and in the spirit of meekness?

spectacle to angels? S. Chrys., Theod., and many others, think that the apostle is here speaking of the good angels, who behold with pleasure the labours and afflictions of the saints, knowing that it will prove a source of glory; but Estius, Vat., and some others, are of opinion that the wicked angels are here spoken of, who rejoice at the persecutions of God's servants, and wish to revenge themselves for the destruction of their empire.

VER. 14—17. I write not. S. Paul here insinuates to the Corinthians, that they ought to blush with shame for neglecting the apostles, who had suffered so many hardships for them, to follow after teachers void of honour, and to glory in being called the disciples of such men. Estius.—I admonish you as my dearest children, of what is for your good, and I may take this liberty, as being your spiritual father in Christ, by whom you were first made Christians. Wi.

VER. 18, &c. But I will come. The good effect which this letter produced amongst the Corinthians retarded his intended journey, so that he did not go to Corinth till one or two years after this letter was written. He wrote his Second Epistle to the same before he paid them a visit, to apply a soothing remedy to their minds and hearts, sorely afflicted with his charitably severe corrections contained in this his First Epistle. A.—What will you? or what disposition shall I find in you? let it not be necessary for me to use the chastising rod by excommunications, and other spiritual arms, but be so reformed before I come, that I may come to you in the spirit of mildness, as I wish to do. Wi.

CHAP. V. VER. 1. As the like is not among the heathens. This seems to have been the crime of incest, that he took the wife of his father yet living. See 2 Cor. vii. 12. Wi.—S. Chrys., Theod., &c., think that this incestuous person was one of the chiefs of the schism which then reigned at Corinth. This man, say they, was a great orator, with whose eloquence the Corinthians were enchanted, and therefore dissembled a knowledge of his crime, public as it was. The apostle having proved to them the vanity of all human learning, in the preceding chapter,

IT is heard for certain that there is fornication among you, ^b and such fornication, as the like is not among the heathens? that some one hath his father's wife.

2 And you are puffed up: and have not rather mourned, that he might be taken away from among you, who hath done this deed.

3 ^c I indeed absent in body, but present in spirit, have already judged, as though I were present, him that hath so done,

4 In the name of our Lord Jesus Christ, you being gathered together and my spirit, with the power of our Lord Jesus,

5 To deliver such a one to satan for the destruction of the flesh, that the spirit may be saved in the day of our Lord Jesus Christ.

6 Your glorifying is not good. ^d Know you not that a little leaven corrupteth the whole mass?

7 Purge out the old leaven, that you may be a new mass, as you are unleavened. For Christ, our Pasch, is sacrificed.

8 Therefore let us feast, not with the old leaven, nor with the leaven of malice and wickedness, but with unleavened bread of sincerity and truth.

9 I wrote to you in an epistle, not to keep company with fornicators.

10 I mean not with the fornicators of this world, or with the covetous, or the extortioners, or the servers of idols: otherwise you must have gone out of this world.

11 But now I have written to you, not to keep company: if any man that is called a brother be a fornicator, or covetous, or a server of idols, or a railer, or a drunkard, or an extortioner: with such a one not so much as to eat.

12 For what have I to do to judge them that are without? Do not you judge them that are within?

now attacks the incestuous man, and exposes to their view the enormity of his crime. Cahn.

VER. 2. You are puffed up, seem to be unconcerned, to take pride in it, instead of having the man separated from you. Wi.

VER. 3, &c. Have already judged, decreed, and do decree, being present in spirit with you, and with your congregation.—In the name . . . with the power of our Lord Jesus, to deliver such a one to satan by a sentence of excommunication, depriving him of the sacraments, the prayers, and communion, and even of the conversation of the rest of the faithful. And this is said to be done for the destruction, or punishing of the flesh, that the spirit, or soul, may be saved. Wi.—It is the opinion of most of the Greek Fathers, that this man was either really possessed by the devil, or at least struck with such a complaint as a mortification, and humiliation of his body, whilst it served to purify his soul. We have seen from many instances, in Holy Scripture that it was not unusual, in the origin of Christianity, for persons who had fallen into crimes of this nature, to be punished with leath, some grievous sickness, or by being possessed by the devil. But most divines are of opinion that this man was delivered over to the devil, so as to be separated from the communion of the Church. Amb. Est. Just. Menoc.

VER. 6—8. Your glorifying is not good, when you suffer such a scandal among you: you have little reason to boast of your masters, nor even of the gifts and graces you received.—A little leaven corrupteth the whole mass: a public scandal, when not punished, is of dangerous consequence. Wi.

VER. 9, &c. I wrote to you in an epistle. If he does not mean what he has said already in this epistle, it must have been in some other, which he had written to them before, (as some conjecture,) and which is not now extant.—Not to keep company with fornicators, nor with such like public scandalous sinners, not so much as to eat with them. But you must take notice, that I mean, when they are brethren, or Christians, not when they are infidels, for this cannot be avoided, especially by those who are to labour to convert them. Wi.

VER. 12. To judge them that are without. Those who are said by the apostle to be without, are those who have never been converted to the faith, and therefore are not within the jurisdiction of the Church.

13 For them that are without, God will judge. Take away the evil one from among yourselves.

CHAP. VI.

He blames them for going to law before unbelievers. Of sins that exclude from the kingdom of heaven. The evil of fornication.

DARE any of you, having a matter against another, go to law before the unjust, and not before the saints?

2 Know you not that the saints shall judge this world? And if the world shall be judged by you, are you unworthy to judge the smallest matters?

3 Know you not that we shall judge angels? how much more things of this world?

4 If therefore you shall have judgments about the things of the world: set them to judge, who are the most despised in the church.

5 I speak to your shame. Is it so that there is not among you any wise man that is able to judge between his brethren?

6 But brother goeth to law with brother: and that before unbelievers?

7 * Already indeed there is plainly a fault among you, that you have law-suits one with another. Why do you not rather take the injury? why do you not rather suffer the fraud?

8 But you do wrong and defraud: and that to your brethren.

9 Know you not that the unjust shall not possess the kingdom of God? Be not deceived: neither fornicators, nor idolaters, nor adulterers,

10 Nor the effeminate, nor sodomites, nor thieves, nor the covetous, nor drunkards, nor railers, nor extortioners, shall possess the kingdom of God.

11 And such some of you were: but you are washed, but you are sanctified, but you are justified in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ, and in the spirit of our God.

* Matt. v. 39; Luke vi. 29; Rom. xii. 17; 1 Thess. iv. 6.—b Gen. ii. 24; Matt. xix. 5;

VER. 13. Take away. This passage is differently understood by commentators. By some it is understood thus: expel the evil one from among you, that is, the incontinent man. Estius.—By others, it is understood to be spoken in a general sense, meaning, take away the evil of sin from among you. Calmet.

CHAP. VI. VER. 1. Go to law before the unjust. S. Paul here dissuades the new Christians from carrying their differences and causes about their temporal concerns before judges who were infidels, especially seeing the saints and the elect shall one day judge, that is, condemn all the wicked, and even the apostate angels, by approving the sentence, which Christ shall pronounce against them at the day of judgment. Wi.

VER. 3. Judge angels? That is, the wicked angels, the devils. S. Tho. Aqu. VER. 4—7. Set them to judge, who are the most despised in the Church. S. Paul does not here mean to tell the Corinthians that they must choose the most despised and the most ignorant, but he wishes to inform them that if there were none but men of this description in the Church, it would still be much more preferable to appoint these judges than to go to law before idolatrous judges. Estius.—It is plainly a fault, * weakness in you to run to such heathen judges: you should rather bear, and put up with the injuries done to you.—A fault. Law-suits can hardly ever be without a fault, on one side or the other; and oftentimes on both sides. Ch.

VER. 8—11 Defraud . . . your brethren. That is, you still make yourselves much more guilty by the injustices done to one another: for the unjust, and all they who are guilty of such crimes as I have mentioned, shall not possess the kingdom of God. And some of you were guilty of part of them, which have been washed off by your conversion, and your baptism, when you were justified. Wi.

VER. 12 All things are lawful, &c. That is, all indifferent things are indeed lawful, inasmuch as they are not prohibited; but oftentimes they are not expedient; as in the case of law-suits, &c. And much less would it be expedient to be enslaved by an irregular affection to any thing, how indifferent soever. Ch.

VER. 13, &c. Meat for the belly. That is, meat is necessary for the support of nature, though this or that kind of meat be indifferent: and we ought to reflect, that God in a short time will destroy both the meats, and the appetite of eating, and the body shall shortly die, but it shall rise again.—Know you not that your 13 The meat for the belly, and the belly for the meats: but God shall destroy both it and them: but the body is not for fornication, but for the Lord, and the Lord for the body.

14 Now God hath both raised up the Lord, and will raise us up also by his power.

15 Know you not, that your bodies are the members of Christ? shall I, then, taking the members of Christ, make them the members of a harlot? God forbid.

16 Or know you not, that he who adheres to a harlot, is made one body? * For they shall be (saith he) two in one flesh.

17 But he who adheres to the Lord, is one spirit.

18 Fly fornication. Every sin that a man doth, is without the body: but he that committeth fornication sinneth against his own body.

19 Or know you not, that your members are the temple of the Holy Ghost, who is in you, whom you have from God, and you are not your own?

20 * For you are bought with a great price. Glorify and bear God in your body.

Lessons relating to marriage and celibacy. Virginity is preferable to a married state.

NOW concerning the things, whereof you wrote to me: It is good for a man not to touch a woman:

2 But because of fornication, let every man have his own wife, and let every woman have her own husband.

3 * Let the husband render the debt to his wife: and the wife also in like manner to the husband.

4 The wife hath not power over her own body; but the husband. And in like manner the husband also hath not power of his own body; but the wife.

bodies are the members of Christ . . . and the temple of the Holy Ghost. Man consists of soul and body; by baptism he is made a member of that same mystical body, the Church, of which Christ is the head. In baptism both the soul and body are consecrated to God: they are made the temple of the Holy Ghost, inasmuch as the Spirit and grace of God inhabits in men, who are sanctified.—Christ redeemed both our souls and bodies, both which he designs to sanctify, and to glorify hereafter in heaven; so that we must look upon both body and soul as belonging to Christ, and not as our own.—Shall I, then, taking the members of Christ, make them the members of an harlot, by a shameful and unlawful commerce?—Fly fornication. Such sins are chiefly to be avoided by flight, and by avoiding the occasions and temptations. Wi.—We know and we believe that we carry about Jesus Christ in our bodies, but it is the shame and condemnation of a Christian to live as if he neither knew nor believed it. If fornication is a great crime in a pagan, in a Christian it is a species of sacrilege, accompanied with injustice and ingratitude.

* V. 7. Omnino delictum est, ἡττομα, a diminutive, from ἡτρον, minus, a failing, a weakness, a fault.

CHAP. VII. VER. 1. Now concerning. The heads of the Church of Corinth had written to S. Paul, desiring to know whether he thought it more expedient to marry or not. This was a question which the sages of antiquity had frequently taken into consideration. To this question S. Paul here delivers his opinion. Calmet.—Others, with greater probability, suppose the chief question proposed to S. Paul was, whether they were not bound, upon their conversion, to abstain from their infidel wives. S. Jer. cont. Jovin. e. iv. S. Chrys. in hunc locum, hom. 19.—To this he answers in ver. 12 and 13.—It is good. That is, according to the style of the Scriptures, it is better, if we consider the advantage of every particular, &c. Wi.

VER. 2, &c. *But because of fornication, let every man have, and live with his own wife, and not leave her, nor dismiss her. Take notice, that S. Paul speaks these words to those that are already married, and speaks not of the unmarried till the 8th verse. He does not then here exhort every one to marry, but admonishes

5 Defraud not one another, unless, perhaps, by consent, for a time, that you may give yourselves to prayer: and return together again, lest satan tempt you for your incontinency.

6 But I speak this by indulgence, not by commandment.

7 For I would that all men were even as myself: but every one hath his proper gift from God; one after this manner, and another after that.

8 But I say to the unmarried, and to the widows: it is good for them if they so continue, even as I.

9 But if they do not contain themselves, let them marry: for it is better to marry than to burn.

10 But to them that are married, not I but the Lord commandeth, that the wife depart not from her husband:

11 And if she depart, that she remain unmarried, or be reconciled to her husband. And let not the husband put away his wife.

12 For to the rest I speak, not the Lord. If any brother have a wife that believeth not, and she consent to dwell with him; let him not put her away.

13 And if any woman have a husband that believeth not; and he consent to dwell with her; let her not put away her husband.

14 For the unbelieving husband is sanctified by the believing wife; and the unbelieving wife is sanctified by the believing husband: otherwise your children should be unclean; but now they are holy.

15 But if the unbeliever depart, let him depart. For a brother or sister is not under bondage in such cases: but God hath called us in peace.

married persons to live together. Yet he advises them to abstain sometimes from what they may lawfully do, that they may give themselves to prayer,† and as it is added in the common Greek copies, to fasting. S. Chrys. observes, that the words of S. Paul are not only that they may pray, (which no day must be omitted,) but that they may give themselves to prayer, that is, may be better disposed and prepared for prayer, contemplation, and for receiving the holy Sacrament. Wi.

VER. 6. By indulgence. That is, by a condescension to your weakness. Ch.

VER. 7, 8. I would, or I could wish you all were even as myself, and as it is said in the next verse, to continue unmarried as I do. From hence it is evident, that S. Paul was not then married, who, according to the opinion of the ancient Fathers, was never married. But when the apostle says, I would this as to you all, he only signifies what could be wished for, the particular good of every one, considered as a particular person, but what cannot be hoped for, considering the state of mankind in general, nor the temptations and frailty of men.—But every one hath his proper gift from God, so that some prudently embrace a single life, and also make a religious vow of always living so, as it has been practised by a great number both of men and women, in all ages, ever since Christ's time. Others have not this more perfect gift: they find themselves not disposed to lead, or vow a single life, they marry lawfully: it is better to marry than to burn, or be burnt by violent temptations of concupiscence, by which they do not contain themselves from disorders of that kind. They therefore that are unmarried or widows (to whom S. Paul speaks in these two verses) may have recourse to marriage as a remedy. But let it be observed, that when S. Paul allows of marriage, he speaks not of those who have already made a vow of living always a single life. Vows made to God must be kept. Psal. lxxv. 12; Eccl. v. 3. And S. Paul expressly says of such persons, who have made a vow of perpetual continency, and afterwards marry, that they incur damnation, because they violate their first faith, or vow made to God. See 1 Tim. v. 12.

VER. 9. If they do not contain. This is spoken of such as are free; and not of such as, by vow, have given their first faith to God; to whom, if they will use proper means to obtain it, God will never refuse the gift of continency. Some translators have corrupted this text, by rendering it, if they cannot contain. Ch.

VER. 10. But to them that are married, &c. He tells these persons, that they ought not to part, or if a separation for weighty reasons can be allowed, neither party can marry to another. Wi.—That the wife. Jesus Christ has expressly declared, that in one case only a divorce may be allowable, and that is in the case of adultery. Est.

VER. 12—17. For to the rest, &c. This was a case entirely new, which the wisdom of the apostle regulates according to the laws of charity. Tertul. thinks that some of the faithful, who had been converted from paganism, did not esteem it lawful to live any longer with their wives, who were yet buried in the supersti-

16 For how knowest thou, O wife, whether thou shalt save thy husband? Or how knowest thou, O man, whether thou shalt save thy wife?

17 But as the Lord hath distributed to every one, as God hath called every one, so let him walk: and so I teach in all churches.

18 Is any man called, being circumcised? let him not procure uncircumcision. Is any man called in uncircumcision? let him not be circumcised.

19 Circumcision is nothing, and uncircumcision is nothing: but the keeping of the commandments of God.

20 Let every man abide in the same calling in which he was called.

21 Art thou called, being a bond-man? care not for it: but if thou mayest be made free, use it rather.

22 For he that is called in the Lord, being a bond-man, is the freeman of the Lord. Likewise he that is called, being free, is the bond-man of Christ.

23 You are bought with a price, be not made the bond-slaves of men.

24 Brethren, let every man wherein he was called therein abide with God.

25 Now concerning virgins, I have no commandment of the Lord: but I give counsel, as having obtained mercy of the Lord, to be faithful.

26 I think, therefore, that this is good for the present necessity, that it is good for a man so to be.

27 Art thou bound to a wife? seek not to be loosed. Art thou loosed from a wife? seek not a wife.

28 But if thou take a wife, thou hast not sinned. And if a virgin marry, she hath not sinned: neverthetions of idolatry, which scruples S. Paul answers, guided as he was by the particular lights of the Holy Ghost, Calmet.—Not the Lord. That is, it is the command of the Lord, for such even as are separated, not to marry to another, but when I advised the unmarried not to marry, this is a counsel, or advice, not a Divine precept, which doctrine he repeats again before the end of this chap. ver. 25, 28, 49.—If any brother have a wife that believeth not, &c. S. Paul speaks of two that were joined by a contract of marriage, when both of them were infidels, and that one of them is converted to the Christian faith: we do not read of any precept that Christ gave, as to those marriages, but the apostle seems to order, by his apostolical authority, that they continue man and wife, unless the party that remains still an infidel, will needs depart; then, says the apostle, let such an one depart. Wi.

VER. 14—16. Is sanctified. The meaning is not, that the faith of the husband or the wife is of itself sufficient to put the unbelieving party, or their children, in the state of grace and salvation; but that it is very often an occasion of their sanctification, by bringing them to the true faith. Ch.—How knowest thou, O wife? &c. These words seem to give the reason why they may part, when they cannot live peaceably, and when there is little prospect that the party that is an infidel will be converted. Wi.

VER. 17, &c. But as the Lord hath distributed, . . . and called every one, &c. S. Paul proceeds to other points of discipline, that persons converted may remain and continue in the same employments and lawful state of life as before; that it is nothing to the purpose, whether before his conversion he was a circumcised Jew, or an uncircumcised Gentile, circumcision being no longer of obligation in the new law. If any one that is converted was a bond-man, or a slave, let him not be concerned at this, but use it rather, which many interpret, let him rather endeavour to be made free, though S. Chrys. and others understand, let him rather remain content with his servile condition. Perhaps it was an abomination to those new converts, who might imagine that their Christian liberty exempted them from being servants to men. However, he gives them this great comfort that such an one is the Lord's free-man, that is, whoever is a Christian, and in the grace of God; but he adds, let him not be a slave to men, that is, not follow their sinful ways, nor consent to any thing that is criminal. Wi.—All consists in doing the will of God, by loving him with our whole heart; without this, all is illusion. To attach ourselves to exterior practices contrary to the order of God, is the superstition of circumcision; to despise what comes from God, is the pride of uncircumcision.

VER. 23. With a price. Viz. with the price of the precious blood of Christ. Est.—Him only should we serve, for whatever draws us from this allegiance, is perfect servitude, such as the love of any person or thing out of God.

VER. 28. And such shall have tribulation of the flesh, cares, troubles, vexations in the state of marriage; but I spare you, I leave you to your liberty less, such shall have tribulation of the flesh. But I spare you

29 This, therefore, I say, brethren: the time is short: it remaineth, that they also who have wives, be as those who have not:

30 And they who weep, as they who weep not: and they who rejoice, as they who are not rejoicing: and they who buy, as if they were not possessing any thing:

31 And they who use this world, as if they used it not: for the figure of this world passeth away.

32 But I would have you to be without solicitude. He that is without a wife, is solicitous for the things that belong to the Lord, how he may please God.

33 But he that is with a wife, is solicitous for the things of the world, how he may please his wife: and he is divided.

34 And the unmarried woman and the virgin thinketh on the things of the Lord, that she may be holy both in body and spirit. But she that is married thinketh on the things of the world, how she may please her husband.

35 And this I speak for your profit: not to cast a snare upon you, but for that which is decent, and which may give you power, to attend upon the Lord, without impediment.

36 But if any man think that he seemeth dishonoured with regard to his virgin, for that she is above the age, and it must be so: let him do what he will: he sinneth not, if she marry.

37 For he that hath determined being stedfast in his heart, having no necessity, but having power of his own will; and hath judged this in his heart, to keep his virgin, doth well.

38 Therefore both he that giveth his virgin in marriage, doth well: and he that giveth her not, doth better.

39 * A woman is bound by the law as long as her husband liveth: but if her husband die, she is at liberty: let her marry to whom she will: only in the Lord:

40 But more blessed shall she be, if she so remain, marrying, or not marrying, and will not discourage you by setting forth the crosses of a married life. Wi.

VER. 36. Let him do what he will, he sinneth not, &c. The meaning is not, as libertines would have it, that persons may do what they will, and not sin, provided they afterwards marry: but that the father with regard to the giving his virgin in marriage, may do as he pleaseth; and that it will be no sin to him if she marry. Ch.

VER. 38, &c. He that giveth her not, doth better. And more blessed shall she be, if she so remain, according to my counsel. It is very strange, if any one, who reads this chapter without prejudice, does not clearly see that S. Paul advises, and prefers the state of virginity to that of a married life.—I think that I also have the Spirit of God. He puts them in mind, by this modest way of speaking, of what they cannot doubt of, as to so great an apostle. Wi.

CHAP. VIII. VER. 1. Now concerning those things. It appears from this whole passage that the Corinthians had, in a former letter, consulted this apostle, upon the subject of eating meats offered to idols. It was not unusual to reserve some part of the sacrifice, of which they made a supper, either in their own family, with their friends, or sometimes even in the temple. Some of the Christians of Corinth attended without scruple at these sorts of feasts, and eat of the meats offered to the idols; whilst others, on the contrary, took scandal at this conduct, and thought it a tacit approbation of idolatry. S. Paul being consulted upon this difficulty, gives them his advice in this chapter. Calmet.—Knowledge puffeth up, &c. Knowledge, without charity and humility, serveth only to puff persons up. Ch.

according to my counsel: and I think that I also have the Spirit of God.

CHAP. VIII.

Though an idol be nothing, yet things offered up to idols are not to be eaten, for fear of scandal.

NOW concerning those things that are sacrificed to idols, we know that we all have knowledge. Knowledge puffeth up; but charity edifieth.

2 And if any man think that he knoweth any thing, he hath not yet known, as he ought to know.

3 But if any man love God, the same is known by him.

4 But as for the meats that are offered in sacrifice to idols, we know that an idol is nothing in the world, and that there is no God but one.

5 For though there be that are called gods, either in heaven or on earth (for here are many gods, and many lords);

6 Yet to us there is but one God, the Father; of whom are all things, and we unto him: and one Lord Jesus Christ: by whom are all things, and we by him.

7 But knowledge is not in every one. For some until this present with a conscience of the idol, eat as a thing sacrificed to an idol: and their conscience, being weak, is defiled.

8 But meat doth not commend us to God. For neither, if we eat, shall we have the more: nor, if we eat not, shall we have the less.

9 But take heed, lest perhaps this your liberty become a stumbling-block to the weak.

10 For if a man see him that hath knowledge, sit at meat in the idol's temple; shall not his conscience, being weak, be emboldened to eat those things which are sacrificed to idols?

11 * And through thy knowledge shall the weak brother perish, for whom Christ died?

12 Now when you sin thus against the brethren, and wound their weak conscience, you sin against Christ.

b Rom. xiv. 15.

VER. 4. An idol is nothing. The apostle seems to allude in this place to the Greek signification of this word, εἰδωλον, signifying a false representation. Calmet.

VER. 5. Many gods, &c. Reputed for such among the heathens. Ch.

VER. 6. To us there is but one God, the Father; of whom are all things, and we unto him. Of or from the Father are all things, even the eternal Son and the Holy Ghost, though they are one and the same God with the Father.—And one Lord Jesus Christ: by whom are all things, and we by him. The Arians and Socinians pretend from this place, that only the Father is truly and properly God. The Catholics answer, that he is called the God, of whom all, because from him always proceeded, do proceed, and shall always proceed the Son and the Holy Ghost, though one and the same God in nature, substance, &c. And that when he is called the one God, by these words are excluded the false gods of the heathens, not the Son, and the Holy Ghost, who are but one God with the Father. S. Chrys. also here observes, (Hom. 20,) that if the two other persons are excluded, because the Father is called one God, by the same way of reasoning it would follow, that because Jesus Christ is called the one Lord, neither the Holy Ghost, nor even the Father, are the one Lord, whereas the Scriptures many times express the Divine majesty, as well by the word Lord as by the word God. Wi.

VER. 7. But knowledge is not in every one, &c. The new converts, who had been Jews, thought that things which had been offered to idols were defiled, unclean, and could not be lawfully eaten: they who had been Gentiles looked upon them as victims offered to idols, in which there was some virtue of enchantment, &c. Their weak consciences judged they could not be lawfully eaten; and when they were induced to eat them by the example of others, it was still against their consciences. The infidels also might sometimes think that the Christians, in eating such things, honoured their idols; in such cases, they who were better instructed, were to abstain, not to give offence to weak consciences, and lest they should make them sin. And a weak brother shall perish, for whom Christ died, where we may learn, that Christ died also for those that shall perish, and not only for the predestinate. Wi.

VER. 10. In the idol's temple. It does not seem likely that any Christian

CHAP. IX.

The apostle did not make use of his power, of being maintained at the charges of those to whom he preached, that he might give no hinderance to the gospel. Of running in the race, and striving for the mastery.

AM not I free? Am not I an apostle? Have not I seen Christ Jesus, our Lord? Are not you my work in the Lord?

2 And if I be not an apostle to others, but yet to you I am. For you are the seal of my apostleship in the Lord.

3 My defence with them that examine me is this.

4 Have not we power to eat and to drink?

5 Have we not power to lead about a woman, a sister, as well as the rest of the apostles, and the brethren of the Lord, and Cephas?

6 Or I only and Barnabas, have we not power to do this?

7 Who serveth as a soldier at any time, at his own charges? Who planteth a vineyard, and eateth not of the fruit thereof? Who feedeth a flock, and eateth not of the milk of the flock?

8 Speak I these things according to man? Or doth not the law also say these things?

9 For it is written in the law of Moses, ^bThou shalt not muzzle the mouth of the ox that treadeth out the corn. Doth God take care for oxen?

10 Or doth he say this indeed for our sakes? For these things were written for our sakes: that he that plougheth should plough in hope: and he that thresheth, in hope to receive fruit.

11 ^cIf we have sown unto you spiritual things, is it a great matter if we reap your carnal things?

^a Rom. xiv. 21.—^b Deut. xxv. 4; 1 Tim. v. 18.

would go to eat with idolaters in their very temples, of things offered to their idols: so that we may rather understand any place where infidels and Christians eat together, and where it happened that some meats were brought which had been first offered to idols, which the well-instructed Christians regarded not, nor asked any questions about, but the weak scrupled to eat them. Wi.

VER. 13. If meat scandalize. That is, if my eating cause my brother to sin. Ch.

* V. 10. In idolo, ἐν εἰδωλείῳ. Though the Greek word may sometimes be used to signify the temple itself of idols, yet it may in general signify a place or thing some ways belonging to idols. See Estius, P. Alemain, &c.

CHAP. IX. VER. 1, &c. Am not I free? The apostle in this place wishes to teach the Corinthians how careful and solicitous they should be not to give cause for scandal to their neighbour, and how anxious for his spiritual welfare, informing them, that as he refused to take even what he had a just right to, as a minister of the altar, that is, to live by the altar, so they must do in like manner, abstaining even from things lawful, for the good of religion. Estius.—Am not I an apostle? &c. S. Paul here, to the 20th verse, answers those reflections, which the new preachers at Corinth made against him and Barnaby, as if they were only an inferior kind of apostles. To this he answers, that he had seen Jesus Christ, who appeared to him. He tells the Corinthians, that they, at least, ought to respect him as their apostle, who had converted them. He tells them, that when any persons ask about his apostleship, he has this to say for himself, that he not only laboured as an apostle in converting them, but also laboured without taking of them what might supply him and his companions with necessaries, as to meat and drink. He insists upon this particular circumstance, to show he did not preach Christ for gain sake; and at the same time brings proofs to show that he, and all who preach the gospel, have a power and a right to be maintained with necessities by them to whom they preach. But S. Paul puts them in mind, (ver. 15,) that he did not make use of his right, as to any of these things: that he does not write in this manner, to get or have any thing of them hereafter: nay, he makes warm protestations, says S. Chrys.,* that he will take nothing of them; that he will preach without putting others to any cost (ver. 18); that he will accept of nothing, lest thereby he put any obstacle to the gospel, or give any persons occasion to say he preached for gain. He tells them, it is better for him to die, than, by taking any thing of them, to make void this, which he has to glory in, and to justify himself against his backbiting adversaries: the sense is, that he is willing to spend his life as well as his labours among them, sooner than in these circumstances receive any temporal reward from them. Yet when the circumstances were different, he received of the Philippians (Phil. iv. 15) enough to supply him in his necessities. He also tells them here that he does not pretend to glory or boast for having preached: this being a necessary duty. Wi.

VER. 5. It appears certain, from the testimony of the Fathers, that S. Paul was not in the state of wedlock. S. Jerom informs us that the apostle is here speaking of such holy women who, according to the Jewish custom, supplied their teachers with the necessaries of life, as we see was done to Christ himself. It is evident from ancient records, that this was a very prevalent custom in Judea, and therefore a cause of no scandal; but to the Gentiles this custom was unknown, and therefore lest it might prove a cause of scandal to any, S. Paul did not allow any woman to follow him as a companion. Tertul. denies, with S. Aug. and S. Jerom, that S. Paul is here speaking of his wife. Estius, Caluet.—A woman, a sister. Some erroneous translators have corrupted this text, by rendering it, a sister, a wife; whereas it is certain, S. Paul had no wife, (chap. vii. 7, 8,) and that he only speaks of such devout women, as, according to the custom of the Jewish nation, waited upon the preachers of the gospel, and supplied them with necessities. Ch.—And to what end could he talk of burthening the Corinthians with providing for his wife, when he himself clearly affirmeth that he was single? Chap. vii. 7 and 8. This all the Greek Fathers affirm, with S. Aust. de Op. Monach. c. 4. S. Jer. adv. Jovin. c. 14, &c. &c.

14 So also the Lord ordained, that they who preach the gospel, should live of the gospel.

15 But I have used none of these things. Neither have I written these things, that they should be so done to me: for it is good for me to die, rather than that any one should make void my glory.

16 For if I preach the gospel, it is no glory to me: for a necessity lieth upon me: for woe is unto me, if I preach not the gospel.

17 For if I do this thing willingly, I have a reward: but if against my will, a dispensation is committed to me.

18 What is my reward then? That preaching the gospel, I may deliver the gospel without charge, that I abuse not my power in the gospel.

19 For whereas I was free as to all, I made myself the servant of all: that I might gain more persons.

20 And I became to the Jews as a Jew, that I might gain the Jews.

21 To them that are under the law, as if I were under the law, (whereas myself was not under the law,) that I might gain them that were under the law. To them that were without the law, as if I were without the law, (whereas I was not without the law of God, but was in the law of Christ,) that I might gain them that were without the law.

stances receive any temporal reward from them. Yet when the circumstances were different, he received of the Philippians (Phil. iv. 15) enough to supply him in his necessities. He also tells them here that he does not pretend to glory or boast for having preached: this being a necessary duty. Wi.

VER. 5. It appears certain, from the testimony of the Fathers, that S. Paul was not in the state of wedlock. S. Jerom informs us that the apostle is here speaking of such holy women who, according to the Jewish custom, supplied their teachers with the necessaries of life, as we see was done to Christ himself. It is evident from ancient records, that this was a very prevalent custom in Judea, and therefore a cause of no scandal; but to the Gentiles this custom was unknown, and therefore lest it might prove a cause of scandal to any, S. Paul did not allow any woman to follow him as a companion. Tertul. denies, with S. Aug. and S. Jerom, that S. Paul is here speaking of his wife. Estius, Caluet.—A woman, a sister. Some erroneous translators have corrupted this text, by rendering it, a sister, a wife; whereas it is certain, S. Paul had no wife, (chap. vii. 7, 8,) and that he only speaks of such devout women, as, according to the custom of the Jewish nation, waited upon the preachers of the gospel, and supplied them with necessities. Ch.—And to what end could he talk of burthening the Corinthians with providing for his wife, when he himself clearly affirmeth that he was single? Chap. vii. 7 and 8. This all the Greek Fathers affirm, with S. Aust. de Op. Monach. c. 4. S. Jer. adv. Jovin. c. 14, &c. &c.

VER. 11. Is it a great matter? The apostle is here speaking of what he had given to the Corinthians, and what he had received from them; and this he does under the comparison of the sower and the reaper. Can any of you think it hard that we receive some part of your temporal goods, when we have bestowed upon you spiritual? nevertheless, we have not used this power, but we bear all things. &c. Ver. 12. Estius.

VER. 16. It is no glory. That is, I have nothing to glory of. Ch.

VER. 17. But if against my will. That is, if I do not do it with alacrity and zeal, but instigated by the sole motive of punishment, woe unto me, as he says in the preceding verse, if I am instigated by this motive alone; still the dispensation of the gospel is intrusted to me, and I must comply with that obligation, either with the zeal and alacrity of a son, or for fear of punishment, as a slave. Estius.

VER. 19. Free as to all. That is, whereas I was under no obligation to any man, yet I made myself the servant of all, &c. Caluet.

VER. 21. To them that were without the law. That is, to the Gentiles, who never were under the law of Moses. Wi.

22 To the weak I became weak, that I might gain the weak: I became all things to all men, that I might save all.

23 And I do all things for the gospel's sake: that I may be made partaker thereof.

24 Know you not that they who run in the race, all run indeed, but one receiveth the prize? So run that you may obtain.

25 And every one that striveth for the mastery refraineth himself from all things: and they indeed that they may receive a corruptible crown: but we an incorruptible one.

26 I, therefore, so run, not as at an uncertainty: I so fight, not as one beating the air:

27 But I chastise my body, and bring it into subjection: lest, perhaps, when I have preached to others, I myself should become reprobate.

CHAP. X.

By the example of the Israelites he shows that we are not to build too much upon favours received; but avoid their sins; and fly from the service of idols, and from things offered to devils.

FOR I would not have you ignorant, brethren, that our fathers were all ^a under the cloud, and all passed through the ^b sea:

2 And all in Moses were baptized, in the cloud, and in the sea:

3 ^c And they all eat the same spiritual food.

4 ^d And all drank the same spiritual drink: (and they drank of the spiritual rock that followed them: and the rock was Christ.)

5 But with the most of them God was not well pleased: ^e for they were overthrown in the desert.

VER. 23. How convincing is this and many similar texts against those who deny the merit of good works, and who would not have men to act with a view to any recompence, though rewards and recompences are very frequently mentioned in holy writ. A.

VER. 24. Know you not? Nothing is more famous in the annals of history than the public games in Greece: it is to these the apostle is here alluding. Calmet.

VER. 25. He refraineth himself, &c. Curbs his inclinations, abstains from debauchery, or any thing that may weaken him, or hinder him from gaining this corruptible crown, how much more ought we to practise self-denials for an eternal crown? Wi.

VER. 27. I chastise, &c. Here S. Paul shows the necessity of self-denial and mortification to subdue the flesh, and its inordinate desires. Ch.

* V. 1. S. Chrys. ὁμ. κβ. p. 382, μετὰ σφοδρότατος ἀρνείται.

† V. 5. Mulierem sororem, ἀδελφὴν γυναῖκα. Sororem mulierem, where Estius brings examples to show that it is the same sense and construction, whether we read mulierem sororem, or sororem mulierem. Tertullian, the most ancient of the Latin Fathers, read: mulieres circumducendi, not uxores. De Pudicitia, c. 14, p. 566, ed. Rig., and 1, de Monogam. c. 8, p. 519, he first says, Petrum solum invenio maritum. And on this place, non uxores demonstrat ab Apostolis circumductas . . . sed simpliciter mulieres, quæ, illos eodem instituto, quo et Dominum comitantes, ministrabant. S. Hierom ubi de mulieribus sororibus infertur, perspicuum est, non uxores debere intelligi, sed eas, ut diximus, quæ de sua substantia ministrabant. S. Aug. hoc quidam non intelligentes, non sororem mulierem, sed uxorem interpretati sunt, fecerit illos verbi Græci ambiguitas . . . quanquam hoc ita posuerit, ut falli non debuerint, quia nequæ mulierem tantummodo ait, sed sororem mulierem, neque ducendi, sed circumducendi: verum alios interpretes non fecerit huc ambiguitas, et mulierem, non uxorem interpretati sunt.

CHAP. X. VER. 1, 2. Our Fathers, the Jews, were all under the cloud. He means, when God conducted the camp of the Israelites, in the day-time by a cloud, and in the nights by a pillar of fire. Exod. xiii. 21. Wi.—In Moses. Under the conduct of Moses they received baptism in figure, by passing under the cloud, and through the sea: and they partook of the body and blood of Christ in figure, by eating of the manna, (called here a spiritual food, because it was a figure of the true bread which comes down from heaven,) and drinking the water, miraculously brought out of the rock, called here a spiritual rock; because it was also a figure 6 Now these things were done in a figure of us, that we should not covet evil things, ^a as they also coveted.

7 Neither become ye idolaters, as some of them: as it is written: ^b The people sat down to eat and drink, and rose up to play.

8 Neither let us commit fornication, ^c as some of them committed fornication, and there fell in one day three and twenty thousand.

9 Neither let us tempt Christ: as some of them tempted, and perished by serpents.

10 ^d Neither do you murmur: as some of them murmured, and were destroyed by the destroyer.

11 Now all these things happened to them in figure: and they are written for our correction, upon whom the ends of the world are come.

12 Wherefore let him that thinketh himself to stand, take heed lest he fall.

13 Let no temptation take hold on you, but such as is human: and God is faithful, who will not suffer you to be tempted above that which you are able: but will make also with temptation issue, that you may be able to bear it.

14 Wherefore, my dearly beloved, flee from the service of idols.

15 I speak as to wise men: judge ye yourselves what I say.

16 The chalice of benediction which we bless, is it not the communion of the blood of Christ? And the bread which we break, is it not the partaking of the body of the Lord?

17 For we being many, are one bread, one body, all who partake of one bread.

of Christ. Ch.—Were baptized in the cloud, and in the sea, figuratively, these being figures of baptism in the new law. As Moses, who delivered them from the slavery of Egypt, was a figure of Christ, who came to deliver mankind from the slavery of sin. Wi.

VER. 3, 4. All eat the same spiritual food, to wit, the manna, which seemed to come from heaven, and was a figure of the eucharist, the spiritual food of our souls.—All drank the same spiritual drink, and . . . rock that followed them, by which is understood the stream of water, that came miraculously out of the rock struck by Moses, and which is said to have followed them, because it ran plentifully through their camp.—And the rock was Christ, a figure of Christ; for all these things (ver. 11) happened to them in figure. Wi.

VER. 9. As some of them tempted Christ. This cannot but be understood of Christ, as he was God. Wi.

VER. 11. Upon whom the ends of the world are come. The last age of the world, which S. Jolin calls the last hour. Wi.

VER. 12. Take heed lest he fall. This regards the doctors and teachers in the new Church of Corinth; who, relying upon their own learning, did not think themselves weak, and who, presuming too much upon their own strength, exposed themselves to the danger of falling. See S. Chrys. and S. Aug. de Dono Perseve.

VER. 13. Let no temptation take hold on you. Or, no temptation hath taken hold of you, or come upon you as yet, but what is human, or incident to man. Ca.—The sense of these words are obscure: we may expound them by way of prayer, let no temptation, but such as are of human frailty, and not hard to be overcome, happen to you. See the Greek text.—Will make also with temptation issue, that you may be able to bear it. The literal signification of the Latin, compared with the Greek is, that God will bring you off, and make you escape out of those dangers, when you are tempted. Wi.

VER. 16. The chalice of benediction, &c. Which the priests bless or consecrate is it not the communion of the blood of Christ? And the bread which we break (so called because of the outward appearance of bread,) is it not the partaking or communion of the body of the Lord? See S. Chrys. here, hom. 24, p. 326, and p. 400. See also the Annotations, Matt. xxvi. 26. Wi.—Here the apostle puts them in mind of the partaking of the body and blood of Christ in the sacred mysteries, and becoming thereby one mystical body with Christ. From whence he infers (ver. 21) that they who are made partakers with Christ, by the eucharistic sacrifice, and sacrament, must not be made partakers with devils, by eating of the meats sacrificed to them. Ch.

VER. 17. We being many, are one bread. Or, as it may be rendered, agreeably both to the Latin and Greek, because the bread is one, all we, being many, are one

THE LAST SUPPER.

18 Behold Israel, according to the flesh: are not they, who eat of the sacrifices, partakers of the altar?

19 What then? Do I say, that what is offered in sacrifice to idols, is any thing? Or that the idol is any thing?

20 But the things which the heathens sacrifice, they sacrifice to devils, and not to God. And I would not that you should be made partakers with devils: you cannot drink the chalice of the Lord, and the chalice of devils:

21 You cannot be partakers of the table of the Lord, and of the table of devils.

22 Do we provoke the Lord to jealousy? Are we stronger than he? * All things are lawful for me, but all things are not expedient.

23 All things are lawful for me, but all things do not edify.

24 Let no man seek his own, but that which is for the welfare of another.

25 Whatsoever is sold in the shambles, eat: asking no question, for conscience sake.

26 * The earth is the Lord's, and the fulness thereof.

27 If any of the infidels invite you, and you be willing to go; eat of any thing that is set before you, asking no question, for conscience sake.

28 But if any man say: This hath been sacrificed to idols: do not eat of it for his sake that told it, and for conscience sake.

29 Conscience, I say, not thy own, but the other's. For why is my liberty judged by another man's conscience?

body, who partake of that one bread. For it is by our communicating with Christ, and with one another, in this blessed Sacrament, that we are formed into one mystical body; and made, as it were, one bread, compounded of many grains of corn, closely united together. Ch.

VER. 18. Behold Israel, according to the flesh. That is, the people that were the offspring of Israel, or Jacob. Are not these they who offered sacrifices to the true God, and eat of the sacrifices, which were offered on his altars, and by offering to him such sacrifices, acknowledged him to be their God, and the only true God: and so you, if you partake, and eat of the sacrifices of idolaters, and of what they tell you was offered to their idols, you seem at least to join with them in acknowledging, and paying a reverence to their idols, which are devils: and you cannot be partakers of the table of the Lord, and of the table of devils. Wi.

VER. 19. What then? do I say, &c. He puts this objection, as if it were contradictory to what he had taught before, (chap. viii. 4,) that an idol is nothing, &c., but he answers this objection by saying, that all things, that is, all meats, are lawful in themselves, but not always expedient, nor edifying, when they give scandal to weak brethren, or when the infidels themselves think that such as eat things offered to idols, join with them in honouring their idols. Wi.

VER. 21. In all this discourse, a comparison is instituted between the Christian host and oblation, its effects, conditions, and properties, with the altars, hosts, sacrifices, and immolations of the Jews and Gentiles; which the apostle could not have done, had there not been a proper sacrifice in the Christian worship. The holy Fathers teach the same with the ancient Councils. Thus in the Council of Nice, The lamb of God laid upon the altar. Cone. Ephes., The unbloody service of the sacrifice. In S. Cyril Alex. in Cone. Ephes. Anath. 11, The quickening holy sacrifice; the unbloody host and victim. Tertul. de Coron. Milit., The propitiatory sacrifice both for the living and the dead. This Melchisedech did most singularly prefigure in his mystical oblation of bread and wine; this also, according to the prophecy of Malachi, shall continue from the rising to the setting sun, a perpetual substitute for all the Jewish sacrifices; and this, in plain terms, is called the Mass, by S. Augustin, Sermon 251, 91. Cone. Carth. 2, c. 3; 4, c. 84. Milevit. 12. S. Leo, ep. 81, 88, c. 2. S. Gregory, l. 2, ep. 9, 92, &c. &c. See next chap. ver. 24.

VER. 27. Eat of any thing, &c. Here at length S. Paul prescribes them a rule, by which they were to govern themselves, as to meats that they met with. Buy and eat of any thing sold in the market, or of any thing that you meet with at the table of infidels, when they invite you, for all are the Lord's creatures, and may be taken with thanksgiving, as we ought to take whatsoever we eat.—But if any man say, This hath been sacrificed to idols, do not eat of it for his sake, &c. And why must they not then eat of it? Because either he is an infidel, that says it: and then, by saying so, he may mean that they who eat it ought not to eat it in honour of their gods. Or if a weak brother says so, he thereby signifies, that his conscience 30 If I partake with thanksgiving: why am I evil spoken of for that for which I give thanks?

31 * Therefore, whether you eat or drink, or whatsoever else you do; do all things for the glory of God.

32 Give no offence to the Jews, nor to the Gentiles, nor to the church of God:

33 As I also please all men in all things, not seeking that which is profitable to myself, but to many; that they may be saved.

CHAP. XI.

Women must have a covering over their heads. He blameth the abuses of their love feasts: and upon that occasion, treats of the blessed sacrament.

BE ye also followers of me, as I also am of Christ.

2 Now I praise you, brethren, that in all things you are mindful of me: and keep my ordinances as I delivered them to you.

3 But I would have you know "that the head of every man is Christ: and the head of the woman is the man: and the head of Christ, is God.

4 Every man praying or prophesying with his head covered, disgraceth his head.

5 But every woman praying or prophesying with her head not covered, disgraceth her head: for it is all one as if she were shaven.

6 For if a woman be not covered, let her be shorn. But if it be a shame to a woman to be shorn or shaven, let her cover her head.

7 The man, indeed, ought not to cover his head: because he is the image and glory of God; but the woman is the glory of the man.

judges it not lawful to be eaten; so that in one case you seem to consent that things are to be taken in honour of idols: in the other, you give offence to your weak brother: and I would have you to be without offence, both to Jews and Gentiles; and not to think it enough that you can eat such things with thanksgiving. Wi.

* V. 13. Tentatio vos non apprehendat. In almost all Greek copies, non apprehendit in præterito, οὐκ εἴληφεν. Which reading is also in divers ancient Latin interpreters, as if he put them in mind that hitherto they had not suffered any great temptations or persecutions. Faciet cum tentatione proventum, is not the same as progressum, or utilitatem, by the Greek, but that they should escape out of it, συν τῷ πειρασμῷ καὶ τὴν ἐκβασιν.

† V. 16. Calix benedictionis cui, (or as it is in the Greek,) quem benedicimus. See S. Chrys. hom. 24. No Catholic now-a-days can declare his faith of the real presence in clearer terms than S. Chrys. hath in this and other places; ὅτι τοῦτο ἐν τῷ ποτηρίῳ ὄν, ἐκείνῳ ἴσται, τὸ ἀπὸ τῆς πλευρᾶς ρεύσαν, &c. He calls the eucharist, θυσίαν, a sacrifice.

CHAP. XI. VER. 2. I praise you. That is, a great many of you. Wi.

VER. 3. The head of the woman is the man, &c. To have the head covered at public meetings, is, according to S. Paul, a mark of subjection: The man was created to be head over the woman, who was made subject to the man, being made of him, of his rib, and the woman made for him, not he for the woman. The man in a special manner, is the image of God, not only by his immortal soul, in which sense also the woman was made to God's image, and likeness, but inasmuch as God gave him a power over all creatures, and so he is called, the glory of God. For these reasons, as well as from a received custom, S. Paul tells every woman, that in praying or prophesying in public meetings, she must have her head veiled and covered in testimony of her subjection to man, her head, otherwise she dishonours herself, and her head. This is what he tells her, (ver. 10,) that she ought to have a power over her head,* that is, to have a veil or covering, as a mark of man's power over her: and because of the angels, that is, out of a respect to the angels there present. Some understand, the priests and ministers of God, called angels, particularly in the Apocalypse. S. Paul adds, that nature † having given to women long hair, designed it to be as a natural veil. In fine, he appeals to them, to be judges whether it be not unbecoming in women to pray without a veil. Wi.

VER. 4. Praying or prophesying. By prophesying, in this place, is meant, reading publicly in the Church, or singing, or explaining some part of the Scripture. To have the head covered, or uncovered, is in itself a thing very indifferent. Amongst the Greeks it was the custom always to sacrifice to their idols with heads uncovered; amongst the Romans, the opposite was the fashion, and among the 8 For the man is not of the woman, but the woman of the man.

9 * For the man was not created for the woman, but the woman for the man.

10 Therefore ought the woman to have a power over her head, because of the angels.

11 But yet neither is the man without the woman, nor the woman without the man, in the Lord.

12 For as the woman is of the man, so also is the man by the woman: but all things of God.

13 Judge you yourselves: doth it become a woman, to pray to God uncovered?

14 Doth not even nature itself teach you, that a man indeed, if he nourish his hair, it is a shame to him:

15 But if a woman nourish her hair, it is a glory to her; for her hair is given to her for a covering.

16 But if any man seem to be contentious, we have no such custom, nor hath the church of God.

17 Now this I ordain: not praising you, that you come together not for the better, but for the worse.

18 For first of all I hear, that when you come together in the church, there are divisions among you, and in part I believe it.

19 For there must be also heresies: that they also, who are reprov'd, may be made manifest among you.

20 When you come together therefore into one place, it is not now to eat the Lord's supper.

21 For every one taketh before his own supper to eat. And one indeed is hungry, and another is drunk.

22 What, have you not houses to eat and to drink in? Or despise ye the church of God, and put them to shame that have not? What shall I say to you? Do I praise you? In this I praise you not.

23 For I have received of the Lord that which also I delivered to you, that the Lord Jesus, the night in which he was betrayed, took bread, 24 And giving thanks, broke, and said: * Take ye, and eat: this is my body, which shall be delivered for you: do this for the commemoration of me.

25 In like manner also the chalice, after he had supped, saying: This chalice is the new testament in my blood: this do ye, as often as you shall drink it for the commemoration of me.

26 For as often as you shall eat this bread, and drink this chalice, you shall show the death of the Lord until he come.

27 * Wherefore, whosoever shall eat this bread, or drink the chalice of the Lord unworthily, shall be guilty of the body and of the blood of the Lord.

28 * But let a man prove himself: and so let him eat of that bread, and drink of the chalice.

29 For he that eateth and drinketh unworthily, eateth and drinketh judgment to himself, not discerning the body of the Lord.

30 Therefore are there many infirm and weak among you, and many sleep.

31 But if we would judge ourselves, we should not be judged.

32 But whilst we are judged, we are chastised by the Lord; that we may not be damned with this world.

33 Wherefore, my brethren, when you come together to eat, wait for one another.

Jews, as well formerly as at present, they always appear in their synagogues with heads covered. Calmet.

VER. 10. A power: that is, a veil or covering, as a sign that she is under the cover of her husband: and this, the apostle adds, because of the angels, who are present in the assemblies of the faithful. Ch.

VER. 17. Now this I ordain, &c. S. Paul found that several abuses were crept in among the Corinthians at their Church meetings, where before the holy mysteries (though S. Chrys. thinks after them) they used to have those charitable suppers, called the Agape. For as our Saviour eat first a common supper with his apostles, before he instituted the holy sacrament, so the Christians in many places brought meats with them, and eat a supper together, in token of that friendship and union, which they had with all their brethren, before they began to celebrate the holy mysteries. It is this supper, which according to the common interpretation S. Paul here (ver. 20) calls the Lord's supper; (though S. Aug. and some others, by the Lord's supper, understand the holy sacrament itself of Christ's body and blood). Wi.

VER. 19. There must be also heresies: by reason of the pride and perversity of man's heart; not by God's will or appointment; who nevertheless draws good out of this evil, manifesting, by that occasion, who are the good and firm Christians, and making their faith more remarkable. Ch.—Hence S. Augustin, c. 8, de Vera Relig., says, "Let us use heretics not so as to approve their errors, but to make us more wary and vigilant, and more strenuous in defending Catholic doctrine against their deceits."

VER. 20. The Lord's supper. So the apostle here calls the charity feasts observed by the primitive Christians; and reprehends the abuses of the Corinthians, on these occasions: which were the more criminal, because these feasts were accompanied with the celebrating the eucharistic sacrifice and sacrament. Ch.

VER. 21. Every one taketh before his own supper to eat. The sense seems to be, that he took and brought with him, what he designed to eat with others, and give at that supper: but as soon as some were met, (without staying for others, as he orders them, ver. 33, when he again speaks of these suppers,) the rich placing themselves together, began this supper, and did not take with them their poor brethren, who had brought nothing, or had any thing to bring; by this means, one indeed is hungry, and another is drunk, that is, had at least drunk plentifully, while the poor had nothing but shame and confusion. By this means of eating and drinking without temperance and moderation, they were by no means disposed to receive afterwards the holy Eucharist. In S. Chrys.'s time, and from the first ages, every one received the sacrament of the holy Eucharist fasting, as it is probable this was one of the things which S. Paul gave orders about, (ver. 34.) when he came to Corinth. See S. Aug. on this same subject, in his letter to Januarius, 54, tom. 2, part 2, p. 126, nov. edit. He says, that though it is evident the apostles did not receive the body and blood of Christ fasting, yet we must not on that account calumniate, or blame the universal Church, in which it is received only by those that are fasting. He says, it is a most insolent madness to dispute against what is a custom in the universal Church. Wi.

VER. 23. I have received of the Lord. That is, by revelation from Christ, as well as from others, who were present with him, that which also I delivered to you by word of mouth, &c. Here he speaks of the holy sacrament itself, of the words of consecration, as the evangelists had done, and of the real presence of Christ's body and blood.—Which shall be delivered for you. In the common Greek copies, which is broken for you, to wit, on the cross.—You shall show the death of the Lord. As often as you receive, it shall be with a devout and grateful remembrance of his sufferings and death for your sake. He puts every one in mind, that whosoever shall eat this bread, (ver. 27,) so called from the outward appearances, or drink the chalice of the Lord unworthily, shall, by such a sacrilege, be guilty of the body and of the blood of the Lord. And (ver. 29) that he eateth and drinketh judgment, or condemnation, to himself, not discerning the difference betwixt celestial food and other meats, and not considering it to be truly the body of the Lord. See S. Chrys. hom. 27. If the words of our Saviour, this is my body, &c. were to be understood in a metaphorical and figurative sense only, is it probable that S. Paul, writing twenty-four years afterwards, to the new converted Gentiles at Corinth, would have used words, which full as clearly express a true and real presence of Christ's body in the eucharist, without one word to signify that this was to be understood in a figurative sense only? Wi.

VER. 27. Or drink. Here erroneous translators corrupted the text, by putting and drink (contrary to the original, ἢ πινον) instead of or drink.—Guilty of the body, &c., not discerning the body, &c. This demonstrates the real presence of the body and blood of Christ, even to the unworthy communicant; who otherwise could not be guilty of the body and blood of Christ, or justly condemned for not discerning the Lord's body. Ch.

VER. 28. Drink of the chalice. This is not said by way of command, but by way of allowance, viz. where and when it is agreeable to the practice and discipline of the Church. Ch.

VER. 30—32. Therefore in punishment of the sin of receiving unworthily, many are infirm, visited with infirmities, even that bring death, which is meant by those words, many sleep. But it is a mercy of God, when he only punishes by sickness, or a corporal death, and does not permit us to perish for ever, or be damned with this wicked world. To avoid this, let a man prove himself, examine the state of his conscience, especially before he receives the holy sacrament, confess his sins, and be absolved by those to whom Christ left a power of forgiving sins in his name, and by his authority. If we judge ourselves in this manner, we shall not be judged, that is not condemned. Wi.

34 If any man be hungry, let him eat at home : that you come not together unto judgment. And the rest I will set in order, when I come.

CHAP. XII.

Of the diversity of spiritual gifts. The members of the mystical body, like those of the natural body, must mutually cherish one another.

NOW concerning spiritual things, my brethren, I would not have you to be ignorant.

2 You know that, when you were heathens, you went to dumb idols, according as you were led.

3 Wherefore I give you to understand, * that no man, speaking by the Spirit of God, saith anathema to Jesus. And no man can say, the Lord Jesus, but by the Holy Ghost.

4 Now there are diversities of graces, but the same Spirit :

5 And there are diversities of ministries, but the same Lord.

6 And there are diversities of operations, but the same God, who worketh all in all.

7 But the manifestation of the Spirit is given to every man unto profit.

8 To one indeed, by the Spirit, is given the word of wisdom : and to another, the word of knowledge, according to the same Spirit.

9 To another, faith in the same Spirit : to another, the grace of healing in one Spirit :

10 To another, the working of miracles : to another, prophecy : to another, the discerning of spirits : to another, divers kinds of tongues : to another, interpretation of speeches.

11 ^b But all these things one and the same Spirit worketh, dividing to every one according as he will.

12 For as the body is one, and hath many members : and all the members of the body, whereas they are many, yet are one body : so also is Christ.

13 For in one Spirit were we all baptized into one body, whether Jews or Gentiles, whether bond or free : and in one Spirit we have all been made to drink.

14 For the body also is not one member, but many.

15 If the foot should say, Because I am not the hand. I am not of the body : is it, therefore, not of the body ?

16 And if the ear should say, Because I am not the eye. I am not of the body : is it, therefore, not of the body ?

17 If the whole body were the eye : where would be the hearing ? If the whole were hearing : where would be the smelling ?

18 But now God hath set the members, every one of them in the body, as it hath pleased him.

19 And if they all were one member, where would be the body ?

20 But now there are many members, indeed, yet one body.

21 And the eye cannot say to the hand : I need not thy help : nor again the head to the feet : I have no need of you.

22 Yea, much more those that seem to be the more feeble members of the body, are more necessary :

23 And such as we think to be the less honourable members of the body, upon these we bestow more abundant honour : and those that are our uncomely parts, have more abundant comeliness.

24 But our comely parts have no need : but God hath tempered the body together, giving the more abundant honour to that which wanted it.

25 That there might be no schism in the body ^c but the members might be mutually careful one for another.

26 And if one member suffer any thing, all the members suffer with it : or if one member glory, all the members rejoice with it.

27 Now you are the body of Christ, and members of member.

28 ^e And God indeed hath set some in the church,

* V. 3. Debit mulier potestatem habere super caput suum, ἔχουσαν, but some Greek copies have περιβάλλον, cinctorium, velum.

† V. 3. Nec ipsa natura docet vos. I do not find an interrogation in the Latin copies, as it is marked in the Greek, οὐδὲ διδάσκει ὑμᾶς. The rest of the text seems to be better connected, if we read it with an interrogation.

‡ V. 17. Jam non est dominicam cenam manducare, κυριακὸν δεῖπνον. This expression is used no where else in the New Testament, and it is much more probable, that by it S. Paul signifies those charitable suppers, which the Christians had together, in imitation of Christ's supper with his disciples before he instituted the holy mysteries, which was after supper, as S. Paul here says, ver. 25, and S. Luke xxii. The sacrament of the Lord's body and blood has been called the Eucharist, even from the first ages of the Christian religion, as appears by the epistles of S. Ignatius, by S. Irenæus, Tertullian, &c. The late pretended reformers found it called by this name in the Catholic Church. Why then should they, who pretend to nothing but Scripture, affect to give it no name but the Lord's supper, when these words in the Scripture signify a different supper ?

CHAP. XII. VER. 1. Concerning spiritual things. In the apostle's time, the Christians in the sacraments of baptism and confirmation, many times received those graces and gifts of the Holy Ghost, by which some of them prophesied, others wrought miracles and cured diseases, others spoke tongues and different languages : now some among the Corinthians made not a right use of these gifts, especially they who had the gift of tongues, and made use of it through vanity, rather than for the profit of others. Wi.

VER. 4—7. There are diversities of graces. Lit. divisions of graces ; but all from the same Spirit, from the same Lord, from the same God : and all these gifts are designed, and to be made use of, for the profit of the faithful. Wi.—S. Justin Mar., S. Irenæus, and Origen bear testimony, that these special gifts of the Holy Ghost were not unusual in their time. S. Paul, in order to curb the vanity of such as seemed to be a little puffed up with the gifts they had received, and likewise to comfort those who had received no such spiritual and extraordinary favours, wishes to teach both parties, that the same Holy Spirit distributes these graces according as they are more conducive to the welfare of his Church and the glory of God. Calret.

VER. 8, &c. Word of wisdom, which differs from that of knowledge, inasmuch as wisdom is a more eminent and sublime knowledge. These are numbered among the gifts of the Holy Ghost. Isa. xi.—To another faith, by which, says S. Chrys.,* is not here meant a belief of revealed truths, but an humble confidence of working miracles, grounded on faith, and on the power and goodness of God. Wi.

VER. 12, &c. As the body is one, &c. From this comparison of the mystical body of Christ, that is, of his Church, to a man's natural body, he brings excellent instructions. 1. That as all members and parts make up the same body, so also is Christ ; that is, so it is in the Church of Christ, which is his mystical body. 2. As all the parts of man's body are enlivened by the same soul, so all in the Church have their life from the same Spirit of God in baptism, and in the sacraments instituted by our Saviour, Christ ; in which we are made to drink of the same Spirit. 3. As all the members, that have such different offices and functions, do but constitute one complete body, so is it in the Church of Christ. 4. As those that seem the less considerable parts of the human body, are no less necessary for the subsistence and harmony of the whole, and stand in need of one another, (for example the head stands in need of the feet,) so in the Church, &c. 5. He takes notice, that as in a natural body, the less honourable, the baser, and as they are called, the uncomely parts, are clothed with greater care and decency, lit. have a more abundant honour bestowed upon them, so in the mystical body, no less, but even a greater care is to be taken of the weaker and more infirm members, of the poor, the weak, the ignorant ; and in the spirit of charity and love, that there may be no divisions or schisms, but a brotherly union ; that if one suffer, another compassionate and assist him, &c. Wi.

VER. 27. Members of member.† The sense seems to be, you are members of the particular Church of Corinth, which is only a part or member of the whole body of the Christian Catholic Church. This is agreeable to the common reading in the Greek, where it is said, you are members of a part. See S. Chrys. hom. 32. Wi.

VER. 28. First apostles, &c. Here he sets down these gifts or graces in their order of dignity. 1. The apostles, blessed above others with all kinds of graces. 2. Prophets, who had the gift of interpreting of prophecies, and of knowing things to come. 3. Doctors, or teachers of the gospel, preferred before those who had the gift of miracles, or of healing the infirm, and before the gift of tongues, which they valued and esteemed so much, which he reckons in a manner in the first apostles, secondly prophets, thirdly teachers, after that miracles, then the graces of healings, helps, governments, kinds of tongues, interpretations of speeches.

29 Are all apostles? Are all prophets? Are all teachers?

30 Are all workers of miracles? Have all the grace of healing? Do all speak with tongues? Do all interpret?

31 But be zealous for the better gifts. And I yet show to you a more excellent way.

CHAP. XIII.

Charity is to be preferred before all other gifts.

IF I speak with the tongues of men, and of angels, and have not charity, I am become as sounding brass, or a tinkling cymbal.

2 And if I should have prophecy, and should know all mysteries, and all knowledge: and if I should have all faith, so that I could remove mountains, and have not charity, I am nothing.

3 And if I should distribute all my goods to feed the poor, and if I should deliver my body to be burned, and have not charity, it profiteth me nothing.

4 Charity is patient, is kind: charity envieth not, lealeth not perversely, is not puffed up,

5 Is not ambitious, seeketh not her own, is not provoked to anger, thinketh no evil,

6 Rejoiceth not in iniquity, but rejoiceth with the truth:

7 Beareth all things, believeth all things, hopeth all things, endureth all things.

8 Charity never faileth; whether prophecies shall be made void, or tongues shall cease, or knowledge shall be destroyed.

9 For we know in part, and we prophesy in part.

10 But when that which is perfect shall come, that which is in part shall be done away.

11 When I was a child, I spoke as a child, I understood as a child, I thought as a child. But when I became a man, I put away the things of a child.

VER. 2, 3. These prove that faith without good works, and especially charity for God and our neighbour, cannot avail to life eternal: faith and charity are both essentially necessary.

VER. 4. *Charity . . . dealeth not perversely. The Greek word here seems taken from the Latin. S. Chrys. expounds it, is not rash, but acteth prudently and considerately. Wi.

VER. 5. Is not ambitious;† which is also the sense of some Greek copies, but in others, and in S. Chrys., it signifies, it is not ashamed of any one. Wi.

VER. 8. Prophecies and tongues last no longer than this life.—Knowledge shall be destroyed, that is, that imperfect knowledge we have in this world. For now we know only in part, we only see, as it were, through a glass, and imperfectly.—Faith, which is of things that appear not, and hope, which is of things that we enjoy not, will cease in heaven, but charity, the greater, or greatest even of these three, will remain, and be increased in heaven. Wi.

VER. 10. S. Aug. proves from this text, that the saints in heaven have a more perfect knowledge of what passes here below, than when they sojourned on earth. De Civit. Dei. l. 22, c. 29.

VER. 11. When I was a child. I, like you, formerly judged of the goodness

12 We see now through a glass in an obscure manner, but then face to face. Now I know in part: but then I shall know even as I am known.

13 And now there remain, faith, hope, and charity these three: but the greatest of these is charity.

CHAP. XIV.

The gift of prophesying is to be preferred before that of speaking strange tongues.

FOLLOW after charity, be zealous for spiritual gifts: but rather that you may prophesy.

2 For he that speaketh in a tongue, speaketh not to men, but to God: for no man heareth. But by the Spirit he speaketh mysteries.

3 But he that prophesieth, speaketh to men unto edification, and exhortation and comfort.

4 He that speaketh in a tongue, edifieth himself; but he that prophesieth, edifieth the church.

5 And I would have you all to speak with tongues, but rather to prophesy. For greater is he that prophesieth than he that speaketh with tongues: unless, perhaps, he interpret, that the church may receive edification.

6 But now, brethren, if I come to you, speaking with tongues, what shall I profit you, unless I speak to you either in revelation, or in knowledge, or in prophecy, or in doctrine?

7 Even things without life that give sound, whether pipe or harp, except they give a distinction of sounds, how shall it be known what is piped or harped?

8 For if the trumpet give an uncertain sound, who shall prepare himself to battle?

9 So likewise you, unless you utter by the tongue plain speech, how shall it be known what is spoken? For you shall be speaking into the air.

10 There are, for example, so many kinds of tongues in this world: and none is without a voice.

11 If then I know not the power of the voice, I shall be to him, to whom I speak, a barbarian, and he, that speaketh, a barbarian to me.

and excellency of these spiritual gifts by the advantages they procured; but after the Almighty had bestowed upon me his particular light, my opinion was far otherwise. Prophecy, and the gift of languages, are certainly very estimable gifts, yet charity is much more excellent. Calmet.

* V. 4. Non agit perperam, οὐ περπερεύεται. S. Chrys. says, τοῦτο οὐ προπεύεται, non est præceps, aut temeraria.

† V. 5. Non est ambitiosa. Some Greek copies, φιλοτιμί. In the ordinary Greek, and in S. Chrys., οὐκ ἀχνημονεῖ. It is not ashamed to undergo any disgrace for God, or our neighbour's sake.

CHAP. XIV. S. Paul gives them further instructions how to make a right use of these three gifts, of prophesying, of interpreting, and especially of speaking tongues. He is far from condemning the gift of speaking tongues, in proper circumstances, but only the indiscreet use, or the abuse of it. This is evident by the 5th verse, I would have you all to speak with tongues, but rather to prophesy. He blames those assemblies and meetings, (ver. 23,) when all present speak tongues together, by which means the infidels that came thither, and ought to be instructed, understood nothing. Wi.

VER. 1. But rather that you may prophesy. That is, declare or expound the mysteries of faith. Ch.

VER. 2. He that speaketh in a tongue, which others at least understand not; nay, which sometimes, perhaps, by the 14th and 15th ver., he himself that spoke tongues did not understand, can only be said to speak to God. Let him then pray for the other gift of interpreting what he speaks, or let another interpret Wi.—Not to men, viz. so as to be heard, that is, so as to be understood by them Ch.

VER. 6. If I come to you, speaking with tongues in this manner, what shall I profit you, unless in revelation, &c., that is, unless I reveal, and expound to you the meaning, by some other gift, as in knowledge, in prophecy, in doctrine. To 12 So you also, forasmuch as you are zealous of spirits, seek to abound unto the edifying of the church.

13 And therefore let him that speaketh a tongue, pray that he may interpret.

14 For if I pray in a tongue, my spirit prayeth, but my understanding is without fruit.

15 What is it then? I will pray in the spirit, I will pray also in the understanding: I will sing with the spirit, I will sing also with the understanding:

16 Else if thou shalt bless in the spirit, how shall he that holdeth the place of the unlearned say Amen to thy blessing? because he knoweth not what thou sayest.

17 For thou indeed givest thanks well, but the other is not edified.

18 I thank my God, I speak with all your tongues.

19 But in the church I had rather speak five words with my understanding, than I may instruct others also, than ten thousand words in a tongue.

20 Brethren, do not become children in sense, but in malice be children, and in sense be perfect.

21 In the law it is written: "That in other tongues, and other lips, I will speak to this people: and neither so will they hear me, saith the Lord."

22 Wherefore tongues are for a sign, not to believers, but to unbelievers: but prophecies, not to unbelievers, but to believers.

23 If, therefore, the whole church come together into one place, and all speak with tongues, and there come in unlearned persons, or unbelievers, will not they say that you are mad?

24 But if all prophesy, and there come in one that believeth not, or one unlearned, he is convinced of all, he is judged of all.

^a Isa. xxviii. 11.

speaking tongues only without interpreting, is no ways instructive. He that speaks to me what I understand not, is no better than a barbarian to me, (so the Greeks called those that spoke not their language). Wi.

VER. 12. Of spirits. Of spiritual gifts. Ch.

VER. 13. Pray that he may interpret. In order that he may be rendered more useful to the Church, as the martyrs, who prayed for those particular gifts they saw would be most useful for themselves, or their neighbours. Calm.

VER. 16. How shall he that holdeth the place of the unlearned (lit. an idiot) say Amen to thy blessing? The unlearned not knowing that you are then blessing, will not be qualified to join with you by saying Amen to your blessing. The use or abuse of strange tongues, of which the apostle here speaks, does not regard the public liturgy of the Church, (in which strange tongues were never used,) but certain conferences of the faithful, (ver. 26, &c.,) in which, meeting together, they discovered to one another their various miraculous gifts of the Spirit, common in those primitive times; amongst which the apostle prefers that of prophesying before that of speaking strange tongues, because it was more to the public edification. Where also note, that the Latin, used in our liturgy, is so far from being a strange or unknown tongue, that it is perhaps the best known tongue in the world. Ch.

VER. 20—22. Tongues are for a sign, not to believers, but to unbelievers, according to what the law (under which he comprehends the prophet Isaiah, xxviii. 11) said, In other tongues, and other lips, I will speak to this people: and neither so will they hear me. S. Paul here gives the sense, rather than the words of the prophet, and expounds them of what happened particularly on the day of Pentecost, when the miraculous gift of tongues was designed to strike the unbelieving people with admiration, and to bring them afterwards to the true faith: but when he adds, that tongues are not for the believers, and that prophecies are not for the unbelievers, he cannot mean that tongues, used with discretion, may not also be profitable to believers, or that prophecies and instructions may not also be profitable to unbelievers, as well as to the believers; for this would be to contradict what he teaches in this chapter, and particularly (ver. 24) where he says, that by prophecy the infidel is convinced, &c. S. Paul, whose design in all this chapter is to regulate the meetings, that they may be performed to greater edification, and for the instruction both of the Christians and unbelievers, thanks God, that he has the gift of tongues more than they, but says, that in the Church, or at such Church-meetings, he had rather, for the common edification of others, speaking five words, &c., than ten thousand words, &c.; and so he concludes, (ver. 29,) be zealous of prophecies, and forbid not to speak with tongues. Wi.

25 The secrets of his heart are made manifest, and so falling down on his face, he will adore God, affirming that God is among you indeed.

26 How is it then, brethren? When you come together, every one of you hath a psalm, hath a doctrine, hath a revelation, hath a tongue, hath an interpretation: let all things be done unto edification.

27 If any speak in a tongue, let it be by two, or at the most by three, and in course, and let one interpret.

28 But if there be no interpreter, let him hold his peace in the church, and speak to himself and to God.

29 And let the prophets speak, two or three: and let the rest judge.

30 But if any thing be revealed to another sitting, let the first hold his peace.

31 For you may all prophesy one by one: that all may learn, and all may be exhorted:

32 And the spirits of the prophets are subject to the prophets.

33 For he is not the God of dissension, but of peace: as also I teach in all the churches of the saints.

34 Let women keep silence in the churches: for it is not permitted to them to speak, but to be subject, as also the law saith.

35 But if they would learn any thing, let them ask their husbands at home. For it is a shame for a woman to speak in the church.

36 Or did the word of God come out from you? Or came it only unto you?

37 If any man seem to be a prophet, or spiritual, let him know the things that I write to you, that they are the commands of the Lord.

^b Gen. iii. 16.

VER. 29—32. Two or three, who have the gift of prophecy, may speak by turns in one of these assemblies, and the rest of the prophets shall judge, whether he be truly inspired, and speak good doctrine. — If any thing be revealed to another sitting by, let the former, who was standing and speaking, hold his peace, which they can do; for the spirits of the prophets are subject to the prophets, that is, they are not like men possessed with evil spirits, who have not power to desist, or to be silent; but these, who are moved by an impulse of the Holy Spirit, have it in their power either to speak, or to be silent, as they judge convenient; for the true God is not the God of dissension and confusion, but the God of peace and order. Wi.

VER. 36—38. Did the word of God first come out from you? This he says to check these new preachers, by putting them in mind, that they are not the first, nor the only Christians, and so must conform themselves to the discipline practised in other Churches, especially since, as their apostle, he hath delivered them the commands of the Lord. And if any man know not, will not acknowledge, and follow these rules, he shall not be known; God will not know, nor approve his ways. The pretended reformers, from the expressions with which the apostle blames the abuse some new converts made of the gifts of tongues, think they have found a plausible argument to reprehend Catholics, for using the same Latin tongue in the Mass, and in the public liturgy. S. Paul does not absolutely forbid the use of this gift of tongues, that were not understood, even by any one (as hath been already observed). All that he blames is, that many, who valued themselves on this gift, spoke at the same time altogether strange tongues, which none understood, but those who had another gift of the Spirit, called the interpretation of speeches, on which account in these meetings was nothing but confusion, without any profit, edification, or instruction, at a time, and in such circumstances, when instructions were absolutely necessary, both for the new converted Christians, and also for the infidels, who flocked thither as much as the Christians. The case is now quite different, when none but Catholics meet, (especially at the Mass,) who have been instructed from their infancy what they are to believe, as to the mysteries of faith, and what they ought to practise, as to the commandments, the sacraments, prayer, and other points which they have in their catechisms, or which have been delivered them by catechetical discourses and instructions. As to the sacrifice of the Mass, which none but they who are priests can offer for the people, of which also a great part, according to the institution of the Church, as the Council of Trent observes, (Sess. 22, cap. 5,) is said with a low voice; it is not performed in Latin in the Western Church, or in Greek in the East, that the meaning of the words may be concealed, since the same Council has laid an express injunction upon all pastors, and upon all that have cure of souls, that they 38 But if any man know not, he shall not be known.

39 Wherefore, brethren, be zealous to prophesy: and forbid not to speak with tongues.

40 But let all things be done decently, and according to order.

CHAP. XV.

Christ's resurrection and ours: the manner of our resurrection.

NOW ^a I make known unto you, brethren, the gospel which I preached to you, which also you have received, and wherein you stand,

2 By which also you are saved: if you hold fast after what manner I preached to you, unless you have believed in vain.

3 For I delivered to you first of all, which I also received: how that Christ died for our sins, ^b according to the Scriptures:

4 ^c And that he was buried, and that he rose again the third day, according to the Scriptures:

5 And that he was seen by Cephas, ^d and after that by the eleven.

6 Then was he seen by more than five hundred brethren at once: of whom many remain until this present, and some are fallen asleep.

7 After that, he was seen by James, then by all the apostles:

8 And last of all, he was seen also by me, as by one born out of due time.

9 ^e For I am the least of the apostles, who am not worthy to be called an apostle, because I persecuted the church of God.

10 But by the grace of God I am what I am: and his grace in me hath not been void, but I have laboured more abundantly than all they: yet not I, but the grace of God with me:

11 For whether I, or they: so we preach, and so you have believed.

12 Now if Christ be preached that he rose again from the dead, how do some among you say, that there is no resurrection of the dead?

^a Gal. i. 11.—^b Isa. liii. 5.—^c Jonas ii. 1.—^d John xx. 19.—^e Acts ix. 3; Eph. iii. 8.—^f Col. i. 18;

frequently, and especially on Sundays, and holidays, expound to the people, what is contained in the Mass, to wit, the parts, and the ceremonies. See 22d Sess. cap. 8. And this command is again repeated, (Sess. 24, cap. 7,) that they instruct the people in their mother tongue concerning the Divine mysteries and sacraments. All that can read, may find the Mass translated into their own language, and the most ignorant are taught and instructed, that by the different parts are represented the death and sufferings of our Saviour, Christ. Now the second thing to be examined is, whether, all things duly considered, it be better to retain the public Church-offices in Latin, and in those ancient dead languages, as they are called, or to turn the liturgy into as many tongues as are spoken in different places and countries! Our adversaries, by this new alteration which they have made, have gone against the judgment of all Christian Churches, both in the West and East, and in all parts of the world. For as Mons. Simon takes notice, in his Critics, all other Churches (the Protestant only excepted) have judged it more expedient to stick to the words and languages of their ancient liturgies, the Grecians to the ancient Greek, which now the ignorant among them do not understand; the like is to be said of the ancient Syriac, Arabic, Coptic, &c. And it is also observed, that the Israelites continued the reading of the law and the prophets in the ancient Hebrew, which the common people of the Jews did not understand after their return from the Babylonian captivity. There is this great convenience, that the same priest can perform all the public Church offices in all places and kingdoms where he travels. All the faithful, whithersoever they have occasion to go, meet with the same Mass and liturgy in the same words abroad, which they were accustomed to hear at home. The same uniformity is every where preserved without change or confusion. But according to the method introduced by the Protestants, the liturgy must be changed into as many different tongues, as there are countries and places, and in almost every century, as we see by experience, languages are liable and subject to considerable changes and alterations. From hence arises a danger of changes, as to the doctrine and belief of the faithful:

13 But if there be no resurrection of the dead, then Christ is not risen again.

14 And if Christ be not risen again, then is our preaching vain, and your faith is also vain.

15 Yea, and we are found false witnesses of God: because we have given testimony against God, that he hath raised up Christ, whom he hath not raised up, if the dead rise not again.

16 For if the dead rise not again, neither is Christ risen again.

17 And if Christ be not risen again, your faith is vain, for you are yet in your sins.

18 Therefore they also, who have slept in Christ, have perished.

19 If in this life only we have hope in Christ, we are of all men the most miserable:

20 But now Christ is risen from the dead, the first-fruits of them that sleep.

21 ^f For by a man came death, and by a man the resurrection of the dead.

22 And as in Adam all die, so also in Christ all shall be made alive.

23 ^g But every one in his own order: the first-fruits, Christ, then they that are of Christ, who have believed in his coming:

24 Afterwards the end, when he shall have delivered up the kingdom to God and the Father, when he shall have abolished all principality, and authority, and power.

25 For he must reign, ^h until he hath put all enemies under his feet.

26 And the enemy, death, shall be destroyed last: ⁱ For he hath put all things under his feet. And whereas he saith, 27 All things are put under him; undoubtedly, he is excepted, who put all things under him.

28 And when all things shall be subdued unto him: then the Son also himself shall be subject to him who subjected all things to himself, that God may be all in all.

errors and heresies are the consequences, that follow such frequent changes, especially when by another false principle of the said reformers, every private man and woman has a right to expound the hard and obscure places of the Holy Scriptures, which make up the chief and greatest part of all public liturgies in all Christian Churches. Wi.

CHAP. XV. This chapter is addressed to some among the Corinthians who denied a resurrection: S. Paul, therefore, in order to cure this philosophical opinion, gives them his counsel and advice in this chapter; and lest he might be thought to preach up a new doctrine, in the beginning of his admonitions he informs them that he is preaching no other gospel than what he has always taught, and wherein they believe. Estius.

VER. 7. He was seen by James. The time is not mentioned in the Gospels. Wi.

VER. 8. As by one born out of due time; not born at the ordinary term, meaning after Christ's ascension. He calls himself so out of humility, abating being commonly imperfect and less than others. Wi.

VER. 10. I have laboured more abundantly. He does not say better, or that he excelled them: and even as to his labours, he gives the honour to God: Not I, but the grace of God with me. Wi.

VER. 24, &c. Afterwards the end; i. e. after the general resurrection of all, will be the end of the world. Then Christ shall deliver up his kingdom, as to this world, over all men, over the devil and his apostate angels, signified by principalties and powers; not but that Christ, even as God and man, shall reign for all eternity, not only over his elect, but over all creatures, having triumphed by his resurrection over the enemy of mankind, the devil, over sin, and over death, which is, as it were, the last enemy of his elect. Wi.

VER. 28. The Son also himself shall be subject to him. That is, the Son will be subject to the Father, according to his human nature, even after the general resurrection; and also the whole mystical body of Christ will be entirely subject to God, obeying him in every thing. Ch.

29 Otherwise what shall they do, who are baptized for the dead, if the dead rise not again at all? why are they then baptized for them?

30 Why also are we in danger every hour?

31 I die daily by your glory, brethren, which I have in Christ Jesus, our Lord:

32 If (according to man) I fought with beasts at Ephesus, what doth it profit me if the dead rise not again?

* Let us eat and drink, for to-morrow we shall die.

33 Be not deceived: evil communications corrupt good manners.

34 Awake, ye just, and sin not. For some have not the knowledge of God; I speak it to your shame.

35 But some man will say: How do the dead rise again? or with what manner of body shall they come?

36 Senseless man, that which thou sowest, is not quickened, except it die first.

37 And that which thou sowest, thou sowest not the body that shall be: but bare grain, as of wheat, or of some of the rest.

38 But God giveth it a body as he will: and to every seed its proper body.

39 All flesh is not the same flesh: but some is that of men, another of beasts, another of birds, another of fishes.

40 And there are bodies celestial, and bodies terrestrial: but the glory of the celestial is one, and that of the terrestrial another.

41 There is one glory of the sun, another glory of the moon, and another glory of the stars. For star differeth from star in glory:

42 So also is the resurrection of the dead. It is sown in corruption, it shall rise in incorruption.

a Wisd. ii. 6; Isa. xxii. 13, and lvi. 12.—b Gen. ii. 7.

VER. 29. *Who are baptized for the dead. He still brings other proofs of the resurrection. This is a hard place, and the words are differently expounded. S. Chrys. and the Greek interpreters, who generally follow him, expound these words, who are baptized for the dead, as if it were the same as to say, who receive baptism with hopes that they themselves, and all the dead, will rise again; and therefore make a profession, when they are baptized, that they believe the resurrection. So that S. Paul here brings this proof, among others, that they who have been made Christians, and continue Christians, cannot call in question the resurrection, which they professed to believe in their creed at their baptism, the creed being always repeated before they were baptized. Others, by being baptized for the dead, understand those who begged and called for baptism when they were in danger of death, and would by no means go out of this world without being baptized, hoping thereby to have a happy resurrection of their bodies: so that to be baptized for the dead is the same as on the account of the state of the dead, which they were entering into. See S. Epiphanius. Hær. 8, p. 114, edit. Petavii. Wi.—Some think the apostle here alludes to a ceremony then in use: but others, more probably, to the prayers and penitential labours performed by the primitive Christians for the souls of the faithful departed: or to the baptism of afflictions and sufferings undergone for sinners spiritually dead. Ch.

VER. 31. By your glory.† He seems, especially by the Greek text, to call God to witness, and to protest by the reasons he has to glory or boast in their conversation, that his life is as it were a continual death. Others expound it, I die daily for your glory, or, that I may have reason to glory for the progress of the gospel. Wi.

VER. 32. With beasts at Ephesus. He seems to mean, with men as cruel and brutal as beasts: for there is not sufficient reason to think that at Ephesus he was exposed to beasts in the amphitheatre. Wi.—Interpreters are divided upon this passage. Calmet is of opinion that S. Paul was exposed in the amphitheatre at Ephesus, but was secured from all injury by the all-powerful hand of God: he produces the testimony of S. Chrys., Theo., S. Amb., S. Cyp., and S. Hil., all of whom understand this passage in the literal sense. Nicephorus cites a book, entitled The Travels of S. Paul, in confirmation of this fact, wherein (he informs us) there is a long account of this transaction. S. Jerom says, that S. Paul was condemned by the governor of Ephesus to be devoured by beasts. Estius seems to maintain the same opinion as Chall. To inspirit us to combat, it is advisable to turn our eyes frequently to a future life. The brevity of the present is a principle common to the morality of Jesus Christ, and to that of Epicurus. But how contrary are the conclusions! Why should we not rather say, "Let us watch,

43 It is sown in dishonour, it shall rise in glory: It is sown in weakness, it shall rise in power:

44 It is sown an animal body, it shall rise a spiritual body. If there be an animal body, there is also a spiritual body, as it is written:

45 "The first man, Adam, was made a living soul: the last Adam a quickening spirit.

46 But not first that which is spiritual, but that which is animal: afterward that which is spiritual.

47 The first man was of the earth, earthly: the second man from heaven, heavenly.

48 Such as is the earthly, such also are the earthly: and such as is the heavenly, such also are they that are heavenly.

49 Therefore as we have borne the image of the earthly let us bear also the image of the heavenly.

50 Now this I say, brethren, that flesh and blood cannot possess the kingdom of God: neither shall corruption possess incorruption.

51 Behold I tell you a mystery: We shall all indeed rise again: but we shall not all be changed.

52 In a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trumpet: for the trumpet shall sound, and the dead shall rise again incorruptible: and we shall be changed.

53 For this corruptible must put on incorruption: and this mortal must put on immortality.

54 And when this mortal hath put on immortality, then shall come to pass the saying that is written: "Death is swallowed up in victory.

55 O death, where is thy victory? O death, where is thy sting?

56 Now the sting of death is sin: and the power of sin is the law.

c Osee xiii. 14; Heb. ii. 14.

and fast, and pray, and do penance, for to-morrow we die; and after that, judgment."—Let us eat and drink, &c. That is, if we did not believe that we were to rise again from the dead, we might live like the impious and wicked, who have no belief in the resurrection. Ch.

VER. 33. Evil communications (or discourses) corrupt good manners. He hints that this error against the resurrection, and the other faults into which they had fallen, were occasioned by the heathen philosophers and other vain teachers among them. Wi.

VER. 35–50. How do the dead rise again? He now answers the objections these new teachers made against the resurrection. S. Chrys. reduces them to these two questions: How is it possible for them to rise? and in what manner, or with what qualities, will they rise? To show the possibility, he brings the example of a grain of wheat, or of any seeds, which must be corrupted, and die as it were in the ground, and then is quite changed, comes up with a blade, a stalk, and an ear quite different from what it was when sown, and yet comes to be wheat again, or to be a tree that produces the same kind of fruit; so God can raise our bodies as he pleaseth. Here the bodies even of the just are subject to corruption, to decay, liable to death, but they shall then rise to a state of incorruptibility and immortality. And so he answers the second question, that here every one's body is a weak, sensual, animal body, clogged with many imperfections, like that of Adam after he had sinned; but at the resurrection, the bodies of the saints shall be spiritual bodies, blessed with all the perfections and qualities of a glorified body, like to that of Christ after he was risen.—But not first that which is spiritual, &c., (ver. 46,) that is, both in Adam and in us, and even in Christ, the body was first mortal, which should afterwards be made spiritual and immortal by a happy resurrection.—Such as is the earthly man, &c., (ver. 48,) that is, as the first man, Adam, was earthly by his earthly and mortal body, so were we and all his posterity earthly; but such as the heavenly man, Christ, was heavenly, and rose with a heavenly and immortal body; so shall all those be heavenly, to whom he shall give a spiritual, a heavenly, and an immortal body at their happy resurrection. Therefore, (ver. 49,) as we have borne the image of the earthly man, (that is, have been made mortal, and also by sin subject to the corrupt inclinations of this mortal body,) so let us bear also the image of the heavenly one, by a new life imitating Christ, by which means we shall be glorified with him, both as to soul and body.—Now this I say, and admonish you, brethren, (ver. 50,) that flesh and blood cannot possess the kingdom of God; i. e. those that lead a sensual and carnal life, nor the corruption of sin, deserve the state of incorruption in glory.

VER. 51. We shall all indeed rise again, but we shall not all be changed.

57 * But thanks be to God, who hath given us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ.

58 Therefore, my beloved brethren, be ye stedfast and unmoveable : always abounding in the work of the Lord, knowing that your labour is not in vain in the Lord.

CHAP. XVI.

Of collections of alms, admonitions, and salutations.

NOW concerning the collections that are made for the saints, as I have given order to the churches of Galatia, so do you also.

2 On the first day of the week let every one of you put apart with himself, laying up what it shall well please him: that when I come, the gatherings be not then to be made.

3 And when I shall be with you: whomsoever you shall approve by letters, those will I send to carry your bounty to Jerusalem.

4 And if it be meet that I go also, they shall go with me.

5 Now I will come to you, when I shall have passed through Macedonia. For I shall pass through Macedonia.

6 And with you, perhaps, I shall make a stay, or even spend the winter: that you may bring me on my journey whithersoever I shall go.

7 For I will not see you now by the way; for I hope that I shall remain with you some time, if the Lord permit.

8 But I will stay at Ephesus until Pentecost.

9 For a gate is opened to me, large and evident: and many adversaries.

10 Now if Timothy come, see that he be with you without fear, for he worketh the work of the Lord, as I also do.

* 1 John v. 5.

This is the reading of the Latin Vulgate, and of some Greek MSS., and the sense is, that all, both good and bad, shall rise, but only the elect to the happy change of a glorious body. Some expound the Greek only to signify, that all shall not sleep, i. e. shall not remain for any time in the grave, as others who die are accustomed to do. Wi.

VER. 54. Death is swallowed up in victory, in regard of the saints and the elect, so that it may be said, O death, where is thy victory? O death, where is thy sting? over which the saints shall triumph, and also over sin and hell. Wi.

CHAP. XVI. VER. 1. S. Paul had been charged by the apostles, at the Council of Jerusalem, to collect alms from the faithful of other Churches, for their poor brethren in Palestine.

VER. 2. On the first day of the week*, which is Sunday, and our sabbath, at the Jewish sabbath, as S. Chrys. observes, so that before this time the apostles had appointed the first day of the week for the worship of God. Wi.

11 Let no man, therefore, despise him, but conduct ye him on his way in peace: that he may come to me. For I look for him with the brethren.

12 As to our brother, Apollo, I let you know that I earnestly intreated him to come to you with the brethren: and indeed it was not his will at all to come at this time. But he will come when he shall have leisure.

13 Watch ye, stand fast in the faith, do manfully, and be strengthened.

14 Let all your actions be done in charity.

15 And I beseech you, brethren, you know the house of Stephanas, and of Fortunatus, and of Achaicus, that they are the first-fruits of Achaia, and have dedicated themselves to the ministry of the saints:

16 That you also be subject to such, and to every one that worketh with us, and laboureth.

17 And I rejoice in the presence of Stephanas, and Fortunatus, and Achaicus, for that which was wanting on your part, they have supplied.

18 For they have refreshed both my spirit and yours. Know them, therefore, that are such.

19 The churches of Asia salute you, Aquila and Priscilla salute you much in the Lord, with the church that is in their house: with whom I also lodge.

20 All the brethren salute you. Salute one another with a holy kiss.

21 The salutation of me, Paul, with my own hand.

22 If any man love not our Lord, Jesus Christ, let him be an anathema, Maran Atha.

23 The grace of our Lord, Jesus Christ, be with you.

24 My charity be with you all in Christ Jesus. Amen.

VER. 5. Now I will come. S. Paul came to Corinth a year after he had written this Epistle. Titus, his favourite disciple, arrived at Corinth before S. Paul, and was received with the greatest marks of esteem: by him he sent his second Epistle to the Corinthians. Calmet.

VER. 9. A gate is opened to me, large and evident; that is, a fair and good occasion of labouring to convert many, where there are many adversaries Wi.

VER. 12. As to our brother. S. Paul here makes an apology for sending Timothy to them, who was a young man, and not so renowned for eloquence and sanctity as Apollo, informing them that Apollo did not wish to come, perhaps on account of the commotions that were at Corinth on his account. Est.

VER. 17. Which was wanting on your part, they have supplied, by informing me, and giving me a full account of all. Wi.

VER. 22. Let him be anathema, accursed. Maran Atha, which, according to S. Jerom and S. Chrys., signify the Lord is come already, and so it is to be taken as an admonition to those who doubted of the resurrection, and is to put them in mind that Christ, the Judge of the living and the dead, is come already. Wi.

VER. 24. Happy, thrice happy the pastor, whose life, labours, zeal, and the testimony of his own conscience, embolden him to say, with S. Paul, that he loves the flock of Jesus Christ, that he only loves them for Jesus Christ, and in Jesus Christ, by virtue of his Holy Spirit.

THE
SECOND EPISTLE OF S. PAUL, THE APOSTLE,
TO THE CORINTHIANS.

This Epistle was written not long after the first, (an. 57,) some months before that to the Romans, from some place in Macedonia, perhaps from Philippi, as marked at the end of divers Greek copies, though it is observed, that those subscriptions are not much to be relied upon. Wi.—In this Epistle S. Paul comforts those who are now reformed by his admonitions to them in the former, and absolves the incestuous man on doing penance, whom he had before excommunicated for his crime. Hence he treats of true penance, and of the dignity of the ministers of the New Testament. He cautions the faithful against false teachers, and the society of infidels. He gives an account of his sufferings, and also of the favours and graces which God hath bestowed on him. Ch.—S. Paul, not being able to come to the Corinthians as soon as he had promised, writes this Epistle to inform them that it was not through inconstancy, but on account of several weighty reasons, which had hitherto hindered him. Several other reasons, likewise, compelled him to write. For during his absence, several false teachers of the Jews had come amongst them, teaching them that it was necessary to observe the law of Moses, in order to be saved. S. Paul, therefore, first excuses himself, by saying that the afflictions and troubles he had met with, had hindered him from coming to them. He next orders the fornicator to be restored to favour; after which he extols his apostleship, forming a comparison between the law of Christ, and of Moses, wherein he blames the false teachers. He then subjoins an exhortation to a pious and holy life, with liberality in their alms, after the example of the Macedonians. As the false teachers had been very industrious in establishing their own reputation, by detracting from that of S. Paul, he enumerates his own sufferings, and the favours he had received from God, showing that he had much more reason to glory than they; and concludes by exhorting them to correct those faults with which they still remain infected. Estius.

CHAPTER I.

He speaks of his troubles in Asia. His not coming to them was not out of levity. The constancy and sincerity of his doctrine.

PAUL, an apostle of Jesus Christ, by the will of God, and Timothy, our brother: to the church of God that is at Corinth, with all the saints who are in all Achaia.

2 Grace to you, and peace from God, our Father, and from the Lord Jesus Christ.

3 * Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, the Father of mercies, and the God of all consolation,

4 Who comforteth us in all our tribulations: that we also may be able to comfort them who are in any distress, by the exhortation wherewith we also are exhorted by God.

5 For as the sufferings of Christ abound in us: so also by Christ doth our comfort abound.

6 Now whether we be in tribulation, it is for your exhortation and salvation: or whether we be comforted, it is for your consolation: or whether we be exhorted, it is

* Eph. i. 3; 1 Peter i. 3.

CHAP. I. VER. 1. S. Timothy, it appears, had been sent to Corinth to confirm the faithful in the doctrine which they had received from S. Paul. After he had fulfilled this commission, he returned to S. Paul, and gave him an account how they had behaved, and what good effects his first letter had produced. He styles him brother, to conciliate to him the esteem and respect of the Corinthians. This Epistle is not merely addressed to the Corinthians, but to all Achaia, of which Corinth was the capital. Estius.—Others think that Timothy had left Corinth before S. Paul's First Epistle had arrived thither; and that this determined S. Paul to send Titus with another disciple thither. See 2 Cor. xii. 18. From him S. Paul had the consolation to learn the happy effects produced by his first letter. See ibid. vi. vii. xi.

VER. 4. Wherewith we also are exhorted by God. The Latin interpreter sometimes translates the same Greek word by exhorted, sometimes by comforted: so the sense may be, with which we are comforted by God. Wi.

VER. 5. S. Paul here styles his own sufferings, the suffering of Christ, to show that Christ takes part and suffers in all his members. S. Chrys.—Though it is generally understood to signify the sufferings undergone for Christ. Estius.

VER. 6. Or whether we be exhorted, it is for your exhortation and salvation.* These words are not in the present Greek copies; the omission is not of moment, being in a manner a repetition of what is in the same verse; the sense is, that this happens to us for your instruction, and that you may be exhorted, or comforted, by our example. This is also signified by the following words, which makes you bear (lit. which worketh the enduring) the like tribulations as we suffer. Wi.

VER. 8. That we were weary even of life.† The Greek seems to imply the condition of one who knows not what way to turn himself, seeing no prospect to avoid the dangers. Wi.—The sufferings which we underwent in Asia were so great, that we for your exhortation and salvation, which worketh the enduring of the same sufferings which we also suffer.

7 That our hope for you may be steadfast: knowing that as you are partakers of the sufferings, so shall you be also of the consolation.

8 For we would not have you ignorant, brethren, of our tribulation, which came to us in Asia, that we were pressed out of measure above our strength, so that we were weary even of life.

9 But we had in ourselves the answer of death, that we should not trust in ourselves, but in God, who raiseth the dead:

10 Who hath delivered, and doth deliver us out of so great dangers: in whom we hope that he will yet also deliver us.

11 You helping withal in prayer for us: that for this gift obtained for us, by many persons, thanks may be given by many in our behalf.

12 For our glory is this, the testimony of our conscience, that in simplicity of heart and sincerity of God, and not in carnal wisdom, but in the grace of God, we despaired of escaping even with our life. We were in daily expectation of death; like the criminal, who has been condemned to death, we had no hopes of escaping, but we trusted in God, who has delivered us from all danger, by your intercession, ver. 11. He alludes to the tumult raised at Ephesus, and other afflictions which befell him on that account, which, though not mentioned in the Acts, (xix. 24, &c.,) were of such a nature as to make him weary of life. S. Chrys.

VER. 9. The sentence. Lit. the answer of death, by which death seemed unavoidable; and this God permitted to teach us not to trust, or confide, in ourselves, but in him only, &c. Wi.

VER. 11. That for this gift,† or favour, obtained for us by many persons, &c. The words and construction are obscure, both in the Latin and Greek. It would seem a tautology if translated, that by many persons thanks may be rendered by many. Therefore the sense must be, that God must now be thanked by many persons for the benefit in preserving my life, and hearing the prayers of many persons, who before had prayed for my life. Wi.—S. Paul, in soliciting the prayers of the Corinthians, did not suppose that this was derogatory to Christ's mediation, nor to the hope he had in God. And can it be more dishonourable to God to solicit the aid of saints in heaven than of sinners on earth? Or is it to be supposed, asks S. Jerom, that the intercession of our fellow-men beneath, is more available with God than the prayers of those who enjoy the beatific vision above. Cont. Vigil.

VER. 12. And sincerity of God,‡ which, according to the style of the Scriptures, seems the same as in great sincerity.—In the grace of God, and more abundantly towards you: the sense seems to be, that God had wrought more wonders and miracles on him for their conversion, than in other places. Wi.

have conversed in this world: and more abundantly towards you.

13 For we write no other things to you, than what you have read and known. And I hope that you shall know unto the end:

14 As also you have known us in part, that we are your glory, as you also are ours on the day of our Lord Jesus Christ.

15 And in this confidence I had a mind to come to you before, that you might have a second favour:

16 And to pass by you into Macedonia, and again from Macedonia to come to you, and by you to be brought on my way towards Judea.

17 When, therefore, I had a mind to do this, did I use levity? Or the things that I purpose, do I purpose according to the flesh, that there should be with me, It is, and It is not.

18 But God is faithful, for our preaching which was to you, was not, It is, and It is not.

19 For the Son of God, Jesus Christ, who was preached among you by us, by me, and Silvanus, and Timothy, was not, It is, and It is not, but, It is, was in him.

20 For all the promises of God are in him, It is: therefore also by him, Amen to God, unto our glory.

21 Now he that confirmeth us with you in Christ, and he that hath anointed us, is God:

22 Who also hath sealed us, and given the pledge of the Spirit in our hearts.

23 But I call God to witness upon my soul, that to spare you, I came not as yet to Corinth: not because we lord it over your faith: but we are helpers of your joy for in faith you stand.

CHAP. II.

He grants a pardon to the incestuous man, upon his doing penance.

BUT I determined this with myself, that I would not come to you again in sorrow:

2 For if I make you sorrowful: who is he then that should make me glad, but he who is made sorrowful by me?

3 And I wrote this same to you; that I may not, when I come, have sorrow upon sorrow, from them of whom I ought to rejoice: having confidence in you all that my joy is the joy of you all.

4 For out of much affliction, and anguish of heart, I wrote to you with many tears: not that you should be made sorrowful, but that you might know the charity I have more abundantly towards you.

5 And if any one have caused grief, he hath not grieved me: but in part, that I may not charge you all.

6 To him who is such a one, this rebuke is sufficient, which is given by many:

7 So that on the contrary you should rather forgive him, and comfort him, lest perhaps such a one be swallowed up with overmuch sorrow.

8 Wherefore I beseech you, that you would confirm your charity towards him.

9 For to this end also did I write, that I might know the experiment of you, whether you be obedient in all things.

10 And to whom you have forgiven any thing, I also

VER. 17. When, therefore, I had a mind, and purposed to come to you, did I use levity? was it an effect of levity, of a fickle mind, and of a want of sincerity? or do I purpose and promise things according to the flesh, to human motives and interest, which make me say, and unsay again, so that in me is yes and no? Wi.

VER. 18. But God is faithful. The sense seems to be, as God is faithful, or I appeal to God, who is faithful, that in what I have preached to you, there is not yes and no; my doctrine concerning the faith in Jesus Christ, is and was always the same. Whether I, or Silvanus, or Timothy, preached the Son of God, that is, what we taught concerning the Son of God, was not yes and no, was not first one thing, and then another; but in him was yes only, that is, in him, and his doctrine, which we have taught, all is yes, firm, and unchangeable. Wi.

VER. 19. It was in him. There was no inconsistency in the doctrine of the apostles, sometimes, like modern sectaries, saying, It is, and at other times saying, It is not. But their doctrine was ever the same, one uniform yea, in Jesus Christ, one Amen, that is, one truth in him. Ch.

VER. 21, 22. This must needs be true, because he is God, who hath confirmed us with you, both us and you in Christ, in the faith, and grace of Christ crucified, who hath anointed us with Divine graces, who hath sealed us, as it were, by an indelible character, in the sacraments of baptism, and confirmation, and ordination, when we were made the ministers of Christ, who in this manner hath given the pledge of his Holy Spirit in our hearts, a sufficient pledge and earnest of his graces in this life, and of the glory he has prepared for us in the next. Wi.—By these texts, and Ephes. iv., the Catholic Church teaches, that we are anointed and consecrated to the service of God, and sealed with a spiritual and distinctive mark, called by divines, a character, (see S. Jer. in Ephes. iv. S. Cyril, Cateches. 17.) which, as it is indelible, can never be iterated. The same is true of confirmation, and holy orders. See S. Aug. cont. Parmen. c. 13, and Conc. Tarrac. c. 6.

VER. 23. Now as to my not coming to you, I call God to witness, that I only deferred my coming out of kindness to you, and that I came not hitherto to Corinth, to spare you, when by reason of the disorders among you, I must have been forced to use severities against those who were not yet reformed.—Not that we lord it over your faith, nor desire to treat God's faithful with severity, or by showing the power that God hath given us: but we rather desire to be helpers and promoters of your joy, that we may rejoice together with you in God. And now I have this greatest comfort to hear that you stand steadfast and firm in the faith of Christ. Wi.

* V. 6. In the Greek we only read, εἴτε δὲ θλιβόμεθα, ὑπὲρ τῆς ὑμῶν παρακλήσεως καὶ σωτηρίας τῆς ἐνεργουμένης ἐν ὑπομονῇ τῶν αὐτῶν παθημάτων, ὧν καὶ ἡμεῖς πάχομεν εἴτε παρακαλούμεθα, ὑπὲρ τῆς ὑμῶν παρακλήσεως καὶ σωτηρίας.

† V. 8. Ita ut tæderet nos etiam vivere, ὥστε ἐξαπορηθῆναι. See S. Chrys. om. β'. p. 550.

‡ V. 11. Ut ex multorum personis, ejus, quæ in nobis est donationis, per multos gratius agantur pro nobis. The Greek is clearer, ἵνα ἐκ πολλῶν προσώπων, τὸ εἰς ἡμᾶς χάρισμα, διὰ πολλῶν εὐχαριστηθῇ ὑπὲρ ὑμῶν.

§ V. 12. Sinceritate Dei, εὐκρινεία Θεοῦ, so montes Dei, i. e. magni.

|| V. 22. Pignus spiritus, τὸν ἀρραβῶνα. That by receiving the earnest, says S. Chrys., p. 662, you may be assured to receive the whole.

CHAP. II. VER. 1. S. Paul continues to justify his not coming to them as he promised. He told them that he did not wish to domineer over their faith, but that his whole design was to contribute to their joy, and that he did not wish to visit them as long as any thing remained worthy of correction, lest his presence should only increase their sorrow. And if in his former Epistle he made use of strong expressions, it was not through any design to make them sad, but merely to correct them, by which he manifested his great charity for them. Calmet.

VER. 2. Who is he that should make me glad? &c. The sense is to be gathered from the circumstances. He speaks of the Corinthian guilty of incest, whom he brought to sorrow and repentance, by excommunicating him in his former Epistle, and now S. Paul rejoiceth at his conversion. Wi.

VER. 5. And if any one (he means the same incestuous man) have caused grief, or caused me to grieve, he hath not grieved me, that is, not me only, but all the virtuous Christians at Corinth: but in part, that I may not charge you all with this fault. The sense seems to be, but in part, that is, it was only one man, and some that joined with him, by showing themselves unconcerned for his scandalous crime, so that I do not blame the rest: or as it was but in part, that is, it was only a passing trouble for a little time, since by admonitions and severities, he soon repented. Wi.

VER. 6. This rebuke, already given him, may suffice, and I would have you pardon and comfort him, lest he be overwhelmed, and as it were swallowed up * and devoured by an excess of grief, so that by the artifices of satan, which we are acquainted with, it turn to his greater prejudice. I wrote, and proceeded in that manner, to know by experience, how far you are obedient to me, and to the ministers of Christ. Wi.

VER. 9. This was another reason why I wrote my former letter to you, viz. to try your obedience, and your attachment to the faith, and that I might know whether the difference of opinion which prevailed among you had prevented you from being obedient. C.

VER. 10. I also. The apostle here granted an indulgence, or pardon, in the person, and by the authority of Christ, to the incestuous Corinthian, whom before he had put under penance: which pardon consisted in a releasing of part of the temporal punishment due to his sin. Ch.—Now as you have pardoned him by my instructions, and have received him again into your communion, I also pardon him, and confirm what you have done, for your sake, as well as for his, and for, what I forgave, if I have forgiven any thing, for your sakes have I done it in the person of Christ, 11 That we may not be circumvented by satan: for we are not ignorant of his devices.

12 And when I was come to Troas, for the gospel of Christ, and a door was opened to me in the Lord, 13 I had no rest in my spirit, because I found not Titus, my brother, but bidding them farewell, I went from thence to Macedonia.

14 Now thanks be to God, who always causeth us to triumph in Christ Jesus, and maketh manifest the odour of his knowledge by us in every place.

15 For we are unto God the good odour of Christ in them who are saved, and in them who perish.

16 To some, indeed, the odour of death unto death: but to the others, the odour of life unto life. And for these things who is so sufficient?

17 For we are not as many adulterating the word of God, but with sincerity, but as from God, in the sight of God, we speak in Christ.

CHAP. III.

He needs no commendatory letters. The glory of the ministry of the New Testament.

DO we begin again to commend ourselves? Or do we need (as some do) epistles of commendation to you, or from you?

2 You are our epistle, written in our hearts, which is known and read by all men:

3 You being made manifest, that you are the epistle of dispense with any further severities of a longer penance, which he deserved. S. Chrys.

VER. 11. In the name and in the person of Christ, I ordered him to be excommunicated; in the same, I order him now to be readmitted into your communion, and this for your sake. S. Amb.

VER. 12, &c. When I was come to Troas . . . and a door was opened to me, towards promoting the gospel, which I never neglect, yet I had no rest in my spirit; I remained still in a great concern for you, not meeting with Titus, from whom I expected with impatience to hear how all things went with you at Corinth: I went on, therefore, bidding them farewell at that time, and deferred the good I might do by a longer stay with them till another time. Wi.—Troas is the same town as the ancient Troy or Illium, famous for its ten years' siege, when it was destroyed by the Greeks in the year 1184. B. Christ. Estius.

VER. 14. Thanks be to God, who always causeth us to triumph by his grace, so that we every where make manifest the odour of his knowledge, making God known and worshipped, and instructing the people in the faith of Christ, to the advantage and eternal good of those who hearken to us, and are saved; but to the greater condemnation of those, who, after they have heard of the truth, by their own fault remain obstinate: so that the preaching of the gospel is to some the odour of death unto death; when they remain dead in their sins, they incur an eternal death: and to them who are converted, the odour of life unto life; they receive the spiritual life of grace in their souls in this world, and an eternal life in the next. Wi.

VER. 16. The odour of death, &c. The preaching of the apostle, which by its fragrant odour brought many to life, was to others, through their own fault, the occasion of death; by their wilfully opposing and resisting that Divine call. Ch.—And for these things who is so sufficient? as we whom Christ hath chosen to be the ministers of his gospel? In the Greek copies and in S. Chrys., we only read, who is fit? as if he said, who is fit to discharge this great duty without the continual assistance of God's grace? The reading of the Latin Vulgate seems to agree better with the following verse of the next chapter, when he answers their objection, Do we then begin again to commend ourselves? Wi.—Who are so fit as we who are chosen by God to fulfil his ministry? If God had not chosen us, how should we have been able to acquit ourselves of so arduous an undertaking? for we did not intrude or thrust ourselves into this ministry. C.

* V. 7. Ne forte . . . absorbicatur, καταποθῆ, absorbeatur, deglutitur.

* V. 10. In persona Christi, ἐν προσώπῳ Χριστοῦ, [not only before Christ,] and S. Chrys. says, ὡς τοῦ Χριστοῦ κελεύοντός, Christo jubente, though he had not done sufficient penance, nor deserved it: οὐ γὰρ ἐπειδὴ ἀξίός ἐστι οὐδὲ ἐπειδὴ ἀρχαίων μετάνοιαν ἐπέδειξαν.

* V. 16. Et ad hæc quis tam idoneus? but in the Gr. without tam; καὶ πρὸς ταῦτα τίς ἰκανός.

* V. 17. Adulterantes, κατελείοντες, cauponantes: upon which S. Chrys., p. 576. ὅταν τις τοῦτον ἐν οἶνῳ

Christ, ministered by us, and written not with ink, but with the Spirit of the living God: not in tables of stone, but in fleshy tables of the heart.

4 And such confidence we have, through Christ, towards God:

5 Not that we are sufficient to think any thing of ourselves, as of ourselves: but our sufficiency is from God:

6 Who also hath made us fit ministers of the new testament: not in the letter, but in the Spirit: for the letter killeth: but the Spirit giveth life.

7 Now if the ministration of death, engraven with letters upon stones, was glorious; so that the children of Israel could not stedfastly behold the face of Moses, for the glory of his countenance, which is done away:

8 How shall not the ministration of the Spirit be rather in glory?

9 For if the ministration of condemnation be glory much more the ministration of justice aboundeth in glory!

10 For even that which was glorious in this part was not glorified, by reason of the glory that excelleth.

11 For if that which is done away, was glorious: much more that which remaineth is in glory.

12 Having, therefore, such hope, we use much confidence:

13 *And not as Moses put a veil over his face, that the children of Israel might not stedfastly look on the face of that which is made void,

* Exod. xxxiv. 35.

CHAP. III. VER. 1. The apostle had been obliged, in different parts of his First Epistle, to say some things to his own advantage, in order to maintain the dignity of his ministry against false teachers, who had endeavoured to lessen his authority. He is again obliged to show the excellency of his ministry, and the superiority of the gospel over the law of Moses. Theodoret.

VER. 2. You are our epistle, better, and of greater force, than any commendatory epistle, written and engraven in my heart, by the love and affection I bear you. Wi.

VER. 3. Though the Scriptures be of the Holy Ghost, the proper book of Christ's doctrine is in the hearts of the faithful, the true mansions of the Holy Spirit. Hence S. Irenæus says, "If the apostles had left no writings, ought we not to follow the order of tradition they delivered to the persons to whom they committed the Churches? How many barbarous nations have received and practised the faith without any thing written in ink and paper!" l. 3, c. 4.

VER. 5, 6. To think any thing of ourselves, that may deserve a reward in heaven.—But Christ hath made us fit ministers of his New Testament by the Spirit. for the letter of the Old Testament killeth, but the Spirit of the New Testament giveth life. Wi.—The letter. Not rightly understood, and taken without the Spirit. Ch.—This verse (6th) refers to that in the last chapter, where he says, And for these things who is so fit? Who is so capable of such a ministry? It is God alone who gives us strength, light, and grace. I am far from giving a part only to God, and a part to myself. It all exclusively belongs to him. S. Chrys.

VER. 7. Now if the ministration of death: he meaneth the former* law, which by giving them a greater knowledge, and not giving traces of itself to fulfil those precepts, occasioned death, was notwithstanding glorious, accompanied with miracles on Mount Sinai, and so that the Israelites, when Moses came down from the mountain, could not bear the glory of his countenance, which he was forced to cover with a veil, when he spake to them. Shall not the ministration of the Spirit in the new law, which worketh our sanctification and salvation, abound with much greater glory? especially since the old law was to be made void, and pass away.—Neither was that glorified, or to be esteemed glorious, in comparison of the new law, the blessings of the new so far surpassing those of the old law. Wi.

VER. 12. Having, therefore, such hope, we use much confidence and assurance, and need not conceal God's promises, nor put a veil over our face, as Moses did the children of Israel not being able to look on the face of that which is made void, meaning on that passing glory of Moses, to whom the law was given, and of that law, and all that belonged to it, which was only to last till the coming of Christ, and which is now made void. The reading of the ordinary Greek is now different, viz. that they looked not on the end of that which is now made void, meaning by the end, on Christ, who was the end of the law, which now by his coming is abolished and made void, as it was always designed to be. Wi.

VER. 13. The apostle here informs the Corinthians that the apostles speak with confidence, without any veil, discovering to men mysteries hidden from the foundation of the world; not like Moses, who put a veil on his face that the Israelites might not look stedfastly, or might not discover the weakness and short duration

14 But their senses were made dull. For, until this day, the self-same veil, in the reading of the old testament, remaineth not taken away, (because in Christ it is done away)

15 But even until this day, when Moses is read, the veil is upon their heart.

16 But when they shall be converted to the Lord, the veil shall be taken away.

17 *Now the Lord is a Spirit: and where the Spirit of the Lord is, there is liberty.

18 But we all, beholding the glory of the Lord with face uncovered, are transformed into the same image from glory to glory, as by the Spirit of the Lord.

CHAP. IV.

The sincerity of his preaching; his comfort in his afflictions.

THEREFORE, seeing we have this ministration, according as we have obtained mercy, we faint not.

2 But we renounce the hidden things of dishonesty, not walking in craftiness, nor adulterating the word of God, but by manifestation of the truth commending ourselves to every man's conscience, in the sight of God.

3 And if our gospel be also hidden: it is hidden to those who perish.

4 In whom the god of this world hath blinded the minds of unbelievers, that the light of the gospel of the glory of Christ, who is the image of God, should not shine unto them.

5 For we preach not ourselves, but Jesus Christ, our Lord: and ourselves, your servants, through Jesus.

6 For God, who commanded the light to shine out of darkness, hath shined in our hearts, to give the light of the knowledge of the glory of God, in the face of Christ Jesus.

7 But we have this treasure in earthen vessels: that the excellency may be of the power of God, and not of us.

* John iv. 24.

of the law, which was represented by the light that surrounded his face, and which quickly passed away. S. Paul here gives the allegorical explanation of the light and veil on the face of Moses. Estius.

VER. 14, 15. But the senses and minds of the Jews have been dulled, hardened, and blinded, so that to this day we may say the veil remains over their eyes, and minds, and hearts; that is, the greatest part of them understand not Moses' books, prophecies, and those things that were figures of Christ. But they shall understand them, and the veil shall be taken off, when they shall be converted before the end of the world. Wi.

VER. 17. Now the Lord is a Spirit. Many expound it, the Spirit is the Lord. And where this Lord and this Spirit is, there is liberty; i. e. by this Spirit, they who are sanctified are freed from the slavery of sin and the devil. Wi.—We must recollect what he had said before, that the letter killeth and that the Spirit giveth life; that by the Spirit was meant the gospel, and by the letter was meant the law of Moses. Here he says that God is the Spirit, in opposition to the law of Moses; that he is the Author of the liberty of the children of God, in the new law; that in the new law are found the true adorers in spirit and truth, in opposition to the spirit of servitude which animated the Jews. Calmet.

VER. 18. We all, beholding, &c., i. e. we who have been called to the faith of Christ, have received a greater knowledge; and we hope and believe to be hereafter transformed into the same image, and to be in some measure like unto God, whom we shall see and enjoy, when we pass from the less glory of grace and sanctification in this life, which is the seed of glory, to the state of a more perfect glory and happiness in heaven, says S. Augustin. Wi.

* V. 7. Ministratio mortis, διακονία θανάτου. Thus, says S. Chrys., he calls the law, τὸν νόμον λέγει. p. 584.

† V. 12. In faciem ejus quod evacuat; but the common Greek copies, and also S. Chrys., εἰς τὸ τέλος, in finem.

‡ V. 18. S. Aug. de gloria fidei in gloriam speciei, de gloria, quâ Filii Dei sumus. in gloriam, quâ similes ei erimus, quoniam videbimus eum sicuti est.

CHAP. IV. VER. 3. The apostle here brings another proof of the sincerity of his preaching, viz. the success with which it is attended. And he says, if there be

8 In all things we suffer tribulation, but are not distressed: we are straitened, but are not destitute:

9 We suffer persecution, but are not forsaken: we are cast down, but we perish not:

10 Always bearing about in our body the dying of Jesus, that the life also of Jesus may be made manifest in our bodies.

11 For we who live, are always delivered unto death for Jesus' sake: that the life also of Jesus may be made manifest in our mortal flesh.

12 So then death worketh in us, but life in you.

13 But having the same spirit of faith, as it is written: I have believed, therefore I have spoken: we also believe, and therefore we speak:

14 Knowing that he who raised up Jesus, will raise us up also with Jesus, and place us with you.

15 For all things are for your sakes: that the grace abounding through many, may abound in thanksgiving to the glory of God.

16 For which cause we faint not; but though our outward man is corrupted: yet the inward man is renewed day by day.

17 For our present tribulation, which is momentary and light, worketh for us above measure exceedingly an eternal weight of glory.

18 While we look not at the things which are seen, but at the things which are not seen. For the things which are seen, are temporal: but the things which are not seen, are eternal.

CHAP. V.

He is willing to leave his earthly mansion, to be with the Lord. His charity for the Corinthians.

FOR we know that if our earthly house of this habitation be dissolved, that we have a building of God, a house not made with hands, eternal in heaven.

b Psal. cxv. 10.

any who have not yet received it, that is their own fault. For had they been as eager to receive it, as we have been to announce it to them, the whole world had long since been converted. Theodoret.

VER. 4. In whom the god of this world hath blinded the minds of unbelievers.* Thus the words are placed, both in the Latin and Greek text, so that the true God seems to be called the God of this world, as he is elsewhere called the God of heaven, the God of Abraham. God, says S. Chrys., blinded, that is, permitted them to be blinded. Others translate, in whom God hath blinded the minds of the infidels of this world; so that this world may be joined with unbelievers, and not with God: and by the God of this world, some understand the devil, called sometimes the prince of this world, that is, of the wicked. Wi.

VER. 8. We are straitened.† This, by the Greek, seems the sense of the Latin word, which is taken to signify, one perplexed, and in a doubt. See John xiii. 22, Acts xxv. 20; Gal. iv. 20. Wi.

VER. 12. Death worketh in us, when we are under persecutions, and dangers of death, and life in you, who live in ease and plenty. Wi.

VER. 13. We also believe, &c. That is, we have the like faith as David, when he spoke in that manner; we hope and believe God will deliver us, or at least raise us up from the dead with Jesus. Wi.

VER. 17. Worketh. In the Greek, κατεργάζεται, which the English Bible of the year 1577, falsely renders by prepareth, unwilling to allow, with the apostle, that tribulation worketh eternal glory.

* V. 4. In quibus Deus hujus sæculi excecavit mentes infidelium, in oīs ὁ θεὸς τοῦ αἰῶνος τούτου ἐτύφλωσε τὰ νοήματα τῶν ἀπίστων. S. Chrys. ὁμ. η. γ. 594, lin. 11, says, it should be read thus, ἀναγνωστίον, ὅτι τῶν ἀπίστων τοῦ αἰῶνος τούτου, ἐτύφλωσεν ὁ θεὸς τὰ νοήματα.

† V. 8. Aporianur, ἀπορούμενοι, from α and πόρος, transitus. See Mr. Leigh.

CHAP. V. VER. 1. Of this habitation.* In the Gr., of this tabernacle; i. e. of the body. S. Chrys. takes notice that a tabernacle, or tent, is not to dwell in for a long time, but only to lodge in for a while, as this life is short; but the building God has prepared for his elect in heaven, is for eternity. Wi.

2 For in this also we groan, desiring to be clothed over with our habitation, which is from heaven :

3 ^a Yet so that we may be found clothed, not naked.

4 For we also, who are in this tabernacle, do groan, being burthened : because we would not be unclothed, but clothed over, that what is mortal may be swallowed up by life.

5 Now he that maketh us for this very thing, is God, who hath given us the pledge, of the Spirit.

6 Therefore, having always confidence, knowing that, while we are in the body, we are absent from the Lord :

7 (For we walk by faith, and not by sight :)

8 We are confident, I say, and have a good will to be absent rather from the body, and to be present with the Lord.

9 And therefore we labour, whether absent or present, to please him.

10 ^b For we must all appear before the judgment-seat of Christ, that every one may receive the proper things of the body, according as he hath done, whether it be good or evil.

11 Knowing, therefore, the fear of the Lord, we persuade men : but to God we are manifest. And I trust also that in your consciences we are manifest.

12 We commend not ourselves again to you, but give you occasion to glory in our behalf : that you may have somewhat to answer them who glory in face, and not in heart.

13 For whether we are transported in mind, it is to God : or whether we are more moderate, it is for you.

14 For the charity of Christ presseth us : judging this, that if one died for all, then all were dead.

15 And Christ died for all : that they also, who live, may not now live to themselves, but to him, who died for them, and rose again.

^a Apoc. xvi. 15.—^b Rom. xiv. 10.—^c Isa. xliii. 19; Apoc. xxi. 5.

VER. 2. To be clothed over, signifying the natural desire men have not to die, but to be changed without dying to a happy state in heaven. Wi.

VER. 3. That we may be found clothed, not naked,† not divested of the body, as before; i. e. we desire an immortal happiness without dying : though some expound it, not naked; i. e. not deprived of the glory we hope for. Wi.

VER. 5. He that maketh us for this very thing, (lit. to this same thing,) is God, who created us to be eternally happy, who hath given us the earnest of the Spirit. See chap. i. 22. Wi.

VER. 6. We are absent from the Lord, and as it were pilgrims. He compares the condition of men in this mortal life to that of pilgrims far from their own beloved country, yet with hopes to arrive there, which makes them willing to undergo dangers, and makes Christians even resigned to death, to a separation of the body from the soul, that they may be present with the Lord, and enjoy him. But let every one reflect that he must be judged, and receive a reward or punishment, according to his works, ver. 10. Wi.

VER. 12. We commend not, nor desire to commend, ourselves, but they who may do harm to others, and to the progress of the gospel, make it necessary to speak what may give you an occasion to answer their objections, and even to glory in my behalf against those who glory in face, in outward appearances of learning and talents, but not in heart, being sensible themselves that they have no solid grounds of boasting in this manner. Wi.

VER. 13. For whether we are transported in mind, and out of zeal for the good of others seem to exceed in speaking of ourselves, it is to God, for God's honour and that of his ministers : or whether we are more moderate,† (lit. sobber,) that is, if I speak not, even what with truth I might, of my own actions, it is to you, to give you an example of modesty and humility. Wi.

VER. 14. For the charity of Christ, the love of God. the love that Christ has shown to me and all mankind, and a return of love due to him, presseth me on, is the motive of all that I do; because I consider that if one, our Redeemer Christ Jesus, died for all, then all were dead, and had been lost in their sins, had not Christ come to redeem us. Thus S. Aug. in many places, proving original sin against the Pelagians. Wi.

VER. 15. And Christ died for all, (not only for the predestinate or the elect,) that they also, who live, may not now live to themselves; that they may not follow their own inclinations of their nature, corrupted by sin, but may seek in all things the will of Christ, their Redeemer, their Lord, to whom they belong, who died and rose again for them. Wi.

16 Wherefore, henceforth we know no man according to the flesh. And if we have known Christ according to the flesh : but now we know him so no longer.

17 If then any be in Christ a new creature : old things are passed away : behold all things are made new.

18 But all things are of God, who hath reconciled us to himself, by Christ : and hath given to us the ministry of reconciliation.

19 For God indeed was in Christ, reconciling the world to himself, not imputing to them their sins, and he hath placed in us the word of reconciliation.

20 We are, therefore, ambassadors for Christ, God as it were exhorting by us. For Christ, we beseech you, be ye reconciled to God.

21 Him, who knew no sin, he hath made sin for us, that we might be made the justice of God in him.

CHAP. VI.

He exhorts them to a correspondence with God's grace, and not to associate with unbelievers.

AND we helping, do exhort you, that you receive not the grace of God in vain.

2 For he saith : "In an accepted time have I heard thee : and in the day of salvation have I helped thee. Behold, now is the acceptable time : behold, now is the day of salvation.

3 ^a Giving no offence to any one, that our ministry be not blamed.

4 But in all things let us exhibit ourselves as the ministers of God, in much patience, in tribulation, in necessities, in distresses,

5 In stripes, in prisons, in seditions, in labours, in watchings, in fastings,

6 In chastity, in knowledge, in long suffering, in sweetness, in the Holy Ghost, in charity unfeigned,

^a Isa. xlix. 8.—^b 1 Cor. x. 32.—^c 1 Cor. iv. 1.

VER. 17. If then any be in Christ, &c. The sense seems to be, if by believing in Christ we are become as it were new creatures, rescued by his grace and his Spirit, the old things are passed away, we must renounce all former carnal affections, all sin and all errors in which either Jews or Gentiles lived.—Behold all things are made new: the New Testament succeeds to the Old, the law and doctrine of Christ to the law of Moses, the Christian Church to the Jewish Synagogue, truth and grace to types and figures, &c. Wi.—With the renovated Christian all his thoughts, sentiments, inclinations, and actions, are new.

VER. 19. Not imputing; i. e. truly taking away our sins, blotting out the handwriting of the decree which was against us, . . . fastening it to the cross, as it is said, Col. ii. 14. And to us, who are his apostles and the ministers of the gospel, he hath imparted and committed this word of reconciliation, by the preaching of his doctrine, and the administration of his sacraments, &c. In these functions we act and we speak to you as the ambassadors of Christ; we speak to you in his name, we represent his person, when we exhort you to be reconciled to God. CHAP. VI. VER. 1. We helping, or in the Greek, working together, that is, with God, as employed by him, or as his ministers, and ambassadors, we exhort you not to receive the grace of God in vain, by resisting his interior graces, by an idle or a wicked life. Wi.

16 And what agreement hath the temple of God with idols? *For you are the temple of the living God: as God saith: ^bI will dwell in them, and walk among them, and I will be their God, and they shall be my people.

17 Wherefore, go out from among them, and be ye separate, saith the Lord, and touch not the unclean thing:

18 And I will receive you: ^dand I will be a Father to you: and you shall be my sons and daughters, saith the Lord Almighty.

CHAP. VII.

The apostle's affection for the Corinthians: his comfort and joy on their account.

a 1 Cor. iii. 16, 17, and vi. 19.—b Lev. xxvi. 12.

VER. 8. The apostles maintained the character, and fulfilled the duties of the ministers of Christ, equally in prosperity and adversity; they continued to speak the truth, though regarded by the Jews as seducers; exposed to all kinds of dangers, they relied on God, who preserved them, though in the midst of dangers, and of death itself. Though they possessed nothing in this world, yet God never permitted them to remain in want: his providence procured for them all things necessary. Though they had n thing in their possession, yet they procured relief for others, by the alms, of which they were made the disposers, though this latter part is generally understood of the spiritual riches, which they bestowed upon their auditors. Estius.

VER. 11. &c. Our mouth is open to speak with freedom and confidence.—Our heart is enlarged, as it were, with the warmth of love and charity.—But you are straitened in your own bowels; you have not the like charity and love for me, nor for all your brethren, and for all mankind, &c. Wi.—The apostle here complains that the Corinthians have not the same affection for him which he has for them: as if he should say, however enlarged your heart may be, through the love you have for me, it can never equal the ardour of my love for you. He alludes to those who followed some false teachers, of whom he says a little after, Though I love you more, I am less loved.—But having the same recompence, by a just return have the same affection for me, as I have for you. S. Chrys.—Let your heart be dilated for me, and receive the advice I give you as coming from a father, who most tenderly loves his children. A.

VER. 14. Bear not the yoke together with unbelievers. He does not mean that they must wholly avoid their company, which could not be done, but not to have too intimate a friendship with them, not to marry with them, to avoid their vices. Wi.

VER. 15. Such as have cast off the yoke of God are called children of Belial. John viii. 44. Belial, in its radical signification, means without yoke. V.

VER. 16. The apostle here blames the too great affection the Corinthians had for the Gentiles, who sometimes invited them to their religious feasts, at which were eaten meats which had been offered to idols, and which gave scandal both to the Christians and Gentiles. To draw them from these feasts he tells them, that they are the temples of the Holy Ghost, and that consequently they ought not to make themselves the temples of devils, by eating of the sacrifices of devils. Calmet.—S. Paul, in this and the foregoing verses, clearly shows that the faithful ought not to frequent, on any account, the tabernacles of those who have left the Church.

HAVING, therefore, these promises, dearly beloved, let us cleanse ourselves from all defilement of the flesh and of the spirit, perfecting sanctification in the fear of God.

2 Receive us. We have injured no one, we have corrupted no one, we have overreached no one.

3 I speak not this to your condemnation. For we have said before, that you are in our hearts, to die together, and to live together.

4 Great is my confidence with you, great is my glorying for you. I am filled with comfort, I exceedingly abound with joy in all our tribulation.

5 For also, when we were come into Macedonia, our flesh had no rest, but we suffered all tribulation: combats without, fears within.

6 But God, who comforted the humble, comforted us by the coming of Titus.

7 And not by his coming only, but also by the consolation, wherewith he was comforted in you, relating to us your desire, your mourning, your zeal for me, so that I rejoice the more.

8 For although I made you sorrowful by my epistle, I do not repent: and if I did repent, seeing that the same epistle (although but for a time) did make you sorrowful:

9 Now I am glad: not because you were made sorrowful: but because you were made sorrowful unto penance. For you were made sorrowful according to God, that in nothing you should suffer damage by us.

10 For the sorrow which is according to God, worketh penance unto salvation, which is lasting: but the sorrow of the world worketh death.

11 For behold this self-same thing, that you were made sorrowful according to God, how great carefulness doth it work in you: yea, defence; yea, indignation; yea, fear;

c Isa. lii. 11.—d Jer. xxxi. 9.—e 1 Pet. ii. 19.

CHAP. VII. VER. 1. Having, therefore, these promises, mentioned just before, that God would be a father to us, &c., let us cleanse ourselves from all filth or defilement of the flesh, and of the spirit, that is, from all kind of sins. It is not without good grounds that S. Thomas, and the divines in the schools, tell us that some sins, as those of impurity, gluttony, and drunkenness, may be called carnal sins, being disorders that in a particular manner affect and defile the body; and that other kinds of sins may be called spiritual sins, their malice and disorder affecting, and residing, as it were, in the mind or spirit of man; such are all the sins of pride, envy, idolatry, &c. Wi.

VER. 2. Receive us.* This, according to S. Chrys. and others, is the same as what he said before, be enlarged or dilated in heart, that is, have a love, and true charity, and a zeal for us, and for the ministers of the gospel. Wi.

VER. 5. Our flesh, that is, I myself, had no rest, because of the concern I was in about you, after I had written my last letter. Wi.—Combats without, fears within. Openly persecuted by the pagans, by the Jews, and by false brethren, I was tormented in my interior by the apprehensions and fears I have just related to you. I was under continual apprehension, that my letter had been written in too severe a tone. I was in doubt whether the incestuous man would submit to the sentence of excommunication, and censure pronounced against him. And I said with myself, will not false teachers undo, and render fruitless all my endeavours to benefit the Church? Will not my letter alienate their minds from me? Calmet.

VER. 6, 7, &c. God . . . comforted us by the coming of Titus, and with the joyful news he brought me, of the submission and repentance of the incestuous man, and of the good state you are in, of your earnest desire to see me. Now I have no reason to repent, that I wrote to you pretty sharply; though my letter troubled you, through the concern you were in on the account of the incestuous man, yet both his sorrow, and yours for his sake, will turn to his and your greater advantage, with a lasting repentance, such as a true sorrow produces, when it is from God. I see the good effects, by the apology or defence you make for yourselves, by your zealous indignation, and, as it were, revenge against sin, &c. Wi.

VER. 10. For the sorrow, &c. Sorrow for the loss of temporal goods, such as friends, riches, honours, &c., is productive of no good effects; but, on the contrary, it ruins the constitution, exciting in the soul emotions of anger, murmuring, revenge, and brooding melancholy. It moreover betrays an inordinate attachment to creatures. But sorrow for our own sins, and for those of others, sufferings which we endure for the glory of God, work penance unto salvation, which is lasting.

yea, desire; yea, zeal; yea, revenge: in all things you have showed yourselves to be undefiled in the matter.

12 Wherefore, though I wrote to you, not on the account of him who did the injury, nor of him who suffered the wrong: but to manifest our solicitude, which we have for you,

13 Before God: therefore we were comforted. But in our consolation we did the more abundantly rejoice for the joy of Titus, because his spirit was refreshed by you all.

14 And if I have boasted any thing to him of you, I have not been put to shame, but as we have spoken all things to you in truth, so also our boasting which was made to Titus, is found a truth:

15 And his bowels are more abundantly towards you; remembering the obedience of you all, how with fear and trembling you received him.

16 I rejoice that in all things I have confidence in you.

CHAP. VIII.

He exhorts them to contribute bountifully to relieve the poor of Jerusalem.

NOW we make known to you, brethren, the grace of God, that hath been given in the churches of Macedonia:

2 That in much experience of tribulation they have had abundance of joy, and their very deep poverty hath abounded unto the riches of their simplicity:

3 For according to their power I bear them witness, and beyond their power they were willing,

4 With much intreaty, begging of us the grace and communication of the ministry that is done towards the saints.

5 And not as we hoped, but they gave their own selves first to the Lord, then to us by the will of God;

6 Insomuch, that we desired Titus, that as he had begun, so also he would finish in you this same grace.

or, as the Greek has it, worketh penance unto salvation, of which we shall never repent.

VER. 12. I wrote to you not on the account, &c. That is, not only on his account, or the account of his father, who suffered the injury, (by which his father seems to have been then alive,) but also to demonstrate the care and solicitude I have for you. Wi.

VER. 16. After these proofs of your charity, and the uprightness of your heart, I can reprehend and correct you, exhort and praise you, without fear of my reprehensions separating you from me, without apprehension that my recommendations will prove false, or my confidence vain; I now reckon you as persons entirely devoted to me, and whose affection towards me will never cease. Calmet. See Grotius, Estius, &c. &c.

* V. 2. Capite nos, χωρήσατε ἡμᾶς. S. Chrys. says, hom. 14, τούτοις φιλήσατε ἡμᾶς. Others think the sense is, receive and understand the instruction I give you.

+ V. 7. Desiderium, ἐπιπόθησιν. S. Chrys. says, οὐδὲ ἐπιθυμίαν ἀλλ' ἐπιπόθησιν.

CHAP. VIII. VER. 1. Grace of God, that hath been given in the Churches of Macedonia.* It was certainly the grace of God that moved the Macedonians to make those charitable contributions for the relief of their poor Christian brethren in Judea, which S. Paul now speaks of. Wi.

VER. 2. Poverty hath abounded, &c. The sense seems to be, that in their greatest poverty they showed the riches of their simplicity, that is, of a sincere, willing, and charitable heart. Wi.

VER. 4. Begging of us the grace, &c. We may translate benevolence or charity, meaning their charitable alms, or contributions. It also may be called a grace, a favour, or a charity, which they did for the poor. Wi.—Towards the saints. The saints whom S. Paul is here speaking of, are the faithful of Jerusalem, who had been deprived of all their property at the beginning of their conversion. by their countrymen, for their steady adherence to the Christian faith, and were now reduced to the greatest want. Calmet.

VER. 5. They gave their own selves. That is, they resigned themselves and families to the care of Providence for the necessities of life, begging that the apostle would receive their alms which exceeded even their means. C.

7 That as in all things you abound in faith, and word, and knowledge, and all carefulness: moreover also in your charity towards us, so in this grace also you may abound.

8 I speak not as commanding: but by the carefulness of others, approving also the good disposition of your charity.

9 For you know the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ, that being rich, he became poor for your sakes: that through his poverty you might be rich.

10 And in this I give counsel: for this is profitable for you, who have begun not only to do, but also to be willing the year before:

11 Now, therefore, perform it ye also in deed: that, as your mind is forward to be willing, so it may be also to perform, out of that which you have.

12 For if the will be forward, it is accepted according to that which it hath, not according to that which it hath not.

13 For I mean not that others should be eased, and you burthened: but by an equality.

14 In this present time let your abundance supply their want: that their abundance also may supply your want, that there may be an equality, as it is written:

15 'He that had much, had nothing over: and he that had little, had no want.

16 And thanks be to God, who hath given the same carefulness for you in the heart of Titus.

17 For indeed he accepted the exhortation: but being more careful, of his own will he went unto you.

18 We have sent also with him the brother, whose praise is in the gospel through all the churches:

19 And not that only, but he was also ordained by the churches companion of our travels, for this grace, which

^a Exod. xvi. 18.

VER. 6. We desired Titus. Having experienced the benevolence and generosity of the faithful of Macedonia, S. Paul dismisses his faithful disciple, Titus, to exhort the Corinthians to imitate the example of their brethren in Macedonia, laying before their eyes, in the following verses, the charity of Christ, who reduced himself to the greatest poverty and indigence, to show us an example of humility and charity.

VER. 10. Begun not only to do, but also to be willing. The sense seems to be, that they not only began the last year to do it, to contribute, but that they were the first that had this will, and began it of their own accord, by a motion of their own will. And therefore in the next chap. (ver. 2) he boasted of their ready mind to the Macedonians, and that their zeal or emulation had incited a great many. Wi.

VER. 12, 13. He tells them that it is the will that chiefly makes their charity acceptable to God, who sees the heart. And that the design is not to make others live at their ease, in a richer condition than those who give, but to make a kind of equality, their brethren in Judea being now in great poverty and want. Wi.

VER. 14. This present time, let your abundance, &c. The sense, according to some interpreters, is, that the time may perhaps come when they in Judea may supply the wants of those in Achaia in the same kind. Others rather understand it of a communication of spiritual for temporal goods, that your alms, by the assistance of those who will pray for you, and your charities, you may obtain for you the spiritual riches of grace, which every one stands chiefly in need of. Wi.

VER. 15. He that hath much, &c. The words were spoken of those who gathered the manna. Exod. xvi. 18. Every one was there ordered to gather such a particular measure, called a gomer, and they who, for fear of wanting, gathered more, found they had no more than the measure they were ordered to take, and they who, as it happened, took less, still found they had their measure of a gomer. By this example, S. Paul exhorts them to contribute to the relief of their brethren, with a confidence in God's providence, and without a fear of wanting themselves. Wi.

VER. 18. Brother, whose praise is in the gospel, through all the Churches. It may either signify in writing or in preaching the gospel, so that though S. Jerom expound this of S. Luke, who wrote his gospel, (but probably not till after this time,) yet S. Chrys. rather understands it of Barnaby, by the words that follow, who was ordained by the Churches companion of our travels. Others also is administered by us to the glory of the Lord, and our determined will :

20 Avoiding this, lest any man should blame us in this abundance which is administered by us.

21 ^a For we foresee what may be good, not only before God, but also before men.

22 And we have sent with them our brother also, whom we have often proved diligent in many things : but now much more diligent, with much confidence in you.

23 Either for Titus, who is my companion and fellow-labourer towards you, or our brethren, the apostles of the churches, the glory of Christ.

24 Wherefore show ye to them, in the sight of the churches, the evidence of your charity, and of our boasting on your behalf.

CHAP. IX.

A further exhortation to almsgiving : the fruits of it.

FOR concerning the ministry, that is done towards the saints, it is superfluous for me to write to you.

2 For I know your ready mind : for which I boast of you to the Macedonians. That Achaia also was ready a year ago, and your emulation hath provoked a great many.

3 Now I have sent the brethren, that what we boast of concerning you, be not made void in this behalf, that, (as I have said,) you may be ready :

4 Lest, when the Macedonians shall come with me, and find you unprepared, we (not to say ye) should be ashamed in this matter.

5 Therefore, I thought it necessary to desire the brethren that they would go to you before, and prepare this blessing before promised, to be ready, so as a blessing, not as covetousness.

6 Now this I say : He who soweth sparingly, shall also reap sparingly ; and he who soweth in blessings, shall also reap of blessings.

^a Rom. xii. 17.

ness it might be Silas or Silvanus. Who the third brother was, is also uncertain. Wi.

VER. 22, 23. With much confidence in you, either for Titus, &c. Some expound it of the confidence which this the third brother had in the Corinthians ; but it seems rather to be understood of the confidence which S. Paul himself had of them, that they would show a great respect both to Titus, and to the other brethren whom he sent. Wi.

* V. 1. ὁμοῖαν Δεῖ, τὴν χάριν τοῦ Θεοῦ. The same word, gratia and χάρις, used, vs. 4, 6, 7, where it is generally understood of their charitable contributions.

† V. 18. Cujus laus est in evangelio, οὗ ὁ ἔπαινος ἐν τῷ εὐγγελίῳ. See S. Chrys. ὁμ. iv. p. 645, ὅθεν μοι δοκεῖ τὸν Βαρνάβαν αἰνέσθαι.

CHAP. IX. VER. 1. The ministry, that is, the contributions for the brethren ; so it is also called again, (ver. 12.) the ministry of this office, or, as the Greek signifies, of this sacrifice, inasmuch as alms, and such charitable works, are spiritual sacrifices to God. Wi.

VER. 2. That Achaia also was ready. Corinth was the capital of Achaia. S. Paul had formerly exhorted the Macedonians to contribute to the utmost of their power, informing them, that Corinth and all Achaia were prepared a year ago to collect alms ; and now the apostle, speaking to the Corinthians, encourages them by the example of the faithful of Macedon, and informs them of the greatness of their charitable contributions, and the greatness of their zeal. Theo.

VER. 3. Titus, and two others.

VER. 11—13. All bountifulness,* by which is signified a sincere and free liberality, by giving with a sincere heart and good intention. S. Paul encourages them to contribute willingly for God's sake, and out of a true charity for their indigent brethren, who will praise and thank God, and pray for them, &c. Wi.

VER. 15. For his unspeakable gift. Such is the conclusion which the apostle puts to the subject upon alms-feeding. In the following chapter he proceeds to 7 Every one as he hath determined in his heart, not with sadness, or of necessity : ^b For God loveth a cheerful giver.

8 And God is able to make all grace abound in you, that ye always having all sufficiency in all things, may abound in every good work,

9 As it is written : ^c He hath dispersed abroad, he hath given to the poor : his justice remaineth for ever.

10 Now he that ministereth seed to the sower, will both give you bread to eat, and will multiply your seed, and increase the growth of the fruits of your justice :

11 That being enriched in all things, you may abound unto all bountifulness, which causeth through us thanksgiving to God.

12 For the administration of this service doth not only supply the want of the saints, but aboundeth also by many thanksgivings in the Lord.

13 By the proof of this ministry, glorifying God in the obedience of your confession to the gospel of Christ, and for the liberality of your communicating to them, and to all,

14 And in their praying for you, having an affection for you, because of the eminent grace of God in you.

15 Thanks be to God for his unspeakable gift.

CHAP. X.

To stop the calumny and boasting of false apostles, he sets forth the power of his apostleship.

NOW I Paul myself beseech you, by the meekness and gentleness of Christ, who in presence indeed am lowly among you, but being absent, am bold towards you,

2 But I beseech you, that I may not be bold when I am present, with that confidence wherewith I am thought to be bold against some, who think of us as if we walked according to the flesh.

3 For walking in the flesh, we do not war according to the flesh.

^b Eccli. xxxv. 11.—^c Psal. cxi. 9.

a new subject ; but first thanks the Almighty, that he has enriched the Corinthians with so charitable a disposition. S. Chrys., Theo., and some other commentators think, that by the expression, his unspeakable gift, is meant the incarnation of Christ. B.

* V. 11. In omnem simplicitatem, ἀπλόγητα, upon which S. Chrys. says, οὐ κ. ἀπλόγητα τὴν ἐαφίλειαν καλεῖ, a plentiful abundance.

CHAP. X. In these three following chapters, S. Paul, for the common good of those whom he had converted, and to obviate the prejudices raised by his adversaries against his person and preaching, is forced to set in a true light his apostolical authority, the favours he had received from God, his actions, his labours, and his sufferings, with an apology for mentioning them, giving all the glory to God. Wi.

VER. 1—11. Who in presence indeed am lowly.* Lit. humble, (see Luke i. 48,) that is, of a mean aspect, as to exterior appearances, and my speech contemptible, without the ornaments of human eloquence, but am said to be bold when absent, reprehending and threatening by my letters, which are owned to be weighty and strong, let such persons think, and be convinced, that such as I am by my letters, they shall find me by deeds, when I come, and shall be present with them. Wi.

VER. 2. I beg of you now to hear my apology, that I may not be obliged to make use of my authority, when present among you, which they say I have abused, and usurped over you. There is in this discourse a little irony against the facility with which the Corinthians heard the enemies of S. Paul. He alludes to those false teachers who derided his doctrine, by preaching up the observance of the ceremonial parts of the law, for they were Jews, and had introduced many new practices into the Church. We may here take notice, that these observations are applicable to the Epistles of S. Paul to the Galatians and Philippians, for they are the same false teachers whom he there attacks, and who accused S. Paul of being a hypocrite, a seducer, in a word, one who walked according to the flesh. Estius and S. Chrys.

4 For the weapons of our warfare are not carnal, but powerful through God to the destruction of fortifications, subverting of counsels,

5 And every height that exalteth itself against the knowledge of God, and bringing into captivity every understanding to the obedience of Christ,

6 And having in a readiness to revenge all disobedience, when your obedience shall be fulfilled.

7 See the things that are according to outward appearance. If any man trust to himself, that he is Christ's, let him think this again with himself, that as he is Christ's, so are we also.

8 For if I also should boast somewhat more of our power, which the Lord hath given us for edification, and not for your destruction; I should not be ashamed,

9 But that I may not be thought as it were to terrify you by epistles:

10 (For his epistles, indeed, say they, are weighty and strong; but his bodily presence is weak, and his speech contemptible:)

11 Let such a one think this, that such as we are in word by epistles, when absent, such are we also indeed, when present.

12 For we dare not rank or compare ourselves with some, that commend themselves: but we measure ourselves by ourselves, and compare ourselves with ourselves.

13 * But we will not glory beyond our measure: but according to the measure of the rule, which God hath measured to us, a measure to reach even to you.

14 For we stretch not ourselves beyond our measure, as if we reached not to you: for we are come as far as to you in the gospel of Christ.

* Eph. iv. 7.

VER. 4. For the weapons, &c. The powers with which we are endowed will easily overturn all obstacles, or fortifications which devils may raise against us. They will easily refute the pride, the learning, and the elegant sophisms of philosophers, and reduce every height, or high-minded philosopher, to the obedience of Christ. Calmet.

VER. 6. Having in a readiness. God gave power, not only to persuade, and to convince the incredulous, but also to punish them, as we see in the examples of Simon Magus and Elymas. What then should hinder him from using the same against these false apostles? But he says, your obedience must first be fulfilled. God forbid that I should first use the sword, before I had tried the ways of sweetness and conciliation. But if any remain obstinate, then I will employ the arms that God has given me. Grotius.

VER. 12, &c. The following verses to the end of this chapter, are equally obscure, both in the Greek and Latin text.—We dare not rank or compare ourselves, &c. He seems to write this ironically, by way of mocking at those who commended and preferred themselves before others. But I will not compare myself to others, but will only compare† myself to myself, to show that my actions agree with my words and my letters.—We will not glory beyond our measure, but according to the measure of the rule which God hath measured to us, a measure to reach even to you. Here he speaks of a measure, and a rule. By the measure with which God measured to him, he means the place and countries, in which he and the other apostles were appointed to preach, and plant the gospel: and by the rule also prescribed him, he means that it was given him as a rule not to preach where other ministers of Christ had preached. When he says, therefore, we will not glory beyond our measure,† or (as it is implied in the Greek) of things out of the measure, the sense is, I will not, like false teachers, pretend to have preached in places out of my province, or which were not measured out to me, nor have we extended ourselves farther than we ought to have done, when we came to you, for you were within our measure. Nor have I transgressed the rule, because others had not preached to you before me, so that I have not boasted in other men's labours. But as your faith is growing, and increasing, when I have sufficiently settled the gospel among you, I hope my measure may be enlarged, and that without breaking the settled rule, I may preach also to people and places beyond you. Wi.

VER. 13. The apostle here reprehends the vain boasting of false teachers. I will not, like them, say, that I have carried the light of the gospel to the uttermost limits of the globe, that I have converted millions of men, avoided an infinity of dangers, performed many miracles, &c. No: I confine myself to the part assigned me by God. Calmet and V.

15 Not glorying beyond the measure in other men's labours: but having hope of your increase in faith, to be magnified in you according to our rule abundantly.

16 Yea, to those places that are beyond you, to preach the gospel, not to glory in another man's rule in those things that are made ready to our hand.

17 † But he that glorieth, let him glory in the Lord.

18 For not he, that commendeth himself, is approved: but he whom God commendeth.

CHAP. XI.

He is forced to commend himself and his labours, lest the Corinthians should be imposed upon by the false apostles.

WOULD to God you could bear with some little of my folly: but do, bear with me:

2 For I am jealous of you with the jealousy of God. For I have espoused you to one husband, that I may present you as a chaste virgin to Christ.

3 But I fear lest, † as the serpent seduced Eve by his subtilty, so your minds should be corrupted, and fall from the simplicity which is in Christ.

4 For if he that cometh, preacheth another Christ, whom we have not preached; or if you receive another Spirit, whom you have not received; or another gospel, which you have not received: you might well bear with him.

5 For I suppose that I have done nothing less than the great apostles.

6 For though I be rude in speech, yet not in knowledge; but in all things, we have been made manifest to you.

7 Or did I commit a fault, abasing myself, that you

† Jer. ix. 23; 1 Cor. i. 31.—c Gen. iii. 4.

VER. 16. The words, measure, rule, &c., signify through the whole of this chapter a share, or an allotment of any place to cultivate. S. Paul never gloried like the persons whom he is here blaming, that he entered into other men's labours. But still neither those persons who have come to you, nor we who first preached the gospel to you, have any right to glory, except in God alone. Calmet.—We still hope, that your faith every day increasing, we shall be able to extend our measure much further, and carry the gospel to nations far beyond you, without interfering with any other, by glorying of having built on what they have already prepared. V.

* V. 1. Humilis sum, ταπεινός.

† V. 12. Ipsi in nobis nosmetipsos metientes; the Greek is somewhat different, αὐτοὶ ἐν ἑαυτοῖς ἑαυτοὺς μετροῦντες, ipsi in seipsis seipsos mensurantes.

‡ V. 15. Non in immensum, οὐκ εἰς τὰ ἀμέτρητα, non in non mensurata.

CHAP. XI. VER. 1. My folly. So he calls his reciting his own praises, which, commonly speaking, is looked upon as a piece of folly and vanity; though the apostle was constrained to do it, for the good of the souls committed to his charge. Ch.

VER. 2. With the jealousy of God, or that came from God: it may also signify a great, or godly jealousy.—To present you, that is, the Church of Corinth, a chaste virgin to Christ, as the whole Catholic Church is called the chaste spouse of Christ. See Matt. ix. 13; Apoc. xxi. 2. Wi.

VER. 4. You might well bear with him. These new teachers pretended at least to preach only the doctrine of Christ. S. Paul tells them they might in some measure be excused, if they preached a new doctrine, or another gospel that brought them greater blessings, or another Spirit accompanied with greater spiritual gifts, than they had already received by his preaching. Wi.

VER. 5. For I suppose. God had performed as many and great miracles by his hands, as by any of the apostles. S. Paul here wishes to refute those who called themselves the disciples of Peter, and other apostles. C.

VER. 6. Though I be rude in speech, (as S. Jerom also thought,) in my expressions in the Greek tongue, yet not in knowledge, the chief or only thing to be regarded. Nay, S. Paul's adversaries acknowledged that his letters were weighty and strong, chap. x. 11. S. Chrys., in many places, and S. Aug. l. 4, de Doct. Christiana, e. 6, and 7, tom. 3, p. 68, et seq., shows at large the solid rhetoric and eloquence of S. Paul, even in this and the next chapter. Wi.

VER. 7. Did I commit a fault? &c. It is a kind of reproach to them, and by the figure called irony, with a reflection on the false preachers, who some way or other got themselves handsomely maintained, while S. Paul neither took, nor might be exalted? Because I have preached to you the gospel of God gratis?

8 I have taken from other churches, receiving wages of them to serve you.

9 And when I was present with you, and wanted, I was burthensome to no man: for that which was wanting to me, the brethren supplied who came from Macedonia; and in all things I have kept myself without being a burthen to you, and so I will keep myself.

10 The truth of Christ is in me, that this glory shall not be stopt in me in the regions of Achaia.

11 Wherefore? Because I love you not? God knoweth it.

12 But what I do, that I will do, that I may cut off the occasion from them that desire occasion, that in what they glory, they may be found even as we.

13 For such false apostles are deceitful labourers, transforming themselves into the apostles of Christ.

14 And no wonder: for satan himself transformeth himself into an angel of light.

15 Therefore it is no great thing if his ministers be transformed as the ministers of justice: whose end shall be according to their works.

16 I say again, (let no man think me to be foolish, otherwise take me as one foolish, that I also may glory a little.)

17 That which I speak, I speak not according to God, but as it were in foolishness, in this matter of glorying.

18 Seeing that many glory according to the flesh, I will glory also.

19 For you gladly suffer the foolish: whereas you yourselves are wise.

20 For you suffer if a man bring you into bondage, if a man devour you, if a man take from you, if a man be extolled, if a man strike you on the face.

21 I speak according to dishonour, as if we had been weak in this part. Wherein if any man is bold, (I speak foolishly,) I am bold also.

22 They are Hebrews: so am I. They are Israelites: so am I. They are the seed of Abraham: so am I.

a Deut. xxv. 3.—b Acts xvi. 22.—c Acts xiv. 18.

would take any thing of them, that his adversaries might not have an occasion to say, he did as they did, or that they only did as he did. See 1 Cor. ix. Wi.

VER. 12. S. Paul declares that he will continue to receive nothing for his preaching and his labours, that the false apostles may not glory in their disinterestedness; or rather, that he will not, by receiving any thing, authorize by his example these new teachers, who only seek their own ease, to live on the Church, and to receive their support from it. S. Aug. and Estius.

VER. 16, &c. Otherwise take me as one foolish. S. Paul divers times excuses himself for mentioning things in his own commendation: he owns that this in itself, and unless it were necessary, might be blamed as folly, that it would not be according to God, but he declares himself forced by them to it, and that he will speak nothing but the truth. See chap. xii. 6—11. He tells them that they hear with others that are foolish, even with those false preachers that endeavour to bring them into slavery by their domineering carriage, by making them perhaps subject to the yoke of the Mosaic law. Who devour them, that is, their goods and substance, who take from them, who in a manner strike them on the face, (ver. 20.) he means a metaphorical striking them, that is, by imperious ways, and insolent language. Wi.

VER. 19. I trust that you will permit me to speak in my own praise, since, as wise as you are, you have permitted others, who have not greater wisdom than myself. And if it be folly to praise one's self, as you have pardoned them, I trust you will also pardon me. Calmet.

VER. 21. I speak according to dishonour, as if we had been weak in this part. The interpreters are divided on this verse; the sense seems to be, I speak what others look upon as dishonourable in us, that we had not the like authority over 23 They are the ministers of Christ: (I speak as one less wise:) I am more: in many more labours, in prisons more frequently, in stripes above measure, in death often.

24 Of the Jews * five times did I receive forty stripes, save one.

25 "Thrice was I beaten with rods, 'once I was stoned' "thrice I suffered shipwreck: a night and a day I was in the depth of the sea.

26 In journeys often, in perils of rivers, in perils of robbers, in perils from my own nation, in perils from the Gentiles, in perils in the city, in perils in the wilderness in perils in the sea, in perils from false brethren.

27 In labour and painfulness, in watchings often, in hunger and thirst, in many fastings, in cold and nakedness.

28 Besides those things that are without: my daily in stance, the solicitude for all the churches.

29 Who is weak, and I am not weak? who is scandalized, and I do not burn?

30 If I must needs glory: I will glory of the things that concern my infirmity.

31 The God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, who is blessed for ever, knoweth that I lie not.

32 * At Damascus, the governor of the nation, under Aretas, the king, guarded the city of the Damascenes, to apprehend me:

33 And through a window in a basket I was let down by the wall, and so escaped his hands.

CHAP. XII.

His raptures and revelations. His being buffeted by satan. His fear for the Corinthians.

IF I must glory (it is not expedient indeed): but I will come to visions and revelations of the Lord.

2 'I know a man in Christ above fourteen years ago whether in the body I know not, or out of the body I know not, God knoweth, such a one caught up to the third heaven.

3 And I know such a man, whether in the body, or out of the body, I know not, God knoweth:

4 That he was caught up into paradise: and heard secret words, which it is not granted to man to utter.

you as these false teachers, and therefore could not keep you in such subjection as they have done. But yet I must tell you, that wherein if any man is bold, I am bold also; that is, I have no less motives to domineer and boast than they have. And then he proceeds to particulars. Wi.

VER. 25. Thrice I suffered shipwreck. This was before the shipwreck in his voyage to Rome, by which we may take notice, that S. Luke, in the Acts, omits a great many things relating to S. Paul; as also when he adds, a night and a day I was in the depth of the sea. We do not read expressed in the Greek, of the sea; but the Greek word is observed to imply the same; and so it is understood by S. Chrys., who gives these two expositions; first, that he was truly and literally in the middle of the sea. Secondly, that he was floating or swimming in the sea after shipwreck, which seems the more common interpretation. Wi.

VER. 28. My daily instance. The labours that come in, and press upon me every day. Ch.

* V. 25. Nocte et die in profundo maris sui, ἐν τῷ βυθῷ περᾶνκα.

CHAP. XII. VER. 1. If I must glory. S. Paul in the whole of this discourse shows the repugnance he had of speaking in his own praise, and that if he did it, it was only through constraint, and for the advantage of the Corinthians; as also to defend himself from his calumniators. Calmet.

VER. 2. I know a man, &c. He speaks of himself, as it were of a third person.—Whether in the body, I know not. If S. Paul himself knew not, how can we pretend to decide, whether his soul was for some moments separated from his body, or in what manner he saw God. Wi.

5 Of such a one I will glory: but for myself I will glory nothing, but in my infirmities.

6 For even if I would glory, I shall not be foolish: for I shall say the truth: but I forbear, lest any man should think of me above that which he seeth in me, or any thing he heareth from me.

7 And lest the greatness of the revelations should puff me up, there was given me a sting of my flesh, an angel of satan, to buffet me.

8 For which thing I thrice besought the Lord, that it might depart from me:

9 And he said to me: My grace is sufficient for thee: for power is made perfect in infirmity. Gladly, therefore, will I glory in my infirmities, that the power of Christ may dwell in me.

10 Therefore I take pleasure in my infirmities, in reproaches, in necessities, in persecutions, in distresses for Christ's sake. For when I am weak, then I am powerful.

11 I am become foolish: you have compelled me to it. For I ought to have been commended by you: for in nothing have I been inferior to those, who are above measure apostles: although I am nothing.

12 Yet the signs of my apostleship have been wrought on you, in all patience, in signs, and wonders, and mighty deeds.

13 For what is there that you have had less than the other churches; but that I myself was not burthensome to you? Pardon me this injury.

14 Behold, now the third time I am ready to come to you: and I will not be burthensome to you. For I seek not the things that are yours, but you. For neither ought the children to lay up for the parents, but the parents for the children.

15 And I most gladly will spend and be spent myself

VER. 4. Caught up into paradise. S. Augustin and S. Thomas are of opinion that this third heaven and paradise are the same place, and designate the abode of the blessed. In order to understand the language of the apostle, we must observe that the Hebrews distinguished three different heavens. The first comprised the air, the clouds, &c., as far as the fixed stars. The second included all the fixed stars; and the third was the abode of angels, in which God himself discovered his infinite glory, &c. The first is called in Scripture simply the heavens, the second the firmament, and the third the heaven of heavens. Calmet.

VER. 7—10. A sting of my flesh, an angel, or a messenger, of satan, to buffet me.* S. Chrys., by the sting, and the angel of satan, understands that opposition which S. Paul met with from his enemies, and those of the gospel; as satan signifies an adversary. Others understand troublesome temptations of the flesh, immodest thoughts, and representations, suggested by the devil, and permitted by Almighty God for his greater good.—Thrice I besought the Lord, that is, many times, to be freed from it; but received only this answer from God, that his grace was sufficient to preserve me from consenting to sin. And that power and strength in virtue should increase, and be perfected in weakness, and by temptations, when they are resisted. S. Aug. seems to favour this exposition, in Psal. lviii. Conc. 2, p. 578. S. Jerom. in his letters to Eustochium, to Demetrias, and to Rusticus, the monk. And it is the opinion of S. Greg. l. 23, Moral. tom. 1, p. 747, and of many others. Wi.—Power is made perfect. The strength and power of God more perfectly shines forth in our weakness and infirmity; as the more weak we are of ourselves, the more illustrious is his grace in supporting us, and giving us the victory under all trials and conflicts. Ch.

VER. 14. Now the third time I am ready to come. So he says again in the next chap. That is, he was once with them, he had purposed to come a second time, and now a third time.—I seek not the things that are yours, but you. That is, says S. Chrys., your souls, not your goods; your salvation, not your gold. Wi.—S. Paul came to Corinth for the first time in the year 52, remaining with them 18 months. Acts xviii. He came the second time in 55, but did not remain long with them; on which account it is omitted by S. Luke in the Acts. The date of this letter is in 57, when S. Paul again came to them towards the end of the year. Calmet.—Other interpreters, with no less authority, question this sentiment, see ver. 1 of the following chapter, and say he only went twice; the first time, as mentioned in Acts xviii. 1; the second time, as we may draw from Acts xx. 2, 3, after this Epistle, as is evident from comparing 2 Cor. i. 15.

VER. 15. I most gladly will spend † all, and even my life, for your sake, and so for your souls: although, loving you more, I be loved less.

16 But be it so: I did not burthen you: but being crafty, I caught you by guile.

17 Did I circumvent you, by any of those whom I sent to you?

18 I desired Titus, and I sent with him a brother Did Titus circumvent you? did we not walk with the same spirit? did we not in the same steps?

19 Of old, think you that we excuse ourselves to you? We speak before God in Christ: but all things, my dearly beloved, for your edification.

20 For I fear, lest when I come, I shall not find you such as I would: and that I shall be found by you such as you would not: lest perhaps contentions, envyings, animosities, dissensions, detractions, whisperings, swellings, seditions, be among you:

21 Lest again, when I come, God humble me among you: and I bewail many of them that sinned before, and have not done penance for the uncleanness, and fornication, and lasciviousness, that they have committed.

CHAP. XIII.

He threatens the impenitent, to provoke them to penance.

BEHOLD, this is the third time I am coming to you. ^aIn the mouth of two or three witnesses shall every word be established.

2 I have told you before, and foretell, as present, and now absent, to them that sinned before, and to all the rest, that if I come again, I will not spare.

3 Do you seek a proof of Christ, who speaketh in me, who towards you is not weak, but is mighty in you?

as to be spent, and even sacrificed, for your souls; though the more I love you, the less you, or some of you, love me: a kind and modest reproach. Wi.

VER. 16—18. I caught you by guile. He answers an objection or suspicion of his adversaries, as if he took no presents himself, but employed others to do it for him: he appeals to them, if Titus did not serve them in all things as he had done, in the same spirit, treading the same steps.—Think you, as some pretended of old, formerly, or of a long time, that we make vain and false excuses to you, and at the bottom aim to be gainers by you? He appeals with an oath to God, that he does all things for their good, for their advantage, and edification. Wi.

VER. 20, 21. He puts them in mind to be all of them reformed, to lay aside animosities, dissensions, swellings; proceeding from pride, uncleanness, fornication, &c., which indeed will be a humiliation and trouble to him, to be forced to use his power by severities; for if he find them such as he would not, they will also find him such as they would not. Wi.—Τὸν μὴ μετανοήσαντων. This, according to S. Austin, is spoken here of doing great penance for heinous sins, and not merely of repentance, as some moderns would fain interpret it. Ep. 198.

VER. 2. I will not spare. Estius, Menochius, and others, explain this of the censures, excommunications, &c., of the Church; whilst some are of opinion that he means temporal punishments. But we must observe, that not unfrequently God punished, even in a sensible manner, those who by their crimes had compelled their pastors to make use of the spiritual sword. C.

VER. 3. Do you seek a proof? By the Greek it signifies for you, or in your regard. The sense is, that he has left me power enough to chastise those among you who shall deserve it, when I come. Wi.—I do not know why you delay your conversion. Can you doubt whether it is God who speaks to you by my mouth, and who has great power among you, and who is very capable of punishing you? οὐ γὰρ

4 For though he was crucified through weakness, yet he liveth by the power of God. For we also are weak in him: but we shall live with him by the power of God towards you.

5 Try your own selves if you be in the faith: prove ye yourselves. Know you not your own selves, that Christ Jesus is in you? unless perhaps you be reprobates.

6 But I trust that you shall know that we are not reprobates.

7 Now we pray God, that you may do no evil, not that we may appear approved, but that you may do that which is good, and that we may be as reprobates.

8 For we can do nothing against the truth, but for the truth.

VER. 4. He was crucified through weakness. That is, he took upon him our weak and infirm nature, in which he was made capable of suffering, and of laying down willingly his life for us on the cross. But he liveth again by the power of God, of his Divine power. Wi.

VER. 5. *Try your own selves if you be in the faith. He does not mean if they have a right Christian faith or belief, but either whether they had a saving Christian faith working in them by charity, or, as S. Chrys. says, a faith that showed itself by the gift of miracles, at that time commonly given to the first Christians. — Unless perhaps you are disapproved,† rejected, and justly deprived of this gift, which was a proof that they were Christians, and had received the Spirit of Christ. I judged it better to translate here disapproved, than reprobates, which in other places is often taken as opposed to the predestinate and the elect, whereas here it signifies those who were rejected, and deprived of the gifts of the Spirit, particularly of that of miracles, and of those spiritual gifts granted to the first Christians, and which were a proof that they had received the grace: and the 7th verse, not that we may appear approved, but that . . . we may be as reprobates. That is, we wish that we may have no occasion to show the power and the gifts of the Spirit, and that of miracles, but as if we were rejected, disapproved, reproved, and deprived of such proofs. Wi.

VER. 7. Reprobates. That is, without proof, by having no occasion of showing our power in punishing you. Ch.

VER. 11. Rejoice. Χαίρετε, beue valets. In this sense the Greeks used this 9 For we rejoice, that we are weak, and you are strong. This also we pray for, your perfection.

10 Therefore I write these things being absent, that, being present, I may not deal more severely, according to the power which the Lord hath given me to edification, and not to destruction.

11 For the rest, brethren, rejoice, be perfect, take exhortation, be of one mind, have peace: and the God of peace and of love will be with you.

VER. 12. This was customary with both Jews and Persians, as we learn from Xenophon and Herodotus, and with other oriental nations. And in process of time, from the custom of common life, it was introduced into ecclesiastical assemblies. The ancients were in the habit before they began their meal to embrace each other, to manifest by that sign their mutual cordiality and friendship; then they contributed their alms, that they might give a substantial proof of what was represented by their kiss of charity. THE

EPISTLE OF S. PAUL, THE APOSTLE,

TO THE

GALATIANS.

The Galatians, soon after S. Paul had preached the gospel to them, were seduced by some false teachers, who had been Jews, and who were for obliging all Christians, even those who had been Gentiles, to observe circumcision, and the other ceremonies of the Mosaic law. In this Epistle he refutes the pernicious doctrine of those teachers, and also their calumny against his mission and apostleship. The subject matter of this Epistle is much the same as in that to the Romans. It was written at Ephesus, about twenty-three years after our Lord's ascension. Ch.—The Galatians were originally Gauls, who, under their leader, Brennus, spread themselves over Greece, and at length passed over into Asia Minor, where they settled between Cappadocia and Phrygia, in the province afterwards called from them Galatia. It seems that S. Peter preached first in those parts; but it was only to the Jews, as may be gathered from the inscription of his First Epistle, which he addresses to the Jews of Pontus, Galatia, Cappadocia, Asia, and Bithynia. But S. Paul was the first that preached to the Gentile inhabitants of this province. When he first preached to them, he was received as an angel from heaven, or rather, as Christ himself: he visited them oftener than once, and the Church he there formed was very considerable. It was the Jewish converts of Galatia (who, as we have before mentioned, were the spiritual children of S. Peter) that caused those troubles which gave rise to this Epistle. They strongly advocated the legal observances; and making a handle of the high pre-eminence of S. Peter, they decried S. Paul, even calling in question his apostleship. They taught the necessity of circumcision, and other Mosaic rites, which the apostles then in part retained. Thus divisions were raised in this infant Church. On these accounts the apostle warmly asserts his apostleship, as being called by Christ himself. He shows that his doctrine was that of the other apostles, who, in the Council of Jerusalem, four years before, testified their exemption from the legal observances. He teaches that it is not by the law, but by faith, that the blessings of salvation are imparted to them. After establishing these more important parts of the Epistle, he gives them instruction on various heads. The Greek subscription to this Epistle informs us that it was written from Rome. S. Jerom says he wrote it when in chains. Theodoret says it was the first Epistle that S. Paul wrote from Rome. The contrary opinion is, that this Epistle was written from Ephesus in the year of Christ 55. This is the more probable opinion, and is maintained by S. Greg. the Great, Ludovicus, Capellanus, Estius, Usher, Pearson, and many others.

CHAPTER I.

He blames the Galatians for suffering themselves to be imposed upon by new teachers. The apostle's calling.

PAUL, an apostle, not from man, neither by man, but by Jesus Christ, and God the Father, who raised him from the dead,

2 And all the brethren who are with me, to the churches of Galatia.

3 Grace be to you, and peace from God the Father, and from our Lord Jesus Christ,

4 Who gave himself for our sins, that he might deliver us from this present wicked world, according to the will of God, and our Father,

5 To whom is glory, for ever and ever. Amen.

6 I wonder that you are so soon removed, from him who called you to the grace of Christ, to another gospel:

7 Which is not another, only there are some that trouble you, and would pervert the gospel of Christ.

8 But though we, or an angel from heaven, preach a gospel to you beside that which we have preached to you, let him be anathema.

9 As we said before, so I say now again: If any one preach to you a gospel, besides that which you have received, let him be anathema.

10 For do I now persuade men, or God? Or do I seek to please men? If I did yet please men, I should not be the servant of Christ.

11 * For I give you to understand, brethren, that the gospel which was preached by me is not according to man.

12 ^b For neither did I receive it from man, nor did I learn it, but by the revelation of Jesus Christ.

13 For you have heard of my conversation in time past a 1 Cor. xv. 1.—b Eph. iii. 3.

CHAP. I. VER. 1, &c. The apostle begins by asserting his apostleship, which the false teachers had called in question.—*Not from man, neither by man. The apostle here expressly says, all the brethren who are with me; to show that he advanced nothing which was not conformable to the belief of all the faithful. S. Jerom.—And again he says, (ver. 12,) neither did I receive it, nor from man did I learn it, but by the revelation of Jesus Christ. That is, not from him, who was a man only, but from Jesus Christ, who was both God and man. S. Jerom, who has left us a commentary on this Epistle, (tom. 4, p. 222, ed. Ben., as also S. Chrys., tom. 3, p. 709, ed. Sav.) takes notice, that Christ's Divinity is proved from these expressions, that S. Paul was not an apostle, nor had his mission from man only, but from Jesus Christ, who therefore was not a man only.—By Jesus Christ, and God the Father. A second argument to show the equality of the Son with the Father. And thirdly, it destroys another objection of the Arians, who used to pretend that the Father being always first named, he only, and not the Son, was properly God. Fourthly, another of their arguments to prove only the Father truly God, was that he was called the God, with the Greek article; and here the Father is called God, without the said Greek article. Fifthly, they also pretended that the Son was not God, because the Father was said to deliver him to death: and here (ver. 3) the Son is said to give and deliver himself. Wi.

VER. 6, 7. To another gospel: which is not † another. That is, it is not properly another, because they pretended to be Christians, and teach the faith: and yet it was in some measure another, because changed by such teachers with a mixture of errors, particularly that all converted Gentiles were to observe the Jewish law: and in this sense they are said to subvert, or destroy, the gospel of Christ: so that the apostle sticks not to pronounce and repeat an anathema, a curse upon all that preach any thing besides, that is, in point of religion, not agreeing with what he had taught. Wi.

VER. 9. The terrible sentence awarded by S. Paul, bears equally strong against modern as against ancient innovators in religion.

VER. 14. He here alludes to his being a Pharisee, as he himself mentions more openly in Acts xxiii. 6, A Pharisee, and son of Pharisees. This sect always distinguished itself by its zeal for ancient traditions, which shows evidently that he was very far from being instructed in a religion of which he was the sworn enemy; nor since his conversion did he apply for instruction. What he delivered, he learned not of man, but of God. See below.

VER. 16. I condescended not to flesh and blood. Lit. I did not acquiesce to flesh and blood. I had no regard to temporal friends or advantages. Some expound it, I did not think it necessary to consult the other apostles, men who in the Jews' religion: how that, beyond measure, I persecuted the church of God, and laid it waste, 14 And I made progress in the Jews' religion, above many of my equals in my own nation, being more abundantly zealous for the traditions of my fathers.

15 But when it pleased him, who separated me from my mother's womb, and called me by his grace, 16 To reveal his Son in me, that I might preach him among the Gentiles: immediately I condescended not to flesh and blood.

17 Neither went I to Jerusalem to the apostles, who were before me; but I went into Arabia, and again I returned to Damascus:

18 Then three years after, I came to Jerusalem to see Peter, and stayed with him fifteen days:

19 But other of the apostles I saw none: except James, the brother of the Lord.

20 Now the things which I write to you; behold, before God, I lie not.

21 Afterwards I came into the regions of Syria, and Cilicia.

22 And I was unknown by face to the churches of Judea, which were in Christ:

23 But they had heard only: He, that persecuted us in times past, doth now preach the faith which once he impugned:

24 And they glorified God in me.

CHAP. II.

The apostle's preaching was approved of by the other apostles. The Gentiles were not to be constrained to the observance of the law.

THEN ^d fourteen years after, I went up again to Jerusalem, with Barnabas, taking Titus also with me.

2 And I went up according to revelation; and com were my countrymen: and so it follows, I came not to Jerusalem to the apostles, to be instructed by them, having been instructed by Christ himself. Wi.

VER. 17. So far from receiving his apostleship from the other apostles, he saw none of them, till he had spent three years in announcing the word of God. Calmet.

VER. 18. Then three years after, I came to Jerusalem to see (and as S. Chrys. says, out of respect to make a visit to) Peter, but staid only at Jerusalem fifteen days, and saw none of the apostles except him, and James the brother, or cousin, of our Lord; so that I was yet unknown by face to the Christian churches in Judea. Wi.

Chrys. in his commentary, or ερμηνεία, on this Epistle, p. 713, where he takes notice against the Arians, that here God the Father is called Θεός, not ὁ Θεός; so that their argument from the Greek article is of no force; χωρίς ἁρθρου . . . οὐκ ἀπὸ τοῦ θεοῦ, ἀλλὰ ἀπὸ τοῦ θεοῦ πατρὸς, &c.

CHAP. II. VER. 1. Then fourteen years after. That is, after my former going to Jerusalem, which was seventeen years after my conversion, an. 51. See Tillamont. Wi.—The cause of S. Paul's second journey to Jerusalem was as follows. Some brethren coming from Judea to Antioch, there maintain the necessity of circumcision and the other Mosaic rites, asserting that without them salvation could not be obtained. S. Paul, upon his return to Antioch, strongly defended, in conjunction with Barnabas, the liberty of the gospel. As the contest grew warm, it was resolved to depute Paul and Barnabas to consult the other apostles and ancients at Jerusalem. By the approbation of the living and speaking tribunal, which all are commanded to hear, the Scriptures are not made true, altered, or amended; they merely are declared to be the infallible word of God, a point only to be learned by authority: hence that memorable saying of S. Austin: "I would not believe the gospel unless the authority of the Church moved me." Cont ep Fund. c. 5 municated to them the gospel, which I preach among the Gentiles, but apart to them who seemed to be something; lest, perhaps, I should run, or had run in vain.

3 But neither Titus, who was with me, being a Gentile, was compelled to be circumcised :

4 But because of false brethren unawares brought in, who came in privately to spy our liberty, which we have in Christ Jesus, that they might bring us into bondage :

5 To whom we yielded not by subjection, no not for an hour, that the truth of the gospel might continue with you :

6 But of them who seemed to be something, (what they were some time, it is nothing to me, * God accepteth not the person of man,) for to me, they that seemed to be something, added nothing.

7 But on the contrary, when they had seen that to me was committed the gospel of the uncircumcision, as to Peter was that of the circumcision :

8 (For he who wrought in Peter to the apostleship of the circumcision, wrought in me also among the Gentiles :)

9 And when they had known the grace that was given to me, James, and Cephas, and John, who seemed to be pillars, gave to me and Barnabas the right hands of fellowship; that we should go to the Gentiles, and they to the circumcision :

10 Only that we should be mindful of the poor; which same thing also I was careful to do.

11 But when Cephas was come to Antioch, I withstood him to the face, because he was blameable.

12 For before that some came from James, he did eat with the Gentiles; but when they were come, he withdrew and separated himself, fearing those who were of the circumcision.

13 And to his dissimulation the rest of the Jews consented, so that Barnabas also was led by them into that dissimulation.

14 But when I saw that they walked not uprightly unto the truth of the gospel, I said to Cephas before them all: If thou, being a Jew, livest after the manner of the Gentiles, and not of the Jews, how dost thou compel the Gentiles to follow the way of Jews?

15 We, by nature, are Jews, and not of the Gentiles, sinners.

16 But knowing that a man is not justified by the works of the law, but by the faith of Jesus Christ; we also believe in Christ Jesus, that we may be justified by the faith of Christ, and not by the works of the law; * because by the works of the law no flesh shall be justified.

17 But if while we seek to be justified in Christ, we ourselves also are found sinners: is Christ then the minister of sin? God forbid.

18 For if I build up again the things which I have destroyed, I make myself a transgressor.

19 For I, through the law, am dead to the law, that I may live to God: with Christ I am nailed to the cross.

20 And I live, now not I; but Christ liveth in me. And that I live now in the flesh: I live in the faith of the Son of God, who loved me, and delivered himself for me.

21 I cast not away the grace of God. For if justice be by the law, then Christ died in vain.

VER. 2. According to revelation, or an inspiration from the Spirit of God, and conferred with them, as an equal, says S. Jerom.—But apart to them, who seemed to be something considerable. That is, with the other apostles, lest I should run in vain, not for fear of false doctrine, says S. Chrys., but that others might be convinced that I preached not any thing disapproved by the apostles, which would prejudice the progress of the gospel. Wi.

VER. 3. Neither Titus, . . . circumcised, who had been a Gentile. A convincing proof, says S. Chrys., that even according to the other apostles, the Gentiles converted were not subject to the Jewish laws. Wi.

VER. 7. As to Peter was that of the circumcision. Calvin pretends to prove by this, that S. Peter and his successors are not head of the whole Church, because S. Peter was only the apostle of the Jews. But S. Paul speaks not here of the power and jurisdiction, but of the manner that S. Peter and he were to be employed. It was judged proper that S. Peter should preach chiefly to the Jews, who had been the elect people of God, and that S. Paul should be sent to the Gentiles; yet both of them preached both to Jews and Gentiles: and S. Peter, by receiving Cornelius, first opened the gate of salvation to the Gentiles, as he says of himself, (Acts xv. 7,) that God made choice of him, that the Gentiles by his mouth should hear the gospel, and believe. That S. Peter was head of the Church, see the notes on Matt. xvi., and John xxi. Wi.

VER. 9. James, and Cephas, and John. No proof of any greater authority can be drawn from the placing or numbering James first, which perhaps S. Paul might do, because of the great respect he knew the Jewish converts had for S. James, bishop of Jerusalem, where the ceremonies of the law of Moses were still observed. Several Greek copies have Peter, James, and John. So we also read in S. Jerom's Commentary, p. 240, and S. Chrys., in his Exposition, p. 720, has Cephas, John, and James. Wi.

VER. 11. *But when Cephas, &c. In most Greek copies we read Petrus, both here and ver. 13. Nor are there any sufficient, nor even probable, grounds to judge that Cephas here mentioned was different from Peter, the prince of the apostles, as one or two late authors would make us believe. S. Jerom indeed on this place says, there were some (though he does not think fit to name them) who were of that opinion; but at the same time S. Jerom ridicules and rejects it as groundless. Now as to authors that make Cephas the same with S. Peter, the prince of the apostles, we have what may be called the unexceptionable and unanimous consent of the ancient fathers and doctors of the Catholic Church, as of Tertullian, who calls this management of S. Peter, a fault of conversation, not of preaching or doctrine; of S. Cyprian, of Origen, of the great doctors S. Jerom.

* Aug., S. Chrys., S. Greg. the Great, of S. Cyril of Alex., of Theodoret, Pope Gelasius, Pelagius the second, S. Anselm, S. Thomas; in latter ages, of Bellarm., Baronius, Binius, Spondan, of Salmeron, Estius, Gagneius, Tirinus, Menochius, Alex. Natalis, and a great many more; so that Cornelius a Lapide on this place says, that the Church neither knows nor celebrates any other Cephas but S. Peter. Tertullian and most interpreters take notice, that S. Peter's fault was only a lesser or venial sin in his conduct and conversation. Did not S. Paul on several occasions do the like, as what is here laid to S. Peter's charge? that is, practise the Jewish ceremonies: did not he circumcise Timothy after this, an. 52? did he not shave his head in Cenchrea, an. 54? did he not, by the advice of S. James, (an. 58,) purify himself with the Jews in the temple, not to offend them? S. Jerom, and also S. Chrys., give another exposition of this passage. They looked upon all this to have been done by a contrivance and a collusion betwixt these two apostles, who had agreed beforehand that S. Peter should let himself be reprehended by S. Paul, (for this they take to be signified by the Greek text,) and not that S. Peter was reprehensible; so that the Jews seeing S. Peter publicly blamed, and not justifying himself, might for the future eat with the Gentiles. But S. Aug. vigorously opposed this exposition of S. Jerom, as less consistent with a Christian and apostolical sincerity, and with the text in this chapter, where it is called a dissimulation, and that Cephas or Peter walked not uprightly to the truth of the gospel. After a long dispute betwixt these two doctors, S. Jerom seems to have retracted his opinion, and the opinion of S. Aug. is commonly followed, that S. Peter was guilty of a venial fault of imprudence. In the mean time, no Catholic denies but that the head of the Church may be guilty even of great sins. What we have to admire, is the humility of S. Peter on this occasion, as S. Cyprian observes, who took the reprehension so mildly, without alleging the primacy, which our Lord had given him. Wi.—I withstood, &c. The fault that is here noted in the conduct of S. Peter, was only a certain imprudence, in withdrawing himself from the table of the Gentiles, for fear of giving offence to the Jewish converts: but this in such circumstances, when his so doing might be of ill consequence to the Gentiles, who might be induced thereby to think themselves obliged to conform to the Jewish way of living, to the prejudice of their Christian liberty. Neither was S. Paul's reprehending him any argument against his supremacy; for in such cases an inferior may, and sometimes ought, with respect, to admonish his superior. Ch.

VER. 16, &c. Knowing that a man is not justified by the works of the law. S. Paul, to the end of the chapter, seems to continue his discourse to S. Peter, but chiefly to the Jewish Galatians, to show that both the Gentiles, whom the Jews called and looked upon as sinners, and also the Jews, when converted, could only hope to be justified and saved by the faith of Christ, and not by the works of the law.—For by the law I am dead to the law. That is, says S. Jerom, by the evangelical law of Christ I am dead to the ancient law and its ceremonies. Wi.

VER. 19. He here expresses the change which had been wrought in him

CHAP. III.

The Spirit, and the blessing promised to Abraham, cometh not by the law, but by faith.

O SENSELESS Galatians, who hath bewitched you, that you should not obey the truth, before whose eyes Jesus Christ hath been set forth, crucified among you.

2 This only would I learn of you: Did you receive the Spirit by the works of the law, or by the hearing of faith?

3 Are you so foolish, that, whereas you began in the spirit, you would now be made perfect by the flesh?

4 Have you suffered so great things in vain? If yet in vain.

5 He, therefore, who giveth to you the spirit, and worketh miracles among you, doth he do it by the works of the law, or by the hearing of the faith?

6 As it is written: ^a Abraham believed God, and it was reputed to him unto justice.

7 Know ye, therefore, that they who are of faith, are the children of Abraham.

8 And the scripture, foreseeing that God justifieth the Gentiles by faith, told Abraham before: ^b In thee shall all nations be blessed.

9 Therefore, they who are of the faith, shall be blessed with the faithful Abraham.

10 For as many as are of the works of the law, are under a curse. For it is written: ^c Cursed is every one that continueth not in all things which are written in the book of the law, to do them.

The law to which he had been attached had passed away from him. Now he was so united to Christ and his cross, that he says, Not I, but Christ liveth in me.

CHAP. III. VER. 1. *Before whose eyes Jesus Christ . . . crucified among you. The common exposition is, that S. Paul had before described and set before them Christ crucified. Others, that it had been clearly foretold by the prophets that Christ was crucified for them. Wi.

VER. 2. Did you receive the Spirit by the works of the law? As if he said, you esteem it a great favour to have received those spiritual gifts of working miracles, &c. When you were made Christians, had you these favours by the works of the law, or was it not by the hearing of faith, and by the faith of Christ, that you had such extraordinary graces? Wi.

VER. 4, 5. If yet in vain: i. e. I have still good hopes, that what you have already suffered by persecutions and self-denials, since your conversion, will not be in vain; as they would be, if you sought to be justified by the works and ceremonies of the law of Moses, and not by the faith and law of Christ, by which only you can be truly sanctified. Wi.

VER. 6. As it is written: Abraham believed God, and it was reputed to him unto justice. See Rom. iv. 3. The apostle thus argues with the Galatians; Abraham, who was never under the law, still received the grace of justification in reward of his faith, even before he had received circumcision. Now, if a person can be justified without the law, the law can be no ways necessary to salvation. Calmer.

11 But that by the law no man is justified with God, it is manifest: ^d because the just man liveth by faith.

12 But the law is not of faith: but ^e he that doth these things, shall live in them.

13 Christ hath redeemed us from the curse of the law, being made a curse for us; for it is written: ^f Cursed is every one that hangeth on a tree:

14 That the blessing of Abraham might come on the Gentiles through Christ Jesus: that we may receive the promise of the Spirit by faith.

15 Brethren, (I speak after the manner of man,) ^g yet a man's testament, if it be confirmed, no man despiseth, nor addeth to it.

16 To Abraham were the promises made, and to his seed. He saith not: And to his seeds, as of many: but as of one: And to thy seed, who is Christ.

17 Now this I say, that the testament which was confirmed by God, the law which was made after four hundred and thirty years, doth not disannul to make the promise of no effect.

18 For if the inheritance be of the law, it is no more of promise. But God gave it to Abraham by promise.

19 Why then was the law? It was set because of transgressions, till the seed should come, to whom he made the promise, being ordained by angels in the hand of a mediator.

20 Now a mediator is not of one: but God is one.

21 Was the law then against the promises of God? God forbid. For if there had been a law given which could give life, verily, justice should have been by the law

^d Hab. ii. 4; Rom. i. 17.—^e Lev. xviii. 5.—^f Deut. xxi. 23.—^g Heb. ix. 17.

VER. 10—14. Are under a curse . . . cursed is every one, &c. The sense of these is to be found Deut. xxvii. 26, in the Sept. Some expound them thus: curses are pronounced against every one who keeps not all the precepts of the law, but there is not any one; i. e. scarce any one, who keepeth them all; therefore all under the law are under some curse. But as it cannot be said that no one kept all the precepts, especially the moral precepts of the law, mentioned in that place of Deuteronomy; therefore others understand that all such persons fall under these curses, who think to comply with all these precepts by their own strength, or who confide in the works of the law only, without a faith in Christ, the Messiah, and without which they cannot be saved. This agrees with what follows, that the just man liveth by faith. Hab. ii. 4. See Rom. i. 17.—Now the law is not of faith, i. e. the works done merely in compliance with the law, are not works of faith that can save a man: but he that doth those things of the law, shall live in them; i. e. says S. Jerom, shall have a long temporal life promised in the law; or, as others say, shall have life everlasting, if they are done with faith.—Christ hath redeemed us from these curses; but to do this, hath made himself a curse for our sake, by taking upon himself the similitude of a sinner, and by dying upon the cross, as if he had been guilty of the greatest sins, having only charged himself with our sins, inasmuch as it is written, (Deut. xxi. 23,) Cursed is every one who hangeth on a tree; which is to be understood, in case he deserve it for his own sins. Wi.

VER. 15, &c. I speak after the manner of man; or, by a comparison, says S. Chrys., common among men. If a man make or execute his last will, or any deed or contract, it stands good; no one contravenes it, or pretends to annul it, or add any thing to it: how much more shall the testament, the covenant, or solemn promise which God made to Abraham, to bless all nations, stand firm and have its effect? And he said, to his seed, to one, i. e. in Christ only, not, to his seeds, as it were by many. It is observed, that the word seed being of a collective signification, may, grammatically, be taken for the plural as well as for the singular number; so that we are to have more regard to S. Paul's authority, who expounds to us what is here signified by the word seed, than to the word itself.—The law which was made after four hundred and thirty years (consult the chronologists) does not make void the testament: nor the promise which God himself made to Abraham, that mankind should be blessed only by Christ. These blessings could not be by the law of Moses ordained, or delivered by angels in the hand of a mediator, to wit, of Moses according to the common interpretation, who, in receiving and publishing the law, was as it were a mediator betwixt God and his people.—And a mediator is not of one, (but is called so, as mediating betwixt two parties,) but God is one. This is to signify, that when he made the covenant or promise to Abraham, he made this promise himself, and did not make use of a mediator inferior to himself, as when he gave the law; and the law, in this respect, was inferior to the promise; but the chief difference was, that true justice and sanctification was not given by the 22 *But the scripture hath concluded all under sin, that the promise by the faith of Jesus Christ might be given to them that believe.

23 But before that faith came, we were kept under the law, shut up unto that faith which was to be revealed.

24 Wherefore the law was our pedagogue in Christ, that we might be justified by faith.

25 But after that faith is come, we are no longer under a pedagogue.

26 For you are all the children of God by faith, in Christ Jesus.

27 *For as many of you as have been baptized in Christ, have put on Christ.

28 There is neither Jew nor Greek; there is neither bond nor free; there is neither male nor female. For you are all one in Christ Jesus.

29 And if you be Christ's; then you are the seed of Abraham, heirs according to the promise.

CHAP. IV.

Christ hath freed us from the servitude of the law: we are the free-born sons of Abraham.

NOW I say: As long as the heir is a child, he differeth nothing from a servant, though he be lord of all.

2 But is under tutors and governors, until the time appointed by the father:

3 Even so we, when we were children, were in bondage under the elements of the world.

law, for so it would have contradicted and have made void the promise made before to Moses, that the blessings of a true sanctification should only be by his seed and by faith in Christ, the Son of Abraham and of David. According to the Scriptures all things (i. e. all men) were shut up together under sin, under the slavery of sin, from which they were not to be redeemed but by the accomplishment of the promise, and by the coming of Christ, by his grace, and a faith in him. Wi.—Because of transgressions. To restrain them from sin, by fear and threats.—Ordained by angels. The law was delivered by angels, speaking in the name and person of God to Moses, who was the mediator on this occasion between God and the people. Ch.—The law was established not to occasion sin, but to manifest sin, and to punish sin. Ezechiel (xx. 11) shows the meaning of the apostle, when he says, that God, after bringing the Israelites out of Egypt, imposed laws upon them that gave life to such as observed them.

VER. 27. The baptism of infants shows that the sacrament gives grace of itself, by Divine appointment; or, as divines say, ex opere operato.

CHAP. IV. VER. 1. By the child, in this place, the apostle understands all the Jewish people, who, as long as they were under the childhood of the law, were subjected to numerous restrictions, although they were the favourite children of God. Calmet.

VER. 3. Under the elements of the world. S. Chrys. understands the exterior ceremonies and precepts of the law of Moses, with an allusion to the first elements or rudiments which children are taught. Wi.

VER. 4. The fulness of the time. That is, the time decreed by Divine Providence.—God sent his Son, made of a woman, who took a true human body of his virgin Mother.—Under the law, as he was man, because he was pleased to make himself so. Wi.

6 And because you are sons, God hath sent the Spirit of his Son into your hearts, crying: Abba, Father.

7 Therefore, now he is no more a servant, but a son And if a son, an heir also through God.

8 But then, indeed, not knowing God, you served them, who, by nature, are no gods.

9 But now, after that you have known God, or rather are known of God; how turn you again to the weak and poor elements, to which you are desirous to serve again?

10 You observe days and months, and times, and years.

11 I am in fear for you, lest, perhaps, I have laboured in vain among you.

12 Be ye as I, for I also am as you: brethren, I beseech you; you have not injured me at all.

13 And you know how, through infirmity of the flesh, I preached the gospel to you heretofore: and your temptation in my flesh.

14 You despised not, nor rejected; but received me as an angel of God, even as Christ Jesus.

15 Where is then your blessedness? For I bear you witness, that, if it could be done, you would have plucked out your own eyes, and would have given them to me.

16 Am I then become your enemy in telling you the truth?

17 They are zealous in your regard not well; but they would exclude you, that you might be zealous for them.

18 But be zealous for that which is good in a good thing always; and not only when I am present with you.

19 My little children, of whom I am in labour again, until Christ be formed in you.

20 And I would willingly be present with you now, and change my voice: because I am ashamed for you.

* Rom. vi. 3.

VER. 6. Crying, Abba. That is, Father. Christ taught us in prayer to call God our Father, he having made us his adoptive sons by his grace, and heirs of heaven. Wi.

VER. 8. 9. You served them, who, by nature, are no gods. These words are to be understood of the converts, who had been Gentiles.—Known of God. That is, approved and loved by him. Wi.

VER. 10, 11. You observe days, &c.* These false teachers were for obliging all Christians to observe all the Jewish feasts, fasts, ceremonies, &c. This text cannot mean to condemn the feasts appointed to be kept holy in the Catholic Church. For on the festivals dedicated to our Lord, S. Austin writeth thus, "We dedicate and consecrate the memory of God's benefits with solemnities on solemn appointed days, lest in process of time they might creep into ungrateful and unkind oblivion." And of the martyrs thus, "Christian people celebrate the memories of martyrs with religious solemnity, both to move themselves to an imitation of their virtues, and that they may be partakers of their merits, and helped by their prayers." Cont. Faust. l. 20, c. 21. And of other saints thus, "Keep ye and celebrate with sobriety the nativity of saints, that we may imitate them that are gone before us, and that they may rejoice in us, who pray for us" In Psal. lxxxviii. Conc. 2, in fine.

VER. 12. Be ye as I, for I also am as you. I add no word in the translation, because it is uncertain what is to be understood: some give this construction, Be you as I am, because I also was as you now are; and they expound them thus: lay aside your zeal for the Jewish ceremonies as I have done, who was once as zealous for them as you seem now to be. Others would have the construction and sense to be, Be you as I am, because I am as you; that is, be affected to me, and love me, as I have still a true affection and love for you, which is agreeable to what follows, you have not offended me at all. Wi.

VER. 13—16. Through infirmity of the flesh . . . and your temptation in my flesh. S. Jerom thinks the apostle had some bodily infirmity upon him. S. Chrys. understands his poverty, and want, and persecutions, and that some were inclined to condemn him and his preaching on these accounts. Wi.

VER. 17—20. He tells them this change comes from the false preachers among them, who with a false zeal would exclude them from a friendship and a submission to S. Paul, and deprive them again of that Christian liberty by which Christ, and the faith of Christ, had freed them from the yoke of the Mosaic law. On this account I must labour and travail, as it were, to bring you forth a second time. How do I now wish to be with you, to change my voice, to exhort you, to reprehend you, to use all ways and means to regain you to Christ!—I am in confusion about you.† I am perplexed, as the Greek signifies, as not knowing what to say or do. Wi.

21 Tell me, you that desire to be under the law, have you not read the law?

22 For it is written, that Abraham had two sons; 'the one by a bond-woman, 'and the other by a free-woman.

23 But he that was by the bond-woman, was born according to the flesh; but he by the free-woman, was by the promise.

24 Which things are said by an allegory. For these are the two testaments. The one indeed on Mount Sina, which bringeth forth unto bondage, which is Agar.

25 For Sina is a mountain in Arabia, which hath an affinity with that which now is Jerusalem, and is in bondage with her children.

26 But that Jerusalem, which is above, is free; which is our mother.

27 For it is written: 'Rejoice thou barren, that bearest not; break forth and cry out, thou that travailest not; for many are the children of the desolate, more than of her that hath a husband.

28 'Now we, brethren, as Isaac was, are the children of the promise.

29 But as then he, who was born according to the flesh, persecuted him who was according to the Spirit: so also now.

30 But what saith the scripture? Cast out the bond-woman and her son; for the son of the bond-woman shall not be heir with the son of the free-woman.

31 Therefore, brethren, we are not the children of the bond-woman, but of the free; by the freedom wherewith Christ hath made us free.

a Gen. xvi. 15.—b Gen. xxi. 2.—c Isa. liv. 1.—d Rom. ix. 8.—e Acts xv. 1.

VER. 22. It is written in the law, that is, in Genesis, (chap. xvi. and xxi.,) that Abraham had two sons, &c.: that his two sons, Ismach, born of his servant, Agar, and Isaac of his wife, Sara, in an allegorical sense, represent the two testaments or covenants, which God made with his people: that Sina, the mountain in Arabia, hath † an affinity with Jerusalem, and with her children, who remain under the servitude of the law of Moses: we cannot understand a conjunction, or an affinity, as to place and situation, Sina and Jerusalem being near twenty days' journey distant from each other; therefore it can only be an affinity in a mystical signification, inasmuch as Jerusalem was the capital of the Jews, where the children of those who received the law on Mount Sina lived still under the servitude of the same law: but Christians, who believe in Christ, must look upon themselves as belonging to Jerusalem, and not to the city of Jerusalem upon earth, but to the celestial Jerusalem in heaven, which is our mother, now no longer servants and slaves to the former law, but free, being made the sons of God by the grace of Christ, and heirs of heaven. And these blessings were promised to all nations; not only to the Jews, of which the much greater part remained obstinate, and refused to believe in Christ, but also particularly to the Gentiles, according to the prophecy of Isaias, (chap. liv.,) Rejoice thou that hast been barren, like Sara, for a long time; i. e. rejoice you Gentiles, hitherto left in idolatry, without the knowledge or worship of the true God, now you shall have more children among you than among the Jews, who were his chosen people. Wi.

* V. 10. S. Jerom on this verse, p. 271, dicat aliquis, nos simile erimen incurrimus . . . observantes diem dominicam . . . Pascha festivitatem, et Pentecostes actitiam, et pro varietate regionum, diversa in honore martyrum tempora constituta, &c.

† V. 20. Confundor in vobis, ἀποροῦμαι. See 2 Cor. iv. 8, &c.

‡ V. 25. Qui conjunctus est ei, quæ nunc est Jerusalem, συστοιχεί τῇ νῦν Ἱερουσαλὴμ. See Budæus, Estius, Mr. Legh, &c.

CHAP. V. VER. 1. Be not held again under the yoke of bondage, of the old law. Wi.—This verse must be understood in the same manner as the 9th verse of the preceding chapter. See the annotations upon it.

2 'Behold I, Paul, tell you, that if you be circumcised, Christ will profit you nothing.

3 And I testify again to every man that circumciseth himself, that he is a debtor to do the whole law.

4 Christ is become of no effect to you; whosoever of you are justified by the law, you are fallen from grace.

5 For we in spirit, by faith, wait for the hope of justice.

6 For in Christ Jesus neither circumcision availeth any thing, nor uncircumcision; but faith, which worketh by charity.

7 You did run well: who hath hindered you, that you should not obey the truth?

8 This persuasion is not from him who calleth you.

9 'A little leaven corrupteth the whole mass.

10 I have confidence in you in the Lord; that you will not be of another mind: but he that troubleth you, shall bear the judgment, whosoever he be.

11 And I, brethren, if I yet preach circumcision, why do I yet suffer persecution? The scandal of the cross is therefore made void.

12 I would they were even cut off, who trouble you.

13 For you, brethren, have been called unto liberty: only use not liberty for an occasion to the flesh, but by charity of the Spirit serve one another.

14 For all the law is fulfilled in one sentence: 'Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself.

15 But if you bite and eat one another; take heed that you be not consumed one by another.

16 I say then: 'Walk in the Spirit, and you shall not fulfil the lust of the flesh.

17 For the flesh lusteth against the Spirit; and the Spirit against the flesh; for these are contrary one to another: so that you do not the things that you would.

18 But if you are led by the Spirit, you are not under the law.

f 1 Cor. v. 6.—g Lev. xix. 18; Matt. xxii. 39; Rom. xiii. 8.—h 1 Pet. ii. 12.

VER. 3. The false teachers had insisted on the observance of circumcision and a few other rites only, as necessary for salvation; but S. Paul assures them, that the receiving of circumcision is an open profession of Judaism, and that he that makes this profession, binds himself to the observance of every part of the law, since a curse is pronounced against those that do not keep it in all its parts. If then circumcision be necessary for salvation, the whole law is necessary also Calmet.

VER. 5, 6. We in spirit hope for true justice by a faith in Christ; yet not by faith only, but by a faith working by charity. Wi.—Here note with S. Austin, that faith is not to be idle, but working or doing good works in charity: wherefore not faith alone. De Opere et Fide, c. 14.

VER. 8, &c. This persuasion of yours is not from him who calleth you; is not from God: and I hope you will be shortly again of no other mind than what I taught you. Wi.—This was a Jewish proverb, and alluded to the time of the Pasch, when it was not permitted to eat of any but unleavened bread; during which time the least leaven made the whole mass unclean to a Jew. . . . Some Greek copies read, μικρὰ ζύμη ὅλον τὸ φύραμα θυμοί, when the sense will be, "a little leaven causes the whole mass to rise." Calmet.—The scandal of the cross is therefore made void. The sense is, according to S. Jerom, that the Jews' greatest objection against S. Paul used to be, because he preached that circumcision and the law of Moses need not be observed: another objection against him was, that he preached Jesus who was crucified on an infamous cross, to be their great Messiah. He reasons then in this manner, that if the Jews think he again preacheth the necessity of circumcision and the precepts of the old law, they will no longer be offended that he preacheth Christ crucified, because they were not so much offended with the latter as with the first. Thus also S. Chrys. on this verse.—I would they were even cut off: separated from your communion by excommunication. This seems the true sense; so that I need not mention any other exposition. See Corn. a Lapide. Wi.

VER. 14. All the law, as far as it regards our duty to our neighbour, is contained in this text of the apostle; he says the same in his Epistle to the Romans, chap. xiii. He that loves his neighbour has fulfilled the law.

VER. 17. So that you* do not the things that you would. He does not say so that you cannot do, as others falsely translate; as if men were under an absolute 19 Now the works of the flesh are manifest; which are, fornication, uncleanness, immodesty, luxury,

20 Idolatry, witchcraft, enmities, contentions, emulations, wrath, quarrels, dissensions, sects,

21 Envy, murders, drunkenness, revellings, and such like; of the which I foretell you, as I have foretold to you, that they who do such things, shall not obtain the kingdom of God.

22 But the fruit of the Spirit is, charity, joy, peace, patience, benignity, goodness, longanimity, 23 Mildness, faith, modesty, continency, chastity. Against such there is no law.

24 And they who are Christ's, have crucified their flesh with the vices and concupiscences.

25 If we live in the Spirit, let us also walk in the Spirit.

26 Let us not become desirous of vain-glory, provoking one another, envying one another.

CHAP. VI.

He exhorts to charity, humility, &c. He glories in nothing but in the cross of Christ.

BRETHREN, and if a man be overtaken in any fault, you who are spiritual, instruct such a one in the spirit of mildness, considering thyself, lest thou also be tempted.

2 Bear ye one another's burdens: and so shall you fulfil the law of Christ.

3 For if any man think himself to be something, whereas he is nothing, he deceiveth himself.

4 But let every one prove his own work, and so he shall have glory in himself only, and not in another.

5 * For every one shall bear his own burden.

a 1 Cor. iii. 8.

necessity of sinning, or doing ill; which is also contradictory to the foregoing words, walk by the Spirit, and you will not accomplish the works of the flesh. Wi.—Here some suppose, says S. Austin, that the apostle denieth that we have free liberty of will: not understanding that this is said to them, if they will not hold fast the grace of faith conceived, by which only they can walk in the Spirit, and not accomplish the lusts of the flesh. S. Austin, in chap. v. Gal.

VER. 19—21. Uncleanness, immodesty, luxury. S. Austin here sheweth that there are other damnable sins besides infidelity.

* V. 17. Ita ut non quæcunque vultis, illa faciatis; ἵνα μὴ ἂν θέλητε ταῦτα τοῖς ἑτέροις. Dr. Wells, in his correction to the Prot. translation, leaves out cannot.

CHAP. VI. VER. 2. One another's burdens. This is not contrary to what is added ver. 5, that every one shall bear his own burden, because in the first place the sense is, that we must bear patiently with one another's faults and imperfections; in the second, that every one must answer for himself at God's tribunal. Wi.

VER. 6. Communicate . . . in all good things: by this communication, is understood an assisting of others in their wants. Wi.—Such as are blessed with the goods of this world should gladly communicate a share of their effects to the preachers and teachers of the true faith: and this not merely as a return for what they have received, but also that they may be made thereby partakers of their merit. S. Aug. l. 2, Evang. Quæst. q. 8.

VER. 9. Works of mercy are the seed of life everlasting, and the proper cause thereof, and not faith only.

6 And let him who is instructed in the word, communicate to him, who instructeth him, in all good things

7 Be not deceived, God is not mocked.

8 For what things a man shall sow, those also shall he reap. For he that soweth in his flesh, of the flesh also shall reap corruption: but he that soweth in the spirit, of the spirit shall reap life everlasting.

9 ^b And in doing good, let us not fail: for in due time we shall reap, not failing.

10 Therefore, whilst we have time, let us do good to all men, but especially to those who are of the household of the faith.

11 See what a letter I have written to you with my own hand.

12 For whosoever desire to please in the flesh, they constrain you to be circumcised, only that they may not suffer the persecution of the cross of Christ.

13 For neither they themselves, who are circumcised, keep the law: but they will have you to be circumcised, that they may glory in your flesh.

14 But God forbid that I should glory, but in the cross of our Lord Jesus Christ: by whom the world is crucified to me, and I to the world.

15 For in Christ Jesus neither circumcision availeth any thing, nor uncircumcision, but a new creature.

16 And whosoever shall follow this rule, peace be upon them, and mercy, and upon the Israel of God.

17 From henceforth let no man be troublesome to me: for I bear the marks of the Lord Jesus in my body.

18 The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with your spirit, brethren. Amen.

b 2 Thess. iii. 13.

VER. 10. The household of the faith: those who profess the same true faith. Wi.—We are more bound to assist Christians than Jews; Catholics than heretics. S. Jerom, q. 1, ad Hedibin.

VER. 11. What a letter I have written . . . with my own hand. S. Jerom understands this of what he is now beginning to write, the rest being written by the hand of another. Others understand the whole letter. Wi.—S. Chrys., Theophylact, and Theodoret, suppose that the apostle wrote the whole Epistle with his own hand, and here excuses himself for writing so ill the Grecian letters, which were so very different from those of his native language. But S. Jerom understands, that he wrote only this latter part of the Epistle, as a testimony that the whole came from him. Calmet.

VER. 14. As for my part, I will glory in nothing but in the cross of our Lord Jesus Christ, but in Christ crucified. Wi.

VER. 15. But a new creature; but to be born anew, to receive the spiritual life of grace. Wi.

VER. 17. I bear the marks of the Lord Jesus in my body, by the stripes and wounds I have received for preaching the gospel. Wi.—Formerly it was not unusual to stamp certain characters on the hodies of soldiers, fugitives, and of domestic animals, purposely to distinguish them.—There are three principal parts in this Epistle. The first is the history of the vocation of S. Paul, chap. i. and ii.; the second is on justification and the abrogation of the law; the third is an exhortation to persevere in Christian liberty, to avoid its abuse, and to perform the various duties of a Christian.

EPISTLE OF S. PAUL, THE APOSTLE,

TO THE EPHESIANS.

EPHESUS was the capita. of Lesser Asia, and celebrated for the temple of Diana, to which the most part of the people of the East went frequently to worship. BUT 3 Paul having preached the gospel there for two years the first time, and afterwards for about a year, converted many. He wrote this Epistle to them when he was a prisoner at Rome, and sent it by Tychicus. He admonishes them to hold firmly the faith which they had received; and warns them, and also those of the neighbouring cities, against the sophistry of philosophers and the doctrine of false teachers, who were come among them. The matters of faith contained in this Epistle are exceedingly sublime, and consequently very difficult to be understood. It was written about twenty-nine years after our Lord's ascension. Ch.—The Gentile converts held fast to the doctrines they had received from S. Paul: the Jews were the chief innovators. To the former the apostle writes this Epistle, praising their stedfastness, and instructing them more fully in the hidden mysteries of faith, viz. redemption, justification, call of the Gentiles, predestination, and the glorification of Christ, and his body, the Church. In the fourth and succeeding chapters, he exhorts them to the practice of morality, and to fulfil their respective duties of parents, children, masters, servants, &c., and finally reminds all the soldiers of Christ, to be armed with spiritual weapons against all the assaults of the devil. S. Jerom observes that this Epistle, especially the first three chapters, are intricate and difficult; probably owing to the sublimity of the subject. The last three contain the most interesting morality. Estius, passim. See also Acts xviii. 19, et seq., and xix. 1, et seq.

CHAPTER I.

The great blessings we have received through Christ. He is the head of all the church.

PAUL, an apostle of Jesus Christ, by the will of God, to all the saints who are at Ephesus, and to the faithful in Christ Jesus.

2 Grace be to you, and peace from God, our Father, and from the Lord Jesus Christ.

3 *Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, who hath blessed us with all spiritual blessings in heavenly places, in Christ:

4 As he hath chosen us in him, before the foundation of the world, that we should be holy and unspotted in his sight, in charity.

5 Who hath predestinated us unto the adoption of children, through Jesus Christ, unto himself: according to the purpose of his will,

6 To the praise of the glory of his grace, by which he made us acceptable, through his beloved Son.

7 In whom we have redemption through his blood, the remission of sins, according to the riches of his grace,

8 Which hath superabounded in us in all wisdom and prudence:

* 2 Cor. I. 3; 1 Pet. i. 3.

CHAP. I. VER. 1. S. Chrysostom takes notice, in his preface to this Epistle, that the doctrinal part in the first three chapters is treated in a very sublime manner, with long periods and sentences, which makes the style more perplexed and the sense more obscure than in his other Epistles. On this account I shall first give the reader a paraphrase as literal as I can, and then make some short notes on the difficulties in the text. VI.

VER. 3. In heavenly things (in celestibus); i. e. all spiritual blessings for heaven, or for eternity. S. Paul distinguishes the blessings which we receive in Jesus Christ from those bestowed upon the Jews, which were temporal, and limited to this earth. Calmet. Ch.

VER. 4—8. As by his eternal decree, according to the purpose of his good will and pleasure, he hath made choice of us to be his adoptive sons, and predestinated us to be saved and glorified by the merits and grace of his beloved Son, our Redeemer, without any merits of ours, to the glorious praise and riches of his grace, by which he hath made us abound in all wisdom and true prudence. VI.

VER. 9. The mystery of his will. The word mystery signifies a secret, an unknown design. It was the will of God, to reveal to us the great design he had in the incarnation of his Son, viz. the formation of one great body of true adorers; composed, without distinction, of Jew and Gentile: till (ver. 10) when the time appointed shall come, he will re-unite and perfect in or under Christ this one body, composed of the Church triumphant, angels and saints in heaven, and the Church militant upon earth. S. Chrysostom, Estius, &c.

VER. 11. In Christ we also are called by lot; i. e. to this happy lot, this share

9 That he might make known to us the mystery of his will, according to his good pleasure, which he hath purposed in him.

10 In the dispensation of the fulness of times, to establish all things in Christ, which are in heaven and on earth, in him:

11 In whom we also are called by lot, being predestinated according to the purpose of him, who worketh all things according to the counsel of his will:

12 That we may be to the praise of his glory, who have before hoped in Christ:

13 In whom you also, when you had heard the word of truth (the gospel of your salvation): in whom also believing, you were sealed with the holy Spirit of promise, 14 Who is the pledge of our inheritance, for the redemption of acquisition, unto the praise of his glory.

15 Wherefore I also hearing of your faith, which is in the Lord Jesus, and of your love towards all the saints,

16 Cease not to give thanks for you, making commemoration of you in my prayers:

17 That the God of our Lord Jesus Christ, the Father of glory, may give to you the spirit of wisdom and of revelation, in the knowledge of him:

and state of eternal happiness, that we, (ver. 12,) who are saved, may be to the praise of his glory; might praise God for ever in the kingdom of his glory; particularly we Jews, who before hoped in the Messias to come, and also you Gentiles, who now having heard the gospel, have believed in Christ, and who, together with all Christians, have been now sealed as it were with the holy Spirit of promise; i. e. by the Spirit promised, and all those spiritual graces which are an earnest and pledge, which give us an assurance of our future glory and happiness. VI.

VER. 13. In whom you . . . were sealed, &c. Having been regenerated in baptism, you have received the Holy Spirit and the supernatural gifts which he communicates, by which he has, as it were, impressed upon you the seal of your sanctification and the pledge of your salvation. Calmet.—Some refer these words, in whom you were sealed, to the sacrament of baptism; others, to confirmation. both, with the sacrament of holy orders, confer a character, or mark, of which S. Paul seems to speak whenever he speaks of God sealing us.

VER. 15, &c. Wherefore . . . hearing of your constancy in the faith of Christ, and of your charitable love to all the saints, or faithful, I gave always thanks to God; I pray that God may be more and more revealed to you, that the eyes of your heart may be enlightened, (ver. 18,) that you may know what grounds you have to hope in the transcendent greatness of God's almighty power, who raised Christ from the dead, (ver. 20,) and set him on his right hand in heaven, above all the choirs and orders of blessed spirits, putting all things under his feet, making him, as man, head over all his Church militant on earth, and triumphant in heaven: which Church is his mystical body, who is filled all in all, (ver. 23,) or 18 The eyes of your heart enlightened, that you may know what is the hope of his calling, and what are the riches of the glory of his inheritance in the saints,

19 And what is the exceeding greatness of his power towards us, who believe ^a according to the operation of the might of his power,

20 Which he wrought in Christ, raising him up from the dead, and setting him at his right hand, in the heavenly places:

21 Above all principality, and power, and virtue, and dominion, and every name that is named, not only in this world, but also in that which is to come.

22 ^b And he hath put all things under his feet: and hath made him head over all the church,

23 Which is his body, and the fulness of him, who is filled all in all.

CHAP. II.

All our good comes through Christ. He is our peace.

AND ^c you, when you were dead in your offences and sins,

2 Wherein in time past you walked according to the course of this world, according to the prince of the power of this air, of the spirit that now worketh on the children of unbelief,

3 Among whom also we all conversed in time past, in the desires of our flesh, fulfilling the will of the flesh and of our thoughts, and were by nature the children of wrath, even as the rest:

^a Infra, iii. 7.—^b Psal. viii. 8.

as others have translated, who filleth all in all: the sense is, that the glory of Christ, as head of all, is filled and increased by the salvation and happiness of all his chosen members, and of all his elect, to the end of the world. Wi.

VER. 21. All principality. The Fathers agree that there are nine orders of blessed spirits, of which some are specified here; in the Epistle to the Colossians, we have the order of thrones, to which if we add the cherubin, seraphim, angels, and archangels, we shall have nine.

VER. 22. As Christ is king, and yet men are kings also; so Christ is head of the Church, and yet men may be head thereof also. Jesus Christ is bishop and pastor of our souls, (Heb. iii.); but is that a reason why there should be no other bishop and pastor of our souls?

Notes as to the style or expressions of S. Paul, in this chapter.

VER. 3. With all spiritual blessings in heavenly places: lit. in heavenlies,* or celestials, which some expound and translate, in heavenly things; but this being expressed just before by spiritual blessings, it rather seems to be understood of the glory prepared for us in heaven, or in the heavenly mansions; in which sense it seems to me, according to the interpretation both of S. Jerom and of S. Chrys., in their commentaries on these words. Estius takes notice that the same expression, in the celestials, is used five times in this Epistle, and in all of them signifies places above us. Wi.

VER. 9. Which he hath purposed in him; † i. e. in Christ: but in the Greek the sense is, in himself; i. e. in God the Father, who sent his Son. Wi.

VER. 10. In the dispensation of the fulness of times. It may perhaps be translated, at the appointed fulness of time, which is generally expounded to signify at the time decreed from eternity.—To establish (or restore) all things in Christ.† The Greek is, to recapitulate, or, as in the Prot. translation, to gather together all things in Christ; which S. Jerom expounds, by a fulfilling at once in Christ all the ancient figures and prophecies of the former law. Wi.

VER. 14. The redemption of acquisition; § i. e. in order to the acquired possession, or to the obtaining of that glory which Christ, by redeeming us, hath acquired for us. Wi.

VER. 23. Who is filled all in all.|| In the Latin the words have a passive signification, is filled; in the Greek may be signified, who filleth all in all. Wi.

4 But God, who is rich in mercy, through his exceeding charity, with which he loved us,

5 Even when we were dead in sins, hath quickened us together in Christ, (by whose grace you are saved,)

6 And hath raised us up together, and hath made us sit together in the heavenly places, in Christ Jesus:

7 That he might show in the ages to come the abundant riches of his grace, in goodness upon us in Christ Jesus.

8 For by grace you are saved through faith, and this not of yourselves: for it is the gift of God;

9 Not of works, that no man may glory.

10 For we are his workmanship, created in Christ Jesus, in good works; which God hath prepared, that we should walk in them.

11 For which cause, be mindful that you being here tofore Gentiles in the flesh, who are called uncircumcision by that which is called the circumcision in the flesh made by hands:

12 That you were at that time without Christ, alienated from the conversation of Israel, and strangers to the testaments, having no hope of the promise, and without God in this world.

13 But now in Christ Jesus, you, who some time were afar off, are made near by the blood of Christ.

CHAP. II. VER. 1. He enlivened you, when you were dead. These words, he enlivened or restored to life, are necessary to express the literal sense and construction, as appears from the following fifth verse.

VER. 2. According to the course of this world, (i. e. the customs of this wicked, corrupt world,) according to the prince of the power of this air, of the spirit, &c., meaning the devils, who are permitted to exercise their power upon the earth, or in the air. See John xii. 31; xiv. 30; xvi. 11. Wi.

VER. 3. Among whom, &c. S. Jerom (p. 3) refers it to trespasses or sins.—Were by nature; not by nature according to the state of man's first creation in paradise, but by nature infected with original sin by the fall of our first parents.—Even as the rest; that is, all mankind. Wi.

VER. 4, &c. But God . . . hath raised us up together, both Gentiles and Jews, to life in Christ, remitting our sins by faith in him, and by the grace of our merciful Redeemer, by his pure mercy, not by any works of ours, nor merely by the works of the former law.—Hath made us in a condition to sit together in heavenly places, to be hereafter crowned in heaven. Wi.

VER. 8. Faith is the beginning, foundation, and root of justification, and the first of all other virtues, without which it is impossible to please God. H.

VER. 9. Not of works, as of our own growth, or from ourselves: but as from the grace of God. Ch.

VER. 10. For we are his workmanship, not only as to our body and soul, but by a new creation in Christ Jesus, with a new heart by his grace. Wi.

VER. 11, 12. Be mindful that as for you, who were Gentiles, who were called an uncircumcised people by the circumcised Jews, that you were without Christ, without the hopes or expectation of the Messias, alienated from the conversation of those who were God's elect people, and from the promises particularly made to them, that the Messias should be of their race: without God in this world, i. e. without the knowledge and the worship of God. But now by Christ, by believing in him, you who seemed to be afar off, are made near by his blood, (ver. 13,) by him who died for all; for he hath brought peace to all men, breaking down by his incarnation and death that wall of partition, that enmity betwixt the Jews and Gentiles, making them but one; abolishing that former law, of so many ordinances,* precepts, and ceremonies, by decrees, (which may signify by his Divine decrees; or rather, as S. Jerom expounds it by the Greek, abolishing the old law and its precepts by the precepts and doctrine of the new law,) that he might reconcile to God both the Jews and Gentiles, that now they might be one mystical body, to wit, the Church of Christ, of which he is the head. Wi.

VER. 14. Christ destroyed the enmity which, like a wall of separation, stood between Jew and Gentile, and united them into one people. He did this in his flesh, by his own blood, or the sacrifice he made of his flesh on the cross Calmet.

15 Abolishing the law of commandments in decrees : that he might make the two in himself into one new man, establishing peace,

16 And might reconcile both to God in one body by the cross, destroying the enmities by himself.

17 And coming, he preached peace to you, who were afar off, and peace to them who were near at hand.

18 *For through him we have both access in one Spirit to the Father.

19 Now, therefore, you are no more strangers and foreigners : but you are fellow-citizens with the saints, and the domestics of God :

20 Built upon the foundation of the apostles and prophets, Jesus Christ himself being the chief corner-stone :

21 In whom all the building framed together, groweth into a holy temple in the Lord :

22 In whom you also are built together into a habitation of God in the Spirit.

CHAP. III.

The mystery hidden from former ages was discovered to the apostle, to be imparted to the Gentiles. He prays that they may be strengthened in God.

FOR this cause I, Paul, the prisoner of Jesus Christ, for you Gentiles,

2 If yet you have heard of the dispensation of the grace of God, which is given me towards you :

3 How that, according to revelation, the mystery hath been made known to me, as I have written above in brief :

4 As you reading, may understand my knowledge in the mystery of Christ :

5 Which in other generations was not made known to the sons of men, as it is now revealed to his holy apostles, and prophets, in the Spirit.

* Rom. v. 2.

VER. 19. You are no longer strangers with regard to God and his holy alliance. You are no longer travellers and vagabonds, without a God, as you were before your conversion ; not knowing to whom you belonged, nor finding in paganism either solid foundation or truth, neither hopes for this nor consolation for future life. But now you are become citizens of the same city as the saints, and domestics of the house of God. Calmet.

VER. 20. The Church is in this place said to be built upon the apostles and prophets ; why not then upon S. Peter ?

* V. 11, 12. Legem mandatorum decretis evacuans, τὸν νόμον τῶν ἐντολῶν δόγμασι (dogmatibus) καταργήσας ; i. e. says S. Jerom, (p. 344,) præcepta legalia Evangelicis dogmatibus commutavit. See S. Chrys., p. 879, Lat. edit. in Davil. p. 787.

CHAP. III. VER. 1. For this cause I, Paul, the prisoner, &c. The sense seems to be, I, Paul, am a prisoner ; otherwise the sense will be suspended, and interrupted by a long parenthesis till the 14th verse, where it is again repeated, "for this cause I bow my knees." Wi.

VER. 2. If yet* you have heard. If yet doth not imply a doubt, but is the same as, for you have heard the dispensation.† This word, dispensation, is divers times taken by S. Paul to signify the manner by which a thing is done, or put in execution ; the sense therefore here is, for you have heard how by the grace of God I have been made your apostle. Wi.

VER. 3. The mystery, &c. By this mystery, he means what he has already mentioned in the last chapter, and what he continues to speak of, to wit, that by the coming of Christ, and the preaching of his gospel, all, both Jews and Gentiles, all nations, shall be united into one Church, by one and the same faith. Wi.—Mystery, &c. Revelation, the same as he mentions Gal. i. 12 ; where, speaking of his gospel, he says, For neither did I receive it of man, nor did I learn it, but by the revelation of Jesus Christ. Wi.

gift of the grace of God, which is given to me^b according to the operation of his power.

8 *To me, the least of all the saints, is given this grace, to preach among the Gentiles the unsearchable riches of Christ,

9 And to enlighten all men, what is the dispensation of the mystery which hath been hidden from eternity in God, who created all things.

10 That the manifold wisdom of God may be made known to the principalities, and powers, in the heavenly places, through the church,

11 According to the eternal decree, which he made in Christ Jesus, our Lord :

12 In whom we have affiance and access with confidence, by the faith of him.

13 Wherefore, I beseech you not to be disheartened at my tribulations for you, which is your glory.

14 For this cause I bow my knees to the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ,

15 Of whom all paternity in heaven and earth is named,

16 That he would grant you, according to the riches of his glory, to be strengthened with power by his Spirit unto the inward man.

17 That Christ may dwell by faith in your hearts : that being rooted and founded in charity,

18 You may be able to comprehend, with all the saints, what is the breadth, and length, and height, and depth :

19 To know also the charity of Christ, which surpasseth knowledge, that you may be filled unto all the fulness of God.

20 Now to him, who is able to do all things more abundantly than we ask or understand, according to the power which worketh in us :

21 To him be glory in the church, and in Christ Jesus, throughout all generations, world without end. Amen.

^b Supra, l. 19.—c 1 Cor. xv. 9.

VER. 5. As it is now revealed.‡ S. Paul, as both S. Jerom and S. Chrys. take notice, does not absolutely say that this mystery was not known, but only not known as it was afterwards to the apostles. Wi.

VER. 6. That the Gentiles should be coheirs, &c. This is the mystery which was heretofore unknown, and now revealed. This is what the greatest part of the Jews could never be brought to believe, that the Gentiles should be equally sharers with them of God's promises and blessings. They were strangely scandalized that S. Peter should receive Cornelius, an uncircumcised man, into the same communion. On the like account they persecuted S. Paul. Wi.

VER. 8. To me, the least of all the saints, (i. e. of the faithful,) is given this mission by the grace of God, and a power from the Almighty of working miracles, and other miraculous gifts from him, who created all things in order to enlighten § or bring light to all men, that they may know and be convinced of the dispensation and manner in which God will have this mystery now made known and preached to all the world. Wi.

VER. 10. That the manifold wisdom of God, and his other Divine perfections of mercy, of justice, &c., may be more known, and seen executed by the coming of his Son, according to his eternal decrees of sending a Redeemer, in whom they are to believe, and have a hope and confidence of their eternal salvation. Wi.

VER. 14, 15. For this cause I pray and bow my knees to the eternal Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, of whom all paternity (or fatherhood ||) in heaven and earth is named. The Greek word oftentimes signifies a family, and therefore may signify, of whom the whole family in heaven and earth is named ; and thus the sense will be, that God is not only the Father of his eternal Son, but of all angelical spirits in heaven, and of all men, especially Christians, made his adoptive sons in baptism. Wi.—All paternity, or the whole family ; πατρία. God is the Father both of angels and men : whosoever besides is named father, is so named with subordination to him. Ch.

VER. 18. What is the breadth, &c. This thought seems borrowed from Job xi., "Peradventure thou wilt comprehend the steps of God, and thou shalt find out the

CHAP. IV.

He exhorts them to unity ; to put on the new man : and to fly sin.

I THEREFORE, a prisoner in the Lord, beseech you, * that you walk worthy of the vocation in which you are called,

2 With all humility, and mildness, with patience, supporting one another in charity,

3 ^b Careful to keep the unity of the spirit in the bond of peace.

4 One body, and one spirit : as you are called in one hope of your vocation.

5 One Lord, one faith, one baptism.

6 ^c One God and Father of all, who is above all, and through all, and in us all.

7 ^d But to every one of us is given grace, according to the measure of the gift of Christ.

8 Wherefore he saith : ^e Ascending on high, he led captivity captive : he gave gifts to men.

9 Now that he ascended, what is it, but because he also descended first into the lower parts of the earth ?

10 He who ascended is the same also who ascended above all the heavens, that he might fulfil all things.

11 And some indeed he gave to be ^f apostles, and some prophets, and others evangelists, and others pastors and teachers,

12 For the perfection of the saints, for the work of the ministry, unto the edification of the body of Christ :

Almighty perfectly." The inspired writer then shows us how the Almighty is incomprehensible ; "for," says he, "God is higher than the heavens ; and what wilt thou do ? he is deeper than hell ; and how wilt thou know ? The measure of him is longer than the earth, and broader than the sea." The apostle, alluding to these words, prays that the Ephesians may have faith and charity sufficient to enable them to comprehend all that is comprehensible of God ; as S. Dionysius explains it. But we are not hence to conclude that there exists such a thing as dimension or size with regard to God, for he is a pure Spirit : but these expressions are merely metaphorical. S. Tho. Aquin. in Eph.

CHAP. IV. VER. 4. In one hope of your vocation. The three great reasons that we have to love one another are contained in this verse, because we have but one body : of which Christ is the head. We are all animated by the same spirit, viz. the Holy Ghost, who is given to us all, and we all live in the same hope of eternal happiness. Calmet.

VER. 5. This contains some more reasons why Christians should love one another. We are all the servants of the same God, believe the same mysteries, and receive the same sacraments, whoever may be the dispenser of them.—One faith. As rebellion is the bane of commonwealths and kingdoms, and peace and concord the preservation of the same ; so is schism, and diversity of faith or fellowship in the service of God, the calamity of the Church : and peace, unity, and uniformity, the special blessing of God therein. S. Cyprian, in his book on the Unity of the Church, writeth thus : "One Church, for one is my dove. This unity of the Church he that holdeth not, doth he think he holdeth the faith ? He that withstandeth or resisteth the Church, he that resisteth Peter's chair, upon which the Church was built, doth he trust that he is in the Church ?" And again, Ep. 40, "There is one God, and one Christ, and one Church, and one chair, by our Lord's voice founded upon Peter. To set up another altar, or to constitute another priesthood, besides the one altar and the one priesthood, is impossible. Whosoever gathereth elsewhere scattereth. It is adulterous, it is impious, it is sacrilegious, whatsoever is instituted by man to the breach of God's disposition. Get ye far from such men : they are blind, and leaders of the blind."

13 Till we all meet in the unity of faith, and of the knowledge of the Son of God, unto a perfect man, unto the measure of the age of the fulness of Christ :

14 That we may not now be children, tossed to and fro, and carried about with every wind of doctrine, in the wickedness of men, in craftiness, by which they lie in wait to deceive.

15 But performing the truth in charity, we may in all things grow up in him, who is the head, Christ :

16 From whom the whole body, compacted and fitly joined together, by what every joint supplieth, according to the operation in the measure of every part, maketh increase of the body, unto the edifying of itself in charity.

17 ^g This then I say and testify in the Lord : that henceforward you walk not as also the Gentiles walk, in the vanity of their mind,

18 Having the understanding obscured with darkness, alienated from the life of God, through the ignorance which is in them, because of the blindness of their heart,

19 Who despairing, have given themselves up to lasciviousness, to the working of all uncleanness, unto covetousness.

20 But you have not so learned Christ :

21 If yet you have heard him, and have been taught in him, as the truth is in Jesus.

VER. 7. To every one of us is given grace, according to the measure of the gift of Christ. That is, as it hath pleased Christ to bestow his free gifts upon us ; to show, says S. Chrys., that it was not according to any merit of ours. The words also show that Christ is the giver and author of graces, and consequently the true God. Wi.

VER. 8. He led captivity captive. S. Jerom and others expound these words of Christ's delivering the pious souls that had died before his ascension, and which were detained in a place of rest, which is called Limbus Patrum.—He gave gifts to men. Having delivered men from the captivity of sin, he bestowed upon them his gifts and graces. Wi.

VER. 9. Into the lower parts of the earth. This cannot signify into the grave only, especially since in that which we look upon as the apostle's creed, we first profess to believe that he was buried, and afterwards that he descended into hell. Wi.

VER. 11. Some indeed he gave to be apostles, &c. It is said (1 Cor. xii. 28) that God (even with the Greek article) gave some to be apostles, &c., and here it is said of Christ : another proof that Christ is the true God. Wi.

VER. 13, 14. Unto a perfect man, unto the measure of the age of the fulness of Christ ; that is, according to the measure of the full and perfect age of Christ. Of the ancient interpreters, some expound this of what shall happen in the next world, after the resurrection, when all the elect shall have bodies every way perfect ; and, as some conjecture, (when all who rise by a happy resurrection,) shall seem to be about thirty, of the stature and age of Christ when he suffered. But others, especially the Greek interpreters, understand this verse of a spiritual perfection in this life, by which the members of Christ's mystical body meet in the unity of faith, and increase in grace and virtue by imitating Christ, and following his doctrine and example. And this seems more agreeable to what follows : that we may not now be children, tossed to and fro by the wickedness of men. The Greek word, as S. Jerom observes, may signify by the deceit or fallacy of men ; by illusion, says S. Aug. And S. Chrys. tells us it is spoken by a metaphor, taken from those who cheat at dice, to gain all to themselves, to draw men into errors and heresies. Such, about that time, were the disciples of Simon the magician. Wi.—This text of the apostle, assuring to the one true Church a perpetual and visible succession of pastors in the ministry, successors of the apostles, warranted the holy Fathers in the early ages of the Church, as it does Catholics of the present day, to try all seceders by the most famous succession of the popes or bishops of Rome. See this in S. Irenæus, l. 3, c. 3. Tertul. in Præscript. Optatus. l. 2, cont. Parmen. S. Austin, cont. ep. Manic. c. 4, Ep. 165, et alibi. S. Epiphani. Hæres. 27.

VER. 16. By what every joint supplieth, &c. The obscurity of this verse may be thus explained : the apostle compares the mystical body of the Church, of which Christ is the head, to the natural body of man ; and as the head directs different members to different operations, according to their various properties, so in the Church Christ distributes to each his proper office, that being all intent upon their relative duties, all may grow up in charity, and become perfect. Estius.

manner of vices, unto covetousness. § Some take notice that the Greek word may not only signify avarice, or covetousness of money, but any unsatiable desires or lusts. See chap. v. 3 and 5. Wi.

VER. 26. Be angry, and sin not, as it is said, Psal. iv. 5. Anger, as a passion of the mind, may proceed from a good motive and be guided by reason; as our Saviour, Christ, (Mark iii. 5,) is said to have looked about at the Jews with anger, i. e. with a zeal against their blindness and malice.—Let not the sun go down upon your anger. If moved to anger, return without delay to a calmness of mind and temper. Wi.

VER. 30. Grieve not the Holy Spirit: not that the Holy Ghost can be contristated. It is a metaphor; and the sense is, sin not against the Holy Ghost. Wi.—To contristate the Holy Spirit is a metaphorical expression, which signifies to offend God, or the Holy Ghost, who has sealed us by the sacraments of baptism and confirmation with particular marks, by which we shall be distinguished from others in the day of our retribution. 5 For know ye this, and understand, that no fornicator, nor unclean, nor covetous person, which is a serving of idols, hath any inheritance in the kingdom of Christ, and of God.

6 ^k Let no man deceive you with vain words: for because of these things cometh the anger of God upon the children of unbelief.

7 Be ye not, therefore, partakers with them.

8 For you were heretofore darkness, but now light in the Lord. Walk ye as children of the light:

9 For the fruit of the light is in all goodness, and justice, and truth:

10 Proving what is acceptable to God:

11 And have no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness, but rather reprove them.

12 For the things that are done by them in private, it is shameful even to mention.

13 But all things that are reprovèd, are made manifest by the light: for all that is made manifest is light.

14 Wherefore he saith: Rise, thou that sleepest, and arise from the dead, and Christ will enlighten thee.

15 See, therefore, brethren, how you walk circumspectly: ^l not as unwise, 16 But as wise: redeeming the time, for the days are evil.

17 ^m Wherefore become not unwise, but understanding what is the will of God.

18 And be not drunk with wine, wherein is luxury, but be ye filled with the holy Spirit,

19 Speaking to yourselves in psalms and hymns, and spiritual canticles, singing, and making melody in your hearts to the Lord,

CHAP. V. VER. 3. Covetousness.* The Latin word is generally taken for a coveting or immoderate desire of money and riches. S. Jerom and others observe, that the Greek word in this and in divers other places in the New Testament may signify any unsatiable desire, or the lusts of sensual pleasures; and on this account S. Jerom thinks that it is here joined with fornication and uncleanness. But S. Chrys. in the last chapter, (ver. 19, hom. 13, and on this chap., ver. 3,) shows that by the Greek word is understood avarice, or an immoderate desire of riches, when he tells us (hom. 18) that this sin is condemned by those words of Christ, Luke xvi. 13, You cannot serve God and mammon. Wi.

VER. 4. Nor obscenity.† What is here meant by this word, S. Chrys. tells us at large in the moral exhortation after his 17th homily; to wit, jests with immodest suggestions or a double meaning, and railery or buffoonery against the rules of good conversation, scarce made use of by any but by men of a low condition and of a mean genius, which is not to the purpose of a Christian, who must give an account to God of all his words. Wi.

VER. 7. Be ye not, therefore, partakers with them: do not imitate their wickedness, or the wrath of the Almighty will likewise fall on you. Estius.

VER. 8. By darkness is here meant the state of infidelity into which they had been plunged so far as to adore stones as God, and committed without remorse the above-mentioned grievous sins. But delivered by Christ from this darkness, they have become light in the Lord, shining in faith and justice. Estius.

VER. 10. With solicitude seek out what things are pleasing to God, and carefully perform them. Estius.

VER. 11. You are light, they are darkness; do you, therefore, show by the light of your good works how base and detestable their works of darkness are. Estius.

VER. 14. Rise, thou that sleepest. The sense may be taken from Isa. ix. 1 S. Jerom thinks they may be cited from some work not canonical. Wi.

23 *For the husband is head of the wife; as Christ is the head of the church. He is the saviour of his body.

24 Therefore as the church is subject to Christ, so also let the wives be to their husbands in all things.

25 ^bHusbands, love your wives, as Christ also loved the Church, and delivered himself up for it,

26 That he might sanctify it, cleansing it by the laver of water in the word of life,

27 That he might present it to himself a glorious church, not having spot or wrinkle, nor any such thing, but that it should be holy and without blemish.

28 So also ought men to love their wives as their own bodies. He that loveth his wife, loveth himself.

29 For no man ever hated his own flesh: but nourisheth and cherisheth it, as also Christ doth the church:

30 For we are members of his body, of his flesh, and of his bones.

31 *For this cause shall a man leave his father and mother: and shall adhere to his wife, ^dand they shall be two in one flesh.

32 This is a great sacrament: but I speak in Christ, and in the church.

33 Nevertheless, let every one of you in particular love his wife as himself: and let the wife reverence her husband.

CHILDREN, obey your parents in the Lord: for this is just.

VER. 23. For the husband is head of the wife. Though S. Paul here speaks of a man, who is a husband, we may rather translate man than husband, being the same sentence and same words as 1 Cor. xi. 3, where even the Prot. translation has, that the man is head of the woman.—He (Christ) is the saviour of his mystical body, the Church: though some expound it, that the husband is to save and take care of his wife, who is as it were his body. Wi.

VER. 24. As the church is subject to Christ. The Church then, according to S. Paul, is ever obedient to Christ; and can never fall from him, but remain faithful to him, unspotted and unchanged, to the end of the world. Ch.

VER. 26. Cleansing it by the laver of water, in the word of life. By this washing is generally understood the sacrament of baptism; and by the word of life, not the word of the gospel preached, but the words or form used in the administration of baptism, according to Christ's institution: but this is not so certain. Wi.

VER. 28—31. He that loveth his wife, loveth himself. S. Paul would have this a love like that which a man hath for himself, or for his own flesh, when they are now joined in wedlock, and are become as it were one flesh and one person, as to a civil life and society. See Matt. xix. 5. The wife is to be considered as a part of the husband, as a member of his body, of his flesh, and of his bones.

VER. 32. This . . . sacrament, (or mystery,) . . . in Christ, and in the Church. This sacrament, in construction, must be referred to what immediately went before, i. e. to the conjunction of marriage betwixt man and wife: and this is called a great sacrament, or mystery, as representing the union or spiritual nuptials of Christ with his spouse, the Church. Wi

Chrys., who, by πλεονεξία, (chap. iv. 19,) expounds, an immoderate desire of riches: χρημάτων ὁμ. γ. p. 829. And here, hom. 17, p. 817, ὃ γὰρ αὐτῷ χρημάτων ἐρώμεν, καὶ σωμάτων. And hom. 18, on the fifth verse, he expounds the word, πλεονέκτης, ὃς ἐστὶν εἰδωλόλατρός, qui est idolatra, of him who is, properly speaking, an avaricious man; who adores mammon, or riches, who takes pains to leave an inheritance to others, and deprives himself of it, &c., p. 853, χρυσὸν δουλεύοντες, 851.

9 And you, masters, do the same things to them, forbearing threatenings: knowing that the Lord both of them and you is in heaven: ^gand there is no respect of persons with him.

10 As to the rest, brethren, be strengthened in the Lord, and in the might of his power.

11 Put you on the armour of God, that you may be able to stand against the snares of the devil.

12 For our wrestling is not against flesh and blood: but against principalities and powers, against the rulers of the world of this darkness: against the spirits of wickedness in the high places.

13 Wherefore take unto you the armour of God, that you may be able to resist in the evil day, and to stand in all things perfect.

14 Stand, therefore, having your loins girt about with truth, and having on the breastplate of justice, filthiness, there is eutrapelia. It is this that makes the mind effeminate . . . Far be it from a Christian to play the comedian. If this were commendable, why is it left to buffoons? It is the business of flattering hangers-on, or trencher friends, of fools in a play, of debauched women; but far be it from persons of a higher rank, well born, and of good breeding. If any man be void of honour, void of shame, such a one is given to eutrapelia. A man will scarce find it worth his while to consult the Latin translation in Fronto-Ducæus, which in this and many other places is far from being exact. I know that Aristotle, (l. 4, de Moribus, c. 14, p. 42, ed. Aurel. Allobrog.,) and S. Thomas, the doctor of the schools, (l. 2, Q. 60, a. 5, and 22, Q. 168, a. 2,) take eutrapelia in a different sense, when it is a facetious innocent way of jesting, containing rather instructive admonitions; and so, S. Thomas tells us, it may be reckoned among the moral virtues: but then, even as Aristotle tells us, it must be without all words of immodesty and buffoonery, which is against good manners: otherwise it degenerates into scurrility.

By darkness may be understood the wicked, in whom satan reigns as in a citadel. Menochius.—Against the spirits of wickedness; or wicked spirits in the air, says S. Jerom. Lit. in celestials. Wi.—High places. That is to say, in the air, the lowest of the celestial regions, in which God permits these wicked spirits, or fallen angels, to wander. Ch.—

THE

EPISTLE OF S. PAUL, THE APOSTLE,

TO THE PHILIPPIANS.

PHILIPPI, a considerable city in Macedonia, so called from Philip, father to Alexander the Great. S. Paul had preached there. Acts xvi. Those people had a great veneration for him, and supplied his wants when he was at Corinth, and again when he was a prisoner at Rome, sending to him by Epaphroditus, who is thought to have been the bishop of Philippi. S. Paul sent this letter by him to the Philippians. Wi.—It is generally believed that S. Paul wrote it about the year 62, in his first confinement. The Philippians were the first among the Macedonians converted to the faith. S. Paul, in this Epistle, recommends charity, unity, and humility ; and warns them against false teachers, whom he calls dogs, and enemies of the cross of Christ. He also returns thanks for their benefactions. It was written about twenty-nine years after our Lord's ascension. Ch.

CHAPTER I.

The apostle's affection for the Philippians.

PAUL and Timothy, the servants of Jesus Christ : to all the saints in Christ Jesus, who are at Philippi, with the bishops and deacons.

2 Grace be unto you, and peace from God, our Father, and from the Lord Jesus Christ.

3 I give thanks to my God, in every remembrance of you,

4 Always in my prayers making supplication for you all with joy,

5 For your fellowship in the gospel of Christ, from the first day until now.

6 Being confident of this very thing, that he who hath begun a good work in you, will perfect it unto the day of Christ Jesus.

CHAP. I. VER. 1. *With the bishops and deacons. By bishops many understand those who were only priests ; for the name of priests, at that time, was common to those who were by their ordination priests or bishops, though the order as well as the functions were different. S. Chrys. also takes notice, that the name of deacon then signified any ministers of Christ. Wi.

VER. 7. In the defence, &c., being then a prisoner, waiting for his trial ;

7 As it is meet for me to think this for you all : because I have you in my heart : and that in my bands, and in the defence and confirmation of the gospel, you all are partakers of my joy.

8 For God is my witness, how I long after you all in the bowels of Jesus Christ.

9 And this I pray, that your charity may more and more abound in knowledge, and in all understanding.

10 That you may approve the better things, that you may be sincere and without offence unto the day of Christ, 11 Replenished with the fruit of justice, through Jesus Christ, unto the glory and praise of God.

12 Now, I desire, brethren, you should know, that the things which have happened to me, have fallen out rather to the furtherance of the gospel :

and the defence he could make for himself, and the sentence of the judge. Wi.

VER. 9. That your charity, &c. It is worthy of remark, that S. Paul does not beg that the Philippians may enjoy temporal blessings, but that they may be rewarded with an increase of spiritual favours (Cal.) ; and, as he remarks in the succeeding verses, that they may be filled with the fruits of justice.

13 So that my bands are made manifest, in Christ, in all the court, and in all other places :

14 And many of the brethren in the Lord having taken courage by my chains, are much more bold to speak the word of God without fear.

15 Some, indeed, even out of envy and contention : but some also for good-will preach Christ :

16 Some out of charity, knowing that I am set for the defence of the gospel.

17 And some out of contention preach Christ not sincerely, imagining that they raise affliction to my bands.

18 But what then? So that every way, whether by occasion, or by truth, Christ be preached : in this also I rejoice, yea, and will rejoice.

19 For I know that this shall turn to my salvation, through your prayer, and the supply of the Spirit of Jesus Christ.

20 According to my expectation and hope, that in nothing I shall be confounded : but with all confidence, as always, so now also shall Christ be magnified in my body, whether it be by life, or by death.

21 For to me, to live is Christ, and to die is gain.

22 And if to live in the flesh, this is to me the fruit of labour, and what I shall choose I know not.

23 But I am straitened between two ; having a desire to be dissolved, and to be with Christ, being by much the better :

24 But to remain in the flesh is necessary for you.

25 And having this confidence, I know that I shall remain and continue with you all, for your furtherance and joy of faith :

26 That your rejoicing may abound in Christ Jesus, for me, by my coming to you again.

27 *Only let your conversation be worthy of the

VER. 13. In all the court,† or in the whole palace of the emperor, and to all others, or in all other places at and near Rome. Wi.

VER. 14. And many of, &c., encouraged by the intrepidity and perseverance of the apostle. Calmet.

VER. 15. Some . . . out of envy and contention publish and preach Christ, thinking perhaps that this would displease me, or exasperate my persecutors against me ; but whatever their motive be, if they preach the true doctrine of Christ, I rejoice. Wi.

VER. 19. I know that this shall turn to my salvation, &c. It may either signify to his spiritual good and the salvation of his soul, or to his safety and deliverance out of prison : if this was his first imprisonment. Wi.

VER. 21. To live is Christ. If it be his will that I live, my life shall be spent in his service.—To die, and suffer martyrdom, will be my gain, by coming to the enjoyment of Christ sooner. Wi.

VER. 22. This is to me, &c. His meaning is, that although his dying immediately for Christ would be his gain, by putting him presently in possession of heaven ; yet he is doubtful what he should choose, because by staying longer in the flesh, he should be more beneficial to the souls of his neighbours. Ch.

VER. 25, 26. And having this confidence. In effect, S. Paul escaped this first danger, for after having remained two years at Rome, he was taken from his confinement. Calmet.—I know (or am persuaded, as in the Greek) that I shall remain . . . by my coming to you again. This is one argument that this Epistle was written during his first imprisonment at Rome : yet this is not agreed upon by the interpreters, and especially whether he ever returned again to Philippi. Wi.

VER. 27, &c. Whether when I come and see you, &c. This implies a doubt of his seeing them again. At least endeavour you to lead a life worthy of the gospel, according to the principles of your faith ; and be not terrified by your adversaries and persecutors. God permits this for your salvation, though an occasion of perdition to your persecutors : you having the like to combat as you have seen in me, when whipped at Philippi. See Acts xvi. Wi.

* V. 1. Cum episcopis et diaconis, ὁν ἐπισκόποις καὶ διακόνοις. S. Jerom, S. Chrys., &c., take notice, that though the office of bishop and priest was different, yet both these different orders were sometimes expressed by the word bishop, ἐπίσκοπος ; sometimes by the word priest, πρεσβύτερος. S. Hier., tom. 4, in Titum, p. 413. Quia eodem episcopus illo tempore, quos et presbyteros appellagospel of Christ : that whether when I come and see you, or be absent, I may hear of you, that you stand fast in one spirit, with one mind labouring together for the faith of the gospel :

28 And that you be in nothing terrified by the adversaries : which to them is a cause of perdition, but to you of salvation, and this from God.

29 For to you it is given for Christ, not only to believe in him, but also to suffer for his sake :

30 Having the same conflict as that which you have seen in me, and now have heard of me.

CHAP. II.

He recommends to them unity and humility : and to work out their salvation with fear and trembling.

IF there be, therefore, any consolation in Christ, if any comfort of charity, if any fellowship of the spirit, if any bowels of commiseration :

2 Fulfil ye my joy, that you be of one mind, having the same charity, being of one accord, agreeing in sentiment,

3 Let nothing be done through strife, nor by vain-glory : but in humility, let each esteem others better than themselves.

4 Each one not considering the things that are his own, but those that are other men's.

5 For let this mind be in you, which was also in Christ Jesus :

6 Who being in the form of God, thought it no robbery, himself to be equal to God :

7 But debased himself, taking the form of a servant, being made to the likeness of men, and in shape found as a man.

8 ^bHe humbled himself, becoming obedient unto death, even the death of the cross.

Chrys. on this place : Tunc nomina erant communia ; *atque etiam ipse episcopus vocabatur diaconus. tom. 4, loc. a. p. 5, ed. Savil., *Τὸς πρεσβυτέρους οὕτως ἐκάλεσε. CHAP. II. VER. 1. If there be, therefore, any consolation. If you have any desire to comfort me in Christ, or for Christ's sake. Wi.

VER. 3. Esteem others better than themselves. S. Thomas (22, q. 102, a. 3) puts the question ; how an innocent man can with truth think himself worse than the most wicked of men? He answers, that a man who has received very extraordinary gifts from God, cannot think these gifts less than what any other has received ; but he may reflect that he has nothing, and is nothing of himself. And a man truly humble considers only his own sins and failings, and is persuaded that any other person would have made better use of the same graces ; which agrees with what follows, (ver. 4,) not considering the things that are his own. Wi.

VER. 6. Who being in the form of God*, (that is, truly, properly, and essentially God from eternity, as the ancient Fathers here observed against the Arians,) taking the form of a servant, (i. e. taking upon him our human nature,) became truly a man, and as man the servant of God, but remaining always God as before, thought it no robbery, no injury to his eternal Father, to be equal, to be esteemed, and to declare himself equal to God, to be one thing with him ; as on divers occasions he taught the people, as we have observed in the notes on S. John's Gospel, &c. Wi.

VER. 7. But debased himself : divested himself of all the marks of greatness for the love of mankind. The Greek text signifies, he made himself void ; † or which account Dr. Wells, instead of made himself of no reputation, as in the Prot. translation, has changed it into emptied himself ; not but that the true Son of God must always remain truly God, as well as by his incarnation truly man, but that in him as man appeared no marks of his Divine power and greatness.—Made to the likeness ‡ of man, not only as to an exterior likeness and appearance, but at the same time truly man, by uniting his Divine person to the nature of man.—In shape § (or habit) found as a man : not clothed exteriorly only, as a man is clothed with a garment or coat, but found both as to shape and nature a man

9 Wherefore God also hath exalted him, and hath given him a name which is above every name :

10 *That in the name of Jesus, every knee should bow of those that are in heaven, on earth, and in hell ;

11 And that every tongue should confess that the Lord Jesus Christ is in the glory of God the Father.

12 Wherefore, my dearly beloved, (as you have always obeyed, not as in my presence only, but much more now in my absence,) work your salvation with fear and trembling.

13 For it is God who worketh in you both to will and to accomplish, according to his good will.

14 ^bAnd do ye all things without murmurings and hesitations :

15 That you may be blameless, and sincere children of God, without reproof, in the midst of a depraved and perverse generation : among whom you shine as lights in the world.

16 Holding forth the word of life to my glory in the day of Christ, because I have not run in vain, nor laboured in vain.

17 Yea, and if I be made a victim upon the sacrifice and service of your faith, I rejoice and congratulate with you all.

18 And for the self-same thing do you also rejoice, and congratulate with me.

19 And I hope in the Lord Jesus, ^cto send Timothy to you shortly, that I also may be of good comfort, when I know the things concerning you.

20 For I have no man so of the same mind, who with sincere affection is solicitous for you.

21 ^dFor all seek the things that are their own, not the things that are Jesus Christ's.

22 Now know ye the proof of him, that as a son with the father, so hath he served with me in the gospel.

23 Him, therefore, I hope to send to you immediately, as soon as I shall see how things go with me.

24 And I trust in the Lord, that I also myself shall come to you shortly.

and, as S. Chrys. says, with the appearances of a sinful man, if we consider him persecuted by the Jews, and nailed to an infamous cross. Wi.

VER. 12. With fear and trembling. That is, be equally upon your guard against presumption and despair.

VER. 13. It is God who worketh in you both to will and to accomplish. Our free-will is not taken away, or we should not be commanded to work ; but it is added, with fear and trembling, says S. Austin, that we might not be proud of our good works. De Grat. et de Lib. ib. c. 9.

VER. 17. And if I be made a victim upon the sacrifice || and service of your faith, I rejoice, &c. The sense of these obscure words seem to be : that I shall rejoice, and you also may rejoice and congratulate with me, if after having first offered up your faith and obedience to the gospel, as an acceptable sacrifice to God, I myself (or my blood, by martyrdom) be also added, and poured out as a second sacrifice upon the other. Wi.

VER. 19. To send Timothy. It appears that S. Paul could not have sent Timothy to Philippi till some time after his deliverance from prison, about the year 63 of Jesus Christ. Tillemont.

VER. 21. All seek the things that are their own ; i. e. many do so. Wi.

VER. 24. That I also. This did not take place till two full years were expired, in the year 64 (Tillem.) : and others are of opinion that he was in Macedon when he wrote his First Epistle to Timothy. Theo., Atha., Tille.

VER. 25. Epaphroditus, . . . your apostle, and the minister to my wants. Epaphroditus had also laboured after S. Paul, and is thought to have been the bishop of the Philippians ; thus he might be called their apostle ; though, as others conjecture, the word apostle may be here applied to him as one sent by the Philippians to S. Paul with contributions to supply his wants. Wi.

VER. 26. And was sad. Nothing is a stronger proof of the union that existed between the ancient Christians. than this description of S. Paul : Paul is in prison, 25 But I thought it necessary to send to you Epaphroditus, my brother, and fellow-labourer, and fellow-soldier, but your apostle, and the minister to my wants.

26 For indeed he longed after you all : and was sad, for that you had heard that he was sick.

27 For indeed he was sick nigh unto death : but God had mercy on him : and not only on him, but on me also, lest I should have sorrow upon sorrow.

28 Therefore I sent him the more speedily : that seeing him you may again rejoice, and I may be without sorrow.

29 Receive him, therefore, with all joy in the Lord : and treat with honour such as he is.

30 Because, for the work of Christ, he came nigh unto death, delivering up his life, that he might fulfil that which was wanting on your part towards my service.

CHAP. III.

He warneth them against false teachers : he counts all other things loss, that he may gain Christ.

AS to the rest, my brethren, rejoice in the Lord. To write the same things to you, to me indeed is not wearisome, but to you necessary.

2 Beware of dogs, beware of evil workers, beware of the concision.

3 For we are the circumcision, who serve God in spirit, and glory in Christ Jesus, not having confidence in the flesh :

4 Though I might also have confidence in the flesh. If any other thinketh he may have confidence in the flesh, I more,

CHAP. III. VER. 1. To write. From hence it would appear, says Grotius, that S. Paul had intended to have finished his letter at the end of the preceding chapter ; but something new occurring to him, he added the two following chapters.

VER. 2. Beware of dogs. The Jews called so the Gentiles ; and S. Paul now applies it to those among the Jews who spread false doctrine, who privately snarled and publicly barked against the true apostles. None deserve sharper reprehension more than heretical preachers.—Beware of the concision, or as some French translations, of false circumcision. S. Paul, by derision, makes use of this word, which signifies a cutting to pieces, or destruction. Wi.

VER. 3. For we are the circumcision. We Christians now use the only pro-whom I have suffered the loss of all things, and count them but as dung, that I may gain Christ,

9 And may be found in him, not having my justice, which is of the law, but that which is of the faith of Christ Jesus: the justice which is of God in faith,

10 That I may know him, and the power of his resurrection, and the fellowship of his sufferings, being made conformable to his death:

11 If by any means I may attain to the resurrection, which is from the dead:

12 Not as though I had already attained, or were already perfect: but I follow after, if that I may by any means apprehend that in which I am also apprehended by Christ Jesus.

13 Brethren, I do not count myself to have apprehended. But one thing I do: forgetting the things that are behind, and stretching forth myself to those that are before, 14 I pursue towards the mark, for the prize of the supernal vocation, of God in Christ Jesus.

15 Let us, therefore, as many as are perfect, be thus minded: and if in any thing you be otherwise minded, this also God will reveal to you.

16 Nevertheless whereunto we are already arrived, that we be of the same mind: let us also continue in the same rule.

17 Be followers of me, brethren, and observe them who walk so, as you have our model.

18 ^a For many walk, of whom I have told you often (and now tell you weeping) that they are enemies of the cross of Christ:

19 Whose end is destruction: whose God is their belly: and whose glory is in their shame, who mind earthly things.

^a Rom. xvi. 17.

fitable and commendable spiritual circumcision; which, to the Colossians, (ii. 11,) he calls the circumcision of Christ, and to the Romans, (ii. 29,) circumcision of the heart in the spirit. Wi.

VER. 9. I may be found in him, not having my justice, which is of the law; i. e. not pretending to be justified neither by my own works nor by the works of the Jewish law, but by that which proceedeth from a faith in Christ, and by his merits. Wi.—S. Austin expounds the sense thus: not that justice which is in God, or by which God is just, but that which is in man from God, and by his gifts, l. 3, cont. 2, ep. Pelag.

VER. 11. If by any means I may attain to the resurrection, which is from the dead; i. e. may attain to a happy resurrection, when the dead shall rise again. Wi.—This manner of expression does not betray any distrust or fear, but merely insinuates the difficulty of the enterprise, the uncertainty of success, and the ardent desire of the apostle, who sought by every means to arrive at this happiness, either by sufferings and labours, or even by martyrdom. S. Chrys. Estius.

VER. 12. Not as though I had already attained the happiness I hope for, or am now become perfect us to that perfection in virtue, which I must always endeavour to increase in; but, like a person still running a race for a prize, I pursue and run as well as I can, I stretch myself with perseverance towards the mark, forgetting that part of the course which I have made. We may here take notice, with S. Chrys., that it is not enough to believe, or have a true faith, but that we must strive and labour to the end in the way of perfection; secondly, that S. Paul did not look upon himself absolutely certain of his salvation: and how much greater presumption would this be in us! Wi.

VER. 13. I do not count myself. That is, I do not suppose that vain security is sufficient to put my salvation out of doubt, and that Christ having died, nothing remains for me to do. No; I consider myself as a wrestler at the games, uncertain of success. Calmet.

VER. 17. Be followers of me. He exhorts them to follow him in what he had taught them, and in the model of a good life, which he had set before them. He repeats to them, with tears, what he had formerly told them, that many walk and carry themselves as enemies to the cross of Christ, to Christ crucified, by abandoning themselves to the pleasures of a sensual life, who glory in things they ought to be ashamed of. Wi.

CHAP. IV.

He exhorts them to perseverance in all good: and acknowledges their charitable contributions to him.

THEREFORE, my brethren, dearly beloved, and most desired, my joy and my crown: so stand fast in the Lord, my most dearly beloved:

2 I beg of Evodia, and I beseech Syntyche to be of one mind in the Lord.

3 And I entreat thee, my sincere companion, help those women, who have laboured with me in the gospel with Clement, and the rest of my fellow-labourers, whose names are in the book of life.

4 Rejoice in the Lord always: again, I say, rejoice.

5 Let your modesty be known to all men: the Lord is nigh.

6 Be not solicitous about any thing: but in every thing by prayer and supplication, with thanksgiving, let your petitions be made known to God.

7 And the peace of God, which surpasseth all understanding, keep your hearts and minds in Christ Jesus.

8 For the rest, brethren, whatsoever things are true, whatsoever things are modest, whatsoever things are just, whatsoever things are holy, whatsoever things are amiable, whatsoever things are of good repute, if there be any virtue, if there be any praise of discipline, think on these things.

9 The things which you have both learned and received, and heard, and seen in me, these do ye: and the God of peace shall be with you.

10 And I rejoiced in the Lord exceedingly, that now ταπεινήν. The Jewish circumcision at this time, says S. Chrys., (λογ. 1.)—was merely a cutting off of the flesh: οὐδὲν ἄλλο ἢ σάρκος τομῇ ἔστι. καὶ καταργη. † V. 14. Ad destinatum, κατὰ σκοπὸν διώκω. See S. Chrys. of the necessity of good works, (λογ. ια. p. 65,) and of the uncertainty a man is always in as to his salvation, p. 67.

CHAP. IV. VER. 2. I beg of. S. Chrys., Theo., and many others, think that these were two ladies particularly famous in the Church, at Philippi, for their virtue and good works. Some critics are of opinion that Syntyche was a man. It is certain, at least, that this name agrees amongst the Greeks better with a man than a woman; and perhaps the latter of these two may be the husband of Evodia.

VER. 3. I entreat thee, my sincere companion. S. Chrys. expounds it of his fellow-labourer or fellow-soldier, and says that some pretended that by it was meant S. Paul's wife; but this he absolutely rejects, as do all the ancient interpreters, who teach us that S. Paul was never married, if we except the particular opinion of Clement of Alexandria, (l. 3, Strom. p. 448, edit. Heinsii,) who at the same time tells us, that S. Paul, and those ministers of the gospel who had wives, lived with them as if they had been their sisters. Wi.—It seems probable that S. Paul is here speaking to one of the persons mentioned in the preceding verse. Others think that he is speaking to the gaoler whom he had converted at Philippi. It seems most probable, however, that S. Paul is here speaking to the bishop of the Church, at Philippi. Calmet.—With Clement. S. Jerom, Estius, and some others, believe that this Clement was the fourth pope that governed the Church, after SS. Linus and Cletus: this at least is the common opinion.—Those women who have laboured with me in the gospel, not by preaching, but by assisting other ways to promote the gospel. Wi.

VER. 6. But in every thing by prayer, &c. By the Greek, the sense and construction cannot be in every prayer; but in every thing, in all circumstances, have recourse to prayer. Wi.

VER. 8. For the rest, brethren, whatsoever things are true, &c. Here the apostle enumerates general precepts of morality, which they ought to practise. And finally, the apostle commands not only the Philippians, but all Christians, to think on these things: that is, to make it their study and concern, that the peace of God might be with them. Ch.

VER. 10. Hath flourished again. Lit. that you have flourished again, to think at length your thought for me hath flourished again, as you did also think : but you were occupied.

11 I speak not as it were for want : for I have learned, in whatsoever state I am, to be content therewith.

12 I know both how to be brought low, and I know how to abound : (every where and in all things I am instructed) both to be full, and to be hungry : both to abound, and to suffer need.

13 I can do all things in him who strengtheneth me.

14 Nevertheless you have done well, in communicating to my tribulation.

15 And you also know, O Philippians, that in the beginning of the gospel, when I departed from Macedonia, no church communicated to me, as concerning giving and receiving, but you only :

16 For unto Thessalonica also, you sent once and again for my use.

or care for me, which appears by your sending me a supply of money. Wi.—From hence it would appear, that the Philippians had in some respect been wanting in attention to this apostle : that their former liberality, which for a time had been slack and dead, had again revived.

VER. 11. I have learned . . . to be content therewith. Lit. to be sufficient. I know how to be in a low condition. Wi.

VER. 14. In communicating ; † i. e. contributing to relieve my wants. Wi.

VER. 19. My God supply all your want. § See the Greek, which determines the signification of the Latin. Wi.

17 Not that I seek the gift, but I seek the fruit that may abound to your account.

18 But I have all, and abound : I am filled, having received from Epaphroditus the things you sent, an odour of sweetness, an acceptable sacrifice, well pleasing to God.

19 *And may my God supply all your want, according to his riches, in glory in Christ Jesus.

20 Now to God and our Father be glory, world without end. Amen.

21 Salute ye every saint in Christ Jesus.

THE

EPISTLE OF S. PAUL, THE APOSTLE,

TO THE COLOSSIANS.

COLOSSÆ was a city of Phrygia, near Laodicea. It does not appear that S. Paul had preached there himself, (see chap. ii. 1,) but that the Colossians were converted by Epaphras, a disciple of the apostles. However, as S. Paul was the great apostle of the Gentiles, he wrote this Epistle to the Colossians when he was in prison, and about the same time that he wrote to the Ephesians and Philippians. The exhortations and doctrine it contains, are similar to those which are set forth in his Epistle to the Ephesians. Ch. Wi.—The intent of it was to disabuse the Colossians of worshipping the angels ; for Cerinthus, and others, had taught them to look upon angels as superior to Christ, whom they looked upon as a mere man ; to observe the law of Moses, with all its legal rites and ceremonies. He begins his Epistle by insisting chiefly on the exalted state of Christ, saying that he is the image of the invisible God, the first-born of every creature, by whom all things visible and invisible were created, whether thrones, principalities, or powers, and that in him the Divinity essentially exists. From this he proves the inutility of the ceremonies of the law, &c., (Fleury and Calmet,) and takes great pains to prevent their relapsing either into paganism or Judaism. V.

CHAPTER I.

He gives thanks for the grace bestowed upon the Colossians : and prays for them. Christ is the head of the Church, and the peace-maker through his blood. Paul is his minister.

PAUL, an apostle of Jesus Christ, by the will of God, and Timothy, a brother :

2 To them who are at Colossæ, the saints and faithful brethren in Christ Jesus.

3 Grace be to you, and peace from God, our Father, and from the Lord Jesus Christ. We give thanks to God, and the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, praying always for you,

4 Hearing your faith in Christ Jesus, and the love which you have towards all the saints,

5 For the hope that is laid up for you in heaven : which you have heard in the word of the truth of the gospel :

6 Which is come to you, as also it is in the whole world, and bringeth forth fruit, and groweth, even as it doth in you, since the day you heard, and knew the grace of God in truth,

CHAP. I. VER. 6. In the whole world ; i. e. a great part of it. Wi.—This Epistle was written in the year 62, at which time the gospel had spread itself through the whole world by the preaching not only of the apostles, but of their disciples, and by the noise which this new religion made. Calmet.

7 As you learned of Epaphras, our most beloved fellow-servant, who is for you a faithful minister of Christ Jesus,

8 Who also hath declared to us your love in the spirit :

9 Therefore we also, from the day that we heard it, cease not to pray for you, and to beg that you may be filled with the knowledge of his will, in all wisdom, and spiritual understanding :

10 That you may walk worthy of God, in all things pleasing : being fruitful in every good work, and increasing in the knowledge of God :

11 Strengthened with all might, according to the power of his glory, in all patience and long-suffering with joy.

12 Giving thanks to God, the Father, who hath made us worthy to be partakers of the lot of the saints in light :

13 Who hath delivered us from the power of darkness, and hath translated us into the kingdom of his beloved Son,

14 In whom we have redemption through his blood, the remission of sins :

15 Who is the image of the invisible God, the first-born of every creature :

16 *For in him were all things created in heaven, and on earth, visible, and invisible, whether thrones, or denominations, or principalities, or powers : all things were created by him, and in him :

17 And he is before all, and by him all things consist.

18 And he is the head of the body, the church, ^bwho is the beginning, the first-born from the dead : that in all things he may hold the primacy.

19 Because in him, it hath well pleased that all fulness should dwell :

20 And through him to reconcile all things unto himself, making peace through the blood of his cross, both as to the things that are on earth, and the things that are in heaven.

21 And you, whereas you were some time alienated, and enemies in mind in evil works :

^a John i. 3.

VER. 7. Of Epaphras, who seems to have been their first apostle, and their bishop. Wi.

VER. 10. Worthy of God: ἀξίως τοῦ Κυρίου. So S. Ambrose and the Greek doctors ; or thus, worthily, pleasing God, and this not by faith only, but fruitful in every good work. Ibid.—God, in * all things pleasing him. This is the construction of the Latin by the Greek. Wi.

VER. 14. It is through the blood of Christ, and not by the law of Moses, that we are freed from the power of death. If the law could have saved us, the coming of Christ would have been useless. See then, he says, if it be proper to engage under a law which is so inefficacious. Calmet.

VER. 15. The first-born of every creature. S. Chrys. takes notice against the Arians, that the apostle calls Christ the first-begotten, or first-born, not the first created, because he was not created at all. And the sense is, that he was before all creatures, proceeding from all eternity from the Father ; though some expound the words of Christ as man, and that he was greater in dignity. See Rom. viii. 29. Wi.

VER. 16. Thrones, &c., are commonly understood to refer to the celestial hierarchy of angels, though as to their particular rank, &c., nothing certain is known. Calmet.—All things were created by him, and in him, and † consist in him. If all things that are were made by him, he himself was not made. And his Divine power is also signified, when it is said all things consist, or are preserved, by him. Wi.

VER. 19. In him it hath well pleased God, that all fulness should dwell. § The greatest plenitude of graces was conferred on him as man, and from him, as he was our head, derived to all the members of his Church. Wi.

VER. 20. To reconcile all things unto himself, . . . through the blood of his cross, (i. e. which Christ shed on the cross,) both as to the things on earth, and . . . in heaven : not that Christ died for the angels, but, says S. Chrys., the angels were, in a manner, at war with men, with sinners, as they stood for the cause and glory of God ; but Christ put an end to this enmity, by restoring men to his favour. Wi.

22 Yet now he hath reconciled in the body of his flesh through death, to present you holy and unspotted, and blameless before him :

23 If so ye continue in the faith, grounded and settled, and immoveable from the hope of the gospel which you have heard, which is preached in all the creation that is under heaven, whereof I Paul am made a minister.

24 Who now rejoice in my sufferings for you, and fill up those things that are wanting of the sufferings of Christ, in my flesh, for his body, which is the church :

25 Whereof I am made a minister, according to the dispensation of God, which is given me towards you, that I may fulfil the word of God :

26 The mystery which hath been hidden from ages and generations, but now is made manifest to his saints.

27 To whom God would make known the riches of the glory of this mystery among the Gentiles, which is Christ, in you the hope of glory.

28 Whom we preach, admonishing every man, and teaching every man in all wisdom, that we may present every man perfect in Christ Jesus.

29 Wherein also I labour, striving according to his working which he worketh in me in power.

CHAP. II.

He warns them against the impostures of the philosophers and the Jewish teachers, that would withdraw them from Christ.

FOR I would have you know, what concern I have for you, and for them who are at Laodicea, and as many as have not seen my face in the flesh :

2 That their hearts may be comforted, being instructed in charity, and unto all the riches of the fulness of understanding, unto the knowledge of the mystery of God the Father, and of Christ Jesus :

3 In whom are hidden all the treasures of wisdom and knowledge.

4 Now this I say, that no man may deceive you by loftiness of words.

^b I Cor. xv. 20 ; Apoc. i. 5.

VER. 24. And fill up those things . . . in my flesh for his body, which is the church. || Nothing was wanting in the sufferings or merits of Christ, for a sufficient and superabundant redemption of mankind ; and therefore he adds, for his body, which is the church, that his sufferings were wanting, and are to be endured by the example of Christ by the faithful, who are members of a crucified head. See S. Chrys. and S. Aug. Wi.—Wanting. There is no want in the sufferings of Christ himself as head ; but many sufferings are still wanting, or are still to come in his body, the Church, and his members, the faithful. Ch.—The wisdom, the will, the justice of Jesus Christ, requireth and ordaineth that his body and members should be companions of his sufferings, as they expect to be companions of his glory ; that so suffering with him, and after his example, they may apply to their own wants, and to the necessities of others, the merits and satisfaction of Jesus Christ, which application is what is wanting, and what we are permitted to supply by the sacraments and sacrifice of the new law.

5 * For though I be absent in body, yet in spirit I am with you; rejoicing and beholding your order, and the stedfastness of your faith which is in Christ.

6 As therefore you have received Jesus Christ, the Lord, walk ye in him.

7 Rooted and built up in him, and confirmed in the faith, as also you have learned, abounding in him in thanksgiving.

8 Beware lest any man impose upon you by philosophy, and vain fallacy: according to the tradition of men, according to the rudiments of the world, and not according to Christ:

9 For in him dwelleth all the fulness of the Godhead corporally:

10 And you are filled in him, who is the head of all principality and power:

11 In whom also you are circumcised with a circumcision not made by hand in the despoiling of the body of the flesh, but in the circumcision of Christ:

12 Buried with him in baptism, in whom also you are risen again by the faith of the operation of God, who hath raised him up from the dead.

13 ^b And you, when you were dead in your sins, and the uncircumcision of your flesh, he hath quickened together with him, forgiving you all offences:

teachers and vain philosophers, who deceived them by a sophistical way of reasoning, advancing in this manner their fabulous inventions; it is likely some disciples of Simon the magician. Wi.

VER. 7. Rooted and built up in him, who is the head of all, your Redeemer, and author of your salvation, not upon angels. Wi.

VER. 8. Lest any man impose upon you.† In the Greek, make a prey of you, as thieves that steal things.—There were two sorts of false teachers among them: they who mixed vain errors from heathen philosophy with the principles of Christian religion, and they who had been Jews, and were for making them retain those rites and customs which the Jews had among them, and were only from their private human traditions. Wi.—According to the rudiments of the world: by which some expound vain fallacies, and false maxims of the first kind of teachers; others the Jewish ceremonies, which are called weak and poor elements, or rudiments. Gal. iv. 9. This is neither to condemn in general the use of philosophy, which S. Aug. commends, and made use of, nor all traditions delivered by the apostles. See 1 Cor. xi., and 2 Thess. ii. 14. Wi.

VER. 9. For in him (in Christ) dwelleth all the fulness of the Godhead (of the Divinity) corporally.‡ That is, in the person of Christ, the Son of God, really and substantially united to our human nature. Not inhabiting, as in a temple, as the Nestorian heretics pretended, nor as by his grace in men's souls, but so as to be personally or hypostatically united to the soul and body of Christ. Wi.

VER. 12. Buried with him in baptism, signified by the ceremony of immersion in baptism. See Rom. vi. 3. Wi.

VER. 14. Blotting out, &c.§ This is commonly expounded of the sentence of eternal death pronounced against sinful Adam, and all his posterity, for having sinned in him. Others would have it to signify only the yoke and obligations of the Mosaic law, which could not of itself remit sins, and occasionally made persons greater sinners. This sentence of death (whether we understand the one or the other) Christ took away, fastening, as it were, to the cross, taking it away by his death on the cross. Wi.

VER. 16. Let no man, therefore, judge you in meat, or in drink. He means with regard to the Jewish observations of the distinction of clean and unclean meats; and of their festivals, new moons, and sabbaths; as being no longer obligatory. Ch.—Modern dogmatizers wilfully or ignorantly misapply this text of the apostle, to disprove the fasts and festivals observed in the Catholic Church; but it is evident, as S. Austin observes, that the apostle is here condemning the legal distinction of clean and unclean meats, and the feasts of the new moon, to which false brethren wanted to subject the Colossians. S. Aug. ep. 59, ad Paulin., in solut. quæst. 7.

VER. 18. Let no man seduce you.|| In the Greek, hinder you from getting the prize.—Willing ¶ (by their own will) in humility, and religion of angels, practising a wrong and mistaken humility in regard of the angels, when you pay them a worship not due to them, pretending them to be the mediators and saviours of mankind, as if they were equal, or greater than Christ, our only Redeemer; walking in things you understand not, these men being deceived by their vain philosophy, and pride of their own imaginations. These seem to have been some disciples of Simon, and their heresies continued in some churches of Asia even to the fourth age, as we may find by a canon of the Council of Laodicea. But there is was against us, which was contrary to us, and the same he took out of the way, fastening it to the cross:

15 And divesting principalities and powers, he made a show of them confidently, triumphing openly over them in himself.

16 Let no man, therefore, judge you in meat, or in drink, or in respect of a festival day, or of the new moon, or of the sabbaths:

17 Which are a shadow of things to come: but the body is of Christ.

18 * Let no man seduce you, willing in humility and religion of angels, walking in the things which he hath not seen, in vain puffed up by the sense of his flesh,

19 And not holding the head, from which all the body, by joints and bands being supplied with nourishment and compacted, groweth unto the increase of God.

20 If then you be dead with Christ from the rudiments of this world: why do you yet decree as though living in the world?

21 Touch not, taste not, handle not:

22 Which all are unto destruction by the very use according to the precepts and doctrines of men:

23 Which things have indeed a show of wisdom in superstition, and humility, and not sparing the body, not in any honour to the filling of the flesh.

b Eph. ii. 1.—c Matt. xxiv. 4.

nothing here nor in that Council against a due, i. e. an inferior honour and veneration, nothing like a Divine honour, nor injurious to Christ, our chief Mediator and only Redeemer, which the Church, from the first ages, paid to saints and angels. We do not ask grace, we do not offer up sacrifice, we hope not for salvation but from God only, from Christ, God and man. Wi.—Willing, &c. That is, by a self-willed, self-invented, superstitious worship, falsely pretending humility, but really proceeding from pride. Such was the worship that many of the philosophers (against whom S. Paul speaks, ver. 8) paid to angels or demons, by sacrificing to them, as carriers of intelligence betwixt God and men; pretending humility in so doing, as if God was too great to be addressed to by men, and setting aside the mediators of Jesus Christ, who is the head both of angels and men. Such also was the worship paid by the ancient heretics, disciples of Simon and Menander, to the angels, whom they believed to be the makers and lords of this lower world. This is certain, that they whom the apostle here condemns, did not hold the head, (ver. 19,) that is, Jesus Christ, and his mediatorship; and therefore what he writes here no ways touches the Catholic doctrine and practice, of desiring our good angels to pray to God for us, through Jesus Christ. S. Jerom (Epist. ad Algas) understands by the religion or service of angels, the Jewish religion given by angels; and shows all that is here said to be directed against the Jewish teachers, who sought to subject the new Christians to the observances of the Mosaic law. Ch.

VER. 20. If then you be dead with Christ, or if you be not of this world, why do you act as if you were in it? practising the ceremonies of the law, as if you still expected Christ; all which are hurtful to you. S. Jerom.—Why do you yet decree  in this manner? Wi.

VER. 21. Touch not, &c. The meaning is, that Christians should not subject themselves either to the ordinances of the old law, forbidding touching or tasting things unclean; or to the superstitious invention of heresies, imposing such restraints, under pretence of wisdom, humility, or mortification. Ch.

VER. 23. Which things have indeed (as such masters teach you) a show of wisdom, in their nice superstitious ways, joined by some of them with extraordinary abstinences, and severities used to the body in fasting, which they observe, without any honour or regard, even not to the satiating of the flesh; i. e. according to the common expression, with such an excess, as not to allow the body to what is sufficient or necessary to support nature, that a man may be able to labour and comply with his duties; but here is nothing against discreet fasting, and self-denials, so much recommended in the Holy Scriptures. Wi.

He exhorts them to put off the old man, and to put on the new. The duties of wives and husbands, children and servants.

THEREFORE, if you be risen with Christ, seek the things that are above: where Christ is sitting at the right hand of God:

2 Mind the things that are above, not the things that are on the earth.

3 For you are dead, and your life is hidden with Christ in God.

4 When Christ shall appear, who is your life: then shall you also appear with him in glory.

5 Mortify therefore your members which are upon the earth: *fornication, uncleanness, lust, evil concupiscence, and covetousness, which is the service of idols:

6 For which things the wrath of God cometh upon the children of unbelief:

7 In which you also walked some time, when you lived in them.

8 ^b But now put you also all away: anger, indignation, malice, blasphemy, filthy speech out of your mouth.

9 Lie not one to another, stripping yourselves of the old man with his deeds.

10 And putting on the new, him who is renewed unto knowledge, ^c according to the image of him, who created him.

11 Where there is neither Gentile nor Jew, circumcision nor uncircumcision, Barbarian nor Scythian, bond or free: but Christ is all, and in all.

12 Put ye on, therefore, as the elect of God, holy, and beloved, the bowels of mercy, benignity, humility, modesty, patience:

13 Bearing with one another, and forgiving one another, if any have a complaint against another: even as the Lord hath forgiven you, so do you also.

14 But above all these things have charity, which is the bond of perfection:

15 And let the peace of Christ rejoice in your hearts, wherein also you are called in one body: and be ye thankful.

16 Let the word of Christ dwell in you abundantly, in CHAP. III. VER. 6. The children of unbelief are either those who perished in Noe's flood, for S. Peter in his Epistle gives them this title, or they are the inhabitants of Chanaan, whom Josue exterminated; for these also are called children of unbelief, in the Epistle to the Hebrews, and their crimes were the same as those mentioned here. Calmet.

VER. 8. Blasphemy.* It may here signify either the sin of blasphemy against God, or speaking ill of our neighbour by detraction, calumnies, affronts, &c. See S. Chrys. Wi.

VER. 10. According to the image of him, who created him. We are created to the image of God, inasmuch as our souls are spiritual and immortal, but here we are put in mind to imitate God by sanctity and justice, as God is holy and the fountain of justice. Wi.—The image or resemblance of our Creator was effaced by sin, but is retraced by Jesus Christ, who forms in us this new man. V.

VER. 11. Where, or in which state, when we put on the new man by sanctity and grace, God makes no distinction betwixt Jew and Gentile, &c. Wi.—In the Church of Christ, God makes no exception of persons; all are called to the marriage feast, whether Jews (formerly the most favoured people of God) or Greeks, (who were reckoned the most polite, or learned,) or Barbarians, or Scythians (who are esteemed the most cruel and ferocious of men): still these are called; all wisdom, teaching, and admonishing one another ^a in psalms, hymns, and spiritual canticles, singing in grace in your hearts to God.

17 ^e All whatsoever you do in word or in work, do all in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ, giving thanks to God and the Father by him.

18 ^f Wives, be subject to your husbands, as it behoveth in the Lord.

19 Husbands, love your wives, and be not bitter towards them.

20 ^g Children, obey your parents in all things: for this is pleasing to the Lord.

21 ^h Fathers, provoke not your children to anger; lest they be discouraged.

22 ⁱ Servants, obey in all things your masters according to the flesh, not serving to the eye, as pleasing men, but in simplicity of heart, fearing God.

23 Whatsoever you do, do it from the heart, as to the Lord, and not to men:

24 Knowing that you shall receive of the Lord the reward of inheritance. Serve ye the Lord Christ.

25 ^k For he that doth an injury, shall receive for that which he hath done unjustly, and there is no respect of persons with God.

CHAP. IV.

He recommends constant prayer, and wisdom. Various salutations.

MASTERS, do to your servants that which is just and equal: knowing that you also have a Master in heaven.

2 ^l Be instant in prayer: watching in it with thanksgiving:

3 ^m Praying withal for us also, that God may open to us a door of speech to speak the mystery of Christ (for which also I am in bands).

VER. 16. Employ yourselves in studying and reading the Scriptures; meditate on what our Saviour has done and suffered for you. It is a calumny of our enemies, that we forbid the reading of the Testament. But the Church, fearing lest the faithful should read to their own destruction what was ordained for their salvation, wisely ordains that they should have recourse to their pastors, and receive from them those versions which she approves as most conformable to the Latin Vulgate, which has received the sanction of the holy Catholic Church, and at the same time forbids them those which might corrupt their faith.

VER. 5. Redeeming the time. This expression occurs also in the Epistle to the Ephesians, and seems to insinuate to the faithful to be on their guard not to irritate the Gentiles, nor to provoke them to persecution. Remember, says he, the times are bad; conduct yourselves with prudence; gain time, procure peace, and remain in silence. This was written towards the end of the reign of Nero, as cruel a prince as ever lived. C brother, and faithful minister, and fellow-servant in the Lord, will make known to you :

10 Aristarchus, my fellow-prisoner, saluteth you, and Mark, the cousin-german of Barnabas, touching whom you have received commandments : if he come to you, receive him :

11 And Jesus, who is called Justus : who are of the circumcision : these only are my helpers in the kingdom of God, who have been a comfort to me.

12 Epaphras saluteth you, who is one of you, a servant of Christ Jesus, who is always solicitous for you in prayers, that you may stand perfect, and full in all the will of God.

13 For I bear him testimony that he hath much labour for you, and for them who are at Laodicea, and them at Hierapolis.

14 ^a Luke, the physician, most dearly beloved, saluteth you, and Demas.

15 Salute the brethren who are at Laodicea : and Nymphas, and the church that is in his house.

16 And when this epistle shall be read among you, cause that it be read also in the church of the Laodiceans : and read you that which is of the Laodiceans.

17 And say to Archippus : Take heed to the ministry which thou hast received in the Lord, that thou fulfil it.

18 The salutation of Paul with my own hand. Be mindful of my chains : Grace be with you. Amen.

^a 2 Tim. iv. 11.

VER. 10. The same as John and Mark mentioned in the Acts, xv. 37, 39.

VER. 12. Epaphras. He was apostle and bishop of the Colossians, as has been observed. It was he who engaged S. Paul to write to them, fearing lest they should give themselves up to the novelties of the false apostles, after having received the gospel from him in all its purity. C.

VER. 16. *Read you that which is of the Laodiceans. Some expound these words of an Epistle which S. Paul wrote to the Laodiceans, which is lost, for that now extant is no more than a collection of sentences out of S. Paul. By the Greek text is rather signified a letter writ from Laodicea, and might be a letter sent from the Laodiceans to S. Paul, which he had a mind the Colossians should read. W. —This opinion does not, however, seem well founded. Hence it is more probable that S. Paul wrote an Epistle from Rome to the Laodiceans about the same time that he wrote to the Colossians, as he had them both equally at heart, and that he ordered that Epistle to be read by the Colossians for their instruction ; and more particularly as they were equally disturbed by intruders and false teachers, against whom the apostle was anxious to warn them, lest they should be infected by their pernicious doctrine. Ch.

VER. 17. What S. Paul here addresses to Archippus, gives us reason to presume that he was then bishop of the Colossians, having succeeded Epaphras, who was then prisoner at Rome with S. Paul. V.

* V. 16. That of the Laodiceans. Eam quæ Laodicensium est, τὴν ἐκ Λαοδικείας. See S. Chrys. (λόγ. ιβ. p. 152,) and P. Mauduit Dissert. on this place who endeavours to prove that S. Paul wrote to the Laodiceans.

FIRST EPISTLE OF S. PAUL, THE APOSTLE,

TO THE

THESSALONIANS.

S. PAUL having preached the gospel in this place, converted some Jews and a great number of Gentiles ; but the unbelieving Jews, envying his success, raised such a commotion against him, that he and his companion Silvanus were obliged to quit the city. In the mean time S. Paul came to Corinth, where he wrote this First Epistle and also the Second to the Thessalonians, both in the same year, being the nineteenth after our Lord's ascension. Ch.—S. Paul preached the faith in this city, assisted by Silas, or Silvanus, whose name is joined with the apostle's in this letter. See Acts xvii. Being driven away from this city by the violence of the Jews, he left Timothy and Silas in Macedonia, to confirm the new converts in their faith. But having afterwards called them to him, and hearing of their constancy and perseverance, he writes this Epistle to encourage them and praise them. It is the first in time of all S. Paul's Epistles, and filled with the most affectionate expressions of love and tenderness for his spiritual children in Jesus Christ. In the latter part of the Epistle he gives some short instructions concerning the state of souls after death, and the coming of the last day ; as his companions had informed him that strange reports concerning these two articles were in circulation at Thessalonica, to the disturbance of the faithful. Calmet. Estius et alii.

CHAPTER I.

He gives thanks for the graces bestowed on the Thessalonians.

PAUL, and Silvanus, and Timothy to the church of the Thessalonians, in God the Father, and in the Lord Jesus Christ.

2 Grace be to you and peace. We give thanks to CHAP. I. VER. 1. Paul. It is observed that S. Paul never calls himself an apostle in either of the Epistles to the Thessalonians. The reason why he deviates from his ordinary custom on this occasion, probably, is, that joining his name with the other two, he did not like to assume a title, though his due, which the others did not possess. Estius.

God always for you all : making a remembrance of you in our prayers without ceasing.

3 Being mindful of the work of your faith, and labour, and charity, and of the enduring of the hope of our Lord Jesus Christ, before God and our Father :

4 Knowing, brethren beloved of God, your election .

VER. 3. The apostle praises the Thessalonians for the progress they had made in the theological virtues, and enumerates the profit they had derived from each. Their faith had produced works, their charity rendered their labour light and easy, and their patience was the fruit of their future hopes, in confidence of which they bore what they had to suffer from their unconverted countrymen. Estius.

5 For our gospel hath not been to you in word only, but in power also, and in the Holy Ghost, and in much fulness, as you know what manner of men we have been among you for your sakes.

6 And you became followers of us, and of the Lord : receiving the word in much tribulation, with the joy of the Holy Ghost :

7 So that you were made a pattern to all that believe in Macedonia and in Achaia.

8 For from you was spread abroad the word of the Lord, not only in Macedonia and in Achaia, but also in every place, your faith which is towards God, is gone forth, so that we need not to speak any thing.

9 For they themselves relate of us, what manner of entrance we had unto you : and how you were converted to God from idols, to serve the living and true God.

10 And to wait for his Son from heaven, (whom he raised from the dead,) Jesus, who hath delivered us from the wrath to come.

CHAP. II.

The sincerity of the apostle's preaching the gospel to them : and of their receiving it.

FOR yourselves brethren, know our entrance unto you, that it was not in vain :

2 But having suffered before, and being contumeliously treated (as you know) at Philippi,* we had confidence in our God, to speak to you the gospel of God in much solicitude.

3 For our exhortation was not of error, nor of uncleanness, nor in deceit.

4 But as we were approved of God, that the gospel should be committed to us : even so we speak, not as pleasing men, but God, who proveth our hearts.

5 For neither have we used at any time, the speech of flattery, as you know : nor taken an occasion of covetousness : God is witness :

6 Nor sought we glory of men, neither of you, nor of others.

7 Whereas we might have been burdensome to you, as the apostles of Christ : but we became little ones in the midst of you, as if a nurse should cherish her children.

8 So desirous of you, we would gladly have imparted

* Acts xvi. 19.

VER. 5. In power. The sense is, I have preached the gospel to you, not only in words of persuasion, but have proved it by the power of miracles, in much fulness, or in great abundance.—*And in much fulness. Some would have the Greek word to signify in a full assurance ; but in the style of the New Testament, it may as well signify a fulness, or plenitude. Wi.

VER. 8. From you was spread abroad the word.† The Greek, was sounded about.—In every place. In very many places. Wi.

* V. 5. In plenitudine multā, ἐν πληροφορίᾳ πόλλῃ. See Luke i.

† V. 8. Diffamatus est, ἐξήχηται. Insonuit, S. Chrys. says, (λόγ., β'. p. 166,) δηλῶν ὅτι ὡς περ σάλπιγγος, instar tubæ.

CHAP. II. VER. 3. *Our exhortation was not proceeding from error. That is, was not by promoting errors, or uncleanness. Wi.

VER. 7. But we became little,† by our carriage, and by our humility and kindness. In the Greek, made ourselves gentle, good-natured, &c. Wi.

VER. 8. Because you were become most dear to us. Lit. desiring you. † S. says, admires the tender expressions of love in S. Paul. Wi.

VER. 13. The word of the hearing of God, which can only signify the word of God you heard from us. Wi.

VER. 16. To fill up the measure of their sins, after which God's justice would punish them. Wi.—The Jews filled up the measure of their iniquities by the opposition they every where manifested to the religion of Christ. The earliest Fathers of the Church testify that they dispersed people into every nation to blaspheme the name of Christ ; and hence sprang the evil fame which Christians bore to you not only the gospel of God, but also our own souls : because you were become most dear to us.

9 For you remember, brethren, our labour and toil : working night and day, lest we should be burdensome to any of you, we preached among you the gospel of God.

10 You are witnesses, and God also, how holily, and justly, and without blame we have been among you, who have believed :

11 As you know, in what manner, entreating and comforting you, (as a father doth his children.)

12 We testified to every one of you, that you would walk worthy of God, who hath called you to his kingdom and glory.

13 Therefore we also give thanks to God without ceasing : because that when you had received from us the word of the hearing of God, you received it not as the word of men, but (as it truly is) the word of God, who worketh in you, who have believed.

14 For you, brethren, are become followers of the churches of God, which are in Judea, in Christ Jesus : for you also have suffered the same things from your own countrymen, even as they have from the Jews :

15 Who both killed the Lord Jesus, and the prophets, and have persecuted us, and they please not God, and are adversaries to all men ;

16 Forbidding us to speak to the Gentiles that they may be saved, to fill up their sins always : for the wrath of God is come upon them to the end.

17 But we, brethren, being taken away from you, for a short time, in sight, not in heart, have hastened the more abundantly to see your face with great desire :

18 For we would have come to you, even I, Paul, once and again ; but satan hindered us

19 For what is our hope or joy, or crown of glory ? Are not you, in the presence of our Lord Jesus Christ at his coming ?

20 For you are our glory and joy.

among the pagans. See the apologies of S. Justin, Tertullian, Origen, &c.—For the wrath of God is come upon them to the end. It seems a foretelling of their entire destruction, which happened not long after under Vespasian and Adrian. Wi.

VER. 17. Being taken away from you. Lit. become desolate, because of our separation from you. Wi.

VER. 18. Satan hindered us. That is, has raised such an aversion to me among the pagans and Jews of Thessalonica ; that my friends do not think it safe I should come among you. I am now detained from you by violence ; but when this life is past, you shall form my joy and my crown. I will present you at the tribunal of my Saviour, and say, Behold me and my children ; behold the fruits of my labours, the proofs of my fidelity, and my claims for a recompense. Calmet.—If the apostle here calls his disciples his hope, joy, glory, why may we not call the blessed Virgin Mary, or other saints, their joy and hope, for the special confidence they have in their prayers ?

CHAP. III. VER. 1. Forbearing no longer. That is, not being able to be at rest, for not seeing you, nor hearing concerning you. Wi.

2 *And we sent Timothy, our brother, and a minister of God in the gospel of Christ, to confirm you, and exhort you concerning your faith :

3 That no man should be moved in these tribulations : for yourselves know, that we are appointed thereunto.

4 For even when we were with you, we foretold you that we should suffer tribulations : as also it is come to pass, and you know.

5 For this cause also I forbearing no longer, sent to know your faith : lest perhaps he that tempteth, should have tempted you, and our labour should be made vain.

6 But now when Timothy came to us from you, and related to us your faith and charity, and that you have a good remembrance of us always, desiring to see us, as we also to see you :

7 Therefore we were comforted, brethren, in you, in all our distress and tribulation, by your faith ;

8 For now we live, if you stand in the Lord.

9 For what thanks can we return to God for you, in all the joy wherewith we rejoice for you before our God.

10 Night and day, praying more abundantly, that we may see your face, and may accomplish those things that are wanting to your faith ?

11 Now God himself and our Father, and our Lord Jesus Christ direct our way unto you :

12 And may the Lord multiply you, and make you abound in charity towards one another, and towards all men : as we do also towards you,

13 To confirm your hearts without blame, in holiness, before God and our Father, at the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ with all his saints. Amen.

CHAP. IV.

He exhorts them to purity and mutual charity : he treats of the resurrection of the dead.

FOR the rest therefore, brethren, we pray and beseech you in the Lord Jesus, that as you have received from us, how you ought to walk, and to please God, so also you would walk, that you may abound the more.

2 For you know what commandments I have given to you by the Lord Jesus.

3 ^bFor this is the will of God, your sanctification : that you should abstain from fornication :

VER. 3. That we are appointed thereunto. That is, meet with trials and troubles in this world, as our Saviour Christ foretold. Wi.

VER. 8. We live. That is, we live in joy and comfort, if you stand firm in the faith of Christ, as you ought. Wi.

VER. 10. That we may see your face. Though epistles in absence give great comfort, and help to confirm the faith once delivered, it is by preaching that the faith of Jesus Christ and true religion are both begun and accomplished.—And may accomplish those things that are wanting to your faith? That is, give you fuller instructions. Wi.

VER. 4. His vessel. That is, his own body. See 1 Kings xxi. 5. Wi.

VER. 6. *That no man overreach, nor deceive his brother in business. The Prot., in their translations, add, in any matter, because some expound it of frauds and circumventions in any kind of business. But this addition of any should be left out, seeing the best interpreters expound it of a prohibition of adultery, and the injury thereby done to another, and of sins of that kind only, which is confirmed by what follows and what goes before. See S. Jerom in e. 4, ad Ephes. tom. 4, p. 309. S. Chrys. serm. 3, on this place. Here, says he, he speaks of adultery, as before of fornication, &c. See Theodoret, Theophylact, Estius. Menochius, A. Lapide, &c. Wi.

VER. 11. And that you want nothing of any man's.† This is the sense by the Greek, nor does the Latin here signify to desire, but to want them that are without ; i. e. infidels out of the pale of the Church. Wi.—In regard of brotherly

4 That every one of you should know how to possess his vessel in sanctification and honour :

5 Not in the passion of lust, like the Gentiles, who know not God :

6 And that no man overreach, nor deceive his brother in business : because the Lord is the avenger of all such things, as we have told you before, and have testified.

7 For God hath not called us to uncleanness, but to holiness.

8 He, therefore, that despiseth these things, despiseth not man, but God : who also hath given his holy spirit in us.

9 Now concerning fraternal charity, we have no need to write to you : for yourselves have learned of God to love one another.

10 For indeed you do it towards all the brethren in all Macedonia. But we entreat you, brethren, that you abound more.

11 And that you use your endeavour to be quiet, and that you do your own business, and work with your own hands, as we commanded you : and that you walk honestly towards them that are without : and that you want nothing of any man's.

12 And we will not have you ignorant, brethren, concerning them that are asleep, that you be not sorrowful, even as others who have no hope.

13 For if we believe that Jesus died, and rose again, even so them who have slept through Jesus, God will bring with him.

14 For this we say unto you in the word of the Lord, that we who are alive, who remain unto the coming of the Lord, shall not prevent them, who have slept.

15 For the Lord himself shall come down from heaven with commandment, and with the voice of the archangel, and with the trumpet of God : and the dead, who are in Christ, shall rise first.

16 Then we who are alive, who are left, shall be caught up together with them in the clouds, to meet Christ in the air, and so shall we be always with the Lord.

17 Wherefore comfort ye one another with these words.

love, he advises them to remain quiet, at peace with every one, troubling nobody, nor interfering with the concerns of others, but each one minding his own work. It had been reported to the apostle that there were some at Thessalonica who made religion a pretext for idleness. It is to reprove such persons as these that we are given to understand in this place that religion will never excuse the neglect of relative duties, either to our neighbours or to ourselves. Calmet.

VER. 15. With commandment.† God's command will in a moment raise and bring all to judgment.—And the dead, who are in Christ, in the grace of Christ, shall rise first, not as to time, but in dignity. BUT of the times and moments, brethren, you need not that we should write to you.

2 * For yourselves know perfectly, that the day of the Lord shall so come, as a thief in the night.

3 For when they shall say, peace and security : then shall sudden destruction come upon them, as the pains upon her that is with child, and they shall not escape.

4 But you, brethren, are not in darkness, that that day should overtake you as a thief :

5 For all you are the children of light, and children of the day : we are not of the night, nor of darkness.

6 Therefore let us not sleep, as others do : but let us watch and be sober.

7 For they who sleep, sleep in the night : and they who are drunk, are drunk in the night.

8 But let us, who are of the day, be sober, ^b having on the breastplate of faith and charity, and for a helmet, the hope of salvation :

9 For God hath not appointed us to wrath, but to the purchasing of salvation by our Lord Jesus Christ.

10 Who died for us : that whether we wake or sleep, we may live together with him.

11 Wherefore comfort one another : and edify one another, as you also do.

12 And we beseech you, brethren, to know them who labour among you, and are over you in the Lord, and admonish you, 13 That you esteem them more abundantly in charity for their work : have peace with them.

14 And we beseech you, brethren, rebuke the unquiet, comfort the feeble-minded, support the weak, be patient towards all men.

15 * See that none render evil for evil to any one : but always follow that which is good towards each other, and towards all men.

16 Always rejoice.

17 ^a Pray without ceasing.

18 In all things give thanks : for this is the will of God in Christ Jesus concerning you all.

19 Extinguish not the Spirit.

20 Despise not prophecies.

21 But prove all things ; hold that which is good.

22 From all appearance of evil refrain yourselves.

23 And may the God of peace himself sanctify you in all things : that your whole spirit, and soul, and body be preserved blameless for the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ.

24 * He is faithful who hath called you : who will also perform.

25 Brethren, pray for us.

26 Salute all the brethren with a holy kiss.

27 I charge you, by the Lord, that this epistle be read to all the holy brethren.

28 The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you. Amen.

CHAP. V. VER. 1. Of the times and moments. That is, of the day of judgment, of the end of the world, of the destruction of Jerusalem. It is enough to know the time is uncertain, and that death cometh as a thief in the night. Wi.

VER. 5. You are the children of light. That is, there is little danger of thieves in the day-time, when it is light. Also watch, and have arms to defend you, the coat of mail of faith, the helmet of hope : you are under the protection of Christ, who died for you, and for your salvation. See S. Chrys., p. 293, &c. Wi.

VER. 8. The Christian's panoply is not faith alone, but faith, hope, and charity, as we see here.

VER. 10. Whether we wake or sleep. That is, whether we be of the number of those whom Jesus Christ shall find still upon earth, when he shall come to judgment, or among those who have slept and returned to dust, it is his will that we should be his. Theodoret.

VER. 14. *Rebuke, or correct the unquiet. By the Greek, it signifies the disorderly, or those that keep no order. Wi.

VER. 16. Always rejoice. It is usual for S. Paul to recommend joy to the faithful. Cheerfulness is indeed the characteristic of true virtue, which by no means consists in, nor encourages, sourness or moroseness, as some mistaken people imagine. A.

VER. 21. Prove all things. That is, examine prophecies whether they be true, and the doctrine which you hear from new preachers, and refrain yourselves not only from evil, but from every thing that hath the appearance of evil, and which may disedify and scandalize others. Wi.—Hold that which is good. This we can best learn from the doctrine of the apostles, and the spirit of the Catholic Church. Man can deceive and be deceived, but the Spirit of God, speaking to us by his Church, can neither deceive us nor be deceived.

VER. 23. Spirit, and soul. The former marks the understanding, the latter the will : hence these two terms give the two principal faculties of the soul. V.

* V. 14. The unquiet : inquietos, ἀτάκτους, inordinatos, sine ordine et regula viventes.

THE

SECOND EPISTLE OF S. PAUL, THE APOSTLE,

TO THE

THESSALONIANS.

In this Epistle S. Paul admonishes the Thessalonians to be constant in the faith of Christ, and not to be terrified by the insinuations of false teachers telling them that the day of judgment was near at hand, as there must come many signs and wonders before it. He bids them to hold firm the traditions received from him, whether by word or by epistle ; and shows them how they may be certain of his letters by the manner he writes. This Epistle was written soon after the former, and also from Corinth, about A. 52. Ch. Wi

CHAPTER I.

He gives thanks to God for their faith and constancy: and prays for their advancement in all good.

PAUL, and Silvanus, and Timothy, to the church of the Thessalonians, in God our Father, and the Lord Jesus Christ.

2 Grace be to you, and peace from God, our Father, and from the Lord Jesus Christ.

3 We ought to give thanks always to God for you, brethren, as it is meet, because your faith increaseth exceedingly, and the charity of every one of you towards each other, aboundeth:

4 So that we ourselves also glory in you in the churches of God, for your patience and faith, and in all your persecutions and tribulations, which you endure,

5 For an example of the just judgment of God, that you may be counted worthy of the kingdom of God, for which also you suffer.

6 Seeing it is a just thing with God to repay tribulation to them that trouble you:

7 And to you who are troubled, rest with us when the Lord Jesus shall be revealed from heaven with the angels of his power,

8 In a flame of fire, giving vengeance to them, who know not God, and who obey not the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ.

CHAP. I. VER. 5. For an example of the just judgment of God. That is, that the persecutions and troubles you suffer in this world show the justice of God in punishing men for their sins, even in this life, so that by these temporal pains you may be found worthy of a crown of eternal glory in the kingdom of God. Wi.—The afflictions which are here frequently the portion of the just, are sensible proofs of the rigour with which the Almighty will, at the day of final retribution, pour out his indignation on the wicked. Or, as others explain it, God permits the good to be persecuted here, that one day he may treat the wicked according to the rigour of his justice. He permits them here to fill up the measure of their iniquities, that on the last day he may reward the long-suffering of the one, and punish the infidelity of the other. In both the one and the other, the finger of God's justice will clearly manifest itself. Calmet.

VER. 6. *Seeing * it is a just thing.* Lit. If yet it be just. S. Chrys. takes notice, that we must not expound the text as if S. Paul made a doubt whether it was just or not for God to repay tribulation to such as troubled, afflicted, and persecuted his faithful servants, and to punish them when he shall be revealed (i. e. at the day of judgment) with flaming fire, or with the flames of hell: nothing certainly is more just; as on the contrary, it is just to reward the pious and those who are found worthy of the glorious kingdom of God. Wi.

VER. 10. This shall be at the last day, when Christ shall come to be glorified in his saints, and to be made † wonderful (to be admired and praised) in or by all them who have believed in that day (i. e. the things foretold of that day): because our testimony ‡ was believed upon you concerning that day, i. e. as to the punishments and rewards that shall be given on that day. Wi.

VER. 11. Wherefore also we pray, &c. By the Greek the sense and construction cannot be in, or on which day; and therefore it must be referred to what was said before, that God should be glorified in his saints, and so may be translated, on which § account we pray, &c., that Christ may be glorified in you, being made saints by his grace, &c. Wi.

VER. 12. That the name of our Lord, &c. The name of God is glorified by the virtuous lives of Christians, but more especially by that constancy and firmness evinced by the faithful under the hands of the executioner. It is an act of the most perfect charity, to lay down our lives in defence of his truths and the glory of his name, and the most disinterested testimony of our allegiance to him. Calmet.

CHAP. II. VER. 1. And we, &c. Some impostors had taken occasion from S. Paul's First Epistle to the Thessalonians, to teach that the day of judgment was at hand. The apostle here maintains that it certainly will come, but that it will come like a thief in the night. 9 Who shall suffer eternal pains in destruction, from the face of the Lord, and from the glory of his power:

10 When he shall come to be glorified in his saints, and to be made wonderful in all them who have believed: because our testimony was believed upon you in that day.

11 Wherefore also we pray always for you: that our God would make you worthy of his calling, and fulfil all the good pleasure of his goodness, and the work of faith in power, 12 That the name of our Lord Jesus may be glorified in you, and you in him, according to the grace of our God, and of the Lord Jesus Christ.

. CHAP. II.

The day of the Lord is not come, till the man of sin be revealed. The apostles' traditions are to be observed.

AND we beseech you, brethren, by the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ, and of our gathering together unto him:

2 That you be not easily moved from your sense, nor be terrified, neither by spirit, nor by word, nor by epistle, as sent from us, as if the day of the Lord were at hand.

3 * Let no man deceive you by any means: for unless there come a revolt first, and the man of sin be revealed, the son of perdition,

* Eph. v. 6.

80. Let us attend to what S. Austin declares he had learnt from the first Church authorities. At the last judgment, or about that time, will arrive Elias, the Thesbite, the conversion of the Jews, the persecution of antichrist, the coming of Jesus Christ, the resurrection of the dead, the separation of the good from the bad, the conflagration of the world, and the renovation of the same: that these things will arrive, we are to believe, but in what manner and in what order experience will teach better than reason. It is my opinion that they will come in the order I have related them. De Civ. Dei, l. 20, cap. ult. That the man of sin will be born of the Jewish tribe of Dan, that he will cruelly persecute the faithful for three years and a half, that he will put to death Henoch and Elias, and that great, very great, will be the apostacy, is the general belief. Oh! God, preserve us with thy grace, and do not permit us to lose sight of the dreadful danger that threatens even the elect.

VER. 3, 4. First, &c.† What is meant by this falling away (in the Greek, this apostacy) is uncertain, and differently expounded. S. Jerom and others understand it of a falling off of other kingdoms, which before were subject to the Roman empire; as if S. Paul said to them, You need not fear that the day of judgment is at hand, for it will not come till other kingdoms, by a general revolt, shall have fallen off, so that the Roman empire be destroyed. The same interpreters expound the sixth and seventh verses in like manner, as if when it is said, now you know ‡ what withholdeth, &c. That is, you see the Roman empire subsisteth yet, which must be first destroyed. And when it is added, only that he who now holdeth, do hold, until he be taken out of the way; the sense, say these authors, is, let Nero and his successors hold that empire till it be destroyed, for not till then will the day of judgment come. A. Lapide makes this exposition so certain, that he calls it a tradition of the Fathers, which to him seems apostolical. But we must not take the opinion of some Fathers, in the exposition of obscure prophecies, where they advance conjectures (which others at the same time reject, or doubt of) to be apostolical traditions and articles of faith, as the learned bishop of Meaux, Bossuet, takes notice on this very subject, in his preface and treatise on the Apocalypse, against Jurieux. S. Jerom indeed, and others, thought that the Roman empire was to subsist till antichrist's coming, which by the event most interpreters conclude to be a mistake, and that it cannot be said the Roman empire continues to this time. See Lyranus on this place, S. Tho. Aquin., Salmeron, Estius, and many others; though A. Lapide, with some few, pretend the Roman empire still subsists in the emperors of Germany. S. Chrys., § Theodoret, S. Aug., in one of his expositions, by this falling off, and apostacy, understand antichrist himself, apostatizing from the Catholic faith. According to a third and common exposition, by this revolt, or apostacy, others understand a great falling off of great numbers from the Catholic Church and faith in those nations where it was professed before; not but that, as S. Aug. expressly takes notice, the Church will remain always visible, and Catholic in its belief, till the end of the world. This interpretation we find in S. Cyr. of Jerusalem, Catech. 15. See also S. Anselm on this place, S. Thomas, Salmeron, Estius, &c. In fine, that there is no apostolical tradition, as to any of the interpretations of these words, we may be fully convinced from the words of S. Aug., ¶ l. 20, de Civ. Dei, c. 19, t. 7, p. 597, nov. edit., where he says, For my part, I own myself altogether ignorant what the apostle means by these words; but I shall mention the suspicions of others, which I have read, or heard. Then he sets down the exposition concerning the Roman empire. He there calls it a suspicion and conjecture, what others say is an apostolical tradition. In like manner

God, or that is worshipped, so that he sitteth in the temple of God, showing himself as if he were God.

5 Remember you not, that when I was yet with you, I told you these things?

6 And now you know what withholdeth, that he may be revealed in his time.

7 For the mystery of iniquity already worketh: only that he who now holdeth, do hold, until he be taken out of the way.

8 And then that wicked one shall be revealed,^a whom the Lord Jesus shall kill with the spirit of his mouth, and shall destroy with the brightness of his coming: him,

9 Whose coming is according to the working of satan, in all power, and signs, and lying wonders,

10 And in all seduction of iniquity to them that perish: because they receive not the love of the truth that they might be saved. Therefore God shall send them the operation of error, to believe a lie.

11 That all may be judged, who have not believed the truth, but have consented to iniquity.

12 But we ought to give thanks to God always for you, brethren beloved of God, for that God hath chosen you first-fruits unto salvation, in sanctification of the Spirit, and belief of the truth:

the ancient Fathers are divided as to the exposition of the words of the sixth and seventh verse, when it is said you know what hindereth. Some understand that antichrist must come first. Others, that the before-mentioned apostacy, or falling off from the Church, must happen before.—And the man of sin revealed, the son of perdition, so that he sitteth in the temple of God, showing himself as if he were God. He is called again, (ver. 8,) that wicked one . . . whom the Lord Jesus Christ shall kill with the spirit of his mouth. By all these words is described to us the great antichrist, about the end of the world, according to the unexceptionable authority and consent of the ancient Fathers. It is as ridiculous as malicious to pretend, with divers late reformers, that the pope, and all the popes since the destruction of the Roman empire, are the great antichrist, the man of sin, &c. Grotius, Dr. Hammond, and divers learned Protestants, have confuted and ridiculed this groundless fable, of which more on the Apocalypse. It may suffice to observe here that antichrist, the man of sin, the son of perdition, the wicked one, according to all the ancients, is to be one particular man, not so many different men. That he is to come a little while before the day of judgment. That he will make himself adored, and pretend to be God. What pope did so? That he will pretend to be Christ, &c. Wi.—The two special signs of the last day will be a general revolt, and the manifestation of antichrist, both of which are so dependent on each other, that S. Austin makes but one of both.—In the temple. Either that of Jerusalem, which some think he will rebuild; or in some Christian Church, which he will pervert to his own worship; as Mahomet has done by the churches of the East. VER. 7. The mystery of iniquity already worketh,†† or is now wrought, by the precursors of antichrist; i. e. by infidels and heretics. For, as S. John says, there are many antichrists, precursors to the great antichrist, and enemies of Christ. 1 John ii. Wi.

VER. 8. Spirit of his mouth, &c. S. Paul makes use of this expression to show the ease with which God can put down the most powerful from his seat. He shall strike the earth with the rod of his mouth, and with the breath of his lips he shall slay the wicked. Isa. xi. 4, &c. Calmet.

VER. 10. God shall send them the operation of error.†† That is, says S. Chrys. and S. Cyril, he will permit them to be led away with illusions, by signs, and lying prodigies, which the devil shall work by antichrist, &c. Wi.—God shall suffer them to be deceived by lying wonders, and false miracles, in punishment of their not entertaining the love of truth. Ch.

VER. 12. That God hath chosen you first-fruits. Called you the first, or before many others, by his eternal decree, to the faith, whilst he hath left others in darkness and infidelity. Wi.

VER. 14. Traditions, . . . whether by word,§§ or by our epistle. Therefore, says S. Chrys., the apostles did not deliver all things that were to be believed, by writing (Wi.); but many things by word of mouth only, which have been perpetuated by tradition, and these traditions, no less than the writings of the apostles, are deserving of faith. Austin, Theophylactus, and others, understand S. Paul as speaking of a kind of excommunication. But S. Chrys., on ver. 13 and 14, seems to restrain its meaning to a prohibition for the guilty to speak to anybody, unless they spoke to him, if their conversation tended to exhort him to repentance. Theophylactus likewise remarks that this punishment was formerly much dreaded, though now not in use.

VER. 17. The salutation of, &c. The apostle gives them this caution, for fear the faithful might be deceived by fictitious letters. For they had already received one of this kind, which had terrified them, by foretelling that the day of judgment was at hand. This deception he is here anxious to remove, signing the present communication with his own hand, and sealing it with his own seal. THE

FIRST EPISTLE OF S. PAUL, THE APOSTLE.

TO TIMOTHY.

S. PAUL, passing through Lycaonia, about the year 51, some of the brethren at Derbe or Lystra recommended to him a disciple, by name Timothy, who from his infancy had studied the Holy Scriptures. S. Paul took him, making him his companion and fellow-labourer in the gospel: and not to offend the Jews, who could not be ignorant that Timothy's father was a Gentile, he caused him to be circumcised. Afterwards he ordained him bishop of Ephesus. Wi.—S. Paul writes this Epistle to his beloved Timothy, to instruct him in the duties of a bishop, both in respect to himself and to his charge; and that he ought to be well informed of the good morals of those on whom he was to impose hands: Impose not hands lightly upon any man. He tells him also how he should behave towards his clergy. This Epistle was written about thirty-three years after our Lord's ascension; but where it was written is uncertain: the more general opinion is, that it was in Macedonia. Ch.—After his Epistles to the Churches, now follow those to particular persons; to Timothy and Titus, who were bishops, and to Philemon. S. Timothy, who had been so long the disciple of S. Paul, and who never left him except when ordered by his master, could not be ignorant of his duties, but it was destined for the use of bishops of every age. Hence S. Austin says that such as are destined to serve the Church, should have continually before their eyes the two Epistles to Timothy and that to Titus.

CHAPTER I.

He puts Timothy in mind of his charge: and blesses God for the mercy he himself had received.

5 Now the end of the commandment is charity from a pure heart, and a good conscience, and an unfeigned faith.

6 From which things some going astray are turned aside to vain talk

7 Desiring to be teachers of the law, understanding neither the things they say, nor whereof they affirm.

8 ^a But we know that the law is good, if a man use it lawfully :

9 Knowing this, that the law is not made for the just man, but for the unjust and disobedient, for the ungodly, and for sinners, for the wicked, and defiled, for murderers of fathers, and murderers of mothers, for manslayers,

10 For fornicators, for them that defile themselves with mankind, for men-stealers, for liars, and for perjured persons, and whatever other thing is contrary to sound doctrine,

11 Which is according to the gospel of the glory of the blessed God, which hath been committed to my trust.

12 I give thanks to him who had strengthened me, to Christ Jesus our Lord, that he esteemed me faithful, putting me into the ministry :

13 Who before was a blasphemer, and a persecutor, and contumelious ; but I obtained the mercy of God, because I did it ignorantly in unbelief.

14 Now the grace of our Lord hath abounded exceedingly with faith and love, which is in Christ Jesus.

15 A faithful saying, and worthy of all acceptation : ^b that Christ Jesus came into this world to save sinners, of whom I am the chief.

fection of God, or godly edification. § In some Greek MSS. is read, dispensation, or economy ; and so the sense may be, which contribute nothing to the explaining the dispensation of grace in the mystery of Christ's incarnation. The construction of this and the former verse are imperfect, when it is said, as I desired thee, nothing being expressed corresponding to the word as. Some understand it, As I desired before, so now in this Epistle I desire it of thee again. The same difficulty occurs in the Greek as in the Latin text. Wi.

VER. 5. The end of the commandment. By the precept many understand, as it were by way of a parenthesis, all that is here contained from the 3rd to the 18th verse, where precept is again repeated. We may understand by the commandment, the law of Moses in general, comprehending both the ceremonial part and the moral precepts, which are also of the law of nature. The ceremonial part was designed to bring us to Christ by types and figures ; and the moral precepts, which were also of the law of nature, or natural reason, were to bring men to observe them by punishments, and so were delivered against wicked criminals, ungodly, who worshipped not God ; against the unjust, ¶ (in the Greek, lawless men,) Sodomites, &c. Wi.

VER. 9. The law is not, &c. He means that the just man doth good, and avoideth evil, not as compelled by the law, and merely for fear of the punishment appointed by transgressors, but voluntarily, and out of the love of God and virtue ; and would do so, though there were no law. Ch.

VER. 13. Because I did it ignorantly in unbelief, or in ineredulity. Not that we can think it an invincible and altogether an inculpable ignorance, such as would have made S. Paul blameless in the sight of God. It was through his pure mercy that he called S. Paul, when his great sins and false zeal made him a greater object of the Divine mercy ; and God in him was pleased to make known to all men his wonderful patience, that no sinners might despair. Wi.

VER. 18. This precept I commend to thee. Some understand it a precept of what follows, that he should wage a good warfare against the enemies of God and of his salvation. Others refer it to the precept mentioned before, ver. 5, to wit, that Timothy should charge all the new converts not to give ear to new teachers. — Prophecies. He seems to mean some particular predictions made by some who had the gift of prophecies, and who foretold that he should be a great minister of God. Wi.

VER. 19. An evil life is not unfrequently the leading principle of defection from the faith. The heart, not the mind, is generally the first corrupted.

Prayers are to be said for all men : because God wills the salvation of all. Women are not to teach.

I DESIRE, therefore, first of all, that supplications, prayers, intercessions, and thanksgivings, be made for all men :

3 For this is good and acceptable in the sight of God, our Saviour,

CHAP. II. VER. 1. Intercessions, as in the Prot. translation. If men's intercessions to God in favour of others are no injury to Christ, as our mediator, how can it be any injury to Christ for the angels and saints in heaven to pray or intercede to God for us ? Wi.

VER. 2. For kings, who were then heathens, this being in Nero's time. Wi. — Upon the happiness of the king generally belongs that of his subjects.

VER. 4. All men to be saved. They contradict this, and other places of the Scripture, as well as the tradition and doctrine of the Catholic Church, who teach that God willerh only the salvation of the predestinated, of the elect, and, as they say, of the first-begotten only : and that he died only for them, and not for all mankind. But if it is the will of God that all and every one be saved, and no one resists, or can frustrate the will of the Almighty, whence comes it that every one is not saved ? To understand and reconcile divers places in the Holy Scriptures, we must needs distinguish in God a will that is absolute and effectual, accompanied with special graces and assistances, and with the gift of final perseverance, by which, through his pure mercy, he decreed to save the elect, without any prejudice to their free-will and liberty ; and a will, which by the order of Providence is conditional, and this not a metaphorical and improper will only, but a true and proper will, by which he hath prepared and offered graces and means to all men, whereby they may work their salvation ; and if they are not saved, it is by their own fault, by their not corresponding with the graces offered, it is because they resist the Holy Ghost. Acts vii. 51. If in this we meet with difficulties, which we cannot comprehend, the words of S. Paul, (Rom. ix. 20,) O man, who art thou, who repliest against God ? may be sufficient to make us work our salvation with fear and trembling. Wi.

VER. 5. 6. One mediator of God and men, the man Christ Jesus : who gave himself a redemption for all. Take all these words together, and we may easily understand in what sense the apostle calls our Saviour Christ, the one or only mediator ; that is, he is the only mediator, who at the same time is our Redeemer ; the only mediator who could mediate betwixt God, the person offended by sin, and men, the offenders ; the only mediator who reconciled God to mankind by his incarnation and death, by the infinite price of his blood, by his own merits, independently of the merits of any other. All Catholics allow that the dignity and office of mediator in this sense belongs only to our Redeemer, Jesus Christ, or to the Son of God, made man to save us. The sense then of this 7 Whereunto I am appointed a preacher, and an apostle, (I say the truth, I lie not,) a doctor of the Gentiles in faith and truth.

8 I will, therefore, that men pray in every place, lifting up pure hands without anger and strife.

9 In like manner women in decent apparel, adorning themselves with modesty and sobriety, and not with plaited hair, or gold, or pearls, or costly array :

10 But as it becometh women professing piety, with good works.

11 Let the women learn in silence, with all subjection.

12 But I permit not a woman to teach, nor to use authority over the man : but to be in silence.

13 For Adam was first formed, then Eve :

14 And Adam was not seduced, but the woman being seduced was in the transgression.

15 Yet she shall be saved by bearing children, if she continue in faith, and love, and sanctification with sobriety.

CHAP. III.

What sort of men are to be admitted into the clergy : the Church is the pillar of truth.

A FAITHFUL saying : If a man desire the office of a bishop, he desireth a good work.

2 It behoveth, therefore, a bishop to be blameless, the husband of one wife, sober, prudent, of good behaviour, chaste, given to hospitality, a teacher,

3 Not given to wine, no striker, but modest ; not litigious, not covetous, but place is, that as there is but one God, who created all, so there is but one mediator, who redeemed all. But yet the name of mediator is not so appropriated to Christ, but that in an inferior and different sense the angels and saints in heaven, and even men on earth, who pray to God for the salvation of others, may be called mediators, intercessors, or advocates ; and we may apply ourselves to them to pray, intercede, and mediate for us, without any injury to Christ, since we acknowledge that all their intercession and mediation is always grounded on the merits of Christ, our Redeemer. Wi.—Christ is the one and only mediator of redemption ; who gave himself, as the apostle writes, a redemption for all. He is also the only mediator, who stands in need of no other to recommend his petitions to the Father. But this is not against our seeking the prayers and intercession, as well of the faithful upon earth, as of the saints and angels in heaven, for obtaining mercy, grace, and salvation, through Jesus Christ. As S. Paul himself often desired the help of the prayers of the faithful, without any injury to the mediatorship of Jesus Christ. Ch.—A redemption for all. Not only for the predestinated, not only for the just, not only for the faithful, but for all Gentiles and infidels : and therefore he says again, (chap. iv. 10.) that Christ is the Saviour of all men, and especially of the faithful. See S. Aug.* and S. Chrysostom.† Wi.

VER. 11. In silence. See 1 Cor. xiv. 34. See S. Chrys.† Wi.

VER. 12. S. Paul only means in public. See note on ver. 11 of the next chapter. It would appear from this regulation of the apostle, as well as from the writings of the earliest Fathers, that the practice and condemnation of women interfering at all in spiritual affairs is not new. Tertullian says, We do not permit a woman to teach, to baptize, or to arrogate to herself any part of the duty which belongs to man. De Veland. Virg. cap. 9.—The woman has tried once to teach, when she persuaded Adam to eat the forbidden fruit, and has wofully failed. Let her now be content to remain in silence, and subjection to man (S. Chrys. hic) ; as appears also from the order of the creation. See ver. 13.

4 One that ruleth well his own house, having his children in subjection with all chastity.

5 But if a man know not how to rule his own house, how shall he take care of the church of God ?

6 Not a neophyte : lest being puffed up with pride, he fall into the judgment of the devil.

7 Moreover he must have a good testimony from them who are without, lest he fall into reproach, and into the snare of the devil.

8 Deacons in like manner chaste, not double-tongued, not given to much wine, not greedy of filthy lucre :

13 For they that have ministered well, shall purchase to themselves a good degree, and much confidence in the faith, which is in Christ Jesus.

14 These things I write to thee, hoping that I shall come to thee shortly.

office, and charge of a bishop is good ; but the motive of desiring to be a bishop not always good. However, in those days the desire could scarce be grounded on temporal advantages. Wi.

VER. 2. A bishop (the same name then comprehended priest) to be blameless, as to life and conversation, adorned (says S. Chrys.) with all virtues. See also S. Jerom in his letter to Oceanus.—The husband of one wife. The meaning is not that every bishop should have a wife, (for S. Paul himself had none,) but that no one should be admitted to the holy orders of bishop, priest, or deacon, who had been married more than once. Ch.—Sober.† The Greek rather signifies watchful.—Chaste.‡ There is nothing for this in the Greek text at present, unless in some few MSS. Perhaps the ancient Latin interpreter added it, as being signified and comprehended in the other words.—Teacher : a doctor, as the Greek signifies. Wi.

VER. 3. Not given to wine, or a lover of wine. This, says S. Chrys., is less than to be a drunkard ; for such are excluded from the kingdom of heaven, whoever they be. 1 Cor. vi. 10.—No striker. S. Chrys. understands not striving fighting, or quarrelling even with his tongue.—Not covetous § of money, as appears by the Greek text. Wi.

VER. 4. Ruleth well his own house, &c. Before he is set over the Church, let him have given proofs of his talents for governing within his own house, by the regularity he has made all his dependants observe. Wi.

VER. 6. Not a neophyte. Not one newly as it were planted, or newly instructed in the faith. Wi.—That is, one lately baptized, a young convert. Ch.—He fall into the judgment and condemnation of the devil, by returning to his evil habits he has so lately quitted. Wi.—Devil ; i. e. into the same punishment to which the devil is condemned (Theodoret) ; or into the power of the devil, who will accuse him at the judgment. Calmet.

VER. 8. Deacons, &c. By the Greek, grave, sober, &c. But why does he pass from bishops to deacons, not naming priests ? S. Chrys. answers, that priests were comprehended under the name of bishops, their functions being much the same, except as to the ordination of the ministers of God. Wi.—After speaking of bishops he passes on to deacons, because priests are included in the former title ; and every thing that he has said of the first is applicable to them. Estius.

VER. 11. Women, &c. By the Greek again, sober, grave, &c. By these women are commonly understood such as had made a vow of not marrying, and who assisted at the baptism of women (Wi) ; i. e. deaconesses, who were women charged with the assistance, and sometimes with the instruction, of persons of their own sex. V.—Not given to detraction,|| or calumnies, as in the Greek. A necessary admonition. Wi.

Wi.) ; and, therefore, the Church of the living God can never uphold error, nor bring in corruptions, superstition, or idolatry. Ch.

VER. 16. Mystery of piety, meaning the mystery of the incarnation of the Son of God : and so in most Greek copies, and in S. Chrys. we read, God appeared in the flesh.¶—Taken up into glory, by Christ's glorious ascension into heaven. Wi.

CHAP. IV.

He warns him against heretics; and exhorts him to the exercise of piety.

NOW the Spirit manifestly saith, * that in the last times some shall depart from the faith, giving heed to spirits of error, and doctrines of devils.

2 Speaking lies in hypocrisy, and having their conscience seared,

3 Forbidding to marry, to abstain from meats, which God hath created to be received with thanksgiving by the faithful, and by them that have known the truth.

4 For every creature of God is good, and nothing to be rejected that is received with thanksgiving:

5 For it is sanctified by the word of God and prayer.

6 Proposing these things to the brethren, thou shalt be a good minister of Christ Jesus, nourished up in the words of faith, and of the good doctrine which thou hast attained to.

7 ^b But avoid foolish and old wives' fables: and exercise thyself to piety.

8 For bodily exercise is profitable to little: but piety is profitable to all things, having promise of the life that now is, and of that which is to come.

CHAP. IV. VER. 1. In the last times. Lit. last days; i. e. hereafter, or in days to come.—To spirits of error, and doctrines of devils; or, to seducing spirits and doctrines of devils, as in the Prot. translation. The sense must be, that men shall teach false doctrine by the suggestion of the devil. Wi.

VER. 3. Forbidding to marry, to abstain from meats, &c. Here, says S. Chrys.,* are foretold and denoted the heretics called Eucratites, the Marcionites, Manichæans, &c., who condemned all marriages as evil, as may be seen in S. Ireneus, Epiphanius, S. Aug., Theodoret, &c. These heretics held a god who was the author of good things, and another god who was the author or cause of all evils; among the latter they reckoned marriages, flesh-meats, wine, &c. The doctrine of Catholics is quite different, when they condemn the marriages of priests and of such as have made a vow to God to lead always a single life; or when the Church forbids persons to eat flesh in Lent, or on fasting-days, unless their health require.

We hold that marriage itself is not only honourable, but a sacrament of Divine institution. We believe and profess that the same only true God is the author of all creatures which are good of themselves; that all eatables are to be eaten with thanksgiving, and none of them to be rejected, as coming from the author of evil. When we condemn priests for marrying, it is for breaking their vows and promises made to God of living unmarried, and of leading a more perfect life: we condemn them with the Scripture, which teaches us that vows made are to be kept; with S. Paul, who in the next chap. (ver. 12) teacheth us, that they who break such vows incur their damnation. When the Church, which we are commanded to obey, enjoys an abstinence from flesh, or puts a restraint as to the times of eating on days of humiliation and fasting, it is by way of self-denial and mortification: so that it is not the meats, but the transgression of the precept, that on such occasions defiles the consciences of the transgressors. Wi.—S. Paul here speaks of the Gnostics and other ancient heretics, who absolutely condemned marriage and the use of all kind of meat, because they pretended that all flesh was from an evil principle: whereas the Church of God, so far from condemning marriage, holds it a holy sacrament, and forbids it to none but such as by vow have chosen the better part; and prohibits not the use of any meats whatsoever, in proper times and seasons, though she does not judge all kinds of diet proper for days of fasting and penance. Ch.

VER. 5. It is sanctified by the word of God, and prayer. That is, praying that they may not, by the abuse we make of them, be an occasion to us of sinning and offending God. Wi.—The use of all kinds of meat is in itself good; but if it 12 Let no man despise thy youth, but be thou an example of the faithful, in word, in conversation, in charity, in faith, in chastity.

13 Till I come, attend to reading, to exhortation, and to doctrine.

14 Neglect not the grace which is in thee, which was given thee by prophecy, with the imposition of the hands of the priesthood.

15 Meditate on these things: be wholly in these things: that thy proficiency may be manifest to all.

16 Attend to thyself and to doctrine: be earnest in them. For in doing this thou shalt both save thyself and them that hear thee.

VER. 14. Neglect not the grace. The Greek seems to imply the gifts of the Holy Ghost, given by the sacraments,† by prophecy; which may signify, when the gift of preaching or expounding prophets was bestowed upon thee.—With the imposition of the hands of the priesthood. Some expound it, when thou didst receive the order of priesthood, or wast made bishop; but the sense rather seems to be, when the hands of priests of the first order (i. e. of bishops) were laid upon thee, according to S. Chrysostom. Wi.—S. Austin saith that no man can doubt whether holy orders be a sacrament; and that no one may argue that he uses the term improperly, and without due precision, he joineth this sacrament in nature and name with baptism. 8 But if any man have not care of his own, and especially of those of his house, he hath denied the faith, and is worse than an infidel.

9 Let a widow be chosen, not under threescore years of age, who hath been the wife of one husband,

11 But the younger widows shun: For when they have grown wanton in Christ, they will marry:

12 Having damnation, because they have made void their first faith.

13 And withal being idle, they learn to go about from house to house: not only idle, but tattlers also, and inquisitive, speaking things which they ought not.

14 I will, therefore, that the younger should marry, bear children, be mistresses of families, give no occasion to the adversary to speak evil.

15 For some are already turned aside after satan.

plenty) is dead while she is living, by the spiritual death of her soul in sin. See S. Chrys., with no less eloquence than piety, expounding this riddle, as he terms it, to wit, what it is to be at the same time alive and dead. Wi.

VER. 8. He hath denied the faith, (not in words, but in his actions,) and is worse than an infidel; nay, even than brutes, that take care of their young ones. Wi.—Faith may be renounced either by words or by actions, when our conduct shows that in our hearts we really do not believe what would otherwise influence our lives. Calmet.

VER. 9. Not under threescore years of age. Some think he speaks only of such a widow as was placed over all the rest: but the common exposition is of all such widows as were maintained in that manner, who made a vow of chastity, who assisted the ministers of the Church in looking to the poor, and in the administering baptism to women.—Who hath been the wife of one husband; i. e. hath never been married but once. Wi.

VER. 11. As for the younger widows, § admit them not into that number; for when they have grown wanton in Christ, which may signify in the Church of Christ, or as others translate, against Christ; when they have been nourished in plenty, indulging their appetite in eating and drinking, in company and conversation, in private familiarities, and even sometimes in sacrilegious fornications against Christ and their vows, they are for marrying again. See S. Jerom. Wi.

VER. 12. Having, or incurring and making themselves liable to, damnation, by a breach of their first faith, their vow or promise (Wi.), by which they had engaged themselves to Christ. Ch.

VER. 13. Idle, &c. He shows by what steps they fall. Neglecting their prayers, they give themselves to idleness; they go about visiting from house to house; they are carried away with curiosity to hear what passes, and speak what they ought not of their neighbour's faults. Wi.

VER. 14. The younger || (widows) should marry. They who understand this of a command or exhortation to all widows to marry, make S. Paul contradict himself, and the advice he gave to widows 1 Cor. vii., where he says, (ver. 40,) She (the widow) will be more happy if she so remain according to my counsel, and when it is there said, I would have all to be as myself. [See the notes on those places.] He can therefore only mean such young widows, of whom he is speaking, that are like to do worse. Thus it is expounded by S. Jerom to Sabina, ¶ “Let her rather take a husband than the devil.” And in another Epistle, to Ageruchia, “It is better to take a second husband than many adulterers.” S. Chrys., on this verse, “I will, or would, have such to marry, because they themselves will do it.” See also S. Aug.†† de Bono Viduat. c. 8. Wi.

VER. 15. For some are already turned aside after satan, by breaking the vows they had made. “Yet it does not follow, (says S. Aug. in the same place,) that they who abstain not from such sins may marry after their vows. They might indeed marry before they vowed; but this being done, unless they keep them they justly incur damnation.” How different was the doctrine and practice of the first and chief of the late pretended reformers, who were many of them apostates after such vows? Wi.

VER. 17, 18. The priests, or the ancient ministers, (i. e. bishops, priests, &c.,) serve a double honour; i. e. to be more liberally supplied and maintained by the 22 Impose not hands lightly upon any man, neither be partaker of other men's sins. Keep thyself chaste.

23 Do not still drink water, but use a little wine for thy stomach's sake, and thy frequent infirmities.

Happy the church where there is no further difference found than between the liberality of the former and the disinterestedness of the latter!

VER. 4. But sick about questions,* unprofitable disputes, blasphemies, which may either signify against God, or railing one against another, conflicts, &c.,† and dissensions of men corrupted in their minds : such is the character and description he gives of those ancient heretics, which agrees to heretics in general. Wi.

VER. 5. Esteeming gain to be piety.‡ The sense is the same, that they make a show of piety only for gain-sake. Wi.

VER. 6. But piety with sufficiency, or when a man hath what is sufficient to support his necessities, is certainly great gain, is accompanied with the most valuable advantages, the treasure of a good conscience, a peace of mind, the grace of God, and hereafter a recompense of eternal glory. Wi.

VER. 9. For they who would become rich.§ He does not say, as S. Chrys. observes, they who are rich ; as persons may be rich, and make good use of their riches to God's honour, and the good of others. But such as would be rich, who seek riches, and have their heart and affections upon riches, fall into various temptations of injustice, of pride, and vanity, into hurtful lusts, which drown and plunge || men into perdition, &c. Wi.

VER. 10. The root of all evils is covetousness,¶ or the love of money, as it is in the Greek ; a covetous man being ready to sacrifice his soul for money. Wi.

VER. 11. But thou, O man of God. This, says S. Chrys., is one of the highest titles and commendations that can be given to any man. So are called Samuel, Elias, Elisens. 1 Kings ii., and ix. ; 3 Kings xxxiii. Wi.

VER. 12. Fight the good fight. Lit. strive †† a good strife. S. Paul often-times brings this comparison of men striving for a prize.—And hast confessed a good confession before many witnesses, not only when baptized, not only when thou wast ordained a bishop, but by thy constancy and sufferings and persecutions, says S. Chrys., though we know not the particulars. Wi.

VER. 14. That thou keep the commandment. Some understand that of fighting manfully ; others, of loving God ; others rather comprehend all that S. Paul had commanded him, and all the instructions given.—Unto the coming of our Lord ; †† which coming he in due time will show. This is the construction by the Greek. Wi.

VER. 16. Who only hath immortality ; i. e. is immortal of himself, and by his own nature.—Light inaccessible ; to human eyes or understandings. Wi.

VER. 17. Charge the rich of this world not to confide in such uncertain goods ; to strive to be rich in good works ; to communicate §§ in lending, assisting, giving to others, by which they will lay up an everlasting treasure. Wi.

VER. 20. O Timothy, keep that which is committed ||| to thy trust. He does not mean his charge of bishop, nor the graces of God, but the true and sound doctrine delivered to him either by writing or word of mouth, according to the common interpretation. See S. Chrys., Vincentius Lirinensis, Communitorii, c. 17. This is confirmed by the following words, avoiding the profane ¶¶ of words (in life whereunto thou art called, and hast confessed a good confession before many witnesses.

13 I charge thee before God, who quickeneth all things, and before Christ Jesus, who gave testimony under Pontius Pilate ; a good confession :

14 That thou keep the commandment without spot, blameless, unto the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ :

15 Which in his times he shall show,^a who is the Blessed and only Mighty, the King of kings, and Lord of lords :

16 Who only hath immortality, and inhabiteth light inaccessible, ^e whom no man hath seen, nor can see : to whom be honour and empire everlasting. Amen.

17 Charge the rich of this world not to be high-minded, ^f nor to hope in uncertain riches, but in the living God (who giveth us abundantly all things to enjoy)

18 To do good, to be rich in good works, to distribute readily, to communicate to others.

19 To lay up in store for themselves a good foundation against the time to come, that they may obtain true life.

20 O Timothy, keep that which is committed to thy trust, avoiding the profane novelties of words, and oppositions of knowledge falsely so called,

21 Which some promising, have erred concerning the faith. Grace be with thee. Amen.

the Greek empty, vain, babbling). The apostle here condemns new words, which change the doctrine ; but sometimes to express the ancient doctrine, new words may be found necessary, as those of trinity, incarnation, consubstantiality, transubstantiation, &c., as S. Athan., S. Aug., and others observed. See 2 Tim. i. 14. —Oppositions of knowledge falsely so  called. S. Chrys. understands in particular the errors of the Gnostics, so called from the same Greek word, who were the successors of Simon Magus. But they perhaps having not the name when S. Paul wrote, we may rather understand heretics in general, who all pretend to an uncommon knowledge in Scriptures, when they follow their own private judgment, and so fall from the faith. Wi.—Keep the deposit, viz. of faith, which has been committed to thee. Throughout this whole Epistle the apostle beseeches Timothy, in the most earnest manner, as a guardian of the faith, to preserve it without change. He every where condemns sects, heresies, and change in faith. It would be well for the modern religionists to inform us and themselves why S. Paul is so particular in insisting upon union of faith, under pain of damnation, if it was the intention of Christ that men should differ on questions of religion. Let them tell us what S. Paul means, or else say plainly that they differ from the apostle's religion, and have formed theirs upon a more liberal scale. A.

SECOND EPISTLE OF S. PAUL, THE APOSTLE,

TO TIMOTHY.

The main subject and design of this Epistle is much the same as the former; in which the apostle again instructs and admonishes Timothy in what belonged to his office, and also warns him to shun the conversation of those who had erred from the truth, describing at the same time their character. He tells him of his approaching death, and desires him to come speedily to him. It appears from this circumstance, that he wrote this Second Epistle in the time of his last imprisonment at Rome, and not long before his martyrdom. See Euseb., S. Jerom, and others cited by Tillemont, and by P. Maudite, (Diss. 11,) where this historical fact is discussed at large. Ch. Wi.

CHAPTER I.

He admonishes him to stir up the grace he received by his ordination, and not to be discouraged at his sufferings, but to hold firm the sound doctrine of the gospel.

PAUL, an apostle of Jesus Christ, by the will of God, according to the promise of life, which is in Christ Jesus:

2 To Timothy, my dearly beloved son, grace, mercy, peace from God the Father, and from Christ Jesus, our Lord.

3 I give thanks to God, whom I serve from my forefathers with a pure conscience, that without ceasing I have a remembrance of thee in my prayers, night and day.

4 Desiring to see thee, being mindful of thy tears, that I may be filled with joy,

5 Calling to mind that faith which is in thee unfeigned, which also dwelt first in thy grandmother, Lois, and in thy mother, Eunice, and I am certain that in thee also.

6 For which cause I admonish thee, that thou stir up the grace of God, which is in thee, by the imposition of my hands.

7 *For God hath not given us the spirit of fear: but of power, and of love, and of sobriety.

8 Be not thou, therefore, ashamed of the testimony of our Lord, nor of me, his prisoner: but labour with the gospel, according to the power of God:

9 Who hath delivered us and called us by his holy a Rom. viii. 15.—b Tit. iii. 5.

CHAP. I. VER. 5. Thy grandmother, Lois. The principal intention S. Paul seems to have had in writing this Second Epistle to Timothy, was, to comfort him under the many hardships under which he laboured for the faith of Christ. To this end he endeavours first to strengthen his faith, by calling to his mind the example given him in his grandmother, as also in his mother, Eunice. *Certain * that in thee also.* Wi.

VER. 6. That thou stir up† the grace of God. In the Greek is a metaphor for fire that is blown up again.—Which is in thee, by the imposition of my hands, when thou wast ordained bishop. Wi.—The grace, which S. Paul here exhorts Timothy to stir up in him, was the grace he had received by imposition of hands, either in his confirmation, or at receiving the sacrament of orders, being a bishop.

VER. 7. Of fear.‡ Of a cowardly fear, and want of courage.—Of sobriety.§ Though the Protestants here translate of a sound mind, yet they translate the same Greek word by sobriety in divers other places, as Acts xxvi. 25; 1 Tim. ii. 9, and 15, and iii. 2; Tit. i. 8, &c. Wi.

VER. 8. Labour with || the gospel. That is, labour with me in preaching, &c. Or by the Greek, be partner with me in suffering. Wi.

VER. 10. By the illumination of our Saviour. That is, by the bright coming and appearing of our Saviour. Ch.

VER. 12. I am certain that he (God) is able to keep that which I have com- calling,^b not according to our works, but according to his own purpose and grace, which was given us in Christ Jesus, before the times of the world.

10 But now is made manifest, by the illumination of our Saviour Jesus Christ, who hath indeed destroyed death, and hath enlightened life and incorruption by the gospel:

11 In which ^cI am appointed a preacher and an apostle, and a teacher of the Gentiles.

12 For which cause I also suffer these things, but I am not confounded. For I know whom I have believed, and I am certain that he is able to keep that which I have committed to him, against that day.

13 Hold the form of sound words, which thou hast heard from me in faith, and in the love which is in Christ Jesus.

14 Keep the good deposited in trust to thee by the Holy Ghost, who dwelleth in us.

15 Thou knowest this, that all they who are in Asia are turned away from me: of whom are Phigellus and Hermogenes.

16 The Lord give mercy to the ^dhouse of Onesiphorus: because he hath often refreshed me, and was not ashamed of my chain:

17 But when he was come to Rome, he carefully sought me out, and found me.

18 The Lord grant to him to find mercy of the Lord mitted to him,¶ against that day. That is, to the day of judgment. S. Paul here means that which he had committed, or as it were deposited in the hands of God; to wit, the treasure of an eternal reward, due in some measure to S. Paul for his apostolical labours. This treasure, promised to those that live well, the apostle hopes he has placed and deposited in the hands of God, who will reward him, and repay him at the last day. This is the common interpretation. Wi.

VER. 14. Keep the good (doctrine) deposited, or committed  in trust to thee. This is different, though the word be the same, from what he spoke of, ver. 12. There he mentioned what he had committed, and deposited in the hands of God: here he speaks of what God hath committed, and deposited in the hands of Timothy, after it was delivered to him by S. Paul and the other preachers of the gospel: that is, he speaks of the care Timothy must take to preserve the same sound doctrine, and to teach it to others. See 1 Tim. vi. 20. Wi.

VER. 15. Phigellus, &c. These two, whom S. Paul says were the chief of those in Asia Minor, who had departed from the faith, had become his followers by deceit, in order to become acquainted with the mysteries of religion, taught by him, intending to make use of them, as affording them matter for calumniating him. Dion. Carthus.

VER. 16. Onesiphorus. This person, also an inhabitant of Asia, seems to have supplied S. Paul with necessaries, as well at Rome during his confinement, as at Ephesus. Dion. Carthus.

in that day. And how many things, he ministered to me at Ephesus, thou very well knowest.

CHAP. II.

He exhorts him to diligence in his office : and patience in sufferings. The danger of the delusions of heretics.

THOU, therefore, my son, be strong in the grace which is in Christ Jesus :

2 And the things, which thou hast heard from me before many witnesses, the same commend to faithful men, who shall be fit to teach others also.

3 Labour as a good soldier of Christ Jesus.

4 No man being a soldier to God, entangleth himself with worldly businesses : that he may please him to whom he hath engaged himself.

5 For he also that striveth for the mastery, is not crowned, except he strive lawfully.

6 The husbandman, who laboureth, must first partake of the fruits.

7 Understand what I say : for the Lord will give thee understanding in all things.

8 Be mindful that the Lord Jesus Christ is risen from the dead, of the seed of David according to my gospel,

9 In which I labour even unto chains, as an evil doer : but the word of God is not bound.

10 Therefore I suffer all things for the sake of the elect, that they also may obtain the salvation, which is in Christ Jesus, with heavenly glory.

11 A faithful saying : For if we be dead with him, we shall live also with him :

12 If we suffer we shall also reign with him : ^a if we deny him, he also will deny us.

CHAP. II. VER. 1. The grace which is in Christ Jesus ; i. e. which is in thee by Christ Jesus. Wi.

VER. 3. *Labour. The Greek word implies, take pains in suffering ; as chap. i. 3.—As a good soldier, &c. The apostle bringeth three comparisons : 1. Of a soldier ; 2. Of one that strives and runs for a prize ; 3. Of a husbandman. Wi.

VER. 4. No man . . . entangleth himself with worldly businesses ; with other affairs of the world : much less must the soldier of Christ, who striveth,† (better than fighteth,) which belongs to the first comparison. Wi.

VER. 6. The husbandman, who laboureth, must first partake. Both the Latin and Greek text admits of two interpretations : the sense may either be, that it is fitting the husbandman partake first and before others of the fruits of his labours, or that he must first labour and then partake. Wi.

VER. 7. The Lord will give thee understanding.§ In some Greek copies, may he give thee. Wi.

VER. 8. According to my gospel. He seems to understand his preaching. Wi.

VER. 10. The elect. By the elect we need not always understand those predestinated to eternal glory, but chosen or called to the true faith ; and this must rather be the meaning of S. Paul in this place, who could not distinguish between those predestinated to glory and others. Wi.

VER. 11, &c. If we be dead with him, to sin, or, as others expound it, by martyrdom, we shall live also, and reign with him in heaven. But if we deny him, by renouncing our faith, or by a wicked life, he also will deny us, and disown us hereafter. See Matt. x. 33. Wi.

VER. 13. If we believe not ; i. e. if we refuse to believe in God, or if, after having believed, we depart from our faith, the Almighty still continues faithful ; he is still what he was. Our believing in him cannot increase his glory, nor can our disbelief in him cause any diminution thereof, since it is already infinite. Estius.

VER. 15. Thyself approved.|| or acceptable to God.—Rightly handling.¶ In the Greek, cutting or dividing the word of truth, according to the capacities of the 13 ^b If we believe not, he continueth faithful, he can not deny himself.

14 Of these things put them in mind, testifying before the Lord. Contend not in words : for it is to no profit, but to the subversion of the hearers.

15 Carefully study to present thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly handling the word of truth.

16 But shun profane and vain speeches : for they grow much towards impiety :

17 And their speech spreadeth like a cancer : of whom are Hymeneus and Philetus, 18 Who have erred from the truth, saying that the resurrection is past already, and have subverted the faith of some.

19 But the sure foundation of God standeth firm, having this seal : The Lord knoweth who are his ; and let every one that nameth the name of the Lord, depart from iniquity.

20 But in a great house there are not only vessels of gold and of silver, but also of wood and of earth ; and some indeed unto honour, but some unto dishonour.

21 If any man, therefore, shall cleanse himself from these, he shall be a vessel unto honour, sanctified and profitable to the Lord, prepared unto every good work.

22 But flee thou youthful desires, and follow justice, faith, charity, and peace with those who call on the Lord from a pure heart.

23 ^c And avoid foolish and unlearned questions : knowing that they beget strifes.

24 But the servant of the Lord must not wrangle : but be gentle towards all men, fit to teach, patient, hearers, and for the good of all. Wi.—The Prot. version has, dividing the word of truth. All Christians challenge Scriptures, but the whole is in the rightly handling them. Heretics change and adulterate them, as the same apostle affirms, 2 Cor. xi. 4. These he admonishes us (as he did before, 1 Tim. vi. 20) to avoid, for they have a popular way of expression, by which the unlearned are easily beguiled. “ Nothing is so easy,” says S. Jerom, “ as with a facility and volubility of speech to deceive the illiterate, who are apt to admire what they cannot comprehend.” Ep. 2. ad Nepot. c. 10.

^c 1 Tim. i. 4, and 7 ; Tit. iii. 9.

VER. 16. *Vain speeches, or vain babbling. He seems to hint at the disciples of the magician, and their fables. Wi.

VER. 17. Like a cancer ; †† others say a canker or gangrene, a distemper that eats the flesh and parts affected. Wi.

VER. 18. Saying that the resurrection is past already. It is uncertain what these heretics meant. Some say they held no resurrection, but that by which some died and some were born. Others, that they admitted no resurrection but that by baptism from sin. Others, that they called what is related in the gospel, that many bodies of the saints rose, at Christ's death, the only resurrection. Wi.

VER. 19. But the sure foundation of God and of the Christian faith standeth firm, though some fall from it, and will stand to the end of the world, the Church being built on a rock, and upon the promises of Christ, which cannot fail.—Having this seal : The Lord knoweth who are his. The words are applied from Num. xvi. 5. The sense is, that the faith and Church of Christ cannot fail, because God has decreed and promised to remain with his Church, and especially to protect his elect, to the end of the world. To know his, here, is not only to have a knowledge, but is accompanied with a love and singular protection over them, with such graces as shall make them persevere to the end. Wi.

VER. 20. In a great house there are, &c. Though S. Chrys., by a great house, understands the world, and seems to think that in the Church there are none but precious vessels of gold and of silver, yet this is only true of the perfect part of the Church, as it comprehends the elect only. The common exposition, by the great house, understands the Catholic Church of Christ here upon earth, in which are mixed both vessels of gold and of earth, both good and bad ; both the faithful that will be saved, and others that will be lost by not persevering in the faith and grace of Christ. Wi.

VER. 21. Man, we see here, hath free-will to make himself a vessel of salvation or reprobation ; though salvation be attributed to God's mercy, the other to his justice, neither repugnant to our free-will, but working, with and by the same, all such effects in us, as to his providence and our deserts are agreeable. B.

VER. 24. Fit to teach †† and instruct others. Wi.

25 With modesty admonishing those who resist the truth: if at any time God give them repentance to know the truth,

26 And they recover themselves from the snares of the devil, by whom they are held captives at his will.

CHAP. III.

The character of heretics of latter days: he exhorts Timothy to constancy. Of the great profit of the knowledge of the Scriptures.

KNOW also this, that, ^ain the last days, shall come dangerous times:

2 Men shall be lovers of themselves, covetous, haughty, proud, blasphemers, disobedient to parents, ungrateful, wicked,

3 Without affection, without peace, slanderers, incontinent, unmerciful, without kindness.

4 Traitors, stubborn, puffed up, and lovers of pleasures more than of God:

5 Having an appearance indeed of piety, but denying the power thereof. Now these avoid:

6 For of this sort are they who creep into houses, and lead captives silly women loaden with sins, who are led away with divers desires:

7 Always learning, and never attaining to the knowledge of the truth.

^a 1 Tim. iv. 1; 2 Pet. iii. 3; Jude 18.

VER. 25. If at any time §§ God may touch the hearts of those who believe not, or who lead a wicked life. Wi.—In the Greek it is μηποτε, lest; that is, correct those who resist the truth, in hopes that God will some time bring them by repentance to the knowledge of the truth. The Greek does not express a fear that they will repent, but a certain doubt, mixed with strong hope and earnest desire of their conversion. Conversion from sin and heresy is the gift of God, yet we see good exhortations and prayers are available thereto; which would not be the case if we had not free-will.

VER. 26. By whom they are held captives ||| at his will: for sinners wilfully put themselves under the slavery of the devil, and wilfully remain in it. The Greek signifies that they are taken alive in the devil's nets. Wi.

CHAP. III. VER. 1. Know. Do not be troubled at the many evils, persecutions, and heresies, which rise up against the Church. There have ever existed such since the Church was first established, and such ever will exist. Did not Jannes and Mambres rise up against Moses? Calmet. See 1 Tim. iv. 1; 2 Pet. iii. 3; Jude 18.—That in the last days. It only signifies hereafter. And the advice S. Paul gives to Timothy, (ver. 5,) now these avoid; shows that some of those false teachers should come in S. Timothy's days. We may observe that few agree exactly in translating or expounding the sense of so many Greek or Latin words, which express the vices of such heretics; but the difference is so small, that it need not be taken notice of. Wi.

VER. 2. S. Cyprian, expounding these words, says, "Let no faithful man, who keepeth in mind our Lord's and apostle's admonition, marvel, if he see in latter times proud and stubborn men, enemies of God's priests, go out of the Church to attack the same, since both our Lord and his apostle have predicted that such things would be."

VER. 5. Having an appearance indeed of piety, in some things, as we may see heretics affect to be thought more exact than the Catholics in some things, by which the devil more easily deceives souls, but denying by their lives the power, virtue, and force of piety. Wi.—These avoid. S. Paul having in the preceding verses described the vices and enormities which were to reign in the world in the latter days, here warns Timothy, that already people given to such extravagancies were in the world, and that consequently in regard of Timothy, those days were already come. Chrysos., Theophyl., &c.

VER. 6. Of this sort, &c. Here S. Paul gives a true description of heretics, and evil men; such as they have existed in every age. For there never existed a 8 Now as ^bJannes and Mambres resisted Moses: so these also resist the truth, men corrupted in mind, reprobate as to the faith.

9 But they shall proceed no farther: for their folly shall be manifest to all, as theirs also was.

10 But thou hast fully known my doctrine, manner of life, purpose, faith, long-suffering, love, patience, 11 Persecutions, afflictions: ^csuch as came upon me at Antioch, Iconium, and at Lystra: what persecutions I endured, and out of all the Lord delivered me.

12 And all who will live piously in Christ Jesus, shall suffer persecution.

13 But evil men, and seducers, shall grow worse and worse: erring, and driving into error.

14 But continue thou in the things which thou hast learned, and which have been committed to thee: knowing of whom thou hast learned.

15 And because from thy infancy thou hast known the holy Scriptures, which can instruct thee unto salvation, through the faith which is in Christ Jesus.

16 ^dAll Scripture divinely inspired is profitable to teach, to reprove, to correct, to instruct in justice:

time, either under the Old or New Testaments, in which such have not appeared. Calmet.—Who creep ^ainto houses, and lead captives silly women, &c. That is the custom of almost all heretics. See S. Jerom to Ctesiphon, tom. 4. part 2, p. 477, nov. edit., where he brings a number of instances, from Simon Magus to his time. Wi.

VER. 8. Jannes and Mambres. The names of magicians, who in Egypt resisted Moses, says S. Chrys., and though not mentioned in the Scriptures, their names might be known by tradition. Wi.—These magicians are called by different names. The Greek has Jannes and Jambres. Some ancient writers, Jannes and Mambres; as Cyprian, Optatus, (c. 7,) Born., &c. The Jews call that Joanne, or Johanna, whom the Greeks name Jannes; and that called by the Jews Jambres, the Greeks name Mambres. The Hebrews would have them to be the sons of Balaam, the soothsayer, and the masters of Moses in the sciences of the Egyptians. Calmet.

VER. 9. But they shall proceed no farther. S. Paul shows what will be the fate of all heresies; and the annals of the Church prove good his words, that they will appear to flourish for a time, and then will die away and be forgotten.

VER. 14. But continue thou in the things which thou hast learned, &c. S. Paul here gives particular advice to his disciple, S. Timothy, who had been long since instructed in all the truths and mysteries of the Christian faith, who had received the gifts of the Holy Ghost, of prophecy, of interpreting the Scriptures, who was a priest, a bishop of Ephesus, the metropolis of Asia, whose office it was to instruct, direct, and convert others. He tells this great bishop, that the holy Scriptures are able, and may conduce or can instruct him unto salvation, (ver. 15,) unto his own salvation and that of others. Wi.—The apostle here entreats his disciple, and in him all future Christians, to adhere to the true deposit of doctrine. He teaches, with Catholics, that all Scripture is profitable; but not with Protestants, that Scripture alone is necessary and sufficient.

VER. 16. All Scripture divinely inspired is profitable to teach, to reprove, to correct, or admonish, to instruct others in justice, and in the ways of virtue, that thus he who is a man of God, a minister of the gospel, may be perfect and instructed unto every good work. But when our adversaries of the pretended reformation, undertake from these four verses to show, first, that every ignorant man or woman is hereby warranted to read and put what construction his or her private spirit, or private judgment, suggests upon all places of the Holy Scriptures; and secondly, that the Scriptures alone contain all truths which a Christian is bound to believe; or at least, that the Scriptures teach him all things necessary to salvation, without regard to the interpretation and authority of the Catholic Church: I may at least say (without examining at present any other pretended grounds of these assertions) that these consequences are very remote from the text and sense of S. Paul in this place. As to the first, does this follow: the Scriptures must be read by Timothy a priest, a bishop, a man of God, a minister of the gospel, whose office it is to instruct and convert others, therefore they are proper to be read and expounded by every ignorant man or woman? Does not S. Paul say elsewhere, (2 Cor. ii. 17,) that many adulterate and corrupt the word of God? does not S. Peter tell us also, (2 Pet. iii. 16,) that in S. Paul's Epistles are some things . . . which the unlearned and unstable wrest, as also the other Scriptures, to their own perdition? See the preface to S. John, where reasons are brought for which it was requisite that the Church should put some restraint to the abuse which the ignorant made of reading the Scriptures in vulgar tongues. As to the second consequence, does it follow every Scripture Divinely inspired is profitable for S. Timothy, for a priest, a bishop, a man of God, a minister and preacher of the gospel, to teach and instruct, and conduce to bring both him and others to salvation; therefore they contain all

His charge to Timothy : he tells him of his approaching death, and desires him to come to him.

I CHARGE thee, before God and Jesus Christ, who shall judge the living and the dead, by his coming, and his kingdom :

2 Preach the word, be instant in season, out of season, reprove, entreat, rebuke with all patience and doctrine.

3 For there shall be a time when they will not bear sound doctrine, but according to their own desires they will heap to themselves teachers, having itching ears.

4 And will turn away indeed their hearing from the truth and will be turned to fables.

5 But be thou vigilant, labour in all things, do the work of an evangelist, fulfil thy ministry. Be sober.

6 For I am even now ready to be sacrificed : and the time of my dissolution is at hand.

7 I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith.

8 For the rest, there is laid up for me a crown of justice, which the Lord, the just judge, will render to me at that day : and not to me only, but to them also who love his coming. Make haste to come speedily to me.

(things that a Christian need to believe? &c. Is not every Christian bound to believe that the books in the canon of the New and Old Testament are of Divine authority, as in particular these two Epistles of S. Paul to Timothy? Where does the Scripture assure us of this? But of this elsewhere. Wi.—Every part of Divine Scripture is certainly profitable for all these ends. But if we would have the whole rule of Christian faith and practice, we must not be content with those Scriptures which Timothy knew from his infancy, (that is, with the Old Testament alone,) nor yet with the New Testament, without taking along with it the traditions of the apostles, and the interpretation of the Church, to which the apostles delivered both the book and the true meaning of it. Ch.

CHAP. IV. VER. 1 *By his coming. The sense by the Greek seems to be, who shall judge them at or by his coming, rather than I charge thee by his coming, as others translate. Wi.

VER. 2. In season,† out of season; i. e. whether the hearers are willing to hearken to thee or not. Or, as others understand it, whether it be convenient or inconvenient for thee to signify that the ministers of God must not desist from preaching, whatever troubles they are under. Wi.

VER. 3. Having itching ears; ‡ i. e. the hearers have such ears, running after novelties and such doctrine as favours their passions. Wi.

VER. 5. Be thou vigilant, &c. It may either be expounded, watch in all things; or, take pains in all things. The latter seems the true construction. Wi.—An evangelist; a diligent preacher of the gospel. Ch.—Fulfil thy ministry. § Be sober. There is nothing for this in the Greek, nor in S. Chrysostom. The Latin interpreter seems to have added it, as being contained in the other Greek words in this verse. Wi.

VER. 6. I am even now ready to be sacrificed. || Lit. to be immolated. See Phil. ii. 17.—The time of my dissolution (lit. resolution) is at hand. This makes many judge that this letter was written during his last imprisonment; but the sense perhaps may be, that being old and worn out with labours, he could not live long. Wi.

VER. 7. I have fought a good fight, or strived a good strife. ¶ The Latin and Greek may signify any kind of striving for a prize.—I have kept the faith, not only the Christian faith, but been faithful in my office. Wi.

VER. 8. A crown of justice, which the Lord, the just judge, will render to me. These words confirm the Catholic doctrine, that good works performed with the assistance of God's grace, deserve and are meritorious of a reward in heaven : it is what is signified, 1. by a crown of justice; 2. from a just judge; 3. which he will render or give as a reward. Yet we own, with S. Aug., that we have no merit, but what is also a gift of God from his grace and mercy, and grounded on his promises. Wi.

VER. 9. Demas hath, &c. The Demas here mentioned, is the same that was at Rome with S. Paul in his first voyage, in 61 or 62, and of whom he makes mention in his Epistle to the Colossians, (iv. 14,) also in that to Philemon, ver. 24. He was perverted in this last voyage, in 65, and abandoned his master in time of danger. It is not ascertained whether he entirely renounced his faith, or whether 17 But the Lord stood by me and strengthened me, that by me the preaching may be accomplished, and that all the Gentiles may hear : and I was delivered from the mouth of the lion.

18 The Lord hath delivered me from every evil work : and will preserve me unto his heavenly kingdom, to whom be glory for ever and ever. Amen.

God gave him grace to rise from his fall; or whether the love of the world, with which S. Paul here reproaches him, was only a passing fault, and an effect of pure human infirmity. Calmet.—Loving this world; i. e. his safety, and to avoid persecutions. Wi.

VER. 10. Crescens into Galatia, Titus, &c. These two did not abandon the faith, but only left S. Paul to preach the gospel, with his consent. Crescens went from Rome into Galatia, or into Gaul, as it is found written in the Greek. Theodoret, Eusebius, Epiphanius, &c., say that Galatia, in the Greek, is often put for Gaul, in profane authors. On this account it is said by some that Crescens preached in Gaul. Adon makes him founder of the Church of Vienne, in Dauphine; an opinion still prevalent in that city. The feast of S. Crescens is kept by the Latin Church, on the 27th of June. Calmet.—As to Titus, it cannot be doubted but he went into Dalmatia for the purpose of the ministry, and by the order of S. Paul. Thence it seems most probable that he went into Crete, where he governed the Church as a bishop, and there died.—Theod., S. Chrys., Theophyl., Est., &c.

VER. 11. Luke. S. Luke was always much attached to S. Paul. It is thought he accompanied him to the time of his martyrdom.—Mark. This is John Mark, cousin of Barnabas, of whom mention has been made, Acts xiii. 12, &c., also Col. iv. 10. He rather wavered in faith at the beginning, but was afterwards much attached to the apostle. Calmet.

VER. 12. Tychicus. Theodoret and some others have inferred from this verse that Timothy was not at Ephesus at this time; otherwise S. Paul would have here said, I have sent Tychicus to thee. Timothy, in quality of bishop of Ephesus, had the inspection of the whole province of Asia; hence S. Paul might have presumed that Tychicus would not be able to find him in that city. But these reasons do not appear sufficiently convincing. Tychicus might have been the bearer of this Epistle; then S. Paul might say, I have sent him to carry it. Or S. Paul might have sent him before, and here tells Timothy of it; because, on account of the distance of Rome from Ephesus, he might not have yet heard of his arrival. Mention has been made of Tychicus before, Acts xx. 4; Eph. vi. 21; Col. iv. 7. Calmet.

VER. 13. The cloak, which I left at Troas. It is expounded a cloak by S. Chrys., S. Jerom., &c. Others think he may mean some coffer, or trunk, in which were his books, and some things that he valued. Wi.

VER. 14. The Lord will render †† to him. We read shall render, not only in the Latin and Syriac, but also in divers Greek MSS., which Dr. Wells again prefers before the ordinary Greek copies, in which we read, The Lord render or reward him, as in the Prot. translation. If that was the true reading, we must take the words by way of a prophecy, and not as an imprecation or curse. Wi.

VER. 17. The Lord stood, &c. All agree that Nero is here meant by the lion. S. Chrys. thinks that S. Paul was set at liberty after this first justification of his conduct, but that having afterwards converted the cup-bearer of Nero, he was by him beheaded. S. Chrys., hom. 10, p. 611.—The times predicted by the apostle in this Epistle (ver. 3 and 4) are now arrived; and the warnings he gives to Timothy and to all preachers of the word, should be sedulously attended to: preach the word : be instant in season and out of season. reprove, entreat, rebuke with all patience and doctrine. There will arrive a time when men will not bear sound doctrine; eager in the extreme to hear what flatters, they will have recourse to a variety of teachers not lawfully sent or ordained, calculated to tickle their ears: Assentatores populi, multitudinis levitatem voluptate quasi titillantes. THE

EPISTLE OF S. PAUL, THE APOSTLE,

TO TITUS.

TITUS was an uncircumcised Gentile: we know not on what occasion he attached himself to S. Paul. It is however certain that he was of great utility to S. Paul in the government of the Church. S. Paul having preached the faith in the island of Crete, left his beloved Titus there to finish the work which he had begun. Afterwards the apostle, on a journey to Nicopolis, a city of Macedonia, wrote this Epistle to Titus; in which he directs him to ordain bishops and priests for the different cities, showing him the principal qualities necessary for a bishop, also gives him particular advice for his own conduct to his flock, exhorting him to hold to strictness of discipline, but seasoned with lenity. It was written about thirty-three years after our Lord's ascension. Ch.

CHAPTER I.

What kind of men he is to ordain priests. Some men are to be sharply rebuked.

PAUL, a servant of God, and an apostle of Jesus Christ, according to the faith of the elect of God, and the acknowledging of the truth, which is according to piety:

2 Unto the hope of life everlasting, which God, who lieth not, hath promised before the times of the world:

3 But hath in due times manifested his word through preaching, which is committed to me according to the commandment of God, our Saviour.

4 To Titus, my beloved son, according to the common faith, grace and peace from God, the Father, and from Christ Jesus, our Saviour.

5 For this cause I left thee in Crete, that thou shouldst set in order the things that are wanting, and shouldst ordain priests in every city, as I also appointed thee.

6 * If any be without crime, the husband of one wife, having faithful children, not accused of luxury, nor disobedient.

7 For a bishop must be without crime, as the steward of God: not proud, not subject to anger, not given to wine, no striker, not greedy of filthy lucre:

8 But given to hospitality, gentle, sober, just, holy, continent,

9 Embracing that faithful word which is according to doctrine: that he may be able to exhort in sound doctrine, and to convince the gainsayers.

* 1 Tim. iii. 2.

CHAP. I. VER. 1. According to the faith of the elect of God; that is, of the Christians, now the elect people of God.—Truth, which is according to piety: because there may be truth also in things that regard not piety. Wi.

VER. 2. Who * lieth not, or who cannot lie, being truth itself.—Hath promised; that is, decreed to give life everlasting to his faithful servants.—Before the times of the world.† Lit. before secular times. Wi.

VER. 4. To Titus, my beloved (in the Greek, my true and † genuine) son, . . . grace and peace. In the present ordinary Greek copies is added mercy, which the Prot. translators followed; but it is judiciously omitted by Dr. Wells, as not found in the best MSS., nor in S. Chrys. Greek edition, nor in the ancient Greek and Latin Fathers. Wi.

VER. 5. That thou shouldst, &c. The sense cannot be, that he was to change any thing S. Paul had ordered, but to settle things which S. Paul had not time to do; for example, to establish priests || in the cities, that is to say, bishops, as the same are called bishops, ver. 7; and as S. Chrys. and others observe, it is evident from this very place that the word presbyter was then used to signify either priests or bishops. Wi.—That the ordaining of priests belongs only to bishops, is evident from the Acts and from S. Paul's Epistles to Timothy and Titus. It is true, S. Jerom seems to express himself as if in the primitive Church there was no great difference between priests and bishops, yet he constantly excepts giving holy orders, (Ep. 85,) as also confirming the baptized, by giving them the Holy Ghost by imposition of hands and holy chrism (Dial. cont. Lucif. c. 4); which pre-eminence he attributes to bishops only. To assert that there is no distinction between a priest and bishop is an old heresy, condemned as such by the Church. See S. Epiphanius. Hær. 75. S. Austin, Hær. 53.

VER. 6. Without crime. See the like qualifications, 1 Tim. iii. Wi.—If we consult all antiquity we shall find, that if in the early infancy of the Church some who had been once married were ordained to the ministry, we shall find that after their ordination they abstained from the use of marriage. See S. Epiph. l. 3, cont. Hær. et l. 2, Hæres. 59.

VER. 7. Not proud.¶ The Greek word is of an extensive signification, which the Protestants have translated self-willed. The Latin interpreter (2 Pet. ii. 10) for the same Greek word has put, pleasing themselves; as it were, never pleased with others, the unhappy disposition of a proud man. Wi.

10 For there are also many disobedient, vain talkers, and seducers: especially they who are of the circumcision:

11 Who must be reprov'd, who subvert whole houses, teaching things which they ought not, for filthy lucre's sake.

12 One of them, a prophet of their own, said: The Cretians are always liars, evil beasts, slothful bellies.

13 This testimony is true: wherefore rebuke them sharply, that they may be sound in the faith,

14 Not attending to Jewish fables, and commandments of men, that turn themselves away from the truth.

15 "All things are clean to the clean: but to the defiled, and the unbelievers, nothing is clean, but both their mind and their conscience are defiled.

16 They confess that they know God, but in their deeds they deny him: being abominable, and incredulous, and to every good work reprobate.

CHAP. II.

How he is to instruct both old and young. The duty of servants. The Christian's rule of life.

BUT speak thou the things that become sound doctrine:

2 That the aged men be sober, chaste, prudent, sound in faith, in charity, in patience.

3 The aged women, in like manner, in holy attire, not false accusers, not given to much wine, teaching well:

a Rom. xiv. 20.

VER. 8. Continent: though both the Latin and Greek word signify in general, one that hath abstained, or contained, and overcome himself: yet it is particularly used for such as contain themselves from carnal pleasures. Wi.

VER. 12. One of them, a prophet of their own.†† He does not mean a true prophet, but as the pretended prophets of Baal were called prophets. S. Paul understands Epimenides, a poet of Crete, who by some pagan authors was thought to know things to come; but Aristotle says, he knew only things past, not to come. The ill character he gave of the Cretians was, that they were always liars, evil beasts, slothful bellies, addicted to idleness and sensual pleasures. Wi.

VER. 13. This testimony, or character, says the apostle, is true by public fame of them, and therefore they must be rebuked sharply,‡‡ their condition and dispositions requiring it; which, therefore, is not contrary to the admonition he gave to Timothy, to be gentle towards all. 2 Tim. ii. 24. Wi.

VER. 14. Jewish fables, and commandments of men. False traditions of the Jewish doctors, which were multiplied at that time. Calvin pretended from hence, that holydays and fasting days, and all ordinances of the Catholic Church, were to be rejected as null, because they are the precepts of men. By the same argument must be rejected all laws and commands of princes and civil magistrates, as being the precepts of men. Fine doctrine! He might have remembered what S. Paul taught, (Rom. xiii.) that all power is from God; and what Christ said, (Luke x. 16,) "He that hears you, hears me," &c. He might have observed that the men the apostle here speaks of, had turned away themselves from the Christian faith. Wi.

VER. 15. All things are clean to the clean. That is, no creature is evil of its own nature; and the distinction of animals, clean and unclean, is now out of date, as are the other ceremonies of the Jewish law. And that to these unfaithful, defiled men, nothing is clean, because their consciences are defiled when they make use of them against their conscience. Wi.—But to the defiled, &c. On the contrary, the man whose soul is defiled with sin, or who lives in infidelity, never can possess purity of heart; whatever legal washings or purifications, whatever sacrifices or ceremonies of the law he may make use of, all these cannot wash away the stains of the soul. CHAP. II. VER. 2. Be sober. The Greek Fathers, Theodoret and Theophylactus, translate the word, sober, attentive, or vigilant. But Latin interpreters understand it of sobriety, in the literal meaning of the word.

VER. 3. In holy attire.* See 1 Tim. ii. 9. The Greek word is sometimes used to signify the whole constitution, or state of a man's health in all the parts of his body: here it is taken for a woman's whole exterior carriage, her gait, gesture, looks, discourse, dress, that nothing appear but what is edifying. Wi.

VER. 4. Love their husbands. This is the first lesson he wishes to be given to young women; that they should always manifest a love, an attachment, respect, and obedience, to their husbands. But it must be a chaste love. Vult ea, amore viros suos castè; vult inter virum et mulierem esse pudicam dilectionem. S. Jerom.

VER. 5. Discreet, chaste, sober. In the Greek is nothing for sober. The Latin interpreter seems to have added it, as another signification of one of the Greek words. See 1 Tim. iii. 2. Wi.

VER. 7. In gravity: to which is added, in the Prot., sincerity,† from some Greek copies; but it is left out by Dr. Wells, as being not in the best Greek MSS., nor is it in the Amsterdam edition (1711). Wi.

VER. 10. Not defrauding.‡ S. Jerom puts, not stealing. The Greek signifies private thefts. Dr. Wells, not by filehing.—That they may adorn (or give honour to) the doctrine of God, our Saviour, in all things; by whom we may understand God, i. e. Christ, God and Man, or God as common to the three Divine persons. Wi.

VER. 12. We should live soberly,§ and justly, and piously. S. Jerom puts (as in other places for the same Greek word) chastely, justly, and piously. The words comprehend man's duty to himself, to his neighbour, and towards God. Wi.

VER. 13. Waiting for the blessed hope; i. e. for the happiness of the blessed in heaven, promised and hoped for.—And coming of the glory of the great God,|| and our Saviour, Jesus Christ. The title of great God, says Dr. Wells, is here referred to our Saviour Jesus Christ, by Clem. of Alex., in Protreptico, c. 6. He might have added, and by the general consent of the Greek and Latin Fathers. S. Chrys. here cries out, "Where are now they who say that the Son is less than the Father?" S. Jerom in like manner, "Where is the serpent Arius? Where is the snake Eunomius?" And that this title of great God is here given to Jesus Christ, may be shown from the text itself, especially in the Greek; for the glorious coming, and appearance, in other places of S. Paul, is always used to signify Christ's coming to judge the world. Secondly, inasmuch as one and the same Greek article falls upon the great God and our Saviour Christ; so that even M. Simon, in a note on these words, says the construction is, and the coming of Jesus Christ, the great God, our Saviour, and blames Erasmus and Grotius for pretending that this place is not a confutation of the Arians. Wi.

VER. 14. A people particularly acceptable.¶ S. Jerom translates, an agreeable or eminent people. Wi.

Paul uses ἐπιφάνειαν for the coming of Christ to judgment. The same Greek article is put thus, τοῦ μεγάλου Θεοῦ, καὶ Σωτῆρος, and not καὶ τοῦ Σωτῆρος.

CHAP. III. VER. 1. Princes and powers. At the time S. Paul wrote this Epistle to Titus, there were many Jews, particularly the disciples of Judas of Gaulan, who maintained that the Hebrews were under no obligation of obeying any other than God, or at most the rulers of their own nation. S. Paul here admonishes them, that in conformity with the example and instruction of our Divine Saviour, they ought likewise to obey every other temporal prince set over them by the Almighty, provided they commanded nothing contrary to the law of God. VER. 4. The goodness and kindness. Lit. humanity of our Saviour. By humanity some expound Christ's appearing in his human nature, but by the Greek is meant the love of God towards mankind. Wi.

VER. 5. Not by the works, &c. S. Paul in this verse alludes to the sacrament of baptism. This text is brought by divines to prove that baptism, like every other sacrament, produces its effects by its own power, (or, as it is termed in the schola, ex opere operato,) independently of any disposition on the part of the receiver. We are saved, says the apostle, not by the works of justice, or any good works we have performed, but our salvation must be attributed solely to the mercy of our Saviour, God, manifested to us by the washing itself of regeneration and renovation of the Holy Ghost.—By the laver of regeneration, &c.† That is, of baptism, by which we are born anew the adoptive children of God, by the grace of the Holy Ghost, whom he hath poured, &c. Wi.

VER. 8. It is a faithful saying. He means what he has already said, of our being justified by the grace and mercies of God.—And of these things I will have thee to affirm † earnestly. The sense is not, I would herein confirm thee, but that he would have his disciple, Titus, to confirm and settle others in the belief of these truths, that, as it follows, they may be careful to excel in good works. Wi.

VER. 10. A man that is, &c. Many ancient copies have this passage thus, Avoid a heretic after one reprehension. S. Irenæus, Tertullian. S. Cyprian, Ambrose, &c., and many ancient Greek copies, omit a second reprehension.

VER. 11. Knowing that he that is such an one, is subverted: § a metaphor, from a house that is thrown down, even to the foundation, by the Greek. He speaks of heretics whose obstinacy seems evident; for no one is properly a heretic but who is obstinate in his errors.—And sinneth, being || condemned; or, condemned by his own judgment, when his ignorance cannot be a sufficient plea for him. Wi.—Other offenders are judged and cast out of the Church by the sentence of the pastors of the same Church. Heretics, more unhappy, run out of the Church of their own accord; and by so doing, give judgment and sentence against their own souls. Ch.

THE

EPISTLE OF S. PAUL, THE APOSTLE,

TO

PHILEMON

PHILEMON was a rich man, and of high birth. He had been converted by S. Paul, when he was preaching at Ephesus, or by his disciple Epaphras. His house was become not unlike a church. Onesimus, his slave, far from profiting of the excellent example set before him, became more wicked; he plundered his master, and flew to Rome, where S. Paul was detained in prison for the first time. He received the poor fugitive charitably, and wrote to his master in his behalf.—The letter seems to have been written in the year sixty-one, during S. Paul's first imprisonment at Rome. It contains, as S. Chrys. observes, divers profitable instructions, and marks of S. Paul's charity towards a poor fugitive servant. Erasmus says Cicero never wrote with greater eloquence. Wi.

CHAPTER I.

He commends the faith and charity of Philemon: and sends back to him his fugitive servant, whom he had converted in prison.

PAUL, a prisoner of Christ Jesus, and Timothy, our brother: to Philemon, our beloved and fellow-labourer,

2 And to Appia, our dearest sister, and to Archippus, our fellow-soldier, and to the church which is in thy house.

3 Grace to you, and peace from God, our Father, and from the Lord Jesus Christ.

4 I give thanks to my God, always making a remembrance of thee in my prayers,

5 Hearing of thy charity and faith, which thou hast in the Lord Jesus, and towards all the saints:

6 That the communication of thy faith may be made evident in the acknowledgment of every good work, which is in you through Christ Jesus.

7 For I have had great joy and consolation in thy charity: because the bowels of the saints have been refreshed by thee, brother.

8 Wherefore, though I might have much confidence in Christ Jesus to command thee that which is to the purpose:

9 For charity sake I rather beseech, thou being such a one, as Paul the aged, and now also a prisoner of Jesus Christ:

10 I beseech thee for my son, Onesimus, whom I have begotten in my chains, 11 Who heretofore was unprofitable to thee, but now profitable both to me and to thee.

CHAP. I. VER. 1. Our . . . fellow-labourer, or coadjutor. He calls him so because of the charity and zeal with which he promoted the gospel. Wi.

VER. 5. Thy charity and faith . . . in the Lord Jesus, and towards all the saints.* In the Greek is towards Jesus Christ, and towards all the saints. Wi.

VER. 6. That the communication,† that is, charitable contributions, done with a lively faith, may become evident,‡ and the good works known, which are in you; that is, done among you. This seems the sense by the following verse, where S. Paul expresseth his joy in hearing of Philemon's charity towards the saints. Wi.

VER. 8. To command thee, &c. As an apostle of Jesus Christ, I have the power even of ordering thee to forgive Onesimus, and to receive him again into favour; likewise as Paul, the aged, respect and regard being always due in a particular manner to old men; or again, as a prisoner of Jesus Christ, suffering here out of love for Jesus Christ and the faithful: I might here make use of all these different reasons to induce thee to pardon a poor fugitive slave, but I will not; I merely as a poor humble suppliant, forgetting all the dignity due to my apostleship, my grey hairs, or my chains, beseech thee to pardon him. Nor can I for a moment doubt of obtaining my request, when I consider the great charity thou hast in Jesus Christ towards all the saints. Calmet. A.

VER. 9. I rather beseech thee, thou being such a one § as Paul. That is, united to him in spirit, by the same faith and charity; I am therefore confident thou wilt not refuse the request of Paul, now an aged man, and a prisoner, for the sake of Jesus Christ. Wi.

VER. 10. I beseech thee, &c. How great is the ingenuity shown by S. Paul in this Epistle, in obtaining for Onesimus the pardon of his master, Philemon. Having in the preceding verse endeavoured by every argument which a real tenderness and compassion could inspire, and making use of every expression that could conciliate the favour of Philemon, to obtain his charitable request, he in this verse for the first time dares mention Onesimus by name; a name which he was sensible must sound harsh in the ears of one who had received an injury from him. See how he endeavours to prevent so unhappy an effect, by adding to the name every epithet that could any way tend to soften all feelings of asperity, and excite compassion and pity. I beseech thee then for my son, whom I have begotten, and that in my chains. Calmet.

VER. 11. Who heretofore was unprofitable to thee, in taking and spending what belouged to thee, yet now, after a sincere conversion, is profitable || both to me and thee: to me, by the services he has done me in prison, and the joy I have had by his conversion; and also to thee, because I know thou wouldst have been glad to 12 Whom I have sent back to thee. And do thou receive him as my own bowels:

13 Whom I would have detained with me, that for thee he might have ministered to me in the bands of the gospel:

14 But without thy counsel I would do nothing, that thy good deed might not be as it were of necessity, but voluntary.

15 For perhaps he, therefore, departed for a season from thee, that thou mightest receive him for ever:

16 Not now as a servant, but instead of a servant, a most dear brother, especially to me: but how much more to thee, both in the flesh, and in the Lord?

17 If, therefore, thou count me a partner, receive him as myself:

18 And if he hath wronged thee in any thing, or is in thy debt: put it to my account.

19 I, Paul, have written with my own hand: I will repay it: not to say to thee, that thou owest me thy own self also.

20 Yea, brother; may I enjoy thee in the Lord: refresh my bowels in the Lord.

21 Trusting in thy obedience, I have written to thee, knowing that thou wilt also do more than I say.

22 But withal prepare me also a lodging: for I hope that through your prayers I shall be given unto you.

23 Epaphras, my fellow-prisoner in Christ Jesus, salutes thee,

24 Marcus, Aristarchus, Demas, and Luke, my fellow-labourers.

25 The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with your spirit. Amen.

have rendered me all possible services thyself, and he has done them for thee; he hath supplied thy place. Wi.—S. Paul here makes an allusion to the word Onesimus, signifying useful in the Greek. He was before unprofitable, he says, to thee, contrary to the import of his name; but now he is truly an Onesimus, or useful, both to you and to me; to you indeed, by his conversion, and the resolution he now makes to serve you faithfully the remainder of his life; to me also, by the services he renders me in my chains. Calmet.

VER. 12—15. Do thou receive him as my own bowels. That is, as myself. Perhaps by the permission of God's providence (who never permits evil, but for some greater good) he departed from thee for a little while, || that thou mightest receive him for ever, being now after his conversion in a way of being made partaker with thee of the same eternal happiness. Wi.

VER. 17. If, therefore, thou count me a partner, as a brother in Christ, as a member of Christ with thee, receive him as myself. Wi.

VER. 18. If he hath wronged thee in any thing, as he doth, put it to my account, to my debtor, I will repay it, and satisfy thee for it. Wi.

VER. 19. I, Paul, have written, and testified this with my own hand. Some think he wrote the whole letter with his own hand, to make it more acceptable to Philemon.—Not to say to thee, that thou owest me thy own self, the eternal salvation of thy soul, by thy conversion to the faith of Christ. Wi.

VER. 20. Yea, brother; may I enjoy thee in the Lord, enjoy the fruits of thy friendship and love for me, and rejoice with thee. In this refresh my bowels in the Lord, grant me this satisfaction. I have written freely, and with confidence in thy obedience; that is, ready compliance, in giving him and me more than I ask, to wit, his freedom. After this, he was made a deacon, and, as some say, a bishop, and a martyr. See S. Jerom, and Tillemont in his Art. 45, on S. Paul, and his Notes 70, 71. Wi.

THE EPISTLE OF S. PAUL, THE APOSTLE.
TO THE HEBREWS.

The Catholic Church hath received this Epistle, and declared it to be part of the Canonical Scriptures of the New Testament, though some doubted of it in the first ages, especially in the Latin Church, witness S. Jerom on the 8th chap. of Isaias; Luther and most of his followers reject it, but the Calvinists and the Church of England have received it. Others, who received this Epistle in the first ages, doubted whether it was written by S. Paul, but thought it written by S. Barnaby, or by S. Clement, or S. Luke, or at least that S. Paul only furnished the matter and the order in it, and that S. Luke wrote it, and S. Paul afterwards read it and approved it. It was doubted again, whether this Epistle was first written in Hebrew, (that is, in Syro-Chaldaic, then spoken by the Jews,) or in Greek, as Estius pretends. The ancient writers say it was written in Hebrew, but that it was very soon after turned into Greek either by S. Luke or S. Clement, pope and martyr. Cornelius a Lapide thinks the Syriac which we have in the Polyglot to have been the original; but this is commonly rejected. See Tillemont on S. Paul, Art. 46, and note 72; P. Alleman on the first to the Hebrews, &c. S. Paul wrote this letter about the year 63, and either at Rome or in Italy. See chap. xii. 24. He wrote it to the Christians in Palestine, who had most of them been Jews before. This seems the reason why he puts not his name to it, nor calls himself their apostle, his name being rather odious to the Jews, and because he was chosen to be the apostle to the Gentiles. The main design is to show that every one's justification and salvation is to be hoped for by the grace and merits of Christ, and not from the law of Moses, as he had shown in his Epistles to the Galatians and the Romans, where we may observe this kind of difference: To the Galatians he shows, that true justice cannot be had from circumcision and the ceremonies of the law: to the Romans, that even the moral precepts and works of the law were insufficient without the grace of Christ: and in this to the Hebrews, he shows that our justice could not be had from the sacrifices of the old law. As to the chief contents: He exhorts them to the faith of Christ, by showing his dignity and pre-eminence above the angels, and above Moses, chap. i.—iii.; that Christ's priesthood was above that of Aaron, from the 4th to the 8th chap., ver. 6; that the new law and testament is preferable to the old, from thence to the middle of chap. x.; he commends faith by the example of the ancient Fathers, chap. xi., and in the beginning of the 12th; then he exhorts them to patience, constancy, brotherly love, &c. The like exhortations are mixed in other parts of this Epistle. Wi.—We must here remark, that our separated brethren, relying solely upon tradition, admit in general this Epistle in their canon of Scriptures, though they are necessitated to allow that for some centuries great doubts were maintained on the subject. According to Mr. Rogers, in his Defence of the Thirty-nine Articles, whilst several amongst the Protestants have rejected as apocryphal the Epistle to the Hebrews, that of James, the Second and Third of John, and Jude, others have as strenuously maintained that they ought to be admitted into the sacred canon. The Catholic Church admits them as deuterocanonical books, and of equal authority with the proto-canonical books. . . After the arguments had been justly weighed on both sides, they seem to have been admitted by a general consent of the Latin Church, as they had all along been admitted by the Greek Church. The canon, as it now stands, both of the Old and New Testament, we find enumerated in Pope Innocent's letter to Exuperius, bishop of Toulouse, an. 405, in S. Austin. (1. 2, de Doct. Christ. c. 8,) and in the decrees of an African Council, an. 419, consisting of two hundred and seventeen bishops, who declare that in giving a catalogue of the Holy Scriptures, they only confirm and ratify what they had received of their Fathers. This canon is attributed to the third Council of Carthage, an. 397. For a very satisfactory account respecting the authenticity and inspiration of this Epistle, as also for an excellent commentary, with notes moral, doctrinal, and critical, see a late work entitled An Explanation of S. Paul's Epistle to the Hebrews, by the Rev. Henry Rutter.

CHAPTER I.

And spoke of old by the prophets, but now by his Son, who is incomparably greater than the angels.

GOD having spoken on divers occasions, and many ways, in times past, to the fathers, by the prophets: last of all,

2 In these days hath spoken to us by his Son, whom he hath appointed heir of all things, by whom also he made the world:

3 * Who being the splendour of his glory, and the figure of his substance, and upholding all things by the a Wisd. vii. 26.—b Psal. ii. 7.

CHAP. I. VER. 1. On divers occasions, and many ways.* The first word signifies that God revealed the incarnation of his Son, as it were, by parcels, and by degrees, at different times, and to different persons, to Adam, to Abraham, to Moses, to David, &c. The latter word expresseth the different ways and manners, as by angels, by immediate inspirations, and revelations, by types, figures, and ceremonies.†—Last of all, by his Son, his true, natural, eternal Son, of whom we must always take notice, that being both true God and true man, by the union of the Divine and human nature to one and the same Divine person, S. Paul speaks of him sometimes as he is God, sometimes mentions what agrees to him as man, sometimes as he is our Redeemer, both God and man. This must necessarily happen in speaking of Christ: but when we find things that cannot be understood of one that is a pure or mere man only, or that cannot be true but of him who is truly God, these are undeniable proofs against the errors of the Arians and Socinians. Wi.

VER. 2. Whom he hath appointed heir of all things. Heir is here not taken for one that succeeds another at his death, but for the same as Master or Lord. And though Christ be inseparably God and man, yet this agrees to him as man, because, as God, he was not constituted in time, but was always from eternity. Lord of all things, with the Father and the Holy Ghost: by whom also he made the world. That is, all created beings, and in such a manner, that all creatures were equally produced by the three Divine persons. See John i. 3, and the annotations on that place. Wi.

VER. 3. Who being the splendour,‡ or brightness of his glory, not as beams or rays are derived from a lightsome body, but by a necessary and eternal communication of the same substance, and of the whole light; in which sense the Council word of his power, making purgation of sins, sitteth on the right hand of the majesty on high:

4 Being made so much better than the angels, as he hath inherited a more excellent name above them.

5 For, to which of the angels hath he said at any time Thou art my Son, this day have I begotten thee? And again: I will be to him a Father, and he shall be to me a Son?

6 And again, when he introduceth the first begotten into the world, he saith: And let all the angels of God adore him.

c 2 Kings vii. 14.—d Psal. xcvi. 7.

of Nice understood the eternal Son of God to be light of light. This partly helps us to conceive the eternal generation of the Son from the Father, because the brightness is at the same time with the sun, though all comparisons fall short of this mystery. Wi.—And the figure of his substance.§ In the Greek is the character of his substance; which might be translated, the express image. There are different ways by which a thing may be said to be a figure or image of another. here it is taken for such a representation of the substance of the Father, that though the Father and Son be distinct persons, and the Son proceed from the Father, yet he is such a figure and image, as to have the same nature and substance with the Father, as the Catholic Church always believed and declared against the ancient heretics, and particularly against the Arians. Wi.—Figure. This does not exclude the reality. So Christ's body in the eucharist, and his mystical death in the mass, though called a figure, image, or representation of Christ's visible body and sacrifice upon the cross, yet may be and is the self-same substance. B.

VER. 4. Being made so much better, &c. The Arians pretended from hence that Christ was made, or created. But the apostle speaks of Christ as man, and tells us that Christ, even as man, by his ascension was exalted above the angels.—As he hath inherited a more excellent name. That is, both the dignity and name of the Son of God, of his only Son, and of his true Son. See 1 John i. 20. Wi.

VER. 5. Thou art my Son, this day have I begotten thee. These words, though commonly expounded of the eternal generation of the Son of God in the day or moment of eternity, yet may be truly applied either to Christ made man by his incarnation, or to Christ risen from the dead, as they are used by S. Paul, (Acts xiii. 33,) because the same Christ both these ways is the Son of God. Wi.

7 And to the angels indeed he saith : * He that maketh his angels, spirits : and his ministers, a flame of fire.

8 But to the Son : ^b Thy throne, O God, is for ever and ever : a sceptre of justice is the sceptre of thy kingdom.

9 Thou hast loved justice, and hated iniquity : therefore, God, thy God, hath anointed thee with the oil of gladness above them that are partakers with thee.

10 And : ^c Thou in the beginning, O Lord, hast founded the earth : and the heavens are the works of thy hands.

11 They shall perish, but thou shalt continue : and they shall all grow old as a garment :

12 And as a vesture shalt thou change them, and they shall be changed : but thou art the self-same, and thy years shall not fail.

13 But to which of the angels said he at any time : ^d Sit on my right hand, until I make thy enemies thy footstool ?

14 Are they not all ministering spirits, sent to minister for these, who shall receive the inheritance of salvation ?

CHAP. II.

The transgression of the precepts of the Son of God is far more condemnable than of those of the Old Testament, given by angels.

THEREFORE ought we more diligently to observe the things which we have heard : lest at any time we should let them slip.

* Psal. ciii. 4.—^b Psal. xlv. 7.—^c Psal. ci. 26.—^d Psal. cix. 1 ; 1 Cor. i. 25.

VER. 6. Let all the angels of God adore him. These words seem to be cited out of Psal. xvi. 7, according to the Sept. And they seem to be an invitation, and a command to the angels to adore Jesus Christ, when at the end of the world he shall come to judgment. This is one of the proofs which S. Paul here brings, to show that the angels are inferior to Christ, because they are commanded to adore him. Wi.

VER. 7. Maketh his angels, spirits : and his ministers, a flame of fire. S. Aug. on Psal. ciii. and S. Greg., hom. 34. in Evang., would have the sense and construction of the words to be, who maketh the blessed spirits to be also his angels, or messengers to denounce and execute his will. Wi.

VER. 8, 9. But to the Son. That is, to his Son Jesus Christ, he saith, Thy throne, O God, is for ever and ever, and lasts for eternity.—A sceptre, or rod of equity, is the sceptre of thy kingdom. That is, O Christ, God and man, head of thy Church, judge of all mankind, thou shalt reward and punish all under thee with justice and equity, as thou hast loved justice, and hated iniquity : therefore God, thy God, hath anointed thee. Many here understand God, first named, to be in the vocative case, and that the sense is, therefore thou, O God, thy God hath anointed : thus Christ is called God. Others take God in both places to be in the nominative case, and to be only a repetition of God the Father ; and the sense to be, thou Christ, God, thy God, hath anointed thee with the oil of gladness, above them that are partakers with thee : by which spiritual unction some understand graces infused into Christ's soul at his incarnation, by a greater plenitude of graces than was ever given to any saints whom he made partakers of his glory in heaven ; others expound it of an unction of greater glory given to Christ in heaven as man, because by his sufferings and merits he had destroyed and triumphed over sin. See Estius, A. Lapide, &c. Wi.

VER. 10, &c. And again : Thou in the beginning, O Lord, hast founded the earth, &c. The text, as well as the authority of interpreters, show these words to be still spoken of the Son of God, of Christ, who was both true God and man. And though part of Psal. ci., from which these words are taken, contain a prayer to God for the restoring of the city of Jerusalem, yet in this Psalm is chiefly signified the glory of Christ, and of his Church, which will be spread over all nations. See S. Chrys., Estius, A. Lapide, &c.—The apostle here applies the work of the creation to the Son of God, and thus finishes a clear and striking proof of his Divinity, against the Unitarians. To elude this proof, some of them pretend that these verses have been fraudulently added ; but they are found in all the Greek copies, and in all ancient versions of this Epistle.

VER. 13, 14. Sit on my right hand, &c. The ancient Jews themselves understood this 109th Psalm of their Messiah, nor could they answer Christ's words, (Matt. xxii. 45,) when he showed them by these same words that their Messiah was not only the Son of David, but also the Lord of David, of whom it was said, The Lord said to my Lord, Sit thou on my right hand, until I make thy enemies thy footstool. See also 1 Cor. xv. 25, and in this Epistle, chap. x. 13.—Are they not all ministering spirits ? &c. The apostle, in this chapter, not only shows how much the dignity of Christ is superior to that of the highest angels, but also his Divinity ; and that he is both true God and true man as the ancient Fathers took notice against the Arians. Wi.

2 For if the word spoken by the angels became stedfast, and every transgression and disobedience received a just recompense of reward :

3 How shall we escape, if we neglect so great salvation ? which having begun to be declared by the Lord, was confirmed to us, by them that heard him.

4 * God also bearing them witness by signs and wonders, and divers miracles, and gifts of the Holy Ghost, according to his own will.

5 For God hath not put in subjection to the angels [†] the world to come, of which we speak.

6 But one in a certain place hath testified, saying : [‡] What is man, that thou art mindful of him ? or the son of man, that thou visitest him ?

7 Thou hast made him a little less than the angels : thou hast crowned him with glory and honour : and hast set him over the works of thy hands.

8 [§] Thou hast put all things in subjection under his feet. For in that he subjected all things to him, he left nothing not subject to him. But now we see not as yet all things subject to him.

9 ^{||} But we see Jesus, who was made a little less than the angels, for the suffering of death, crowned with glory and honour : that through the grace of God he might taste death for all.

10 For it became him, for whom are all things, and by whom are all things, who had brought many children

CHAP. II. VER. 1. *Lest at any time we should let them slip away, or run out, like water out of leaking vessels, which is lost, and cannot be taken up again. According to the letter it is, lest we run out ; the sense must be, lest we do not sufficiently attend to these truths. Wi.

VER. 4. The miraculous powers the Almighty bestowed in the early ages of the Church, for the establishment and propagation of the faith, became afterwards less frequent, as there was less need of them ; but they have never been totally withdrawn, as some pretend, nor has there passed a single age from that of the apostles down to the present time, in which several most evident and stupendous miracles have not been wrought in the Catholic Church.

VER. 5. God hath not put in subjection to the angels the [†] world to come. By the world to come, is meant the Church of Christ to the end of the world, and succeeding to the state of those who served God under the old law. Wi.

VER. 6. But one, to wit, the author of the 8th Psalm, said, What is man, &c., that is, man, or mankind, considered in his own frail nature, corrupted by sin, guilty of eternal death, that thou shouldst be mindful of him, restore him to thy favour, and bestow such graces upon him ? But the words of the Psalm, and of S. Paul in this place, though they may be understood of every man, yet are to be taken as particularly spoken of Christ as man, or of the human nature of Christ, exalted by the real union with the Divine person of the Son of God. Wi.

VER. 8. He left nothing not subject to him. He speaks here of Christ, to whom God hath made all creatures subject, whether in heaven, earth, or hell, whether they have been, or shall be hereafter, as to the judge and the head of all. Wi.

VER. 9. But we see (by faith) Jesus, who as man, by his sufferings and death, was made less than the angels, nay, despised as the last of men ; now, by his glorious resurrection and ascension, and by the submission all nations pay to him, who believe in him and worship him, crowned with glory and honour. Wi.

VER. 10. For it became him, &c. He gives the reasons for which the Son of God would become man and suffer death, not that this was absolutely necessary, but a convenient means to manifest the goodness, the wisdom, and the justice of God, by the incarnation and death of his Son ; that having decreed to bring many sons, or children, to eternal glory, he was pleased to send his Divine Son to become man, and so to consummate the Author's intention by suffering :

into glory, to make the author of their salvation perfect by suffering.

11 For both he who sanctifieth, and they who are sanctified, are all from one. For which cause he is not ashamed to call them brethren, saying :

12 ^a I will declare thy name to my brethren : in the midst of the church I will praise thee.

13 And again : ^b I will put my trust in him : And again : ^c Behold I, and my children, whom God hath given me.

14 Forasmuch then as the children were partakers of flesh and blood, he also himself in like manner partook of the same : that, ^d through death, he might destroy him who had the empire of death, that is to say, the devil :

15 And might deliver them, who, through the fear of death, were all their lifetime subject to slavery.

16 For no where doth he take hold of the angels : but of the seed of Abraham he taketh hold.

17 Wherefore it behoved him in all things to be made like to his brethren, that he might become a merciful and faithful high priest with God, to make a reconciliation for the sins of the people.

18 For in that, wherein he himself hath suffered and been tempted, he is able to succour those also who are tempted.

CHAP. III.

Christ is more excellent than Moses : and therefore we must adhere to him by faith and obedience.

WHEREFORE, holy brethren, partakers of the heavenly vocation, consider the apostle and high priest of our profession, Jesus :

2 Who is faithful to him who appointed him, as was also ^e Moses in all his house.

3 For this man was counted worthy of more glory than

^a Psal. xxi. 23.—^b Psal. xvii. 3.—^c Isa. viii. 18.

i. e. to make him a perfect and consummate sacrifice of expiation for the sins of all men, and to satisfy the justice of God in the most perfect manner. Wi.—By suffering, Christ was to enter into his glory, (Luke xxiv. 26,) which the apostle here calls being made perfect. Ch.—In this and the above verses we may observe three different states of Jesus Christ. The first, that of his humiliation by his passion and death ; the second, that of his glory at his resurrection and ascension into heaven ; the third, that of his consummated glory in heaven after the last judgment. In his first state, viz. his passion, he was made not only less than the angels, but as the last of men ; novissimus virorum. In his second, all power was given to him in heaven and earth ; but this power he will not fully exercise till after the general judgment, when all things, without exception, will be made subject to him ; and this is the third state, the permanent state of his glory, which is never to end.

VER. 11. For both he who sanctifieth, (i. e. our Redeemer, who sanctifieth, or has obtained sanctification for all, by sacrificing himself on the cross,) and they who are sanctified, are all from one ; have the same human nature, and are from the same first parent Adam, whose Son Christ (as man) was ; on which account he calls men his brethren. See John xx. 17, and Psal. xxi. 23, in which is a clear prediction of Christ's sufferings, where it is said, I will declare thy name to my brethren, &c. Wi.

VER. 16. For no where doth he take hold of the angels. Lit. that he apprehendeth, or layeth hold on the angels ; that is, according to the common interpretation, we no where find that he hath united their nature to his Divine person to save them, though a great part of them had also sinned and fallen from heaven. But he taketh the seed of Abraham ; i. e. he became man of the seed or race of Abraham, to redeem or save mankind. Wi.—No where, &c. That is, he never took upon him the nature of angels, but that of the seed of Abraham. Ch.

CHAP. III. VER. 1. The high priest of our profession. That is, of the Moses, by so much as he who hath built the house, hath more honour than the house.

4 For every house is built by some man : but he who created all things, is God.

5 And Moses indeed was faithful in all his house, as a servant, for a testimony of those things which were to be spoken :

6 But Christ, as a Son in his own house : which house are we, if we retain a firm confidence, and the glory of hope unto the end.

7 Wherefore, as the Holy Ghost saith : ' To-day, if you shall hear his voice,

8 Harden not your hearts, as in the provocation, in the day of temptation in the desert,

9 Where your fathers tempted me, proved, and saw my works,

10 Forty years : For which cause I was offended with this generation, and I said : They always err in heart. And they have not known my ways, 11 As I have sworn in my wrath : If they shall enter into my rest.

12 Take heed, brethren, lest there be in any of you an evil heart of unbelief, to depart from the living God :

13 But exhort one another every day, whilst to-day is named : lest any one of you be hardened by the deceitfulness of sin.

14 For we are made partakers of Christ : yet so if we hold the beginning of his substance firm unto the end.

15 While it is said : To-day, if you shall hear his voice, harden not your hearts, as in that provocation.

16 For some who heard did provoke : but not all who came out of Egypt by Moses.

17 And with whom was he offended forty years ? Was faith we confess, or profess. Christ is also here called our apostle, i. e. sent by his Father. Wi.—Jesus Christ is not only our apostle, he is the doctor, the legislator of the religion we profess. He is our high priest, who offered himself in sacrifice for the sanctification of his Church, and who is now exercising at the right hand of his Father the office of priesthood in our behalf, both in heaven and on earth. We here see our dignity ; we have a God for the apostle and high priest of our religion.

VER. 2. Faithful to him, &c. To be made, may agree to Christ as man ; but here the sense is, who made him head over all his Church. Wi.

VER. 6. Christ, as a Son in his own house : which house, or Church of the faithful, are we ; and Christ is our only Lord and Master, equally with the Father, and the Holy Ghost ; but we are all members, and profitable members, if we retain a firm confidence in him, and the glory of hope, or a glorious hope unto the end. Wi.—Hitherto S. Paul endeavours to detach the Hebrews from Moses and the law, to attach them to Christ and his gospel. What follows is an exhortation to persevere in faith, lest we come to be cast off like the Jews.

VER. 8. This alludes to the 17th chapter of Exodus, where the history of the provocations and contradictions of the Israelites is related at large.

VER. 11. As I have sworn in my wrath : ' If they shall enter into my rest. But if here implies the same as they shall not. See Mark viii. 12. And that this is the sense here, appears by the 18th verse, where it is expressly said, they should not enter into his rest ; i. e. to rest in the land of Chanaan, promised to them. Wi.

VER. 12. Take heed, &c. Not to imitate their incredulous obstinacy, lest you never enter into the place of eternal rest, by departing from God by sin. Wi.—To abandon Christ is to abandon God, since Christ is God. He who denies the Son believes not the Father, who has wrought so many miracles to sanction his mission. 1 John ii. 23. It is of little consequence to eternity whether it be the doctrine of faith or the life of faith we reject, if persons are equally lost by either practical or speculative infidelity.

VER. 14. You have already been made partakers of the benefits of Christ, at your conversion and baptism, to the beginning of his substance,† by which seems to be understood the faith of Christ. Wi.

VER. 15. From the 6th and 14th verses we learn the great happiness conferred on us at baptism ; but all this, happily, we are taught is dependent on faith, the foundation of our spiritual and divine being.

VER. 17. Whose carcasses were laid, or buried, in the desert ? None of those it not with those who sinned, ^awhose carcasses were laid in the desert?

18 And to whom did he swear that they should not enter into his rest: but to them who were incredulous?

19 And we see that they could not enter in, because of incredulity.

CHAP. IV.

The Christian's rest: we are to enter into it through Jesus Christ.

LET us, therefore, fear, lest perhaps forsaking the promise of entering into his rest, any of you be thought to be wanting.

2 For to us also it hath been declared as well as to them, but the word of hearing did not profit them, not being mixed with a faith of those things which they heard.

3 For we who have believed, shall enter into rest; as he said: ^bAs I have sworn in my wrath: If they shall enter into my rest: and this when the works from the foundation of the world were finished.

4 For in a certain place he spoke of the seventh day thus: ^cAnd God rested the seventh day from all his works.

5 And in this place again: If they shall enter into my rest.

6 Seeing then it remaineth that some are to enter into it, and they, to whom it was first preached, did not enter in because of incredulity:

7 Again he limiteth a certain day, saying in David: To-day, after so long a time, as it is above said: "To-day, if you shall hear his voice, harden not your hearts."

8 For if Jesus had given them rest, he would never have afterwards spoken of another day.

9 There remaineth, therefore, a rest for the people of God.

who were reckoned up (Num. xiv.) entered the land of Chanaan, except Josue and Caleb; but then we may take notice, that none were there numbered under twenty years of age, nor the Levites, nor the women. Wi.

CHAP. IV. VER. 1. Let us, therefore, fear, &c. S. Paul continues his exhortation to them, not to be like the incredulous Jews, and so to be excluded from the place of eternal rest. Wi.

VER. 2. To us . . . hath been declared, as well to them. That is, as the riches of the country of Chanaan was told by Josue and Caleb to the people, but they would not believe them; so the happiness of the kingdom of heaven has been preached by us to you: but the word they heard (lit. the word of hearing) did not profit them, not being mixed, or received with faith: let not this be your case. Wi.—As the want of a firm faith was the cause of the punishment of the Israelites, of their privation of a promised inheritance, so Christians will be eternally excluded from the kingdom promised them, unless they steadily believe and obey the gospel of Jesus Christ.

VER. 3, &c. It is faith that opens heaven; but faith animated by charity, nourished by good works, and perfected by mortification of the senses. God only enters into his rest after the accomplishment of his works, and shall we expect to enter before we accomplish what he has given us to do? Let us fear, but in hoping; let us hope, but in labouring.—*The works . . . were finished. This place is the same, and equally obscure in the Greek as in the Latin text. The apostle here examines what David, as a prophet, could mean, when he said of some, they shall not enter, or, if they shall enter into my rest. His argument is this, David could not prophesy of that rest, by which God, after he had created all things, (Gen. ii. 2,) is said to have rested the seventh day, when he had finished the works of the creation. Nor could David speak of that other time of resting, which was promised and given to the Israelites, when, having conquered all their enemies, they were introduced by Jesus, or Josue, into the promised land of Chanaan, for these two rests were passed long before his prophesy: therefore David must speak of some rest that was to come afterwards, when he said, To-day, if you shall hear his voice, harden not your hearts, &c. Therefore it must needs follow that some day of rest, some sabbatism, as he calls it, after his time, must remain for the people of God, that should not harden their hearts: and from hence he concludes that David had in view that eternal rest of happiness which the Messiah was to obtain for us, a rest without end in the kingdom of heaven.—Let 10 For he who is entered into his rest: he also hath rested from his own works, as God from his.

11 Let us hasten, therefore, to enter into that rest: lest any man fall into the same example of incredulity.

12 For the word of God is living and effectual, and more penetrating than any two-edged sword: and reaching unto the division of the soul and the spirit, of the joints also, and the marrow, and is a discerners of the thoughts and intents of the heart.

13 ^aNeither is there any creature invisible in his sight: but all things are naked and open to the eyes of him, to whom our speech is.

14 Having, therefore, a great high priest who hath penetrated the heavens, Jesus, the Son of God let us hold fast our confession.

15 For we have not a high priest, who cannot have compassion on our infirmities: but one tempted in all things like as we are, yet without sin.

16 Let us go, therefore, with confidence to the throne of grace: that we may obtain mercy, and find grace in seasonable aid

CHAP. V.

The office of a high priest. Christ is our high priest.

FOR every high priest taken from among men is appointed for men in the things that appertain to God, that he may offer up gifts and sacrifices for sins:

2 Who can have compassion on them who are ignorant, and err: because he himself also is encompassed with infirmity:

3 And therefore he ought, as for the people, so also for himself, to offer for sins.

* Psal. xxxiii. 16; Eccli. xv. 20.—^f Exod. xxviii. 1; 2 Par. xxvi. 18.

us hasten, therefore, or as it is in the Greek, let us make it our endeavour, to gain that place of rest, by our persevering in faith and good works, and take heed not to be excluded with the unbelievers. Wi.

VER. 12. For the word of God is living, &c. All this language is metaphorical, but perfectly well understood by the Jews. In their sacrifices the Levites made use of a two-edged knife, to separate from the victim what was for God, what was for the priests, and what was for the people. Thus in sacrificing sinners to the justice of God, Jesus Christ, like a two-edged knife, will separate what is for God, and what is for man; i. e. whatever is good or evil in the whole of man's conduct.

VER. 13. In his sight, or to the eyes, must signify in the sight of God. Wi.—If the word of God in Jesus Christ be so terrible, what will Jesus Christ be himself, when he comes to judge us according to the severity of his justice?

VER. 16. Let us often contemplate Jesus Christ on his two thrones, that of his mercy, and that of his justice; of his mercy, where at present he is seated as our compassionate high priest, to bestow on us the riches of his grace; of his justice, where he will one day sit as judge, to examine most rigorously both our faith and our practice. Our separated brethren pretend to prove from this text that we need no help of saints to obtain any favour. But by this argument they may as well take away the helps and prayers of the living for one another. For we do not require the help of either the saints in heaven, or of our brethren on earth, through any mistrust of God's mercy, but on account of our own unworthiness, convinced that the prayer of a just man availeth more with Him than the desire of a grievous sinner; and of a number making intercession together, rather than of one alone. This they cannot deny, except they deny the Holy Scriptures. B.

* V. 3. Operibus ab institutione mundi perfectis, καιροι των έργων από καταβολής κόσμου γεννηθέντων.

CHAP. V. VER. 1. Every high priest. He speaks first of the office of priests in general, before he speaks of Christ's priesthood. The priest and pastor should never forget that he is a man and a sinner; that he is honoured with this Divine ministry, to offer sacrifice both for his own sins and for the sins of the faithful; that prayer should be his delight, the altar his centre, and the sacrifice of the body and blood of Christ his supreme felicity. "This sacrifice of the Eucharist," says S. Austin, "has succeeded to all the ancient victims that were immolated of old, to signify the future sacrifice." 1. 10. c. 20, de Civit. Dei. As to the word mass, it was in use to signify this holy sacrifice of the altar above thirteen hundred years ago. See the second Council of Carthage, Can. 3. S. Jerom upon the 1st Prov. chap. xi. S. Ambrose, 1. 2, ep. 14, Missam facere cœpi; I began to say mass. It was introduced 4 Neither doth any man take the honour to himself but he that is called by God, as Aaron was.

5 So also Christ did not glorify himself to be made a high priest : but he that said to him : *Thou art my Son, this day have I begotten thee.

6 As he saith also in another place : *Thou art a priest for ever, according to the order of Melchisedech.

7 Who in the days of his flesh, offering up prayers and supplications, with a strong cry and tears to him, that was able to save him from death, was heard for his reverence.

into this country with Christianity itself. See V. Bede's History, e. 27, and b. 4, c. 14.

VER. 4. See in 3 Kings xiii., 2 Paral. xvi., and 1 Kings xiii., the manifest punishments of the Almighty on laics that impiously and sacrilegiously attempted the ministry of priests. In the Christian dispensation, Archbishop Cranmer, the very soul of the pretended reformation, dietatorially pronounces, "he that is appointed to be a bishop or priest, needeth no consecration : " words quoted by Dr. Stillingfleet from his own handwriting, in his Irenicum, p. 391, 2d ed. But the Catholic Church has given a very different decision, which is confirmed by the testimony of Scripture, apostolical tradition, and the unanimous consent of the Fathers. See Acts vi. 6, and xiii. 3, and xiv. 22 ; 1 Tim. iv. 14, &c. See in the history of Soerates, who lived in the fifth century, how the usurpation of Isehyras, in taking upon himself the name and office of a priest without receiving holy orders, was reprobated as a crime worthy of death, l. 1, c. 27, ed. Val.

VER. 6. Some may perhaps wonder why S. Paul does not dwell more in this Epistle on the eucharistic sacrifice ; but until the Hebrews understood the bloody sacrifice on the cross, they could not be supposed to understand the unbloody sacrifice of the altar. The holy Fathers observe, that the sacrifice of Melchisedech, (Gen. xiv. 18,) offered in bread and wine, prefigured the unbloody sacrifice offered by Jesus Christ at his last supper. See Clemens Alex. l. 4, Strom. c. 8 ; S. Cyp. l. 2, ep. 3, ad Cæcil. ; Euseb. of Cæsar. l. 5 ; Dem. Evang. c. 3 ; S. Jerom ep. ad Marcol. ; S. Aug. ep. 95, ad Inn. Pap. ; S. Amb. ; Epp. ; Chrys., &c. ; apud Bellarm. l. 1, de Missa, c. 6. Hence it follows that the holy Eucharist is truly and properly a sacrifice as well as a sacrament, as the paschal lamb or passover of the old law was both a sacrament and a sacrifice. For either our Saviour offered sacrifice at his last supper under the forms of bread and wine, or he cannot be called a priest for ever after the order of Melchisedech. See S. Aug. l. 16, de Civitat. Dei, c. 22.

VER. 7. Who in the days of his flesh, of his mortal and suffering condition, even with strong and fervent crying out, and tears, offering up as man, prayers and supplications to him, to God, who could save him from death ; to wit, in the garden of Gethsemani, and on the cross, yet with a perfect resignation and conformity of his human will to the Divine will, was heard for his reverence. * I leave this translation, which is in the Rhemes Testament, very literal from the Latin Vulgate, and which cannot be said to be any ways disagreeable to the Greek. As to the sense, there are two expositions in the best interpreters. S. Chrysostom and many others understand, that he was heard as to every prayer that he made absolutely, and not conditionally only, (as when he prayed that the cup of his sufferings might pass from him,) and he was heard for that reverence, or reverential regard, and just consideration which the eternal Father had for him, who was his true Son. This interpretation agrees better with the Greek text, in which is left out the word his. Others, by his reverence, understand that he was heard on the account of that reverential fear, that respectful submission and piety, which he always had towards his eternal Father. Wi.

VER. 8. He that was truly the Son of God, and knew all things, learnt practically, and taught us a perfect obedience in suffering and dying a cruel death on the cross. Wi.

VER. 9. And being consummated, or perfected as man in all kind of virtues, and at the same time true God by his Divine person, became the author of salvation to all those who both believe in him and obey him. Wi.

VER. 10. There is but one eternal Pontiff, one universal Priest given by God ; all others are his vicars, but not successors, whom he associates to his priesthood, to continue those same unctions on earth which himself exercises in heaven, and which had been prefigured in Melchisedech.

* V. 7. Exauditus est pro sua reverentia, εἰσακουσθεὶς ἀπὸ τῆς εὐλαβείας. Even the last Protestant translation, though much more exact than any of the former, puts, and was heard in that he feared. If the Rhemes translation, which I have not changed, be obscure, I much doubt whether theirs can be better understood. I will not suppose that they mean, with Calvin, that Christ was so abandoned on the cross as to be driven to despair, and that he feared and felt the punishments of the damned, from which he begged, and to be freed, and was heard. Beza says Calvin was the first author of this exposition, that is, of this blasphemy. I will rather 11 Of whom we have great things to say, and hard to be intelligibly uttered : because you are become weak to hear.

12 For whereas for the time you ought to be masters ; you have need to be taught again what are the first rudiments of the word of God : and you are become such as have need of milk, and not of solid food.

13 For every one that is a partaker of milk, is unskilful in the word of justice : for he is a little child.

14 But solid food is for the perfect : for those who by use have their senses exercised to the discerning of good and evil.

CHAP. VI.

He warns them of the danger of falling by apostasy ; and exhorts them to patience and perseverance.

WHEREFORE, leaving the word of the beginning of Christ, let us go on to things more perfect, not suppose that the Protestant translators only meant, that Christ, as man, feared death. How then was he heard in that he feared ? not so as to be freed from death, which he willingly underwent, but was heard so as to triumph over death, and shortly after to rise and ascend triumphant into heaven. Dr. Wells, in his amendments to the Protestant translation, has changed it in this manner, was heard so as to be delivered from his fear ; and in his paraphrase expounds it thus, namely, by an angel sent on purpose to strengthen him ; so that he expounds this text of the fear and prayer of Christ in the garden, from which fear he was freed at the appearing of the angel. Luke xxii. 43. I contend, notwithstanding, that the Protestant translation, was heard in that he feared, though we take it with the additions made by Dr. Wells, was heard so as to be delivered from his fear, is far from being exact, nor can it be looked upon as a proper and literal translation from the Greek text, ἀπὸ τῆς εὐλαβείας. First, where is there any thing in the Greek for he feared, or his fear ? or that he was delivered from his fear ? This is to add in the text itself a particular exposition, which at the same time is contrary to what divers interpreters take to be the literal sense of these words, ἀπὸ τῆς εὐλαβείας, who by εὐλαβείας understand that great respect and regard which was in the Father towards Christ, because he was his Son. S. Chrysostom understood the force of the Greek text as well as any one, and this seems the meaning of these his words, (λόγ. ἡ. p. 475, linea 20, ed. Sav.) τοσαύτη ἦν αὐτοῦ ἡ εὐλαβεία, ὥς καὶ ἀπὸ τούτου αἰδεῖσθαι αὐτὸν τὸν Θεόν. Nor does the Latin translator of S. Chrysostom, Mutius Scholasticus, in the edition of Fronto Ducaeus, seem to have mistaken the sense of S. Chrysostom, where we find, (hom. 8, p. 1478,) tanta fuit ejus reverentia, ac pietas, ut ideò eum reveretur Deus. Others indeed expound it of the reverential and godly fear, or piety, that was in Christ, as man, towards God, his Father, and that his prayers were heard on this account ; but this will not justify the Protestant translation, that he was heard in that he feared, nor the paraphrase of Dr. Wells, so as to be delivered from his fear, as if by εὐλάβεια were understood merely a natural fear and apprehension. I find Mr. Legh, in his Critica Sacra, on the word εὐλάβεια, says that the Syriac version has from fear : but he is mistaken, as may be seen in Walton's Polyglot : the Syriac has only, he was heard, without any mention at all of any kind of fear, which is left out. Mr. Legh says Nazianzen and Theodoret follow this sense. He cites not the words nor the places. It must be again his mistake. Theodoret has nothing like it in his commentary on this passage, nor S. Greg. (Orat. 36.) where he cites these words of S. Paul. It is true, εὐλάβεια, especially in profane authors, has sometimes the same signification as timor, or metus. It is, says Scapula, timiditas circumspccta ; but also, even in profane writers, the same as, religio pietas in Deum. See also what examples Scapula brings on εὐλαβοῦμαι and εὐλαβῆναι ; of which he says, apud Ecclesiasticos Scriptores, et in Test. Novi libris, circumspectus et cautus circa ea quæ ad cultum divinum pertinent, religiosus, pius, ut Luc. 2. I know also that in Heb. xi. 7 it is said of Noe, metuens, in the vulgat Latin, for εὐλαβηθεὶς ; and Acts xxiii. 10, Tribunus tinens, εὐλαβηθεὶς : but neither do these two examples show that in this place, where mention is made of our Saviour, Christ εὐλάβεια can be properly and literally translated by fear, or that the sense is that Christ was heard so as to be delivered from his fear. For first, this exposition of fear and apprehension of death agrees not with the common exposition of the ancient Fathers, neither with S. Chrys. and those who follow him, nor with the others, as I have shown already. Secondly, this translation agrees not with the Protestant translation in other places. As for the substantive, εὐλάβεια, it is only found in one other place in the New Testament, to wit, Heb. xii. 28, μετὰ αἰδούς, καὶ εὐλαβείας, where the Prot. translation has, with reverence and godly fear ; and for the adjective, εὐλάβης, where old Simeon is called εὐλάβης in the common Greek copies, (Luke ii. 25,) they have translated, a devout man. Acts viii. 2, the men that buried S. Stephen, ἀνδρες εὐλάβειας, are translated devout men, as also Acts ii. 5. Thirdly, the ancient Arabic version signifies propter reverentiam ejus, and the Ethiopie, ob justitiam ejus, as they are in the translations of Walton, which agree with the Latin Vulgate, but not with that sense in which the English Protestants have translated the Greek. In fine, it must be observed that ἀπὸ here, according to these versions, bears the sense of ob or propter, and not of ab or ex, of which signification see many examples in Estius. Wi.

2 Of the doctrine of baptisms, and of the imposition of hands, and of the resurrection of the dead, and of eternal judgment.

3 And this we will do, if God will permit.

4 *For it is impossible for those who were once enlightened, have tasted also the heavenly gift, and were made partakers of the Holy Ghost,

5 Have moreover tasted the good word of God, and the powers of the world to come,

6 And are fallen away, to be renewed again unto penance, crucifying again to themselves the Son of God, and making a mockery of him.

7 For the earth that drinketh in the rain which cometh often upon it, and bringeth forth herbs useful for them by whom it is tilled, receiveth blessing from God.

8 But that which bringeth forth thorns and briers, is rejected; and very near to a curse, whose end is to be burnt.

9 But my dearly beloved, we trust better things of you, and nearer to salvation: though we thus speak.

10 For God is not unjust, that he should forget your work; and the love which you have shown in his name, you who have ministered, and do minister to the saints.

11 And we desire that every one of you should show forth the same carefulness to the accomplishing of hope unto the end:

12 That you become not slothful, but followers of them, who through faith and patience shall inherit the promises.

13 For God making a promise to Abraham, because as connected with what he had said in the last chapter (ver. 12) of the elements, or rudiments, of Christian faith, concerning which, though some seemed not sufficiently instructed, yet he thinks it here enough to name them, and pass them over: to wit, 1. Penance, or the dispositions of a sincere repentance. 2. Faith, when they are come to the years of being instructed. 3. The doctrine of baptisms, which he expresseth in the plural number, either because all the faithful must be baptized once, if we speak of Christian baptism; or he means that persons ought to know they cannot receive Christ's baptism over again. Or, in fine, he means that the baptisms used by the Jews, which they so frequently repeated, could not make them justified. 4. The doctrine of imposition of hands, by which is commonly expounded that which was given in the sacrament of confirmation. 5. Of the resurrection of the dead. 6. Of the judgment, by which God would judge all mankind. Of these things he supposeth them already instructed. Wi.

VER. 3. And this we will do, meaning what he said in the first verse, that his design was to proceed to things more perfect, which, after some admonitions, he comes to in the next chapter, when he speaks of the priesthood of Christ. Wi.

VER. 4, &c. For it is impossible, &c. This is an obscure place, differently expounded, which shows how rash it is for the ignorant to pretend to understand the Holy Scriptures. Many understand these words, it is impossible, &c., of the sacrament of penance, or of returning to God by a profitable repentance, especially after such heinous sins as an apostasy from the true faith. But then we must take the word impossible to imply no more than a thing that is very hard to be done, or that seldom happens, as when it is said, (Matt. xix. 26,) that it is impossible for rich men to be saved: and (Luke xvii. 1) it is impossible that scandals should not come. For it is certain that it is never impossible for the greatest sinners to repent by the assistance which God offers them, who has also left a power to his ministers to forgive in his name the greatest sins. But others (whose interpretation seems preferable) expound this of baptism, which can only be given once. The words here in the text very much favour this exposition, when it is said, who were once enlightened. For baptism in the first ages was called the sacrament of illumination. See S. Denis de Coelesti Hierar. c. 4, S. Greg. Naz., &c. The following words also agree to baptism, when they are said to have been made partakers of the Holy Ghost; to have tasted the good word of God, and the powers of the world to come; all which signify the interior graces, the miraculous gifts, and power of working miracles, which they who were baptized frequently received in those days.—They cannot be renewed again unto penance. That is, they cannot be renewed again by baptism, which is also called a renovation. Tit. iii. 5. Their sins may indeed be forgiven them in the sacrament of penance, but this is not a renovation like that in baptism, in which both the guilt, and all pain due to past sins, is remitted; whereas in the sacrament of penance, though the guilt, and the eternal punishments due to sins, be remitted, yet many times temporal punishments, to be undergone either in this world or the next, still remain due to such he had no one greater by whom he might swear, swore by himself,

14 Saying: *Unless blessing, I will bless thee, and multiplying, I will multiply thee.

15 And so after he had patiently endured, he obtained the promise.

16 For men swear by one greater than themselves; and an oath, for confirmation, is the end of all their controversy.

17 Wherein God, meaning more abundantly to show to the heirs of the promise the immutability of his counsel, interposed an oath:

18 That by two immutable things, in which it is impossible for God to lie, we may have the strongest comfort, who have fled for refuge, to hold fast the hope set before us:

19 Which we have as an anchor of the soul, sure and firm, and which entereth even within the veil,

20 Where the forerunner, Jesus, is entered for us, made a high priest for ever, according to the order of Melchisedech.

CHAP. VII.

The priesthood of Christ, according to the order of Melchisedech, exceeds the Levitical priesthood, and puts an end both to that and to the law.

FOR *this Melchisedech, king of Salem, priest of the most high God, who met Abraham returning from the slaughter of the kings, and blessed him:

as have been great sinners, to them who, by relapsing into the same sins, have crucified again to themselves the Son of God, making a mockery of him; i. e. who, insensible of the favours received, have ungratefully renewed sin; to take away which Christ suffered, was mocked, crucified, &c. Wi.—Macknight observes that Beza, without any authority from ancient MSS., hath inserted in his version Si, If they shall fall away, that this text might not appear to contradict the Calvinistic doctrine of the assurance of salvation. The English translators have followed Beza. The biblical student will be glad to find Dr. Wells, in his elegant edition of the New Testament, frequently restoring and preferring those readings which agree with the Latin Vulgate. The same just tribute is paid to the Vulgate by Walton, Mills, Gerard, Griesbach, Harwood, and others. Indeed the Vulgate has been declared authentic in a general council, and probably expresses more of the true reading of the original autograph, than any Greek edition that is now to be found, and certainly much more than modern versions, which are strained more or less to the preconceived sentiments of the translators. Wi.

VER. 9, &c. We trust better things of you, &c. Faith begins the work of salvation; good works from a principle of charity continues it; perseverance in virtue, and patience under afflictions, complete it.—It is certain God, who is not unjust, will reward these good works, if you continue in the same, to the accomplishing of hope even to the end,† for the obtaining the happiness you hope for. Be not therefore slothful and negligent; it is by faith, patience, and perseverance, that you will inherit God's promises. Wi.

VER. 13, &c. For God making a promise to Abraham, to bless all nations in his seed, i. e. by the coming of Christ, swore by himself, having no greater to swear by, &c. He shows them how certain they may be of eternal happiness, unless they be slothful. First, it is God himself, who hath promised to make them happy. Secondly, he promised it with an oath; and these are two unchangeable things in God, who cannot lie. Wi.

CHAP. VII. VER. 1. This Melchisedech. If we look for the construction, Melchisedech may be joined with what follows, (ver. 3,) continueth a priest for ever. Wi.

VER. 2. King of justice, according to the signification of the word Melchisedech, and of peace, signified by the place Salem, of which he was king. By Salem is commonly expounded Jerusalem, though S. Jerom thinks it was the town in Samaria afterwards called Sichem. This king was also a priest of the Most High 3 Without father, without mother, without genealogy, having neither beginning of days, nor end of life, but likened unto the Son of God, continueth a priest for ever.

4 Now consider how great this man is, to whom also Abraham, the patriarch, gave tithes out of the chief things.

5 And indeed they of the sons of Levi, who receive the priesthood, have a commandment to take tithes of the people according to the law, that is, of their brethren: though they themselves also came out of the loins of Abraham.

6 But he, whose pedigree is not numbered among them, received tithes of Abraham, and blessed him, who had the promises.

7 And without all contradiction, that which is less, is blessed by the better.

8 And here indeed, men who die, receive tithes: but there it is witnessed, that he liveth.

9 And (as it may be said) even Levi, who received tithes, paid tithes by Abraham:

10 For he was yet in the loins of his father, when Melchisedech met him.

11 If then perfection were by the Levitical priesthood, (for under it the people received the law,) what further need was there that another priest should rise, according to the order of Melchisedech, and not be called according to the order of Aaron?

12 For the priesthood being translated, it is necessary that a translation also be made of the law.

13 For he, of whom these things are spoken, is of another tribe, of which no one gave attendance at the altar.

14 For it is evident that our Lord sprung out of Juda: in which tribe Moses spoke nothing concerning priests.

15 And it is yet far more evident: if, according to the similitude of Melchisedech, there arise another priest,

16 Who is made not according to the law of a carnal commandment, but according to the power of an indissoluble life:

17 For he testifieth: ^bThou art a priest for ever, according to the order of Melchisedech.

18 There is verily an abrogation of the former commandment, for the weakness and unprofitableness thereof:

19 For the law brought nothing to perfection: but an introduction of a better hope, by which we approach to God.

20 And inasmuch as it is not without an oath, (for the others indeed were made priests without an oath:

21 But this with an oath, by him that said to him: ^cThe Lord hath sworn, and he will not repent: thou art a priest for ever:)

22 By so much is Jesus made a surety of a better testament.

23 And the others indeed were made many priests, because, by reason of death, they were not suffered to continue:

24 But this, for that he continueth for ever, hath an everlasting priesthood.

25 Whereby he is able also to save for ever them that come unto God by himself: always living to make intercession for us.

^a Deut. xviii. 2; Jos. xiv. 4.

^b Psal. cix. 4.—^c Psal. cix. 4.

1. e. of the true God. He blessed Abraham, after he had defeated Chodorlahomor and the other kings (Gen. xiv.); and Abraham gave him the tithes of all things which he had taken from his enemies. He is said (ver. 3) to have been without father, without mother, without any genealogy, without beginning of days or end of life, inasmuch as we have no account in the Scripture of these particulars. He is said in Genesis to have brought out, inasmuch as he was a priest, that is, to have offered up a sacrifice to God of bread and wine. The apostle here shows two things, that Melchisedech was greater than Abraham, and that he is a figure of Christ, who is a priest for ever, according to the order of Melchisedech. Psal. cix. 4. Wi.

VER. 3. Without father, &c. Not that he had no father, &c., but that neither his father, nor his pedigree, nor his birth, nor his death, are set down in Scripture. Ch.

VER. 4. Consider how great this man (Melchisedech) was, and greater than our great patriarch, Abraham: 1. Because Abraham, of his own accord, paid tithes to this priest of all the chief things he had. 2. This Melchisedech blessed, or gave a benediction to our great father Abraham, to whom the promises of blessing all nations was made. 3. To show another pre-eminence of the priesthood of Melchisedech (which was a figure of the eternal priesthood of Christ) above the priesthood of Aaron, the apostle takes notice that the sons of Levi, the priests of the ancient law, to whom tithes were to be paid, were no more than mortal men, always dying, whereas the Scripture only witnesseth of Melchisedech that he liveth; he is represented as one that hath neither beginning nor end of his days. This agrees chiefly to Christ, who by the Psalmist is called a priest for ever. 4. Another reason that shows the priesthood of Melchisedech (and of our Saviour, Christ) to be above the Aaronical priesthood, is, that not only Abraham, but even Aaron and Levi, and all their successors, may be said in the person of Abraham to have paid tithes to Melchisedech, because we may consider them as yet in the loins of Abraham, from whom they descended; though it cannot be said, in like manner, that Christ himself was in the loins of Abraham, because though he was Son of Abraham, yet his conception was not in the ordinary way of human generation, but by the operation of the Holy Ghost. See S. Aug. l. 10, de Gen. ad lit. c. 20, tom. 3, p. 270, nov. edit. 5. S. Paul (ver. 11) brings another reason to show that the priesthood according to the order of Melchisedech was more perfect, because true justice and sanctification could not be given neither by the priesthood of Aaron nor by the law of Moses, which began as it were together; for if the former law and sacrifices offered by the priests of Aaron had been sufficient for man's justification and salvation, there would have been no necessity of a new priesthood according to the order of Melchisedech. 6. He takes notice of this difference from the former priesthood, that they were priests of the tribe of Levi, but that Christ, the priest according to the order of Melchisedech, is of the tribe of Juda. 7. Another difference is, that the former law, and all belonging to it, consisted of carnal precepts, (ver. 16.) in outward ceremonies and sacrifices, with promises of temporal blessings and a long life in this world; but the new law and sacrifice of Christ is according to the power of an indissoluble and never-ending life, conferring inward graces, with a remission of sins, by which men were justified and saved, with promises of an eternal happiness. 8. He tells us that Christ's priesthood was confirmed by God himself with an oath; not so the priesthood of Aaron. This second testament therefore is much better, and more excellent. 9. The former testament brought nothing to perfection. ver. 19. It had nothing but types and figures of what was to be fulfilled under the priesthood of Christ. The priests died, and succeeded one to another; and there was need of different sacrifices, which they were to offer daily for their own sins and for the sins of the people; but Christ was innocent, undefiled, separated from sinners, (ver. 26,) could not sin, but by suffering once has redeemed all, has satisfied for the sins of all mankind, and by this one sacrifice can save all that come to him by faith, hope, and love; he lives for ever to make intercession for us, as our Mediator and Redeemer. Christ's sacrifice and oblation on the cross is that one sacrifice of the new law which remains and will be continued by his ministers, the priests of the new law, to the end of the world, the manner only being different, but not the sacrifice. This is the doctrine of the Catholic Church, delivered to the faithful in the Council of Trent,* (Sess. 22, cap. 2,) where it is declared that in the mass is continued the same sacrifice and oblation which Christ offered, who is still the chief priest, in whose name only his ministers, the bishops and priests, speak and act as his instruments. The Victim that is offered is also the same, to wit, the body and blood of Christ, after a spiritual and unbloody manner, according to his command at his last supper. The oblation at the mass is indeed a true and proper sacrifice, yet not a new or different sacrifice of expiation for the sins of mankind, but an application of Christ's satisfactions and merits, which, though of infinite value, and more than sufficient to satisfy for the sins of the whole world, yet by the will of God are to be applied to us by faith, by the sacraments, by the same sacrifice of Christ's body and blood, offered at the mass, &c. Wi.

VER. 23. Many priests, &c. The apostle notes this difference between the high priests of the law, and our high priest, Jesus Christ; that they being removed by death, made way for their successors; whereas our Lord Jesus is a priest for ever, and hath no successor; but liveth and concurreth for ever with his ministers, the priests of the New Testament, in all their functions. Secondly, that no one priest of the law, nor all of them together, could offer that absolute sacrifice of everlasting redemption, which our one high priest, Jesus Christ, has offered once, and for ever. Ch.

VER. 25. Make intercession. Christ, as man, continually maketh intercession for us, by representing his passion to his Father. Ch.

26 For it was fitting that we should have such a high priest, holy, innocent, undefiled, separated from sinners, and made higher than the heavens :

27 Who needeth not daily as other priests, * to offer sacrifices first for his own sins, and then for the people's : for this he did once, by offering up himself.

28 For the law maketh men priests, who have infirmity ; but the word of the oath, which is after the law, the Son who is perfected for evermore.

CHAP. VIII.

More of the excellence of the priesthood of Christ, and of the New Testament.

NOW of the things spoken, the sum is : We have such an high priest, who is set on the right hand of the throne of majesty in the heavens ;

2 A minister of the holies, and of the true tabernacle, which the Lord hath pitched, and not man.

3 For every high priest is appointed to offer gifts and sacrifices : wherefore it is necessary that he also should have something to offer :

4 If then he were on earth, he would not be a priest : seeing there would be others who should offer gifts according to the law.

* Lev. xvi. 6.

VER. 27. Jesus Christ offered himself but once in a bloody manner on the cross ; but, besides this bloody offering, he still continues to offer himself in an unbloody manner. This he does both in heaven and upon earth : in heaven, by presenting his sacred humanity continually to his Father ; and on earth, by daily offering himself, under the appearances of bread and wine, on our altars. Hence this eucharistic sacrifice is both a commemoration and continuation of the sacrifice of the cross. To understand this, it must be observed, that the essence of a sacrifice includes several actions, the principal of which are the immolation of the victim, and the oblation of the victim when immolated. Now the sacrifice of Jesus Christ on the cross ended only as to the bloody immolation ; the same victim is still immolated mystically by the separate consecration of the bread and wine, and continues as to the oblation. Jesus Christ, in quality of the eternal high priest, has carried his victim, i. e. his body, into heaven, and there offers it continually to his Father. He continues also his sacrifice here on earth, by the ministry of his priests ; who to the end of time will offer to God the same immolated victim, present on our altars under the appearance of bread and wine—a sacrifice infinitely perfect, since a God is the priest, and a God the victim. The chief priest who offers it is a God-man ; the victim offered is a Man-God : a God the victim, offered by a God the priest ! Let us now examine the sentiments of learned Protestant divines : “ It is certain,” says Dr. Grabe, “ that Irenæus and all the Fathers ; either contemporary with the apostles, or their immediate successors, whose writings are still extant, considered the blessed Eucharist to be the sacrifice of the new law, and offered bread and wine on the altar, as sacred oblations to God the Father ; and that this was not the private opinion of any particular Church or teacher, but the public doctrine and practice of the universal Church, which she received from the apostles, and they from Christ, is expressly shown by Irenæus, and before him by Justin Martyr and Clement of Rome.” Nota in Irenæum, p. 323.—“ The elements being really changed from ordinary bread and wine into the body and blood of Christ, mystically present, as in a sacrament, and that by virtue of the consecration, not by the faith of him that receives, I am to admit and maintain whatsoever appears duly consonant to this truth, viz. that the elements so consecrated are truly the sacrifice of Christ upon the cross, inasmuch as the body and blood of Christ are contained in them. . . . And the sacrifice of the cross being necessarily propitiatory, and impetratory both, it cannot be denied that the sacrament of the Eucharist, inasmuch as it is the same sacrifice with that upon the cross, is also both propitiatory and impetratory.” Thorndike Epil. p. 44 and 46.—“ The holy Fathers frequently say, that in the Eucharist is offered and sacrificed the very body of Christ, as is evident in almost innumerable places.” Bp. Forbes’ de Euch. l. 3, c. 2, sect. 10.—“ The sacrifice of the supper is not only propitiatory, and may be offered up for the remission of our daily sins, but likewise is impetratory, and may be rightly offered for the obtaining all blessings. Although the Scripture does not plainly and in express words teach this, yet the holy Fathers with universal consent have thus understood the Scripture, as has been demonstrated by many ; and all the ancient liturgies prescribe, that in time of the oblation, prayers be offered for peace, &c., as is evident to all.” Id. Sect. 12.

things. As it was answered to Moses, when he was to finish the tabernacles : See^b (saith he) that thou make all things according to the pattern which was shown thee on the mount.

6 But now he hath obtained a better ministry, by how much also he is the mediator of a better testament, which is established on better promises.

7 For if that first had been faultless, there should not indeed a place have been sought for a second.

8 For finding fault with them, he saith : ‘ Behold the days shall come, saith the Lord, when I will make a new testament with the house of Israel and with the house of Juda,

9 Not according to the testament which I made to their fathers, on the day when I took them by the hand to lead them out of the land of Egypt : for they continued not in my testament : and I regarded them not, saith the Lord.

CHAP. VIII. VER. 1. *Of the things spoken * the sum is.* This word sum, many expound, as if S. Paul said, I will sum up, and give you an abridgment or recapitulation of what I have said. But S. Chrys. and others, by the Greek word rather understand the chief, or greatest thing of all, when he adds, that Christ is our high priest, who is set on the right hand of the throne of majesty in the heavens. Wi.

VER. 2 A minister of the holies. Lit. of the holy places, and of the true tabernacle : he adds true, to signify that though he speaks with an allusion to the sanctuary, and the priests of the former law, yet that Christ hath now entered into the true holy of holies ; that is, into heaven, of which the Jewish sanctuary was only a type or figure.—Which the Lord hath pitched, and not man ; i. e. all the parts of the Jewish sanctuary was the work of men’s hands ; but heaven, the habitation prepared for the saints, is the work of God. Wi.

VER. 3. For every high priest, &c. That is, as all priests are ordained to offer up to God some gifts and sacrifices ; so Christ, a priest for ever, has now in heaven something to offer to his eternal Father ; to wit, the infinite merits and satisfactions of his death and passion. This he doth in heaven, and also by the ministry of his priests on earth, who offer the same in his name. Wi.—This is the daily sacrifice of Christians, foretold plainly by Malachi, chap. i. 10, 11. This is also clearly mentioned by S. Justin, Dial. cum Tryphone ; Tert. co. M. l. 3, c. 21 ; Iren. l. 4, c. 32 ; Cyp. l. 1, adv. Jud. ; Ens. l. 1, Dein. Evan. ; Chrys. in Psal. xvi. ; Aug. l. 18, de Civ. Dei, c. 35, &c., &c. For authorities see annotations on chap. x. of this Epistle.

VER. 4. If then he were on earth, he would not be a priest. He speaks of a priest according to the custom of the Jews, where none were priests but of the tribe of Levi, and Jesus Christ was of the tribe of Juda : and if the law of Moses was to continue, there would not want priests to offer sacrifices according to their worship, though such priests were only employed about things that were types and shadows of heavenly things in the new law after Christ’s coming, and of the sacrifice by which he offered himself on the cross. And this God doubtless revealed to Moses, when he said to him : take heed “ thou make all things according to the pattern which was shown thee on the mount.” Wi.—Earth, &c. That is, if he were not of a higher condition than the Levitical order of earthly priests, and had not another kind of sacrifice to offer, he should be excluded by them from the priesthood and its functions, which by the law were appropriated to their tribe. Ch.

VER. 5. Who serve unto, &c. The priesthood of the law and its functions were a kind of an example, and shadow of what is done by Christ in his Church militant and triumphant, of which the tabernacle was a pattern. Ch.

VER. 8. For finding fault with them. It is not said here, blaming the law, says S. Chrys., which in itself was good, just, and holy, (see Rom. vii. 12,) but blaming the breakers and transgressors of it ; not but that men were saved in the time of the law, who by God’s grace believed in their Redeemer that was to come, and lived well. Wi.

VER. 10. For this is the testament which I will make with the house of Israel, and with all nations, as I promised to Abraham, I will give (lit. by giving) my laws into their mind, and I will write this new law, not as the former, in tables of stone, but in their hearts, and to them I will be a merciful God, and they shall be my elect people. Wi.—The Jews were like slaves, and God ruled them as a master ; Christians are his children, and God rules them as a father : and so great is the efficacy of this Divine teacher, that by means of a short and easy catechism, children are now taught to know God more perfectly than the first sages of antiquity by their abstruse and erudite disquisitions.

VER. 11. They shall not teach, &c. So great shall be the light and grace * and every man his brother, saying: Know the Lord: for all shall know me, from the least to the greatest of them:

12 Because I will be merciful to their iniquities, and their sins I will remember no more.

13 Now in saying a new, he hath made the former old. And that which decayeth and groweth old, is near its end.

CHAP. IX.

The sacrifices of the law were far inferior to that of Christ.

THE former indeed had also justification of worship, and a worldly sanctuary.

2 *For the first tabernacle was made, wherein were the candlesticks, and the table, and the setting forth of loaves, which is called the holy.

3 And after the second veil, the tabernacle, which is called the holy of holies:

4 Having the golden ^bcenser, and the ark of the covenant covered about on every part with gold, in which was the golden urn that had manna, and the rod of Aaron that had blossomed, and the ^ctables of the testament.

the new testament, that it shall not be necessary to inculcate to the faithful the belief and knowledge of the true God, for they shall all know him. Ch.—All shall know me, &c. This seems to signify, that by the truths which Christ preached, and which the apostles published to all nations, the faithful in the new law should have a greater knowledge of God, of the true manner of worshipping him, and of heavenly things, and also greater and more abundant graces, than they before Christ's coming. They shall also serve God with greater fidelity, by considering his mercies in sending them a Redeemer to free them from the slavery of sins and damnation, of which they stood guilty. Wi.

VER. 13. In calling this testament a new one, he hath made the former old. This is to put the Hebrews in mind that the former law, as to its ceremonies and sacrifices, is now to be laid aside, and the new law or testament to be received and complied with. Wi.

* V. 1. Capitulum super ea quæ dicuntur, κεφάλαιον ἐπὶ τοῖς λεγομένοις. Beza and others reprehend here the ancient Latin interpreter. They have as much reason to blame the Greek original. S. Aug. observes, that the Latin interpreter was more solicitous to follow exactly the sense than to write proper Latin.

† V. 4. Exemplari et umbræ deserviunt, ὑποδείγματι, καὶ σκιᾷ λατρεύουσι. It signifies, that they served God by those things that were types and figures of more perfect and heavenly things.

CHAP. IX. VER. 1. *The former. In the ordinary Greek copies is expressed, the former tabernacle; but even the Prot. translators have abandoned that reading, and understand the former testament or covenant, which they have put in a different character.—Worldly sanctuary, or a temporal sanctuary, to last only for a time, like the things of this world. Wi.—The word justification (δικαίωμα) is frequently used for the laws and ordinances of God, because the observance of the laws is the justification of man; see particularly in the 118th Psalm the legal rites justified in regard to the outward policy of the Jews.

VER. 2. First tabernacle. By this word is signified the sanctuary or place for worshipping God, ordained by Moses, which was an oratory to be moved from place to place with the Israelites, which they kept afterwards, and had a resemblance of it in the temple. This tabernacle consisted of two parts, which S. Paul here calls the first and second. The first part was called the holy, which was separated from the rest of the temple by a veil. In this first part were the candlesticks, i. e. one candlestick, as it is called, Exod. xxv. 37, having seven branches, in which were placed lamps; and a table, on which were placed twelve loaves, according to the number of the Jewish tribes, to be changed every week. Wi.

VER. 4. Having the golden censer. What is meant by this is uncertain, no mention being made of a golden censer in either part of the tabernacle made by the order of Moses, which the apostle here speaks of. Some say that the high priest, when he entered once a year into the holy of holies, made use of a golden censer, which he left there: but this is merely a conjecture. Others think that by the golden censer is meant the altar of perfumes, or where perfumes were burnt, which was as it were a large censer, and is called by the same Greek word by Josephus, the historian; but then there occurs this difficulty, that this altar was in that first part called the holy, not in the holy of holies, to which the same interpreters answer, that this altar was placed just at the entrance into the holy of holies, and so may be looked upon as belonging to the holy of holies: nor does the text say it was in the holy of holies, but only having, &c., as a town may be said to have fortifications which are not within the town itself.—And the tables of the testament, or covenant. The ark was certainly in the holy of holies, in which was the golden urn, with a measure of manna, and Aaron's rod that budded, and the tables of the testament, or the tables of stone, on which were engraven the ten ing the propitiatory: of which it is not needful to speak now particularly.

6 Now these things being thus ordered: into the first tabernacle the priests indeed always entered, accomplishing the offices of the sacrifices:

7 But into the second, the high priest alone, ^donce a year; not without blood, which he offereth for his own, and the people's ignorance:

8 The Holy Ghost signifying this, that the way into the sanctuary was not yet made manifest, whilst the former tabernacle was yet standing.

9 Which is a parable of the time then present: according to which gifts and sacrifices are offered, which cannot, as to the conscience, make him perfect that serveth, only in meats and in drinks.

10 And divers washings, and justifications of the flesh, laid on them until the time of correction.

11 But Christ being present, a high priest of the good things to come, by a greater and more perfect tabernacle, not made with hands, that is, not of this creation:

12 Neither by the blood of goats, or of calves, but by commandments. Wi.—In the Greek it is easy to confound the word θυσιαστήριον, which signifies altar, with θυμιατήριον, which means censer. It was placed adjoining to the inward veil, so that the clouds of the incense filled the holy of holies; and hence it is mentioned by S. Paul as contained therein.—The apostle describes these things as they were in the tabernacle which Moses constructed in the desert. V.

VER. 5. And over it (the ark) were the cherubims of glory, or glorious cherubims, (in what shape they were represented is not certain,) overshadowing the propitiatory, or seat of mercy, which was all of gold, of the same size with the ark, and like a cover to it. Just over this propitiatory were placed the two cherubims, spreading their wings, looking towards one another, and upon the propitiatory. See Exod. xxxvi. and xxxvii. From this place God made known his presence, and the effects of his mercy, to the people. Here he was said to be seated on the cherubims, and that the ark was his footstool. Psal. xcvi. Adore his footstool; i. e. prostrate before his ark. These two images of cherubs show that God did not absolutely forbid images at that time, when the people were so addicted to idolatry, but only to adore them. Wi.

VER. 6. The offices of the sacrifices. The priests, as he tells us, entered every day, that is, by turns, (see Luke i. 5.) to make the offering of incense morning and night, also to change the loaves, take care of the lamps, &c. But we must not think that they offered in that place victims or holocausts of sheep, lambs, oxen, &c. This was not done in any part of the sanctuary, neither before nor after the building of the temple, but in a place or court adjoining to the tabernacle, upon a large altar of five cubits long and as many broad. See Exod. xxvii. and xxxviii. Wi.

VER. 8. The Holy Ghost signifying this. Here the apostle begins to tell us in what manner the sanctuary was a figure of things in the new law of Christ. The holy of holies was a figure of heaven, and this prohibition of any one going into it was to signify that the way to heaven was not to be made manifest, nor to be opened, as long as the former tabernacle and law subsisted; that it was not to be opened till Christ, the high priest of the new testament, first entered, by shedding his blood on the cross, and by his glorious ascension. Wi.—But when Christ expired the veil of the temple was rent asunder, to show that the way to heaven was now laid open to mankind.

VER. 9, 10. Which is a parable of the time then present; or, unto the present time, as in the Greek. —By the present time, according to the common exposition, is not meant the time of the new law, as some would have it, but the time of the former law; so that the sense is, which parable or type was a representation of things as they were to be performed, and to last during the time of the law, which was before present.—According to which. These words must not be referred to gifts and sacrifices, but to the worshipper (lit. server); and the sense is, that to the priests, who worshipped and served God in the sanctuary and in offering sacrifices, was not prescribed an interior purity and sanctity, as in the new law, but only that legal sanctity which consisted in abstaining from such meats or drinks as were called unclean, or made them unclean. See Lev. x. 9, where the priests are forbidden to drink wine when they were to enter into the tabernacle of the testimony. Wi.—Of correction; viz. when Christ should correct and settle all things. Ch.

VER. 11. Christ being present and come,† is a high priest of the good things to come; of things which we hope for in heaven.—He has entered by a more perfect tabernacle; i. e. not passing, like the priests of the former law, into a tabernacle made by human art and hands, but by the tabernacle of his own body or flesh, says S. Chrys., framed by the Holy Ghost. Wi.

VER. 12. By the blood of goats, &c. This is another difference and pre-eminence of Christ above the priests of the law of Moses, that they could only offer the blood of beasts; but Christ entered into heaven by the effusion of his own precious blood in his sufferings, and on the cross, by this having found an eternal his own blood, entered once into the sanctuary, having obtained eternal redemption.

13 * For if the blood of goats and of oxen, and the ashes of an heifer, being sprinkled, sanctify such as are defiled, to the cleansing of the flesh :

14 ^b How much more shall the blood of Christ, who, through the Holy Ghost, offered himself without spot to God, cleanse our conscience from dead works, to serve the living God ?

15 And, therefore, he is the mediator of the new testament : ^c that by means of his death, for the redemption of those transgressions, which were under the former testament, they who are called may receive the promise of eternal inheritance.

16 For where there is a testament, the death of the testator must of necessity intervene.

17 For a testament is of force, after men are dead : otherwise it is not yet of force, whilst the testator liveth.

18 Whereupon neither was the first indeed dedicated without blood.

19 For when every commandment of the law had been read by Moses to all the people, he took the blood of calves and goats, with water and scarlet wool, and hyssop, and sprinkled both the book itself and all the people,

^a Lev. xvi. 15.—^b 1 Pet. i. 19 ; 1 John i. 7 ; Apoc. i. 5.—^c Gal. iii. 15.

redemption for mankind, having satisfied for the sins of all men in the sight of God, which the former priests, with all their sacrifices, could not do. Wi.—Eternal redemption. By that one sacrifice of his blood, once offered on the cross, Christ our Lord paid and exhibited, once for all, the general price and ransom of all mankind ; which no other priest could do. Ch.

VER. 13, 14. For if the blood of goats, &c. Another main difference betwixt the sacrifices in the old, and that of Christ in the new law. Those imperfect carnal sacrifices could only make the priests and the people reputed clean, so that they were no longer to be treated as transgressors, and liable to punishments, prescribed and inflicted by the law : but the sacrifice of Christ has made our consciences interiorly clean, and sanctified them even in the sight of God. Having offered himself unspotted to God by the Holy Ghost, the Divine Spirit of the Holy Ghost moving Christ as man to make this oblation of himself, though free from all sin, and incapable of sinning. And being this oblation was made by him, who was God as well as man, it was an oblation of infinite value, which repaired the injury done to God by sin, and redeemed mankind from the slavery of sin. Wi.

VER. 15. And therefore he is the mediator of the new testament. The mediator, so as to be our Redeemer, which agrees only to our Saviour. Christ. Moses is called a mediator betwixt God and his people. See Gal. iii. 19, and 1 Tim. ii. 5, &c. The saints in heaven, and men on earth, may be called mediators in an inferior and different sense : but Christ alone is the mediator who reconciled God to men, by satisfying for their sins, and by a redemption from the slavery of sin. This sense, in which Christ is the mediator of the New Testament, is expressed in these following words : that by means of his death, for the redemption of those transgressions which were under the former testament, they who are called may receive the promise of eternal inheritance ; that is, Christ, by his death, redeemed all men. Wi.

VER. 16. For where there is a testament, the death of the testator, &c. The same Greek word, corresponding to the Hebrew word Berith, is often used both in the books of the old and new Scriptures. The ancient Latin interpreter puts for it testamentum, a testament : but others would rather have the Hebrew and Greek word to signify any agreement, bargain, alliance, or covenant, which last word is generally put in the English Prot. translations. We do not deny but the Hebrew and Greek word have this signification, but not only : this place of S. Paul shows evidently that they also signify what both in Latin and English is called a testament or last will, which is only of force by the death of the testator. The Protestants, therefore, here find themselves obliged to translate testament, contrary to their custom, and to apply this word not only to the promises and blessings God made to Christians, of which Christ is the mediator, and which were confirmed by his blood and by his death, but also to the former alliance and promises or blessings God made to the Israelites, when he chose them to be his elect people, and gave them his law and his commandments under Moses. It is true God is immortal in his own nature, cannot die, and therefore cannot make a testament that shall be confirmed by his own death. But as for the new alliance, or New Testament, as here it must be called, it was confirmed by the death of the Son of God ; that is, of God made man, by which it is true to say that God died for us, though he did not die, nor could die, as God. Wi.

VER. 20. This is the blood of the testament, which God hath enjoined unto you 20 Saying : "This is the blood of the testament, which God hath enjoined unto you.

21 The tabernacle also and all the vessels of the ministry, in like manner, he sprinkled with blood.

22 And almost all things, according to the law, are cleansed with blood : and without the shedding of blood, there is no remission.

23 It is necessary, therefore, that the patterns of heavenly things should be cleansed with these ; but the heavenly things themselves with better sacrifices than these.

24 For Jesus hath not entered into the holy places made with hands, the patterns of the true : but into heaven itself, that he may appear now in the presence of God for us :

25 Nor yet that he should offer himself often, as the high priest entereth into the holy places every year with the blood of others :

26 For then he ought to have suffered often from the beginning of the world : but now once at the end of ages, he hath appeared for the destruction of sin, by the sacrifice of himself.

27 And as it is appointed for men once to die, and after this the judgment :

28 * So also Christ was offered once to exhaust the sins of many ; the second time he shall appear without sin to them that expect him unto salvation.

^d Exod. xxiv. 8.—^e Rom. v. 9 ; 1 Pet. iii. 18.

(Exod. xxiv.) ; that is, this is to confirm that testament. Christ made use of the like words, when he bequeathed us the Divine legacy of his Body and Blood, at his last supper, saying. (Matt. xxvi. 28.) This is my blood of the new testament. And as the words in Exodus were understood of the true blood of the victims offered, so the words of Christ signify the true blood of Christ, there really present in the sacrament, in a spiritual manner, and to be shed in a bloody manner upon the cross. Wi.

VER. 22. S. Paul speaks here of legal purifications and remissions, which (ver. 10) he calls earnal justices and ordinances, (ver. 13,) purifying the flesh. How then, it may be asked, were sins remitted under the law ? I answer, by true repentance, joined with faith and hope in the promised Messiah.

VER. 23. It is, or was, necessary that the patterns of heavenly things (i. e. the former tabernacle and sanctuary) should be cleansed with these ; that is, by the blood of such victims then offered.—But the heavenly things themselves with better sacrifices. By the heavenly things may be understood the faithful, who are the members of Christ's Church, to whom heaven is prepared, and who must be cleansed by better sacrifices ; that is, by the blood of Christ, and by his sacrifice on the cross. Wi.

VER. 25. Should offer himself, &c. He takes notice that Christ, by virtue of his sacrifice, and his dying once on the cross, satisfied for the sins of all men that ever were from the beginning of the world. Wi.—Christ shall never more offer himself in sacrifice, in that violent, painful, and bloody manner, nor can there be any occasion for it ; since by that one sacrifice upon the cross he has furnished the full ransom, redemption, and remedy for all the sins of the world. But this hinders not that he may offer himself in the sacred mysteries in an unbloody manner, for the daily application of that one sacrifice of redemption to our souls. Ch.

VER. 26. He came at the end of ages, as it were in the last age of the world, to the putting away or abrogating of sin. Wi.

VER. 28. To exhaust. That is, to empty or draw out to the very bottom, by a plentiful and perfect redemption. Ch.

* V. 1. Habuit et prius, εἶχε ἡ πρώτη. Though almost all Greek copies have σκηνή, tabernacle : yet even the Prot. translators add in a different print, covenant, as if διαθήκη was understood. Ibid. Sanctum sæculare, κοσμικόν. This Greek word is only found in one other place in the New Testament, Titus ii. 12, sæcularia desideria.

† V. 4. Habens thuribulum aureum, χρυσῶν ἔχονσα θυμιατήριον. Josephus useth the same word for the altar of perfumes, lib. 6, de Bello, c. 6, and lib. 3, Antiq. e. 7. Ibid. In quâ, ἐν ᾗ. It may signify the same as cum quâ.

‡ V. 11. Christus assistens, παραγενόμενος, which may signify being come, and present. Ibid. Tabernaculum, σκηνή, by which S. Chrys. expounds his body or flesh, τὴν σάρκα ἐνταῦθα λέγει λόγ. ιε. p. 513.

§ V. 15. Novi Testamenti, διαθήκης καινῆς. The Prot. translators here found it necessary to print, not covenant, as in other places, but testament, even when the apostle speaks of the first, or old διαθήκη, (ver. 18 and 20,) might they not then as well have translated Testament in the last chapter, especially when mention was there made of the New Testament in the prophecy of Jer. ? might they not as well have translated, (Gal. iv. 24,) for these are two testaments, as these are two

CHAP. X.

Because of the insufficiency of the sacrifices of the law, Christ, our high priest, shed his own blood for us, offering up once for all the sacrifice of our redemption. He exhorts them to perseverance.

FOR the law having a shadow of the good things to come, not the very image of the things: can never with those same sacrifices, which they offer continually every year, make the comers thereunto perfect:

2 For then they would have ceased to be offered: because the worshippers once cleansed should have no conscience of sin any longer:

3 But in them there is made a remembrance of sins every year.

4 For it is impossible that with the blood of oxen and goats sins should be taken away.

5 Therefore coming into the world, he saith: * Sacrifice and oblation thou wouldst not: but a body thou hast fitted to me:

6 Holocausts for sin did not please thee.

7 Then said I: Behold I come: ^bin the head of the book it is written of me: that I should do thy will, O God.

8 In saying before: Sacrifices and oblations, and holocausts, for sin thou wouldst not, neither are they pleasing to thee, which are offered according to the law.

9 Then said I: Behold, I come to do thy will, O

^a Psal. xxxix. 7.—^b Psal. xxxix. 8

covenants† and so in other places, where there is the same Greek word διαθήκη. Mr. N. has followed the Prot. translation. The Sept. put διαθήκη for the Hebrew word Berith, which indeed is expounded to signify fœdus or pactum; that is, any agreement, alliance, or covenant, which in the Greek is rather συνθήκη than διαθήκη. See scapula. We may, I believe, safely say that Berith also signifies testament, or a last will and testament, till they who are translating it by covenant, can show us some other Hebrew word for testamentum, which I think they have not hitherto done. I find that Mr. Legh, in his Crit. Sac. on the primitive Hebrew words, writes thus: Berith signifieth both συνθήκη, a compact or covenant between parties, as Aquila translatheth; and διαθήκη, a testament, or disposition of one's last will, as the Sept. translate. He cites in the Margent Drusius and Mercerus.

CHAP. X. VER. 1. The law having a shadow of the good things to come.* The apostle continues till the 19th verse to show the insufficiency of the former law, as to the redemption and salvation of mankind. By the good things to come, some understand heaven itself, and the happiness of the elect there, of which the law was but a shadow, whereas we have a much more perfect image and knowledge of heaven in the new law, than they who were under the former law. Others by good things to come, understand the blessings of interior graces, with a remission of our sins in the sight of God, and true sanctification, of which all the sacrifices and sacraments of the old law, without a faith in Christ, were but a shadow: and now in the new law we have an express image of them, i. e. we have these blessings themselves. Wi.

VER. 2. Then they would have † ceased to be offered. If they had been of themselves perfect to all the intents of redemption and remission, as Christ's death is, there would have been no occasion of so often repeating them; as there is no occasion for Christ's dying any more for our sins. Ch.

VER. 5—9. Therefore Christ, as it were, coming into the world, he saith, by the Psalmist, (xxxix. 7, 8,) Sacrifice and oblation thou didst not desire, &c. That is, such sacrifices as were offered in the former law, they could not please thee, appease thy anger, nor make a sufficient reparation for sin.—But a † body thou hast fitted to me. Thou didst decree I should be made man, to suffer and die upon a cross to redeem mankind. And I as willingly undertook the work of man's redemption.—Behold I come: in the head of the book it is written of me.‡ That is, in the volumes of the Scriptures. Wi.

VER. 10. The source and primary cause of our sanctification is the will of God, who so loved the world as to give us his only Son; the meritorious cause of our sanctification is the voluntary oblation of Jesus Christ, sacrificed for us upon the cross.

VER. 14. By one oblation || he hath perfected or consummated for ever them that are sanctified, or justified, because this one oblation was sufficient to sanctify all men. Wi.

VER. 15—18. The Holy Ghost also doth testify this to us, and assures us of this, by the prophet Jeremy, (chap. xxxi. 33,) in the words above cited, (chap. viii. 8,) when he promises to give a new testament, and that he will remember no more their sins.—Now where there is a remission of these, there is no more an oblation for sin. That is, there is no need of any other oblation to redeem us from sin,

God: he taketh away the first, that he may establish that which followeth.

10 By the which will, we are sanctified by the oblation of the body of Jesus Christ once.

11 And every priest indeed standeth daily ministering, and often offering the same sacrifices, which can never take away sins:

12 But he offering one sacrifice for sins, for ever sitteth on the right hand of God, 13 From henceforth expecting* until his enemies be made his footstool.

14 For by one oblation he hath perfected for ever them that are sanctified.

15 And the Holy Ghost also doth testify this to us. For after that he had said:

16 "And this is the testament which I will make unto them after those days, saith the Lord, giving my laws in their hearts, and in their minds I will write them:

17 And their sins and iniquities I will remember no more.

18 Now where there is a remission of these, there is no more an oblation for sin.

19 Having therefore, brethren, a confidence in the entering into the sanctuary by the blood of Christ,

20 A new and living way, which he hath dedicated for us through the veil, that is to say, his flesh,

^c Psal. cix. 2; 1 Cor. xv. 25.—^d Jer. xxxi. 33; Supra, viii. 8.

after the price of our redemption from sin is paid. There is no need of any other different oblation; all that is wanting, is the application of the merits and satisfactions of Christ. No need of those sacrifices, which were ordered in the law of Moses. To convince them of this is the main design of S. Paul in this place. The pretended reformers, from several expressions of S. Paul in this chapter, think they have clear proofs that no sacrifice at all ought to be offered after Christ's one sacrifice on the cross; and that so many sacrifices and oblations of masses, are both needless and against the doctrine of the apostle, who says, that Christ by one oblation hath perfected for ever them that are sanctified, ver. 14. And again, that where there is a remission of sins, now there is no more an oblation for sin. This objection, which is obvious enough, was not first invented by the Calvinists against them they nickname Papists: the same is found in the ancient Fathers; and by their answers, and what they have witnessed concerning the daily sacrifice of the mass, they may find their doctrine of a religion without a continued sacrifice evidently against the doctrine and practice of the Catholic Church from the first ages of Christian religion, till they came to be reformers, not of manners, but of the Catholic belief. Hear S. Chrys., (hom. 17,) in his Commentary on this very chapter: "What then," saith he, "do not we offer up (or make an oblation) every day? We offer up indeed, but with a remembrance of his death. And this oblation is one, and not many. How is it one, and not many? . . . because, as he that is offered many times, and in many places, is the same body, not many and different bodies, so is it one sacrifice. He (Christ) is our high priest, who offered this sacrifice, by which we are cleansed; we now offer up the same. . . He said, Do this in remembrance of me. We do not do or offer a different sacrifice, but the very same, as then our high priest." The Council of Trent, as we have already cited the words, (chap. vii,) teacheth the very same as S. Chrys., who never says, as some one of late hath pretended, that what we offer is a remembrance only. This doctrine and practice is not only witnessed by S. Chrys., but generally by the ancient Fathers and interpreters, as we have taken notice in short in the annotations on S. Matt. See S. Ignatius, in his Epistle to the people of Smyrna; S. Justin, in his Dialogue with Tryphon; S. Iren. 4, c. 32, and 34; Tertull. lib. de Velandis Virg.; Euseb. l. 1, de Demonst. Evang. c. ult.; S. Jerom. ep. ad Evangelum; S. Amb. in Psal. xxxviii., and on chap. 1. of S. Luke, S. Aug. l. 16, de Civ. Dei, c. 22, l. 1, cont.; Advers. Legis, c. 20, and lib. 9, Confess. c. 12; S. Chrys., hom. 60, ad Pop. Antiochenum, et hom. 72 in Matt. the first Gen. Coun. of Nice.—But from this one oblation on the cross and remission of sins, obtained by our Saviour Christ, will our adversaries pretend insisting on the bare letter, that Christ has done all for us, and that we need do nothing, unless perhaps to endeavour to catch hold of the justifying cloak of Christ's justice by faith only? At this rate the love of God and of our neighbour, a life of self-denials, such as Christ preached to every one in the gospel, the practices of prayer, fastings, almsdeeds, and all good works, the sacraments instituted by our Saviour Christ may be all safely laid aside; and we may conclude from hence, that all men's sins are remitted before they are committed. Wi.—Where there is a full remission of sins, as in baptism, there is no more occasion for a sin-offering to be made for such sins already remitted; and as for sins committed afterwards, they can only be remitted in virtue of the one oblation of Christ's death. Ch.

VER. 20. A new and living way; that is, having a new way, which he hath 21 And a high priest over the house of God :

22 Let us draw near with a true heart in fulness of faith, having our hearts sprinkled from an evil conscience, and our bodies washed with clean water.

23 Let us hold fast the confession of our hope without wavering (for he is faithful who hath promised)

24 And let us consider one another to provoke unto charity and to good works :

25 Not forsaking our assembly as some are accustomed, but comforting one another, and so much the more as you see the day approaching.

26 *For if we sin wilfully after having received the knowledge of the truth, there is now left no sacrifice for sins,

27 But a certain dreadful expectation of judgment and the rage of a fire, which shall consume the adversaries.

28 A man making void the law of Moses, dieth without any mercy under ^btwo or three witnesses :

29 How much more, do you think he deserveth worse punishments, who hath trodden under foot the Son of God, and hath esteemed the blood of the testament unclean, with which he was sanctified, and hath offered an affront to the Spirit of grace ?

30 For we know him who hath said : *Revenge becometh to me, and I will repay. And again : The Lord shall judge his people.

* Supra, vi. 4.—b Deut. xvii. 6; Matt. xviii. 16; John viii. 17; 2 Cor. xiii. 1.

traced out and opened for us, by entering himself first into heaven, through the veil, i. e. through his flesh, or by taking upon him our flesh or human nature. He speaks with an allusion and comparison to the high priest of the former law, who, to enter into the sanctuary, was to pass through the veil of separation. He compares Christ's flesh or body to this veil, inasmuch as Christ entered into the sanctuary of heaven by his sufferings in the flesh, and by the death of his body on the cross; or, inasmuch as the Divinity of Christ was hidden from us by the veil of his human nature, as the sanctuary was hidden from the people by its veils. Wi.

VER. 21. And a high priest; i. e. and having a great priest, to wit, Christ, over the house of God, that is, over the Church, or over all the faithful, both in the Church militant on earth and in the Church triumphant in heaven. Wi.

VER. 22. Let us draw near with a full and firm faith, our hearts being cleansed and sprinkled from sin. He again alludes to that ceremony, by which the high priest of the Jews on the feast, called of expiation, sprinkled the people with the blood of the victim offered. Wi.—Ἐν πληροφωρίᾳ πιστεύουσιν. The Prot. version gives erroneously, in full assurance of faith. See Ward's Errata.

VER. 25. Not forsaking our assembly. S. Chrys. understands the assemblies of Christians, where they met to celebrate Divine mysteries. Others expound it of not leaving the faith and communion of the Catholic Church, by turning apostates: this is confirmed by the following words, for if we sin wilfully, . . . there is now left no sacrifice for sins. The Novatian heretics understood no pardon for sins after baptism. S. Chrys. and others understood no second baptism, where-with to be cleansed in the same manner as before; but the most probable interpretation, and most agreeable to the text and doctrine of S. Paul, seems to be, that now remained no sacrifice for sins, i. e. no other sacrifice but that of Christ, which the apostate renouncing, by quitting and abandoning his faith, thereby cuts himself off from the very groundwork and foundation of salvation, as long as he continues in his apostacy. So that nothing remains for him but a dreadful expectation  of God's just and severe judgments. Wi.

VER. 26. If we sin wilfully. He speaks of the sin of wilful apostacy from the known truth; after which, as we cannot be baptized again, we cannot expect to have that abundant remission of sins, which Christ purchased by his death, applied to our souls in that ample manner as it is in baptism; but we have rather all manner of reason to look for a dreadful judgment; the more, because apostates from the known truth seldom or never have the grace to return to it. Ch.

VER. 28, 29. A man making void, &c. He brings this comparison from the manner that transgressors were dealt with under the law of Moses, to show how much greater punishments Christians deserve when they are ungrateful to Christ after much greater benefits, when they may be said to have trodden under foot the Son of God by despising him, who is the author of their salvation, by shedding his blood upon the cross. Wi.

VER. 37. Yet a little while, and the judge that is to come, and who is to judge every one, will come. Wi.—Ὁ ἐρχόμενος, he who is coming. It is observed by commentators, that this is the appellation given by the Jews to the Messiah. See Matt. xi. 3, and xxi. 9.

VER. 38. But my ^{††} just one, he that liveth according to the doctrine I have taught, liveth by faith, which is the groundwork and foundation of a good life.—But if he withdraw himself, and fall from this faith of Christ, he shall not please my soul. It is a Hebrew way of speaking, and as it were in the person of God.

31 It is a dreadful thing to fall into the hands of the living God.

32 But call to mind the former days, wherein, being illuminated, you sustained a great conflict of afflictions,

33 And on the one part indeed, by reproaches and tribulations were made a spectacle: and on the other part, became companions of them that lived in that manner.

34 For you both had compassion on those who were in chains, and received with joy the plundering of your goods, knowing that you have a better and permanent substance.

35 Do not therefore lose your confidence, which hath a great reward.

36 For patience is necessary for you: that doing the will of God, you may receive the promise.

37 For yet a little while, and he that is to come will come, and will not delay.

38 *But my just one liveth by faith: but if he withdraw himself, he shall not please my soul.

39 But we are not the children of withdrawing unto perdition, but of faith to the salvation of the soul.

CHAP. XI.

What faith is: its wonderful fruits and efficacy, demonstrated in the fathers.

NOW faith is the substance of things hoped for, the conviction of things that appear not.

* Deut. xxxii. 35; Rom. xii. 19.—d Habac. ii. 4; Rom. i. 17; Gal. iii. 11.

Wi.—Luther and Calvin teach that faith alone is sufficient for justification, and they define this faith to be an assured confidence that their sins are forgiven them wholly by Christ's passion. No text, however, in Scripture teaches that a man is justified by faith only. In Romans, (ii.,) Luther makes S. Paul say that a man is justified by faith only, without the works of the law: the authorized Protestant version has omitted the word only, foisted into the German translation. Solidians vainly cite this text, as its obvious meaning is, that neither the works of the written law, done by the Jew, nor the works of the law of nature, done by the Gentile, before either of them believe in Christ, can without faith in Christ justify any one. Saving faith is a faith working through charity in Jesus Christ, a faith which includes hope, love, repentance, and the use of the sacraments. Hence S. James (chap. ii.) declares that a man may have faith but not works, but that faith without works will not save him. S. Paul teaches the same, 1 Cor. xiii. 2, "If I should have all faith, so as to move mountains, and have not charity, I am nothing;" where we should observe the word all faith.

VER. 39. But we are not the children of withdrawing; †† i. e. we are not such as withdraw ourselves in this manner from the true faith to perdition, but remain constant in the faith and law of Christ. Wi.

CHAP. XI. VER. 1. All this chapter is a commendation and recommendation of faith, which is the substance * of things hoped for, giving as it were a subsistence in our minds to such things as we are in hopes and in expectation of hereafter

2 For by this the ancients obtained a testimony.

3 * By faith we understand that the world was framed by the word of God; that from invisible things, visible things might be made.

4 ^b By faith Abel offered to God a sacrifice exceeding that of Cain, ^c by which he obtained a testimony that he was just, God giving testimony to his gifts; and by it he being dead, yet speaketh.

5 ^d By faith Henoch was translated, that he should not see death, and he was not found, because God had translated him: for before his translation he had testimony that he pleased God.

6 But without faith it is impossible to please God. For he that cometh to God, must believe that he is, and is a rewarder of them that seek him.

7 * By faith Noe having received an answer concerning those things which as yet were not seen, moved with fear, framed the ark for the saving of his family, by which he condemned the world: and was instituted heir of the justice which is by faith.

8 ^f By faith he that is called Abraham, obeyed, to go out into a place which he was to receive for an inheritance: and he went out not knowing whither he went.

9 By faith he dwelt in the land of promise, as in a strange country, dwelling in cottages, with Isaac and Jacob, the heirs with him of the same promise.

10 For he looked for a city that hath foundations: whose builder and maker is God.

11 * By faith also Sara herself, being barren, received strength to conceive seed, even past the time of age: because she believed that he was faithful who had promised.

12 For which cause there sprung, even from one (and him utterly decayed) as the stars of heaven in multitude, and as the sand which is by the sea-shore, innumerable.

13 All these died according to faith, not having received the promises, but beholding them afar off, and saluting them, and confessing, that they are pilgrims and strangers on the earth.

14 For they that say these things, do signify that they seek a country.

15 And truly if they had been mindful of that from whence they came out, they had doubtless time to return:

16 But now they desire a better, that is to say, a heavenly one. Therefore God is not ashamed to be called their God: for he hath prepared for them a city.

17 ^h By faith Abraham, when he was tried, offered Isaac; and he who had received the promises, offered up his only begotten son:

18 To whom it was said: ⁱ That in Isaac shall seed be called to thee:

19 Accounting that God is able to raise up even from the dead: from whence also he received him for a parable.

20 ^k By faith also Isaac blessed Jacob and Esau concerning things to come.

21 ^l By faith Jacob, when he was dying, blessed each of the sons of Joseph: ^m and worshipped the top of his rod.

22 ⁿ By faith Joseph, when he was dying, made mention of the going out of the children of Israel: and gave commandment concerning his bones.

23 ^o By faith Moses when he was born, was hid three months by his parents: because they saw he was a comely infant, ^p and they feared not the king's edict.

24 ^q By faith Moses, when he was grown up, denied himself to be the son of Pharaoh's daughter,

25 Choosing rather to suffer persecution with the people of God, than to have the pleasure of sin for a time,

26 Esteeming the reproach of Christ greater riches than the treasure of the Egyptians: for he looked unto the reward.

and making them present to us before they come to pass.—It is also a sure conviction of things that appear not. For when God has revealed things, and we believe them upon the Divine and infallible authority of the revealer, we have a greater certainty of them than any demonstration can afford us. By this virtue of faith, they of old, our forefathers, obtained a testimony from God that their actions were pleasing to him. Wi.

VER. 4. A sacrifice. § Lit. a greater sacrifice than his brother Cain, offering to God the best and fattest cattle he had, by which he obtained a testimony (a mark of God's approbation) that he was just, and his piety pleasing to God. S. Jerom, from a tradition among the Hebrews, thinks that this mark was, that fire descended from heaven upon Abel's sacrifice and not upon that of Cain.—And by it he being dead, yet speaketh. By it, in construction, may be either referred to his faith or to his sacrifice. Some expound it, that by reason of his faith, or of his sacrifice, his memory still lives after his death, and he is commended by all good men. Others think that the apostle alludes to the words which God spoke to Cain, (Gen. iv. 10,) "The voice of thy brother's blood crieth to me from the earth," and that in this manner he is said to have spoken after his death. Wi.

VER. 5. Hench was translated, so as not to die nor see death. In Ecclesiasticus (chap. xlv.) he is said to be translated into paradise. By these words, that he should not see death, it is the general exposition of the ancient interpreters, that he is not dead; but in what place, or in what manner, God preserveth him, we know not. See S. Aug. l. de Pec. Orig. c. 23. S. Chrys., &c. Wi.

VER. 7. Having received an answer, . . . moved with fear; || i. e. with a religious fear: by the Greek, prepared the ark, by which he condemned the rest of the incredulous world, who would not take warning nor believe. Wi.

VER. 11. By faith also Sara, &c. Though Sara seemed at first incredulous, yet she presently believed, and conceived Isaac when she was past the age of having children. Wi.

VER. 12. Him utterly decayed: dead in a manner in that respect, and incapable of having children by Sara. Wi.

VER. 13. All these died in the faith of God's promises; that is, of their posterity, being to be introduced into the promised land of Chanaan, but chiefly into the happy country of heaven. For had they only aspired and wished for the country of Chaldea, out of which Abraham came, they had time enough to have returned thither. Wi.

VER. 19. *Whence also he received him for a parable. Some understand by this, that both Abraham and his son became hereby an example of a perfect obedience to God, which all nations should admire. S. Chrys. says that Abraham received again his son safe in a figure, by being ordered to sacrifice for him a ram, which was a figure of Isaac. Others, that Abraham received again his son Isaac, who was a figure of Christ sacrificed on the cross, and risen again. Christ carried the cross on which he was to suffer, as Isaac carried the wood up to the mountain where he was to have been offered. Wi.—Parable; that is, as a figure of Christ slain and coming to life again. Ch.

VER. 21. Jacob . . . worshipped the top of Joseph's rod, or staff of command, or of his sceptre. See Gen. xlvii. Jacob, by bowing to Joseph and his sceptre, acknowledged and revered the power of Joseph, whom Pharaoh called the saviour of the world; and it is probable that Jacob, by the spirit of prophecy, knew Joseph to be a figure of Christ, and his power to be a figure of the spiritual power of the Messias. Wi.—The apostle here follows the ancient Greek Bible of the seventy interpreters, (which translates in this manner, Gen. xlvii. 31,) and alleges this fact of Jacob, in paying a relative honour and veneration to the top of the rod or sceptre of Joseph, as to a figure of Christ's sceptre and kingdom, as an instance and argument of his faith. But some translators, who are no friends to this relative honour, have corrupted the text, by translating it, he worshipped, leaning upon the top of his staff; as if this circumstance of leaning upon his staff were any argument of Jacob's faith, or worthy the being thus particularly taken notice of by the Holy Ghost (Ch.): besides, if Jacob's staff, and not Joseph's rod or sceptre, had been spoken of, the Greek would have been avrov, sux, not avrov, ejus: but this relative honour or worship is not pleasing to them.

VER. 24—26. By faith Moses . . . chose rather to suffer persecution with the people of God, than to be honoured as the son of Pharaoh's daughter, and to enjoy short sinful pleasures in the court of the king.—Esteeming the reproach of Christ. by which seems to be signified, that Moses, to whom Christ and his sufferings were revealed, chose rather to endure such reproaches and contradictions from his 27 By faith he left Egypt, not fearing the fierceness of the king : for he endured as seeing him that is invisible.

28 ^aBy faith he celebrated the pasch, and the shedding of the blood : that he, who destroyed the first-born, might not touch them.

29 ^bBy faith they passed through the Red Sea, as by dry land : which the Egyptians attempting, were swallowed up.

30 ^cBy faith the walls of Jericho fell down, by the going round them seven days.

31 ^dBy faith Rahab the harlot perished not with the unbelievers, receiving the spies with peace.

32 And what shall I yet say? For the time would fail me to tell of Gedeon, of Barac, of Samson, of Jephthe, of David, of Samuel, and of the prophets :

33 Who through faith subdued kingdoms, wrought justice, obtained promises, stopped the mouths of lions,

34 Quenched the violence of fire, escaped the edge of the sword, recovered from their infirmity, became valiant in war, put to flight the armies of foreigners :

35 Women received their dead raised to life again : but others were racked, not accepting deliverance, that they might find a better resurrection.

36 And others had trial of mockeries and stripes, moreover also of bands and prisons :

37 They were stoned, they were cut asunder, they were tempted, they were put to death by the sword, they wandered about in sheep skins, in goat skins, being in want, distressed, afflicted :

38 Of whom the world was not worthy : wandering in deserts, in mountains, and in dens, and in caves of the earth.

39 And all these being approved by the testimony of faith, received not the promise, 40 God providing something better for us. that they should not be perfected without us.

brethren, the Israelites, as Christ was to suffer from the Jews, than to have all the short pleasures of what is called a happy life. See S. Chrys. hom. 26. Wi.

VER. 27. He left Egypt. Some understand this, when he fled to Madian, after he had killed the Egyptian; but it was rather fear than faith which made him flee at that time. We may rather expound it of his going away with all the people, when by faith he trusted that God would deliver him and the people from the known fierceness of king Pharaoh, as it also happened.—For he endured, as seeing him that is invisible.† That is, seeing by the eyes of faith the invisible God to be his protector, he endured and overcame all difficulties with courage and constancy. Wi.

VER. 37. Μῆλον signifies a sheep; μηλωτη signifies a sheep-skin, with the wool on it. This, or a goat-skin, was the usual covering of poor people, and as such was adopted by the ancient prophets, mortified to all the luxuries of life. Thus Elias is called uir pillosus, a hairy man, not for his beard or hair, but for his shaggy or hairy covering.

* V. 1. Substantia, ὑποστασις, subsistentia.

† Ibid. Argumentum, ἔλεγχος. Convictio, ostensio. It does not seem well translated evidence, as by the Prot. and Mr. N., because faith is an obscure knowledge, though it be the most certain, because of the infallible authority of God, who has revealed those obscure mysteries.

‡ Ibid. Ἐμαρτυρήσαν, testimonium consecuti sunt. This expression, which is repeated ver. 4, 5, and 39, signifies an approbation or commendation.

CHAP. XII.

Exhortation to constancy under their crosses. The danger of abusing the grace of the new testament.

AND therefore we also having so great a cloud of witnesses over us, laying ^aaside every weight, and the sin that surroundeth us, by patience let us run to the fight proposed unto us :

2 Looking on Jesus the author and finisher of faith, who having joy proposed unto him, underwent the cross, despising the shame, and sitteth on the right hand of the throne of God.

3 For think diligently upon him who endureth such opposition from sinners against himself : that you be not wearied, fainting in your minds,

4 For you have not yet resisted unto blood, striving against sin :

5 And you have forgotten the consolation which speaketh to you, as to children, saying : 'My son, neglect not the discipline of the Lord : neither be thou wearied whilst thou art rebuked by him.

6 For whom the Lord loveth he chastiseth : and he scourgeth every son whom he receiveth.

7 Persevere under chastisement. God offereth himself to you as to sons : for what son is he, whom the father doth not correct ?

8 But if you be without chastisement, whereof all are made partakers : men are you bastards, and not sons.

9 Moreover we have had indeed for our instructors, the fathers of our flesh, and we revered them : shall we not much more obey the Father of spirits and live ?

10 And they indeed for a few days chastised us according to their own pleasure ; but he, for our profit, that we might be partakers of his holiness.

11 Now no chastisement for the present seemeth to bring with it joy, but sorrow : but afterwards it will yield to them that are exercised by it, the most peaceable fruit of justice.

†† V. 27. Invisibilem enim tanquam videns sustinuit : ἑκατίησεν, i. e. sustinuit non Deum, sed animositatem regis.

CHAP. XII. VER. 1. Laying aside every weight : * i. e. all that may hinder us when we run in the way of virtue.—To the fight proposed unto us. In the Greek it is more clear : let us run the proposed race. He compares the condition of Christians to those who run a race, who fight or strive for a prize in the Olympic games, who strip themselves, and make themselves as light as possible, the better to run and fight. Wi.

VER. 2. Who having joy † proposed unto him, underwent the cross. The sense seems to be, who by reason of the joy he had to perform the will of his eternal Father, for which he knew he should be exalted above all creatures, underwent willingly the ignominy and death of the cross. Wi.

VER. 5. You have forgotten the consolation, &c. He puts them in mind that it ought to be a subject of great comfort to them, that God calls them his children, his sons, and treats them as his true and legitimate children, when he admonished them to live under discipline and obedience to him, when, to correct their disobedient and sinful ways, he sends them afflictions and persecutions in this world, which they ought to look upon as marks of his fatherly tenderness ; for this is what a prudent kind father does to his legitimate children, of whom he takes the greatest care : and not to use these corrections, is to neglect them, as if they were illegitimate children. Wi.

VER. 11. It is true all discipline, all corrections, and sufferings in this present life, are disagreeable to our nature, because they bring not joy, but trouble and grief with them ; yet afterwards, they who have been exercised with them, will reap the most peaceable fruit of justice, eternal peace and happiness in heaven. Wi.—We must not judge of sufferings by the smart they occasion, but by the fruits of peace, justice, and eternal glory they produce in such as submit to them with patience.

12 Wherefore lift up the hands which hang down, and the feeble knees,

13 And make straight steps with your feet: that no one halting may go astray, but rather be healed.

14 * Follow peace with all men, and holiness, without which no man shall see God:

15 Looking diligently, lest any man be wanting to the grace of God: lest any root of bitterness springing up do hinder, and by it many be defiled.

16 Lest there be any fornicator, or profane person^b as Esau: who for one mess sold his first birth-right:

17 For know ye that^c afterwards when he desired to inherit the blessing, he was rejected: for he found no place of repentance, although with tears he had sought it.

18 ^d For you are not come to the mountain that might be touched, and the burning fire, nor to a whirlwind, and darkness, and tempest,

19 And the sound of a trumpet, and the voice of words, which they that heard excused themselves, that the word might not be spoken to them.

20 For they did not endure that which was said: * And if a beast shall touch the mount, it shall be stoned.

21 And so terrible was that which was seen, Moses said: I am frightened, and tremble.

22 But you are come to Mount Sion, and to the city of the living God, the heavenly Jerusalem, and to the company of many thousands of angels,

23 And to the church of the first-born, who are written in heaven, and to God, the judge of all, and to the spirits of the just made perfect,

VER. 12—14. Wherefore lift up the hands, &c. Be fervent in piety, walk firmly in the way of virtue, make straight steps, || without declining to one side or the other, without halting or going astray, and strive to be healed from your sins by his grace.—Follow and seek peace, as much as lies in you, with all men, and purity of life, without which no man shall see and enjoy God. Wi.

VER. 15. Be wanting to the grace of God, by resisting and abusing his favours, or by falling from the grace of God received.—Lest any root of bitterness, &c. He means scandalous wicked persons, by whom others are infected, defiled, and corrupted. Wi.

VER. 16. Or profane person, as Esau, who had so little regard for the blessing and inheritance of his father, that he sold his right of first-begotten for one mess of broth, and afterwards found no place for repentance, although with tears he had sought for it; that is he could not make his father repent nor change what he had once done, though he endeavoured it with his tears and lamentable outcries. Or if any one will have repentance referred to Esau himself, still the Novatian heretics can have no advantage in favour of their error, when they deny that sinners can repent, because Esau's tears might only be for a temporal loss, not for God's sake, nor for the guilt of his sins, so that he wanted the dispositions of a true penitent and of a contrite heart. Wi.

VER. 17. He found, &c. That is, he found no way to bring his father to repent, or change his mind, with relation to his having given the blessing to his younger brother, Jacob. Ch.

VER. 18. For you are not come to the mountain, &c. That is, to a mountain on earth that can be touched; to wit, to Mount Sinai, where the law was given to Moses, where the mountain seemed all on fire, with dreadful thunder and lightning, whirlwinds, darkness, tempests, sounding of trumpets, voices, &c., which they who heard excused themselves, begging that Moses only, and not God, might speak to them, for they could not without exceeding consternation think of what was then said; that if any man, or even beast, should touch the mountain, he should be stoned to death. Exod. xix. 15. Wi.

VER. 22. But you are come to Mount Sion, where not a law of fear, like that of Moses, but a new law of love and mercy hath been given you, preached by our Saviour himself, and by his apostles, testified by the coming of the Holy Ghost, and by the effusion of God's Spirit upon the believers. Here you are called to the city of the living God, (to the Christian Church on earth,) and even to the celestial Jerusalem, there to be for ever happy in the company of many millions of angels; to the church of the first-born, who are written in heaven, (ver. 23,) to be happy with those who have been chosen by a special mercy of God, and blessed with an endless happiness; to be there in the presence of God, the judge of all men, and to the sprinkling of blood, which speaketh better than that of Abel.

25 See that you refuse not him who speaketh. For if they escaped not who refused him that spoke upon earth: much more shall not we, who turn away from him that speaketh to us from heaven.

26 Whose voice then moved the earth: but now he promiseth, saying: 'Yet once: and I will move not only the earth, but heaven also.

27 And in that he saith: Yet once: he signifieth the translation of the moveable things, as of things that are made, that those things remain which are immoveable.

28 Wherefore we receiving an immoveable kingdom, have grace: whereby let us serve, pleasing God with fear and reverence.

29 * For our God is a consuming fire.

VER. 26. Whose voice then moved the earth, by such signs and prodigies on Mount Sinai: but now he promiseth, saying by the prophet Aggeus: Yet once: and I will move not only the earth, but heaven also. These words of the prophet are commonly understood of Christ's first coming at his incarnation, when at his birth a star appeared, angels were sent, and sung his praises, when the heavens opened at his baptism, when the earth trembled at his resurrection, when the sun and moon were darkened at his death, &c. Yet others expound these words of Christ's coming to redeem mankind, so as to comprehend all the time of the law of grace, and even his second coming to judge all men, at the end of the world, of which may particularly be understood those words, (ver. 27,) of the translation of the moveable things; that is, of the elements, and of the heavens changed to a more perfect state. another, who regard not the sanctity of this sacrament, who love not each other, who take not care of the education of their children. See 1 Tim. v. 12. Wi.—Or, let marriage be honourable in all. That is, in all things belonging to the marriage state. This is a warning to married people not to abuse the sanctity of their state, by any liberties or irregularities contrary thereunto. Now it does not follow from this text that all persons are obliged to marry, even if the word omnibus were rendered, in all persons, instead of in all things: for if it was a precept, S. Paul himself would have transgressed it, as he never married. Moreover those who have already made a vow to God to lead a single life, should they attempt to marry, they would incur their own damnation. Ch.

VER. 7. Remember your prelates, &c., who have been placed over you to be your guides and directors in what belongs to the service of God; he seems to mean the two S. James', the apostles, who perhaps had already suffered martyrdom for the gospel. Wi.

VER. 9. With various and strange doctrines. Such as the disciples of Simon Magnus had begun to teach; nor with the false doctrine of those among you, who would make you subject to the ceremonies and sacrifices of the former law, which never of themselves profited those who walked in them, so as to give true sanctification, and which now are no longer obligatory. Wi.

VER. 10. We, Christians, have at present an altar,† and consequently a sacrifice, whereof they have no power to eat, who serve the tabernacle, confiding in the law and in Moses, not in Christ and the gospel. He does not say, we had an altar. Wi.—S. Paul has often mentioned the high priest and victim; here he tells us we have an altar, and of course a sacrifice.

VER. 11. This is commonly interpreted of the sacrifice of the Eucharist, by which is continued (though in a different manner) Christ's sacrifice on the cross, of which he speaks in the following words, telling them that the bodies of those beasts, with the blood of which the sanctuary was sprinkled on the feast of expiation, (see Lev. xvi. 29, and xxiii. 27, and Num. xxix. 8,) were burnt without the camp, not eaten as the other victims. Wherefore Jesus, when he fulfilled this figure, and offered himself on the cross, a sacrifice of expiation for the sins of all mankind, and to obtain for them true sanctification, was pleased to suffer out of the gate of Jerusalem. Wi.

VER. 13. Let us go forth, therefore, to him without the camp. It is an exhortation to them to be willing to suffer with Christ reproaches, persecutions, and death itself, if they desire to partake of the benefit of Christ's redemption. Wi.—Bearing his reproach. That is, bearing his cross. It is an exhortation to them to be willing to suffer, with Christ, reproaches, persecutions, and even death, if they desire to partake of the benefit of his suffering for man's redemption. Ch.

17 Obey your prelates, and be subject to them. For they watch, as being to render an account of your souls, that they may do this with joy, and not with grief: for this is not expedient for you.

18 Pray for us: for we trust that we have a good conscience, being willing to behave ourselves well in all things.

19 And I beseech you the more to do this, that I may be restored to you the sooner.

20 Now the God of peace, who brought again from the dead the great pastor of the sheep, our Lord Jesus Christ, in the blood of the everlasting testament, 23 Know ye that our brother, Timothy, is set at liberty: with whom (if he come shortly) I will see you.

banished men, seeking for our happy country of heaven; but in the mean time must offer to God a sacrifice of praise and thanksgiving, which is done chiefly in the holy sacrifice of the Eucharist, also by confessing his name, and praying to him with our lips and hearts; and by a kind of sacrifice of charity, by doing good to every one, and of communication to others; lit. of communion, or union with our neighbours. Wi.

VER. 16. For by such sacrifices God's favour is obtained,§ and a recompense or a reward from him. Wi.—In the Protestant version, God is well pleased. If God be well pleased and show favour for them, then are they meritorious, and faith alone is not the sole cause of God's favour to man.

VER. 17, 18. Obey your prelates, &c. Join the sacrifice of obedience to your bishops and pastors, whom God has placed over you, who must render an account even of your souls, i. e. whether they have discharged their duty towards you, and whether it be not by their neglect that you have remained in your sins. Follow their commands and instructions, with such a ready willingness, that you do not contristate them, but that you may be a subject of comfort and joy to them, in their heavy and dangerous employments.—Fail not to pray for me, who am such a minister of God. Wi.

VER. 20, 21. Who brought, or raised from the dead, the great pastor of the sheep, of all the faithful, Jesus Christ, in the blood of the everlasting testament: in the testament that is to last for ever, not for a time, like the former testament made to the people of Israel. These words, in the blood, may either be joined with brought from the dead his son, as man, by the merits of his blood, which he had shed on the cross, as it is said, Phil. ii. 8. Or they may be joined with the great pastor, and then the sense will be, that God raised Jesus Christ, who, by his blood shed on the cross, became the great shepherd of all the faithful. Working in you by his grace every good work, &c. Wi.

VER. 23. Our brother, Timothy, is set at liberty. From which we may conjecture that Timothy had been a prisoner, though it is not known where, nor on what occasion. Wi.

* V. 2. Per hanc enim latuerunt quidam Angelis hospitio receptis, διὰ τούτων γὰρ ἔλαβόν τινες ξενίσαντες Ἀγγέλους, i. e. hospitio recipiendo Angelos. The Latin has exactly followed the Greek.

THE CATHOLIC EPISTLE OF S. JAMES, THE APOSTLE.

ON THE CATHOLIC EPISTLES.

The seven following Epistles have been called Catholic, or general, not being addressed to any particular Church or person, if we except the Second and Third of S. John. They are called also Canonical, having been received by the Church as part of the canon of the New Testament, and as writings of Divine authority. It is a matter of fact allowed by every one, that five of these Epistles, to wit, this of S. James, the Second of S. Peter, the Second and Third of S. John, that of S. Jude, as also the Epistle of S. Paul to the Hebrews, and the Apocalypse or Revelation of S. John, were doubted of, and not received always and every where in the three first ages, till the canon and catalogue of Scripture books was examined by tradition, and determined by the authority of the Catholic Church, the supreme judge of all controversies in matters of faith and religion, according to the appointment of our Saviour, Christ, expressed in many places in the Holy Scriptures. But I could never learn upon what grounds they who deny the Catholic Church and general councils to be of an infallible authority, and who deny Christ's promises to guide his Church in all truth to the end of the world, can be certain which Scriptures or writings are canonical, and which are not. I could never understand what construction to put on the sixth of the Thirty-nine Articles of Religion of the Church of England. We there meet with this declaration: In, or by, the name of the Holy Scripture, we understand those canonical books of the Old and New Testament of whose authority was never any doubt in the Church. These I have mentioned were certainly for some time doubted of; they are still doubted of by some of the late reformers; Luther, the great doctor of the reformation, is not ashamed to say that this Epistle of S. James is no better than straw, and unworthy of an apostle. These writings therefore, according to the said declaration, ought not to be accounted and received as canonical; and yet before the end of the said sixth Article, it is again declared, that all the books of the New Testament, as they are commonly received, we do receive and account canonical. And in all New Testaments of the Church of England, all these are received for canonical in the same manner as the four Gospels, without any remark or advertisement to the contrary.—The first of the seven Epistles was written by S. James, surnamed the lesser, and James of Alphaeus, (Matt. x. 3,) one of the twelve apostles, called the brother of our Lord, (Gal. i. 19,) who was made bishop of Jerusalem. His mother is thought to have been Mary, sister to the blessed Virgin Mary, and to have been married first to Alphaeus, and afterwards to Cleophas; to have had four sons, James, Joseph, Simon, (or Simeon), and Jude, the author of the last of these Epistles. All these four being cousin-germans, are called brothers of our Lord, Matt. xiii. 55. This Epistle was written about the year 62. The chief contents are: 1. To show that faith without good works will not save a man, as S. Aug. observed, l. de Fid. et Oper. c. 4. 2. He exhorts them to patience, to beg true wisdom, and the Divine grace. 3. He condemns the vices of the tongue. 4. He gives admonitions against pride, vanity, ambition, &c. 5. To resist their disorderly lusts and desires, which are the occasions and causes of sin, and not Almighty God. 6. He publisheth the sacrament of anointing the sick with oil. 7. He recommends prayer, &c.—We shall state at the beginning of each Epistle the reason why they have been adopted into the canon of the Scripture. C.—The object of these Epistles was, according to the remark of S. Augustin, to refute the rising errors of Simon Magus, the Nicolaites, and other such heretics, who, abusing the liberty of the gospel, and perverting the meaning of S. Paul's words in his Epistle to the Romans, pretended that faith alone, without good works, was sufficient to salvation; although S. Paul expressly requires of Christians a faith working by charity, Gal. v. 6, and 1 Cor. xiii., where he uses these emphatic words: "If I should have all faith, so as to remove mountains, and have not charity, I am nothing." S. Aug. lib. de Fide et Operibus, c. 14. C.—As to what regards the authenticity of S. James's Epistle, although Luther, with his usual boldness, asserts that many with good reason denied this Epistle to be canonical, and affirmed that it was unworthy the pen of an apostle, yet, admitting that some individuals in the first ages of the Church doubted of its authority, we are nevertheless assured from certain monuments that it was always considered as sacred and inspired, both by the Latin and Greek Churches. This is evident from the sixtieth canon of the Council of Laodicea; from the forty-seventh of the Council of Carthage, in 397; from Origen, hom. 7, in Josue; from S. Athanasius in Synopsi, Epiphanius Heresi 76; from S. Jerom, ad Paulinum Epis.; from S. Austin, lib. 2, de Doc. Chris. c. 8; from S. Gregory Nazianzen, tom. 3, p. 98; from Amphilochus, apud Greg. Nazian., tom. 2, p. 194; from Innocent I., Epis. ad Decentium; from Rufinus, Exposit. Symboli; and from Gelasius I., who in the fifth age, in a council of seventy bishops, at Rome, settled the canon of the genuine books of the Holy Scripture, and distinguished them from what are spurious. Cal. et Habert de Sacr. Ext. Un.—S. Jerom and S. Austin frequently quote this Epistle as the undoubted work of this apostle; and since their time its authenticity has never been called in question by Catholics. It is believed S. James wrote this Epistle in Greek, as he quotes the Scripture according to the version of the Septuagint, as chap. iv. 6; and as this language was commonly spoken in the East by the dispersed Jews, to whom he wrote. His style is concise and sententious, like that of Solomon in his Proverbs, and like the maxims of the Orientals even to the present day. C.

CHAPTER I.

The benefit of tribulations. Prayer with faith. God is the author of all good, but not of evil. We must be slow to anger; and not hearers only, but doers of the word. Of bridling the tongue; and of pure religion.

JAMES, a servant of God, and of our Lord Jesus Christ, to the twelve tribes which are dispersed, greeting.

2 My brethren, count it all joy, when you shall fall into divers temptations:

3 ^aKnowing that the trying of your faith worketh patience.

4 And patience hath a perfect work: that you may be perfect and entire, deficient in nothing.

^a Rom. v. 3.—^b Matt. vii. 7, and xxi. 22; Mark xi. 24; Luke xi. 9; John xiv. 13, and 16.

CHAP. I. VER. 1. James, a servant of God, and of our Lord Jesus Christ. Some have doubted whether the author of this Epistle was S. James, the apostle, because he does not call himself an apostle. By the same weak argument we might reject all the three Epistles of S. John, and his Apocalypse, the Epistle of S. Jude. Nor does S. Paul give himself this title in those to the Thessalonians, to the Philippians, to Philemon, or to the Hebrews.—To the twelve tribes, which are dispersed. Lit. which are in the dispersion. That is, to the Jews converted in all nations.—Greeting. Lit. salvation. Which comprehendeth much the same as, when S. Paul says, grace, peace, mercy, &c. Wi.

VER. 3, 4. The trying of your faith worketh patience. S. Paul seems to assert the reverse, (Rom. v. 3,) when he says, patience worketh a trial. They are easily reconciled. Here S. James teacheth us that patience is occasionally obtained, 5 But if any of you want wisdom, let him ask of God, who giveth to all abundantly, and upbraideth not: and it shall be given him.

6 ^bBut let him ask in faith, nothing wavering: for he that wavereth is like a wave of the sea, that is moved and carried about by the wind.

7 Therefore let not that man think that he shall receive any thing of the Lord.

8 A double-minded man is inconstant in all his ways.

9 But let the brother of low condition glory in his exaltation:

10 But the rich, in his being low, ^cbecause as the flower of the grass he shall pass away:

^c Eccli. xiv. 18; Isa. xl. 6; 1 Pet. i. 24.

and strengthened by sufferings; the meaning of S. Paul is, that patience worketh, sheweth itself, and is found perfect in the sight of God, by trials. Wi.

VER. 8. Such a one is as it were a double-minded man,^d divided betwixt God and the world, halting betwixt two, and becomes inconstant in all his ways, always rising and falling, beginning and relapsing. Wi.

VER. 9—12. The brother of low condition. Lit. humble. See Luke i. 48. The sense is, that a Christian, of never so low and poor a condition, may glory, and rejoice even in his poverty, that he is not only the servant, but even the adoptive son of God.—But the rich, in his being low. Some word must be here understood to make the sense complete. If we understand, let the rich man glory, it must be expounded by irony, by what follows, of his passing away like a flower. But others rather understand some other word of a different signification; as, let the rich 11 For the sun rose with a burning heat, and parched the grass, and the flower thereof fell off, and the beauty of the shape thereof perished : so also shall the rich man fade away in his ways.

12 * Blessed is the man that endureth temptation : for when he hath been proved, he shall receive the crown of life, which God hath promised to them that love him.

13 Let no man, when he is tempted, say, that he is tempted of God : For God is not a tempter of evils : and he tempteth no man.

14 But every man is tempted, being drawn away by his own concupiscence, and allured.

15 Then when concupiscence hath conceived, it bringeth forth sin : But sin, when it is completed, begetteth death.

16 Do not err, therefore, my dearest brethren.

17 Every best gift, and every perfect gift, is from above, coming down from the Father of lights, with whom there is no change, nor shadow of vicissitude.

18 For of his own will hath he begotten us by the word of truth, that we might be some beginning of his creatures.

19 You know, my dearest brethren : ^b And let every man be swift to hear ; but slow to speak, and slow to anger.

20 For the anger of man worketh not the justice of God.

* Job v. 17.—^b Prov. xvii. 27.—^c Matt. vii. 21, and 24 ; Rom. ii. 13.

man lament the low condition that he must come to ; for he must quickly fade away like grass.—The beauty of the shape thereof is perished. So the Hebrews say, the face of the heavens, the face of the earth, &c. Wi.

VER. 13. God is not a tempter of evils : and he tempteth no man. Here to tempt is to draw and entice another to the evil of sin, which God cannot do. Wi.

VER. 15. When concupiscence hath conceived, (a man's free-will yielding to it,) it bringeth forth sin, our perverse inclinations become sinful ; and when any grievous sin is completed, or even consented to, it begetteth death, it maketh the soul guilty of eternal death. It may not be amiss here to observe, with S. Gregory, &c., that there are three degrees in temptations : the first, by suggestion only ; the second, by delectation ; the third, by consent. First, the devil, or our own frail nature, tempts us by a suggestion of evil thoughts in our imagination : to have such thoughts and imaginations may be no sin at all, though the things and objects represented be never so foul and hideous, though they may continue never so long, and return never so often. The reason is, because we cannot hinder them. On the contrary, if our will remains displeased with them, and resist them, such a resistance is meritorious, and by the mercies of God will purchase us a reward. Second, these representations may be followed with a delight or delectation in the senses, or in the body only ; and if by an impression made against the will, which we no ways consent to, there is again no sin. There may be also some neglect in the person tempted, by not using sufficient endeavours to resist and repel those thoughts, which if it be only some small neglect, the sin is not great : but if the person tempted hath wilfully, and with full deliberation, taken delight in evil thoughts, either of revenge, or of fornication, or adultery, or about any thing very sinful, such a wilful delight is a grievous and deadly sin, though he hath not had a will or design to perform the action itself. The reason is, because he then wilfully consents in mind and heart to a sinful delight, though not to the execution or action. And the sin may be great, and mortal, though it be but for a short time : for a temptation may continue a long time and be no sin ; and there may be a great sin in a short time. The reason again is, because we are to judge of sin by the dispositions and consent of the will, not by the length of time. Third, when the sinner yields to evil suggestions and temptations, so that his will fully consents to what is proposed, and nothing can be said to be wanting but an opportunity of putting his sinful desires in execution, he has already committed the sin ; for example, of murder, of fornication, &c. in his heart, as our blessed Saviour taught us. Matt. v. 28. Wi.

VER. 18. Some beginning of his creatures, (or as the Greek signifies,) such a beginning as are the first-fruits ; and perhaps S. James may so call the Jews, as being the first converted to believe in Christ. Wi.

VER. 19. You know, or you are sufficiently instructed in these things.—Let every man be swift to hear the word of God, but slow, or cautious in speaking, especially slow to anger, or to that rash passion of anger, which is never excusable, unless it be through a zeal for God's honour, and against sin. Wi.—S. James in this Epistle does not aim at a regular discourse : he proposes a diversity of moral sentences, which have not much connexion with each other. He here instructs the faithful how to behave in conversation.

VER. 20. The anger of man, &c. Let us not then be angry with each other on the way to eternal life, but rather march on with the troop of our companions

21 Wherefore casting away all uncleanness, and abundance of malice, with meekness receive the engrafted word, which is able to save your souls.

22 * But be ye doers of the word, and not hearers only, deceiving your own selves.

23 For if a man be a hearer of the word, and not a doer ; he shall be compared to a man beholding his natural countenance in a glass :

24 For he beheld himself, and went his way, and presently forgot what manner of man he was.

25 But he that hath looked into the perfect law of liberty, and hath continued in it, not becoming a forgetful hearer, but a doer of the work ; this man shall be blessed in his deed.

26 And if any man think himself to be religious, not bridling his tongue, but deceiving his own heart, this man's religion is vain.

27 Religion, pure and unspotted with God and the Father, is this : To visit the fatherless and widows in their tribulation, and to keep one's self undefiled from this world.

CHAP. II.

Against respect of persons. The danger of transgressing one point of the law. Faith is dead without works.

M^dY brethren, have not the faith of our Lord Jesus Christ of glory with respect of persons.

^d Lev. xix. 15 ; Deut. i. 17, and 16 ; Prov. xxiv. 23 ; Eccl. xlii. 1.

and brethren meekly, peaceably, and lovingly ; nay, I say to you absolutely and without exception, be not angry at all, if it be possible, and admit no pretext what soever to open the gate of your heart to so destructive a passion : for S. James here tells us positively, and without reservation, "the anger of man works not the justice of God." S. Francis of Sales.

VER. 21. All uncleanness.† The Greek shows that hereby is meant a sordid, filthy uncleanness, infecting and defiling the soul.—The engrafted word. The word and doctrine of Christ, by the labours of his preachers, and chiefly by his Divine grace ingrafted and fixed in your souls. Wi.

VER. 25. The law of Christ, called here the perfect law of liberty, as it is distinguished from the Jewish law of fear and slavery, is as it were a looking-glass, which may make us know ourselves, and discover and correct our failings. Wi.

VER. 26. If any man think, &c. He here blames those hot disputes, which seem to have been frequent amongst the converted Jews, concerning the necessity of observing the legal rites. In vain, says he, do you pique yourselves upon the rigorous observance of the law, and your zeal to unite its ceremonial rites with the practice of the gospel. If you be void of the essence of Christianity, which is charity, prudence, and moderation, your religion will avail you nothing. C.—This may also be understood of those devotees who are fond of making a parade of their virtues, and who, as S. Gregory says, (hom. 12, in Matt.,) afflict their bodies indeed with fasting, but for this they expect to be esteemed by men. A.—A man must not imagine himself to be religious, and perfect in the way of virtue, unless he governs and bridles his tongue from oaths, curses, calumnies, detractions, lies, of which more in the third chapter. Wi.

VER. 27. Religion, pure and unspotted, &c. S. James may use the word pure, as a proper admonition to the Jews, who were generally mostly solicitous to avoid legal uncleannesses, such as were incurred by eating meats forbidden in their law as unclean, by touching a dead body, &c. He therefore tells them that the Christian religion is known by acts of charity, by visiting and assisting widows, the fatherless, and such as are under afflictions, and in general by keeping our consciences interiorly clean, unspotted, and undefiled from this world, from the corrupt maxims and sinful practices so common in the wicked world. Wi.

2 For if there come into your assembly a man having a gold ring, in fine apparel, and there come in also a poor man in mean attire,

3 And you cast your eyes on him that is clothed with the fine apparel, and say to him : Sit thou here in a good place : and say to the poor man : Stand thou there, or sit under my footstool :

4 Do you not judge within yourselves, and are become judges of unjust thoughts ?

5 Hearken, my dearest brethren, hath not God chosen the poor of this world, rich in faith, and heirs of the kingdom which God hath promised to them that love him ?

6 But you have dishonoured the poor. Do not the rich oppress you by might ; and do not they draw you before the judgment-seats ?

7 Do not they blaspheme the good name that is invoked upon you ?

8 If then you fulfil the royal law, according to the Scriptures : * Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself : you do well.

9 ^b But if you have respect to persons, you commit sin, being reprov'd by the law as transgressors.

10 ^c Now whosoever shall keep the whole law but offend in one point, is become guilty of all.

11 For he that said, Thou shalt not commit adultery,

* Lev. xix. 18 ; Matt. xxii. 39 ; Mark xii. 31 ; Rom. xiii. 9 ; Gal. v. 14.—^b Supra, i. ;

CHAP. II. VER. 1. With respect of persons. This partial respect of persons is several times condemned both in the Old and New Testament. S. James here speaks of it as it was committed in the assemblies, by which many understand the meetings of Christians, in * synagogues and places where they celebrated the Divine service, or met to keep the charitable feast, called Agape. Others expound it of meetings where causes were judged. Wi.—Respect, &c. The meaning is, that in matters relating to faith, the administering of the sacraments and other spiritual functions in God's Church, there should be no respect of persons : but that the souls of the poor should be as much regarded as those of the rich. chap. i. 17. Ch.

VER. 4. Are become judges of (or with) unjust thoughts, when against justice you favour the rich. Or, if in Church assemblies you discover a wrong and partial judgment in your minds and thoughts, by the high value and esteem you show to the rich on the account of their riches, and the contempt you have of poverty and of the poor, when they are perhaps more deserving in the sight of God, who hath chosen them who are rich in faith, whom he hath made his adoptive children, and heirs of his kingdom. Wi.

VER. 8. If then you fulfil the royal law, . . . Thou shalt love, &c., you do well. By these words the apostle explains what he had said before of the particular respect paid to rich and powerful men, that if these were no more than some exterior marks paid them without any injustice or interior contempt of such as were poor, so that they took care to comply with that royal precept given to every one by Almighty God, the King of kings, Thou shalt love thy neighbour, that is, every one without exception, as thyself ; in this you do well ; and the respect of persons was less blameable. Wi.

VER. 10. Is become guilty of all. It is certain these words are not to be taken merely according to the letter, nor in the sense which at first they seem to represent, as if a man by transgressing one precept of the law transgressed and broke all the rest : this appears by the very next verse, that a man may commit murder by killing another, and not commit adultery. And it is certain, as S. Aug. observes, that all sins are not equal, as the Stoic philosophers pretended. See S. Aug. Epist. 167, (nov. ed. tom. 2, p. 595,) where he consults S. Jerom on this very place out of S. James, and tells us that such a man may be said to be guilty of all, because by one deadly sin he acts against charity,† (which is the love of God and of our neighbour,) upon which depends the whole law and all its precepts ; so that by breaking one precept, he loseth the habit of charity, and maketh the keeping, or not breaking, of all the rest unprofitable to him. Wi.—Guilty, &c. That is, he becomes a transgressor of the law in such a manner, that the observing of all other points will not avail him to salvation ; for he despises the Lawgiver, and breaks through the great and general commandment of charity, even by one mortal sin. Ch.

VER. 12. By the law of liberty ; i. e. by the new law and doctrine of Christ. Wi.

VER. 13. For judgment without mercy, &c. It is an admonition to them to fulfil, as he said before, the royal precepts of the love of God and of our neighbour, which cannot be without being merciful to others. Blessed are the merciful, for they shall obtain mercy. Matt. v. 7.—And mercy exalteth itself above judgment. Some understand this as a confirmation of God's infinite mercies, out of Psal. cxliv. 9, where it is said that his "mercies are over all his works ;" that is, though all his perfections be equally infinite, yet he is pleased to deal with sinners rather according to the multitude of his mercies than according to the rigour of his justice said also, Thou shalt not kill. Now if thou do not commit adultery, but shalt kill : thou art become a transgressor of the law.

12 So speak ye, and so do, as being to be judged by the law of liberty.

13 For judgment without mercy, to him that hath not done mercy : and mercy exalteth itself above judgment.

14 What shall it profit, my brethren, if a man say he hath faith, but hath not works ? Shall faith be able to save him ?

15 ^d And if a brother or sister be naked, and want daily food,

16 And one of you say to them : Go in peace, be you warmed and filled : yet give them not those things that are necessary for the body, what shall it profit ?

17 Even so faith, if it have not works, is dead in itself.

18 But some men will say : Thou hast faith, and I have works : show me thy faith without works, and I will show thee my faith by works.

19 Thou believest that there is one God. Thou dost well : the devils also believe and tremble.

20 But wilt thou know, O vain man, that faith without works is dead ?

21 ^e Was not Abraham, our father, justified by works, offering up Isaac, his son, upon the altar ?

Lev. xix. 15.—^c Deut. i. 18 ; Matt. v. 19.—^d 1 John iii. 17.—^e Gen. xxi

Others expound these words of the mercy which men show to one another, and that he exhorts them to mercy, as a most powerful means to find mercy ; and the merciful works done to others will be beneficial to them, and make them escape when they come to judgment. Wi.

VER. 14, &c. Shall faith be able to save him ? He now comes to one of the chief points of this Epistle, to show against the disciples of Simon, the magician, that faith alone will not save any one. We may take notice in the first place, that S. James, in this very verse, supposes that a man may have faith, a true faith, without good works. This also follows from ver. 19, where he says, Thou believest that there is one God. Thou dost well. And the same is evident by the words, John xii. 42, where it is said, that many of the chief men also believed in him, (Christ,) . . . but did not confess it, that they might not be cast out of the synagogue. Now that faith alone is not sufficient to save a man, S. James declares by this example : If any one say to the poor and naked, Go in peace, be you warmed and filled, and give them nothing, what shall it profit ? Even so faith, if it have not works, is dead, &c., i. e. such a faith, though it be not lost and destroyed, yet it remains in a soul that is spiritually dead, when it is not accompanied with charity and grace, which is the life of the soul, and without which faith can never bring us to eternal life. In this sense is to be understood the 20th and 26th verses of this chapter, when faith is again said to be dead without good works. This is also the doctrine of S. Paul, when he tells us that a saving faith is a faith that worketh by charity, Gal. v. 6. When he says, that although faith were strong enough to remove mountains, a man is nothing without charity. 1 Cor. xiii. 2. When he teacheth us again, that not the hearers of the law are just before God, but the doers of the law shall be justified. S. John teacheth the same, (1 John iii. 14,) He that loveth not, remaineth in death. But of this elsewhere. Wi.—Grotius in this place makes a very candid and remarkable profession of his faith, very different from that of his associates in the pretended reformation, called Solifideans : "There are some who say, 'My works indeed are not as they ought to be,' but my faith is firm, my salvation is therefore out of danger. This opinion, which has sprung up in this our unhappy age, and recommends itself under the name of reformed doctrine, ought to be opposed by every lover of piety, and all who wish well to their neighbour's salvation . . . no faith has ever availed any man, unless it were accompanied by such works as he had time and opportunity to perform." In vain do we glory in our faith, unless our lives and works bear testimony of the same. Faith without charity is dead, and charity cannot exist without good works. He who bears the fruits of Christian piety, shows that he has the root, which is faith ; but the root is dead, when it affords no produce. Works are to faith what the soul is to the body. See the remainder of this chapter.

VER. 18. Some men will say : Thou hast faith, and I have works. Show me thy faith, &c. He confutes the same error, by putting them in mind that no one can show that he has faith, which is an interior virtue, only by good works, and that good works in a man show also his faith ; which is not to be understood, as if good works were merely the marks, signs, and effects of faith, as some would pretend, but that good works must concur with faith to a man's salvation by an increase in grace. Wi.

VER. 21. Was not Abraham . . . justified by works ? We may observe, that S. James here brings the very same examples of Abraham and Rahab, which it is likely he knew some had misconstrued in S. Paul, as if the great apostle of the 22 Seest thou that faith did co-operate with his works: and by works faith was made perfect?

23 And the Scripture was fulfilled, saying: * Abraham believed God, and it was reputed to him to justice, and he was called the friend of God.

24 Do you see that by works a man is justified, and not by faith only?

25 ^b And in like manner also Rahab, the harlot, was not she justified by works, receiving the messengers, and sending them out another way?

26 For as the body without the spirit is dead, so also faith without works is dead.

CHAP. III.

Of the evils of the tongue. Of the difference between the earthly and heavenly wisdom.

BE not many masters, my brethren, knowing that you receive the greater judgment.

2 For in many things we all offend. If any man offend not in word; the same is a perfect man. He is able also with a bridle to turn about the whole body.

3 For if we put bits into the mouths of horses that they may obey us, and we turn about their whole body.

4 Behold also ships, whereas they are great, and are driven by strong winds, yet are they turned about with a small helm, whithersoever the force of the governor willeth.

5 Even so the tongue is indeed a little member, and boasteth great things. Behold how small a fire kindleth a great wood.

6 And the tongue is a fire, a world of iniquity. The tongue is placed among our members, which defileth the whole body, and setteth on fire the wheel of our nativity, being set on fire by hell.

7 For every kind of beasts, and of birds, and of ser-

Gentiles had taught that faith alone was sufficient to salvation. But S. Paul neither excludes good works done by faith, when he commends faith, excluding only the works of the law of Moses, as insufficient to a true justification. See Rom. iii. 27. And S. James, by requiring good works, does not exclude faith, but only teacheth that faith alone is not enough. This is what he clearly expresseth here in the 22nd and in the 24th verse. Man, says he, is justified, and not by faith only. And (ver. 22) seest thou that faith did co-operate with Abraham's works, and by works faith was made perfect. In fine, we must take notice, that when S. James here brings the example of Abraham offering his son Isaac, to show that he was justified by works, his meaning is not that Abraham then began first to be justified, but that he then received an increase of his justice. He was justified at least from his first being called, and began then to believe and to do good works. It is true his faith was made perfect, and his justice increased, when he was willing to sacrifice his son. Wi.

CHAP. III. VER. 2. For in many things we all offend,* fall into many, at least lesser failings.—If any man offend not in word, the same is a perfect man. He that on all occurrences can govern his tongue, has attained to a great degree of perfection. Wi.

VER. 5, 6. The tongue is indeed a little member, yet doth great things: † causeth great evils and mischiefs, when it is not carefully governed; as a little fire, ‡ it kindleth and consumeth a great wood. It is a world of iniquity, the cause of infinite evils, dissensions, quarrels, seditions, wars, &c. Wi.

VER. 7. It is tamed, &c. The wildest beasts may be tamed, lions and tigers, and the rest, § and so managed as to do no harm. Wi.

VER. 8. But the tongue no man can tame, without the special assistance of pents, and of the rest, is tamed, and hath been tamed by mankind:

8 But the tongue no man can tame: a restless evil, full of deadly poison.

9 By it we bless God and the Father; and by it we curse men, who are made after the likeness of God.

10 Out of the same mouth proceedeth blessing and cursing. My brethren, these things ought not so to be.

11 Doth a fountain send forth through the same passage sweet and bitter water?

12 Can the fig-tree, my brethren, bear grapes, or the vine, figs? So neither can the salt water yield sweet.

13 Who is a wise man, and endued with knowledge among you? Let him show, by a good conversation, his work in the meekness of wisdom.

14 But if you have bitter zeal, and there be contentions in your hearts: glory not, and be not liars against the truth.

15 For this is not wisdom, descending from above but earthly, sensual, diabolical.

16 For where envying and contention is, there is inconstancy, and every evil work.

17 But the wisdom which is from above, first indeed is chaste, then peaceable, modest, easy to be persuaded, consenting to the good, full of mercy, and good fruits, without judging, without dissimulation.

18 And the fruit of justice is sown in peace, to them that make peace.

CHAP. IV.

The evils that flow from yielding to concupiscence, and being friends to this world. Admonitions against pride, detraction, &c.

FROM whence are wars and contentions among you? Come they not hence? from your concupiscences, which war in your members?

God. Wi.—Wherefore we are to understand, says S. Austin, that as no one is able of himself to govern his tongue, we must fly to the Lord for his assistance. S. Aug. ser. 4, de Verb. Matt. vi.—It is an unquiet evil, || which cannot be stopt. It is full of deadly poison, which brings oftentimes death both to men's bodies and souls. Wi.

VER. 9—18. By it we bless God, &c. Such different effects from the same cause, as of blessing God, and cursing men, created to the likeness of God, seem contrary to the ordinary course of nature; for a fountain from the same source doth not send forth both sweet and bitter streams. Wi.

VER. 14—16. But if you have a bitter zeal. He hints at that bitter, false zeal which many teachers among the Jews, even after their conversion, were apt to retain against the converted Gentiles, pretending with lies, and against the truth of the Scriptures, that they are not to be made partakers of the blessings brought to all nations by the Messias. Wi.

VER. 17, 18. But the true wisdom, which is from above, . . . is chaste, and pure, peaceable, modest, free from such divisions, tractable, easy to be persuaded ¶ of the truths foretold in the Scriptures, &c. Now the fruit and effect of such justice, piety, and sanctity, is sown in peace, with peaceable dispositions, in those who with sincerity seek true peace, and who hereby shall gain the reward of an eternal peace and happiness. Wi.—Easy to be persuaded. A good lesson for those devotees, who are not few in number, who are so obstinate and so wedded to their own opinions and ways, as to be unwilling to be controlled, even by those whom God has placed over them for the direction of their souls. A.—Without judging. That is, it does not condemn a neighbour upon light grounds, or think evil of him. It puts the best construction upon every thing he says or does, and never intrudes itself into the concerns of others. C.

3 You ask, and receive not: because you ask amiss; that you may consume it on your concupiscences.

4 Adulterers, know you not that the friendship of this world is the enemy of God? Whosoever, therefore, will be a friend of this world, becometh an enemy of God.

5 Or do you think that the Scripture saith in vain: To envy doth the spirit covet, which dwelleth in you?

6 But he giveth greater grace. Wherefore he saith: God resisteth the proud, and giveth grace to the humble.

7 Be subject, therefore, to God, but resist the devil, and he will fly from you.

8 Approach to God, and he will approach to you. Cleanse your hands, ye sinners: and purify your hearts, ye double-minded.

9 Be afflicted, and mourn, and weep: let your laughter be turned into mourning, and your joy into sorrow.

10 Be humble in the sight of the Lord, and he will exalt you.

11 Detract not one another, brethren. He that detracteth his brother, or he that judgeth his brother, detracteth the law, and judgeth the law. But if thou judge the law, thou art not a doer of the law, but a judge.

12 There is one lawgiver, and judge, who is able to destroy and to deliver.

VER. 2. You covet, and have not. Though God has promised that whosoever asks shall receive, (Matt. vii. 8,) yet no wonder you receive not, because you ask amiss, by asking such temporal things which would be prejudicial to your soul, or because you ask not with humility, devotion, and perseverance. Wi.

VER. 4. Adulterers: which is here taken in a figurative sense for those who love creatures more than God, the true sponso of their souls; who reflect not that the love and friendship of this world is an enemy to God, and the true manner of serving him. Wi.

VER. 5. Do you think that the Scripture saith in vain: To envy doth the spirit covet, which dwelleth in you? † This verse is obscure, and differently expounded. By some, of an evil spirit in men, by which they covet and envy others for having what they have not. Others understand God's Spirit inhabiting in them; and then it is an interogation, and reprehension, as if he said, Doth God's Spirit, which you have received, teach or excite you to covet and envy others, and not rather to love and wish their good? And to enable men to do this, God is not wanting, who gives us greater grace, especially to the humble that ask it, though he resists the proud. Wi.

VER. 6. But he giveth greater grace. The Holy Spirit which dwelleth in you, giveth you graces in proportion to your fidelity in complying with them, and according to your humility and the love which you bear to your neighbour. C.—N. B. These last words, "God resisteth the proud, and giveth grace to the humble," are only in the Septuagint edition. Prov. iii. 34. The Heb. and Vulg. read in this place, "He shall scorn the scornors, and to the meek he will give grace." C.

VER. 8. Purify your hearts from the love of creatures, so that your affections be not divided betwixt God and this world, like persons of two minds ‡ or two souls. Wi.

VER. 9. Be afflicted, § and mourn, and deplore your sins against his Divine majesty; punish yourselves, and think not that a mere change of life is sufficient after so many sins committed. Wi.

VER. 11. Detract not one another, (nor judge rashly,) brethren. Though he spoke so much against the evils of the tongue, he gives them a special admonition against the vices of detraction, so common in the world, as also against rash judgments, which happen so frequently where there are dissensions and divisions. that detracteth, judgeth, and rashly condemneth his brother, may be said to detract and judge the law, inasmuch as he seems to contemn and condemn the law, by which these sins are forbidden; when, instead of obeying and complying with the law, he rather takes upon himself to act as a judge, without fear of the law and of God, the only lawgiver, who is to judge all our actions, and who alone is able to destroy, or to free us and deliver us from the punishments we have deserved. Wi.

VER. 15. For what is your life? It is a vapour. We frequently meet with these beautiful comparisons in holy writ. "Remember that my life is but wind. . . . CHAP. V. VER. 1—6. Go now rich men, &c. In the first six verses he gives admonitions to those among the Christians who were rich, not to rely on riches, nor value themselves on this account. You must look upon your riches and treasures as if they were already putrified and corrupted, your gold and silver eaten and consumed with rust: and their rust shall rise in testimony and judgment against you, for not making better use of them. As your coin is eaten with rust, so shall your bodies be hereafter as it were eaten and consumed by fire. You heap up to yourselves a treasure in the day of wrath, while through covetousness, and hard-heartedness, you defraud labourers of their hire, living at the same time in feasting and luxury, as in the day of slaughter. That is, feasting as men are accustomed to do, on the days when victims are slaughtered, offered, and eaten with great rejoicing. Others expound it, as if you were feeding, and making yourselves fit sacrifices and victims for God's anger and indignation. Wi.

VER. 7—11. Be patient, &c. He now in these five following verses turns his discourse from the rich to the poor, exhorting them to patience till the coming of the Lord to judgment, which draweth near; his coming to judge every one as it cious fruit of the earth, patiently bearing till he receive the early and the latter rain.

8 Be you, therefore, also patient, and strengthen your hearts: for the coming of the Lord draweth near.

9 Grudge not, brethren, one against another, that you may not be judged. Behold, the judge standeth before the door.

10 Take, my brethren, for an example of suffering evil, of labour and patience, the prophets, who spoke in the name of the Lord.

11 Behold we account them blessed, who have suffered. You have heard of the patience of Job, and you have seen the end of the Lord, that the Lord is merciful and compassionate.

12 But above all things, my brethren,* swear not, neither by heaven, nor by the earth, nor by any other oath. But let your speech be: yea, yea: no, no: that you fall not under judgment.

his death. Imitate the patience of the husbandman, waiting for fruit after that the earth hath received the timely and *early rain soon after the corn is sown, and again more rain, that comes later to fill the grain before it comes to be ripe. This seems to be the sense by the Greek: others expound it, till he receive the early and latter fruits. Wi.—Call to mind for your encouragement the trials and constancy of the prophets: the patience of Job, after which God rewarded him with great blessings and property, and you have seen the end of the Lord; that is, what end the Lord was pleased to give to Job's sufferings. But S. Aug., Ven. Bede, &c., would have these words, the end of the Lord, to be understood of the death of our Lord Jesus Christ on the cross, for which God exalted him, &c. Wi.

VER. 12. But above all things . . . swear not, &c. This earnest admonition is against all kind of oaths in common conversation, (not against oaths made on just and necessary occasions,) and in the very same words, as our blessed Saviour warned all people against this sin of swearing. Matt. v. How unaccountably is this commandment of God contained! And what a dreadful account will one day be exacted for so many oaths, curses, and blasphemies, which are now so common, that we may rather wonder at the patience of God, and that already exemplary punishments have not fallen upon whole cities and kingdoms for this continued profanation of the holy name of God! Wi.—S. James here repeats the injunctions of our Saviour, not to swear at all. Matt. v. 34. See the annotations in that place.

VER. 14, 15. Is any man sick among you?† or in danger of death by sickness, let him call, or bring in the priests of the Church, &c. The apostle here enjoins the constant use of the sacrament, called extreme unction, or the last anointing with oil, instituted (as were all the sacraments of the Church) by our Saviour Christ, and which is here fully and clearly delivered in plain words, expressing, 1. the persons to whom this sacrament is to be administered; 2. the minister; 3. the form; 4. the matter; 5. the effects. As to the first, is any man sick among you? This sacrament then is to be given to every believing Christian, who is in danger of death by sickness. 2. Bring in the priests, one or more, they are the ministers of this sacrament. 3. And let them pray over him. Besides other prayers, the form of this sacrament is by way of prayer, let the Lord forgive thee, &c. 4. Anointing him with oil. The oil with which he is anointed by the priest, is the outward visible sign, and the matter of this sacrament, as water is the matter of baptism. 5. The prayer of faith shall save the sick man, &c. All the sacraments of the new law have their virtue from the merits of our Saviour, Christ, and therefore must be ministered and received with a faith in our Redeemer. Wi.—The anathemas pronounced by the Council of Trent against those who deny the existence of this sacrament, are sufficient to establish the belief of it in the minds of Catholics. See Sess. 14, Can. 1, 2, and 3, of the Council of Trent. It may be proper, however, to observe, in confirmation of our belief of this sacrament, that whenever the ancient Fathers have had occasion to speak of extreme unction, they have always attributed to it all the qualifications of a sacrament, as S. Chrys., who proves from this text of St. James the power which the priest has to forgive sins, (lib. 3, de Sacerdotio. S. Aug. Sér. 215,) not to mention Origen, who wrote at the beginning of the third century, (hom. 2, in Levit.,) enumerating the different ways by which sins are forgiven in the new law, says, "That they are remitted when the priests anoint the sick with oil, as is mentioned in S. James. When Decentius, bishop of Eugenium in Italy, in 416, wrote to Innocent I. upon this sacrament, he makes no question whether it was a sacrament, but only consults him concerning the manner of administering; whether a bishop could give it, or whether priests were the only administrators of this sacrament, as S. James says, "Let them call in the priests of the Church;" and whether it could be given to penitents before they had been reconciled by absolution. To the former question, the pope replied there could be no doubt, as S. James could never mean that bishops were excluded as being higher than priests; but that he supposed them to be taken up with other things. We might add to this, that the word presbyter was then used indiscriminately to both bishops and priests. A.—As to the next question, whether penitents

14 Is any man sick among you? Let him bring in the priests of the church, and let them pray over him, anointing him with oil, in the name of the Lord:

15 And the prayer of faith shall save the sick man: and the Lord shall raise him up: and if he be in sins, they shall be forgiven him.

16 Confess, therefore, your sins one to another; and pray for one another, that you may be saved: for the continual prayer of a just man availeth much.

17^b Elias was a man passible like unto us: and with prayer he prayed that it might not rain upon the earth, and it rained not for three years and six months.

18 And he prayed again: and the heaven gave rain, and the earth yielded her fruit.

19 My brethren, if any of you shall err from the truth, and any one convert him:

^b 3 Kings xvii. 1; Luke iv. 25.

could receive this sacrament before absolution, he answered in the negative. "For," says he, "can it be thought that this one sacrament can be given to those who are declared unworthy of receiving the rest?" Innocent I. in Epist. ad Decent. c. 8. Hubert. de Extre. Unct.—Let him bring in, &c. See here a plain warrant of Scripture for the sacrament of extreme unction, that any controversy against its institution would be against the express words of the sacred text in the plainest terms. Ch.

VER. 16. Confess, therefore, your sins, &c. Divers interpreters expound this of sacramental confession, though, as the authors of the annotations on the Rheims Testament observe, this is not certain. The words one to another, may signify that it is not enough to confess to God, but that we must also confess to men, and not to every man, but to those whom God appointed, and to whom he hath given a power of remitting sins in his name.—One to another. That is, to the priests of the Church, whom (ver. 14) he had ordered to be called for, and brought in to the sick; moreover, to confess to persons who had no power to forgive sins would be useless. Hence the precept here means, that we must confess to men whom God hath appointed, and who, by their ordination and jurisdiction, have received the power of remitting sins in his name. Ch.

VER. 20. He who causeth a sinner to be converted, &c. S. James concludes his Epistle with a work of charity, one of the most acceptable to Almighty God, and most beneficial to our neighbour, when any one becomes instrumental in converting others from their errors, or from a wicked life; for it is only God that can convert the heart. The Church of England, when they modelled the articles of their reformation, received this Epistle of S. James as canonical. They profess to follow the Holy Scriptures as the only rule of their belief: they find in the 14th and 15th verses of this chapter these words: "Is any man sick among you? Let him bring in the priests of the Church, and let them pray over him, anointing him with oil . . . and if he be in sins, they shall be forgiven him." In these words they find all that they themselves require, to be a sacrament of the new law; to wit, a precept or injunction, clear and unlimited as to time, a visible sign, with a promise of invisible grace, in remitting of sins, the minister of it, and the persons specified who are to receive it. They also found this practised at the time of the reformation by the Universal Church, by all Catholics, both in the east and west, both by the Latin and by the Greek Churches; and that all Christian Churches received it as a sacrament; and yet they thought fit to lay it quite aside, as if it was neither a sacrament nor a holy ceremony, nor a pious custom fit to be retained. They must have judged, that they had convincing proofs both to contradict in other things the judgment and belief of the Catholic Church, and also in this particular; as to which latter case, I shall examine the reasons which they bring. Calvin, and the reformation writers, give us the following reasons or conjectures, that this anointing, as well as that, (Mark vi. 13,) was only to be used for a time, by those who had the gift of curing diseases miraculously; so that like other miraculous gifts, (as the speaking of tongues, prophesying, &c.,) it was but to last during the first planting of the Christian faith. Dr. Fulk, against the Rheims Testament, and Mr. Baxter, &c., affirm boldly that Christ "appointed his apostles to anoint those with oil whom they cured." And Dr. Hammond says, "that the anointing with oil was a ceremony used by Christ and his apostles in their miraculous cures." They assert this, as if it was taught by the Scripture itself. They are no less positive that this anointing soon ceased, and was laid aside with the gift of miraculous cures, given sometimes to the first Christians at their baptism, or when they received the Holy Ghost in the sacrament of confirmation. Dr. Fulk, besides this, is positive that "the Greek Church never to this day received this anointing and prayer over the sick as a sacrament." These are their arbitrary, groundless, and false expositions, which they bring against a clear text of the Holy Scriptures. But to answer in short each particular: we find by the evangelists, (Matt. x. 8; Mark vi. 13; Luke x. 9,) that Christ gave to his twelve apostles, and afterwards to his seventy-two disciples, in their first mission before his death, (which was only into the cities of Israel,) a power of casting out devils, of raising the dead, of curing diseases in his name. And S. Mark tells us that they cast out many devils, and anointed many sick with oil, and cured them. But when Dr. Fulk and others add, that our Saviour appointed, ordered, or commanded them to anoint with oil those whom they cured, no such thing is said, nor insinuated, neither by S. Mark nor by any of the evangelists, nor any where in the Holy Scriptures. As for the apostles and disciples, they might cure many, making use of oil, and many without it, by laying hands upon them, by a prayer, or by calling upon the name of Jesus. Neither is it judged probable by the interpreters that the apostles, in their miraculous cures, were confined to the use of oil: especially since we find that after Christ's resurrection, in their second mission to all nations, Christ foretells (Matt. xvi. 18) that they who believe in him shall have this miraculous gift of healing the sick, but mentions only the laying of hands upon them: they shall lay hands on the sick, and they shall be well. We believe that as our Saviour appointed water to be the matter of the sacrament of baptism, so he would have oil to be the matter of the sacrament of extreme unction, which he instituted to strengthen the souls of the sick, against the dangers and temptations at the approach of death, and of which S. James here speaks near upon thirty years after Christ's ascension. The miraculous gift of healing, as well as other gifts of the Holy Ghost, was often given with the sacraments, which were to be always continued, and not to cease, with those gifts. We may also take notice, that neither they who had this gift of healing, had any command or advice to make use of it to all that were sick, nor were all that were sick ordered to seek for a cure of those who had this gift; whereas here S. James orders every one to send for the priests of the Church to anoint him, and pray over him for a spiritual relief. S. Timothy had frequent infirmities, as we read 1 Tim. v. 23, nor yet did S. Paul, who had that gift, cure him. The same S. Paul left Trophimus sick at Miletum. 2 Tim. iv. 20. Epaphroditus, S. Paul's companion in his labours, was sick, when he had S. Paul with him, even unto death; that is, so as to be at the point of death (Phil. ii. 27); nor yet did S. Paul, but God, restore him to his health. And if S. James had spoken of a miraculous restoring of corporal health by that anointing, he should rather have said, bring in those who have the gift of healing; for we may reasonably suppose that many had this gift who were not priests, and we have no reason to suppose that all priests had this gift. Our adversaries tell us, with great assurance, that this anointing mentioned by S. James was soon laid aside; which, say they, we may gather from the silence of the writers in the three following ages. To this merely negative argument the Catholics answer: 1. That it is enough we have the tradition and practice of the Church, witnessed by the writers in the ages immediately succeeding. 2. That the greatest part of the writings in those ages are not extant. 3. The writers of those times seldom mentioned those things which were sufficiently known among the Christians by daily use, especially what related to the sacraments and mysteries of the Christian religion, which (as it appears by the writings that they were able to preserve) they made it their particular endeavour to conceal from the heathens, who turned them to derision and contempt. In the mean time, had not this anointing been always retained and continued, the ages immediately following would not have conspired every where to practise it, and to look upon it as a sacrament. Not to insist on the authority of Origen, § in the beginning of the third age, (hom. 2, in Levit.,) who numbering up the different ways by which sins are forgiven in the new law, says, that they were remitted when priests anoint the sick with oil, as in the Epistle of S. James. S. Chrys., || in the end of the fourth age, (in his third book de Sacerdotio, tom. 1, p. 384, nov. ed. Ben., written before the end of the fourth age, about the year 375,) says that priests (and his word expresseth sacrificing priests, not elders) have now a power to remit sins, which he proves from those words in S. James, Is any man sick among you? &c. This shows, as do also Origen's words, that this custom was then continued in the East, in the Greek Church, and that it was believed a sacrament, of which the priests only were the ministers. Innocent I., ¶ in his answers to Decentius, bishop of Eugenium, in Italy, at the beginning of the fifth age, an. 416, calls this anointing and prayer over the sick, set down in S. James's Epistle, a sacrament in the same sense as other sacraments in the new law. See Labbe's Councils, tom. 2, p. 1248. Dr. Fulk affirms boldly that this anointing was never to this day received in the Greek Church as a sacrament. This only shows how little credit is to be given to him. He might have found great reason to doubt of his bold assertion, since neither Photius, in the ninth age, nor Michael Cerularius, in the eleventh, ever objected this difference betwixt their Greek and the Latin Church, at a time when they reckoned up even the most minute differences either in doctrine or discipline, so as to find fault with the Latins for shaving their beards. He might have found it by what happened at the time of the Council of Lyons, in the thirteenth age, when the Pope, in his letter to the emperor of Constantinople, wrote that the Latin Church, and all in communion with him, acknowledged seven sacraments, which the Greeks never blamed. He might have observed the same when the Greeks and Armenians came to an union in the Council of Florence, in the fifteenth age. The same Dr. Fulk, who wrote about the year 1600, could scarce be ignorant of the ill success the Augsbourg Confession met with among the Greeks, to whom, when the Lutherans had sent copies of their faith and of their reformation, Jeremy, the patriarch of Constantinople, with a synod of the Grecians, condemned their articles, and, among other points, declared that they held "in the orthodox Catholic Church seven Divine sacraments," the same as in the Latin Church, baptism . . . and the holy oil. Had Dr. Fulk lived a little longer, he must have been more and more ashamed to find other Greek synods condemning him and all the said reformers. For when Cyrillus Lucaris, advanced to the see of Constantinople by the interest of the French Calvinists, began to favour and support the doctrine of the Calvinists, the Greeks in several synods under their patriarchs, (an. 1639, 1642, 1671, and 1672,) condemned Cyril and the new doctrine of the said reformers, and expressly declared that they held seven sacraments. See M. Arnauld, tom. 3, Perpétuité de la Foy; and the Dissertations of M. Le Brun, tom. 3, p. 34, and 572, Dissert. 12, when he shows that all the churches of the East, and all the Christian churches of the world, though separated from the communion and subordination to the pope, agree with the Latin Church, as to the sacrifice of the Mass, as to the real presence of Christ in the Eucharist, and as to the seven sacraments. THE

FIRST EPISTLE OF S. PETER,

THE APOSTLE.

THE First Epistle of S. Peter, though brief, contains much doctrine concerning faith, hope, and charity, with divers instructions to all persons of what state or condition soever. The apostle commands submission to rulers and superiors, and exhorts all to the practice of a virtuous life, in imitation of Christ. This Epistle is written with such apostolic dignity, as to manifest the supreme authority with which its writer, the prince of the apostles, had been invested by his Lord and Master Jesus Christ. He wrote it at Rome, which figuratively he calls Babylon, about fifteen years after our Lord's ascension. Ch.—S. Peter on every occasion testified a more than usual zeal for his Master, and hence our Lord shewed him a very particular and very marked attention. He would have Peter present at his transfiguration (Luke ix. 28); and at another time declared that he was a rock, upon which he would build his Church, against which the gates of hell should never prevail (Matt. xvi. 18). Although S. Peter had the misfortune or weakness to deny Jesus Christ in his passion, our Lord, after his resurrection, gave him fresh proofs of his regard. Matt. xvi. 7. He continued him in his primacy over all, and appointed him in the most explicit manner visible head of his Church, when thrice asking Peter, "Lovest thou me more than these?" and S. Peter as often answering, Christ said to him, "Feed my lambs, feed my sheep." John xxi. 15.—This Epistle was always received in the Church as canonical, and as written by S. Peter, prince of the apostles. Many think it was written before the year 49; but this is not certain. Others judge not till after the year 60, and some not till a short time before he wrote his Second Epistle. See Tillem. t. 1, Art. 31, on S. Pet.; Art. 31, and toia. 2, on S. Mark, p. 89. The main design is to confirm the new converts in the faith of Christ, with divers instructions to a virtuous life. Wi.

CHAPTER I.

He gives thanks to God for the benefit of our being called to the true faith, and to eternal life; into which we are to enter by many tribulations. He exhorts to holiness of life, considering the holiness of God, and our redemption by the blood of Christ.

PETER, an apostle of Jesus Christ, to the strangers dispersed through Pontus, Galatia, Cappadocia, Asia, and Bithynia, elect,

2 According to the foreknowledge of God, the Father, unto the sanctification of the Spirit, unto the obedience and sprinkling of the blood of Jesus Christ: Grace unto you, and peace be multiplied.

3 * Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, who according to his great mercy hath regenerated us unto a lively hope, through the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead,

4 Unto an inheritance incorruptible, and undefiled, and that fadeth not, reserved in heaven for you,

5 Who by the power of God are kept by faith unto salvation, ready to be revealed in the last time.

6 In which you shall greatly rejoice, now if need be for a little time, to be made sorrowful in divers temptations:

7 That the trial of your faith, much more precious than gold, (which is tried by the fire,) may be found unto praise, and glory, and honour, at the appearing of Jesus Christ:

8 Whom having not seen you love: in whom also now, though you see him not, you believe: and believing, shall rejoice with an unspeakable and glorified joy:

9 Receiving the end of your faith, even the salvation of your souls.

10 Concerning which salvation the prophets have inquired, and diligently searched, who prophesied of the grace to come in you:

11 Searching into what time, or manner of time, the Spirit of Christ should signify in them: foretelling those sufferings that are in Christ, and the glories that should follow:

12 To whom it was revealed, that not to themselves, but to you they ministered those things, which are now

CHAP. I. VER. 1. *Peter, an apostle of Jesus Christ, to the strangers dispersed. Lit. of the dispersion; i. e. to the Jews or Gentiles now converted, who lived dispersed in those countries, chosen or elected * according to the foreknowledge and eternal decrees of God unto the sanctification of the Spirit. Wi.*

VER. 2. Unto the obedience and sprinkling of the blood of Jesus Christ; i. e. to be saved by the merits of his death and passion. Wi.—All the three Divine Persons conspire in the salvation of the elect. The Father as principal of their election, by his eternal prescience; the Son as victim for their sins, and the source of all merit; the Holy Ghost as the spirit of adoption and love, animating and sanctifying them, and leading them to glory.

VER. 7. At the appearing of Jesus Christ. Lit. in the revelation; i. e. when he shall be revealed, manifested, and appear at the day of judgment. Wi.

VER. 12. The Holy Ghost being sent down from heaven, on whom the angels desire to look.† This place is differently expounded. Some refer these words, on whom the angels desire to look, to Jesus Christ, who was named in the foregoing verse; some to the Holy Ghost, who, being one God with the Father and the Son, the angels are happy in seeing and loving him. See Estius and the Greek text. Wi.

VER. 18. From your vain conversation of the tradition of your fathers. S. Peter teacheth what S. Paul repeats in many places, that it was in vain for them to hope to be saved by the ceremonies and precepts of the former law, to which their forefathers had added many unnecessary and groundless traditions. They could only hope for salvation by believing in Christ, by the price of whose precious blood they were redeemed from their sins, as they had heard by the word of the gospel preached to them. Wi.

declared to you by those who have preached the gospel to you, the Holy Ghost being sent down from heaven, on whom the angels desire to look.

13 Wherefore having the loins of your mind girded, being sober, hope perfectly for that grace which is offered you at the revelation of Jesus Christ:

14 As children of obedience, not conformed to the former desires of your ignorance:

15 But according to him who is holy, who hath called you: be you also holy in all conversation:

16 For it is written: 'You shall be holy, because I am holy.

17 And if you invoke the Father, him who ' without respect of persons, judgeth according to every one's work, converse in fear during the time of your sojourning here:

18 Knowing that you were not redeemed with corruptible gold or silver from your vain conversation of the tradition of your fathers:

19 "But with the precious blood of Christ, as of a lamb unspotted and undefiled:

20 Foreknown indeed before the foundation of the world, but manifested in the last times for you,

21 Who through him are faithful in God, who raised him from the dead, and gave him glory, that your faith and hope might be in God:

22 Purifying your souls in the obedience of charity, with a brotherly love, from a sincere heart love one another earnestly:

23 Being born again not of corruptible seed, but incorruptible by the word of God, who liveth and remaineth for ever.

24 "For all flesh is as grass: and all the glory thereof as the flower of the grass: the grass is withered, and the flower thereof is fallen away.

25 But the word of the Lord endureth for ever: and this is the word which hath been preached unto you.

CHAP. II.

We are to lay aside all guile, and go to Christ, the living stone: and as being now his people, walk worthily of him, with submission to superiors, and patience under sufferings.

† 1 Cor. vi. 20, and vii. 23; Heb. ix. 14; 1 John i. 7; Apoc. i. 5.—e Eccl. xiv. 18; Isa. xl. 6; James i. 10.

VER. 23. Thus this new birth, common to you all, should form between you an union much more stable and solid than that formed in you by the ties of blood. V.

* V. 1. Electis, ἐκλεκτοῖς. It is certain this word does not only signify those who are predestinated to eternal glory, but those who are chosen or called to believe: as John vi., Christ says, that he had elect or chosen his twelve apostles, and yet one of them (Judas) was a devil. The Jews were called the elect people of God, as now are all Christians; nor can we think that all to whom S. Peter wrote, were predestinated to glory. Ibid. Advenis dispersionis; i. e. dispersis in Ponto, &c.

† V. 12. In quem desiderant angeli prospicere. The Greek MSS. and copies at present have εἰς ἃ, in quæ, which is commonly expounded to agree with the mysteries revealed to the prophets, and which the angels rejoiced and were delighted to see fulfilled by the coming of Christ. It seems as if the ancient interpreter had read εἰς ὃ, agreeing with πνεῦμα, spiritum; or perhaps εἰς ὃν, to agree with θεόν, understood. These changes of a letter might easily happen. It appears that not only divers Latin interpreters, but also some of the Greek Fathers brought these words to show the Divinity of the Holy Ghost, as S. Athan. Epist. 1, ad Serap., p. 653, edit. Ben.

CHAP. II. VER. 1. Wherefore, laying aside all malice. S. Peter having put them in mind of the great benefit of Christ's coming to redeem us from sin, exhorts them to avoid sin, to lead a life worthy of their vocation, to follow Christ's doctrine, and imitate his example. W:

WHEREFORE, ^alaying aside all malice, and all guile, and dissimulations, and envies, and all deceptions,

2 As new-born infants, desire the rational milk without guile: that thereby you may grow unto salvation:

3 If yet you have tasted that the Lord is sweet.

4 To whom approaching the living stone, rejected indeed by men, but chosen and honoured of God:

5 Be you also as living stones built up, a spiritual house, a holy priesthood, to offer up spiritual sacrifices, acceptable to God by Jesus Christ.

6 Wherefore it is contained in the Scripture: ^bBehold I lay in Sion a chief corner-stone, elect, precious: And he that shall believe in him, shall not be confounded.

7 To you, therefore, that believe honour: but to them that believe not, ^cthe stone which the builders rejected, the same is made the head of the corner:

8 And a stone of stumbling, and a rock of scandal to them, who stumble at the word, neither do believe whereunto also they are set.

9 But you are a chosen generation, a royal priesthood, a holy nation, a purchased people, that you may declare his virtues, who hath called you out of darkness into his admirable light.

10 ^dWho in time past were not a people: but are now the people of God: who had not obtained mercy, but now have obtained mercy.

11 ^eDearly beloved, I beseech you as strangers and pilgrims, to refrain yourselves from carnal desires, which war against the soul,

12 Having your conversation good among the Gen-

VER. 2. Desire the rational milk without guile, or deceit. Without guile, in construction, does not agree with new-born children, but with milk, as appears by the text. The sense is, follow the pure doctrine of the gospel, without mixture of errors. Wi.

VER. 3. Whoever has a relish for Jesus Christ, has also for his word; and such as have a relish for neither, are truly deplorable. Let us pray then that God would feed us with his word, and with the holy Eucharist, that contains his body and blood, his soul and his Divinity, that we may thereby grow up to salvation.

VER. 4. The living stone, rejected, &c. Christ is the chief foundation of his Church, the corner-stone of the building, whom the Jews, and other obstinate unbelievers, reject to their own condemnation and destruction. See Isa. xxviii. 16; Matt. xxi. 42; Acts iv. 11; Rom. ix. 32. Wi.

VER. 5. You also . . . a holy + priesthood; and, as he saith again, (ver. 9,) a royal priesthood. 1. Because they had ministers of God, who were truly and properly priests, of whom Christ is the chief. And it is called a royal priesthood, as Christians may be called metaphorically kings, by governing their passions, or because they are invited to reign with Christ in his kingdom, to sit on his throne, &c. See Apoc. iii. 21, &c. Wi.

VER. 8. Whereunto also they are + set, or placed, i. e. by God's permission; not that God is the cause of their sins or damnation, (whose will is that every one be saved,) but his justice has appointed and decreed punishments against those who, by their own wilful malice, refuse to believe and to follow his doctrine: their stumbling against this stone is wilful and obstinate. Wi.

VER. 9. You are . . . a purchased people, whom Christ purchased, bought and redeemed with the price of his precious blood.—That you may declare his virtues; i. e. the excellencies and perfections of God, who hath called you, and now made you his people, which you were not, at least in this manner before, neither you that were Jews, nor especially you that were Gentiles. Wi.

VER. 12. In the day of visitation. God is said to visit his people, sometimes by afflictions and punishments, and sometimes by graces and favours. Some think S. Peter here, by the day of visitation, means the approaching destruction of Jerusalem by the Romans, and that the sense is, that the heathen Romans, seeing your peaceable dispositions and pious conversations, may have a favourable opinion of the Christian religion, and be converted. Others, that you and they to whom the gospel is preached, may glorify God when he visits them with graces and favours, whether exterior or interior. Wi.

VER. 13. To every human creature, || to every one whom the order of Providence has placed over you, whether it be to emperors or kings, who have the supreme power in kingdoms, or to governors of provinces; obey your temporal princes, though heathens and idolaters, (as the Roman emperors were at that time titles: that whereas they speak against you as evil doers, considering you by your good works, they may glorify God in the day of visitation.

13 ^fBe ye subject, therefore, to every human creature for God's sake: whether it be to the king as excellant:

14 Or to governors, as sent by him for the punishment of evil doers, and for the praise of the good:

15 For so is the will of God, that by doing well you may silence the ignorance of foolish men:

16 As free, and not as making liberty a cloak of malice, but as the servants of God.

17 Honour all men: ^glove the brotherhood: fear God: honour the king:

18 ^hServants, be subject to your masters with all fear, not only to the good, and gentle, but also to the froward.

19 For this is thankworthy, if for conscience towards God, a man endure sorrows, suffering wrongfully.

20 For what glory is it, if sinning and being buffeted you suffer it? But if doing well you suffer patiently; this is thankworthy before God.

21 For unto this you have been called: because Christ also suffered for us, leaving you an example that you should follow his steps.

22 ⁱWho did no sin, neither was guile found in his mouth:

23 Who when he was reviled, did not revile: when he suffered, he threatened not: but delivered himself to him that judged him unjustly:

enemies to the Christian religion,) in all that is not sinful and against the law of God: for this is the will of God, and all power is from God. See Rom. xiii. Wi.

VER. 16. As free; to wit, from the slavery of sin, but take care not to make this Christian freedom and liberty a cloak of malice, as they do, who pretend that this makes subjects free from their obedience to temporal princes and magistrates; or servants free from the obedience due to their masters, even when they are froward, ¶ ill-humoured, or cross to them. Wi.

VER. 19. Take notice that this is thankworthy, an effect of God's grace, a thing acceptable to God, when you suffer injuries patiently; whereas it is no glory, nothing that deserves commendation or a reward, either before God or man, to suffer for doing ill, as a malefactor, who deserves punishments. CHAP. III. VER. 1. Let wives, &c. In the first six verses he gives instructions to married women: 1. lord, or master (Gen. xviii. 12) ; 2. to be modest in their dress, without vanity ; 3. that women take the greatest care of the hidden man, i. e. of the interior disposition of their heart, which he calls the incorruptibility of a quiet and a meek spirit ; 4. not fearing any trouble, when God's service or the duty to their husbands require it. Wi.

VER. 7. Husbands, &c. His advice to husbands : 1. To carry themselves to their wives with knowledge, prudence, and discretion ; 2. not in any imperious manner, but treating their wives with respect and honour, though a wife be the weaker vessel both in body and mind ; 3. considering themselves and their wives to be joint heirs with them of God's graces and favours, both in this world and the next ; 4. that their prayers and duty to God be not hindered, neither by too great a fondness and compliance, nor by disagreements and dissensions. Wi.

VER. 15. Always ready to satisfy, &c.* S. Peter would have every Christian, according to his circumstances and capacity, ready to give general reasons of his faith and hope of salvation, both to infidels and heretics that refuse to believe. Wi.

VER. 18. Christ . . . being put to death indeed in the flesh, dying on the cross for our sins, but brought to life by the spirit.† By the spirit here some understand Christ's Divine spirit, and power of his Divinity, by which he soon raised himself again from death to an immortal life by his glorious resurrection. But others by the spirit rather understand Christ's soul, by which he never died, which always remained united to his Divine person, and which the third day he again re-united to his body. Wi.

VER. 19. In which (to wit, soul or spirit) also he came, and preached to those spirits who were in prison. The true and common interpretation of this place seems to be, that the soul of Christ, after the separation from the body and before the resurrection, descended to a place in the interior parts of the earth, called hell in that which we call the Apostles' Creed, (sometimes called Abraham's bosom, sometimes Limbus Patrum, a place where were detained all the souls of the patriarchs, prophets, and just men, as it were in prison,) and preached to these spirits in this prison ; i. e. brought them this happy news, that he who was their Redeemer was now come to be their deliverer, and that at his glorious ascension they should enter with him into heaven, where none could enter before our Redeemer.

11 ^g Let him decline from evil, and do good : let him seek peace, and pursue it :

12 Because the eyes of the Lord are upon the just, and his ears unto their prayers : but the countenance of the Lord against them that do evil things.

13 And who is he that can hurt you, if you be zealous of good ?

14 ^h But if also you suffer any thing for justice sake, blessed are ye. And be not afraid of their terror, and be not troubled,

15 But sanctify the Lord Christ in your hearts, being always ready to satisfy every one that asketh you a reason of that hope which is in you.

16 ⁱ But with modesty and fear, having a good conscience : that whereas they speak evil of you, they may be ashamed who falsely accuse your good conversation in Christ.

17 For it is better doing well (if such be the will of God) to suffer, than doing ill.

18 ^k Because Christ also died once for our sins, the just for the unjust, that he might offer us to God, being put to death indeed in the flesh, but brought to life by the spirit.

19 In which also he came, and preached to those spirits who were in prison :

20 Who in time past had been incredulous, ^lwhen they waited for the patience of God, in the days of Noe, when the ark was a building : in which a few, that is, eight souls, were saved by water.

21 Whereunto baptism being of the like form, now saveth you also : not the putting away of the filth of the flesh, but the examination of a good conscience towards God, by the resurrection of Jesus Christ.

22 Who is on the right hand of God, swallowing up death, that we might become heirs of life everlasting : he who opened as it were heaven's gates. Among these were many who had been formerly at first incredulous in the time of Noe, who would not take warning from his preparing and building the ark, but it may be reasonably supposed that many of them repented of their sins when they saw the danger approaching, and before they perished by the waters of the deluge, so that they died at least not guilty of eternal damnation ; because, though they were sinners, yet they worshipped the true God, for we do not find any proofs of idolatry before the deluge. Dr. Pearson, on the fifth article of the Creed, writes thus, " There is nothing which the Fathers agree in more than as to a local and real descent of the soul of Christ into the infernal parts, unto the habitation of the souls departed. . . . This was the general opinion of the Church, as may appear by the testimonies of those ancient writers, who lived successively and wrote in several ages, and delivered this exposition in such express terms as are not capable of any other interpretation." Thus Dr. Pearson. He cites the Fathers. See the edition, an. 1683, p. 237. Wi.—Prison. See here a proof of a third place, or middle state of souls : for these spirits in prison, to whom Christ went to preach after his death, were not in heaven, nor yet in the hell of the damned ; because heaven is no prison, and Christ did not go to preach to the damned. Ch.

VER. 21. Baptism, &c. That is, the ark was a figure of baptism, which saveth you from the death of the soul : and as no one was saved from the waters of the deluge but those few eight persons who were in the ark, so no one can enter into heaven if he hath not been baptized, or hath had a desire of it when come to the use of reason. And such persons as are capable of knowing what they receive, must come with the dispositions of faith and a true repentance, which is here called the examination (lit. the interrogation) of a good conscience, who therefore are examined whether they believe in one God and three Persons, &c. Wi.—Not the putting away, &c. As much as to say, that baptism has not its efficacy, in order to salvation, from its washing away any bodily filth or dirt ; but from its purging the conscience from sin : when accompanied with suitable dispositions in the party, to answer the interrogations made at that time, with relation to faith, the renouncing of Satan with all his works, and the obedience to God's commands. Ch.

VER. 22. Jesus now as our Redeemer, and as man, sitteth on the right hand of God, (see Mark xvi. 9 ; Col. i. ; Heb. i. 3, &c.,) having swallowed up death being gone into heaven, the angels, and powers and virtues being made subject to him.

CHAP. IV.

Exhortation to cease from sin; to mutual charity; to do all for the glory of God; to be willing to suffer for Christ.

CHRIST, therefore, having suffered in the flesh, be you also armed with the same thought, for he that hath suffered in the flesh, hath ceased from sins:

2 *That now as to the rest of his time in the flesh, he may live not according to the desires of man, but according to the will of God.

3 For the time past is sufficient to have fulfilled the will of the Gentiles, for them who have walked in riotousness, lusts, excess of wine, revellings, banquetings, and unlawful worshipping of idols.

4 Wherein they think it strange, that you run not with them into the same confusion of riotousness, speaking evil of you.

5 Who shall render an account to him, who is ready to judge the living and the dead.

6 For this cause also was the gospel preached to the dead: that they might be judged indeed, according to men in the flesh, but may live according to God in the Spirit.

7 But the end of all approacheth. Be prudent, therefore, and watch in prayers.

8 But before all things have a mutual charity among yourselves: ^bfor charity covereth a multitude of sins.

9 *Using hospitality towards one another ^dwithout murmuring.

10 *As every man hath received grace, ministering the same one to another, as good ^fstewards of the manifold grace of God.

11 If any man speak, let him speak as the words of voiced or destroyed) death; having conquered and triumphed over the devil, sin, and death, that by his grace and his merits we might become heirs of eternal life; and is gone into heaven, angels, &c. being made subject to him. Wi.

* V. 15. Ad satisfactionem, πρὸς ἀπολογίαν, ad defensionem.

† V. 18. In quo (spiritu) ἐν ᾧ (πνεύματι) veniens πορεύθεις, profectus. As to the different expositions of this place, see Estius, Corn. a Lapide, &c., which also Dr. Pearson sets down at large. The late Protestant writers, as may be seen in Dr. Hammond and Dr. Wells, expound this place so as to signify no real descent of Christ's soul into hell, or to any infernal place, but only that his Divine spirit sent Noe to preach to the spirits in the prison of their body, (i. e. to those wicked men who lived in the days of Noe,) to exhort them to repentance. But this exposition, as Dr. Pearson observed, is against the general opinion of the Church and the ancient Fathers; and of which S. Aug. said, (Epis. 163, tom. 2, p. 574,) Quis nisi infidelis negaverit, fuisse apud inferos Christum?

‡ V. 21. Conscientiæ bonæ interrogatio, ἐπερώρημα. See Estius.

§ V. 22. Deglutens mortem, ut vitæ æternæ hæredes efficeremur. These words, found in all Latin copies, and cited by the Latin Fathers, are scarce found in any Greek MS., and so are omitted in the Prot. translation.

CHAP. IV. VER. 3. For the time past is sufficient, &c. As if he said, you who were Gentiles, have already lived too long in vices before your conversion; so that they who are not yet converted, admire * at the change they see in you, make a jest of you, talk against you for your not running on with them in the same wicked and shameful disorders: but they shall render an exact account of all to the just Judge of the living and the dead. Wi.

VER. 8. Charity covereth a multitude of sins. It is a great means to atone for them; or it may signify, that a charitable mind excuses many sins in others. Wi.

VER. 12. Think not strange, &c. Be not surprised, nor discouraged, that a hot and sharp persecution is come upon you at this time, as if it were a new and an extraordinary thing. It is what you must expect and be ready to receive with patience, and even with joy, when you suffer as Christ did before you, and for his sake: this is the way to an eternal happiness in heaven. Wi.

VER. 15. Or a railer. The Greek here signifies one that does evil, or a malefactor—Or as coveting the goods of others.† The Greek rather signifies one

God: if any man minister, let it be as from the power which God administereth: that in all things God may be honoured through Jesus Christ: to whom is glory, and dominion, for ever and ever. Amen.

12 Most dearest, think not strange the burning heat which is to try you, as if some new thing happened to you:

13 But rejoice, being partakers of the sufferings of Christ, that when his glory shall be revealed, you may also be glad with exceeding joy.

14 If you be reproached for the name of Christ, you shall be happy: for that which is of the honour, glory, and power of God, and that which is his spirit, resteth upon you.

15 But let none of you suffer as a murderer, or a thief, or a railer, or as coveting the goods of others.

16 But if as a Christian, let him not be ashamed: but let him glorify God in that name.

17 For the time is that judgment should begin at the house of God. And if first at us: what shall be the end of those who believe not the gospel of God?

18 *And if the just man shall scarcely be saved, where shall the wicked and the sinner appear?

19 Therefore also they, who suffer according to the will of God, let them commend their souls in good deeds to the faithful Creator.

CHAP. V.

He exhorts both priests and laity, to their respective duties, and recommends to all humility and watchfulness.

CHAP. V. VER. 1. The ancients, therefore, that are among you, I beseech who am myself also an ancient, &c.* According to the letter, the seniors, I, a fellow senior; or, the elders, I, a fellow elder. Mr. Nary, and also the French translators, commonly put, the priest, I, your fellow priest. Or even it might be, the bishops, I, your fellow bishop. The Latin word senior, and the Greek word presbyteros, which here are in the text, if we should follow their derivation only, signify elderly men, or men advanced in years; but since by a received use, they signify and represent to us offices and dignities, either ecclesiastical or civil, either belonging to the Church or state, which in other languages are now generally known by other words; we may however be permitted to use, even in translating the Holy Scriptures, those words and names by which now are represented to us those offices and dignities. It cannot be doubted but the Greek and Latin words, which we find in this verse, were applied, after the establishment of the new law of Christ, to signify such ministers of God and the Church which are now called priests and bishops; and it is for this reason that I judged it better to put the word priest, and fellow priest, (meaning priests of the higher order, commonly known by the name of bishops,) than to use the words, seniors, elders, or presbyters.—And a witness of the sufferings of Christ. S. Peter being called and made the first or chief of the apostles soon after Christ began to preach, he was witness of what Christ suffered, both during the time of his preaching and of his passion.—Glorious. Some think that S. Peter only means that he was present at his transfiguration, where was shown some resemblance of the glory which is to come in heaven. Others think that it expresseth the firm hopes he had of enjoying the glory of heaven. Wi.

care thereof not by constraint, but willingly, according to God : neither for the sake of filthy lucre, but voluntarily :

3 Neither as domineering over the clergy, but being made a pattern of the flock from the heart.

4 And when the Prince of pastors shall appear, you shall receive a never-fading crown of glory.

5 In like manner, ye young men, be subject to the ancients. *And do ye all insinuate humility one to another, *for God resisteth the proud, and giveth grace to the humble.

6 *Be you humbled, therefore, under the mighty hand of God, that he may exalt you in the time of visitation :

7 *Cast all your solicitude upon him, for he hath care of you.

8 Be sober, and watch : because your adversary, the devil, as a roaring lion, goeth about, seeking whom he may devour :

* Rom. xii. 10.—b James iv. 6.—c James iv. 10.

VER. 2. Feed the flock. This shows he speaks of bishops and priests, and not of elders in years only. Wi.

VER. 3. Neither as domineering over the clergy.† This may not only signify over the inferior ministers, who were subject to the bishops or priests, but also over the particular flocks which fell to their share, or to their lot to take care of. See the Greek. Wi.

VER. 12. I have written briefly, considering the importance of such mysteries, and necessary instructions. Wi.

VER. 13. The church, which is in Babylon, (at Rome, say Euseb., S. Jerom, &c.,) so called not only on account of the extent of its empire, but also for its idolatry and vices.—Mark, my son : generally thought to have been S. Mark, the evangelist. Wi.—See the unjust prepossession of certain seceders. In this text, where all the lights of antiquity understand Rome by Babylon, they deny it; and in the book of Revelations, where all evil is spoken of Babylon, there they will have it signify nothing else but Rome : yes, and the Church of Rome, not (as the holy Fathers interpret it) the temporal state of the heathen empire.

V. 1. Seniores, πρεσβύτεροι; consenior, συμπρεσβύτερος. It is certain that in Hebrew, Greek, Latin, and in other languages, such as have a superiority and command over others, in the Church or in the commonwealth, have been called by words that by their derivation express men advanced in age and years; because men chosen to such offices were commonly, though not always, advanced in age. Yet, whether old or young, we give them the names which use and custom hath affixed to their dignities; for example, in English, the chief magistrate of a town we call the mayor or major, not the greater of such a town; those who rule with him we call the aldermen, not the elderly men, according to the derivation. The like might be said of senate, senators, and many other names of offices and dignities; and, as the authors of the annotations on the Rhem. Test. observed, it would be ridiculous to translate such words according to their etymologies. We must not translate pontifex, a bridge-maker; lapis, a hurt foot, &c. Ἀπόστολος*, by its derivation, signifieth only one sent, or a messenger; ἐπισκοπος, an overseer, or inspector; διάκονος, a servant or waiter; yet Protestants as well as Catholics translate, apostles, bishops, deacons: and where πρεσβύτεροι, or seniors, signify men now known by these words, priests or bishops, why may we not in translating give them these names? It is true a particular difficulty occurs, because (as S. Jerom, S. Chrys., and others have taken notice) the Greek word, ὁ πρεσβύτερος, is used in the New Testament sometimes for those who by their dignity were priests only, sometimes for bishops, and many times in the Gospels for those who were governors among the Jews, or members of their great council or sanhedrim, and sometimes 9 Whom resist ye, strong in faith; knowing that the same affliction befalleth your brethren who are in the world.

11 To him be glory and dominion for ever and ever. Amen.

12 By Silvanus, a faithful brother unto you, as I think, I have written briefly: beseeching and testifying, that this is the true grace of God, wherein you stand.

13 The church, which is in Babylon, elected together, saluteth you: and so doth my son, Mark.

† Psal. liv. 23; Matt. vi. 25; Luke xii. 22.

only for those who by their age were elder or more advanced in years. This makes it impossible, in translating, to represent the signification of this Greek word always in Latin or in English by the same Latin or English word, which a translator should endeavour to do as much as possible. The Prot. translators have indeed always rendered the Greek πρεσβύτερος by the English word elder; they stick to the derivation of the word without regard to the different offices signified by that one word, and for which we have different words in English. I take notice that the Latin interpreter of the old Vulgate, though generally very exact, has not followed this rule of translating πρεσβύτερος by the same Latin word: for example, Acts xv. 2, he puts presbyteros, and yet in the same chap. (ver. 4, 6, 22, and 23) he puts seniores. Acts xx. 17, for πρεσβύτεροις he puts maiores natu: and these same persons, by the 28th verse, are called episcopi, ἐπισκοποι. In the Epistles to Timothy and Titus, as also in those of Ss. James, Peter, and John, for the same Greek word we sometimes find presbyteri, and sometimes seniores. A late English translation from the Latin, (an. 1719, by C. N.,) for seniores and presbyteri sometimes puts elders, sometimes priests, whether it be seniores or presbyteri in the Latin; and when mention is made of the ministers of the gospel, (as Acts xv. 4,) for seniores he translates elders, and yet in the same chapter (ver. 6, 22, and 23) for the same word he puts priests, &c. The translators of the Rhem. Testament were more exact, for generally speaking of seniores they put the ancients, when mention was made of those who were πρεσβύτεροι among the Jews; when seniores were applied to the ministers of the gospel, they put seniors; and for presbyteri, they translate priests. Yet they have gone from this in one or two places; for Acts xi. 30, where we read mittentes ad seniores, they put to the ancients; and also, Acts xvi. 4, for senioribus we again find ancients. For my part I judged it best, for distinction sake, to put elders in the Gospels for seniores, or πρεσβύτεροι of the Jews. I had put in the Acts of the Apostles seniors where I found seniores, speaking of the ministers of the new law; and where I have found the Latin, presbyteri, I have translated priests; and Acts xx. 17, I have translated the seniors. I have also been in a doubt here in this place of S. Peter, and also in the 2nd and 3rd of S. John, whether to put seniors or priests: I have put ancient priests, not doubting but that S. Peter and S. John speak of themselves as priests of the first order, or as they were bishops.

† V. 3. In cleris, τῶν κληρῶν. Though I have followed the Rhem. Testament, and translated over the clergy, I believe κληροί, in the plural number, is scarce used for clerici, or for men, but rather for shares and parts of Christ's flock, to signify that every bishop or priest should not domineer over those under him, whether inferior ministers or lay persons.

THE

SECOND EPISTLE OF S. PETER.

THE APOSTLE

*This Epistle, though not at first received as canonical, was acknowledged as such about the end of the fourth age. See Euseb. l. 3, Hist. c. 3; S. Jer. de Vir. Illust. Tillen. art. 33. The design, as it appears, chap. i. 13, and chap. ii. 1, was to give them admonitions and instructions against teachers of false doctrine, particularly against the Simonites. It seems to have been written a little before his martyrdom, about the year 66. Wi.—In this Epistle S. Peter says, (chap. iii.,) "Behold this is the second epistle I write unto you" and before, (chap. i. 14,) "Being assured that the putting off of this my tabernacle is at hand." This shows that it was written a very short time before his martyrdom, which was about thirty-five years after our Lord's ascension. In this Epistle he admonishes the faithful to be mindful of the great gifts they received from God, and to join all other virtues with their faith. He warns them against false teachers, by describing their practices and foretelling their punishments. He describes the dissolution of this world by fire and the day of judgment. Ch.—If some are still found to object, that the present Epistle was not written by S. Peter on account of the marked difference of the style, S. Jerom removes this objection thus: S. Peter employed different interpreters, sometimes Glaucias, and sometimes S. Mark; hence the difference of the style, from the diversity of his scribes. S. Mark was with him when he penned the first, but was not with him when he dictated the present.

CHAPTER I.

He exhorts them to join all other virtues with their faith: in order to secure their salvation.

SIMON Peter, a servant and an apostle of Jesus Christ, to them who have obtained equal faith with us, in the justice of our God and Saviour Jesus Christ.

2 Grace to you and peace be fulfilled in the knowledge of God, and of Christ Jesus, our Lord.

3 According as all things of his divine power, which appertain to life and piety, are given to us, through the knowledge of him who hath called us by his own proper glory and virtue,

4 By whom he hath given us very great and precious promises: that by these you may be made partakers of the divine nature: flying from the corruption of that concupiscence which is in the world.

5 And you, giving all diligence, join with your faith, virtue, and with virtue, knowledge,

6 And with knowledge, abstinence, and with abstinence, patience, and with patience, piety,

7 And with piety, brotherly love, and with brotherly love, charity.

8 For if these things be with you, and abound, they will make you to be neither empty, nor unfruitful in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ.

9 For he that hath not these things with him, is blind, and groping, forgetting his being purged from his old sins.

10 Wherefore, brethren, labour the more, that by good works you may make sure your vocation and election: for doing these things, you shall not sin at any time.

11 For so an entrance shall be ministered to you abundantly into the everlasting kingdom of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ.

12 For which cause I will begin to admonish you ala John xxi. 19.—b 1 Cor. i. 17.

CHAP. I. VER. 1. In the justice (or by the justice) of our God and Saviour, Jesus Christ. As justice and sanctification are equally attributed to God and to Jesus Christ, it shows that the Son was equally and the same God with the Father. Wi.

VER. 3. *Glory and virtue. By the Greek text, virtue is not here the same as power, as commonly in other places, but signifies God's goodness, merey, and beneney. Wi.

VER. 4. Partakers of the Divine nature. Divine grace infused into our souls, as said to be a partaking of the Divine nature by an union with the Spirit of God, whereby men are made his adoptive children, heirs of heaven, &c. Wi.

VER. 9. Groping,† like one that is blind. The Greek may signify one who hath his eyes shut, or that is like a blind mole. Wi.

VER. 10. By good works you may make sure, &c. Without diving into the hidden mysteries of predestination, &c. Wi.

VER. 12. I will begin.‡ That is, by the Greek, I will take care. Wi.

VER. 14. The putting off,§ or dissolution; i. e. my death is at hand. Wi.

VER. 15. That you frequently have after my decease,|| &c.

VER. 16. We have not by following artificial fables. Lit. learned fables,¶ invented to promote our doctrine.—We, I with others, were eye-witnesses of his glory on Mount Thabor. Wi.

VER. 19. And we have the word of prophecy more firm, or to make our testimonies and preaching of Christ more firm. The revelations of God made to the prophets, and contained in the Holy Scriptures, give us, of all others, the greatest assurance. Though the mysteries in themselves remain obscure and incomprehensible, the motive of our belief is Divine authority. Wi.

VER. 20. No prophecy of the Scripture is made by private interpretation; or, ways of these things: though indeed you know them, and are confirmed in the present truth.

13 But I think it just as long as I am in this tabernacle, to stir you up by admonition:

14 Being assured that the putting off of this my tabernacle is at hand, even according as our Lord Jesus Christ hath signified to me.

15 And I will endeavour, that you frequently have after my decease, whereby you may keep a memory of these things.

16 ^bFor we have not by following artificial fables, made known to you the power, and presence of our Lord Jesus Christ; but we were eye-witnesses of his greatness.

17 For he received from God the Father honour and glory; this voice coming down to him from the excellent glory: 'This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased; hear ye him.

18 And this voice we heard brought from heaven, when we were with him in the holy mount.

19 And we have the word of prophecy more firm: to which you do well to attend, as to a light shining in a dark place until the day dawn, and the morning star rise in your hearts:

20 ^aUnderstanding this first, that no prophecy of the Scripture is made by private interpretation.

21 For prophecy came not by the will of man at any time; but the holy men of God spoke, inspired by the Holy Ghost.

CHAP. II.

He warns them against false teachers, and foretells their punishment.

BUT there were also false prophets among the people, even as there shall be lying teachers among you, who shall bring in sects of perdition, and deny the Lord who bought them, bringing upon themselves swift destruction.

c Matt. xvii. 5.—d 2 Tim. iii. 16.

as the Protestants translate it from the Greek, is of any private interpretation, i. e. is not to be expounded by any one's private judgment or private spirit. Wi.

VER. 21. For prophecy came not by the will of man at any time. This is to show that they are not to be expounded by any one's private judgment, because every part of the Holy Scriptures are delivered to us by the Divine Spirit of God, wherewith the men were inspired who wrote them; therefore they are not to be interpreted but by the Spirit of God, which he left, and promised to his Church to guide her in all truth to the end of the world. Wi.

CHAP. II. VER. 1. Lying teachers among you, some of which were already come, and many more were to follow, *who shall bring in sects. (heresies,) leading to perdition, and deny the Lord who bought them, denying the Divinity of Jesus Christ, our Redeemer; such were the disciples of Simon, and many after them. Wi.—Sects of perdition; that is, heresies destructive of salvation. Ch.

VER. 2. Many shall follow their luxuries, or lasciviousness, such as are related of the Nicolaites and Gnostics, by reason of whom the way of truth shall be blas-

2 And many shall follow their luxuries, by whom the way of truth shall be blasphemed :

3 And through covetousness with feigned words they shall make merchandise of you : whose judgment now of a long time ceaseth not, and their destruction slumbereth not.

4 ^aFor if God spared not the angels that sinned, but having cast them down into the place of torments, delivered them into the chains of hell to be tormented, to be reserved unto judgment.

5 And spared not the original world, ^bbut preserved Noe, the eighth person, a preacher of justice, bringing in the deluge upon the world of the impious.

6 ^cAnd reducing the cities of the Sodomites, and of the Gomorrhites into ashes, condemned them to destruction ; making them an example to those that should after act wickedly :

7 And delivered Lot, a just man, oppressed by the injustice and lewd conversation of the wicked :

8 For in sight and hearing he was just : dwelling among them, who from day to day vexed the just soul with their impious deeds.

9 The Lord knoweth how to deliver the godly out of temptation ; but to reserve the unjust unto the day of judgment to be tormented :

10 And especially those who walk after the flesh in the lust of uncleanness, and despise governments, audacious, pleasing themselves, they fear not to bring in sects, blaspheming :

11 Whereas angels, though they are greater in strength and power, bear not an execrable judgment against themselves.

12 But these men, as irrational beasts, naturally tending to the snare, and to destruction, blaspheming those things which they know not, shall perish in their corruption.

13 Receiving the reward of injustice, counting pleasure the delights of a day ; stains and blemishes, flowing in delicacies, rioting in their feasts with you,

14 Having eyes full of adultery, and of never ceasing sin : alluring unstable souls, having their heart exercised with covetousness, sons of malediction :

15 Forsaking the right way, they have gone astray. ^dhaving followed the way of Balaam, of Bosor, who loved the wages of iniquity :

16 But had a check of his madness : a dumb beast, subject to the yoke, ^espeaking with man's voice, forbade the folly of the prophet.

17 These are fountains without water, and clouds tossed with whirlwinds, to whom the mist of darkness is reserved.

18 For, speaking swelling words of vanity, they allure in desires of the flesh of riotousness, those who had escaped a little from them who converse in error :

19 Promising them liberty, when they themselves are slaves of corruption : ^ffor by whom a man is overcome, of the same also he is the slave.

20 For if having fled from the pollutions of the world through the knowledge of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, ^gbeing again entangled in them, they are overcome : ^htheir latter state is become unto them worse than the former.

21 For it had been better for them ⁱnot to have known the way of justice, than after they have known it, to turn back from that holy commandment which was delivered to them.

22 For, that of the true proverb hath happened to them : ^kThe dog is returned to his own vomit, and the sow that was washed, to her wallowing in the mire.

phemed, or ill spoken of, by those who made no distinction betwixt true and false Christians. Wi.

VER. 4. If God spared not the angels, &c. S. Peter here brings these examples of God's justice. 1. Towards the rebellious angels that fell from heaven. 2. That of the general flood, or deluge. 3. When he destroyed Sodom and those other cities. First, angels that sinned, casting them down into the place of torments, God, by his justice, delivered them into the chains of hell to be tormented, and to be reserved even for greater torments after the day of judgment. This seems the literal sense of this fourth verse, which is obscure, and has divers readings in the Greek. In the examples of the deluge and of Sodom, S. Peter shows not only the severity of God's judgments upon the wicked, but also his merciful providence towards the small number of the just, as towards Noe, a preacher of justice, the eighth and chief of those who were preserved in the ark, when he spared not the world that was of old, (lit. the original world,) or wicked of those ancient times. When he delivered the just man, Lot, at the time he reduced Sodom and those other cities to ashes : for Lot was just both in sight and hearing, without being corrupted by what he saw and heard ; chaste as to his eyes and ears, or as to all that could be seen or heard of him, when the wicked among whom he lived vexed and grieved his just soul by their impious deeds. God, therefore, who knows and approves the ways of the godly, preserves them by his providence amidst temptations. Wi.

VER. 10. Especially those who walk after the flesh, &c. Such were the Gnostics, and divers of the first heretics, as well as many of them in after ages, who despise governments, condemn the laws, both of church and state ; pleasing themselves, full of self-love, lovers of their own infamous pleasures ; blaspheming against God, his ministers, and against those who serve God. Wi.

VER. 11. Whereas angels, &c. By comparing this place with what we read in S. Jude, (ver. 9,) he speaks of the good angels whom God employed to banish the rebellious angels out of heaven, and on other occasions, who, though they had greater strength and power given them by the Almighty, yet did not bear execrable judgment against themselves ; i. e. one against another, or against those who at first had been happy spirits with them in heaven ; did not insult over them with injuries and reviling reflections, but executed their commands in the name of God, saying, Let the Lord command you. See Jude, ver. 9. Wi.—Bear not an execrable judgment, &c. That is, they use no railing, nor cursing sentence ; not even in their conflicts with the evil angels. Ch ^g John viii. 34 ; Rom. vi. 16, and 20.—^h Heb. vi. 4.—ⁱ Matt. xii. 45.—^k Prov. xxvi. 11.

VER. 13. Counting pleasure the delights of a day. Such is their impiety and their folly, that they have no regard to all the punishments they make themselves liable to, if they can but pass their days in this short life, or even one day, in shameful pleasures and delights. They may be called the stains and blemishes, the shame and disgrace of mankind, on account of the abominations they practise in their rioting and banquettings. See what S. Epiaphan, relates of Gnostics. Wi.—Delights ; that is, the short delights of this world, in which they place all their happiness. Ch.

VER. 15. In this they are like Balaam, of Bosor, (a town of the Madianites,) who coveting the reward promised him, (Judg. xi.) was willing, if God had permitted him, to have cursed the people of Israel : but God put a check to his madness, by making the ass which he rode upon speak with a human voice. Wi.

VER. 20. For if having fled, and been happily freed from the pollutions, the abominations, and corruptions of a wicked world, be upon your guard, and take great care not to be entangled again in these dangerous snares and nets, lest your latter condition (as Christ said, Matt. xii. 45) be worse than the former, lest you be like a dog that returns to his vomit, or like a sow that is washed and wallows again in the mire. Wi.

* V. 1. Sectas introducere, δόξας, as this Greek word sometimes signifies, witness Aristotle, 4, Eth., where he puts as apposite, κατὰ δόξαν, καὶ κατὰ ἀληθεύαν.

† V. 4. Rudentibus inferni detractos in tartarum tradidit cruciandos, in judicium reservari, αἰμαῖς ζόφου (some few copies, ἄδου) ταπράτως, παρῶντες ἐν κρίσιν τερρονηέμενους ; other MSS. τηρονηέμενους. Ταπράτως must signify cast into a place called τάπρασ, derived from ταπάρω, τάρω. The Rhem. Test. hath, with ropes of hell drawn down ; but the sense rather seems to be, delivered into chains, or into prison. Some would have ραπαρώσας to signify, cast down into this region of the air. It is true divers of the ancient Fathers were of opinion that devils are dispersed in the airy region, where they are punished and tormented ; but these same Fathers do not deny, that there is in the inferior parts of the earth a place of torments for the devils and damned souls, into which (called also the abyss) the devils begged not to be sent and confined there. Luke viii. 31. This is the place called hell, tartarus, &c.

‡ V. 13. In conviviis, ἀγάραις, which reading Dr. Wells prefers before ἀπάραις, the common reading : in the Pro^a translation, with their own deceivings.

CHAP. III.

Against scoffers, denying the second coming of Christ, he declares the sudden dissolution of this world; and exhorts to holiness of life.

BEHOOLD this is the second epistle I write to you, my dearly beloved, in which I stir up by admonition your sincere mind:

2 That you may be mindful of those words which I told you before from the holy prophets, and of your apostles, of the precepts of the Lord and Saviour.

3 Knowing this first, ^athat in the last days there shall come scoffers with deceit, walking according to their own lusts,

4 Saying: ^bWhere is his promise, or his coming? For, since the fathers slept, all things continue so from the beginning of the creation.

5 For this they are wilfully ignorant of, that the heavens were before, and the earth, out of water and through water, consisting by the word of God:

6 Whereby the world that then was, being overflowed with water, perished.

7 But the heavens which now are, and the earth, by the same word are kept in store, reserved unto fire against the day of judgment, and perdition of wicked men.

8 But be not ignorant, my beloved, of this one thing, that one day with the Lord is as a thousand years, and a thousand years as one day.

9 The Lord delayeth not his promise, as some imagine: but beareth patiently for your sake, not willing that any should perish, but that all should return to penance.

^a 1 Tim. iv. 1; 2 Tim. iii. 1; Jude i. 18.—^b Ezech. xii. 27.—^c 1 Thess. v. 2;

CHAP. III. VER. 3. Scoffers * with deceit, (such as make a jest of all revealed religion,) walking according to their own lusts, as if they might indulge themselves in every thing which their inclinations prompt them to, saying: Where is his promise, or his coming? They have no belief nor regard to what has been revealed concerning the coming of Christ to judge every one, to reward the good, and punish the wicked. Wi.

VER. 10. The heavens, &c. He puts the faithful in mind not to regard these profane scoffers, but to be convinced of the truths revealed, and that the world shall be destroyed a second time by fire. Reflect that the time of this life, and all the time that this world shall last, is nothing to eternity, which has no parts, no beginning, nor end; so that in the sight of God, who is eternal, a thousand years are no more to be regarded than one day, or one moment. The long time that hath hitherto passed, must not make you think that God is slack as to his promises, or that they shall not infallibly come to pass at the time and moment appointed by his Divine Providence. God's infinite mercy, and his love for mankind, bears patiently with the provocations of blind and unthinking sinners, not willing that any of them should perish, but that they should return to him by a sincere repentance and true penance, and be saved. But watch always, according to the repeated admonition of our blessed Redeemer. Mark xiii. 37, &c. For both the day of your death, and the day of the Lord to judge the world, will come like a thief, &c. Wi.

VER. 11. Seeing then that all these things are to be dissolved, that the world, and all things in the world, shall pass in a short time, set not your affections upon them: let your life and conversation be holy. According to the Divine promises, 10 ^c But the day of the Lord shall come as a thief, in which the heavens shall pass away with great violence, and the elements shall be dissolved with heat, and the earth, and the works that are in it, shall be burnt up.

11 Seeing then that all these things are to be dissolved, what manner of people ought you to be in holy conversation and godliness, 12 Waiting for, and hastening unto the coming of the day of the Lord, by which the heavens being on fire shall be dissolved, and the elements shall melt with the burning heat of fire?

13 ^d But we look for new heavens and a new earth according to his promise, in which justice dwelleth.

14 Wherefore, dearly beloved, waiting for these things, be diligent, that you may be found before him unspotted and blameless in peace,

15 ^e And account the long-bearing of our Lord, salvation: as also our most dear brother, Paul, according to the wisdom given to him, hath written to you,

16 As also in all his epistles, speaking in them of these things: in which are some things hard to be understood, which the unlearned and unstable wrest, as also the other Scriptures, to their own perdition.

17 You therefore, brethren, knowing these things before, beware; lest, being led away by the error of the unwise, you fall from your own steadfastness.

18 But increase in grace, and in the knowledge of our Lord and Saviour, Jesus Christ. To him be glory both now and unto the day of eternity. Amen.

Apoc. iii. 3, and xvi. 15.—^d Isa. lxv. 17, and lxvi. 22; Apoc. xxi. 1.—^e Rom. ii. 4.

look for new heavens, and a new earth, where justice is to dwell, whither sinners shall not enter, but the just only, in a new state of never-ending happiness. Wi.

VER. 15, 16. As also our most dear brother, Paul, . . . hath written to you. He seems to mean in his Epistle to the Hebrews or converted Jews, (chap. x. 37,) where he says, yet a little while, . . . and he that is to come, will come, and will not delay.—In which are some things hard to be understood, especially by unlearned, ignorant people, unstable, inconstant, not well grounded in faith, and which they wrest, as they do also the other Scriptures, by their private interpretations, to their own perdition. Wi.

VER. 17. Being forewarned, therefore, and knowing these things before, take heed not to be led away by the errors of such false and unwise teachers, whatever knowledge they boast of, as did the Gnostics. But make it your serious endeavour to increase in grace by God's assistance, in the true knowledge of our Lord God and Saviour, Jesus Christ, to whom, as being one God with his eternal Father and the Holy Ghost, be glory now, and for all eternity. Amen. Wi.

* V. 3. In deceptione illusores; the true reading in the Greek is, as Dr. Wells has restored it, ἐν ἐμπαιγμονῇ ἐμπαῖκται, illusiones illudentes.

† V. 16. Depravant, στρεβλοῦσιν, detorquent. It is a speech, says Mr. Legh, on στρεβλῶν, borrowed from torturers, when they put an innocent man on the rack, and make him speak what he never thought. They deal, says he, with the Scriptures as chemists sometimes deal with natural bodies, torturing them to extract out of them what God and nature never put in them.

FIRST EPISTLE OF S. JOHN,

THE APOSTLE

This Epistle was always acknowledged for canonical, and written by S. John, the apostle and evangelist. At what time, and from what place, is uncertain. It is sometimes called the Epistle to the Parthians, or Persians. The chief design is to set forth the mystery of Christ's incarnation against Cerinthus, who denied Christ's Divinity, and against Basilides, who denied that Christ had a true body; with zealous exhortations to love God and our neighbour. Wi.—The same vein of Divine love and charity towards our neighbour which runs throughout the Gospel, written by the beloved disciple and evangelist, S. John, is found also in his Epistles. He confirms the two principal mysteries of our faith: the mystery of the Trinity, and the mystery of the incarnation of Jesus Christ, the Son of God. The sublimity and excellence of the evangelical doctrine he declares: "And this commandment we have from God, that he who loveth God love also his brother" (chap. iv. 21); and again, "For this is the charity of God, that we keep his commandments; and his commandments are not heavy." chap. v. 3. He shows how to distinguish the children of God from those of the devil; marks out those who should be called antichrists; describes the turpitude and gravity of sin. Finally, he shows how the sinner may hope for pardon. It was written, according to Baronius's account, sixty-six years after our Lord's ascension. Ch.

CHAPTER I.

He declares what he has seen and heard of Christ, (who is the life eternal,) to the end that we may have fellowship with God, and all good through him: yet so if we confess our sins.

THAT which was from the beginning, which we have heard, which we have seen with our eyes, which we have diligently looked upon, and our hands have handled, concerning the word of life:

2 For the life was manifested: and we have seen, and do bear witness, and declare unto you the eternal life, which was with the Father, and hath appeared to us:

3 That which we have seen and have heard, we declare unto you, that you also may have fellowship with us, and our fellowship may be with the Father, and with his Son, Jesus Christ.

4 And these things we write to you, that you may rejoice, and your joy may be full.

5 And this is the declaration which we have heard from him, and declare unto you: "That God is light, and that in him there is no darkness.

6 If we say that we have fellowship with him, and walk in darkness, we lie, and do not the truth.

* John viii. 12.—† Heb. ix. 14; 1 Pet. i. 19; Apoc. i. 5.

CHAP. I. VER. 1. The first two verses and part of the third have a great conformity with the beginning of S. John's Gospel. The whole may be expressed in this literal paraphrase: We declare and preach to you the eternal and always living word, which was from the beginning, (for this word which was with the Father from eternity, hath appeared,† and manifested himself to us, when he took upon him our human nature, and was made flesh). This word I say, incarnate, we have seen with our eyes, we have heard him preach his gospel, we have touched his true body with our hands, as we witness and declare to you, that you may have fellowship with us, and be made partakers of the graces which God came from heaven to bestow upon mankind, to make us his adoptive sons and heirs of heaven. Wi.

VER. 5. God is light,† &c.

VER. 8. Not that we say or pretend we have no sin;‡ thus truth would not be in us, and we should even make God a liar, who has declared all mankind guilty of sin. We can only except from this number our Saviour Christ, who, even as man, never sinned, and his blessed Virgin Mother, by a special privilege, preserved from all kind of sin: and of whom S. Aug.¶ says, "that for the honour of our Lord, when we speak of the holy Virgin Mary, he will have no mention at all made of any sin." Wi.

* V. 1. Quod fuit ab initio; in Greek, quod erat, ὃ ἦν ἀπ' ἀρχῆς. This answers to, in principio erat verbum.

† Ibid. Et vita manifestata est. This corresponds to in ipso vita erat, and apparuit nobis Verbum caro factum est. And it was true to say that they had seen the eternal word, not as God, but under the veil of human nature.

‡ V. 5. Deus lux est; (John i.) erat lux vera.

§ V. 8. Quoniam peccatum non habemus, &c. By which are confuted the errors of the Pelagian heretics, who denied original sin, and pretended that men by their natural strength could and did live free from all sins.

7 But if we walk in the light, as he also is in the light, we have fellowship one towards another; and the blood of Jesus Christ, his Son, cleanseth us from all sin.

8 If we say that we have no sin: we deceive ourselves, and the truth is not in us.

9 If we confess our sins: he is faithful and just, to forgive us our sins, and to cleanse us from all iniquity.

10 If we say that we have not sinned: we make him a liar, and his word is not in us.

CHAP. II.

Christ is our advocate: we must keep his commandments, and love one another. We must not love the world, nor give ear to new teachers, but abide by the Spirit of God in the Church.

MY little children, these things I write to you, that you may not sin. But if any man sin, we have an advocate with the Father, Jesus Christ the Just:

2 And he is the propitiation for our sins: and not for ours only, but also for those of the whole world.

3 And in this we do know that we have known him, if we keep his commandments.

4 He that saith he knoweth him, and keepeth not his commandments, is a liar, and the truth is not in him.

* 3 Kings viii. 46; 2 Par. vi. 36; Prov. xx. 9; Eccl. vii. 21.

CHAP. II. VER. 1. That you may not sin, or not lose the grace of God by any considerable sin.—But if any man sin, we have an advocate with the Father, Jesus Christ, the eternal Son of the Father, who being made man to redeem us from sin, is our great Advocate, our chief Mediator, and only Redeemer, by whose merits and grace we have been reconciled, after we had lost and forfeited the grace and favour of God by our offences. S. Aug.* in his commentary on this Epistle, on these very words, we have an advocate, &c., prevents and answers this very objection of the late pretended reformers (tom. 3, part 2, p. 831, nov. edit.): "Some one will say, therefore the saints do not ask for us, therefore the bishops and governors of the Church do not ask for the people." He denies that this follows, the saints being advocates in a different sense. Though God be our protector and defender from dangers, this does not hinder us from owing the angels to be our defenders in an inferior manner under God, as the Church of England acknowledges in the Common Prayer Book on the feast of S. Michael and all Angels, which runs thus: "mercifully grant, that as thy holy angels always do thee service in heaven, so by thy appointment they may succour and defend us on earth, through Jesus Christ, our Lord. Amen." Wi.

VER. 3. We have known him, if we keep his commandments. He speaks of that practical knowledge by love and affection, which can only be proved by our keeping his commandments; and without which we cannot be said to know God, as we should do. Ch.

VER. 4. He that saith he knoweth him, &c. To know, in this and many other places, is not taken for a speculative knowledge only, but is joined with a love of God, and an earnest desire of serving him and keeping his commandments. Wi.

VER. 5. The charity of God is truly perfect in him. Notwithstanding his lesser failings, he retains the habit of charity and grace, by which he remains united 5 But whosoever keepeth his word, the charity of God is truly perfect in him : and by this we know that we are in him.

6 He that saith he abideth in him, ought himself also to walk even as he walked.

7 My dearest, I write not a new commandment to you, but an old commandment, which you had from the beginning : The old commandment is the word which you have heard.

8 *Again, a new commandment I write to you, which thing is true both in him, and in you : because the darkness is past, and the true light now shineth.

9 He that saith he is in the light, and hateth his brother, is in darkness even until now.

10 *He that loveth his brother, abideth in the light, and there is no scandal in him.

11 But he that hateth his brother, is in darkness, and walketh in darkness, and knoweth not whither he goeth : because the darkness hath blinded his eyes.

12 I write to you, little children, because your sins are forgiven you for his name's sake.

13 I write to you, fathers, because you have known him, who is from the beginning. I write to you, young men, because you have overcome the wicked one.

14 I write to you, infants, because you have known the Father. I write to you, young men, because you are strong, and the word of God abideth in you, and you have overcome the wicked one.

15 Love not the world, nor those things which are in the world. If any man love the world, the charity of the Father is not in him :

16 For all that is in the world, is the concupiscence of the flesh, and the concupiscence of the eyes, and the pride of life : which is not of the Father, but is of the world.

17 And the world passeth away, and the concupiscence thereof. But he that doth the will of God, abideth for ever. -

18 Little children, it is the last hour : and as you have in God.—And by this we know that we are in him ; i. e. we are morally, though not absolutely, certain that we are in a state of grace. Wi.

* John xiii. 34, and xv. 12.

VER. 7, 8. An old commandment . . . and again, a new commandment. He means the commandment of charity, or of the love of God and the love of our neighbour. This he calls both an old and a new precept. It may be called old, not only as being a precept of the law of nature, and always obligatory, but because S. John and the apostles had delivered it to them long ago, i. e. when these persons were first converted. It may also be called a new precept, S. John recommending it anew to them in this Epistle, and declaring it to be enjoined in a particular manner by our Saviour Christ, after it had been misconstrued and neglected, especially as it regards our neighbour, that is, every one without exception ; so that if any one hate another, it is in vain that he pretends to walk in the light of the gospel. Wi.—A new commandment ; viz. the commandment of love, which was given in the old law, but was renewed and extended by Christ. See John xiii. 33. Ch.

VER. 16, 17. All that is in the world, is the concupiscence of the flesh, under which is comprehended all that pleaseth the senses ; or the concupiscence of the eyes ; i. e. a longing after such things which enter by the eyes, as of riches in gold and silver, in apparel, in houses and palaces, train and equipage, &c., curiosity as to vain arts and sciences ; or, the pride of life, as to honours, dignities, and preferments. But the world passeth away, and all these things that belong to it.—He that doth the will of God, abideth for ever, with God in heaven. Wi.

VER. 18 It is the last hour. That is, according to the common interpretation, the last age of the world, from the coming of Christ to the day of judgment, and the end of the world, which S. Paul calls the end and consummation of ages. Heb. ix. 26.—And as you have heard that antichrist (the great antichrist) cometh, or is to come in this last age : now there are already many antichrists ; i. e. as the word signifies, many adversaries to Christ, who are forerunners of the great and last antichrist. Wi.—Many antichrists ; that is, many heretics, enemies of Christ and his Church, and forerunners of the great antichrist. Ch.

heard that antichrist cometh : even now there are many antichrists : whereby we know that it is the last hour.

19 They went out from us, but they were not of us. For if they had been of us, they would no doubt have continued with us : but that they might be made manifest, that they are not all of us.

20 But you have an unction from the Holy One, and you know all things.

21 I have not written to you as to such as know not the truth, but as to such as know it : and that no lie is from the truth.

22 Who is a liar, but he who denieth that Jesus is the Christ ? He is antichrist, who denieth the Father, and the Son.

23 Whosoever denieth the Son, neither hath he the Father. He that confesseth the Son, hath the Father also.

24 Let that which you have heard from the beginning, abide in you : If what you have heard from the beginning shall abide in you, you also shall abide in the Son, and in the Father.

25 And this is the promise which he hath promised to us, eternal life.

26 These things have I written to you concerning them that seduce you.

27 And the unction, which you have received from him, let it abide in you. And you have no need that any one should teach you : but as his unction teacheth you concerning all things, and it is truth ; and is not a lie. And as it hath taught you : abide in him.

28 And now, little children, abide in him : that when he shall appear, we may have confidence, and not be confounded by him at his coming.

29 If you know that he is just, know also that every one who doeth justice is born of him.

CHAP. III.

Of the love of God to us : how we may distinguish the children of God, and those of the devil. Of loving one another, and of purity of conscience.

b Infra, iii. 14.

VER. 19. They were not of us. Such were Simon Magnus, Cerinthus, Ebion, Nicolas of Antioch, &c.—They, &c. That is, they were not solid, steadfast, genuine Christians, otherwise they would have remained in the Church. Ch.

VER. 20. You have an unction from the Holy One. That is, grace and wisdom from the Holy Ghost. Ch.—And you know all things, as to what you ought to believe and practise, and therefore I have not written to you as to ignorant persons. Wi.—The true children of God's Church, remaining in unity, under the guidance of their lawful pastors, partake of the grace of the Holy Ghost, promised to the Church and her pastors ; and have in the Church all necessary knowledge and instruction, so as to have no need to seek it elsewhere, since it can be only found in that society of which they are members. Ch.

VER. 22, 23. He who denieth that Jesus is the Christ ? He is antichrist : is in a special manner an adversary to Christ and the Christian religion, when he denies Jesus to be the Messiah, or to have been from eternity the true Son of God.—He who denieth him to be the Son, neither hath he the Father. He who denies either of these truths denieth both. He who denies the Son of God to be the eternal Son, denies the Father to be the eternal Father. Wi.

VER. 27. You have no need, &c. You want not to be taught by any of these men, who, under pretence of imparting more knowledge to you, seek to seduce you, (ver. 26,) since you are sufficiently taught already, and have all knowledge and grace in the Church, with the unction of the Holy Ghost, which these new teachers have no share in. Ch.

* V. 1. Sed dicet aliquis, says S. Aug. on this place, ergo sancti non petunt pro nobis. Ergo episcopi et præpositi non petunt pro populo, sed attendite scripturas, &c.

† V. 5. Perfecta est, τελειωται. This must only be understood of charity as perfected as to be true charity, but not a perfect degree of charity.

BEHOLD what manner of charity the Father hath bestowed upon us, that we should be named, and should be the sons of God. Therefore the world hath not known us: because it hath not known him.

2 Dearly beloved, we are now the sons of God: and it hath not yet appeared what we shall be. We know, that when he shall appear, we shall be like to him: because we shall see him as he is.

3 And every man that hath this hope in him, sanctifieth himself, as he also is holy.

4 Whosoever committeth sin, committeth also iniquity: and sin is iniquity.

5 And you know that he appeared to take away our sins: * and in him there is no sin.

6 Whosoever abideth in him, sinneth not: and whosoever sinneth, hath not seen him, nor known him.

7 Little children, let no one deceive you. He that doth justice, is just: as he also is just.

8 * He that committeth sin is of the devil: for the devil sinneth from the beginning. For this purpose the Son of God appeared, that he might destroy the works of the devil.

9 Every one that is born of God, doth not commit sin: for his seed remaineth in him, and he cannot sin, because he is born of God.

10 In this the children of God are manifest, and the children of the devil. Whosoever is not just, is not of God, nor is he that loveth not his brother:

11 For this is the declaration, which you have heard from the beginning, * that you should love one another.

12 Not * as Cain, who was the wicked one, and killed his brother. And for what cause did he kill him? Because his own works were evil: and his brother's just.

13 Wonder not, brethren, if the world hate you.

14 We know that we have passed from death to life, because we love the brethren. * He that loveth not abideth in death:

* Isa. liii. 9; 1 Pet. ii. 22.—b John viii. 44.—c John xiii. 34, and xv. 12.—d Gen. iv. 8.

hath bestowed upon us. S. John had said, in the last verse of the foregoing chapter, that every one who doeth justice, is born of him; i. e. is the Son of God by adoption. But the world hath not known us, nor esteemed and valued us as such: and no wonder, because they have not known, nor acknowledged, nor revered God as they ought. We indeed are the sons of God; we believe it, because God has assured us of it; but it hath not yet appeared what we shall be, (ver. 2,) to what glory or happiness we shall thereby be exalted hereafter, for neither the eye hath seen, nor the ear hath heard, nor hath it entered into the heart of man, what things God hath prepared for those who love him. 1 Cor. ix. 2. Wi.

VER. 4. Committeth also iniquity. * By the Greek text, iniquity is here taken for a transgression or prevarication of the law, which makes the sense clearer. Wi.—Iniquity (ἀνομία); transgression of the law. Ch.

VER. 6. Whosoever abideth in him, complying with his law, sinneth not: and whosoever sinneth, hath not seen him, nor known him; that is, with such knowledge as is joined with love. Wi.—Sinneth not; viz. mortally. See chap. i. 8. Ch.

VER. 9. Doth not commit sin. That is, as long as he keepeth in himself this seed of grace, and this Divine generation, by which he is born of God. But then he may fall from this happy state by the abuse of his free-will, as appears from Rom. xi. 20—22; 1 Cor. ix. 27, and x. 12; Phil. ii. 12; Apoc. iii. 11. Ch.—He cannot sin, because he is born of God. The meaning of this can be no more than that he cannot sin as long as the seed of grace remaineth in him, and as long as he is the adoptive son of God. But it is evident he may fall from this happy condition, and from the grace of God, otherwise S. John would not have so often in this Epistle exhorted them not to sin. Wi.

VER. 16. The charity of God,† because he hath laid down his life for us. Jesus Christ, therefore, who laid down his life for us, was God. It is true at present the words of God are wanting in most Greek MSS.: yet the Prot. translation has them. Wi.

VER. 24. We know that he abideth in us, from the Spirit which he hath given 316

15 Whosoever hateth his brother, is a murderer. And you know that no murderer hath eternal life abiding in himself.

16 * In this we have known the charity of God, because he hath laid down his life for us: and we ought to lay down our lives for the brethren.

17 * He that hath the substance of this world, and shall see his brother in need, and shall shut up his bowels from him: how doth the charity of God abide in him?

18 My little children, let us not love in word, nor in tongue, but in deed, and in truth.

19 In this we know that we are of the truth: and in his sight we shall persuade our hearts.

20 For if our heart reprehend us, God is greater than our heart, and knoweth all things.

21 Dearly beloved, if our heart do not reprehend us, we have confidence towards God:

22 * And whatsoever we shall ask, we shall receive of him: because we keep his commandments, and do those things that are pleasing in his sight.

23 † And this is his commandment: that we should believe in the name of his Son, Jesus Christ: and love one another, as he hath given commandment unto us.

24 * And he that keepeth his commandments, abideth in him, and he in him: and in this we know that he abideth in us, from the Spirit which he hath given us.

CHAP. IV.

What spirits are of God, and what not. We must love one another, because God has loved us.

DEARLY beloved, believe not every spirit, but try the spirits whether they be of God: because many false prophets are gone out into the world.

2 By this is the spirit of God known: every spirit which confesseth Jesus Christ to have come in the flesh, is of God:

3 And every spirit, that dissolveth Jesus, is not of God, and this is antichrist, of whom you have heard that he cometh, and he is now already in the world.

us. These words may be either referred to the body of the Church in general or to the apostles, or to every particular. It is certain that God gave his Spirit to his Church and to the apostles, by the coming of the Holy Ghost in a visible manner, and by the miraculous gifts bestowed upon the apostles; but every particular has only a moral certainty that he has the Spirit of God, and his sanctifying grace in his soul. Wi.

* V. 4. Et peccatum est iniquitas, kai ἡ ἀμαρτία ἐστὶν ἡ ἀνομία, transgressio.
† V. 16. Charitatem Dei, τοῦ Θεοῦ: scarce in any MSS., nor read by S. Aug. in his commentary on this verse.

CHAP. IV. VER. 1. Try the spirits; i. e. every doctrine that you hear: for now are many false teachers, false doctors, and false prophets. Wi.—Try, &c. viz. by examining whether their teaching be agreeable to the rule of the Catholic faith and the doctrine of the Church. For, as he says, (ver. 6,) "He that knoweth God, heareth us (the pastors of the Church): . . . by this we know the spirit of truth, and the spirit of error." Ch.—The Church only, not every private man, hath to prove and discern spirits.

VER. 2. By this is the spirit of God known. He gives the new converts first this general mark, by which they might have good grounds to think that the teachers they met with in those days had a good spirit, and were of God, if they confessed and acknowledged Jesus Christ to have come from heaven, and to have been made flesh, or made man; i. e. to be truly God and truly man. But if (ver. 3) they met with teachers of such a spirit as dissolveth Jesus,* by denying him either to be the Messiah or to be truly God, or to be a true man, they might conclude for certain that such men had not a true spirit, but were heretics, antichrists, and fore-runners of the great antichrist. Wi.—Every spirit which confesseth, &c. Not that the confession of this point of faith alone is at all times and in all cases sufficient; but that with relation to that time, and for that part of the Christian doc-

4 You are of God, little children, and have overcome him, because greater is he that is in you, than he that is in the world.

5 They are of the world : therefore of the world they speak, and the world heareth them.

6 We are of God. He that knoweth God, heareth us : He that is not of God, heareth us not : by this we know the Spirit of truth, and the spirit of error.

7 Dearly beloved, let us love one another : for charity is of God. And every one, that loveth, is born of God, and knoweth God.

8 He that loveth not, knoweth not God : for God is charity.

9 By this hath appeared the charity of God in us, because God hath sent his only begotten Son into the world, that we might live through him.

10 In this is charity : not as if we have loved God, but because he first loved us, and sent his Son a propitiation for our sins.

11 My dearest, if God hath so loved us, we ought also to love one another.

12 No man hath seen God at any time. If we love one another, God abideth in us, and his charity is perfected in us.

13 By this we know that we abide in him, and he in us : because he hath given us of his Spirit :

14 And we have seen, and do testify, that the Father hath sent his Son, the Saviour of the world.

15 Whosoever shall confess that Jesus is the Son of God, God abideth in him, and he in God.

16 And we have known, and have believed the charity, trine, which was then particularly to be confessed, taught, and maintained against the heretics of those days, this was the most proper token by which the true teachers might be distinguished from the false. Ch.

VER. 3. That dissolveth Jesus, viz. either by denying his humanity or his Divinity. Ch.—This is antichrist ; † i. e. such is the spirit of antichrist, of whom you have heard that he cometh, or is to come in the latter times. Wi.—And he is now already in the world. Not in his person, but in his spirit, and in his precursors. Ch.

VER. 4. You . . . little children, born anew in Christ by baptism, have overcome him, (i. e. every such antichrist,) not by your own strength, but by the grace of Christ, because greater is he that is in you than he that is in the world ; i. e. the Spirit of God in you is above all your enemies. Wi.

VER. 6. We (Christians) are of God, have received the Spirit ; we, the apostles of Christ, were lawfully sent by him.—He that knoweth God, heareth us, &c. That is, they who love and serve God, and comply with the doctrine of his Son, Jesus Christ, hear and follow the doctrine which we were commissioned by him to teach.—He that is not of God, heareth us not. They are not of God, who refuse to hear and obey the voice of the Church and those whom Christ appointed to govern his Church, as hath been observed elsewhere. Wi.

VER. 7. Let us love one another. This is the repeated admonition of S. John, the evangelist, both in this Epistle and to the end of his life, as S. Jerom relates in his Epist. ad Galat., (cap. 6, tom. 4, part 1, p. 414.) that the apostle being very old, and when carried to Church meetings of the Christians, being desired to give them some exhortation, he scarce said any thing but, “love one another ;” and it being tedious to his disciples to hear always the same thing, desired some other instruction, to whom (says S. Jerom) he gave this answer, worthy of S. John, that this was the precept of our Lord, and that if complied with, it was sufficient. Wi.

VER. 17. The charity of God (which may either signify the love by which we love God, or by which God loves us) perfected with us, or in us, and so possesseth our souls, as to give us an humble confidence of our salvation, when we shall appear before his tribunal at the day of judgment : because as he is, we also are in this world. These words are differently expounded. They may signify, that as God is always loving us, and giving us marks and effects of his love, so we in this world by his grace are always loving him and our neighbour, and increasing in this love, which gives us a confidence of our salvation. Or they may bear this sense, that as Jesus Christ was suffering in this world for us, so we are suffering for his sake. Wi.

VER. 18. Fear is not in charity, &c. Perfect charity, or love, banisheth human fear, that is, the fear of men ; as also all perplexing fear, which makes men mistrust or despair of God's mercy ; and that kind of servile fear, which makes which God hath to us. God is charity : and he that abideth in charity, abideth in God, and God in him.

17 In this is the charity of God perfected with us, that we may have confidence in the day of judgment : because as he is, we also are in this world.

18 Fear is not in charity : but perfect charity casteth out fear ; because fear hath pain : and he that feareth is not perfect in charity.

19 Let us, therefore, love God, because God first hath loved us.

20 If any man say, I love God, and hateth his brother, he is a liar. For he that loveth not his brother whom he seeth, how can he love God, whom he seeth not ?

21 And this commandment we have from God, that he who loveth God, love also his brother.

CHAP. V.

Of them that are born of God, and of true charity. Faith overcomes the world. Three that bear witness to Christ. Of faith in his name, and of sin that is, and is not to death.

WHOSOEVER believeth that Jesus is the Christ, is born of God. And every one that loveth him that begot, loveth him also who was born of him.

2 In this we know that we love the children of God, when we love God and keep his commandments.

3 For this is the charity of God that we keep his commandments : and his commandments are not heavy.

4 For whatsoever is born of God, overcometh the world : and this is the victory which overcometh the world, our faith.

5 Who is he that overcometh the world, but he that believeth that Jesus is the Son of God ?

them fear the punishment of sin more than the offence offered to God. But it no way excludes the wholesome fear of God's judgments, so often recommended in holy writ, nor that fear and trembling with which we are told to work out our salvation. Phil. ii. 12. Ch.

VER. 20. He that loveth not his brother, whom he seeth, how can he love God, whom he seeth not ? By this is signified, that it is more easy and natural to love the things that we see, and that enter by the senses. Pretend not then to love the invisible God, whose perfections are hidden from you in this life, unless you love your brother whom you see. But he adds another reason to prove that no man can love God unless he love his brother ; because, saith he, (ver. 21,) this is God's express command, that he who loveth God love also his brother : so that a man cannot love God unless he also love his neighbour. Wi.

* V. 2. Qui solvet Jesum. Καταλύει is read in some MSS., and must have been the reading which the Latin interpreter followed. We read the same in S. Iren. l. 3, c. 18, p. 197, ed. Feuardentii ; in Tertul. l. 5, cont. Marcion, c. 16, p. 481, ed. Rigaltii ; in S. Aug., in his Commentary on these words, trac. 6, p. 871.

† V. 3. Et hic est antichristus, qui tollit (πνῆμα) τὸ τοῦ ἀντιχρίστου. By the Greek, hic cannot agree with the man, and so the construction in Latin must be, hic est ille spiritus antichristi.

CHAP. V. VER. 1. That Jesus is the Christ, the promised Messiah, the Redeemer of the world, is born of God, is made his adoptive son by his grace in baptism. Wi.—Is born of God ; that is, is justified, and become a child of God by baptism ; which is also to be understood, provided the belief of this fundamental article of the Christian faith be accompanied with all the other conditions, which, by the word of God and his appointment, are also required to justification ; such as a general belief of all that God has revealed and promised ; hope, love, repentance, and a sincere disposition to keep God's holy law and commandments. Ch.—Loveth him that begot* ; i. e. the eternal Father.—Loveth him also who was born of him ; i. e. loveth him who is his only begotten and eternal Son. Wi.

VER. 3. And his commandments are not heavy. How different is this doctrine from that of those late heretics, who pretend that God's commandments are impossible, even to just men, when they employ all their endeavours. See the first proposition of Jansenius, and this heresy of Calvin condemned by the Council of Trent, Sess. 6, cap. 11. can. 18. Wi.

VER. 4. This is the victory which overcometh the world, our faith. That is, a lively faith, working by charity, makes a man victorious over the greatest temptations, and over all the adversaries of his salvation. Wi.—Our faith : not a bare speculative or dead faith, but a faith working by charity. Gal. v. 6. Ch.

6 This is he that came by water and blood, Jesus Christ; not in water only, but in water and blood. And it is the spirit that testifieth, that Christ is the truth.

7 For there are three that give testimony in heaven: the Father, the Word, and the Holy Ghost: and these three are one.

8 And there are three that give testimony on earth: the spirit, the water, and the blood: and these three are one.

9 If we receive the testimony of men, the testimony of God is greater: for this is the testimony of God, which is greater, because he hath testified of his Son.

10 He that believeth in the Son of God, hath the testimony of God in himself. He that believeth not the Son, maketh him a liar: because he believeth not in the testimony which God hath testified of his Son.

11 And this is the testimony, that God hath given to us eternal life: and this life is in his Son.

12 He that hath the Son, hath life: he that hath not the Son, hath not life.

13 These things I write to you, that you may know that you have eternal life; who believe in the name of the Son of God.

a John iii. 36.

VER. 6. Came by water and blood. The sense seems to be, by water, with which he ordered every one to be baptized and made Christians; 2ndly, by his blood shed on the cross for our redemption. Wi.—Blood: not only to wash away our sins by the water of baptism, but by his own blood. Ch.—And it is the Spirit that testifieth that Christ is the truth. By the Spirit, which is not here called the Holy Spirit, or the Holy Ghost, as in the next verse, is either meant the spirit or soul of Christ, which dying he recommended into the hands of his Father, and which showed that he was truly man, against Cerinthus, and some heretics of those times; or else it may signify the spirit of grace, given in this world to the faithful, in the same sense as S. Paul says, (Rom. viii. 16,) that the Spirit himself giveth testimony to our spirit, that we are the sons of God: and of which may be understood what is said here, (ver. 10.) He that believeth in the Son of God, hath the testimony of God in himself. Wi.

VER. 7. There are three that give testimony in heaven: the Father, the Word, and the Holy Ghost: and these three are one: i. e. one in nature, in substance, and in all perfections, in the same sense as when Christ himself said, (John x. 30,) I and the Father are one, or one thing. The Socinians object that this verse is wanting in many Greek manuscripts; and even Erasmus in one edition, and Mr. Simon in his Critics, have questioned it, or rejected it, as a false reading, but without any sufficient proofs or grounds, as hath been shown by many learned Catholics, and also by Protestant writers, who receive in their translations this verse as canonical. It is easy to account for the omission of this verse; for as both the seventh and eighth verse begin and end with the same words this gave occasion to the oversight and omission of the transcribers, whereas it is not credible that such a whole verse could be added. And that it was only by the mistake and oversight of transcribers may further appear, because we find part of the seventh verse, to wit, and these three are one, cited by Tertul. l. cont. Praxeam, c. 23, p. 515, ed. Rig., and twice by Cyprian, Epist. 73. ad Jubaianum, p. 125, ed. Rig., in the Oxford edition, p. 310, and in his Treatise de Unit. Ecclesiae, p. 181, ed. Rigal., and in the Oxford edition, p. 79, where also Dr. Fell defends this verse of S. John to be genuine. Tertul. and Cyp. wrote long before the dispute with the Arians. The Socinians also object that this passage is not brought by S. Athanasius and some other Fathers against the Arians, which they could scarce have omitted had they read this verse, but this only proves that this omission had happened in some MSS. in their time, or, as some conjecture, that the Arians had corrupted some copies. S. Fulgentius made use of it against the Arians, and also others about that time. See the Benedictines of S. Maur against Mr. Simon, in the first tome of S. Jerom, p. 1670. Both Catholics and Protestants, after a diligent examination, have received this verse, which is found in the best MSS. See Greek Test. at Amsterdam, an. 1711. Wi.

VER. 8. And there are three that give testimony on earth: the spirit, the water, and the blood; and these three are one. This is a repetition of what was before said, ver. 6, to be expounded in the same manner. But when it is added, these three are one, the sense is, that they witness one and the same truth. Wi.—As the Father, the Word, and the Holy Ghost, all bear witness to Christ's Divinity; so the spirit, which he yielded up, crying out with a loud voice upon the cross, and the water and blood that issued from his side, bear witness to his humanity, and are one; that is, all agree in one testimony. Ch.

VER. 10. He that believeth not the Son, maketh him (God) a liar, by refusing to believe the testimonies given by the three Divine Persons, that Jesus was the Messiah and the true Son of God, by whom eternal life is obtained and promised to all that comply with his doctrine. Wi.

14 And this is the confidence which we have in him, that whatsoever we shall ask, according to his will, he heareth us.

15 And we know that he heareth us whatsoever we ask: we know that we have the petitions which we request of him.

16 He that knoweth his brother to sin a sin which is not unto death, let him ask, and life shall be given to him, that sinneth not to death. There is a sin unto death; I do not say that any one should ask for it.

17 All iniquity is sin: and there is a sin unto death.

18 We know that every one, who is born of God, sinneth not: but the generation of God preserveth him, and the wicked one toucheth him not.

19 We know that we are of God: and the whole world is seated in wickedness.

20 And we know that the Son of God is come, and hath given us understanding, that we may know the true God, and may be in his true Son. This is the true God, and eternal life.

21 Little children, keep yourselves from idols. Amen.

b Luke xxiv. 45.

VER. 16. A sin which is not unto death . . . and life shall be given to him. By a sin which is unto death, interpreters commonly understand a wilful apostacy from the faith, and from the known truth, when a sinner, hardened by his own ingratitude, becomes deaf to all admonitions, will do nothing for himself, but runs on to a final impenitence. Nor yet does S. John say that such a sin is never remitted, or cannot be remitted, but only has these words, I do not say that any one should ask for the remission of that sin; that is, though we must pray for all sinners whatsoever, yet man cannot pray for such sinners with such a confidence of obtaining always their petitions, as S. John said before, ver. 14. Whatever exposition we follow on this verse, our faith teacheth us from the Holy Scriptures, that God desires not the death of any sinner, but that he be converted and live. See Ezech. xxxiii. 11. Though men's "sins be as the scarlet, they shall be made as white as snow." Isa. i. 18. It is the will of God that every one come to the knowledge of truth and be saved. See John vi. 40. There is no sin so great but which God is willing to forgive, and has left a power in his Church to remit the most enormous sins; so that no sinner need despair of pardon, nor will any sinner perish, but by his own fault. Wi.—A sin unto death. Some understand this of final impenitence, or of dying in mortal sin, which is the only sin that never can be remitted; but, it is probable, he may also comprise under this name the sin of apostacy from the faith, and some other such heinous sins as are seldom and hardly remitted: and therefore he gives little encouragement to such as pray for these sinners, to expect what they ask. Ch.

VER. 17. All iniquity is sin. The sense here is, that sin is always an injury or an injustice done to God. Wi.

VER. 18. Sinneth not. See the annotation on chap. iii. 6, &c. Ch.—The generation of God preserveth him. (i. e. the grace of adoption, as long as it remains in the soul; see chap. iii. 9,) and the wicked one (i. e. the devil) toucheth him not. Wi.

VER. 19. And the whole world is seated in wickedness; i. e. a great part of the world. It may also signify, is under the wicked one; meaning the devil, who is elsewhere called the prince of this world, that is, of all the wicked. John xii. 31. Wi.

VER. 20. And may be in his true Son. This is the true God, and eternal life. Which words are a clear proof of Christ's Divinity, and as such made use of by the ancient Fathers. Wi.

THE SECOND EPISTLE OF S. JOHN, THE APOSTLE.

This Second and Third Epistle of S. John were not at the first received as canonical by all Churches. See Euseb. and S. Jerom. in Catalogo, and Tillemont, art. 9, on S. John, p. 349. The style sufficiently shows they were written by S. John the evangelist. Wi.—But though these last two Epistles of the beloved apostle were frequently contested till the fourth or fifth century, from that period they have been regularly received; and even during the first ages, they were frequently cited by many of the holy Fathers as Catholic Scripture. This short Epistle may still be divided into two parts. The first, a congratulation to the lady he styles Elect, in which he felicitates her on account of the faith and virtue he had discovered in some of her children. He exhorts both them and their mother to be more and more confirmed in charity, as the essential and fundamental precept of Christianity, and of which the unequivocal mark is the observance of the other commandments. This part is from the beginning to ver. 6, inclusive. The second, which begins with ver. 7, and continues to the end, is to put them on their guard against the errors of Simon, of Cerinthus, of the Gnostics, and of Basilides, and prescribes the manner how they are to behave themselves towards these seducers. Though the time and place be uncertain, there is some appearance that it was written from Ephesus, when the apostle governed this Church and all the others of Asia.

CHAPTER I.

He recommends walking in truth, loving one another, and to beware of false teachers.

THE ancient, to the lady Elect and her children, whom I love in truth, and not I only, but also all they who have known the truth,

2 For the sake of the truth, which abideth in us, and shall be with us for ever.

3 Grace be with you, mercy, and peace from God the Father, and from Christ Jesus, the Son of the Father, in truth, and charity.

4 I was exceeding glad, that I found of thy children walking in truth, as we have received a commandment from the Father.

5 And now I beseech thee, lady, not as writing a new commandment to thee, but that which we have had from the beginning, ^athat we love one another.

6 And this is charity, that we walk according to his commandment. For this is the commandment, that as

VER. 8, 9. We here see the reward for adhering to the Catholic faith, and the condemnation for revolting from the received truth. The apostles, and their lawful successors in the ministry, determine the true doctrine in points which innovators call into controversy, which being once done and declared to the faithful, they need no other mark to know a false teacher by, but that he cometh with another doctrine than that which has been delivered.

7 For many seducers are gone out into the world, who confess not that Jesus Christ is come in the flesh: this is a seducer and an antichrist.

8 Look to yourselves, that you lose not the things which you have wrought: but that you may receive a full reward.

9 Whosoever recedeth, and continueth not in the doctrine of Christ, hath not God: he that continueth in the doctrine, he hath both the Father and the Son.

10 If any man come to you, and bring not this doctrine, receive him not into the house, nor say to him, God save you.

11 For he that saith to him, God save you, communicateth with his wicked works.

But by this is not forbidden civility, kindness, and a sincere charity for all men, by which we ought to wish and pray for the eternal salvation of every one. I translate Ave by peace be to you, because this was the usual salutation among the Jews, and in those times, as we see, Luke xxiv., and John xx. Wi.

THE THIRD EPISTLE OF S. JOHN, THE APOSTLE.

S. JOHN commends Gaius for his faith, charity, and hospitality towards strangers and the ministers of the gospel, to whom he would have every one to give a kind reception, and such charitable assistances as they can afford, and which others want. Wi.—Gaius, to whom this Epistle is addressed, is apparently one of the two disciples of S. Paul, who bore this name. The best known is that one of Corinth, with whom S. Paul lodged, and who had been converted and baptized by S. Paul. Others, with greater probability, suppose it was Gaius of Derbe, mentioned in Acts xx. 4. All that we know for certain of this Gaius is, that he was a great friend of S. John, that he exercised hospitality with great zeal and generosity, notwithstanding the harshness and severity of Diotrephes, who appears to have been his bishop, and who was not willing that hospitality should be shown to the brethren converted from Judaism. S. John promises to visit Gaius, and to reprimand Diotrephes

It appears that great pains were taken to remove the antipathy that existed between these two parties, even after their conversion. The same seeds of division are discernible in S. Paul's Epistles between the Jews and the converted Gentiles: and one of the earliest concerns of this apostle was, to suppress in the Jews all sentiments of vanity and self-sufficiency, which made them prefer themselves to the Gentiles; and in Gentiles a different kind of pride, which caused them to despise the Jews. In the first part of this letter S. John congratulates Gaius on his good works, and recommends to him certain evangelical preachers, who were to deliver him this letter as they called upon him. Ver. 1—8. In the second part he complains of Diotrophes, who affected independence, and proposes to Gaius the example of Demetrius, the faithful servant of Jesus Christ. Ver. 9, ad finem.

CHAPTER I.

He praises Gaius for his walking in truth, and for his charity: complains of the bad conduct of Diotrophes, and gives a good testimony to Demetrius.

THE ancient to the dearly beloved Gaius, whom I love in truth.

2 Dearly beloved, I make my prayer that thou mayest prosper as to all things, and be in health, even as thy soul doth prosperously.

3 I was exceeding glad when the brethren came, and gave testimony to the truth in thee, even as thou walkest in truth.

4 I have no greater grace than this, to hear that my children walk in truth.

5 Dearly beloved, thou dost faithfully whatsoever thou dost for the brethren, and that for strangers,

6 Who have given testimony of thy charity in the sight of the church: whom, thou shalt do well, to bring forward on their way in a manner worthy of God.

7 Because, for his name's sake they went forth, taking nothing of the Gentiles.

CHAP. I. VER. 4. No greater grace. That is, nothing that gives me greater joy and satisfaction. Ch.

VER. 7. Taking nothing of the Gentiles. These ministers and preachers of the gospel, whom S. John recommends, took care, as S. Paul did, not to take anything of the Gentiles, to whom they preached, lest they should be thought to preach to get money by it. Wi.

8 We, therefore, ought to receive such: that we may be fellow-helpers of the truth.

9 I had written perhaps to the church: but Diotrophes, who loveth to have the pre-eminence among them, doth not receive us.

10 Wherefore, if I come, I will publish his works which he doth, prating against us with malicious words: and as if these things were not enough for him, neither doth he himself receive the brethren: and those that do receive them he forbiddeth, and casteth out of the church.

11 Dearly beloved, follow not that which is evil, but that which is good. He that doth good, is of God: he that doth evil, hath not seen God. ●

12 To Demetrius testimony is given by all, and by the truth itself, yea, and we also give testimony: and thou knowest that our testimony is true.

13 I had many things to write unto thee: but I would not by ink and pen write to thee.

14 But I hope speedily to see thee, and we will speak face to face. Peace be to thee. Our friends salute thee. Salute the friends by name.

VER. 9, 10. Diotrophes . . . doth not receive us, nor those we recommend, but prattles and talks against me. We know no more of this man, nor of Demetrius, of whom S. John gives so favourable a character. Wi.—It seemeth, saith Ven. Bede, that he was an arch-heretic, or proud sect-master—ὑπομνήσω, I will rebuke them, and make them known to be wicked. Bede.

THE

CATHOLIC EPISTLE OF S. JUDE,

THE APOSTLE.

1. JUDE, in the first part of his Epistle, (ver. 1 to 16,) writes against certain heretics of his day, known in history by the name of Gnostics, whose extravagant opinions and shameful and criminal disorders have been described by S. Epiphanius, S. Irenæus, and other Fathers. In the second part, he seems to have principally in view such as were to arise in the latter times; and he exhorts such of the faithful as should live to see those days, to remain firm in the faith which they had received, applying themselves to prayer, persevering in charity, and awaiting the mercy of our Lord Jesus Christ and eternal life, which He has promised them. S. Jude, in thus exerting himself, like S. Peter, against the first and last heresies, has invincibly established the perpetuity of the Catholic Church. With regard to the doubts of certain authors relative to the authenticity of this Epistle, we can oppose Origen, who says that S. Jude wrote a letter, which in the few lines it contains, includes discourses full of force and heavenly grace—Ἰούδας ἐγράψεν ἐπιστολὴν ὀλιγοστιχὸν μὲν, πεπληρομένην δὲ τῶν τῆς οὐρανόθεν χάριτος ἐρρωμένων λόγων.—And S. Epiphanius says, that he believed the Holy Ghost inspired S. Jude with the design of writing against the Gnostics in the letter he has left us. . . We find it inserted in the ancient catalogues of sacred Scripture, as in that of the Council of Laodicea, Can. 60, of Carthage, Can. 47, nor can there be any reasonable doubt at present for admitting it into the canon of Scripture. It is received by the Catholic Church, and has been received ever since the fourth age. What gave doubts relative to the authenticity of this Epistle, was the author's quoting a prophecy of Enoch, which seemed to have been taken from a spurious work published under the name of the patriarch, and a fact concerning the death of Moses, not found in the canonical books of the Old Testament; but the apostle might have cited the prophecy of Enoch, and the fact concerning Moses, on the faith of some ancient tradition, without a reference to any book. Eusebius (Hist. Eccles. l. 2, c. 25) bears testimony that this Epistle, though not frequently cited by the ancients, was publicly read in many Churches. S. Clement of Alexandria, Tertullian, and the later Fathers, have admitted it as a part of canonical Scripture. Hence Luther, the Centuriators of Magdeburg, and the Anabaptists, have no just reason to look upon this Epistle as doubtful. Le Clerc, in his Hist. Eccles., (an. 90,) acts more candidly in admitting it without any scruple. As for the exception Grotius takes from S. Jude not assuming the quality of apostle, and from its not being universally received in the first ages, we can answer, that S. Peter, S. Paul, S. John, did not take the title of apostles at the head of all their letters, and that some Churches have doubted at first of the authenticity of other writings, which have afterwards been universally acknowledged as authentic and canonical.

CHAPTER I.

He exhorts them to stand to the faith first delivered to them: and to beware of heretics.

JUDE, the servant of Jesus Christ, and brother of James: to them that are beloved in God the Father, and preserved in Jesus Christ, and called.

2 Mercy unto you, and peace and charity be fulfilled.

3 Dearly beloved, taking all care to write to you concerning your common salvation, I was under a necessity to write to you: to beseech you to contend earnestly for the faith once delivered to the saints.

4 For there have crept in some men, (who were written of long ago unto this judgment,) impious, turning the grace of our God into lasciviousness, and denying the only sovereign Ruler, and our Lord Jesus Christ.

5 I will, therefore, admonish you, that once knew all these things, that Jesus, having saved the people out of the land of Egypt: ^a did afterwards destroy those, who believed not:

6 And the angels, who kept not their principality, but forsook their own habitation, ^b he hath reserved in everlasting chains under darkness, unto the judgment of the great day.

7 As Sodom and Gomorrha, and the neighbouring cities, in like manner having given themselves over to fornication, and going after other flesh, were made an example, suffering the punishment of eternal fire.

8 In like manner these men also defile the flesh, and despise dominion, and blaspheme majesty.

9 ^c When Michael, the archangel, disputing with the devil, contended about the body of Moses, he durst not bring against him the judgment of malediction: but said: The Lord command thee.

10 But these men blaspheme whatsoever things they know not: and what things soever they naturally know, like dumb beasts, in these they are corrupted.

11 Woe to them, for they have gone in the way of ^d Cain, and have poured out themselves after the ^e error of Balaam for a reward, ^f and have perished in the gainsaying of Core:

12 These are spots in their banquets, feasting together without fear, feeding themselves, ^g clouds without water which are carried about by winds, trees of the autumn, unfruitful, twice dead, plucked up by the roots.

13 Raging waves of the sea, foaming out their own confusion, wandering stars: to whom the storm of darkness is reserved for ever.

14 Now of these Enoch also, the seventh from Adam, prophesied, saying: ^h Behold, the Lord cometh with thousands of his saints,

15 To execute judgment upon all, and to reprove all the impious of all the works of their impiety, whereby they have done impiously, and of all the hard things which impious sinners have spoken against God.

16 These are murmurers full of complaints, walking according to their own desires, ⁱ and their mouth speaketh proud things, admiring persons for gain's sake.

17 But you, my dearest, be mindful of the words, ^j which have been spoken before by the apostles of our Lord Jesus Christ, 18 Who told you, that in the last time there should come mockers, walking according to their own desires in impieties.

19 These are they, who separate themselves, sensual men, having not the spirit.

20 But you, my dearest, building yourselves upon your most holy faith, praying in the Holy Ghost, 21 Keep yourselves in the love of God, waiting for the mercy of our Lord Jesus Christ unto life everlasting.

CHAP. I. VER. 1. And brother of James, the apostle and bishop of Jerusalem. Wi.

VER. 3. Being very solicitous to discharge my duty of an apostle, in writing and instructing you in the common concern of your salvation, I judge it necessary at present to write this letter, to exhort you to contend earnestly, ^a and stand firm in the Christian faith. Wi.

VER. 4. For there have crept in some men, impious men, (who were of old † foretold that they should fall into this condemnation, by their own obdurate malice,) the disciples of Simon, and the Nicolaites, who endeavour to turn the grace of our God, and the Christian liberty, into all manner of infamous ‡ lasciviousness; who, by their ridiculous fables, deny the only sovereign Ruler, and our Lord Jesus Christ. Some by the only sovereign, or master of all things, understand God the Father, and our Lord Jesus Christ, who, according to his Divine person, is the same God, Master, and Lord with him, and the Holy Ghost. But many interpreters think the true sense and construction is this, denying Jesus Christ, our only sovereign Master, § and Lord. The reasons for this exposition are: 1. That this verse of S. Jude seems correspondent to that of S. Peter, (2 Ep. ii. 1,) where he says of the same heretics, that they deny the Lord who bought them, or deny him that bought them to be Lord. 2. Because the disciples of Simon denied Jesus Christ to be truly Lord God, but denied not this of the Father. 3. Because the Greek text seems to denote one and the same to be the sovereign Master and the Lord. See Cornet. a Lapide. Wi.

VER. 5. I will, therefore, admonish you, that once || (that is, some time ago, when you were converted and instructed,) knew all things that were necessary as to the Christian faith, I will then put you in mind of the judgments and chastisements that such sinners may expect, that Jesus, ¶ not as man, but as God, having saved the people of Israel from their slavery in Egypt, did afterwards, on several occasions, punish and destroy those among them who believed not; who were rebellious and incredulous to his promises. Wi.—Menochius says it means Josue, who is thus styled by the seventy interpreters.

VER. 6, 7. Principality. That is, the state in which they were first created, their original dignity. Ch.—Having given themselves over to  fornication, or to excessive uncleanness. Wi.

VER. 8. In like manner these men (heretics) also defile the flesh with their horrid abominations, despise just dominion, all lawful authority, as well ecclesiastical as civil; blaspheme majesty, speak ill, and rail both against the majesty of God, and those whom he hath invested with power derived from him. Wi.—

Blaspheme, &c. Speak evil of them that are in dignity; and even utter blasphemies against the Divine majesty. Ch.

VER. 9. When Michael, &c. This contention, which is nowhere else mentioned in holy writ, was originally known by revelation, and transmitted by tradition. It is thought the occasion of it was, that the devil would have had the body buried in such place and manner, as to be worshipped by the Jews with Divine honours.—Command thee; or, rebuke thee. Ch.

VER. 11. They have imitated, or gone in the way of Cain; who murdered his brother: and they have a mortal hatred against the faithful. They have imitated Balaam †† and his covetousness, (see 2 Pet. ii. 15,) and Core, (Num. xvi.,) who with others opposed Moses; and as these sinners perished, so will they. Wi.—Way, &c. Heretics follow the way of Cain, by murdering the souls of their brethren; the way of Balaam, by putting a scandal before the people of God, for their own private ends; and the way of Core or Korah, by their opposition to the Church governors of Divine appointment. Ch.

VER. 14. Enoch, &c. Though the ancient writers mention an apocryphal book of Enoch's prophecies, yet S. Jude might know by tradition, or by the Spirit of God, what Enoch truly prophesied concerning God's coming with thousands of his saints, to judge, condemn, and punish the wicked for their impieties and blasphemies. Wi.—Prophesied. This prophecy was either known by tradition, or from some book that is since lost. Ch.

VER. 15. Nothing more terrible than a God avenging in the majesty of his power his own cause. Then the impious libertine, in proportion as he has studied to extinguish in himself and to stifle in others the light of faith, the more shall he be confounded and overwhelmed with the glory of God in the day of just retribution.

VER. 16. Speaketh proud things, admiring persons for gain's sake. It is a part of the character of these heretics to seem to admire and flatter others when they can gain by it. Wi.

VER. 17. Be mindful, &c. He now exhorts the faithful to remain steadfast in the belief and practice of what they had heard from the apostles, who had also foretold that in after times (lit. in the last time) †† there should be false teachers, scoffing and ridiculing all revealed truths, abandoning themselves to their passions and lusts, who separate themselves from the Catholic communion by heresies and schisms; sensual men, §§ carried away, and enslaved by the pleasures of the senses. Wi.

VER. 22. And some indeed reprove, being judged. He gives them another in 22 And some indeed reprove, being judged.

23 But others save, snatching them out of the fire. And on others have compassion in fear: hating also the spotted garment, which is carnal.

24 Now to him, who is able to preserve you without sin, and to present you spotless before the presence of struction to practise charity in endeavouring to convert their neighbour, where they will meet with three sorts of persons. 1. With persons obstinate in their errors and sins, these may be said to be already judged and condemned, they are to be sharply reprehended, reprov'd, and, if possible, convinced of their errors. 2. As to others, you must endeavour to save them, by snatching them, as it were, out of the fire, from the ruin they stand in great danger of. 3. You must have compassion on others in great fear, when you see them, through ignorance or frailty, in danger of being drawn into the snares of these heretics; with these you must deal more gently and mildly, with a charitable compassion, hating always, and teaching others to hate the carnal coat, which is defiled, their sensual and corrupt manners, that defile both the soul and body. Wi.

VER. 24, 25. Now to him, &c. S. Jude concludes his Epistle with this doxology of praising God, and praying to the only God, our Saviour, which may either signify God the Father, or God as equally agreeing to all the Three Persons, who are equally the cause of Christ's incarnation and man's salvation, through Jesus Christ, our Lord, who being God from eternity, took upon him our human nature, that he might become our Redeemer. Wi.

* V. 3. To contend earnestly, supercertari, which has an active sense, of which there are divers examples. See Estius and P. Alleman, επαγωνιζεσθαι.

THE

APOCALYPSE OF S. JOHN,

THE APOSTLE.

Though some in the first ages doubted whether this book was canonical, and who was the author of it, (see Euseb. l. 7, Histor. c. 25.) yet it is certain much the greater part of the ancient Fathers acknowledged both that it was a part of the canon, and that it was written by S. John, the apostle and evangelist. See Tillemont, in his ninth note upon S. John, where he cites S. Justin, S. Irenæus, Clemens of Alexandria, Tertull., S. Cyp., S. Athan., Eusebius, S. Amb., S. Jerom, S. Aug., &c. It was written in Greek to the churches in Asia, under Domitian, about the year 96 or 97, long after the destruction of Jerusalem, when S. John was banished to the island of Patmos, in the Egean Sea. It is by some called the prophecy of the New Testament, and the accomplishment of the predictions of all the other prophets, by the first coming of Christ at his incarnation, and by his second coming at the end of the world. As to the time when the chief predictions should come to pass, we have no certainty, as appears by the different opinions, both of the ancient Fathers, and late interpreters. Many think that most things set down from the fourth chapter to the end, will not be fulfilled till a little time before the end of the world. Others are of an opinion, that a great part of them, and particularly the fall of the wicked Babylon, happened at the destruction of paganism, by the destruction of heathen Rome, and its persecuting heathen emperors. Of these interpretations, see Alcasar, in his long commentary, the learned Bossuet, bishop of Meaux, in his treatise on this book, and P. Alleman, in his notes on the same Apocalypse, tom. 12, who, in his preface, says, that this in a great measure may be now looked upon as the opinion followed by the learned men. In fine, others think that S. John's design was in a mystical way, by metaphors and allegories, to represent the attempts and persecutions of the wicked against the servants of God, the punishments that should in a short time fall upon Babylon, that is, upon all the wicked in general, the eternal happiness and reward which God had reserved for the pious inhabitants of Jerusalem, that is, for his faithful servants, after their short trials and tribulations of this mortal life. In the mean time we meet with many profitable instructions and admonitions, which we may easily enough understand; but we have no certainty, when we apply these predictions to particular events; for as S. Jerom takes notice, the Apocalypse has as many mysteries as words, or rather mysteries in every word. Apocalypsis Joannis tot habet sacramenta quot verba parum dixi, in verbis singulis multiplices latent intelligentiæ. Ep. ad Paulin. t. 4, p. 574, edit. Benedict. Wi.—In the first, second, and third chapters of this book are contained instructions and admonitions which S. John was commanded to write to the seven bishops of the churches in Asia. And in the following chapters, to the end, are contained prophecies of things that are to come to pass in the Church of Christ, particularly towards the end of the world, in the time of antichrist. It was written in Greek in the island of Patmos, where S. John was in banishment by order of the cruel emperor Domitian, about sixty-four years after our Lord's ascension. Ch.—This is the last in order of the sacred writings, and contains, in twenty-two chapters, revelations, as the name imports, extremely obscure, it must be acknowledged, yet undoubtedly of the utmost importance to the Christian Church, if we may judge from the dignity of the author, who was the beloved disciple, or the grandeur and majesty of the ideas, which pervade every chapter of the work. Being a sealed book, or a hidden mystery, in the beginning of the Church, when nothing of this important prophecy had yet been fulfilled, it is no wonder we are deprived of the usual lights which we have hitherto followed in expounding the Scripture, the works of the Fathers. With regard to the interpretation of it, it will not be expected that it should be attempted in a work of this kind. We shall therefore only give a short account of the principal commentators, and their plans, that the enlightened reader may consult their works, if he wish to enter deeper into the subject. But it should never be forgotten, that the connexion of sublime and prophetic ideas, which compose this work, has at all times been a labyrinth, in which the greatest geniuses have lost themselves, and a rock on which most commentators have split, the great Sir Isaac Newton not excepted. Hence Scaliger's praise of Calvin; Calvinus sapuit, quia non scripsit in Apocalypsim. 1. The Fathers living before the accomplishment of the events, have of course given us no interpretation. Those, therefore, who have written on it at all, have explained it in a mere moral sense, and drawn from it useful parables and instructions. None of them have given a regular systematic explanation. It must, however, be observed, as a circumstance of some moment, that many of them, particularly S. S. Augustin and Jerom, thought the Apocalypse contained prophecies regarding the whole time of the existence of the Church of Christ, till its triumphant state in the new Jerusalem. 2. Among the moderns we have abundant interpreters of the Apocalypse in all the reformed Churches. It has indeed grown into a mania among them, the only difference being their respective degrees of absurdity. This has been to all of them the common quarry, whence they have hewn the stones to cast at their mother Church. For to this day they have continued to disgrace themselves and Christianity, by depicting the Church of Rome as the scarlet woman of Babylon, popery the beast, and the pope antichrist. We must, however, except Grotius and Hammond, who have given historical interpretations, and some few others. 3. Among Catholic expositors stands eminently conspicuous the learned bishop of Meaux, Bossuet. This light of the Gallican Church has improved upon and filled up the outlines which Grotius had only sketched. The first three chapters, according to him, regard only the Churches of Asia, to which they are addressed; the other chapters, to nineteen, have been fulfilled in the persecutions which the Church endured under the pagan emperors. The last three are merely allegorical of the triumphs which the Church finally gained over her persecutors. 4. Du Pin has taken a wider range. The last three chapters regard the final judgment, and the establishment of the Church in heaven. And all the chapters between the first three and last three, are mere general descriptions of persecutions, fall of tyrants, heresies, &c., which shall happen in the Church; represented under the various figures which the rich imagination of S. John supplied. This system certainly removes all difficulties at once, by saving the trouble of comparing each figure with corresponding historical facts; but substitutes a vague and indeterminate sense, which we do not expect in prophecy. 5. Calmet does not vary a great deal in the outlines with Bossuet; but their applications of the text to the history are in many points widely different. He conceives the intermediate chapters between the first three and last three to have been fulfilled in the general persecution begun by Diocletian, in 303, and the destruction of Rome, in 410, by Alaric. The last three chapters give the triumph of the martyrs at that period, as well as many things, which are to take place at the coming of antichrist, and the dissolution of the world. 6. Conceiving that all the above commentators had too much contracted the time for the accomplishment of the prophecy, by limiting it to the establishment of Christianity, Monsieur de la Chetardie established a new system, upon the supposition that the Apocalypse includes the whole history of Christ's Church upon earth. In doing this, he had the authority of S. Austin, and other Fathers. Observing, therefore, upon an attentive perusal of this work, that there were seven seals, seven trumpets, seven vials, and that at the opening of such seals a new revelation was made, he ingeniously concluded, that the history of the whole Church was divided into seven periods or ages, and that to each period belonged one seal, one trumpet, and one vial. Six of these periods he conceives to be already accomplished, the seventh yet remains concealed in the womb of futurity. 7. Ingenious as is this system of Chetardie, it was not adopted, since Calmet, who wrote after him, preferred his own, which resembled that of Bossuet. It has, however, been renewed by the late bishop Wahnsley, under the name of Signor Pastorini, who has taken up the idea and general outline from Chetardie, but illustrated the same with his own interpretation and application to historical facts. The erudition with which the latter author has clothed this system, and the striking aptness of his comparisons of the words of the prophecy to the events which have passed, have gained a very general approbation, and he is almost exclusively followed in the interpretation of this sealed book. How far he has succeeded in his explanation of the seventh age of the Church, cannot be determined by us, since it is shut up in the dark recess of futurity. Posterity will decide. To him we refer the English reader for any further information on the subject, convinced that his researches will be amply gratified, his education wonderfully improved.

CHAPTER I.

S. John is ordered to write to the seven churches in Asia: the manner of Christ's appearing to him.

THE Revelation of Jesus Christ, which God gave to him to make known to his servants the things which must shortly come to pass: and signified, sending by his angel to his servant, John,

2 Who hath given testimony to the word of God, and the testimony of Jesus Christ, what things soever he hath seen.

3 Blessed is he, that readeth and heareth the words of this prophecy: and keepeth those things which are written in it: for the time is at hand.

4 John to the seven churches which are in Asia. Grace be unto you, and peace from him, who is, and who was, and who is to come, and from the seven spirits which are before his throne:

5 And from Jesus Christ, who is the faithful witness, the first begotten of the dead, and the prince of the kings of the earth: who hath loved us, and washed us from our sins in his own blood,

6 And hath made us a kingdom, and priests to God and his Father: to him be glory and empire, for ever and ever. Amen.

7 Behold, he cometh with the clouds, and every eye shall see him, and they that pierced him. And all the tribes of the earth shall bewail themselves because of him: Even so: Amen.

8 I am Alpha, and Omega, the beginning, and the end, saith the Lord God, who is, and who was, and who is to come, the Almighty.

9 I John, your brother, and sharer in tribulation, and in the kingdom, and patience in Christ Jesus: was in the island, which is called Patmos, for the word of God, and for the testimony of Jesus:

10 I was in spirit on the Lord's day, and heard behind me a great voice, as of a trumpet, 11 Saying: What thou seest, write in a book: and send to the seven churches which are in Asia, to Ephesus, and to Smyrna, and to Pergamus, and to Thyatira, and to Sardis, and to Philadelphia, and to Laodicia.

12 And I turned to see the voice that spoke with me: and being turned, I saw seven golden candlesticks.

13 And in the midst of the seven golden candlesticks, one like unto the Son of man, clothed with a garment down to the feet, and girded about near the paps with a golden girdle:

14 And his head and hair were white, like white wool, and as snow, and his eyes were as a flame of fire,

15 And his feet like unto fine brass, as in a burning furnace, and his voice as the sound of many waters:

16 And he had in his right hand seven stars: and from

CHAP. I. VER. 1—3. The Apocalypse, or Revelation. I rather prefer the word Apocalypse, which the Latin interpreter did not think fit to change.—Of Jesus Christ . . . by his angel, sent to his servant, John. So that these things were immediately revealed to S. John by an angel, who represented and spoke in the person of Christ.—Which must shortly come; and as it is again said, (ver. 3,) the time is at hand. This cannot be meant of all things in the Apocalypse, where mention is also made of the day of judgment, and of the glory of heaven at the end of the world. It can only mean, that some things were to happen shortly, i. e. what is said of the seven churches. Chap. ii. and iii. Or the persecutions foretold should begin shortly. Wi.

VER. 4—6. John to the seven churches, afterwards named; and by them to be understood of all churches, bishops, and people in the like dispositions.—From him, who is, and who was, and who is to come.* As these words are only applied and applicable to him, who is truly God and eternal, Alcazar (p. 176) applies them to God the Father. Others think them to be spoken of God, as the word God agrees to all the three Divine Persons, who are one and the same God. See Ribera.—And from the seven spirits. Alcazar understands them of seven of God's attributes, or perfections, but, by the common exposition, are meant seven of the chief created spirits, who in a special manner assist at the throne of God, employed to execute God's commands, as Raphael saith, (Tob. xii. 15,) I am one of the seven who stand before God. Wi.—And from Jesus Christ,† made man, and the Redeemer of mankind, whom S. John here names after the seven spirits, because he continues his discourse about Christ, who is the faithful witness; testified and approved of God by so many miracles, prophecies, &c.—And Christ hath made us a kingdom, inasmuch as by his grace he has made us members of his true Church, called the kingdom of God, and promised us to reign with him in his glorious kingdom in heaven.—And hath made us priests to God, and his Father, to offer up spiritual sacrifices. See 1 Pet. ii. 9.—To him be, or is due, glory and empire, for ever and ever. Amen. That is, to Jesus Christ. Wi.

VER. 7. Behold, he cometh, or is to come at the day of judgment. Wi.

VER. 8. I am Alpha, and Omega. These, the first and last letters of the Greek alphabet, signify the same as what follows, the beginning, and the end, the first cause and last end of all intelligent beings, who is, and who was, and who is to come, the Almighty. These words agree only to him, who is the true God, and here are applied to our blessed Redeemer, who is to come and judge all. Wi.

VER. 10. On the Lord's day.‡ Not on the Jewish sabbath, which is our Saturday, but on the Christian sabbath, our Sunday, called the Lord's day. The Church, in the apostle's time, changed the day of rest, on which the Jews were commanded to rest and sanctify that day, from Saturday to Sunday, from the last day of the week to the first. They judged this only to be an indispensable precept, that some day or some time should be appointed, in a special manner, to God's service and worship, on which Christians should also abstain from servile works, that were not of necessity: as to the determination of such a day of the week, they judged that the Church had power to change the day. Wi.

VER. 12. I saw seven golden candlesticks, which, by the last verse of this chapter, represented the seven churches of Asia. We may suppose these candlesticks to have been shown to S. John, like what is described, Exod. xxv. 31. Wi.

VER. 13. And in the midst of the seven golden candlesticks, i. e. walking among the candlesticks, like unto Christ, as he many times called himself the Son of man, and at other times told the Jews he was the Son, the only begotten Son of God.—With a garment down to the feet,§ and a golden girdle, with a resemblance to the habit of the priests. Wi.—Jesus Christ is in the midst of his Church to enlighten it, to defend and sanctify it, the true model of pastors, who should reside in the midst of their flock, be clothed with sanctity and justice, and girt with the golden girdle, i. e. with singular purity, always ready for combat and labour, by their charity and zeal.

VER. 15. His feet like unto fine brass, to signify the purity and steadfastness of his steps and actions. Wi.

his mouth came out a sharp two-edged sword : and his countenance shined as the sun shineth in its full strength.

17 And when I saw him, I fell at his feet as dead. And he laid his right hand upon me, saying : Fear not : 'I am the first and the last,

18 And alive, and was dead ; and behold I am living for ever and ever, and have the keys of death and of hell.

19 Write, therefore, the things which thou hast seen, and which are, and which must be done hereafter.

Directions what to write to the angels or bishops of Ephesus, Smyrna, Pergamus, and Thyatira.

TO the angel of the church of Ephesus write : These things, saith he who holdeth the seven stars in his right hand, who walketh in the midst of the seven golden candlesticks :

2 I know thy works, and thy labour, and thy patience, and how thou canst not bear evil men : and thou hast tried them, who say they are apostles, and are not, and hast found them liars :

3 And thou hast patience, and hast borne for my name, and hast not failed.

4 But this I have against thee, that thou hast left thy first charity.

5 Be mindful, therefore, from whence thou art fallen : and do penance, and do the first works. Or else I come to thee, and will remove thy candlestick out of its place, unless thou shalt have done penance.

6 But this thou hast, that thou hatest the deeds of the Nicolaites, which I also hate.

VER. 16. In his right hand seven stars, which, as it is said, (ver. 20,) were the angels, i. e. the bishops of the seven churches, by this comparison is expressed their dignity.—And from his mouth came out a sharp two-edged sword. The word of God preached is compared to a two-edged sword, Ephes. vi. 17, and Heb. iv. 12. It also signifies God's severity in punishing sinners. Wi.

VER. 17. I am the first and the last. These are the words of the Son of man, or of him that represented our Saviour, Christ, to S. John. To be the first and last, is another expression agreeing only to him who is the true God, as it is divers times applied by the prophet Isaias. Wi.

VER. 18. And alive, and was dead ; always living as God, and as man was dead, died on the cross for the salvation of all men, rose again, triumphed over hell, death, and sin, and am living for ever and ever, and have the keys of death and of hell, power over all, all things being made subject to me, even as man, or as God and man. CHAP. II. VER. 1—7. To the angel of the church of Ephesus. The great S. Timothy, who was bishop of Ephesus, died a glorious martyr about this time. But as for the admonitions and reprehensions given in these letters, we must take notice, that they are given to the faithful of each church, and not only to the bishops, as it appears by the words so often repeated. Wi.—Angel. This could have been no other than S. Timothy, who was then bishop of Ephesus. We must not suppose the faults, which are reproved by S. John, to belong individually to S. Timothy, but to some members of the Church. Bossuet, et alii.—These things, saith he who holdeth, &c. That is, Christ, or the angel, who represented Christ, as appeareth by his titles repeated out of the last chapter.—And hast not failed, or give to eat of the tree of life, which is in the paradise of my God.

8 And to the angel of the church of Smyrna write : These things saith the First and the Last : who was dead, and liveth :

9 I know thy tribulation and thy poverty, but thou art rich : and thou art blasphemed by those who say they are Jews, and are not, but are the synagogue of satan.

10 Fear none of those things which thou shalt suffer. Behold, the devil shall cast some of you into prison, that you may be tried : and you shall have tribulation ten days. Be thou faithful until death, and I will give thee the crown of life.

11 He that hath an ear, let him hear what the Spirit saith to the churches : He that shall overcome, shall not be hurt by the second death.

12 And to the angel of the church of Pergamus write : These things, saith he that hath the sharp two-edged sword :

13 I know where thou dwellest, where the seat of satan is : and thou holdest fast my name, and hast not denied my faith. Even in those days Antipas was my faithful witness, who was slain among you, where satan dwelleth

14 But I have a few things against thee : because thou hast there them that hold the doctrine^b of Balaam, who taught Balac to cast a stumbling-block before the children of Israel, to eat, and commit fornication :

15 So hast thou also them that hold the doctrine of the Nicolaites.

16 In like manner do penance : if not, I will come to thee quickly, and will fight against them with the sword of my mouth.

fainted, in opposing the teachers of false doctrine.—Thou hast left thy first charity, or first fervour, a common, yet a very dangerous disposition, and especially in a bishop, charged with the care of those under him.—Do penance . . . practise the first works, return to thy first fervour, or I will remove thy candlestick out of its place. The church of Ephesus is threatened, as in danger to lose its faith, which faith should be transplanted and received in other places. It is what God has divers times permitted, that churches flourishing in the profession of the true Christian faith should be perverted with infidelity and heresy, while the faith hath been planted in other kingdoms of the world. Wi.—The Nicolaites were an infamous sect, who disturbed the rising Church by the superstitions and all the impurities of paganism. See S. Aug. de Hæresib. Wi.

VER. 8—11. To the angel of the church of Smyrna. To S. Polycarp, or some one bishop there before him. No reprehension is given to this bishop, nor to his church, but a commendation for suffering in poverty and tribulation, when they were rich in grace. Wi.—Poverty. He was poor in temporal things, but rich in grace and merits.—Thou art blasphemed by those false teachers, who call themselves Jews and Israelites, and the chosen people of God, waiting for the coming of the Messias, but are not to be looked upon as such ; having refused to own their true Messias, Jesus Christ, they are the synagogue of satan, the greatest enemies of the true faith.—You shall have tribulation ten days, which several here understand for a long time, others for a short time, ten times being used in both senses. Wi.

VER. 12—17. To the angel of the Church of Pergamus. This Church is exhorted to do penance, and reprehended, as the seat or throne of satan. It is only said, that the bishop lives where this satanical seat is, that he had not denied the faith, even under the persecution, when S. Antipas suffered martyrdom, of whom see Tillemont in the persecution under Domitian, tom. 2, p. 119, and note 523.—Thou hast them that hold the doctrine of the Nicolaites, which is compared to that of Balaam, who taught Balac to cast a scandal before the children of Israel, by which they were seduced by the women of the Moabites, and fell into the sin of fornication and idolatry. Num. xxiv., and xxxi. 16.—And a white stone, with a new name written, as a mark of the happiness promised to all those who shall overcome.

and in the stone a new name written, which no man knoweth but he that receiveth it.

18 And to the angel of the church of Thyatira write: These things saith the Son of God, who hath eyes as a flame of fire, and his feet like unto fine brass:

19 I know thy works, and thy faith, and thy charity, and ministry, and thy patience, and thy last works which are more than the former.

20 But I have a few things against thee: because thou permittest the woman, Jezabel, who calleth herself a prophetess, to teach and to seduce my servants, to commit fornication, and to eat of things offered to idols.

21 And I gave her time to do penance: and she will not repent of her fornication.

22 Behold, I will cast her into a bed: and they that commit adultery with her, shall be in very great tribulation, unless they do penance from their deeds.

23 And I will kill her children with death, and all the churches shall know,^a that I am he who searcheth the reins and hearts: and I will give to every one of you according to your works. But I say to you,

24 And to the rest who are at Thyatira: Whosoever have not this doctrine, and who have not known the depths of satan, as they say, I will not put upon you any other weight:

25 Yet that which you have, hold fast till I come.

26 And he that shall overcome, and keep my works unto the end, to him I will give power over the nations;

27 And he shall rule them with a rod of iron, and as the vessel of a potter they shall be broken, 28 Even as I received from my Father: and I will give him the morning star.

VER. 18—20. To the angel of the church of Thyatira. Here follows a reprehension that they permitted the woman (here called by the name of Jezabel,† as was called the wife of Achaz, who persecuted the true prophets, and protected the false ones, 3 Kings xviii.) to seduce the servants of God, to commit fornication, and eat of things offered to idols. Alcazar thinks that by this woman was meant some heretical sect, or the corrupt synagogue of the Jews; but interpreters commonly understand some powerful woman thereabout among the infamous Nicolaites, who, by her authority and artifices, brought many to embrace that sect.—I gave her time to do penance; and she will not, or would not repent. It is Christ, who speaks as God, for who but God gives sinners time to repent?—All the churches shall know, that I am he who searcheth the reins and hearts, which God alone can do. See Psal. vii. 10; Jer. xvii. 10, &c. It is God also who will give to every one according to his works. See Psal. lxi. 13; Prov. xxiv. 12; Rom. ii. 6, and in divers other places. Wi.—To them who shall overcome, &c., I will give power over or above all nations. This shows that the saints, who are with Christ our Lord in heaven, receive power from him to preside over nations and provinces, as patrons; and shall come with him at the end of the world to execute his will against those who have not kept his commandments. Ch.—End. This alludes to the day of judgment, when the faithful shall sit on thrones with Christ. Wi.

But neither the Oxford edition of 1675, nor that at Amsterdam of 1711, take notice of this reading in any one MS. As for that one MS. of Alexandria, I guess by Walton's Polyglot, that it cannot well be read in that place. And though it is likely that the author of the Syriac version may have found that reading, yet there is nothing for it in the Arabic or Ethiopic, nor in the vulgar Latin, which, as Dr. Wells himself takes notice on 1 John v. 7, is more ancient than any other version or Greek MSS. And though we find uxorem tuam in S. Cyprian ad Antonianum, edit. Rig. 72, and in the edition of Dr. Fell, put out at Amsterdam, an. 1701, p. 248,

CHAP. III.

Directions what to write to Sardis, Philadelphia, and Laodicea.

AND to the angel of the church of Sardis write: These things, saith he who hath the seven Spirits of God, and the seven stars: I know thy works, that thou hast the name of being alive, and thou art dead.

2 Be watchful, and strengthen the things that remain, which are ready to die. For I find not thy works full before my God.

3 Have in mind, therefore, in what manner thou hast received and heard, and observe, and do penance. If then thou shalt not watch; ^b I will come to thee as a thief, and thou shalt not know at what hour I will come to thee.

4 But thou hast a few names in Sardis, which have not defiled their garments: and they shall walk with me in white, because they are worthy.

5 He that shall overcome, shall thus be clothed in white garments, and I will not blot out his name out of the book of life, and I will confess his name before my Father, and before his angels.

6 He that hath an ear, let him hear what the Spirit saith to the churches.

7 And to the angel of the church of Philadelphia write: These things, saith the Holy One and the True One,^c who hath the key of David: he that openeth, and no man shutteth: shutteth, and no man openeth:

8 I know thy works. Behold, I have given before thee a door opened, which no man can shut: because thou hast a little strength, and hast kept my word, and hast not denied my name.

9 Behold, I will bring of the synagogue of satan, who say they are Jews, and are not, but do lie: Behold, I will make them to come and adore before thy feet: And they shall know, that I have loved thee.

where he says in the note marked a, cui interpretationi favent illa Græca exemplaria, quæ legunt, γυναῖκά σου, but he did not think fit to tell us where any such MSS. were to be found, nor have I heard that they have been seen by any one. It is certain S. Epiphanius did not find σου, nor think this the true reading, when in the heresy of the Alogians, by Jezabel, he understands Muximilla, Priscilla, or Quintilla, in Marcion's time.

CHAP. III. VER. 1—6. To the angel of the church of Sardis. He begins with this severe reprehension, thou hast the name of being alive, and thou art dead, which we may understand of the greatest part of them, and of being dead by the worst of deaths, which is that of sin. Wi.—In the style of the sacred writers, to live, is to be in the state of grace, and to bring forth good works; as, to be dead, is to live in sin, and the neglect of Christian duties. Calmet.—The bishop is charged with this fault, that he did not watch and take care of his flock. He is admonished to repent, and to strengthen those that were not dead, but ready to die.^{*} Wi.—God does not seek to surprise us and lay snares for us. But when he tells us that he will come like a thief, it is only to admonish us not to slumber. Had he wished to take us unawares, he never would have admonished us beforehand. Calmet.—But thou hast a few names, &c. That is, a few persons not yet defiled, neither as to their consciences, souls, nor bodies.—They shall walk with me in white apparel, &c. It is a new way of expressing the happiness of heaven. Wi.—White is the colour of joy, festivity, and triumph. The angels always appeared clothed in white. Calmet.

VER. 7—13. To the angel of the church of Philadelphia. There were several towns of this name; here is understood that which was near Sardis, in Lydia. Here is no more than an admonition to persevere, to hold that which thou hast. Christ takes the title of the Holy One, and True One, who hath the key of David; i. e. being the son of David, and the promised Messiah, hath the supreme power in the Church; who opens the gate of salvation, and no one shuts it against his elect. Wi.—By the key in this place may be understood either the key of the church, or of the kingdom of heaven. Jesus Christ has both, he opens and shuts the heavens by his infinite power. But in the Church on earth he has intrusted this key (his power) to his apostles and ministers: whatever is bound or loosened by them is ratified by him in the kingdom of his glory. Calmet.—I have set before thee a door open, by giving thee graces to save thee, which no one shall be able to hinder, be 10 Because thou hast kept the word of my patience, I will also keep thee from the hour of temptation, which shall come upon all the world to tempt them that dwell upon the earth.

11 Behold I come quickly: hold fast that which thou hast, that no man take thy crown.

12 He that shall overcome, I will make him a pillar in the temple of my God, and he shall go out no more: and I will write upon him the name of my God, and the name of the city of my God, the new Jerusalem, which cometh down out of heaven from my God, and my new name.

13 He that hath an ear, let him hear what the Spirit saith to the churches.

14 And to the angel of the church of Laodicia write: These things saith the Amen, the faithful and true witness, who is the beginning of the creation of God.

15 I know thy works: that thou art neither cold nor hot: I would thou wert cold or hot:

16 But because thou art lukewarm, and neither cold nor hot, I will begin to vomit thee out of my mouth.

17 Because thou sayest: I am rich, and made wealthy, and I have need of nothing: and thou knowest not, that thou art wretched, and miserable, and poor, and blind, and naked.

18 I counsel thee to buy of me gold tried in the fire, that thou mayest be made rich: and mayest be clothed in white garments, that the shame of thy nakedness may not appear: and anoint thy eyes with eye-salve, that thou mayest see.

• John xiv. 6.

cause thou hast of thyself little power or strength,† and hast kept my word, and not denied the faith, Wi.—He here advertises him of the persecution which was about to take place, and by which he would try the fidelity of his servants. In ver. 12 he relates the triumph and everlasting beatitude of the martyrs.—He that overcomes, I will make him a pillar, &c., so as to stand firm against his enemies, and to be secure of his endless happiness.—I will write upon him the name of my God, a subscribed citizen of the celestial Jerusalem, with the new name of Jesus, the Saviour and Redeemer of mankind. He alludes to the custom of writing names upon pillars, palaces, &c.—From the words my God, the Socinians pretend that Christ is not the true God, as we may find in the disputes which Servetus had with Calvin. Calvin answered the Socinians, as all Catholics do, that Christ was both God and man: this and divers things were spoken of Christ as he was man, but that many things in the Scriptures could not agree to him, unless he was also truly God. And by such places is clearly confuted the blasphemy and error of the Arians and Socinians. Wi.

VER. 14–22. The seventh and last letter is to the angel of the Church of Laodicia. Christ here takes the title of the Amen,† as if he said, I am the Truth.—The beginning of the creation, or of the creatures of God, to which is added, in the first chapter, the beginning and the end.—Thou art neither cold nor hot, but lukewarm. A dreadful reprehension, whatever exposition we follow. According to the common interpretation, by the cold are meant those who are guilty of great sins; by the hot, such as are zealous and fervent in piety and the service of God; by the lukewarm or tepid, they who are slothful, negligent, indolent as to what regards Christian perfection, the practice of virtue, and an exact observance of what regards the service of God. On this account they are many times guilty in the sight of God of great sins, they forfeit the favour and grace of God, fancying themselves good enough and safe, because they live as others commonly do, and are not guilty of many scandalous and shameful crimes, to which they see others addicted.—I would thou wert either cold or hot. This is not an absolute wish, because the condition of the cold is certainly worse in itself; but it is to be taken with a regard to the different consequences, which oftentimes attend these two states, and to signify to us that the lukewarm may be farther from a true conversion, inasmuch as they are less sensible of the dangers to which they remain exposed, than such as commit greater sins. Wi.—Tepidity in a Christian life, and in the service of God, is oftentimes more dangerous than absolute wickedness. The open sinner is easily made sensible of his danger; he experiences the stings and reproaches of conscience, whilst the tepid Christian lives without remorse, fear, or apprehension, and listens not to those who wish to show him the danger of his situation. I dare venture to affirm, says S. Aug., that to fall into some public and manifest sin would be of advantage to the proud, that so those who by their self-complacency had so often fallen before, may now become displeased with themselves and humble. Calnet.—To the lukewarm it is said, I will begin to vomit thee out of my mouth; i. e. if thou continue in that state, I will permit thee to run on and be lost in thy sins. Thou blindly sayest within thyself, I am rich, &c. A 19 Those whom I love, I rebuke and chastise. Be zealous, therefore, and do penance.

20 Behold, I stand at the door, and knock: if any man shall hear my voice, and open to me the gate, I will come in to him, and will sup with him, and he with me.

21 To him that shall overcome, I will grant to sit with me in my throne: as I also have overcome, and have sat with my Father in his throne.

22 He that hath an ear, let him hear what the Spirit saith to the churches.

CHAP. IV.

The vision of the throne of God, the twenty-four ancients, and the four living creatures.

AFTER these things I saw: and behold a door open in heaven: and the first voice which I heard, was as it were, of a trumpet speaking with me, saying: Come up hither, and I will show thee the things which must come to pass hereafter.

2 And immediately I was in the spirit: and behold there was a throne set in heaven, and one sitting upon the throne.

3 And he that sat, was to the sight like the jasper and the sardine-stone: and there was a rainbow round about the throne, in sight like unto an emerald.

4 And round about the throne were four and twenty seats: and upon the seats, four and twenty ancients sitting, clothed in white garments, and golden crowns on their heads.

5 And from the throne proceeded lightnings, and false conscience generally attends a lukewarm soul and those who serve God by halves; they flatter themselves that all goes well enough with them, when they see they are not so vicious as many others; but here the Spirit of God, who penetrates the secret folds and windings of slothful souls, admonisheth them of their dangerous mistakes, that they are wretched, poor, blind, and naked, when God, by his grace, does not inhabit their souls, though they may have millions of gold and silver in this world.—I counsel thee to buy of me gold tried in the fire, the love of God purified by trials and troubles in this life, to recover thy lost innocence, to be clothed with the habit of grace, to anoint thy eyes with eye-salve, by a serious reflection on what regards thy eternal salvation.—I chastise those whom I love. He concludes all the former admonitions by telling them, first, that to be under trials and troubles, is a mark of God's favour and his paternal care; secondly, to hearken to the voice of God, when he knocks at the door of their heart; and thirdly, he promises them the reward of eternal happiness—he that overcomes, shall sit with me on my throne: though this does not imply an equality of happiness, not even to all the saints, much less with God himself, but only that the elect shall be in the throne as it were of heaven, and partakers of the heavenly happiness according to their past good works. ‡ V. 14. Hæc dicet Amen; τὰς λέγει ὁ Ἀμήν. Ille qui est Amen.

CHAP. IV. VER. 1. No sooner had S. John received in the preceding vision the documents he was to transmit to the seven Churches of Asia, when, behold, a new scene displays itself. Heaven opens, and S. John is invited up thither by the voice which had spoken to him before, and is told he shall see what is to happen in future ages. On a sudden appears a throne, and the Almighty himself seated upon it. The rainbow which surrounds the throne denotes the covenant of reconciliation and peace between God and man. Walmsley.—Behold a door open. Here begins what may be looked upon as the second part of the Apocalypse, and from hence to the two last chapters are contained wars and victories of the Church over all its enemies, the devil, Jews, heathens, and heretics.—I will show thee the things which must come to pass hereafter; i. e. after the things already revealed concerning the seven Churches, and therefore after the destruction of Jerusalem, which was about twenty years before S. John wrote this Apocalypse. Wi.

VER. 3. And he . . . was to the sight like the jasper,* or had the appearance of jaspers, as to the colours with which he appeared, &c. Wi.

VER. 4. About the throne were four and twenty seats, or lesser thrones, with twenty-four seniors or senators upon them, representing the illustrious saints both of the Old and New Testament, clothed in white garments, in token of their innocence, and crowns of gold, signifying the glory of the heavenly inhabitants. Wi.—These four and twenty elders sitting round the throne of God, represent the voices, and thunderings: and there were seven lamps burning before the throne, which are the seven spirits of God.

6 And before the throne there was as it were a sea of glass like crystal: and in the midst of the throne, and round about the throne were four living creatures full of eyes before and behind.

7 And the first living creature like to a lion, and the second living creature like to a calf, and the third living creature having the face, as it were, of a man: and the fourth living creature was like to an eagle.

8 And the four living creatures had each of them six wings: and round about and within they are full of eyes. And they rested not day and night, saying, * Holy, Holy, Holy, Lord God Almighty, who was, and who is, and who is to come.

9 And when these living creatures gave glory, and honour, and benediction to him that sitteth on the throne, who liveth for ever and ever,

10 The four and twenty ancients fell down before him that sitteth on the throne, and adored him that liveth for ever and ever, and cast their crowns before the throne, saying:

11 Thou art worthy, O Lord our God, to receive glory and honour and power: because thou hast created all things, and for thy will they were, and have been created.

Judgment which the Almighty was about to pass upon the enemies of his Church. Calmet.

VER. 5. Lightnings, a symbol of God's majesty and power.—Seven lamps burning, which signify the seven spirits of God, the chief spirits that attend his throne. See chap. i. 4, Wi.—The lightnings, loud voices, and thunders, which come from the throne of God, announce alarms and severe hardships, such as persecutions, heresies, calamities, &c., by which he tries the fidelity of his servants on earth. And the seven spirits of God, who appear under the form of burning lamps, are seven angels, as before mentioned, (chap. i. 4,) standing ready to execute the Divine commands. Walmsley.

VER. 6. A sea of glass, like crystal, calm and transparent, and may signify that the saints had passed a boisterous sea of troubles in this world, which is now changed into an everlasting tranquillity.—Four living creatures, or animals. Alcazar (p. 304) takes notice of thirty different expositions of these four living creatures. He understands the apostles, bishops, and preachers of the Christian faith: others, four of the chief angels or celestial spirits. Several others expound them of the four evangelists: yet this was before S. John himself had written his Gospel. Wi.—The extensive sea of glass, here described transparent as crystal, represents what may be called the flood of heaven. Before the throne and round it stand four living creatures, of an extraordinary shape, which denote the four great prophets, Isaias, Jeremias, Ezechiel, and Daniel. Their bodies are described full of eyes, both before and behind, an emblem of their prophetic sight, that penetrates into all ages past, present, and to come. And their being also full of eyes within, indicates that their extensive knowledge arises from an interior Divine inspiration. They have each six wings, in the same manner as the seraphim appeared to the prophet Isaias, chap. vi. 2. Some have imagined these four symbolical living creatures to represent the four evangelists; but we think improperly, as S. John was still living and there present in person. The first living creature is here said to resemble a lion, the king of beasts, because the prophet Isaias, represented by it, was descended of the royal race of David. The second living creature resembles a calf, and represents the prophet Jeremias in his character of priest; the calf, which was the principal victim in Jewish sacrifices, being on that account the emblem of priesthood. The third living creature, exhibiting Ezechiel, has the countenance of a man; because God, in speaking to that prophet, always addresses him by the name of son of man. The fourth living creature, denoting Daniel, resembles a flying eagle, on account of the sublime oracles of this prophet, who soars to the highest objects, and views the succession of all the great empires that were to rise up in the world to the end of time. Probably these four principal prophets are to be understood to represent all the prophets of the old law. Walmsley.

VER. 8. Each of them six wings. See the like visions, Ezech. i. 4; Isa. vi. 2. These signify their swiftness in executing God's just commands.—Full of eyes: a symbol of knowledge and watchfulness.—They rested not day and night. There is no night in heaven; but hereby is signified, that they praised God without intermission for all eternity, saying: Thou art worthy, O Lord, our God, &c. Wi.—They repeat the word holy three times, probably in honour of the blessed Trinity. And the four and twenty elders prostrate before the throne, in token of their acknowledging all their happiness and pre-eminence to be his gift. Walmsley.

VER. 10. Nothing is so well adapted to give us an idea of the infinite majesty

CHAP. V.

The book sealed with seven seals is opened by the Lamb, who thereupon receives adoration and praise from all.

AND I saw in the right hand of him that sat on the throne, a book written within and without, sealed with seven seals.

2 And I saw a strong angel, proclaiming with a loud voice: Who is worthy to open the book, and to loose the seals thereof?

3 And no man was able neither in heaven, nor in earth, nor under the earth, to open the book, nor to look on it.

4 And I wept much because no man was found worthy to open the book, nor to see it.

5 And one of the ancients said to me: Weep not: behold the lion of the tribe of Juda, the root of David, hath conquered to open the book, and to loose the seven seals thereof.

6 And I saw: and behold in the midst of the throne, and of the four living creatures, and in the midst of the ancients, a Lamb standing as it were slain, having seven horns and seven eyes: which are the seven spirits of God, sent forth into all the earth.

7 And he came: and took the book out of the right hand of him that sat on the throne.

8 And when he had opened the book, the four living creatures, and the four and twenty ancients fell down before God, and of the sovereign respect which is due to him, as this description. How ought Christians to appear in the presence of the God of armies, if what is most august and most elevated in heaven acknowledges its lowness and nothing before this tremendous Majesty? Calmet.

* V. 3. Similis erat aspectui jaspidis, ὁμοιος ὄρασι ἰάσπιδι.

† V. 11. Dignus est, Domine Deus. God is wanting in many copies, but Dr. Wells restored it as the true reading.

CHAP. V. VER. 1. *A book written within and without. Books were then skins, membranes, or parchments, and when written on both sides part of the writing appeared, though they were rolled up.—Sealed with seven seals, as containing mysteries and secrets of high importance. Wi.

VER. 3. No man was able, &c. As to the contents, some understand the prophecies and mysteries both of the Old and New Testament; others, the events that should afterwards happen to the Church of Christ, as various persecutions against Christians. Wi.

VER. 5. Behold the lion of the tribe of Juda, &c., viz. Jesus Christ, who descended from that tribe, denominated a lion on account of his great power, by which title we find him designated also in the prophecy of Jacob, Gen. xlix. 9. Calmet.

VER. 6. I saw . . . a Lamb standing as it were slain, with the prints and marks of its wounds. It was of this Lamb (i. e. of our Saviour Jesus Christ) that S. John Baptist said, "Behold the Lamb of God, that taketh away the sins of the world." John i. 29. Wi.—Here again Jesus Christ is plainly marked out, the Lamb of God, the victim of expiation, who by his death has reconciled us to his Father; and who, even in heaven, bears the marks of his passion, and by the wounds therein received continually inclines his Father to show us mercy. He has seven horns, as so many crowns and marks of his omnipotence; and seven eyes, to represent his infinite knowledge and wisdom. Calmet.—Having seven horns and seven eyes, (to signify his power and his knowledge,) which are the seven spirits subject to Christ. See chap. i. 4. It is observed that in the Revelation of S. John, the number seven is divers times applied to signify a multitude, and a number implying perfection, and three and a half for a little number. Thus are represented the seven candlesticks, seven churches, seven spirits, seven seals, seven trumpets, seven vials, &c. Wi.

VER. 7, 8. He . . . took the book, &c. . . and when he had opened it, or was about to open it, (in the Greek is only, he took it; which was a sign that he would open it,) . . . the four and twenty ancients fell down before the Lamb, to adore him, as appears by what follows, ver. 13.—Having every one of them harps to celebrate his praises, and golden vials full of odours, which are the prayers of the saints: which shows that the saints in heaven offer up before the throne of the Divine Majesty the prayers of the faithful. Wi.—Harps, &c. These harps are symbols of the praise which good men render to God; and the vials full of odours represent the prayers of the saints. In conformity with this idea, S. John wishes to represent these four and twenty ancients as so many senators, who present to the Almighty the prayers and homages of good men on earth. Estius. Clemens Alex. The prayers of the saints. Here we see that the saints in heaven offer up to Christ the prayers of the faithful upon earth. Ch.

9 And they sung a new canticle, saying : Thou art worthy, O Lord, to take the book, and to open the seals thereof : because thou wast slain, and hast redeemed us to God, in thy blood, out of every tribe, and tongue, and people, and nation :

10 And hast made us to our God a kingdom, and priests : and we shall reign on the earth.

11 And I saw, and I heard the voice of many angels round about the throne, and the living creatures and the ancients : and the number of them was ^a thousands of thousands,

12 Saying, with a loud voice : Worthy is the Lamb that was slain, to receive power, and divinity, and wisdom, and strength, and honour, and glory, and benediction.

13 And every creature, which is in heaven, and on the earth, and under the earth, and such as are in the sea, and the things that are therein : I heard all saying : To him that sitteth on the throne, and to the Lamb, benediction, and honour, and glory, and power for ever and ever.

14 And the four living creatures said : Amen : And the four and twenty ancients fell down on their faces, and adored him that liveth for ever and ever.

VER. 9. They sung a new canticle, &c. ; called new, as belonging to the New Testament, or alliance of the new law of Christ. Wi.—Canticle ; that is, excellent. The Scripture generally attaches the epithet new to canticles. And hast redeemed, &c. The twenty-four ancients here may well represent all who are in possession of beatitude. They all acknowledge it is to Jesus Christ they are indebted for the felicity they enjoy ; it is he that has assembled at the foot of God's throne all the nations of the world, faithful souls from every tribe and tongue, and people and nation, by his blood. Calmet.

VER. 10. And hast made us to our God, &c. See 1 Pet. ii. 5, 9. VER. 12. Worthy is the Lamb . . . to receive power, and divinity. || &c. The Socinians and new Arians from hence pretend that the Lamb, Jesus Christ, is not the same true God with the Father, but only deserved divinity, or to be made God, in an inferior and an improper sense. The argument is of no force at all in the ordinary Greek, where for divinity is read riches. The sense is, thou art worthy to have thy power and divinity acknowledged and praised by all creatures both in heaven and earth : and the following words are a confutation of the Socinians, " I heard all saying, To him that sitteth on the throne, and to the Lamb, benediction, and honour, and glory, and power, for ever and ever," where the same Divine power is attributed to the Father and to the Son of God, Jesus, true God and true man. CHAP. VI. VER. 1. I saw that the Lamb had opened one of the seven seals, or the first seal. The interpreters are much divided in expounding what is to be understood by the sealed-up contents, and in applying them to such and such persecutions, persons, and events, by all which it appears that there is no certainty as to such applications and expositions, even of particular ancient Fathers. Wi.

VER. 2. A white horse, such as conquerors used to ride upon at a solemn triumph. W.—He that sitteth on the white horse is Christ, going forth to subdue creatures, saying, as with a voice of thunder : Come thou, and see.

2 And I saw : and behold a white horse, and he that sat on him had a bow, and a crown was given to him, and he went forth conquering that he might conquer.

3 And when he had opened the second seal, I heard the second living creature, saying : Come thou, and see.

4 And there went out another horse that was red : and it was granted to him who sat thereon, to take away peace from the earth, and that they should kill one another, and to him was given a great sword.

5 And when he had opened the third seal, I heard the third living creature, saying : Come thou, and see. And behold a black horse, and he that sat on him had a pair of scales in his hand.

6 And I heard as it were a voice in the midst of the four living creatures, saying : Two pounds of wheat for a penny, and thrice two pounds of barley for a penny, and wine, and oil hurt thou not.

7 And when he had opened the fourth seal, I heard the voice of the fourth living creature, saying : Come thou, and see.

8 And behold a pale horse, and he that sat upon him, his name was death, and hell followed after him ; and power was given to him over the four parts of the earth, to kill with sword, with famine, and with death, and with the beasts of the earth.

9 And when he had opened the fifth seal, I saw under the altar the souls of them that were slain for the word of God, and for the testimony which they held.

the world by his gospel. The other horses that follow represent the judgments and punishment, that were to fall on the enemies of Christ and his Church : the red horse signifies war ; the black horse famine ; and the pale horse (which has death for its rider) plagues or pestilence. Ch.—White horse ; viz. Jesus Christ, who came to subdue all nations to the faith. The bow signifies the gospel, and the word of God, those powerful arms, of which S. Paul so often speaks, as being so necessary for all who are engaged in bringing souls to the faith of Christ. The crown marks the sovereign power of Jesus Christ, and the assurance of conquest. Cornelius. Bossuet. Du Pin.

VER. 3, 4. Opened the second seal, &c., portending wars and shedding of blood, and so he is said to have power to take away peace from the earth. Wi.—Another horse that was red. This red horse signifies the cruel persecutions, which the Roman emperors carried on against the Christian religion. Menochius.

VER. 5. The third seal . . . a black horse. This is also commonly expounded of wars and persecutions, and particularly of famine, by the scales in the rider's hand, and by two pounds of wheat being sold for a penny ; a great price, considering the value of money at that time. Wi.—The black horse represents the public miseries, famines, &c. which, particularly the latter, the Roman empire frequently experienced during the reign of the persecuting emperors. The balance, which the rider is said to hold in his hand, represents the strict manner in which people would measure out whatever they sold during the time of famine. Andreas. Hamm. Bossuet.

VER. 7, 8. The fourth seal, . . . a pale horse, the rider's name death. It is also expounded of trials, afflictions, persecutions, and especially of plagues, over four parts of the earth, by which may be denoted the great power and extent of the Roman empire. Wi.—By the pale horse, and the rider, death, who sat upon it, followed by hell, are meant that dreadful mortality which ever attends famines, &c. He had power to kill with sword, with famine, &c. All these evils came upon the Roman people, and history has preserved the memory of them, to show the truth of the prophecy here delivered by S. John. Grotius. Calmet.

VER. 9, &c. After the opening of the fifth seal, the souls of the martyrs under the altar cried aloud for justice, saying, How long, &c. Out of zeal for God's honour, and the good of the Church, they pray that the enemies of Christ, and of the Christian faith, may be humbled, and that all may acknowledge and fear the justice of God, by the punishments of his enemies, and the reward of his faithful servants. Wi.—Under the altar. Christ, as man, is this altar, under which the souls of the martyrs live in heaven : as their bodies are here deposited under our altars.—Revenge our blood. They ask not this out of hatred to their enemies, but out of zeal for the glory of God, and a desire that the Lord would accelerate the general judgment, and the complete beatitude of all his elect. Ch.—And while stoies. To console them, they each had given them a white robe, as a mark of their innocence, and as an assurance that on account of it they would in due time receive full measure of beatitude. They should rest yet a little while, most pro

10 And they cried with a loud voice, saying: How long, O Lord, (holy and true,) dost thou not judge and revenge our blood on them that dwell on the earth?

11 And white stoles were given to each of them one: and it was said to them, that they should rest yet for a little time, till their fellow servants, and their brethren, who were to be slain even as they, should be filled up.

12 And I saw, when he had opened the sixth seal: and behold, there was a great earthquake, and the sun became black as sackcloth of hair: and the whole moon became as blood:

13 And the stars from heaven fell upon the earth, as the fig-tree casteth its green figs when it is shaken by a great wind:

14 And the heaven withdrew as a book rolled up together: and every mountain, and the islands were moved out of their places.

15 And the kings of the earth, and the princes, and the tribunes, and the rich men, and the strong men, and every bond-man, and every free-man hid themselves in the dens, and in the rocks of the mountains:

16 And they say to the mountains and to the rocks: Fall upon us, and hide us from the face of him that sitteth upon the throne, and from the wrath of the Lamb:

17 For the great day of their wrath is come: and who shall be able to stand?

CHAP. VII.

The number of them that were marked with the seal of the living God; and clothed in white robes.

AFTER these things I saw four angels standing on the four corners of the earth, holding the four winds of the earth, that they should not blow upon the earth, nor upon the sea, nor on any tree.

2 And I saw another angel ascending from the rising of the sun, having the seal of the living God: and he cried with a loud voice to the four angels, to whom it was given to hurt the earth and the sea.

bably to the day of final retribution, when the number of those destined to be their brethren in bliss should be completed. Then they should all together receive full recompence, and their persecutors be covered with confusion. S. Aug. serm. 11, de Sunetis. Greg. Mag. lib. 2, Moral. cap. 4.

VER. 12. At the opening of the sixth seal . . . a great earthquake, &c. Many think that these dreadful signs, of the sun turning black, &c., are not to happen till the time of antichrist, a little before the end of the world. See Matt. xiv., Luke xxi., Isa. xlii. and xxxiv., Eze. xxxii., Dan. xii., &c. Others apply these prodigies to God's visible chastisements, against the heathen emperors and persecutors of the Christians, before the first Christian emperor Constantine. Wi.—And I saw. The sixth seal being opened, S. John sees painted before him the severe and terrible manner in which the Almighty would revenge himself on his enemies. It may refer either to the time of Constantine, when we behold the Christian religion triumphing on the ruins of Paganism, and after his death, and that of his sons, the empire of Rome given up a prey to barbarians, Rome itself taken and pillaged, and all the provinces thrown into dreadful disorder and consternation; or it may likewise refer to the day of general judgment, when the Almighty will make sinners drink the wine of his indignation, in presence of all the just; of which dreadful time of vengeance all other particular judgments are only imperfect figures. Vietorin. Bede. Tichon.

CHAP. VII. VER. 1. I saw four angels, &c. Though some understand here evil spirits, whom God may make use of as instruments to punish the wicked, yet we may rather, with other interpreters, understand good angels sent from God to guard and protect his faithful servants both from evil spirits and wicked men. Wi.

VER. 2. Having the seal. This sign is generally supposed to be the sign of the cross. In the East, it was the custom to impress some indelible mark upon the soldiers. This sign amongst the ancient Christians was used on every occasion. Calnet.

VER. 3. Hurt not the earth, &c. Some understand Christ himself, who gives his commands in this manner to the angels; others, an angel of a higher rank or 3 Saying: Hurt not the earth, nor the sea, nor the trees, till we seal the servants of our God in their foreheads.

4 And I heard the number of them that were sealed, an hundred forty-four thousand sealed, of all the tribes of the children of Israel.

5 Of the tribe of Juda, twelve thousand sealed: Of the tribe of Ruben, twelve thousand sealed: Of the tribe of Gad, twelve thousand sealed:

6 Of the tribe of Aser, twelve thousand sealed: Of the tribe of Nephtali, twelve thousand sealed: Of the tribe of Manasses, twelve thousand sealed:

7 Of the tribe of Simeon, twelve thousand sealed: Of the tribe of Levi, twelve thousand sealed: Of the tribe of Issachar, twelve thousand sealed:

8 Of the tribe of Zabulon, twelve thousand sealed: Of the tribe of Joseph, twelve thousand sealed: Of the tribe of Benjamin, twelve thousand sealed.

9 After this I saw a great multitude, which no man could number, of all nations, and tribes, and peoples, and tongues: standing before the throne, and in the sight of the Lamb, clothed with white robes, and palms in their hands:

10 And they cried with a loud voice, saying: Salvation to our God, who sitteth upon the throne, and to the Lamb.

11 And all the angels stood round about the throne, and about the ancients, and about the four living creatures: and they fell before the throne upon their faces, and adored God,

12 Saying: Amen. Benediction and glory, and wisdom, and thanksgiving, honour, and power, and strength to our God for ever and ever. Amen.

13 And one of the ancients answered and said to me: Who are these that are clothed in white robes, and whence are they come?

14 And I said to him: My lord, thou knowest. And he said to me: These are they who are come out of great order.—Till we seal the servants of our God in their foreheads, which may be expounded, let not persecutions and trials come upon them till they are strengthened by the Spirit and grace of God, with which S. Paul sometimes says the servants of God are signed and sealed. See 2 Cor. i. 22; Eph. i. 13. He alludes to the passages of Ezech. (chap. ix. 4.) where God bids an angel mark with the letter Thau the foreheads of those who should not be hurt by the judgments that were to fall upon Jerusalem; so God would protect the faithful Christians, who believed and put their trust in Christ crucified, and who from the first ages, in testimony of this faith, used to sign themselves by making the sign of the cross on their foreheads, of which the letter Thau was a figure or resemblance. See Tertul. lib. de Corona Militis.—Wi.

VER. 4. I heard the number of them that were sealed. By these determinate numbers need only be understood a great number of Jews converted and saved, though much greater was the number of the saved taken from among the Gentiles of all nations, of which it is said, I saw a great multitude, which no man could number, &c. Wi.—The number of one hundred and forty-four thousand is not to be taken in a literal and strict sense, but to express in general terms the great number of the elect; for it appears that the tribe of Dan, which certainly must have produced some elect, is not mentioned, and the tribe of Joseph is put in lieu of that of Ephraim: so that if it be supposed that these numbers must be taken literally, the tribe of Joseph would have produced a double number to that of any other tribe, since Manasses was his son, and the tribe of Dan would have produced none. Ven. Bede.

VER. 10. Salvation to our God; i. e. our salvation is from God, to whom be praise for ever, Amen, benediction, or blessings, thanksgiving, &c. Wi.

VER. 14. White in the blood of the Lamb. That is, they have been cleansed and purified from sin, by the death, merits, and grace of Christ crucified. Wi.—The whole of this verse must be understood in a mystical sense, for we are said to make our garments white in the blood of the Lamb, when we enter into his Church by baptism, or wash away our sins by penance or martyrdom. Calnet.

tribulation, and have washed their robes, and have made them white in the blood of the Lamb.

15 Therefore they are before the throne of God, and serve him day and night in his temple; and he that sitteth on the throne, shall dwell over them.

16 * They shall not hunger nor thirst any more, neither shall the sun fall on them, nor any heat.

17 For the Lamb, which is in the midst of the throne, shall rule them, and shall lead them to the fountains of the waters of life, and God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes.

CHAP. VIII.

The seventh seal is opened: the angels with the seven trumpets.

AND when he had opened the seventh seal, there was silence in heaven, as it were for half an hour.

2 And I saw seven angels standing in the presence of God: and to them were given seven trumpets.

3 And another angel came, and stood before the altar, having a golden censer: and there was given to him much incense, that he should offer of the prayers of all saints upon the golden altar, which is before the throne of God.

4 And the smoke of the incense of the prayers of the saints ascended up before God, from the hand of the angel.

5 And the angel took the censer, and filled it with the fire of the altar, and cast it on the earth, and there were thunderings, and voices, and lightnings, and a great earthquake.

* Isa. xlix. 10.

VER. 15. Therefore they are before the throne of God . . . in his temple; i. e. therefore are they now happy in heaven, where the temple was represented to be, as observed before.—He that sitteth on the throne shall dwell, or dwelleth over them. Wi.

VER. 17. *The Lamb, which is in the midst of the throne, God and man, shall rule * them as a shepherd does his flock. By the Greek, And shall lead them unto fountains of living waters; † lit. to the fountains of life of waters; shall bless them with everlasting happiness.* Wi.—He represents the happiness of the saints, under the idea of being exempt from all the wants and evils of this life. For we are not able, according to truth itself, to conceive the happiness that is prepared for us; wherefore we must content ourselves with considering what it is not, rather than what it is. He, nevertheless, seems to compare heaven to a temple or palace, in which we observe ministers and servants all in their proper order, his counselors (if we may be allowed the expression) and friends seated in presence of their Prince, and the souls of the just singing the praises of the Most High. Car.

CHAP. VIII. VER. 1. There was silence in heaven: which is to represent as it were a general consternation, and an expectation of dreadful events at the opening of the seventh seal, and when seven angels stood prepared to sound seven trumpets. Wi.

VER. 3. Stood before the altar, having a golden censer. In the visions is an allusion to the tabernacle and its parts. The altar of perfumes was in the sanctum, hard by the entrance into the sanctum sanctorum, and here the golden altar is said to be before the throne of God. The incense from the censer is said to be the prayers of all the saints, which the angel offered up. The altar seems to signify our Saviour Christ, as the prayers of all the faithful are always made through the merits of Christ, our only chief Mediator or Redeemer. By the fire cast upon the earth, (ver. 5,) is signified the fire of Divine charity, now to be exercised by the ways of justice, to draw persons to their conversion by punishments. Wi.

VER. 7. The first angel sounded, &c. From this place to the eleventh verse of chap. xx. the visions are differently expounded. Some interpret them, without applying them to any particular events, as general comminations, in a mystical and allegorical sense, of the many persecutions which God permits to happen to his Church. Others think that they are all predictions, which shall not happen till a little time before the end of the world, in antichrist's time, after which will follow the general day of judgment, the punishment of the wicked, and the reward of the just. But there are others, both ancient and later writers, as in particular Aleazar, the bishop of Meaux, (Bouquet,) Père Allenan, to whom we may add among the Protestants, Dr. Hammond, whom the bishop of Meaux calls the most learned of 6 And the seven angels who had the seven trumpets, prepared themselves to sound the trumpet.

7 And the first angel sounded the trumpet, and there was made hail, and fire mingled with blood, and it was cast on the earth, and the third part of the earth was burnt up, and the third part of the trees was burnt up, and all green grass was burnt up.

8 And the second angel sounded the trumpet: and as it were a great mountain, burning with fire, was cast into the sea, and the third part of the sea became blood;

9 And the third part of those creatures died which had life in the sea, and the third part of the ships was destroyed.

10 And the third angel sounded the trumpet, and a great star fell from heaven, burning as it were a torch, and it fell on the third part of the rivers, and upon the fountains of waters:

11 And the name of the star is called Wormwood: and the third part of the waters became wormwood: and many men died of the waters, because they were made bitter.

12 And the fourth angel sounded the trumpet, and the third part of the sun was smitten, and the third part of the moon, and the third part of the stars, so that the third part of them was darkened, and a third part of the day shined not, and of the night in like manner.

13 And I beheld, and heard the voice of one eagle flying through the midst of heaven, saying with a loud voice: Woe, woe, woe to the inhabitants of the earth, by all the English Protestants. According to the interpretations which these writers have followed, these predictions of St. John (except the last persecution, when the devil shall be let loose, chap. xx. 7, in the time of the great antichrist) have already happened in the three first ages, during the persecutions of the heathen emperors, as I shall briefly take notice. Hail therefore, and fire, blood, falling of stars, &c., some look upon as mystical representations, to signify that a great many trials and persecutions shall happen to the good, and a great many punishments and chastisements shall fall upon the wicked; with this grand difference, that the sufferings of the good shall be short and momentary, and their reward a crown of endless glory; but the wicked, if any of them escape punishments in this world, can never escape eternal torments with the devils in the next. 2. It is also a very common opinion, that all these disasters shall happen in a great measure literally about antichrist's time, a very short time before the end of the world. 3. Others apply all these events to the judgments which God's justice exercised either upon the Jews, in the time of Trajan and Adrian, or upon the heathen Roman emperors, and upon the pagan city of Rome, for persecuting the servants of God. Wi.—As these angels with their trumpets, according to Pastorini, denote the sufferings of the Church during the seven ages that it lasts, it may not be improper to point out the time, according to his opinion, when each angel sounded the trumpet. Thus the first trumpet denotes the persecutions of the first three centuries, in which the Christians suffered death by the sword, (denoted by blood,) by being stoned, (denoted by the hail,) and by fire, when the third part of the trees were burnt, that is, the third part of the clergy were destroyed. Pas.

VER. 8. The great mountain denotes the heresy of Arius, which caused the greatest troubles in the Church, and destroyed many churches, which are here denoted by the ships. Pas.

VER. 10. A great star fell. The bishop of Meaux thinks this agrees very well to Cochebas, or Barcochebas, who in Adrian's time pretended to be the true Messiah of the Jews; his name also signifying a star. He was the chief cause of those wars, and of the utter destruction of the Jews. Wi.—The third trumpet points out to us the punishment that falls upon the Roman empire, in its destruction by the northern nations. These people spread themselves over the third part of the rivers and provinces of ancient Rome. The star is called Wormwood, from the bitter calamities and miseries which they inflicted on the Roman empire. Pas.

VER. 12. The third part of the sun was smitten. Here we behold a noble figure of the Church, which whilst in its most flourishing state, like the sun, is suddenly obscured, and a third part extinguished by the heresy and schism of the Greeks, under Photius, which began in 866, and infected all orders of Christians, clergy and laity, princes and individuals, signified by the sun, moon, and stars. Pas.

VER. 13. The voice of one eagle: in divers Greek copies, of an angel, saying Woe, woe, woe! It is to foretell, in general, greater punishments and miseries. Wi.

reason of the other voices of the three angels, who are yet to sound the trumpet.

CHAP. IX.

Locusts come forth from the bottomless pit: the vision of the army of horsemen.

AND the fifth angel sounded the trumpet: and I saw a star fall from heaven upon the earth, and to him was given the key of the bottomless pit.

2 And he opened the bottomless pit: and the smoke of the pit ascended as the smoke of a great furnace: and the sun was darkened, and the air, with the smoke of the pit:

3 And from the smoke of the pit there came out locusts upon the earth, and power was given to them, as the scorpions of the earth have power:

4 And it was commanded them that they should not hurt the grass of the earth, nor any green thing, nor any tree: but only the men who have not the sign of God in their foreheads:

5 And it was given to them that they should not kill them; but that they should torment them five months: and their torment was as the torment of a scorpion when he striketh a man.

• Isa. li. 19; Osee x. 8; Luke xxiii. 30.

CHAP. IX. VER. 1. The fifth angel . . . and I saw a star, &c. This again may be to represent the confusion of all things in antichrist's time; or it may signify the fall and apostacy of great and learned men from the Christian faith. Wi.—Here is a description of the rise and progress of the reformation. This trumpet begins with announcing to us the fall of a star from heaven; a very just emblem of the apostacy of Luther, who in quality of a priest and religious man is styled a star, but renouncing his faith and vows, may truly be said to have fallen from heaven upon the earth. Past. hic.—To him (i. e. to the angel, not to the fallen star) was given the key of the bottomless pit, which properly signifies hell. Wi.

VER. 2. And the smoke, &c. Luther and his followers propagated and defended their new doctrines with such heat and violence, as to occasion every where seditions and insurrections, which they seemed to glory in. Luther openly boasted of it. "You complain," said he, "that by our gospel the world is become more tumultuous: I answer, God be thanked for it; these things I would have so to be, and woe to me if such things were not."—The sun was darkened, &c. The light of faith, which is the word of God, may well be represented by the sun, according to that of Psal. cxviii. 105, "Thy word, O Lord, is a lamp to my feet, and a light to my paths." By the sun, therefore, and air being darkened, we are to understand faith and morality obscured and perverted by the novel doctrines of the reformers. Past. hic.

VER. 3. There came out locusts; devils, in antichrist's time, when the chief devil, Abaddon, the destroyer, shall be as it were let loose. Others, by locusts, understand the Goths and those barbarous people that made an irruption into the Roman empire, in the time of Decius, about an. 250. Others again, by locusts, understand heretics, and especially those heretics that sprang from the Jews, and with them denied the Divinity of our Saviour Christ, as Theodotus, Praxeas, Noetus, Paul of Samosata, Sabellius, Arius, &c. These were the great enemies of Christian religion, and instruments of the devil: they tormented and infected the souls of men, stinging them like scorpions with the poison of their heresies. They had power for five months, by which is signified for a short term, but had no power to hurt those who were sealed with the seal of God in their foreheads. God protected, at least from sin, his faithful servants. With this fifth trumpet ended the first of the three woes, as we are told ver. 12. Wi.—The locusts are commonly understood of heretics. They are not able to hurt the green tree; that is, such as have a lively faith, working by charity; but only the reprobate. The latter are represented as prepared to battle, as being ever ready to contend: they wear counterfeit gold on their heads, for all is but pretence and fiction; in shape they are as men, in smoothness of speech as women; in fury and rage against all that opposes them, as lions; their breasts and hearts are as hard as iron; they are full of noise and shuffling; the sting of their pestiferous doctrine is worse than that of a scorpion; but their reign is generally but for a short time. Ch.—With very great propriety may the locusts here mentioned be understood of the first reformers, not only on account of their rapacity, but also for their number. Luther was their leader, by allowing every one to be his own interpreter of Scripture, the effects of which we have described by Dudithius, a learned Protestant divine, in his epistle to Beza. "What sort of people are our Protestants, straggling to and fro, and carried about with every wind of doctrine, sometimes to this side, and sometimes to that? You may, perhaps, know what their sentiments in matters of religion are to-day; but you can never certainly tell what they will be to-morrow. In what article of religion do these churches agree, which have cast off the bishop of Rome? Examine all of them from top to bottom, and you will scarce find one thing affirmed by one, which is not immediately condemned by another for wicked doctrine." Past. hic.

6 * And in those days men shall seek death, and shall not find it: and they shall desire to die, and death shall fly from them.

7 ^b And the shapes of the locusts were like unto horses prepared for battle: and on their heads were as it were crowns like gold: and their faces as the faces of men.

8 And they had hair as the hair of women, and their teeth were as the teeth of lions:

9 And they had breastplates, as it were breastplates of iron, and the sound of their wings was as the sound of chariots of many horses running to battle:

10 And they had tails like unto scorpions, and stings were in their tails: and their power was to hurt men five months: and they had over them

11 A king, the angel of the bottomless pit: whose name, in Hebrew, is Abaddon; and in Greek, Appollyon; in Latin, Exterminans.

12 One woe is past, and behold there come two woes more hereafter.

13 And the sixth angel sounded the trumpet: and I heard a voice from the four horns of the golden altar, which is before the eyes of God, b Wisd. xvi. 9.

VER. 7. And the shapes of the locusts. We now come to the description of these locusts, which expresses the spirit of sedition and rebellion that animated the reformers and their proselytes. Luther proclaimed himself the leader in this as well as in other articles of the new discipline: see his works, particularly Contrastum Ecclesie et falsò nominatum ordinem Episcoporum, lib. contra Sylvest. Priores, De Seculari Potestate et Contra Rusticos, &c.—And on their heads, &c. These crowns show clearly their general spirit of independency; and their faces being as the faces of men, indicate the presumption with which they announced themselves as teachers of orthodox and holy doctrine. Past. hic.

VER. 8. And they had hair as the hair of women. This latter allusion, unhappily for the sectaries, betrays too plainly their sensual disposition towards that sex, their shameful doctrine on that score, and the scandalous example of their practice. Luther, in despite of a vow he had solemnly made to God of observing continency, married; and married a nun, equally bound as himself to that sacred religious promise! But, as S. Jerom says, "it is rare to find a heretic that loves chastity." Luther's example had indeed been anticipated by Carlostadius, a priest and ringleader of the Sacramentarians, who had married a little before; and it was followed by most of the heads of the reformation. Zuinglius, a priest, and chief of that sect which bore his name, took a wife. Bucer, a religious man of the order of S. Dominic, became a Lutheran, left his cloister, and married a nun. Oecolampadius, a Brigittin monk, became Zuinglian, and also married. Cranmer, archbishop of Canterbury, had also his wife. Peter Martyr, a canon regular, embraced the doctrine of Calvin; but followed the example of Luther, and married a nun. Ochin, general of the Capuchins, became a Lutheran, and also married. Beza, the most celebrated minister in the Calvinistic party, being asked in his old age, by an intimate acquaintance of his, (Deshayes, governor of Montargis,) what was the leading reason which connected him so closely with the Calvinists? Beza called in his mistress, a beautiful young girl who lived with him, and said: "That is the principal reason which convinces me of the excellence of my religion." Marsollier's Life of S. Francis of Sales, book 3.—Thus the principal leaders in the reformation went forth preaching the new gospel, with two marks upon them—apostacy from the faith, and open violation of the most sacred vows. The passion of lust, it is also well known, hurried Henry VIII. of England into a separation from the Catholic Church, and ranked him amongst the reformers. Past. hic.—Teeth of lions. What is more known than the truth of this representation? Did not the reformers, wherever they got footing, pillage the churches, seize the church possessions, destroy the monasteries, and appropriate to themselves the revenues? Such was the case in Germany, in Holland, in France, in Switzerland, in Scotland, and in England: what a scene of rapine! Let it suffice to say, that in the reign of Henry VIII. were suppressed not less than 645 monasteries, 90 colleges, 110 hospitals, and 2374 chantries and free chapels (Baker's Chron.); the lands, &c. of all which were confiscated to the king. Is not this to devour with lions' teeth? Past. Apoc. 9.

VER. 13. At the sounding of the sixth trumpet, are said to be loosed the four angels bound in the river Euphrates. By these four angels, and the two hundred millions of horsemen, many understand the devils and their instruments, men incited by them in antichrist's time, to make war and persecute the Church of Christ, who shall destroy a third part, that is, a great part of men then in the world. Divers others apply this to the Persians, the successors of the Parthians, who about the middle of the third age, in the time of Valerian, a great persecutor of the Christians, passed the Euphrates, which used to be the bounds of the Roman empire to the east, defeated, took, and kept Valerian prisoner, which by its consequences gave a great stroke to the Roman empire. See the bishop of Meaux, Père Alleman, &c. Wi.

14 Saying to the sixth angel, who had the trumpet : Loose the four angels, who are bound in the great river Euphrates.

15 And the four angels were loosed, who were prepared for an hour, and a day, and a month, and a year, for to kill the third part of men.

16 And the number of the army of horsemen was twenty thousand times ten thousand. And I heard the number of them.

17 And thus I saw the horses in the vision : and they who sat on them, had breastplates of fire, and hyacinth, and of brimstone, and the heads of the horses were as the heads of lions : and from their mouths proceeded fire, and smoke, and brimstone.

18 And by these three scourges was the third part of men killed, by the fire, and by the smoke, and by the brimstone, which issued out of their mouths.

19 For the power of the horses is in their mouths, and in their tails. For, their tails are like to serpents, having heads ; and with them they do hurt.

20 And the rest of the men, who were not slain by these scourges, have not done penance for the works of their hands, that they should not adore devils, and idols of gold, and silver, and brass, and stone, and wood, which neither can see, nor hear, nor walk :

21 Neither have they done penance for their murders, nor for their sorceries, nor for their fornication, nor for their thefts.

CHAP. X.

The cry of a mighty angel : he gives John a book to eat.

AND I saw another mighty angel come down from heaven clothed with a cloud, and a rainbow upon his head, and his face was as the sun, and his feet as pillars of fire :

2 And he had in his hand a little book, open : and he set his right foot upon the sea, and his left foot upon the land :

a Dan. ii. 7.

VER. 15. And the four angels were loosed. This seems to indicate the moment in which Satan himself is loosed from the abyss of hell, where, as we shall see, Apoc. xx. 2, he was chained up for a thousand years. This is the time of antichrist, whose coming, as S. Paul says, is according to the working of Satan, 2 Thess. ii. 9.

VER. 17. And thus I saw the horses in the vision. The horsemen appeared to S. John with breastplates of fire, and of hyacinth, and of brimstone. By this expression is indicated the firing of carbines, or such firearms as cavalry use, which are applied to the breast when shot off. S. John took the fire that issued out of the muskets to come from the horsemen's breasts, on which the muskets rested, and so thought the horsemen had breastplates of fire. The prophet here even describes to us the composition of gunpowder, with its three ingredients, viz. brimstone or sulphur, fire or charcoal, and hyacinth or saltpetre ; because saltpetre, when set on fire, emits a flame of a fine purple colour, similar to the colour of the hyacinth stone. Here then we see revealed to S. John both the composition and use of gunpowder, to which he and all mankind at that time were strangers. Then it is said : And the heads of the horses, &c. Here is pointed out the artillery of the army, or cannon. He saw in this vision the whole army drawn up at a distance, and the artillery placed upon a line with the cavalry. He seemed to confound the cannon with the horses, and the cannons' mouths with the mouths of the horses, as the height of both from the ground is nearly the same. He describes the appearances as he saw in the vision, not the reality.

VER. 19. For the power of the horses. The power of the imagined horses or real cannon, lying in their mouths and in their tails, signifies that the mischievous power of the cannon is directed to the object by their mouths, but takes its birth in the tail or breech of the cannon, where the charge is lodged : whence the cannon's breech is here compared to the serpent's head, which contains its venom. Past. hic.

CHAP. X. VER. 4. And when the seven thunders had, &c. S. John is not permitted to write, but ordered to seal up the things which the seven thunders had spoken ; which circumstance seems to insinuate that the things spoken by the seven thunders were seven particulars of antichrist's persecution, as the word thunder is generally used in the Apocalypse to denote some disaster ; and these seven particulars being most dreadful and severe, the Almighty chose to have

3 And he cried out with a loud voice, as when a lion roareth. And when he had cried out, seven thunders uttered their voices.

4 And when the seven thunders had uttered their voices, I was about to write : and I heard a voice from heaven saying to me : Seal up the things which the seven thunders have spoken : and write them not.

5 *And the angel, which I saw standing upon the sea, and upon the land, lifted up his hand to heaven :

6 And he swore by him that liveth for ever and ever, who created heaven, and the things which are therein ; and the earth, and the things which are therein ; and the sea, and the things which are therein : That time shall be no more :

7 But that in the days of the voice of the seventh angel, when he shall begin to sound the trumpet, the mystery of God shall be finished, as he hath declared by his servants, the prophets.

8 And I heard a voice from heaven speaking to me again, and saying : Go, and take the book, that is open, from the hand of the angel standing upon the sea, and upon the land.

9 And I went to the angel, saying unto him, that he should give me the book. And he said to me : *Take the book and devour it : and it shall make thy belly bitter, but in thy mouth it shall be sweet as honey.

10 And I took the book from the hand of the angel, and devoured it : and it was in my mouth sweet as honey : and when I had devoured it, my belly was bitter :

11 And he said to me : Thou must prophesy again to nations, and peoples, and tongues, and to many kings.

CHAP. XI.

He is ordered to measure the temple : the two witnesses.

AND there was given me a reed like unto a rod, and it was said to me : Rise, and measure the temple of God, and the altar, and them that adore in it.

b Ezech. i. 1.

them sealed up, or kept concealed, lest the foreknowledge of them should too much terrify and damp the human mind.

VER. 5, 6. The angel . . . swore . . . that time shall be no more. This seems to favour very much the exposition of those interpreters that think that all these things are not to be fulfilled till some short time before the end of the world. Wi.

VER. 7. Declared. Lit. evangelized, to signify the good tidings, agreeable to the gospel, of the final victory of Christ, and of that eternal life which should be the reward of the temporal sufferings of the servants of God. Ch.

VER. 9, 10. Take the book, and devour it. See Ezech. ii. and iii. It was sweet in my mouth ; I was delighted to read and hear the victories and glory of God's faithful servants ; but it became bitter in my belly, when I considered the judgments of God upon so many sinners, who by their own wilful blindness were lost for eternity. Wi.—This mysterious book, presented to S. John precisely between the sound of the sixth and seventh trumpet, or rather between the irruption announced at the sound of the sixth trumpet, and the persecution which is then to follow and to precede the sound of the seventh trumpet, appears to represent the book of the gospel, which shall be given to the Jews at the end of the sixth age of the Church. This book will be then to them full of sweetness, because they will see in it the tender love of Jesus Christ ; but at the same time it will cause bitterness, because they will see in it with grief their infidelity and that of their fathers. V.

CHAP. XI. VER. 1. The apostle is ordered to measure the temple. Two prophets are promised, to teach mankind. They are put to death, and in three days and a half after, they are raised to life, and ascend to heaven. A great earthquake follows. The seventh angel sounds the trumpet. The elders give thanks to God.—Measure the temple, &c. This is to signify that the Divine Providence would always protect his faithful servants, who are called the temple of God ; (1 Cor. iii. 17, and 2 Cor. vi. 16 ;) but by the outward court not to be measured, because it is given to the Gentiles, &c. (ver. 2.) is commonly understood idolaters, infidels, heretics, who are not in the temple of God, nor in his Church. It is an allusion to the Jewish temple, and the different divisions of it, the Gentiles not being permitted to enter into the temple itself, but only into that outward part called the court of the Gentiles.

2 But the court, which is without the temple, cast out, and measure it not, because it is given to the Gentiles, and the holy city they shall tread under foot forty-two months:

3 And I will give to my two witnesses, and they shall prophesy a thousand two hundred sixty days, clothed in sackcloth.

4 These are the two olive-trees, and the two candlesticks, standing before the Lord of the earth.

5 And if any man would hurt them, fire shall come out of their mouths, and shall devour their enemies: and if any man would hurt them, in this manner must he be killed.

6 These have power to shut heaven, that it rain not in the days of their prophecy: and they have power over waters to turn them into blood, and to strike the earth with all plagues as often as they will.

7 And when they shall have finished their testimony, the beast, that ascendeth out of the abyss, shall make war against them, and shall overcome them, and kill them.

8 And their bodies shall lie in the streets of the great city, which spiritually is called Sodom, and Egypt, where also their Lord was crucified.

9 And they of the tribes, and peoples, and tongues, and nations, shall see their bodies for three days and a half: and shall not suffer their bodies to be laid in sepulchres.

10 And the inhabitants of the earth shall rejoice over them, and make merry: and shall send presents one to another, because these two prophets tormented them that dwelt upon the earth.

11 And after three days and a half, the spirit of life from God entered into them. And they stood upon their feet, and great fear fell upon them that saw them.

12 And they heard a great voice from heaven, saying to them: Come up hither. And they went up into heaven in a cloud: and their enemies saw them.

13 And at that hour there was a great earthquake, and the tenth part of the city fell: and there were slain in the earthquake, names of men seven thousand; and the rest were cast into a fear, and gave glory to the God of heaven.

14 The second woe is past: and behold the third woe will come quickly.

15 And the seventh angel sounded the trumpet: and there were great voices in heaven, saying: The kingdom of this world is become our Lord's and his Christ's, and he shall reign for ever and ever: Amen.

16 And the four and twenty ancients, who sit on their seats in the sight of God, fell upon their faces and adored God, saying:

17 We give thee thanks, O Lord God Almighty, who art, and who wast, and who art to come: because thou hast taken thy great power, and thou hast reigned.

18 And the nations were angry, and thy wrath is come, and the time of the dead to be judged, and to render a

VER. 2. *The holy city they shall tread under foot forty-two months. That is, Gentiles and Jews shall be permitted to persecute the Church and the faithful servants of God; but only for a short time, expressed by forty-two months, as elsewhere by twelve hundred and sixty days, and also by a time, and times, and half a time, which, as S. Jerom observes, is for a year, and two years, and half a year, which three different ways of speaking by years, by months, and by days, are only to signify that God never permits his faithful to be under any violent persecution for any long time. Wi.

VER. 3. My two witnesses . . . shall prophesy twelve hundred and sixty days. It is a very common interpretation, that by these two witnesses must be understood Henoch and Elias, who are to come before the end of the world. It is true this is what we read in several of the ancient fathers, inasmuch, that Dr. Wells, in his paraphrase, calls it the "consent of the primitive fathers," and in his notes says, it is of "unexceptionable authority." This opinion (at least as to Elias) is grounded on those words of the prophet Malachi, (chap. iv. 5,) Behold, I will send you Elias, the prophet, before the coming of the great and dreadful day of the Lord; and also on the words of our Saviour Christ, (Matt. xvii. 11,) where he tells his disciples: Elias indeed shall come, and restore all things. But I cannot say that the consent of the fathers is so unanimous as to Henoch: for we find by S. Hilary, that some thought Jeremy was to come with Elias, and he himself thought that with Elias would come Moses. See his commentary on Matt. p. 710, nov. edit. Secondly, allowing it a received opinion that Henoch and Elias are again to come before the day of judgment, yet it is not the constant doctrine of the ancient Fathers, that by these two witnesses in this place of the Apocalypse, must be understood Henoch and Elias. S. Cyprian expounds it of two sorts of martyrs for the Catholic faith; to wit, they who suffered death, and others who only suffered imprisonment, loss of goods, and the like. Others expound it of the testimonies concerning Christ and his Church, of which some are in the Old Testament, some in the New. To these we must join all those interpreters who expound all the visions and predictions in the Apocalypse, till the 20th chapter, of the persecutions raised by the Jews; or by the heathens against the Church, which have already happened. Of these, both as to ancient Fathers and later interpreters, see Alcazar in his Prolegomena, note 6, p. 33, and note 12, p. 48. Wi. — Two witnesses. It is commonly understood of Henoch and Elias, Ch.

VER. 5. And if any man would hurt them, &c. In this and the following verse are expressed the miraculous powers with which the two witnesses will be invested. These powers will be necessary to enable them to prove the truth of their doctrine. Every messenger who appears with a commission from God, is always furnished with means to prove it. . . . Every new teacher consequently, who becomes destitute of this sanction, can claim no credit, but is only to be considered as an impostor. Past.

VER. 7. The beast, &c. Antichrist, impelled by Satan, shall kill them. Past.

VER. 8. Their bodies shall lie in the streets. It is what has often happened to the bodies of the martyrs, and may happen to Henoch and Elias, for three days and a half, for a short time. — The great city. Some understand any city where Christians are persecuted. Others by the following words, where also their Lord was crucified, will needs have to be understood Jerusalem, which they hold shall be rebuilt in the time of antichrist, and where by him shall be put to death Henoch and Elias. Wi. — City; Jerusalem, which it is supposed will be the residence of antichrist, and filled with a great concourse of people. Menochius.

VER. 11. The spirit of life from God entered into them, &c. It is an allusion to a vision in the prophet Ezechiel, chap. xxxvii. Wi.

VER. 14. These visions belonged to the second woe, and the third woe is at hand. Wi. — Second woe; the persecution of antichrist. — Third woe, or the day of judgment, is near at hand. Past.

VER. 15. The seventh angel, &c. The saints and blessed spirits in heaven are represented praising God with loud voices, at the approaching of the kingdom of God; some understand at the end and consummation of the wicked world, after the destruction of antichrist, when the blessed shall reign in heaven: but others expound this of the triumph of the Christian faith and Church, when the providence of God putting an end to the persecutions against the Christian religion, by the miserable end of Dioclesian, Maximian, Maxentius, &c., made the kingdom of this world (the powerful Roman empire) become the kingdom of our Lord, by his raising Constantine the Great to the empire, and under him making the faith of Christ triumph over all its persecutors and adversaries. Wi.

* V. 2, &c. Atrium autem quod est foris, ῥὴν αὐτὴν ἔξωθεν, not ἔσωθεν, as in some MSS. — Dr. Wells, when he tells us, on the third verse of this chapter, that the consent of the primitive Church and their unexceptionable authority, require that by the two witnesses we understand Henoch and Elias, seems to be convinced of it by the authority (as he imagines) of Dr. Grabe. This we find by his own words (p. 79:) "I shall here," saith he, "adjoin a note of the late most learned and pious divine, Dr. Grabe, in reference to this matter, in a passage of S. Irenæus, l. 5, c. 5. It is note 4, in p. 405, Oxon. edit., and runs thus in the doctor's own words: Disputationem de loco in quem Deus transtulerit et huc usque viventes conservavit Enochum et Eliam, Augustinus indicavit ad fidem non pertinere, at enim hic Irenæus doccat Apostolorum discipulos et (N. B.) auditores dixisse, &c. And the note in Dr. Wells ends with these words: Plures alios legendos notes licet. After this Dr. W. adds: I have taken the pains to transcribe all these citations, that the reader may see how generally the Fathers do agree in this matter. And the same Dr. Wells a little after: Whereupon, saith he, the good doctor (Grabe) adds in reference to himself: mihi parum tutum videtur aliter nunc sentire. And had all others the like due esteem for the Fathers, and the like modest opinion of themselves, there would quickly be taken away that great and unhappy difference of opinions, which is now in the Church, as to points of religion." I wish, no less than Dr. Wells, that all others had the like due esteem of the Fathers, and the like modest opinion of themselves as the author of this note, and he who writ, mihi parum tutum videtur aliter nunc sentire. By such dispositions of submission to the doctrine delivered or witnessed by the consent of the primitive Fathers, might be quickly taken away the unhappy differences in points of religion betwixt us, and all pretended reformers; who, by setting up their private judgment against the authority of the Catholic Church, have brought in these differences. Luther led the way: I care not, said he, if a thousand Cyprians, a thousand Augustines, are against me, &c. But I am fully persuaded that Dr. W. did not know that all this Latin note, with the citations of

CHAP. XII.

The vision of the woman clothed with the sun; and of the great dragon, her persecutor.

AND there appeared a great wonder in heaven: a woman clothed with the sun, and the moon under her feet, and on her head a crown of twelve stars:

2 And she being with child, cried travailing in birth, and was in pain to be delivered.

3 And there appeared another wonder in heaven: and behold, a great red dragon, having seven heads and ten horns, and on his heads seven diadems,

4 And his tail drew the third part of the stars of heaven, and cast them to the earth; and the dragon stood before the woman, who was ready to be delivered, that, when she should be delivered, he might devour her son.

5 And she brought forth a man child, who was to rule all nations with an iron rod: and her son was taken up to God, and to his throne:

6 And the woman fled into the wilderness, where she had a place prepared by God, that there they should feed her a thousand two hundred and sixty days.

7 And there was a great battle in heaven: Michael and his angels fought with the dragon, and the dragon fought, and his angels:

8 And they prevailed not, neither was their place found any more in heaven.

9 And that great dragon was cast out, the old serpent, who is called the devil, and Satan, who seduceth the whole world, and he was cast forth unto the earth, and his angels were thrown down with him.

10 And I heard a loud voice in heaven, saying: Now is come salvation, and strength, and the kingdom of our God, and the power of his Christ: because the accuser of our brethren is cast forth, who accused them before our God day and night.

11 And they overcame him by the blood of the Lamb, and by the word of their testimony, and they loved not their lives unto death.

12 Therefore rejoice, O ye heavens, and you that dwell therein. Woe to the earth, and to the sea, because the devil is come down unto you, having great wrath, knowing that he hath but a short time.

13 And after the dragon saw that he was cast unto the earth, he persecuted the woman, who brought forth the man child:

14 And there were given to the woman, two wings of a great eagle, that she might fly into the desert to her place, where she is nourished for a time, and times, and half a time, from the face of the serpent.

15 And the serpent cast out of his mouth, after the woman, water, as it were a river; that he might cause her to be carried away by the river.

16 And the earth helped the woman, and the earth opened her mouth, and swallowed up the river, which the dragon cast out of his mouth.

17 And the dragon was angry against the woman: and went to make war with the rest of her seed, which keep the commandments of God, and have the testimony of Jesus Christ.

18 And he stood upon the sand of the sea.

the Fathers, and with those words upon them, (mihi parum tutum videtur aliter nunc sentire), are not the words of the learned and pious divine, Dr. Grabe, but are found word for word in the third note of Franciscus Feuardentin, in his Paris edition of S. Irenæus, an. 1576, p. 322, from whence they were taken above a hundred years after, by Dr. Grabe. Had Dr. W. taken notice that they were the words of so warm an adversary of the pretended reformation as Feuardentin, I doubt whether he would have given such high commendations on the true author, with an N. B. on those words of Feuardentin, mihi parum tutum videtur, &c. But I am glad that Dr. Grabe and Dr. Wells are of the same judgment with the author of the note.

CHAP. XII. VER. 1. A woman clothed with the sun, and the moon under her feet. By this woman, interpreters commonly understand the Church of Christ, shining with the light of faith, under the protection of the Sun of justice, Jesus Christ. The moon, the Church, hath all changeable things of this world under her feet, the affections of the faithful being raised above them all.—A woman: the Church of God. It may also, by allusion, be applied to our blessed Lady. The Church is clothed with the sun, that is, with Christ: she hath the moon, that is, the changeable things of the world, under her feet: and the twelve stars with which she is crowned, are the twelve apostles: she is in labour and pain, whilst she brings forth her children, and Christ in them, in the midst of afflictions and persecutions. Ch.—On her head . . . twelve stars, her doctrine being delivered by the twelve apostles and their successors. Wi.

VER. 2. With child, &c., to signify that the Church, even in the time of persecutions, brought forth children to Christ. Wi.

VER. 3. Another wonder in heaven; that is, in the Church of Christ, though revealed to S. John, in the visions, as if they were seen in heaven.—A great red dragon; a fiery dragon, with seven heads and ten horns; i. e. many heads and many horns. By the dragon is generally understood the devil, (see ver. 7 and 9,) and by the heads and horns, kings and princes, who act under him, persecuting the servants of God. Wi.

VER. 4. His tail drew the third part of the stars: a great part of mankind. This is spoken with an allusion to the fall of Lucifer from heaven, with the rebellious angels, driven from thence by S. Michael. Wi.—According to Pastorini, this passage refers to the angels whom Lucifer drew after him by sin to the earth. Menochius interprets it of those bishops and eminent persons who fell under the weight of persecution, and apostatized.—And the dragon stood before the woman, &c. The devil is always ready, as far as God permits him, to make war against the Church and the faithful servants of God. Wi.

VER. 5. A man child; that is, a masculine race of Christians, willing to confess the name of the Lord, and to fight his battles: who, through the merits of Jesus Christ, should triumph over all the attempts of the world. Calmet.

VER. 6. The woman fled into the wilderness. The Church, in the times of persecutions, must be content to serve God in a private manner; but by the Divine Providence, such persecutions never lasted with violence only for a short time, signified by 1260 days, or as the same is expressed here, (ver. 14,) for a time, and times, and half a time, i. e. for a year, and two years, and half a year. Wi.—The Christians were accustomed to fly during the times of persecution into the deserts, to avoid the fury of the pagans. This was done by the greatest saints; and S. Jeron remarks, that it was this which gave rise to the eremitical state of life.

VER. 12. Woe to the earth, &c. Both Pastorini and Calmet refer this woe to the persecution of Dioclesian. The dragon, the devil, is more irritated than ever against the Christians; he therefore stimulates the pagans to exercise their utmost cruelty against them, knowing that a Christian emperor (Constantine) would in a short time extend the reign of Jesus Christ over the whole world.

VER. 14. There were given to the woman two wings of a great eagle. The Church, on account of the severe pressure of the persecution, obtained from the Almighty a special protection and assistance. Past.

VER. 15. The serpent (the dragon, the devil) cast out of his mouth, &c. He endeavoured to destroy Christian religion; but the earth, that is, the princes of the earth, as God was pleased to turn their hearts, helped to turn away the persecutions. Wi.

VER. 16. And the earth helped the woman. A prince of the earth, Constantine, came to the succour of the Church, and caused the persecution to cease.

VER. 18. And he stood upon the sand of the sea; * i. e. the dragon seemed to be at a stand, to rest a while, not being able to raise any more persecutions. Now as to the time that these things should come to pass, many by seven heads and ten horns understand many powerful, wicked kings, who should persecute the good, especially about antichrist's time. Others apply these predictions to the particular persecutions in the Church by the Jews, and by the heathen emperors in the first three Christian ages before Constantine's time, when idolatry was destroyed, when the face of the Church was changed, became victorious, and publicly triumphed over her former enemies, the heathens; and by the man child, whom God took into his special protection, they will have to be understood Constantine himself. Wi.

* V. 18. Et stetit super arenam maris. The ordinary Greek copies, ἐστῆν, steti, which the Prot. translators followed, beginning chapter 13 with these words, and I stood upon the sand of the sea, as if S. John spoke of himself. But

CHAP. XIII.

Of the beast with seven heads: and of a second beast.

AND I saw a beast coming out of the sea, having seven heads and ten horns, and upon his horns ten diadems, and upon his heads names of blasphemy.

2 And the beast which I saw was like to a leopard, and his feet were as the feet of a bear, and his mouth as the mouth of a lion. And the dragon gave him his own strength, and great power.

3 And I saw one of his heads as it were wounded to death: and his deadly wound was healed. And all the earth was in admiration after the beast.

4 And they adored the dragon, which gave power to the beast: and they adored the beast, saying: Who is like to the beast? and who shall be able to fight with it?

5 And there was given to it a mouth, speaking great things, and blasphemies: and power was given to it to act forty-two months.

6 And he opened his mouth in blasphemies against God, to blaspheme his name, and his tabernacle, and them that dwell in heaven.

7 And it was given to him to make war with the saints, and to overcome them: and power was given him over every tribe, and people, and tongue, and nation:

8 And all that dwell upon the earth adored him: whose names are not written in the book of life of the Lamb which was slain from the beginning of the world.

9 If any man have an ear, let him hear.

Dr. Wells, in his amendments, has corrected the Prot. translation, and restored the reading ἰσάθῃ, stetit, as we find it in the Latin Vulgate. I have reckoned near upon a hundred places in the Apocalypse only, wherein Dr. Wells has preferred those readings in the Greek MSS. which are conformable to our Latin Vulgate.

CHAP. XIII. VER. 1. I saw a beast coming out of the sea. By this first beast several understand antichrist, as S. Iren. l. 5, c. 28, and S. Greg. l. 31, Moral. c. 41. But this is not certain. By the other beast * coming up out of the earth, (ver. 11,) many understand antichrist's false prophet, some famous impostor and magician in antichrist's time, who will do great wonders and signs. The seven heads and ten horns, may again signify a great number of kings and princes, who shall be overcome by antichrist, and submit themselves to him. Wi.—This first beast, with seven heads and ten horns, is probably the whole company of infidels, enemies and persecutors of the people of God, from the beginning to the end of the world. The seven heads are seven kings, that is, seven principal kingdoms or empires; which have exercised, or shall exercise, tyrannical power over the people of God: of these, five were then fallen, viz. the Egyptian, Assyrian, Chaldean, Persian, and Grecian monarchies: one was present, viz. the empire of Rome: and the seventh and the chiefest was to come, viz. the great antichrist and his empire. The ten horns may be understood of ten lesser persecutors. Ch.

VER. 2. The whole of this is by Pastorini applied to the empire of Rome. which was composed of the territories of the three preceding empires, which are represented by Daniel under the figure of these animals. And as the body of the beast was like to a leopard, the centre and capital of the Roman empire under antichrist will be the Grecian empire, denoted by the leopard, of which Constantinople became the capital. Various interpreters explain the whole of this vision by different ways. A.

VER. 3. One of his heads, &c. Some understand this of the mortal wound which the idolatry of the Roman empire (signified by the sixth head) received from Constantine: which was as it were healed again by Julian the apostate. Ch.

VER. 6. His tabernacle, &c. That is, his Church, and his saints. Ch.

VER. 8. Slain from the beginning. In the foreknowledge of God; and inasmuch as all mercy and grace, from the beginning, were given in view of his death and passion. Ch.

VER. 11. I saw another beast, &c. He had two horns like those of the Lamb, pretending to imitate Christ by an outward sanctity, and by working strange things. Wi.—This second beast with two horns may be understood of the heathenish priests and magicians, the principal promoters both of idolatry and persecution. Ch.

VER. 12. He executed all the power of the former beast in his sight, or before him, doing great wonders, as Christ foretold should be done by false prophets, (Matt. xxiv. 24.) making even fire by lightning come down in heaven, as the devil was permitted to do in the time of Job. Chap. i.—He caused men to adore tivity: *he that shall kill by the sword, must be killed by the sword. Here is the patience and the faith of the saints.

11 And I saw another beast coming up out of the earth, and he had two horns, like to a lamb's, and he spoke as a dragon.

12 And he executed all the power of the former beast in his sight: and he caused the earth, and them that dwell therein, to adore the first beast, whose deadly wound was healed.

13 And he did great signs, so that he made even fire to come down from heaven upon the earth in the sight of men.

14 And he seduced them that dwell on the earth, by the signs, which were given him to perform in the sight of the beast, saying to them that dwell on the earth, that they should make an image to the beast, which had the wound by the sword, and lived.

15 And it was given him to give life to the image of the beast, and that the image of the beast should speak: and should cause, that whosoever will not adore the image of the beast, should be slain.

16 And he shall make all, both little and great, rich and poor, freemen and bondmen, to have a mark in their right hand, or in their foreheads.

17 And that no man might buy or sell, but he that hath the mark, or the name of the beast, or the number of his name.

18 Here is wisdom. He that hath understanding, let him compute the number of the beast. For it is the

* Gen. ix. 6; Matt. xxvi. 52.

the first beast, whose deadly wound was healed, and the image of the first beast, of antichrist, to be adored, and that no one should buy or sell any thing, unless he had on his forehead, or on his arm, some particular mark, called the character of this false Christ, or antichrist; or his name, or the number of his name, that is, his name which was made up of numeral letters, 666; but, as S. Irenaeus thinks, in Greek letters or characters, as S. John wrote his Revelation in Greek. According to the application made by the bishop of Meaux, &c., by the first beast with seven horns were signified the cruel persecutors of the Church, Dioclesian and other six persecuting emperors, to wit, Maximian Herculeus, Galerius Maximian, Constantius Chlorus, (father to Constantine,) Maxentius, Maximinus, and Licinius. These they look upon to have been the seven heads of the first beast, and by this beast they understand the idolatry of the heathen Roman empire; and by the ten horns, a great many barbarous nations, who in their time made irruptions and pillaged the empire, and afterwards brought destruction to the whole Roman empire, to wit, the Goths, Vandals, and the rest. The resemblances of a leopard, bear, and lion, are introduced with an allusion to what is written by the prophet Daniel. (chap. vii.) meaning the four great empires: by the leopard, that of the Chaldeans; by the bear, that of the Persians; by the lion, that of the Grecians and of Alexander the Great; lastly, that of the Romans, which is not represented by any one beast, but as a compound of the others. When it is said that the beast had received a mortal wound, and was cured again, these interpreters understand the idolatry of the empire, which was in a great measure destroyed by Constantine, but which was again revived and renewed by Julian the apostate. He might well be said to have a mouth speaking great things and blasphemies; but his power lasted only for a short time, signified by forty-two months, though literally he did not reign so long. By the other beast, (ver. 11.) these interpreters, as also Dr. Hammond, understand the philosophers and magicians, with their auguries and pretended oracles of the heathen gods. As to the number of the name of the beast, 666, in these Greek letters χξς, nothing can be produced but mere conjecture. S. Irenaeus; (l. 5, c. 30, p. 371, ed. Feuardentii) says, that according to the testimony of those who had seen S. John, the number of the beast was to be computed by Greek letters. He takes notice that this number of 666 may be found in several names. He produces some examples, and amongst others the word Latinius; of which he says, it may seem very likely that this is the name, because the last of the four empires, which were spoken of by the prophet Daniel, was then extant, and had this name of the empire of the Latins. But, says he, the word Teitan carries with it a greater probability. Yet, he concludes, that such expositions are uncertain, and he will not venture to say that this will be the name. Wi.

VER. 18. Six hundred sixty-six. The numeral letters of his name shall make up this number. Ch.

* V. 1. Though S. Irenaeus, and also S. Greg., (l. 31, Mor. c. 41.) by the first of these two beasts understand antichrist, and others would have antichrist to be meant by one of the two, yet this is not to be looked upon as absolutely certain.

number of a man : and his number is six hundred sixty-six.

CHAP. XIV.

Of the Lamb, and of the virgins that follow him : Of the judgments that shall fall upon the wicked.

AND I saw : and behold a Lamb stood on Mount Sion, and with him a hundred forty-four thousand having his name, and the name of his Father, written in their foreheads.

2 And I heard a voice from heaven, as the voice of many waters, and as the voice of great thunder : and the voice which I heard, was as of harpers, harping on their harps.

3 And they sung as it were a new canticle, before the throne, and before the four living creatures, and the ancients, and no man could say the canticle, but those hundred forty-four thousand, who were purchased from the earth.

4 These are they who were not defiled with women : for they are virgins. These follow the Lamb whithersoever he goeth. These were purchased from among men, the first-fruits to God, and to the Lamb :

not being witnessed by the consent of the primitive Fathers. The ancient Fathers, especially in the exposition of obscure prophecies, many times give us no more than their private opinions, or suspicions and conjectures, as S. Aug. expressly takes notice in this 20th book de Civ. Dei, (c. 19, tom. 7, p. 597, nov. ed.,) where he speaks of antichrist : so that though S. Irenæus had seen S. Polycarp, who was a disciple of S. John the evangelist, yet he delivers us divers things concerning antichrist, which are no more than his private opinions and conjectures, in which others do not agree with him ; as that antichrist shall be of the tribe of Dan ; that he shall sit in the temple of Jerusalem. He was also in an error as to Christ's reign of a thousand years upon the earth with his elect. Arethas, bishop of Cesarea, in Cappadocia, in the sixth age, in his commentary on the Apocalypse, (tom. 6, Bib. Patrum, edit. Colon.,) speaking of this opinion, that some would have the first beast (Apoc. xiii. 1) to be antichrist, and others the second beast, only says, quidam sic accipiunt, &c.

† V. 11. Vidi aliam bestiam, eidon alio thērion. Another wild beast. S. Irenæus calls this second beast armigerum primæ, and takes notice that he is also called in other places of the Apocalypse (chap. xvi. 13, and xix. 20, and xx. 10,) the false prophet, pseudo-propheta, of the first beast. By what is said in this chapter, this second beast must live and act at the same time with the first ; for it is said, ver. 12, that he exercised all the power of the former beast in his sight, ἐνώπιον αὐτοῦ ; and again, ver. 14, that he did wonders in the sight of the first beast, ἐνώπιον τοῦ θηρίου. 2. It is said that this second beast made all that dwell on the earth adore the first beast. 3. That he made all persons make an image to the first beast, that was wounded and cured, and that they should be slain who adored not that image. 4. He caused that all persons should have the character of the first beast, and the number of his name, i. e. of the name of the first beast. All those who hold that the first beast in this chap. is antichrist, who is to come a little before the end of the world, hold in like manner that the second beast is not come, but will also come at the same time ; and that he is to be a famous impostor and false prophet in antichrist's time. But they who hold the first beast not to be antichrist, but to be the idolatry of heathen Rome, by the second beast understand the philosophers and magicians, who were accustomed to raise the indignation of the pagan emperors against Christians. Dr. Hammond did not think it worth taking notice of, that so many writers of the pretended reformation would have the second beast to be a great many popes, whom they affirm to be the famous antichrist. Never was there a more groundless or a more malicious invention, without shadow of authority or reason, and evidently contradictory to both, which I may show as occasion offers, and as far as these short notes will permit. Here I shall only touch upon what relates to that which is said in this chapter. 1. The late reformers, some of them, make the first beast the popish antichrist, (as we may see in the bishop of Meaux, and also in Dr. Wells,) and some affirm this of the second beast. The two beasts are quite different : are they both the popish antichrist? 2. Some of them prove the pope to be the second beast, because the pope's mitre has a resemblance of his two horns : does this deserve an answer? See the bishop of Meaux. 3. Is it not as ridiculous to pretend that by fire coming from heaven, is meant the pope's excommunications? Is not the power of excommunication grounded in S. Paul? Do not the Protestants themselves own, and make use of this power? 4. Those Protestants who tell us the second beast is the popish antichrist, say that the first beast was the state of paganism in the Roman empire. This, as they own, was destroyed before the popes began to be antichrists : how does this agree with what is here said of the second beast, antichrist's armiger, that he exercised all his power in the sight and in the presence of the first beast? 5. How can they pretend that the popes ever ordered all to be slain who would not adore the first beast? (that is, heathen idols, or the images

5 And in their mouth was found no lie : for they are without spot before the throne of God.

6 And I saw another angel flying through the midst of heaven, having the eternal gospel, to preach to them that sit upon the earth, and over every nation, and tribe, and tongue, and people :

7 Saying with a loud voice : Fear the Lord, and give him honour, because the hour of his judgment is come : and adore ye him, who made heaven, and earth, the sea, and the fountains of waters.

8 And another angel followed, saying : She is fallen, she is fallen, that great Babylon : which made all nations drink of the wine of the wrath of her fornication.

9 And the third angel followed them, saying with a loud voice : If any man shall adore the beast, and his image, and receive his mark in his forehead, or in his hand :

10 He also shall drink of the wine of the wrath of God, which is mingled with pure wine, in the cup of his wrath, and he shall be tormented with fire and brimstone in the sight of the holy angels, and in the sight of the Lamb :

11 And the smoke of their torments shall ascend up of heathen gods, of Jupiter, Mars, &c. ;) or who did not bear on his forehead or hand the character, the mark, or the number of some of their heathen gods or heathen emperors? 6. If the second beast be the popish antichrist, all those Protestants have been guilty of a grievous oversight, who have endeavoured to prove the popes antichrist, by finding the number 666 in their names, or in the word Lateinos ; for it is evident by this chapter, (ver. 17,) that the number of the name belongs to the first beast, and not to the second. 7. This contradicts what the Protestants teach with S. Paul, (2 Thess. ii.,) that antichrist is to be the man of sin, who will make himself adored above all that is called or worshipped as God ; whereas, in this place of the Apocalypse, the second beast does not make himself, but the first beast, to be adored. Therefore this second beast is not the popish antichrist. Of this more in the following chapters.

‡ Ibid. Est enim numerus hominis, et numerus ejus sexcenti sexaginta sex, ἀριθμὸς γὰρ ἀνθρώπου ἑστὶ, καὶ ὁ ἀριθμὸς αὐτοῦ χξς. S. Irenæus, (l. 5, c. 30, p. 370,) numerus hominis bestie secundum Græcorum computationem per litteras quæ in eo sunt, sexcentos habebit et sexaginta et sex. Eusebius, (l. 5, Histor. c. 8, ed. Valesii,) citing the words of S. Irenæus, in Greek, p. 172 : οὗτος ὁ ἀριθμὸς τοῦ ὀνόματος τοῦ θηρίου, κατὰ τὴν τῶν ἁλλήλων ψήφον διὰ τῶν ἐν αὐτῷ γραμμάτων ἐμφαίνεται. But he declares it rash and dangerous to affirm any thing : ἡμεῖς οὖν οὐκ ἀποκινύμεθα, &c. As for the name itself, he proposes first εὐθεῖας ; and then of Lateinos says, that valde verisimile est quoniam novissimum, regnum (to wit, of the four kingdoms, in Daniel) hoc habet vocabulum. It is evident he speaks of the empire, not of the Christian Church of Rome. Latini enim sunt qui nunc regnant, sed non in hoc nos gloriabimur. Sed et Teitan . . . omnium nomen, quæ apud nos inveniuntur magis fide dignum est . . . but adds, nos tamen non periclitabimur in eo, nec asseverantes pronuntiabimus, &c. Dr. Wells in a note observes, that Mr. Mede and Mr. Whiston, without sufficient grounds, take notice of this conjecture of S. Irenæus, as favouring their notion of the pope to be antichrist.

CHAP. XIV. VER. 1. Behold a Lamb, by which is divers times represented our Saviour Christ. Wi.

VER. 3. They sung as it were a new canticle. In these visions, after persecutions, are sometimes introduced rejoicings to encourage the servants of God in their sufferings from the wicked world.—No man could say (or sing) the canticle, but those hundred forty-four thousand : by which are signified the elect, who were not defiled with women. Some expound this literally of those who always lived virgins ; others understand all those who lived or died with a pure and clean heart, exempt from the corruption of vices, and of whom it is said, (ver. 5,) that in their mouth was found no lie, and that they were without spot before the throne of God. Wi.

VER. 6, 7. *Another angel, . . saying : Fear the Lord. By this angel are represented the preachers of the gospel, exhorting all men to a true faith and a good life. Wi.

VER. 8. Another angel, . . saying : . . She is fallen, she is fallen, that great Babylon. By Babylon, as observed before, may very probably be signified all the wicked world in general, whom God will punish and destroy after the short time of this mortal life : or may be signified every great city, and perhaps Rome returned to idolatry in the time of antichrist, a little before the end of the world : or may be signified the idolatry of heathen Rome, in the fourth age, when the Christian religion, under Constantine and his successors, began to triumph over paganism, i. e. according to those interpreters followed by Alcazar, Bossuet, P. Alleman, &c. Wi.—It is probable that here by the great Babylon is meant the city of the devil ; that is, the universal society of the wicked : as Jerusalem is taken for the city and Church of God. 19 And the angel put his sharp sickle to the earth, • Joel iii. 13; Matt. xiii. 39.

VER. 13. Blessed are the dead, (all the dead,) who die in the Lord, and not the martyrs only, for their works follow every one. Wi.—It is understood of the martyrs, who die for the Lord. Ch.—For their works follow them. This is said in express contradiction to those who denied the necessity of good works, and maintained the indifference of actions. This seems to have been the doctrine of the Nicolaites and other heretics of those times. Calnet.

VER. 14—20. Like to the Son of man. That is, to our Saviour Christ, sitting on a white cloud, with a crown of gold, and in his hand a sharp sickle. And another angel, desiring of him to do justice, by putting to his sickle, because the harvest of the earth was ripe, dry, and withered; i. e. the wicked, ripe for punishment. The like is again represented by the sickle, which is said to be put to the clusters of the vineyard; and they were cast into the great wine-press, or lake of the wrath of God, into hell, where the blood is said to come out even up to the horses' bridles, for a thousand and six hundred furlongs: a metaphorical way of expressing the exceeding great torments of the wicked in hell. Wi.

* V. 6, 7. I cannot but admire how Dr. W., after his learned modern divines, Mr. Mede and Mr. Whiston, could look in the popish antichrist in so many places on this chapter, as ver. 7, where it is said fear God, the Christians, says he, are forewarned not to fall into any corruptions the visible Church afterwards fell into, particularly popery. According to a great many of our Prot. adversaries, the popes have been the great antichrist ever since the destruction of the heathen Roman emperors in the fourth age, and yet no man ever dreamt of it or suspected it. This invention, which doubtless was suggested by the most subtle adversary of popery, first came, says the bishop of Meaux on the Apocalypse, from the late Manicheans, a sect among the Albigenses, as infamous for their errors as for their manners, (see Nat. Alex. tom. 6, Sec. 11, et 12, p. 490, et tom. 7, Sec. 13, p. 66,) who, among other detestable blasphemies against God, against Jesus Christ and his blessed Mother, taught the people that pope Silvester in Constantine's time was antichrist, and the Church from that time was become a den of thieves, and the harlot in the Apocalypse. I scarce think the reasons they brought will be approved by the writers of the late reformation, inasmuch, said they, as the Church and ministers of the Church were then permitted to receive ecclesiastical benefices and revenues. These heretics were followed in some points by Wycliffe and his disciples; but perhaps, upon a strict examination, they only meant that the pope and bishops taught antichristian doctrine, and so were to be esteemed adversaries to Christ and precursors of antichrist. We may look upon Luther, (though he denied the Apocalypse of S. John to be canonical Scripture,) and the Lutherans and Calvinists, to be the true inventors of this empty and incoherent fable of the popish antichrist, twelve hundred years after the popes had successively one after another been the one, great, and famous antichrist. I cannot think that the learned men among the Protestants believe the popes to be antichrist, especially since time, that discovers what is true as to matters of fact, that are pretended to be foretold, has confuted the conjectures of de Moulin, Jurieux, Mede, Whiston, &c. I must here do justice to divers learned men of the Protestant communion. Grotius, in a letter (epist. 557) to the Protestant John Gerard Vossius, tells him, "that they who did not believe the popes to be antichrist, nevertheless judged it necessary to give such interpretations, for the public good of the Protestant religion." See M^r. de Meaux in his advertisement, num. 1. Of our English Proand gathered the vineyard of the earth, and cast it into the great wine-press of the wrath of God:

20 And the wine-press was trodden without the city, and blood came out of the wine-press, even up to the horses' bridles, for a thousand and six hundred furlongs.

CHAP. XV.

They that have overcome the beast, glorify God. Of the seven angels with the seven vials.

AND I saw another sign in heaven great and wonderful, seven angels having the seven last plagues: for in them is filled up the wrath of God.

2 And I saw as it were a sea of glass mingled with fire, and them that had overcome the beast, and his image, and the number of his name, standing on the sea of glass, having the harps of God:

3 And singing the canticle of Moses, the servant of God, and the canticle of the Lamb, saying: Great and wonderful are thy works, O Lord God Almighty: just and true are thy ways, O King of ages.

4 'Who shall not fear thee, O Lord, and magnify thy name? For thou only art holy: for all nations shall come, and shall adore in thy sight, because thy judgments are manifest.

5 And after these things I saw, and behold, the temple of the tabernacle of the testimony in heaven was opened:

6 And the seven angels came out of the temple, having testants, I have read Dr. Hammond's paraphrase and notes on the second chapter of Thessalonians; and on the Revelation, or Apocalypse, he never pretends that the popes are antichrist. The predictions in S. John, of the beasts, of the fall of Babylon, of the great harlot, he expounds, as fulfilled already, by the destruction of pagan Rome, and of its idolatry, superstitions, auguries, under the heathen emperors, much after the same manner as Alcazar, and as the bishop of Meaux, and other Catholic writers. Mr. Richard Montague, in his Gag, p. 74, writes thus: "Whether the pope be that antichrist, or not, the Church (of England) resolveth not, tendereth it not to be believed any way. Some, I grant, are very peremptory indeed that he is. He, for instance, who wrote and printed it, I am as sure the pope is antichrist, that antichrist spoken of in the Scripture, as that Jesus Christ is God: but they that are so resolute, peremptory, and certain, let them answer for themselves. The Church is not tied, nor any one that I know of, to make good their private imaginations. For myself, I profess ingenuously I am not of opinion that the bishops of Rome personally are that antichrist . . . nor yet that the bishops of Rome successively are that antichrist," &c. He only holds the pope and papists to be antichrists improperly in the sense that S. John says, there are many antichrists. He cites for the same opinion Melancthon and others. Mr. Thorndike, in his Just Weights and Measures, (c. 2,) speaking to these two points, that the pope is antichrist, and papists idolaters: "The truth," says he, "is, they of the Church of Rome have overcharged us, in calling us heretics . . . but they that would have the pope antichrist, and the papists idolaters, have revived it upon them, and taken their revenge beyond the bounds of blameless defence . . . Let them not lead the people by the nose, to believe that they can prove the supposition, which they cannot," &c. The same Mr. Thorndike, in chap. 19, p. 125, &c., shows more at large that their reverencing images in churches is no idolatry. And again, (p. 149,) "having showed, says he, why the Church of Rome cannot be charged with idolatry, I may from hence infer that the pope cannot be antichrist."

CHAP. XV. VER. 1. I saw . . . seven angels, having the seven last plagues. Many by these understand chastisements that will fall upon the wicked a little before the end of the world, and so take these plagues and vials that are poured out, in the next chapter, mostly in a literal sense. Others apply them to different calamities that happened to heathen Rome; but the applications are so different, that they serve to convince us how uncertain they are. Wi.—Here is a new vision, great and wonderful, seven angels holding the figurative symbols of seven plagues. They are called the last, because in them is completed the wrath of God, being inflicted on mankind in the last period of the world, the period of Christianity. The first of these scourges takes place shortly after the commencement of the Christian era, and the seventh puts an end to the world. Past.

VER. 2. I saw . . . a sea of glass, mingled with fire: by which are signified the storms and dangers which they had happily passed: now they are said to be singing the canticle of Moses after he had passed the Red Sea, Cantemus Domino, "Let us sing to the Lord," &c. As Moses was a figure of Christ, and the Israelites of the Christians, so it is now called the canticle of the Lamb. Wi.

VER. 5. And after these things. Here the scene changes, and is carried back to the period of time that immediately precedes the seven plagues. This removal of the scene S. John insinuates by the unusual circumlocution, "after these things the seven plagues, clothed in clean and white linen, and girded about the breasts with golden girdles.

7 And one of the four living creatures gave to the seven angels seven golden vials, full of the wrath of God, who liveth for ever and ever.

8 And the temple was filled with smoke from the majesty of God, and from his power: and no man was able to enter into the temple, till the seven plagues of the seven angels were fulfilled.

CHAP. XVI.

The seven vials are poured out: the plagues that ensue.

AND I heard a great voice out of the temple, saying to the seven angels: Go, and pour out the seven vials of the wrath of God upon the earth.

2 And the first went out, and poured out his vial upon the earth, and there fell a sore and most grievous wound upon the men, who had the mark of the beast; and upon them who adored his image.

3 And the second angel poured out his vial into the sea, and it became as the blood of a dead man: and every living soul died in the sea.

4 And the third poured out his vial upon the rivers, and the fountains of waters, and they became blood.

5 And I heard the angel of the waters, saying: Thou art just, O Lord, who art, and who wast the holy one, who hast judged these things:

6 For they have shed the blood of the saints and prophets, and thou hast given them blood to drink; for they deserved it.

7 And I heard another from the altar, saying: Yea, O Lord God Almighty, true and just are thy judgments.

8 And the fourth angel poured out his vial upon the sun, and it was given to him to afflict men with heat, and fire:

9 And men were scorched with great heat, and they blasphemed the name of God, who hath power over these plagues, neither did they penance to give him glory.

I beheld," and looked on the commencement of this scene. The temple opens, and the seven angels with the seven plagues proceed from the sanctuary to execute the work they are charged with. Past.

VER. 8. The temple was filled with smoke, &c., as in the time of Solomon. 2 Par. vii. Wi.—The vials are given to the angels by one of the four living creatures, that is, by a prophet, because at that time the effects had not happened, but were to happen in time to come, and are therefore announced by way of prophecy; and the temple was filled with smoke, manifesting first the majesty of God, and secondly his power. Pastorini.

CHAP. XVI. VER. 1. I heard a great voice. All commentators seem to agree that the great city mentioned in the 19th verse, is to be understood of Rome, and that the plagues which are here foretold, are denounced against her. Calmet, Pastorini, &c.—Go and pour out the seven vials, &c. According to the exposition followed by the bishop of Meaux, all these seven vials are already past, being punishments and judgments exercised against the heathen emperors, from the time of Valerian even to the time of Julian, at whose death it might be said, (ver. 17,) It is done. Idolatry is destroyed, as to its public worship. Here in particular, by the drying up of the Euphrates, and by the armies of the East, these interpreters understand those of the Persians, who first gave the great shock to the empire in Valerian's time, and by whom afterwards Julian the apostate was defeated and killed. By the great Babylon, they also understand idolatrous Rome; and by the islands and mountains sunk by earthquakes, they understand the destruction of divers kingdoms. According to another interpretation, (which is very common,) all these judgments are to come before the end of the world; and will be in a manner literally executed about antichrist's time. At the first vial, men shall be struck with ulcers and wounds, not unlike to the sixth plague of Egypt. At the second and third vial, the sea and fountains shall be turned into blood, as in Egypt. At the fourth vial shall be excessive scorching heats, tormenting men, and burning every thing for their use. At the fifth vial, darkness, like that of Egypt. At the sixth vial, (ver. 12,) the Euphrates dried up, to open a passage for the armies from the East, to come and join the forces of antichrist. And the three unclean spirits like frogs, may signify devils sent by the dragon, or chief of the devils, to excite the wicked to all manner of unclean abominations. They are here said to be gathered together in a place called Armagedon, perhaps with an allusion to Mageddon, in the tribe of Manasses, where the two kings of Israel,

10 And the fifth angel poured out his vial upon the seat of the beast: and his kingdom became dark, and they gnawed their tongues for pain:

11 And they blasphemed the God of heaven, because of their pains, and wounds, and did not penance for their works.

12 And the sixth angel poured out his vial upon that great river Euphrates: and dried up the water thereof, that a way might be prepared for the kings from the rising of the sun.

13 And I saw from the mouth of the dragon, and from the mouth of the beast, and from the mouth of the false prophet, three unclean spirits like frogs.

14 For they are the spirits of devils working signs, and they go forth unto the kings of the whole earth to gather them to battle against the great day of the Almighty God.

15 * Behold, I come as a thief. Blessed is he that watcheth and keepeth his garments, lest he walk naked, and they see his shame.

16 And he shall gather them together into a place, which is called in Hebrew Armagedon.

17 And the seventh angel poured out his vial into the air, and a great voice came out of the temple from the throne, saying: It is done.

18 And there were lightnings, and voices, and thunders, and there was a great earthquake, such as never hath been since men were upon the earth: such an earthquake, so great.

19 And the great city was made into three parts: and the cities of the Gentiles fell, and great Babylon came in remembrance before God, to give to her the cup of the wine of the indignation of his wrath.

20 And every island fled away, and the mountains were not found.

21 And great hail like a talent came down from heaven

* Mat. xxiv. 43; Luke xli. 39; Supra, lii. 3.

Ochozias and Josias, perished, 4 Kings ix. 21. And they are brought in only to signify a place of a great destruction. See also Zach. 12. 11. At the seventh vial, a voice, It is done, i. e. the reign of the wicked in general, and of antichrist, is at an end. Wi.

VER. 3. And the second. On pouring out the vial, follows the divine judgment. There appears blood, like that of a dead man. This passage, Pastorini is of opinion, alludes to the Arian heresy, which, like blood, flowed in vigorous circulation whilst in health and strength, gradually retarded its motion, as in a dying man, and was at last totally lost and stopped, like the circulation in a dead man. Hence every living soul died in the sea. Pastorini.—Calmet interprets it as a prediction of the calamities which befell the Roman empire, during the invasion of the Persians on the east, and the Goths and other barbarous nations on the west.

VER. 4. Upon the rivers. That is, on the Roman provinces in Italy, and Rome itself. This is the last stroke employed by the Almighty for the total destruction of Rome. The divine judgment being executed, the angel of the waters, that is, the angel that presided over the Roman states, cries out, (ver. 5, 6,) Thou art just, &c. Pastorini.

VER. 8. And the fourth angel. Here is the punishment of the Greeks during the siege of Constantinople by the Turks, where the fire engines, that were then made use of for the first time, so reduced the Grecian army, that the walls of the city were reduced to ashes, and the whole town to flames. Hence it appears how the Greeks were scorched with great heat; and how they blasphemed the name of God, appears too evident from the history of Notaras, admiral of the Constantinopolitan fleet. Past.

VER. 12. River Euphrates. That is, a passage is laid open for the potentates of the East to lay their destructive hands upon the countries on this side the Euphrates. For they are the spirits of devils working signs, which are sent forth by the eastern princes, to oblige all to unite in arms against the great day of the Almighty God. Pastorini.

VER. 16. Armagedon. That is, the hill of robbers. Ch.

VER. 19. Great Babylon came in remembrance before God. The time of God's punishing the wicked world is approaching: for by a third interpretation, Babylon may signify metaphorically all the wicked in general. Wi.

VER. 21. And great hail like a talent came down, &c. Which need not be upon men : and men blasphemed God, because of the plague of the hail : for it was exceeding great.

CHAP. XVII.

The description of the great harlot, and of the beast upon which she sits.

AND there came one of the seven angels, who had the seven vials, and spoke with me, saying: Com, I will show thee the condemnation of the great harlot, who sitteth upon many waters.

2 With whom the kings of the earth have committed fornication ; and they who inhabit the earth, have been made drunk with the wine of her prostitution.

3 And he took me away in the spirit into the desert. And I saw a woman sitting upon a scarlet coloured beast, full of names of blasphemy, having seven heads and ten horns.

4 And the woman was clothed round in purple and scarlet, and gilded with gold, and precious stones, and pearls, having a golden cup in her hand, full of the abomination and filthiness of her fornication.

5 And on her forehead a name was written : A mystery : Babylon the great, the mother of the fornications and abominations of the earth.

6 And I saw the woman drunk with the blood of the saints, and with the blood of the martyrs of Jesus. And when I had seen her, I wondered with great admiration.

7 And the angel said to me : Why dost thou wonder ?

taken literally, but only metaphorically, to signify the heavy weight of God's judgments upon sinners. Wi.

* V. 21. Et grando magna sicut talentum, ὡς ταλαντία, quasi talentaris. The Prot. and Mr. N. translate hail about the weight of a talent, as if every hail-stone were of that weight.

CHAP. XVII. VER. 1. I must repeat what I have already taken notice of, both in the preface to the Apocalypse, and sometimes in the annotations, that there are three ways of expounding all the visions of this Revelation, from the end of chap. iii. to the end of ver. 10, chap. xx., which all of them seem grounded on the opinions of the ancient Fathers. According to the first, all these visions are only to be fulfilled in antichrist's time, a little before the end of the world. According to the second, the visions may be applied to particular events, which happened in the first three or four ages, under the persecuting heathens, till by Constantine, and the succeeding Christian emperors, idolatry by degrees was extirpated, and the faith of Christ triumphed over all its enemies, whether Jews or pagans. According to the third, by the great city of Babylon, is mystically and metaphorically signified all wicked great cities in the world, all the multitude of the wicked dispersed in all nations, their short and vain happiness, their persecutions and oppressions of the good and faithful servants of God, who live piously in this world, and who are called to be citizens of the celestial Jerusalem in the kingdom of God, where he reigneth for ever with his angels and saints, and where they all reign with him, happy in his sight and enjoyment. Wi.—Of the great harlot. Nothing can be better applied than this epithet to ancient Rome, which had conquered almost all the kingdoms of the known world, as it is said in ver. 18, she is the great city, a kingdom, which hath dominion over the kings of the earth ; ver. 9, it was built upon seven mountains ; ver. 6, was watered with the blood of the saints and martyrs of Jesus Christ ; and in fine, ver. 5, it was the great Babylon, as S. Peter, in his First Epistle, pleases to call it. Calmet.—Come, I will show thee the condemnation of the great harlot, . . . Babylon . . . the mother of the fornications. By this harlot, and this Babylon, is signified the multitude of all the wicked of all times and places.—The beast, that is, the devil, carries her, whose suggestions the wicked follow. He comes out from the bottomless pit. He was, i. e. had a much greater and more extensive power over the wicked world before Christ's coming and incarnation ; and he is not, i. e. according to S. Aug., his power hath been much extenuated and lessened since that time. He is bound or chained up for a thousand years, as it is said, chap. xx. 2. By which may be understood all the time from Christ's coming, and the establishing of his Christian Church, till the last and severest persecution under antichrist. See S. Aug. l. 20, de Civ. Dei, c. 7. The scarlet coloured beast, the devil, called the prince of this world, on whom the harlot gilded with gold sat ; that is, all the wicked, and particularly all wicked kings and princes, with their worldly greatness, who were drunk with the wine of her prostitution ; that is, who abandoned themselves and indulged their passions with all sensual pleasures, and contented themselves, with the vain and deceitful happiness of this life ; to be convinced of which, the angel is said to have taken S. John in spirit into a wilderness from the company of the wicked world, the better to see and contemplate the vanity of their short and false happiness. Wi.

VER. 4. Cup. full of the abomination, &c. These are common scriptural

I will tell thee the mystery of the woman, and of the beast which carrieth her, which hath the seven heads and ten horns.

8 The beast which thou sawest, was, and is not, and shall come up out of the bottomless pit, and go into destruction : and the inhabitants of the earth (whose names are not written in the book of life from the foundation of the world) shall wonder, seeing the beast, that was, and is not.

9 And here is the understanding, that hath wisdom. The seven heads are seven mountains, upon which the woman sitteth, and they are seven kings.

10 Five are fallen, one is, and the other is not yet come : and when he shall come, he must remain a short time.

11 And the beast that was, and is not : the same is also the eighth : and is of the seven, and goeth into destruction.

12 And the ten horns, which thou sawest, are ten kings : who have not yet received a kingdom, but shall receive power as kings one hour after the beast.

13 These have one design, and their strength and power they shall deliver to the beast.

14 These shall fight with the Lamb, and the Lamb shall overcome them ; *because he is Lord of lords, and expressions for the abominations of idolatry, with which ancient Rome had notoriously defiled herself.

* 1 Tim. vi. 15 ; Infra, xix. 16.

VER. 5. A mystery. That is, a secret, because what follows of the name and title of the great harlot is to be taken in a mystical sense.—Babylon. Either the city of the devil in general ; or, if this place be to be understood of any particular city, pagan Rome, which then and for 300 years persecuted the Church, and was the principal seat both of empire and idolatry. Ch.

VER. 8. The beast which thou sawest. This beast, which supports Babylon, may signify the power of the devil ; which was, and is not, being much limited by the coming of Christ, but shall again exert itself under antichrist. The seven heads of this beast are seven mountains or empires, instruments of his tyranny ; of which five were then fallen, as above, chap. xiii. ver. 1. The beast itself is said to be the eighth, and is of the seventh ; because they all act under the devil, and by his instigation, so that his power is in them all, yet so as to make up, as it were, an eighth empire distinct from them all. Ch.

VER. 9. Seven mountains. We have already observed that ancient Rome stood upon seven mountains. The same cannot be said of modern Rome, as some of the hills are not dwelt upon.—The seven heads . . . are seven kings, or seven Roman emperors, who were particularly distinguished as the chief supporters of idolatry, and the most virulent persecutors of the Christian religion. Their names were Nero, Domitian, Severus, Decius, Valerian, Dioclesian, and Antichrist.—Five of them are fallen or gone, viz. Nero, Domitian, Severus, Decius, Valerian, who supported the idolatrous empire for a time ; one is, viz. Dioclesian, with whom the reign of idolatry falls ; and the other is not yet come, that is, antichrist.

VER. 10. Five are fallen, one is, and the other is not yet. The meaning of this is obscure. But it is not improbable that by these seven kings may be understood the collection of kings, in what are called the seven ages of the world, from its creation to its consummation. Wi.

VER. 11. The beast that was, and is not : is the eighth : and is of the seven. The devil reigns with the kings in all these ages : he is of the seven, because he is the prince under whom reign the wicked in all ages ; he is also the eighth, inasmuch as he is their prince, and they are only his instruments. Wi.

VER. 12. The ten horns, or ten kings, which thou sawest, as yet have received no kingdom, but shall receive power as kings one hour after the beast ; or, as it is in the Greek, with the beast. According to the common interpretation, this must be referred to ten, or many kings, who are different from all the wicked kings that had been, and who should follow and live at the same time with the beast, by which here seems to be signified antichrist. Wi.—Ten horns. These denote ten kings or ten powers ; namely, Goths, Huns, Alans, Vandals, Saxons, Burgundians, Franks, Heruli, Suevi, &c., the chief of the barbarians that invaded the Roman empire in the fifth century.—They shall receive power as kings one hour after the beast ; that is, they will serve under their own leaders, to assist pagan Rome a little against its enemies ; and their one design is afterwards to take the fruitful provinces of Rome to themselves, which we know they did. Pas-torini.—Ten kings. Ten lesser kingdoms, enemies also of the Church of Christ ; which nevertheless shall be made instruments of the justice of God, for the punishment of Babylon. Some understand this of the Goths, Vandals, Huns, and other barbarous nations that destroyed the empire of Rome. Ch.

VER. 14. These shall fight with the Lamb. Their actions and affections being always led away with the love of this world, which is an enemy to Christ

King of kings, and they that are with him are called, and elect, and faithful.

15 And he said to me: The waters which thou sawest, where the harlot sitteth, are peoples, and nations, and tongues.

16 And the ten horns, which thou sawest on the beast, these shall hate the harlot, and shall make her desolate and naked, and shall eat her flesh, and shall burn her with fire.

17 For God hath given into their hearts, to do that and his doctrine: but the Lamb, Christ, shall overcome them, and punish them, when he pleases: for he, Christ, God and man, is Lord of lords, and King of kings; and as S. John says again, (chap. xix. 16,) has written on his thigh, the King of kings, and Lord of lords, to signify to us his Divinity, or Divine nature. Wi.—All these different people were either heathens or heretics, and of course were bitter enemies to the Catholic religion; but the Lamb overcame them, by turning their hearts, and converting them to be Christians.

VER. 15. &c. The waters which thou sawest, where the harlot sitteth, signify the different nations, in all which is a multitude of wicked, especially among the great ones of this world. Wi.—And the ten horns . . . shall hate the harlot. That is, ancient Rome; they will make her desolate, by laying waste all her provinces; they will make her . . . naked, by stripping her of her shining ornaments, her gaudy palaces, Egyptian obelisks, magnificent temples, theatres, triumphal arches, &c.—They will eat her flesh, by plundering her of her wealth and riches, with which she has fed herself by plundering the rest of the world; and lastly, they will burn her with fire; all which we know has been accomplished, even to a tittle. Past.—Alaric, the Goth, in 410, took the city, pillaged it, and delivered it over to fire and the plunder of the soldiers for three days. The only privileged places that escaped were the churches. Calmet.—Genseric plundered it for fourteen days, in 455, and set fire to it. Odoacer took it, and deposed the emperor, in 476; and Totila, in 546, burnt it, and reduced it to a solitude. Procopius says he left not one human creature in the city. Past.—The beast was taken, and with him the false prophet. We may take this as spoken by anticipation of antichrist, and his great impostor, or false prophet. For still after this, (chap. xx. 7,) is foretold, according to S. Aug., the last persecution by the devil, and by antichrist, with Gog and Magog: for it is then that fire came down from heaven, and was to devour them; and there it is expressed that the devil, who seduced them, and all the wicked, was cast into the lake of fire, into hell, where also the beast, antichrist, and the false prophet shall be tormented for ever and ever. Now to give a short account of the two other expositions. The first of them, followed by a great many, (as may be seen in Alcazar and Lapidé,) holds that all these visions will come to pass in the short reign of antichrist, a little while before the end of the world. These interpreters are divided about the signification of Babylon: some understand Babylon the metropolis of Chaldea, where they think that antichrist will begin to reign; others understand Constantinople, the seat of the Turkish empire, which is also built upon seven hills; but many understand Rome, not Christian Rome, but Rome that was a heathen city in the first ages, and which they think will be heathen Rome again in antichrist's time. See a great number of the Fathers and interpreters for this opinion cited by a Lapidé. By the beast that carries her with her idolatry and vices, they understand the devil; and by the seven heads and ten horns, kings, who shall be in the time of antichrist, and submit themselves to him. All these kings and persecutors will receive their power one hour after, or with the beast, by which they rather understand antichrist, whose reign shall be short, as shall be that of the devil, who shall be let loose, and have greater power for a little while. By the eighth, who is of the seven, they understand the devil, because all the seven will be as it were his instruments. The same kings who committed fornication with the harlot, are also said to hate her, and burn her, says Gagneius, by being the cause of her damnation and destruction: for none are greater enemies than sinners' accomplices. As to the other exposition, (of which see Alcazar, the bishop of Meaux, &c.) they look upon all these visions till the last persecution under antichrist, (chap. xx. 7, 10,) to be already fulfilled by the destruction of the heathen Roman empire, as they are also expounded by Dr. Hammond. These interpreters conclude that by Babylon must necessarily be understood Rome, because it is said that seven heads, upon which the woman sitteth, are seven mountains; and and it is well known that Rome is built upon seven hills; and secondly, because the woman is said to be the city, which hath a kingdom over the kings of the earth. But first, those seven mountains are also called seven kings; secondly, Constantinople is also built upon seven hills; thirdly, seven may be taken for many. And I cannot but take notice, that some expressions in this and in the next chapter, seem to agree better with that exposition, which takes Babylon for the multitude of all the wicked: as when we read, (chap. xviii. 3,) that all nations have drunk of the wine of the wrath of her fornication; (ver. 23,) that all nations have been deceived by her sorceries; (ver. 24,) that in her was found the blood of the prophets, and of the saints, and of all that were slain upon the earth. Wi.

CHAP. XVIII. In this chapter is a repetition of the fall of Babylon and the mourning of other nations, and their consternation for its sudden destruction, to which may be applied the three mentioned expositions. It is from the mysterious visions of these revelations, especially in the 17th and 18th chapters, that divers Prot. writers would make the people believe that all the popes for above twelve hundred and sixty years have been the detestable antichrist, the great whore of Babylon, the monstrous beast with seven heads and ten horns. This new invention, and their wild fancies upon it, are full as monstrous as the beast. The obscurity of the visions furnishes them with a more convenient handle for their main design, which is to make the pope and popery odious to the people, where they can with less hazard advance their groundless and licentious expositions: and where the ex-

CHAP. XVIII.

The fall of Babylon: kings and merchants lament over her.

AND after these things I saw another angel coming down from heaven, having great power: and the earth was enlightened with his glory.

pressions are mystical and allegorical, it is no hard matter, said Dr. Hammond, to transform any thing into any thing, and thus to lead the people by the nose, said Mr. Thordike on this very subject. It may be observed that the Fathers, or ancient interpreters, sometimes give us their private conjectures and opinions, as S. Augustino takes notice, in which others do not join with them. But whosoever consults the primitive Fathers, as I make bold to say I have done with all possible exactness, will find that the Scripture and Fathers unanimously agree in these three following points, (utterly destructive of their systems of the popish antichrist,) to wit: 1. That antichrist must be one single man; 2. that he shall not come till about the end of the world; 3. that he shall but reign a very short time. In the Holy Scriptures we only find the word itself, antichrist, five times, that is, in the 1st and 2nd Epistle of S. John. In four of these places, he only speaks of antichrists, improperly so called, as being seducers and adversaries of Christ; and of the one proper antichrist he only says, (1 Ep. ii. 18,) as you have heard that antichrist cometh, or is to come. But it is generally agreed, even by Protestants, that S. Paul (2 Thess. ii.) speaks of the great antichrist; and there he is called the man of sin, the son of perdition, he who opposeth, and is lifted up above all that is called God, or that is worshipped, &c. S. Paul also there adds, then that wicked one shall be revealed, (i. e. about the time of the day of judgment), whom the Lord Jesus shall kill with the spirit of his mouth, and shall destroy with the brightness of his coming: from which it follows, both that antichrist is to be one man, and that his coming and the glorious coming of our Saviour shall concur together. If our adversaries will understand the predictions of the prophet Daniel (chap. vii. &c.) of antichrist, and not only of Antiochus, he must also be one particular king, who shall overcome other kings, that little horn that sprang up amidst other ten horns. In the Revelation or Apocalypse of S. John, we no where find the name of antichrist. Secondly, I take notice that divers of the ancient Fathers, as S. Chrys., S. Cyril of Jerusalem, Theodoret, &c., never bring any passages out of the Apocalypse when they speak of antichrist. Thirdly, nor is this to be wondered at, since divers of them by the beast, Babylon, and the scarlet whore, understood the devil, or heathen Rome with its heathen Roman emperors, and taught that all those visions till the 20th chapter are fulfilled already, before the coming of antichrist. Nothing that the Protestants bring, as I think, has even the face or appearance of an objection, unless it be when they tell us, that by Babylon in S. John's Revelation is meant Rome; therefore, say they, the Church of Rome must be Babylon, and the scarlet whore that sitteth there must be the pope with his cardinals, clothed in scarlet and purple. I answer: All Catholics, and all men of sense, have reason to wonder and ask by what kind of logic they have hooked or drawn into the consequence the Church of Rome. There is not, as the bishop of Meaux desires the Protestants to take notice, in all these visions and predictions the least hint or insinuation of a fallen corrupted church, but of a heathen city and pagan empire. Many by Babylon understand the multitude of the wicked in general: but we will willingly allow that by Babylon was meant Rome, yet not Christian Rome or the Church of Rome, but heathen Rome and its pagan emperors, with their dresses of purple and scarlet. Now as to the ancient Fathers, and what they have witnessed and delivered to us concerning the three above-mentioned points. S. IRENEUS, on whose testimony the Protestants seem to lay the greatest stress, tells us, (l. 5. c. 30. p. 361, ed. Rig.) that antichrist shall be a wicked king . . . who shall overcome ten other kings. He also makes his conjecture on the number of the name of a single man. As to the time of his coming, he says, (p. 363,) that it shall be at the end of the world, and when the end of all things shall come. That he shall reign upon the earth three years and six months; or, as he says again, for forty-two months. Rex impius et injustus . . . novissimo tempore . . . quoniam finis fiet . . . regnans annis tribus et sex mensibus, &c. S. CHRYSOSTOM (tom. 6, nov. ed. Ben. p. 238): What is the little horn? I say it is antichrist appearing among some kings, and that he is a man, ἀνθρωπὸς ἄνθρωπος. See also his 3rd homil. on 2 Thess. Who is antichrist? a certain man, &c., ἀνθρωπὸς τις. And hom. 4. Antichrist, says he, will be destroyed by Christ's coming, &c. THEODORET, on Daniel (c. 7, t. 2, p. 631, ed. Par., 1642): The little horn is antichrist, &c. And c. 11. He will glorify the god Maazim in this place: which the Protestants may take notice of, that he expounds thus: Instead of the gods which his forefathers adored, he will set himself up for the strong and powerful god, signified by the word Maazim. See on 2 Thess. tom. 3. p. 386. Antichrist is called the man of sin, because by nature a man, who will call himself the Christ, &c. God hath decreed he shall appear at the end of the world: παρὰ τὸν ἥμερον ἡμετέρας καὶ τοῦ κόσμου συντελείας. He shall be destroyed by the glorious coming of Christ. He will act only for three years and six months: ἐν τρια ἔτη μὲν, καὶ μὲν ἔξ. He brings proofs, p. 165 and 166, to show that antichrist's reign will last but three years and a half, being also expressed by months. And these things, says he, we draw from the divine Scriptures, ἐκ θείων γραφῶν, yet does not bring any place out of the Apocalypse. Theophylact, Oecumenius, and Euthymius follow S. Chrysostom. S. JOHN DAMASCEN, in the eighth age,

2 And he cried out with a strong voice, saying: * Babylon the great is fallen, is fallen: and is become the habitation of devils, and the hold of every unclean spirit, and the hold of every unclean and hateful bird:

3 Because all nations have drunk of the wine of the wrath of her fornication: and the kings of the earth have committed fornication with her: and the merchants of the earth have been made rich by the abundance of her delicacies.

4 And I heard another voice from heaven, saying: Go out from her, my people: that you be not partakers of her sins, and that you receive not of her plagues.

5 For her sins have reached even to heaven, and the Lord hath remembered her iniquities.

6 Render to her as she also hath rendered to you: and double ye the double according to her works: in the cup, wherein she hath mingled, mingle unto her double.

7 As much as she hath glorified herself, and hath been in delicacies, so much torment and sorrow give unto her: because she saith in her heart: * I sit a queen, and am not a widow: and sorrow I shall not see.

8 Therefore shall her plagues come in one day, death,

• Isa. xxi. 9; Jer. li. 8; Supra, xiv. 8.

(I. 4, Orthod. Fid. c. 28, ed. Basil, p. 389,) says that antichrist is to come at the end of the world. None of these writers dreamt that the bishops of Rome were antichrist. The Latin Fathers, upon antichrist, deliver us the very same truths. TERTULLIAN, to omit other places, l. de Resur. Carnis, c. 27: Those, saith he, in antichrist's time at the end of the world, &c. S. CYPRIAN, in the middle of the third age, (Ep. 56, ed. Rig., and in other epistles,) was apprehensive that the time of antichrist was then approaching, as divers of the Fathers feared the same in their time. but he always joins with antichrist the end of the world. Seire debetis et oceanum sæculi, et antichristi tempus appropinquasse . . . prænuntiata sunt hæc futura in fine sæculi, deficiente jam mundo et antichristo propinquante. See Ep. 68, ad Clerum in Hispania, p. 115. See LACTANTIUS, l. 7, Div. Institut. c. 17: Antichrist, says he, will come; imminente jam temporum conclusione, &c. S. HILARY (on Matt. xxiv. ean. or cap. 26) tells us, that antichrist is to come when the day of judgment is at hand. See also ean. 33. See S. AMBROSE, (l. 1, de Ben. Prophet. c. 7, p. 523,) where he also thinks that antichrist will be of the tribe of Dan. See t. 2. in Psal. 45, p. 1028. S. JEROM (on Dan. vii. tom. 3, p. 1101, nov. ed.) says, that by the little horn is meant antichrist. "Let us say what all ecclesiastical writers have delivered to us, that at the end of the world, when the kingdom of the Romans is to be destroyed, there will be ten kings, who will divide among them the Roman world, and the eleventh will rise up, a little king, who will overcome three of those ten . . . and the other seven will submit to the conqueror." Take notice, that these words, "what all ecclesiastical writers have delivered to us," quod omnes ecclesiastici scriptores tradiderunt, in consummatione mundi, quando regnum est Romanorum, &c., are not to be extended to every particular in this sentence, but only to what he and other ecclesiastical writers agreed in, to wit, that antichrist was not to come till about the end of the world, and that the heathen Roman empire was first to be destroyed. S. Jerom also (on Daniel, p. 1103) says, the reign of antichrist will but last three years and a half. On the 12th chapter, (p. 1133,) he takes notice that the same short time is signified by 1260 days. P. 1127, he tells us Antiochus was a figure of antichrist, but that many things in that prophecy agree better to antichrist himself at the end of the world: rectius in fine mundi hæc facturus est antichristus. See also his Ep. to Algasia, tom. 4, part 1, q. 11, p. 200. S. AUGUSTINE began his learned work, de Civ. Dei, soon after the destruction of Rome by Alarie, about an. 410, as he tells us, l. 2, Retract. c. 43, though he did not finish these books till about the year 427. He is far from finding any certainty of the approach of antichrist, as I shall have an occasion to show on chap. xx. of this Apocalypse; and shall only here take notice, that he delivers it as a certain truth, that the reign of antichrist will but last three years and a half, (l. 20, c. 23,) which he tells us we are the more certain of, the same short time being expressed in the Scriptures by years, by months, and by days; tres annos et semissem, citiam numero dierum aliquando, et mensium numero declaratur. S. GREGORY, in his moral books on Job, (tom. 1,) makes frequent mention of antichrist, little dreaming that his predecessors for almost two hundred years, that he himself and his successors for so many ages, were antichrist, foretold in the Apocalypse. L. 12, c. 15, p. 410, he says antichrist will be permitted to be exalted for a little time; parvo tempore. L. 13, p. 32, he calls him that dammable man whom the apostate angel will make use of at the end of the world; in fine mundi: and again, (l. 20, c. 7, p. 925,) in mundi termino, &c.—Now to conclude from what hath been said. The Scripture, and all both Greek and Latin Fathers, acknowledge no particular antichrist, properly so called, but him who shall be one single man, who is not to come till about the end of the world, who is to reign but a short time. Let our adversaries reconcile this doctrine with their systems of the popish antichrist, whether emphatical or mystical. They tell us that 1260 days, being prophetic days, must be taken for years; and that just so long must reign the popish antichrist. It is true we have and mourning, and famine, and she shall be burnt with fire: because God is strong, who shall judge her.

9 And the kings of the earth, who have committed fornication, and lived in delicacies with her, shall weep, and bewail themselves over her, when they shall see the smoke of her burning:

10 Standing afar off for fear of her torments, saying: Woe! woe! that great city, Babylon, that mighty city: for in one hour is thy judgment come.

11 And the merchants of the earth shall weep and mourn over her: for no man shall buy their merchandise any more:

12 Merchandise of gold, and silver, and of precious stones, and pearl, and of fine linen, and purple, and of silk, and scarlet, (and all thyine wood, and all manner of vessels of ivory, and all manner of vessels of precious stone, and of brass, and iron, and marble, 13 And cinnamon) and of odours and ointment, and frankincense, and wine, and oil, and fine flour, and wheat, and beasts, and sheep, and horses, and chariots, and slaves, and souls of men.

two examples in Scripture, and only two, as the bishop of Meaux observes, in which days are put for years, to wit, Numb. xiii. 34, and Ezech. iv. 5, and in both places we are admonished that days unusually stand for years. And certainly, unless we have particular proofs to the contrary, days even in the writings of the prophets are to be taken for days, months for months, years for years. Now in this place, since the same term of antichrist's reign both in Daniel (to whom S. John alludes) and in the Apocalypse, is also expressed by as many years and months as come to no more than 1260 days, it is manifest that S. John by days means days, and not years. See divers other convincing proofs of this matter in the advertisement of the bishop of Meaux, num. 24. This the ancient Fathers saw very well, and so not one of them understood this of a number of so many years. Yet unless we allow this arbitrary and groundless exposition, that by 1260 days are meant years, the whole system of so many popes being antichrist is utterly destroyed. But let us see what pleasant work they can make of it, if we suppose days to be years; with a second supposition, that above two hundred men are one man; and with a third, that the end of the world, at which antichrist is to come, has now been ending for 1260 years. The popish antichrist, say they, is to last 1260 years and no longer: and they are certain that he began some time in the fifth age, as soon as the Roman empire was destroyed by ten kings; for the popish antichrist was to begin with those kings that began to reign with the beast, and the pope renewed heathenism and idolatry at that very time. From hence they have made different computations: 1. From the year 410, when Alarie, the Goth, pillaged and almost destroyed Rome; add to this number 1260 years, and the antichristian reign of the popes should have come to a period in 1670, or thereabouts. This by the event being found a mistake, others, as Jurieux and Mr. Whiston, found out a new epoch, and dated the beginning of the popish antichrist from the year 455 or 456, under the great, learned, and virtuous S. Leo, when Genseric, the Vandal, again plundered Rome; adding the aforesaid number, and the reign of the popish antichrist was to end in 1715 or 1716. The author of a late book, entitled Charity and Truth, laughs at Mr. Whiston, that he has outlived his nine whimsical demonstrations, by which in his Essay on the Revelation he had shown that the papacy was to expire in the year 1716. This term being also expired, and this popish antichrist going prosperously on at this present year, (1730,) under Benedict XIII., whom even the Protestants themselves commonly allow to be a very holy and virtuous pope or antichrist, some have computed that the beginning of this popish antichrist may be dated from the year 475, when both the dignity and name of the Roman empire ceased under Augustulus: and thus they may hope for the destruction of antichrist, and (as I think they hold) of the end of the world, just five years hence, 1735! VER. 4. Go out from her, my people. The people of God, the Christians, are all here told to leave the falling city, lest they be partakers of her sins, and receive of her plagues. At the time of Alarie's sacking Rome, many fled away to S. Jerom who was then in Judea; others fled into other parts, as many holy fathers testify S. Jerom says, (Ep. 7,) that S. Paula and several illustrious Christian families had left Rome as if by particular inspiration, and retired into Judea. The holy pope Innocent was drawn by a particular providence out of the city, as Lot out of Sodom, that he might not see the ruin of a guilty people, says Orsius, lib. 7, c. 39. We read likewise that Melania, as if she foresaw the approaching catastrophe, had prevailed upon many Christians to retire with her from a city doomed to destruction. Histor. Laus. c. 118. In fine, we all know that when the storm broke out, the Christians took refuge and were saved in the churches of S. Peter and S. Paul, which Alarie had allowed to be places of safety. A.

15 The merchants of these things, who were made rich, shall stand afar off from her, for fear of her torments, weeping and mourning,

16 And saying: Woe! woe! that great city, which was clothed with fine linen, and purple, and scarlet, and was gilded with gold, and precious stones, and pearls:

17 For in one hour are so great riches come to nothing: and every ship-master, and every one that sails into the lake, and mariners, and they that work at sea, stood afar off,

18 And cried out, seeing the place of her burning, saying: What city is like to this great city?

19 And they cast dust upon their heads, and cried out, weeping and mourning, saying: Woe! woe! that great city, wherein all were made rich, who had ships at sea, by reason of her prices: for in one hour she is made desolate.

20 Rejoice over her, thou heaven, and ye holy apostles, and prophets: for God hath judged your judgment on her.

21 And a mighty angel took up a stone, as it were a great mill-stone, and cast it into the sea, saying: With this violence shall Babylon, that great city, be thrown down, and shall now be found no more.

22 And the voice of harpers, and of musicians, and of them that play on the pipe, and on the trumpet, shall no more be heard in thee: and no craftsman of any art whatsoever shall be found any more in thee: and the sound of a mill shall be heard no more in thee:

23 And the light of a lamp shall shine no more in thee; and the voice of the bridegroom and bride shall be heard no more in thee: for thy merchants were the great men of the earth, for all nations have been deceived by thy sorceries.

24 And in her hath been found the blood of prophets and of saints: and of all who were slain upon the earth.

Romans in dress, in ornaments, in furniture, in equipage, in the sumptuousness of their tables, &c. &c. Nothing is more remarkable than the extravagant luxury and profusion of some of the Roman emperors at their tables. Caligula once spent (according to Seneca) for a supper, 150,000 crowns. Suetonius tells us, that the emperor Vitellius would feast himself thrice, and often four times, in a day, spending 10,000 crowns at each meal. But now they are all gone; they are now the fuel of fire, and in one hour brought to nought. A.

VER. 10. And I fell before his feet, to adore him. They of the pretended reformation think they have here a clear proof that no veneration is due to angels and saints, and that papists in so doing are idolaters. In answer to this: First, they make S. John, the apostle, guilty of that idolatry which they lay to our charge. For they must suppose and grant that S. John, as to the dispositions of his mind and will, was just ready, or rather, falling down, did pay an idolatrous worship to the angel: and what Christian can believe this of so great an apostle, that after he had been favoured with all those extraordinary visions, he should either be so very ignorant as not to know what was idolatry, or so impious as to become guilty of it, and give Divine honour to any creature? And what makes S. John altogether inexcusable, (had it been idolatry,) we find him doing the very same a second time, in the last chapter of the Apocalypse (ver. 7 and 8); that is, falling down at the angel's feet to adore. Secondly, as it would be extravagantly unreasonable to suspect this apostle, this evangelist, this prophet of the new law, to be guilty of what every Christian, every Jew, knows to be idolatry; to wit, to give the honour due to God

CHAP. XIX.

The saints glorify God for his judgments on the great harlot. Christ's victory over the beast, and the kings of the earth.

AFTER these things I heard as it were the voice of many multitudes in heaven, saying: Alleluia: salvation, and glory, and power is to our God:

2 For true and just are his judgments, who hath judged the great harlot, which corrupted the earth with her fornication, and hath revenged the blood of his servants, at her hands.

3 And again they said: Alleluia. And her smoke ascendeth for ever and ever.

4 And the four and twenty ancients, and the four living creatures, fell down and adored God, that sitteth upon the throne, saying: Amen: Alleluia.

5 And a voice came out from the throne, saying: Praise ye our God all his servants: and you that fear him, little and great.

6 And I heard as it were the voice of a great multitude, and as the voice of many waters, and as the voice of great thunders, saying: Alleluia: for the Lord our God, the omnipotent, hath reigned.

7 Let us be glad and rejoice: and give glory to him: for the marriage of the Lamb is come, and his wife hath prepared herself.

8 And to her it hath been granted, that she should clothe herself with fine linen, glittering and white. For the fine linen are the justifications of saints.

9 And he saith to me: Write: * Blessed are they who are called to the marriage supper of the Lamb: and he saith to me: These words of God are true.

alone to any creature whatsoever; so in reason we cannot but conclude that he was not for giving Divine honour to any angel, knowing them all to be God's creatures. If therefore he was about to pay Divine honour, we must either say that he took him who then appeared to him to be our Saviour Christ, God and man, as some expound it; or, which seems more probable, he was only for offering an inferior honour and veneration to the angel, such as he knew was lawful: and therefore he was for doing it afterwards a second time; though the angel would not receive it from S. John, to make us the more convinced of the great dignity of this apostle and prophet, who should be raised in heaven to a degree of glory, not inferior to that of the angels: and thus the angel tells him, that he is his fellow-creature, who with him must adore Almighty God, that by these prophecies they both bear testimony concerning Jesus Christ and his Church, the angel by revealing them, and S. John by publishing them, which seems to be the sense of the following words, for the testimony of Jesus is the spirit of prophecy: or they may be expounded thus, for the testimony that we give concerning Christ and his Church, we both of us receive from the Divine Spirit of God, who reveals such truths to his prophets. Thirdly, the Protestants are for proving us idolaters from what S. John was about to do, or rather from what he did, expressed in these words, and I fell before his feet to adore him; or, as in the Prot. translation, and I fell at his feet to worship him. Now it is certain and evident that these words, neither in the Latin nor in the Greek, express that Divine worship and honour which is due, and which is given to God alone; whether we consult the Hebrew or the Sept. of the Old Testament, the very same words are many times used to signify no more than an inferior honour given to creatures. This is a thing well known, and agreed upon by every Protestant, as well as Catholic, who has read the Scriptures, or who knows any thing of Latin, Greek, or Hebrew. Fourthly, it seems very strange, very unaccountable, that our adversaries will not understand the difference betwixt Divine honour due to God alone, and an inferior honour, respect, or veneration given to angels or saints, to their relics or images, which inferior honour may, in some sense, be called a religious honour, inasmuch as it is paid to persons or things that may be called sacred or holy. Why will our adversaries pretend to make us idolaters against our wills, minds, and intentions, when we have always protested that we give Divine honour and supreme worship to God alone? that we honour, worship, serve, and adore him only as the author of all things? that we never design to pay any thing but an inferior honour to the highest angels or saints, or to their relics and images. We know, believe, and profess that there is an infinite distance betwixt God the Creator, and the highest and most perfect of all created beings: so that the honour we give them is infinitely inferior, as they themselves are, to the honour that with our hearts and minds we pay to God; and must it be said that we give Divine honour to creatures, and so become idolaters, when we never design it, when we design quite the contrary? This made Mr. Thorndike, in his book of Just Weights and Measures, tell his Protestant brethren, that the Church of Rome cannot be charged with idolatry for their reverencing images, nor on any other account; and so exhorts them not to pretend to lead the people by the nose, to make them believe suppositions which they cannot prove. VER. 17. An angel . . . in the sun, . . . with a loud voice invites all the birds of the air to a most plentiful entertainment which is preparing for them, where they may fill themselves with human flesh of all kinds; from that of kings to that of bondmen (ver. 18); and with the flesh of horses and that of them that sit on them: an expressive picture of the immense slaughter that is going to be made. It would seem that this bloody scene will terminate in the evening of the day, as the invitation is given to a supper. Past.

VER. 20. The beast, &c. Antichrist is taken alive. Menochius.

* V. 10. Cecidi ante pedes ejus ut adorarem illum: ἐπεσον ἐμπροσθεν τῶν ποδῶν αὐτοῦ προσκυνῆσαι αὐτόν. προσκυνεῖν, as Mr. Legh shows out of other authors: promiscuè de Dei et hominum cultu apud LXX. usurpatur, cui respondet apud Latinos, adorare, quod est quasi ad aliquem orare, says Erasmus, capite vel corpore inclinato. We have very many examples in the Holy Scripture, where both προσκυνεῖν and λατρεύειν signify not only Divine honour, but also the honour paid to men. When God gave the ten commandments, (Ex. xx.) he forbade his people to adore strange gods; non adorabis ea, neque coles; οὐ προσκυνήσεις αὐτοῖς, οὐδὲ μὴ λατρεύσεις αὐτοῖς. Yet the same words are used in a great many places, where it is evident that no Divine adoration or worship was designed, as we read of Abraham, (Gen. xxvii. 7.) adoravit populum terræ, προσεκύνησε τῷ λαῷ τῆς γῆς; Gen. xlii. 8, of Joseph's brethren, cum adorassent eum fratres sui, προσεκύνησαν αὐτῷ ἐνὶ πρόσωπον. See also 1 Kings xx. 41, where David is said to have adored Jonathas, cadens pronus in terram adoravit, ἔπεσεν ἐνὶ πρόσωπον καὶ προσεκύνησεν αὐτῷ τρις. See likewise 3 Kings i. 16, where Bethsabee is said of tribunes, and the flesh of mighty men, and the flesh of horses, and of them that sit on them, and the flesh of all freemen, and bondmen, and of little and great.

19 And I saw the beast, and the kings of the earth and their armies gathered together, to make war with him that sat upon the horse, and with his army.

20 And the beast was taken, and with him the false prophet: who wrought signs before him, wherewith he seduced them, who received the mark of the beast, and who adored his image. These two were cast alive into the pool of fire burning with brimstone.

21 And the rest were slain by the sword of him that sitteth upon the horse, which proceedeth out of his mouth; and all the birds were filled with their flesh.

CHAP. XX.

Satan is bound for a thousand years: the souls of the martyrs reign with Christ in the first resurrection. The last attempts of satan against the church: the last judgment.

AND I saw an angel coming down from heaven, having the key of the bottomless pit, and a great chain in his hand.

2 And he laid hold on the dragon, the old serpent, which is the devil and satan, and bound him for a thousand years:

• 1 Tim. v. 15; Supra, xvii. 14.

to have adored old king David, adoravit regem, προσεκύνησε τῷ βασιλεῖ. Though in these and many other places be the same expressions as when S. John is here said to have fallen at the angel's feet to adore him, or worship him, yet no one can think that in these places is meant the supreme worship due to God alone: did Bethsabee take her old, decayed, dying husband, David, to be God, or designed to pay him Divine honour? Nothing then is more frivolous than such arguments drawn from the like words, which have different significations.

CHAP. XX. VER. 2. And bound him for a thousand years. I shall give the reader an abridgment of what S. Augustine has left us on this chapter, in this 20th book de Civ. Dei. From the 5th to the 16th chap. (t. 7, p. 578, et seq.) he treats upon these difficulties: What is meant by the first and second resurrection; by the binding and chaining up of the devil; by the thousand years that the saints reign with Christ; by the first and second death; by Gog and Magog, &c. As to the first resurrection, c. 6, he takes notice on the 5th verse, that resurrection in the Gospels, and in S. Paul, is applied not only to the body but also to the soul: and the second resurrection, which is to come, is that of the bodies: that there is also a death of the soul, which is by sin; and that the second death is that of soul and body by eternal damnation: that both bad and good shall rise again in their bodies. On those words, (ver. 6,) Blessed is he that hath part in the first resurrection; in these the second death hath no power. Such, saith he, (c. 9,) as have risen from sin, and have remained in that resurrection of the soul, shall never be liable to the second death, which is damnation. Cap. 7, p. 580, he says that some Catholics not understanding rightly the first resurrection, have been led into ridiculous fables, and this by the interpretation which they put on the thousand years; as if the first resurrection implied a resurrection of the bodies of the martyrs and saints, who should live on the earth with Christ for a thousand years before the general resurrection, in all manner of delights. This was the opinion of those called Millenarians: this, saith he, might seem tolerable in some measure, if taken for spiritual delights, (for we ourselves were once in these sentiments,) but if for carnal pleasures, it can only be believed by carnal men. He then expounds what may be understood by the binding and chaining of the devil for a thousand years (cap. 7 and 8, p. 531); that the thousand years, meaning a long time, may signify all the time from Christ's first coming to his second at the end of the world, and to the last short persecution under antichrist. The devil is said to be bound, that is, his power much lessened and restrained, in comparison of the great and extensive power he had over all nations before Christ's incarnation; not but that he still tempts many, and raiseth persecutions, which always turn to their greater good; and that towards the end of the world he shall be let loose, as it were, for a short time, and permitted with his infernal spirits to exercise his malice against mankind, to try the patience of the elect, and to show the power of God's grace, by which his faithful servants shall triumph over the devil. N. B. What S. Augustine adds divers times in these chapters: "Let no one," says he, "imagine that even during that short time there shall be no Church of Christ on the earth: God forbid: even when the devil shall be let loose, he shall not be able to seduce the Church." Cap. 9, p. 586, he expounds those words, (ver. 4, 5,) I saw the souls of them that were beheaded . . . and they lived and reigned with Christ a thousand years . . . This is the first resurrection: i. e. the first resurrection is while the devil is chained up for the space of a thousand years. He takes notice that the present state of the Church is many times called the kingdom of God, and that the Church of Christ reigns now with Christ, both in the living saints and in those

3 And he cast him into the bottomless pit, and shut him up, and set a seal upon him, that he should no more seduce the nations, till the thousand years be finished: and after that, he must be loosed a little time.

4 And I saw seats, and they sat upon them: and judgment was given unto them: and the souls of them that were beheaded for the testimony of Jesus, and for the word of God, and who had not adored the beast, nor his image, nor received his mark in their foreheads, or in their hands, and they lived and reigned with Christ a thousand years.

5 The rest of the dead lived not till the thousand years were finished. This is the first resurrection.

6 Blessed and holy is he that hath part in the first resurrection: in these the second death hath no power: but they shall be priests of God and of Christ, and shall reign with him a thousand years.

7 And when the thousand years shall be finished, satan shall be loosed out of his prison, and shall go forth and seduce the nations which are over the four quarters of the earth, * Gog, and Magog, and shall gather them together to battle, whose number is as the sand of the sea.

* Ezech. xxxviii. 14.

who are dead, in the souls of the martyrs, and of others who have lived and died piously, now reign with Christ, not yet in their bodies,  but their souls reign with him. On those words of the 4th verse, who had not adored the beast, nor his image, nor received his mark, he only gives this exposition, as agreeable to the Christian faith, that by the beast may be understood the multitude of wicked sinners in general, and the image of the beast † those who are of the Church in outward appearance and profession only, and not by their works. When it is said (ver. 5) that the rest of the dead lived not till the thousand years were finished: they lived not, says he, as to their souls, when they should have lived; and therefore not being happy in heaven, when their bodies shall rise, it shall not be to life, but to judgment and damnation, which is the second death. Cap. 11, he expounds the 7th and 8th verses, where it is said that satan shall be loosed . . . and seduce the nations which are over the four quarters of the earth, Gog and Magog, †† and shall gather them together to battle. This, says S. Aug., will be the last persecution at the approach of the day of judgment, which the whole city, or the whole Church of Christ dispersed through the universe, will suffer from the whole city of the devil. Neither need Gog and Magog be taken for a particular §§ barbarous people, but such as are dispersed in a manner in every nation, and who shall then break out by the instigation of satan into an open hatred and persecution against the faithful servants of God: as it is said, (ver. 8,) they ascended upon the breadth of the earth, and surrounded the camp of the saints, where we cannot literally understand one camp, one city, or one place, but the Church every where dispersed. Cap. 12, he expounds the 9th verse, where he takes fire to signify, metaphorically, the firm resistance and constancy of the good, and the fire ||| of their zeal, which devoured as it were the wicked; or we may understand with others, the temporal fire of God's judgments in this world against the wicked, but not the last eternal fire; because the eternal fire comes not down from heaven, but the wicked are cast into it below. Cap. 13, he teacheth that the last persecution ¶¶ of antichrist, here mentioned, shall but last three years and six months; i. e. a little while. Cap. 14 and 15, he expounds the 10th and following verse, of the devil being cast into the lake of fire, after the last persecution of antichrist. By the beast he understands, as before, the city or multitude of all the wicked; and by the false prophet, either antichrist or the outward appearance of faith in them that have none. Then follows the last judgment, where it is said that the books are opened, and also that another book was opened. By the first book, may be understood men and their consciences; and by the other book, the book of life, that  of eternal predestination. Thus far S. Augustine, where we see that he delivers the common Catholic doctrine, that by the thousand years, so often mentioned in this chapter, he understands all that time in which the souls of the martyrs, and of all other saints, reign happy with Christ in heaven, till after the general resurrection they receive a full and complete happiness, both as to soul and body. A false exposition of these thousand years gave occasion to the mistake, the error, and heresy of those called the Millenarians, which Mede and Dr. W. have followed. Papias, who lived soon after, was the chief promoter of this mistake; a man, says Eusebius, of "little judgment and capacity," ††† who misconstrued the discourses which he heard. He was followed by divers writers in the second, third, and fourth century, who did not hold with Cerinthus and his followers, that the saints should rise before the general resurrection, and reign with Christ on the earth for a thousand years in all manner of sensual pleasures; but in spiritual delights, in the city of Jerusalem, built anew after that glorious manner described in the next chapter. Now though this opinion had several considerable abettors, of which I find these seven: Papias, S. Justin, S. Irenæus, Tertullian, Nepos, (a bishop, in Egypt; in Euseb. l. 7, c. 24,) Victorinus Petabonensis, Lactantius, and Severus Sulpitius: yet were there always other learned Catholic writers who rejected it as a fable. Of this number was Caius, a priest, at Rome,

8 And they ascended upon the breadth of the earth, and surrounded the camp of the saints, and the beloved city.

9 And fire came down from God out of heaven, and devoured them: and the devil, who seduced them, was cast into the pool of fire and brimstone, where both the beast

10 And the false prophet shall be tormented day and night for ever and ever.

11 And I saw a great white throne, and him that sat upon it, from whose presence the earth and heaven fled away, and there was no place found for them.

12 And I saw the dead, great and small, standing before the throne, and the books were opened: and another book was opened, which is the book of life: and the dead were judged by those things which were written in the books, according to their works.

13 And the sea gave up the dead that were in it: and death and hell gave up their dead that were in them: and they were judged every one according to their works.

14 And hell and death were cast into the pool of fire. This is the second death.

15 And whosoever was not found written in the book of life, was cast into the pool of fire.

about the end of the second age; Origen, in his prologue on the Canticles; S. Denys, of Alexandria, who in the third age wrote to confute Nepos; (see Euseb. l. 7, Hist. c. 24, who treats it as a fable;) S. Basil, ††† who calls it an old wife's tale, and a Jewish fiction, Epist. 293; S. Greg. Naz. Orat. 52; S. Epiphanius, S. Jerom, Philastrius, Theodoret, who place this opinion among the heresies and heretical fables: so that this could never be looked upon as the constant doctrine and tradition of the Church. The bishop of Meaux takes notice, that Mede either mistook or falsified the text of S. Justin, §§§ who, in his Dialogue with Tryphon, holds that opinion of a thousand years' reign; but adds, "I also told you, that many who are Christians of pious and sound sentiments, do not own this to be true." Thus we read in the Greek, as well as in the Latin translation: but Mr. Mede quite changes the sense, by adding a negative in this manner; but many who are not of this pure and holy doctrine, &c. Wl.—Bound him, &c. The power of satan has been very much abridged by the passion of Christ; for a thousand years; that is, for the whole time of the New Testament, but especially from the time of the destruction of Babylon or pagan Rome, till the new efforts of Gog and Magog against the Church, towards the end of the world. During which time the souls of the martyrs and saints live and reign with Christ in heaven, in the first resurrection, which is that of the soul to the life of glory, as the second resurrection will be that of the body, at the day of the general judgment. CHAPTER XXI.

The new Jerusalem described.

AND^a I saw a new heaven and a new earth. For the first heaven and the first earth was passed away, and the sea is no more.

2 And I, John, saw the holy city, the new Jerusalem, coming down from God out of heaven, prepared as a bride adorned for her husband.

3 And I heard a great voice from the throne, saying: Behold the tabernacle of God with men, and he will dwell with them. And they shall be his people: and God himself with them shall be their God:

4 ^bAnd God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes: and death shall be no more, nor mourning, nor crying, nor sorrow, shall be any more; for the former things are passed away.

5 And he who sat on the throne, said: "Behold, I make all things new. And he said to me: Write, for these words are most faithful and true.

6 And he said to me: It is done: I am alpha and omega, the beginning and the end. To him that thirsteth I will give of the fountain of the water of life, gratis.

7 He that shall overcome, shall possess these things and I will be his God, and he shall be my son.

8 But to the fearful, and unbelieving, and the abominable, and murderers, and fornicators, and sorcerers, and idolaters, and all liars, their portion shall be in the pool burning with fire and brimstone: which is the second death.

9 And there came one of the seven angels, who had the vials full of the seven last plagues, and spoke with me, saying: Come, and I will show thee the bride, the wife of the Lamb.

10 And he took me up in spirit to a great and high mountain, and he showed me the holy city, Jerusalem, coming down out of heaven from God, 11 Having the glory of God: and the light thereof like unto a precious stone, as it were to a jasper stone, as crystal.

12 And it had a wall great and high, having twelve gates: and in the gates twelve angels, and names written thereon, which are the names of the twelve tribes of the children of Israel:

13 On the east, three gates: and on the north, three gates: and on the south, three gates: and on the west, three gates.

14 And the wall of the city had twelve foundations, and in them the twelve names of the twelve apostles of the Lamb.

15 And he that spoke with me had a measure, a golden reed, to measure the city and the gates thereof, and the wall.

16 And the city is situate four-square, and the length thereof is as great as the breadth: and he measured the city with the golden reed for twelve thousand furlongs: and the length, and the height, and the breadth of it are equal.

17 And he measured the wall thereof a hundred forty-four cubits, the measure of a man, which is of an angel.

18 And the building of the wall thereof was of jasper stone: but the city itself pure gold, like to clear glass.

19 And the foundations of the wall of the city were adorned with all manner of precious stones. The first foundation, jasper: the second, sapphire: the third, a chalcedony: the fourth, an emerald.

20 The fifth, sardonyx: the sixth, sardius: the seventh, chrysolite: the eighth, beryl: the ninth, a topaz: the tenth, a chrysoprasus: the eleventh, a jacinth: the twelfth, an amethyst.

21 And the twelve gates are twelve pearls, one to each, and every several gate was of one several pearl: and the street of the city was pure gold, as it were transparent glass.

22 And I saw no temple in it. For the Lord God Almighty is the temple thereof, and the Lamb.

23 "And the city needeth not sun, nor moon to shine in it: for the glory of God hath enlightened it, and the Lamb is the lamp thereof.

24 And nations shall walk in the light of it: and the kings of the earth shall bring their glory and honour into it.

25 "And the gates thereof shall not be shut by day: for there shall be no night there.

26 And they shall bring the glory and honour of the nations into it.

27 There shall not enter it any thing defiled, or any one that worketh abomination, or a lie, but they who are written in the book of life of the Lamb.

The water and tree of life. The conclusion.

AND he showed me a river of water of life, clear as crystal, proceeding from the throne of God, and of the Lamb.

2 In the midst of the streets thereof, and on both sides of the river, was the tree of life, bearing twelve fruits, yielding its fruit every month, and the leaves of the tree for the healing of the nations.

3 And no curse shall be any more : but the throne of God, and of the Lamb, shall be in it, and his servants shall serve him.

4 And they shall see his face : and his name shall be on their foreheads.

5 *And night shall be no more : and they shall not need the light of a lamp, nor the light of the sun ; for the Lord God shall enlighten them, and they shall reign for ever and ever.

6 And he said to me : These words are most faithful and true. And the Lord God of the spirits of the prophets sent his angel, to show his servants the things which must be done shortly.

7 And behold, I come quickly. Blessed is he that keepeth the words of the prophecy of this book.

8 And I, John, who have heard and seen these things. And after I had heard and seen, I fell down to adore before the feet of the angel, who showed me these things :

9 And he said to me : See thou do it not : for I am thy fellow-servant, and of thy brethren, the prophets, and of them who keep the words of the prophecy of this book : Adore God.

10 And he saith to me : Seal not the words of the prophecy of this book : for the time is at hand.

VER. 6. These words are most faithful. Here begins the conclusion and close of all these revelations.—The Lord God of the spirits of the prophets sent his angel to show, &c., and in the 16th verse it is said ; I, Jesus, have sent my angel to testify : from whence we may understand that Jesus, as to his person, is the same Lord God with the Father, though as man he is the root of the offspring of David, of the race of David, as the Messiah was to be. Wi.

VER. 8, 9. This is the second time the saint wishes to adore the angel, but not with the supreme worship of latría, as he knew the object of his worship was only an angel, and of course a mere creature ; but the angel, through respect for S. John, still refuses the proffered honour, (see chap. xix. 10,) and to show the holy society that was hereafter to exist between angels and men, who were to compose but one and the same family. V.

VER. 10. Seal not the words ; as not designed to be kept sealed or secret, but to be delivered to the faithful for their instruction, that they may be prepared to suffer persecutions ; that their faith, hope, and charity may be enlivened and increased by a firm expectation of their happiness in the next world, after short sufferings in this. Wi.

VER. 11. He that hurteth, (by living in sins against God, himself, and his neighbours,) let him hurt still ; i. e. he shall be permitted : and he that is just, let him be justified still, and increase in virtues by God's assistance. Wi.—It is not an exhortation or licence to go on in sin, but an intimation that how far soever the 17 And the Spirit and the bride say : Come. And he that heareth, let him say : Come. And he that thirsteth, let him come : *and he that will, let him take the water of life, gratis.

18 For I testify to every one that heareth the words of the prophecy of this book : If any man shall add to these things, God shall add upon him the plagues written in this book.

19 And if any man shall take away from the words of the book of this prophecy, God shall take away his part out of the book of life, and out of the holy city, and from these things which are written in this book.

VER. 17. And the Spirit and the bride say : Come. This is, the Spirit of God, who moves us to love and praise him ; and the bride, i. e. the Church, the spouse of Christ, which earnestly desires to be happy in the enjoyment of God : and every one that heareth these Divine promises, let him with all the affections of his soul, with his whole heart, say : Come. He that thirsteth after justice, the Author and Fountain of all justice, let him come and be filled gratis, by the bounty and liberality of our merciful God. VER. 20, 21. He that giveth testimony of these things, i. e. God and Jesus Christ by an angel, saith, Surely, (or even so, or truly, these are certain truths,) I come quickly, to reward the good and punish the evil. To which words S. John himself replieth with a zealous prayer and earnest desire, saying, Amen, let it be so.—Come, Lord Jesus : come, and remain always in my soul by thy grace, and make me partaker of thy glory for ever and ever. Amen. Wi.—CONCLUSION. The Church in sighs and groans, and by the mouth of her children, solicits the coming of Jesus Christ, her Divine Spouse. The fruit to be drawn from the perusal of this sacred book, is ardently to desire the kingdom of God, to sigh after the day of eternity, to feel the weight of the yoke of the present life, and the disgrace of our exile, and to live here below as strangers. Enkindle in me, O Lord, this desire ; enable my poor soul to join with the beloved disciple in this prayer, Come Lord Jesus ; that she may go and lose herself in Thee, who art her Centre, her God, her All.

AND

CHRONOLOGICAL INDEX

TO

THE NEW TESTAMENT.

- A. D. I
OUR Lord Jesus Christ is born of the blessed Virgin Mary, at Bethlehem, and laid in a manger. Luke ii. 7.
An angel of God informs the shepherds of the birth of Christ. They go to Bethlehem, and adore him, etc. Luke ii. 10, 20; Matt. ii. After eight days he is circumcised, and called Jesus. Luke ii. 21.
He is presented to the Lord in the temple. Holy Simeon blesseth Mary and Joseph, and prophesies concerning Christ. Luke ii. 28, 34.
Herod, being troubled at the birth of Christ, sent wise men to search diligently for the child. They are directed by a star. But they receiving an answer in a vision, that they should not return back to Herod, pursue another way to their own country. Matt. ii., etc.
An angel of the Lord appearing to Joseph, orders him to arise, and take the Child and his Mother, and flee into Egypt. Matt. ii. 13.
Herod, perceiving that he was deluded by the wise men, orders his people to destroy all the male children in Bethlehem, and the confines thereof, under two years of age. Matt. ii. 16.
Herod dies, and is succeeded by his son Archelaus, his other dominions being divided among the rest of his sons. Jos. Ant. l. xvii. c. 10.
Joseph, with Jesus and his Mother, returns into the land of Israel; but hearing that Archelaus reigned in Judea, he retired into Galilee, and dwelt in Nazareth. Matt. ii. 21-23.
- 12 Joseph and Mary go up to Jerusalem, on the solemn day of the Pasch. Returning from thence, Jesus remains behind. They come back in search of him; when he is found in the temple, disputing with the doctors, who are astonished at the wisdom of his interrogatories and answers. Luke ii. 41, 46, 47.
- 26 At the close of this year Pontius Pilate is sent procurator in place of Valerius. Jos. Ant. l. xviii. c. 3.
- 28 About this time S. John the Baptist preaches and baptizes in the desert, thereby preparing the way of the Lord. God giveth him a sign, whereby he may know Christ; "He upon whom thou shalt see the Spirit descending, and remaining upon him, he it is that baptizeth with the Holy Ghost." John i. 33; Luke iii. 3.
- 30 Jesus, entering his thirtieth year, comes to the river Jordan, where he is baptized by John. A most illustrious manifestation is made of the blessed Trinity, by the descent of the Holy Spirit in the form of a dove, and the voice of the Father, saying, "This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased." John seeing this, bears record that Jesus is the Son of God. The latter returns from the Jordan, and is led into the wilderness; where he fasts forty days and nights, and is tempted by the devil. He returns into Galilee. Peter, Andrew, James, and John are called, and become his disciples. Matt. iii. and iv.; Mark i.
- At a marriage feast, in Cana, Jesus turneth water into wine, John ii.
- Jesus coming to Jerusalem at the time of the Pass-over, scourgeth out of the temple the buyers and sellers. The Jews require a sign from him: Christ bids them destroy that temple (meaning his body), and in three days he will raise it up. John ii.
- Herod casts John the Baptist into prison, for reprehending his incest with his brother's wife, and other evil deeds. Matt. xiv.; Mark vi. 17, etc.
- Christ discovers himself to the woman of Samaria; goes through Galilee, teaching and working many miracles. John iv., etc.
- 31 Matthew called to be an apostle. Luke v. 27.—Jesus performs wonderful miracles on the sabbath day.
He goes into a mountain, and there passes the whole night in prayer; after which he chooses his twelve disciples, Simon, Andrew, James, John, Philip, Bartholomew, Matthew, Thomas, James, Simon, Jude, and Judas Iscariot, the traitor (Luke vi. 12, etc.): to these he principally directs his admirable sermon on the mount. Matt. v., vi., and vii.
Jesus raiseth to life the daughter of Jairus. Matt. ix.; Mark v.; Luke viii.
Also the son of the widow of Naim. Luke vii.
He calms the sea by his word. Matt. viii.; Mark iv.; Luke viii.
He heals the man thirty-eight years ill of a palsy. John v.
He sends his twelve apostles to preach, with the power of doing miracles. Matt. x.; Mark vi.; Luke ix.
He teacheth them to pray. Matt. vi.; Luke xi.
He makes choice of seventy-two disciples. Luke x.
- 32 John the Baptist, at the instigation of Herodias's daughter, is beheaded, and his head served up in a charger. Matt. xiv. 10.
Christ reproveth the Scribes and others. He cures the daughter of the woman of Chanaan, and performs several other miracles. He likewise feeds five thousand persons with seven loaves and a few fishes. Matt. xv.
Jesus being solicited by the Pharisees and Sadducees to show them a sign from heaven, he refuses them, displaying his Divine wisdom in parables.—Our Saviour, knowing the vacillation of the apostles' opinions respecting him, asketh them whom do they think he is? When, being answered by Peter, "Thou art Christ, the Son of the living God," he is rewarded with being made head of the one, universal, holy Church, in these emphatic words: "And I say to thee: That thou art Peter, and upon this rock, I will build my Church, and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it. And I will give to thee the keys of the kingdom of heaven. And whatsoever thou shalt bind upon earth, it shall be bound also in heaven; and whatsoever thou shalt loose upon earth, it shall be loosed also in heaven." Matt. xvi. 18, 19.
Jesus relates his parable of the sower and cockle, and that of the mustard seed. He likewise reproves the blindness of the Pharisees, and confutes their attributing his miracles to satan. He also excuseth his disciples for plucking ears of corn on the sabbath day. Matt. xii. and xiii.
Christ walketh on the sea. John vi. 19.
He promiseth to his disciples to give them his body to be truly meat, etc. Many of them leave him, looking upon this doctrine as hard and harsh. John vi.
He teacheth humility, to beware of scandal, and to flee the occasions of sin; to denounce to the Church incorrigible sinners, and to look upon such as refuse to hear the Church as heathens. He promiseth his disciples the power of binding and loosing, and that he will be in the midst of their assemblies to the end of the world; no forgiveness for them that will not forgive. Matt. xviii.
Our Lord is transfigured on the mountain. Moses and Elias are seen to converse with him, and a voice from heaven heard, saying, "This is my beloved Son," etc. He cures the lunatic child, foretells his passion, etc. Arriving at Capharnaum, he payeth the tribute by the miracle of the piece of money in the fish's mouth. Matt. xvii. 24, etc.
A village of Samaria refusing Jesus and his disciples entertainment, the latter desiring fire from heaven to consume it, Christ severely reprimands them. Luke ix. 54.
Our Saviour instructs and sends forth his seventy-two disciples: he teacheth them to pray: raiseth Lazarus to life, who had been buried four days. Caiphas, the high-priest, prophesies concerning Christ's death. The parable of the good Samaritan. Luke x.; John xi.

Mary, Lazarus's sister, anoints our Saviour's feet with costly spikenard, wiping them with her hair. John xii. 3.

Zachecus, a publican, entertains Christ, and is converted. Our Saviour rides in triumph to Jerusalem, the multitude spreading their garments before him, and crying out, Hosanna! Coming near to the city, he weeps over it, and foretells its destruction; casts out the buyers and sellers, and heals the blind and lame. He curses the barren fig-tree, and next morning it is dried up. Luke xix.; Matt. xxi. 17.

In the beginning of that week that he died upon the cross, he went daily to the temple; and in the evenings retired to Bethania, to pray in the garden of Gethsemani. Luke xxii., etc.

On Wednesday, Judas made a bargain with the chief priests to deliver him up to them for a sum of money. Matt. xxvi. 15.

On Thursday he sent his disciples, in the afternoon, to bring the paschal lamb offered in the temple; which, after sunset, he eat with his twelve apostles. Matt. xxvi.

He washed their feet. John xiii.

After supper he instituted the blessed sacrament and sacrifice of the holy Eucharist. Matt. xxvi.

He gave his apostles those excellent instructions set down by S. John, xiv. to xvii.

Christ's prayer in the garden three times repeated.

He is there seized, being betrayed by Judas.

He is led away to Annas, and then to Caiphas.

He is condemned as guilty of blasphemy and death, for owning himself the Son of God. He is spit upon, buffeted, etc.

On Friday morning they deliver him up to the Roman governor, Pontius Pilate, who sees and declares him innocent; yet fearing not to be thought a friend to Cæsar, condemns him to the death of the cross.

He dies on the cross, and is buried. For the history of his passion, see Matt. xxvi. 27, 28; Mark xiv. 15, 16; Luke xxii. 23, 29; John xviii. 19, 20.

The miracles at his death. Ibid.

He riseth from death the third day. Ibid.

His different apparitions that very day, and others afterwards. Ibid.

He gives his apostles power to forgive sins. John xx. 23.

He gives to S. Peter the charge over his whole church. John xxi.

He promiseth to be with his Church to the end of the world. Matt. xxviii. 20.

After forty days he ascends in their sight into heaven. Acts i.

S. Matthias is chosen an apostle in the place of Judas, the traitor. Acts i.

On the day of Pentecost, the Holy Ghost descends upon the apostles in the form of cloven tongues, enabling them to speak various languages. Acts ii. 3.

A wonderful change wrought in the apostles by the coming of the Holy Ghost: their undaunted courage. At S. Peter's preaching, the same day of the descent of the Holy Ghost, numbers are added to the faith. The extraordinary piety of the first converts. Acts ii.

The apostles preach the resurrection of Christ, the necessity of believing in him, and of repenting and doing penance.

S. Peter heals a lame man: at which the rulers being offended, they cast him and John into prison. Upon questioning them, they avouch the cure to have been performed in the name of Jesus. After this they are forbid to speak any more in that name: but they answer, that it is fit they should obey God rather than man. They are released from prison by an angel of the Lord; but being apprehended again, and brought before the council, by Gamaliel's advice they are again set at liberty. Acts v.

The new Christians have all things in common, every one's necessities being supplied out of the general stock. Acts ii. 44.

Annanias and Sapphira, for reserving some part of the money of a field sold and for lying to the Holy Ghost, fall dead at S. Peter's feet. Acts v.

The election of the seven deacons. Acts vi.

Stephen, one of the seven deacons, having confounded some disputants, they falsely accuse him of blasphemy before the council; where, reprehending them for murdering Christ, they cast him out of the city, and stone him to death. Acts vi. and vii.

A great persecution at Jerusalem follows this proto-martyr's death. Acts viii. 3.

Philip, another deacon, converts many at Samaria; baptizes the eunuch. He likewise baptizes Simon the magician. The apostles at Jerusalem, upon Samaria believing, send Peter and John. They confer the Holy Ghost. Simon the magician offers money for it, but is sharply reprov'd by Peter. Acts viii. 15.

34

Saul, a violent persecutor of the Christians, going to Damascus to apprehend all the faithful, and bring them bound to Jerusalem, is miraculously converted by a vision from heaven. Acts ix.

He presently preacheth the faith. After preaching for some time, the Jews consulted together to kill him; but comes to Jerusalem, where seeing Peter and James, he abides with them fifteen days. He disputes with the Jews who used the Greek tongue. Acts ix. and xxi.

S. Peter cures Eneas, at Lydda, and raises to life Tabitha, at Joppa. Acts ix.

The very shadow of his body cures all diseases. Acts v. 15.

He receives Cornelius, the centurion, and other Gentiles with him, into the Church. Acts x.

S. Peter is thought to have gone about this time to Antioch, in Syria, and to have founded the episcopal see.

He preached in Pontus, Galatia, etc.

S. Barnabas and S. Paul preach at Antioch, where the believers were first called Christians. Acts xiii. 26.

Herod Agrippa puts to death S. James, the brother of S. John, and imprisons S. Peter, who was miraculously delivered. Acts xii.

About this time S. Matthew and S. Mark wrote their Gospels. See Pref.

Herod, not giving honour to God, is struck by an angel of the Lord, and eaten up by worms. Acts xii. 23.

S. Paul and Barnabas sent to preach in Pamphylia, Pisidia, and Lycaonia. Afterwards in Pontus, Thracia, etc. Acts xiii. 14.

About this time S. Peter wrote his First Epistle. See Pref.

A dispute takes place between S. Paul and some zealous converts that had been Jews, about the obligation of making even the Gentiles observe the Jewish laws. Acts xv.

S. Paul and Barnabas are sent to Jerusalem, to have this question decided by the apostles, etc.

A council of the apostles and bishops decides the question: S. Peter speaking first, and S. James joining with him. The letter of the council to their brethren, the converted Gentiles. Acts xv.

S. Paul and S. Barnabas separate. Acts xv.

The former goes with Silas into Asia. S. Timothy, and also S. Luke, become his companions. He goes to Philippi, in Macedonia, to Thessalonica, to Berea, to Athens. Finds there an altar dedicated to the unknown God. Acts xvii. 23.

He is scourged at Philippi.—S. Paul and Silas are thrown into prison. At midnight the prison doors fly open, and their bands are loosed. The gaoler is converted. The magistrates pray them to depart. Acts xvi.

S. Paul writes his Epistle to the Thessalonians, and his Second soon after.

He founds the church of Corinth; and departs, after remaining there eighteen months. Acts xviii. 11.

He likewise establishes the Church at Ephesus. The tumult of the silversmiths. Acts xix.

After a short visit to the brethren at Jerusalem, he goes to Antioch; and from thence again into Galatia and Phrygia, and stays three years at Ephesus and thereabouts. Acts xix.

He writes to the Galatians. See Pref.

About this time, he likewise writes his First and Second Epistle to the Corinthians. See Pref.

He also writes his Epistle to the Romans. See Pref.

He goes up to Jerusalem. Acts xxi. 15.

The Jews seize him in the temple. Being beaten, and in danger of being murdered by them, he is rescued by Lysias, the tribune, and his soldiers. Acts xxi.

Lysias sends him to Felix, the governor of Judea, then at Cesarea, where he was kept two years a prisoner.

His discourse before king Agrippa, Felix, etc. Acts xxiv. 25.

He converts Onesimus, and sends him with his letter to Philemon. He writes to the Philippians and Colossians.

S. James bishop of Jerusalem, there martyred.

S. Paul being set at liberty, writes to the Hebrews.

He goes again into Asia; makes S. Timothy bishop of Asia, and went into Macedonia, from whence he wrote his First Epistle to Timothy.

S. Peter about this time wrote his Second Epistle.

About this time S. Peter and S. Paul came to Rome. See Tillemont, etc.

Not long after they were both put in prison, and suffered martyrdom.

S. John about this time came to live in Asia, and governed all those Churches for many years.

He was put into a cauldron of boiling oil at Rome, under Domitian, and banished to the island of Patmos, where he had those wonderful visions of his Apocalypse.

He returns to Ephesus, under the emperor Nerva.

He writes his Gospel.

He dies at Ephesus, under Trajan, about A. D. 100.
